

image not available

052
1.867

Handwritten text, possibly a signature or date, located on the left margin.

A22439

INDEX OF CONTENTS.

JANUARY TO JUNE
1894.

LITERATURE.

Reviews.

- A. N. T. A. P.'s Theories, 145
Acland, Sarah, A Sketch of the Life and Character of, edited by Brunel, 312
Adams's (H.) History of the United States of America, 507
Adlington's (W.) The Golden Age of Apuleius, edited by Henley, 14
Admissions to the College of St. John the Evangelist, Cambridge, Parts I. and II., 311
Adversaria Critica Sacra, Intro. by Scrivener, 771
Æschylus: The Choephori, edited by Verrill, 572
Alexander's (Mrs.) A Ward in Chancery, 312
Allardyce's (A.) Earls Court, 407
Allen's (G.) The Lower Slopes, 367; Post-Prandial Philosophy, 611
Allgemeine Buchhändlerzeitung, 346
Alingham's (W.) Varieties in Prose, 203
Allen, Henry, Pastor and Teacher, the Story of his Ministry, by Harwood, 644
American Big Game Hunting, edited by Roosevelt and Grinnell, 344
Anyand's (A.) Only a Drummer Boy, 676
Andræ's (P.) Stanhope of Chester, 771
Annotated Acts, 1894, by Lely and Craies, 708
Annunzio's (G. d') Poema Paradisiaco, Odi Navali, 80; Il Trionfo della Morte, 835
Apuleius, The Golden Ass of, translated by Adlington, edited by Henley, 14; translated by Taylor, 474
Arbib's (E.) Maria, Countess of Saleto, translated by King, 474
Aristophanes: The Wasps, edited by Merry, 111
Armstrong's (F.) Old Caleb's Will, 47
Armstrong's (L.) Two Roving Englishwomen in Greece, 13
Arnold's (E. L.) The Constable of St. Nicholas, 538
Arnold's (E. M.) Platonica, 110
Arnold's (W. T.) A Modern Xanthippe, 539
Arnold-Forster's (H. O.) Things New and Old, 20
Ashton's (J.) Vana, 345
Augustin-Thierry's (G.) Le Masque, 441
Australia and New Zealand from 1606 to 1890, History of, 178
Bacon's (A. M.) A Japanese Interior, 409
Badminton Library: Swimming, by Sinclair and Henry, 78; Big Game Shooting, by C. Phillips-Wolley and others, 536; Yachting, by Sir E. Sullivan and others, 836
Bagot's (E. M.) Mrs. Thorndale's Cousin, 343
Bailhache's (M. de) Souvenirs intimes d'un Lancier de la Garde Impériale, 477
Balestrier's (W.) Benefits Forgotten, 440
Ballantyne's (A.) Voltaire's Visit to England, 112
Bamford's (S.) Passages in the Life of a Radical—Early Days, 277
Barancy's (J.) Implacable! 242
Baring-Gould's (S.) The Queen of Love, 640
Barne's (W. E.) Canonical and Uncanonical Gospels, 145
Barrett's (C. R. B.) Somersetshire, 801
Barton, Bernard, and his Friends, by Lucas, 146
Bateon's (Mrs. S.) Such a Lord is Love, 47
Baylis's (T. H.) The Temple Church, 476
Baylor's (F. C.) Claudia, 770
Bazin's (R.) Les Italiens d'Aujourd'hui, 211
Je's (F. W.) Oriental Biographical Dictionary, edited by Keene, 643
Beames's (J.) Grammar of the Bengali Language, Literary and Colloquial, 243
Beckworth, James P., The Life and Adventures of, 508
Beddoes, Thomas Lovell, Letters of, edited by Gosse, 636
Beechey's (Canon) The Rise and Progress of Rossett School, 444
Bell's English Classics: Selections from Pope's Works, and Milton's Paradise Regained, ed. Deighton—Burke's Letters on a Regicide Peace, ed. Keene, 443
Bell's (R. S. W.) The Business of a Busy Man, 800
Bellezza's (Signor) Le Ultime Poesie di Alfredo Tennyson, 277
Benson's (E. F.) The Rubicon, 538
Benyowski, Maurilius Augustus, Count de, Memoirs and Travels of, tr. Nicholson, ed. Oliver, 341, 410
Bersford-Webb's (H. S.) Primary German Translation, 611
Bertram's (J.) Some Memories of Books, Authors, and Events, 146
Besant, Annie, an Autobiography, 146
Bible: Frowde's Pocket Bible, 82; Translated into Portuguese, 312; Psalter of the Great Bible of 1539, edited by Earle, 338
Binyon's (L.) Lyric Poems, 607
Birrell's (A.) Essays about Men, Women, and Books, 376
Black's Guide-Books to Belgium and Holland, 612
Black's (R.) Horse Racing in England, 240
Blackfriars of Perth, The, edited by Milne, 442
Blau's Map of Lancashire in 1662, 476
Blaise's (J.) La Mongagnole, 800
Blatchford's (R.) A Son of the Forge, 610
Bolderwood's (R.) A Modern Buccaneer, 640
Bonwick's (J.) Irish Druids and Old Irish Religions, 835
Book of Common Prayer, Appendices by Cornford, 406
Book-Prices Current, Vol. VII., 313
Books about Books: Early Printed Books, by Duff—Early Illustrated Books, by Pollard, 239
Book-ellers' Catalogues, 147, 376, 740
Borghese, Princess, Life of, by Zeloni, translated by Lady Martin, 312
Borlase's (W. C.) The Age of the Saints, 579
Bourne's Handy Assurance Directory, edited by Schooling, 244
Boyle's (F.) The Prophet John, 310
Bradford's (Miss) Thou Art the Man, 833
Bradley's (F. H.) Appearance and Reality, 403
Brassey's (Lord) Papers and Addresses, edited by Capt. Eardley-Wilmot, 772
Bray's (Capt. C.) Ivanda, 110; Sir Joseph's Heir, 739
Bridges's (R.) Milton's Prose, 372
Briton's (E. V.) The Face of Death, 242
Brockmann's (K.) Lexicon Syriacum, Fasc. I., 676, 807
Broughton's (Rhoda) A Beginner, 574
Browne's (E. G.) A Year among the Persians, 76
Browne's (T. B.) The Advertiser's A B C, 410
Brymer's (D.) Report on Canadian Archives for 1892, 575
Buletinul Oficial of Bucharest, 346
Bunner's (H. C.) Made in France, 375
Burdett's Official Intelligence, 313
Burke's (Sir R.) Dictionary of the Peerage and Baronetage, 15; Landed Gentry, 735
Burke's (U. R.) Life of Benito Juárez, 576
Burns's Chloris, a Reminiscence, by Adams, 344
Burt (Henry), of Springfield, Life and Times of, by H. M. and S. W. Burt, 312
Burt's Anatomy of Melancholy, edited by Shilleto, 13
Calendar of State Papers, Domestic Series, 1648-1649, edited by Hamilton, 9
Calendar of the Proceedings of the Committee for Compounding, 1643-1660, ed. Green, 173
Calow's (R.) Agnes, and other Poems, 80
Cambridge: Admissions to the College of St. John the Evangelist, Parts I. and II., 311
Cambridge Prize Poems, 1859-93, 409
Cambridge's (A.) A Marriage Ceremony, 275
Cameron's (Mrs. L.) A Bachelor's Bridal, 834
Campbell's (Mrs. V.) The Shibboleth, 242
Cannon's (E.) History of the Theories of Production and Distribution, 48
Cardella's (G.) The Perfect Way of Honour, 609
Carew, Thomas, The Poems and Masque of, edited by Ebsworth, 175
Carew's (F. S.) Jim B., 441
Carletti's (Signor T.) La Russia Contemporanea, 277
Carman's (B.) Low Tide on Grand-Pré, 473
Carroll's (L.) Sylvie and Bruno Concluded, 112
Case-Il, John, Biography of, by Pike, 509
Catalogues: Greek Papyri in the British Museum, edited by Kenyon, 108; Sanskrit, Pali, and Prakrit Books in the British Museum, acquired during the Years 1876-1892, by Bendall, 243; Copinger Collection of the Editions of the Latin Bibles, &c., by W. A. Copinger—Livres grecs et latins imprimés par Alde Manuce à Venise, by Omont, 539; Romances in the Department of Manuscripts in the British Museum, Vol. II., by Ward, 637
Cællus, edited by Merrill, 641
Caumont's (Madame A.) A Dish of Matrimony, 533
Cavendish's (Capt. A. E. J.) Korea and the Sacred White Mountain, 801
Cavour, Count, and Madame de Circourt, edited by Count Nigra, 576, 614
Channing's (E.) English History for American Readers, 739
Chastfield-Taylor's (H. C.) An American Peeress, 574
Chaucer, Geoffrey, The Complete Works of, Vol. I., edited by Skeat, 535
Chinaman's (John Coming) Bright Celestials, 642
Christian's (S.) Serah: a Survival, 705
Churchill, John, Duke of Marlborough, Life of, by General Viscount Wolsley, 605
Cicero: Lælius, sive De Amicitia, ed. Stock—Orations Caesarianæ, ed. Fausset, 111
Civic Reader, edited by Stone and Johnson, 211
Clare's (A.) A Real Repentance, 738
Clark's (A.) Wee to the Conquered, 11
Clarke's (H. B.) A Spanish Grammar for Schools—A First Spanish Reader and Writer, 81
Clergy Directory, The, 345
Clergy List, The, 113
Cobben's (J. M.) The Burden of Isabel, 47
Cobleigh's (T.) Young Sam and Sabina, 834
Cole's (O. A. J.) The Gypsy Road, 801
Coleridge's (E. P.) Sophocles, translated into English Prose from the Text of Jebb, 707
College of St. John the Evangelist, Cambridge, Admissions to the, Parts I. and II., 311
Collins's (W. A.) At Long and Short Range, 212
Colmore's (O.) A Daughter of Music, 506
Connell's (F. N.) In the Green Park, 443
Conway's (W. M.) Climbing and Exploration in the Karakoram-Himalayas, 671
Cook's (A.) First Book in Old English, 706
Cook's (C. H.) Thames Rights and Thames Wrongs, 708
Cooke-Taylor's (R. W.) The Factory System and the Factory Acts, 644
Cooper's (E. H.) Richard Escott, 11
Cordella's I nostri Figli, 837
Correspondence of Mr. Joseph Jekyll, edited by Hon. A. Bourke, 171
Cotes's (Mrs. E.) A Daughter of To-day, 705
Cotterell's (C.) Tempo, 241
Craik's (H.) English Prose, 706
Crawford's (F. M.) Katherine Lauderdale, 505; The Upper Berth, 677
Cresswell's (H.) A Precious Scamp, 799
Crocker's (E. K.) The Education of the Horse, 476
Crockett's (S. R.) The Raiders, 441
Cromwell's (May) Dust before the Wind, 440
Crosland's (Mrs. N.) Landmarks of a Literary Life, 82
Crutwell's (C. T.) Literary History of Early Christianity, 174
Cuming's (E. D.) In the Shadow of the Pagoda, 106
Custance's (H.) Riding Recollections and Turf Stories, 240
Cuthell's (E. E.) A Bairn's Pilgrimage, 790
Dale, Thomas Pelham, Life and Letters of, by his Daughter, H. P. Dale, 272
Dale's (J.) Round the World by Doctors' Orders, 210
Dante: A Companion to, from the German of Sars-tazzi, by Butler, 15; Di Giorno in Giorno, compiled by Signorina E. Levi, 509; Readings on the Inferno, by the Hon. W. W. Vernon, 570
Danvers (F. C.) and others' Memorials of Old Hailbury College, 608
Davidson's (H. C.) Mr. Sadler's Daughter, 739
Davidson's (J.) Sentences and Paragraphs, 49; Baptist Lake, 275
Davis's (R. H.) Our English Cousins, 773
Dawson's (W. H.) Germany and the German, 167
Deane's (M.) Eve's Apple, 440
Debrett's House of Commons, 244
Delos's (L.) Introduction to Commercial Spanish, 611
Delpit's (E.) Marie-Louise, 507
Dene's (N.) Hetty's Heritage, 242
Dentist's Register, The, 509
Derby, Lord, Speeches and Addresses, selected by Sanderson and Roscoe, 677
Dering's (E. H.) The Ban of Mapplethorpe, 676
Dickens's Dictionary of London—Dictionary of the Thames, 803
Dickens's (M. A.) A Valiant Ignorance, 573
Dillon's (J. F.) The Laws and Jurisprudence of England and America, 707
Dixon's (E. H.) The Story of a Modern Woman, 770
Doctor Quodlibet, 834
Dod's Parliamentary Companion for 1894, 345
Dodd's (T.) The "Parish Councils" Act, 707
Dole's (N. H.) Not Angels Quite, 310
Doyle's (A. Conan) The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, 41
Drew's (D'Arcy) Henry Standon, 770
Drummond's (H.) Herod, &c., 80
Duff's (E. G.) Early Printed Books, 239

LITERATURE.

Reviews—continued.

- Dunn's (Mrs. A.) The World's Highway, 408
 Dunn's (G.) Red Cap and Blue Jacket, 705
 Dyer's (H.) Science Teaching in Schools, 177
 E. V. B.'s A Book of the Heavenly Birthdays, 577
 Ebers's (G.) The Story of my Life from Childhood to Manhood, 211
 Edwards's (Miss B.) France of To-day, Vol. II., 575
 Edwards's (C. E.) Camp Fires of a Naturalist, 611
 Egerton's (G.) Keynotes, 145
 Elementary Classics: Selections from Quintus Curtius, edited by Smith, 611
 Elliot's (R. H.) Gold, Sport, and Coffee-planting in Mysore, 343
 Ellis's (Lieut.-Col. A. B.) History of the Gold Coast of West Africa, 45; The Yoruba-Speaking Peoples of the Slave Coast of West Africa, 242
 English Catalogue of Books for 1893, 444
 English Literature in 1893, 17
 Epps's (W.) Land Systems of Australasia, 312
 Era Almanack, edited by Ledger, 113
 Erhardt's (L.) Die Entstehung der homerischen Gedichte, 642
 Errera's (L.) Les Juifs Russes, 15
 Ealer's (E. R.) The Way they Loved at Grimpat, 14
 Esquemeling's (J.) The Buccaneers of America, edited by Powell, 12
 Euripides: The Electra, edited by Keene, 641, 741
 Evans's (E. E.) The Story of Louis XVII. of France, 141
 Evans's (Canon T. S.) Latin and Greek Verse, 243
 Fenn's (G. M.) The Tiger Lily, 241
 Fenn's (W. W.) Twixt the Lights, 82
 Ferguson's Ceylon Handbook and Directory, 244
 Fiske's (S.) Jack's Partner, &c., 501
 Fogarty's (J.) A Hunted Life, 738
 Footman's (J.) History of the Parish Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Chipping Lambourn, 475, 543
 Forbes-Mitchell's (W.) Reminiscences of the Great Mutiny, 1857-59, 203
 Forster's (F.) Major Joshua, 500
 Francillon's (R. E.) Jack Doyle's Daughter, 506
 Francis's (H. R.) "Junius" Revealed, 357, 371, 412, 480
 Francis's (M. E.) The Story of Dan, 706
 Frederic's (H.) The Copperhead, 442
 Freeman's (E. A.) Studies of Travel (Greece), 210
 French's (A. D. W.) The Frenches of Scotland, 312
 Fry's (E. N. L.) Janet Delille, 508
 Galdor's (P.) Lady Perfecta, trans. by Miss Wharton, 312
 Gale's (N.) Orchard Songs, 106
 Garnier's (R. M.) History of the English Landed Interest: Modern Period, 340
 Gasquet's (F. A.) The Great Pestilence (A.D. 1348-1349), 237
 Gault's (P.) A Friend of the Queen (Marie Antoinette—Count de Fersen), tr. by Mrs. Hoey, 369, 446, 478, 518, 550; The Red Shirts, tr. by De Villiers, 711
 Gaunt's (M.) Dave's Sweetheart, 441
 Gerard's (D.) The Rich Miss Riddell, 705
 German Chronicles of War, from Archenholtz's Geschichte des Siebenjährigen Krieges, edited by Lange, 443
 Gilchrist's (M.) The Stone Dragon, 311
 Gladstone, Mr., Speeches of Vol. IX., edited by Hutton and Cohen, 277
 Glenville's (S.) A Fair Colonist, 407
 Goethe: Reviewed after Sixty Years, by Seeley, 44; Faust, Part I., edited by Lee, 112
 Goldsmith's (H.) Our Alma, 706
 Gomme's (A. B.) The Traditional Games of England, Scotland, and Ireland, 470, 678
 Gordon's (E. A.) Clear Round, 12
 Gordon's (J.) A Puritan Pagan, 705
 Gosip's (G. H. D.) The Chess Pocket Manual, 345
 Graham's (P. A.) All the Year with Nature, 110
 Grand's (S.) Our Manifest Nature, 675
 Grange's (A. M.) Victims of Fashion, 770
 Grant, General Sir Hope, Life of, edited by Col. Knollys, 633, 615
 Grant's (C.) The Parish Councillor's Handbook, 508
 Granville, Harriet, Countess, Letters of, 1810-1845, edited by Hon. F. Leveson-Gower, 305, 577, 647
 Gray's (Maxwell) An Innocent Impostor, 244; A Costly Freak, 676
 Great Public Schools, by Various Authors, 142
 Greek Testament, The: The Gospel according to St. Luke, edited by Hestley, 145
 Green's (Mrs. J. K.) Town Life in the Fifteenth Century, 765
 Green's (J. R.) Short History of the English People, edited by Mrs. Green and Miss Norgate, Vol. III., 81
 Greene's (G. A.) Italian Lyriists of To-day, 831
 Greene's (R.) Green Pastures, edited by Gromart, 803
 Greenwood's (F.) The Lover's Lexicon, 172
 Gresson's (R. S.) The Strange Adventures of Anclay Moreland, 176
 Greville's (Lady) Ladies in the Field, 343
 Greville-Nugent's (Hon. Mrs.) A Land of Mosques and Marabouts, 210
 Grey Romance, A, and other Stories, by Mrs. Clifford and others, 442
 Griffith's (Mrs. M.) India's Princes, 376
 Griffith's (A.) Secrets of the Prison-House, 41
 Guesviller's (G.) Le Roman de Gênevotte, 443
 Guillié's (Dr.) Essay on the Instruction and Amusements of the Blind, 675
 Guyot's (Y.) The Tyranny of Socialism, edited by Levy, 476
 Gwatkin's (H. M.) Selections from Early Writers Illustrative of Church History to Constantine, 12
 Gyp's Le 13^e, 408
 Hadden's Handbook on the Local Government Act, 1894, 836
 Hailbury College, Memorials of, by F. C. Danvers and others, 608
 Hainault's (L.) Time and the Player, 706
 Hake, Thomas Gordon, Poems of, selected by Alice Meynell, 435
 Hall's (T. D.) A First Introduction to the Greek Testament, 772
 Hallard's (H.) Idylls of Theocritus, translated into English Verse, 707
 Hamilton, John, Memoirs of, edited by White, 274
 Handbook of Jamaica, by Munson and Roxburgh, 410
 Handbook to the Local Government Act, 1894, by Akerman and Ford, 444
 Happe's (L. A.) Practical German Readings for Beginners, 611
 Harcourt's (A.) For Love and Liberty, 706
 Hardy's (Lady Duffus) A Buried Sin, 46, 56
 Hardy's (F.) Life's Little Ironies, 307
 Hare's (A. J. C.) Sussex, 616
 Harkness's (J.) Treatise on the Theory of Functions, 56
 Harraden's (B.) In Varying Moods, 677
 Harris's (W. B.) A Journey through the Yemen, 707
 Hart's Army List, 113
 Hart's (M.) In Cupid's College, 310
 Hart's (W. H.) Ramsey Cartulary, Vol. III., 802
 Hart's (Bret) A Protegee of Jack Hamlin's, 575
 Hartington's (E.) The New Academe, 177
 Hatton's (B.) End Lytle, 574
 Hawthorne, Nathaniel, Personal Recollections of, by Bridge, 508
 Haynes's (A. E.) Man Hunting in the Desert, 503
 Hazard, Thomas, Life of, by C. Hazard, 408
 Henziker's (F.) Outlines, 311
 Henry's (W.) Swimming, 78
 Henty's (G. A.) Dorothy's Double, 342
 Heptameron of Margaret, Queen of Navarre, with an Essay by Saintsbury, 671
 Herbert, George, of Bemerton, The Life of, 311
 Herman's (H.) A King in Bohemia, 641
 Herodotus: Urania, edited by Stuckburgh, 111
 Heroes of History, 244, 278, 315
 Hetherington's (Miss) Index to the Periodical Literature of the World, 708
 Higginson's (T. W.) English History for American Readers, 730
 Hill, Frederic, An Autobiography of Fifty Years, edited by his daughter, Constance Hill, 105
 Hill's (J.) The Common Ancestor, 241
 History of the Expedition under Lewis and Clark, edited by Coates, 508
 Hobbes's (J. O.) A Bundle of Life, 11
 Hocking's (Rev. J.) Ishmael Pengelly, 11; The Monk of Mar-Sala, 677
 Hoernle's (A. F. R.) The Weber MSS., 644
 Höhnle's (Lieut. L. von) Discovery of Lakes Rudolf and Stefania, translated by Bell, 408
 Holloway College, Report for 1893, 346
 Holmes's (E.) The Price of a Pearl, 407
 Hope's (A.) The Prisoner of Zenda, 638
 Houston's (J. D. C.) The Daughter of Leontius, 800
 Hovey's (R.) Seaward, 274
 Hoyer's (M. A.) Good Dame Fortune, 110
 Hudson's (P.) She Shall be Mine, 140
 Hulburd's (P.) The Romance of Shore Mote, 241
 Hume's (F.) The Mystery of Landy Court, 638; The Best of her Sex, 801
 Humphreys's (G.) The Law relating to Parish Councils, 836
 Hungerford's (Mrs.) The Red-House Mystery, 145; An Unsatisfactory Lover, 507
 Hunter's (P. H.) The Silver Bullet, 706; James Inwick, Ploughman and Elder, 834
 Hutton's (R. H.) Criticisms on Contemporary Thought and Thinkers, from the Spectator, 764
 Hyde's (D.) Abraham Grash Chûge Connacht, 206
 Hymes in Ki-Megi, 677
 Hynde's (R. S.) Second Yao-English Primer, 676
 Illad: Sixth Book of the, edited by Leaf, 463
 Imitation of Christ, The, 476
 Index of Noteworthy Words and Phrases found in the Clementine Writings, 13
 Inglia's (J.) Our Ain Folk, 442
 Innes's (A. D.) Scars and Singers, 274
 Iota's A Yellow Aster, 208
 Jady's (El) The Sailor of the Istar, 675
 James's (C. T. C.) Miss Precocity, 770
 James's (W. P.) Romantic Professions, 540
 Jameson's (W.) My Dead Self, 675
 Jaschke's (R.) English-German Conversation Dictionary, 147
 Jekyll, Mr. Joseph, Correspondence of, edited by Hon. A. Bourke, 171
 Jerome's (J. K.) John Ingerfield, and other Stories, 146
 Jessopp's (A.) Random Roaming, 435
 Jewett's (S. O.) Deephaven, 178
 Jocelyn's (Mrs. R.) Pamela's Honeymoon, 574
 Joinville's (Prince de) Vieux Souvenirs, 1818-1848, 505
 Jókai's (M.) Eyes like the Sea, translated by Bain, 378
 Journal of Education, 113
 Juarez, Benito, Life of, by Burke, 576
 "Junius" Revealed, by his surviving Grandson, H. R. Francis, 357, 371, 412, 480
 Keene's (H. G.) History of India, 643
 Keith's (L.) Lisbeth, 47
 Kelly's Handbook to the Titled, Landed, and Official Classes for 1894, 244
 Kennaly's (A.) Molly and her Man of War, 176
 Kennard's (Mrs. E.) Just Like a Woman, 641
 Kidd's (B.) Social Evolution, 785
 Ki-Gogo, Primer in, 677
 Ki-Megi, Hymns in, 677
 Kimball's (H. McE.) Poems, 276
 King's (Capt. C.) Foes in Ambush, 276
 King's Husar, A, edited by Compton, 369
 Kingsford's (W.) The History of Canada, 575
 Kipling's (R.) The Jungle Book, 766
 Kirke's (V.) "Zorg", 343
 Knight's (P. A.) By Moorland and Sea, 177
 Knight's (M.) Peeps at the Past, 476
 Knight's (W.) Rectorial Addresses delivered at the University of St. Andrews, 476
 Kostromitin's (J.) The Last Day of the Carnival, 71
 Labilliere's (F. F. de) Federal Britain, 708
 Lane-Poole's (S.) The Mohammedan Dynasties, 644
 Lang's (A.) St. Andrews, 504
 Lansdell's (H.) Chinese Central Asia, 305
 Latin Stories, edited by Godley, 111
 Laud, Archbishop, Life of, by "A Romish Recusant," 830
 Lee's (R. B.) Modern Dogs, 476
 Lee-Warner's (W.) The Protected Princess of India, 677
 Lefevre's (S.) English Commons and Forests, 345
 Legge's (A. O.) Sunny Manitoba, 619
 Le Roux's (H.) Gladys, 342
 Leslie's (G. D.) Letters to Marco, 144
 Letters, Despatches, &c., preserved in the Military Department of India, ed. Forrest, Vol. I., 12
 Levy's (A.) Private Life of Napoleon, translated by Simeon, 632
 Lie's (J.) The Visionary, translated by Muir, 473
 Lightfoot's (J. B.) Biblical Essays, 145
 Linton's (E. L.) The One too Many, 342
 Lüthy's (J.) The Law of District and Parish Councils, 836
 Littlejohn's (J.) England against the World, 610
 Livius's (T.) The Blessed Virgin in the Fathers of the First Six Centuries, 12
 Local Government Act, 1894: By Akerman and Ford—by Graham and Brodhurst, 444; by Stone and Pease, 708; Hadden's Handbook, 836
 Loftus, Lord Augustus, Diplomatic Reminiscences of, Second Series, 569
 London in 1894, 675
 Longman's Ship Historical Readers: Book VI. The Stuart Period, by Gardiner, 740
 Louis XVII. of France, The Story of, by Evans, 141
 Lucas's (E. V.) Bernard Barton and his Friends, 146
 Lumma's (C. E.) The Land of Poco Tiempo, 472
 Lyons's (P. A.) Ramsey Cartulary, Vol. III., 802
 Lytton's (Earl of) Selected Poems, edited by Lady B. Balfour, 500
 Maartens's (M.) The Greater Glory, 176
 Mabie's (H. W.) My Study Fire—Under the Trees, 244
 Macaulim's (M. W.) Tennyson's Idylls of the King, and Arthurian Story, 611
 Macauland's (Lieut.-Col. W. H.) Deferred Pay, 706
 McClymont's (Rev. J. A.) The New Testament and its Writers, 145
 McCordquale's Railway and Commercial Gazetteer, 277
 Maccunn's (J.) Ethics of Citizenship, 644
 Mackinlay's (J. M.) Folk-lore of Scottish Lochs and Springs, 374
 Maclean's (M.) A Romance of Skye, 209
 Macleod's (F.) Pharais, 800
 Macmillan's Foreign School Classics: Mémirée's Colomba, ed. Farnacht, 611
 Macnab's (F.) Relics, Fragments of a Life, 11
 McNulty's (E.) Misther O'Ryan, 835
 Macpherson's (A.) Glimpses of Church and Social Life in the Highlands in Olden Times, 238
 Macquod's (K. S.) In an Orchard, 310
 Mahaffy's (Rev. J. F.) The Flinders Petrie Papyri, Part II., 472, 511
 Mahomet, Life of, by Muir, 345
 Maitland's (F. W.) Memoranda de Parlamento, 1305, 273
 Mantegazza's (P.) L'Arte di render Marito, 313
 Marie Antoinette, The Life of, by M. de la Rochetier translated by Bell, 302
 Marks's (M. A. M.) Thorough, 640
 Marshall's (G. W.) The Genealogist's Guide, 312
 Martin's (Mrs. H.) Britomart, 144
 Martin's (S.) Windfalls of Observation, 345
 Maskelyne's Type-writer, 313, 322
 Masinger's A New Way to Pay Old Debts, edited by Deighton, 112
 Masterman's (J.) A Deserted Couple, 342

- Mathers's (H.) A Man of To-day, 666
 Maule's (P. C.) Memories of the Mutiny, 339
 Maude's (P. W.) Victims, 475
 Maxwell's (Sir H.) Scottish Land Names, 606
 Mayer's (Mrs. T.) Women of Letters, 409
 Meade's (L. T.) A Soldier of Fortune, 574
 Medical Register, The, 569
 Meldrum's (D. S.) The Story of Margrédel, 510
 Mémoires d'une Inconnue, publiés sur le Manuscrit original, 1780-1816, 634
 Men of Achievement: Men of Business, by Stoddard—Inventors, by Hubert, 345
 Méneval's (Baron C. F. de) Memoirs to serve for the History of Napoleon I., Vols. I. and II., 827
 Meredith's (J.) Laura Arbutnot, 534
 Mérimée's (F.) Colomba, ed. Ropes, 443; ed. Farnacht—ed. Hewitson, 611
 Merriman's (H. E.) With Edged Tools, 609
 Metamorphosis, The: or, Golden Age of Apuleius, translated by Taylor, 474
 Meyer's Konversations-Lexikon, 49
 Middleman's (Jean) The Mystery of Clement Dunraven, 609
 Middleton's (C.) Innes of Blairavon, 109; The Fool of Destiny, 640
 Mitchell's (E.) The Temple of Death, 703
 Mitchell & Co.'s Newspaper Press Directory, 277
 Mitford's (B.) The King's Assail, 667
 Mitford's (Mary R.) Our Village, 15
 Mocatta's (P. G.) A Legend of Florence, 80
 Montague's (C.) Tales of a Nomad, 158
 Montague's (F. C.) The Elements of English Constitutional History, 740
 Montbard's (G.) Among the Moors, 7-9
 Moore's (P. F.) A Journalist's Note-Book, 501
 Moore's (G.) Esther Waters, 537
 Morice's (Rev. F. D.) Latin Verse Composition, 111
 Moule's (H. J.) Old Dorset, 10
 Muir's (Sir W.) Life of Mahomet, 345
 Mulliner's (E.) Abroad with Twitty, 410
 Murray's (D.) Japan, 508
 Murray's (D. C.) The Making of a Novelist, 49; In Direct Peril, 276
 My Paris Note Book, 734
 Nanteuil's (Madame P. de) Les Elans d'Élodie, 507
 Napier's (A. S.) History of the Holy Rood tree, 308
 Napoleon: Private Life of, by Lévy, translated by Simeon, 612; Memoirs to serve for the History of, by Méneval, Vols. I. and II., 827
 Nelson's (J.) The Rounding of Mrs. Potter, 311
 New Editions, Reprints, Translations, &c., 14, 15, 49, 147, 178, 244, 277, 313, 346, 409, 444, 549, 510, 576, 577, 612, 614, 618, 708, 740, 771, 804
 New English and French Vocabulary, by Lillman and Ludwig, 444
 Newton's (O. C.) Gleanings towards the Annals of Aughton, 473
 Nisbet's (H.) A Bush Girl's Romance, 276
 Norman's (J. H.) Ready Reckoner of the World's Exchanges, 47
 Norris's (W. E.) Saint Ann's, 609
 N'zan's (Buis) The Congo Free State and its Big Game Shooting, 801
 Official Year-Book of the Church of England, 345
 O'Grady's (S.) Lost on Da Corrig—The Story of Ireland—The Bog of Stars, 335
 Olmsted's (G.) Le Droit de l'Enfant, 679
 Old Haileybury College, Memorials of, by F. C. Danvers and others, 608
 Oliphant's (Mrs.) Lady William, 175; The Prodigals, 676
 Oliver's (Capt. S. P.) The French Soufan, 477
 O'Meara's (J. J.) Municipal Taxation at Home and Abroad, 340
 Ortolli's (F.) Evening Tales, done into English by Harris, 578
 Ouida's Two Offenders, 244
 Overton's (J. H.) The English Church in the Nineteenth Century (1800-1833), 205
 Owen's (J.) Skeptics of the French Renaissance, 31
 Owen's (J. A.) Forest, Field, and Fell, 111
 Pager's (Comtesse S. de Tascher de la) Mon Séjour aux Tuileries, 444
 Parish Councillor's Guide, by Richards, Payne, and Soper, 703
 Parker's (G.) The Translation of a Savage, 733
 Parkes, Sir Harry, Life of, by S. Lane-Poole and F. V. Dickins, 401
 Parrott's (J. E.) The Life and Duties of the Citizen, 703
 Parrot's (Chancellor) Memoirs, Vol. II., translated by Roche, 612
 Paston's (G.) A Modern Amazon, 574
 Pasture's (Mrs. H. de la) The Little Squire, 403
 Paterson's (A.) The Daughter of the Nez Percés, 506
 Pepys, Samuel, Diary, ed. by Wheatley, Vol. III., 75
 Perina's (A.) Into Temptation, 242
 Peyrebrune's (G. de) Celui qui revient, 443
 Philippe-Welley (C.) and others Big Game Shooting, 536
 Philpotts's (E.) Some Every-day Folks, 308
 Philostrati Malaris Imagines, edited by Benndorf and Schenkl, 243
 Pitt's (J. J.) Idylls and Lyrics of the Ohio Valley—Little New World Idyll, 276
 Pickering's (P.) A Life Awry, 110
 Pindar: Le Odi di Pindaro, edited by Fracconelli—Olympian and Pythian Odes, by Fennell, 728
 Pitt Press Series: Colomba, by Mérimée, ed. Ropes—Louis XI., Tragedie by Delavigne, ed. Eve—Die Deutschen Heidenagen, by Klee, ed. Wolstenholme, 443
 Pitt Press Shakespeare for Schools: A Midsummer Night's Dream, ed. Verity, 443
 Ports' Praise from Homer to Swinburne, collected and arranged by E. D. Adams, 139
 Policy of Free Exchange, A, edited by T. Mackay, 409
 Pollard's (W.) Early Illustrated Books, 239
 Poole's (E. T. E.) His Troublesome Sister, 539
 Pope's (W. H.) Fly-fisher's Register, 343
 Porritt's (E.) The Englishman at Home, 376
 Portal's (Sir G.) The British Mission to Uganda in 1893, edited by Lord Cromer, 706
 Porter, Noah, a Memorial by Friends, edited by Merriam, 123
 Poushkin's (A.) Prase Tales, translated by Keane, 771
 Prad's (Mrs. C.) Christina Chard, 407
 Prevost's (M.) Les Demi-Vierges, 535
 Primer in Ki-Gogo, 677
 Prothero-Lewis's (H.) Hooks of Steel, 208
 Pryce's (R.) Winifred Mount, 675
 Psalter of the Great Bible of 1539, edited by Earle, 338
 Public Schools Year-Book, 113
 Putnam's (O. H.) Authors and their Public in Ancient Times, 402
 Q's The Delectable Duchy, 74
 Rae's (J.) Eight Hours for Work, 644
 Rams' (Mrs. A.) The Little Sisters of the Poor, 147
 Ramsden's (Lady G.) Speedwell, 208
 Rawle's (E. J.) Annals of the Ancient Royal Forest of Emsay, 474
 Rawlinson's (G.) Parthia, 14
 Reeves, Right Rev. William, Life of, by Lady Ferguson, 603
 Reid's (Surgeon-Lieut. Col. A. S.) Chin-Lushai Land, 408
 Renan's (E.) Histoire du Peuple d'Israël, Tome V., 573
 Reports and Catalogues of Free Libraries, 244, 245
 Revue de Paris, 212, 346
 Revue des Questions Historiques, 836
 Riley's (J. W.) Poems Here at Home, 274
 Rita's The Ending of my Day, 342
 Robbie's (W.) Aberdeen, 441
 Roberts's (M.) The Purification of Dolores Silva, &c., 391
 Roberts's (W.) Printers' Marks, 539
 Robertson's (Rev. A.) Fra Paolo Barpi, 311
 Robertson's (P. F.) The Devil's Pronoun, 476
 Robinson's (P.) Some Country Sights and Sounds, 177
 Rochester Diocesan Directory, 113
 Roche-erie's (M. de la) The Life of Marie Antoinette, translated by Cora Bell, 390
 Rogers's (J. E. T.) The Industrial and Commercial History of England, 206
 Romilly's (H. H.) Letters from the Western Pacific and Mashonaland, edited by S. H. Romilly, 209
 Roosevelt's (T.) The Wilderness Hunter, 610
 Roma's (M.) The Real Charlotte, 735
 Roxburgh Ballads, Final Part of Vol. VII., edited by Elworthy, 402
 Runciman's (J.) Side Lights, 11
 Russell's (Dora) A Great Temptation, 342; A Hidden Chain, 727
 Russell's (Mrs. H. E.) Joyce Martindale, 47
 Rutherford's (Mark) Catharine Furze, edited by Shapcott, 246
 St. Andrew's Gazette, The, 646
 St. Andrews University Calendar, 178
 St. Aubyn's (A.) Orchard Damerel, 506; In the Face of the World, 770
 St. John's (St. A.) Burmese Reader, 248
 Sala's (G. A.) Things I have Seen and People I have Known, 767
 Salnameh, Turkish Official Almanac, 510
 Samuelson's (J. G.) Greece: her Present Condition and Recent Progress, 214
 Sanferson's (E.) History of England and the British Empire—A Summary of British History, 43
 Sangermano's (Fischer) The Burmese Empire a Hundred Years Ago, edited by Jardine, 413
 Sarpi, Fra Paolo, by Robertson, 311
 Nautical Poems of the Time of the Reformation, edited by Cranston, 344
 Saye's (Rev. A. H.) The "Higher Criticism" and the Verdict of the Monuments, 614
 Scartazzini's (G. A.) A Companion to Dante, from the German by Baur, 15
 Schaff's (P.) History of the Christian Church, 310
 School Calendar, The, 123
 Schultz's (J.) Ce qu'elles peuvent, 673
 Schütz-Gaervert's (Dr. von) Social Peace, 48
 Scollard's (C.) On Sunny Shores, 801
 Scott's (Leader) Echoes of Old Florence, 277
 Scott's (Sir W.) Lay of the Last Minstrel, 61
 Seeley's (J. R.) Goethe, Reviewed after Sixty Years, 41
 Select Statutes, &c., illustrative of the Reigns of Elizabeth and James I., edited by Prothero, 672, 712
 Serrao's (M.) Le Amanti, 771
 Sergeant's (A.) The Surrender of Margaret Bellarmine, 407
 Serjeant's (G.) A Threefold Mystery, 575
 Shakespeare: Richard II., ed. Herford—Julius Caesar, ed. Innes, 31; The Tragedy of Hamlet, ed. Chambers—A Midsummer Night's Dream, ed. Verity, 443
 Sheldon's (G.) The Standish of High Acre, 342
 Sberer's (J. W.) Alice of the Inn, 166; Memories of the Mutiny, 339
 Shaw's (E. L.) If Men were Wise, 602
 Shilling Peerage—Shilling Baronage—Shilling Knightage—Shilling House of Commons, edited by Walford, 178
 Short Notices, 49, 82, 113, 147, 178, 212, 245, 277, 346, 377, 410, 444, 509, 540, 577, 612, 645, 678, 708, 740, 773, 808, 837
 Sienkiewicz's (H.) Yanko the Musician, tr. Curtin, 375
 Simpson's (W.) Eighteen of Them—Singular Stories, 677
 Sims's (J. R.) My Two Wives, &c., 576
 Sinclair's (A.) Swimming, 23
 Sixty Years' Experience of an Irish Landlord: Memoirs of John Hamilton, edited by White, 574
 Skinner's (W. R.) Mining Manual for 1893, 113
 Slater's (J. H.) Early Editions, 673
 Sloane's (Prof.) The French War and the Revolution, 507
 Small's (A.) Leisure-Hour Verses, 80
 Smolovsky's (A. V.) Heavens, translated by Prof. V. E. and J. Moser, 575
 Smith's (C.) A Chamberer of the Ground, 334
 Smith's (G.) Essays on Questions of the Day, Political and Social, 48
 Snow's (F.) Cases and Opinions on International Law, 707
 Somerville's (E. E.) The Real Charlotte, 733
 Sonnenschein's (A.) German through English, 443
 Sophocles, translated into English Prose from the Text of Jebb, by Coleridge, 707
 Spalding's (J. A.) The House of Lords, 112
 Spinner's (A.) A Study in Colour, 441
 Stahl's (P.) Marousia, edited by Bouille, 112
 Stanbury, The Hon., and Others, 575
 Statesman's Year-Book, edited by Keltie, 345
 Steel's (F. A.) The Flower of Forgiveness, 677; The Potter's Thumb, 762
 Sterry's (J. A.) A Naughty Girl, 145
 Stories of the Sea—Stories of Italy—Stories of the Army, 311
 Story of my Dictatorship, The, 610
 Story of the Nations: Parthian, by Rawlinson, 14; Japan, by Murray, 308
 Story of Two Noble Lives, Countess Canning and Marchioness of Waterford, edited by Hare, 7
 Story's (W. W.) A Poet's Portfolio, 802
 Stoughton's (Dr.) Recollections of a Long Life, 443
 Stuart's (E.) Inscrutable, 343; The Power of the Past, 714
 Superfluous Woman, A, 146
 Swan's (A. S.) A Foolish Marriage, 834
 Sweet's (H.) A Primer of Historical English Grammar, 111
 Sweetman's (E.) Footsteps of the Gods, 80
 Swinburne's (A. C.) Astrophel, and other Poems, 701
 Symonds's (Miss M.) Days spent on a Dog's Farm, 146
 Tacitus: Dialogus de Oratoribus, edited by Peterson, 140
 Tennyson: Le Ultima Poese di Alfredo Tennyson, by Belletta, 377; Tennyson's Idylls of the King, by Macaulay, 611
 Terrell's (T.) A Woman of Heart, 241
 Testamenta Karlesiana, edited by Ferguson, 212
 Theal's (G. M.) South Africa, 330
 Théâtre Français: Eugene Labouché, ed. Testard, 611
 Theocritus: Idylls of, translated into English Verse by Hallard, 707
 Thomas's (A.) No Hero, but a Man, 640
 Thompson's (F.) Poems, 141
 Thompson's (F. D.) In the Track of the Sun, 210
 Thomson, James, Weaver of Kewlith, Poems of, 344
 Thomson's (B.) South Sea Yarns, 772
 Thornton's (F. Du Pré) Elementary Arabic Text and Glossary, 243
 Thounand and One Quarters of an Hour, ed. L. Smithers, 474
 Thudichum's (J. L. W.) A Treatise on Wines, 212
 Tinsau's (L. de) Le Chemin de Damas, 507
 Tirebuck's (W.) The Little Widow, 311
 Tomkinson's (Lieut.-Col. W.) Diary of a Cavalry Officer, edited by J. Tomkinson, 769, 838
 Tone, Theobald Wolfe, The Autobiography of, edited by O'Brien, 797
 Torrens's (W. M.) History of Cabinets, 733
 Tregarten's (M.) Her Angel Friend, 506
 Treitschke's (H. von) Das Deutsche Ordensland Preussen, ed. Lyon, 443
 Trenchard's (Max de) West Grimstead et les Caryll, 471
 Trusty in Fight, 211
 Tucker's (H.) The New Arcadia, 706
 Tuckerman's (B.) William Jay and the Constitutional Movement for Abolition of Slavery, 608
 Turner's (B. D.) Advanced Manual of Latin Prose Composition, 111
 Twain's (Mark) Tom Sawyer Abroad, 678
 Tweedie's (Mrs. A.) A Winter Jaunt to Norway, 810
 Tweedie's (General W.) The Arabian Horse, 644
 Twining's (T.) Travels in India a Hundred Years Ago, edited by Rev. W. H. Twining, 271
 Tynan's (K.) A Cluster of Nuts, 835

LITERATURE.

Reviews—continued.

- University College of North Wales, Calendar, 173
 Upward's (A.) The Queen against Owen, 343
 Unanno's (O.) The Book-Hunter in Paris, 2
 Vacaresco's (H.) The Bard of the Dimbavitz, Second Series, tr. by Carmen Sylva and Stretzell, 737
 Vaux's (Rev. J. E.) Church Folk-lore, 674, 713
 Vetch's (S. F. F.) Margaret Drummond, Millionaire, 176
 Venn's (Mrs.) The Husband of One Wife, 688
 Vernon's (Hon. W. W.) Readings on the Inferno of Dante, 370
 Victorian Year-Book, edited by Hayter, 441
 Villari's (Madame L.) Here and There in Italy and Over the Border, 13
 Vincent's (V.) The White Aigrette, 208
 Violetta's The Hair of Ingelby, 403
 Vivian's (H.) The Green Bay Tree, 737
 Waddell's (Rev. P. H.) An Old Kirk Chronicle, 302
 Walford's (L. B.) A Question of Peersmanship, 15
 Wallace's (G. W.) Princeton Sketches: the Story of Nassau Hall, 408
 Wallace's (W.) Scotland Yesterday, 344
 Walters's (A.) A Lotos Eater in Capri, 13
 Ward's (Mrs. H.) Marcella, 209
 Ward's (H. L. D.) Catalogue of Romances in the British Museum, Vol. II., 337
 Ward's (W.) Witnesses to the Unseen, 602
 Ward & Lock's Guide to London, 803
 Warde's (F.) My Child and I, 203
 Warrender's (M.) Marchmont and the Humes of Polwarth, 307
 Warung's (P.) Tales of Australian Early Days, 642
 Warwick Shakespeare: The Tragedy of Hamlet, edited by Chambers, 443
 Washington, George, Writings of, edited by Ford, 437
 Watson's (L.) The Vicar of Langhwaite, 203
 Watson-Lyall's Sportsman's Guide to the Rivers, Lochs, Moors, and Deer Forests of Scotland, 678
 Webb's (S. and B.) History of Trade Unionism, 330
 Webb's (G.) Saint-Simon et son Œuvre, 705
 Weir's (P.) The Invaders of Britain, 31
 Weiss's (F. H.) The Elements of German, 443
 West Irish Folk-Tales and Romances, collected and translated by Larnaline, 375
 Westall's (W.) For Honour and Life, 641
 Wetley's (E. R.) New Manual of Geography for Middle and Higher Forms in Schools, 611
 Weyman's (S. J.) The Man in Black, 607; Under the Red Robe, 738
 Wharton's (A. H.) Through Colonial Doorways, 507
 White's (B.) Mary Fenwick's Daughter, 675
 White's (A.) The English Democracy, 773
 White's (G. W.) The Heart and Songs of the Spanish Sierras, 711
 White's (P.) Mr. Bailey-Martin, 178
 Whitlock's (Rev. J. A.) Brief History of the Hospital of God's House, Southampton, 802
 Whympers's (K.) Scrambles in the Alps, 439
 Whyte's (Rev. A.) Bunyan Characters, 345
 Wiggin's (K. D.) Polly Oliver's Problem, 211
 Wiley's (W. H. and S. K.) The Yosemite, Alaska, and the Yellowstone, 611
 Wilkins's (M. E.) Pembroke, 729
 Wilkins's (W. H.) The Green Bay Tree, 737
 Wilkinson's (S.) The Great Alternative, 438
 Williams's (A. M.) Sam Houston and the War of American Independence in Texas, 376
 Willing's British and Irish Press Guide, 410
 Wilson's (Dr. W.) Division and Reunion, 607
 Winchester College, 1893-1894, 474
 With the Woodlanders and by the Tide, by "A Son of the Marshes," edited by Owen, 119
 Wolsey's (General Viscount) Life of John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough, 605
 Wolverton's (Lord) Five Months' Sport in Somali Land, 772
 Woolward's (Capt. R.) Nigh on Sixty Years at Sea, 336
 Worthington's (L.) The Dwellings of the Poor, 113
 Wylie's (J. H.) History of England under Henry the Fourth, Vol. II., 405
 Year-Book of the Scientific and Learned Societies of Great Britain, 678
 Yeats's (W. B.) The Celtic Twilight, 173
 Yellow Book, The, Vol. I., 529
 Young's (A. B. C.) Needs Must, 538
 Zangwill's (I.) The King of Schnorrers, 311
 Zend-Avesta, Le, edited by Prof. Darmesteter, 332
 Zola's (E.) Money, translated by Vizetelly, 771

Poetry.

- Apollo in Paris, by T. Watts, 741
 Breath of Avon, by T. Watts, 531
 Carnot, Madame, Sonnet to, by T. Watts, 567
 Gilbert & B.cket, by A. P. Graves, 303
 Grave by the Sea, A, by T. Watts, 445
 Morris, William, Poem to, by A. C. Swinburne, 172
 Verlain's (Paul) Lecture, 613

Original Papers.

- Acts ii. 9, 130, 246
 Advertiser, The Wily, 83
 Authors, A New Danger for, 377
 Bacon (Roger) and Bartholomew Anglicus, 51, 143, 213, 314, 347
 Beaumont, Francis, An Unknown Work of, 116
 Beddoes, Thomas Lovell, 511
 Henryowak's Travels, 410
 Bible of St. Anthony, 304
 Bicknell, Mr. H., 248
 Book Sales of 1893, 16, 51, 83
 Booksellers' Trade Dinner, 447, 477, 510, 641, 678, 614
 Brigham, Rachel, and her Father Nicholas, Burial-Places of, 541
 British Museum, A Journal Room for the, 613, 646, 689
 Browning's (Mrs. Barrett) Parentage, 338
 Byron and Shelley at Ravenna, 672
 Byron's 'English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,' 574, 614, 646, 689, 710, 741, 774, 824
 Cavour Letters, The, 613
 Chaucer: The Verb "Terre" in, 379, 445; 'Clerks Tale' and Petrarch's Version of the "Griffide Story," 541; An Unknown Balade by, 742, 773, 805, 837
 Child's (The late Mr.) Manuscripts, 315
 Clifford's (Anne) Contested Letter, 709
 Cleridge, Note on, 114, 248
 Copyright and Copywrong, 16, 50
 Craig Choinnachan, 613, 647
 'Diary of a Cavalry Officer,' 373
 Dickens in Yorkshire, 33, 114, 118, 180, 213, 246
 'Dictionary of National Biography,' 417, 477, 510
 Dymoke, The, of Scirevelsh, 689, 838
 Euripides, The 'Electra' of, 741
 Fersen, Count, 449, 478
 Forged Laws of the Conqueror and the Confessor, 479
 Glasse's (Mrs.) Cookery Book, 774
 Granville's (Lady) Letters, 577, 647
 Gresham University Scheme, 347
 Hastings, The Battle of, 214, 278
 Historical Manuscripts Commission: The Portland Papers, 16; Earl of Lonsdale's Papers, 114
 Horns-Book in Form of a Cross, 613
 Imitation, 113
 Jowett's (Dr.) Mother, 246
 "Junius" Revealed, 412, 490
 "Lad" and "Lam," The Etymology of, 774
 Londoners and the Chase, 338
 'Lyrical Ballads, The Philadelphia Reprint of the, 213
 Mesopotamian Kings, Some Early, 59
 Middleman, The, 246
 "New Plutarch, The," 274, 314
 Overcross of Westminster Four in 1561, 148, 182
 Patrie, Flinders, Papyrus, Part II., 611
 'Polwart on the Green,' 314
 Post-Graduate Study and Degrees, 213
 Publishing Season, 379, 380, 479, 512
 'Rare Editions,' 346, 379, 411, 478, 511, 678
 Sales, 181, 247, 279, 314, 345, 379, 410, 446, 512, 679, 614, 774, 805, 838
 'Seasons, The,' Pedigree of the Author of, 247, 314
 Smith, The Late W. H., 16
 Socket, P. St., 578, 613, 644, 711
 Tasso, Proposed Centenary in 1895, 304
 Washington, The English Ancestry of, 377, 446, 513, 541, 689, 712, 804
 Westminster Write, 82
 Wordsworth, Notes on, 246
 Yorkshire Schools, 213, 245

Obituaries.

- Abram, W. A., 614, Ackrill, R., 339, Alexander, Dr. W., 248, Bachmann, Dr. P. J., 711, Bailey, J. M., 447, Baker, B., 55, Halford, General Sir O., 340, Battalard, P., 412, Bath and Wells, Bishop of, 773, Bentley, Mrs. S., 181, Blackburne, Miss O., 480, Boyd, T., 243, Brothaw, Dr., 247, Bury, Madame Blaise de, 180, Byrne, Mrs. W. P., 446, Capern, E., 743, Carr, F., 542, Chichester, H. M., 274, Childs, G. W., 179, 345, Clark, R., 380, Coke, A. E., 679, Coleridge, Lord, 603, Collet, Miss, 415, Coutureur, A., 243, Cowdroy, Miss M. P., 315, Dabney, V., 306, Dazuet, A., 713, Dale, Rev. H., 447, Davies, Rev. E. W. L., 316, Derainmes, Miss M., 182, D Orsey, Rev. A. J., 412, Drano, Miss A. T., 529, Du Camp, M., 214, Dulcken, H. W., 182, Dumemil, A., 245, Dümichen, Prof. J., von, 215, Ellis, Col. A. E., 316, Ffoulkes, Mr., 380, Foulke, G. C., 86, Frankl, L. A., 413, Freund, Dr. W., 774, Froebel, K. F., 681, Gasparin, Madame A. de, 300, Goldsmith, H., 182, Griffin, R. T., 447, Haggerston, W. J., 615, Halfdanoson, H., 245, Hodgson, B. H., 681, Hurst, T., 672, Ilco, V., 247, Jellinek, Dr. A., 19, Johnson, M., 618, Leyland, P. A., 116, Molke, Herr M., 160, Morris, Prof. H., 345, Morris, Dr., 852, Mortara, Cavaliere M., 182, Newcome, Mrs., 712, Noel, Hon. R., 711, Peabody, Miss E., 116, Pearson, Prof. C. H., 743, Perles, Dr. J., 342, Pfau, L., 613, Poole, Dr. W. F., 347, Racki, Canon, 413, Renan, Madame, 682, 709, Reuter, Frau, 806, Roacher, Prof., 776, Sandford, Lord, 10, Simpkinson, Rev. J. N., 543, Smith, Prof. W. R., 415, Spicer, W. G., 642, Sprenger, Dr. A., 19, Stephen, Sir J., 349

- Stevenson, T. G., 647, Story, Mrs. W. W., 85, Thackeray, Mrs. W. M., 85, Torrens, McC., 580, Tregollas, H., 711, Trumbull, General M. M., 713, Underhill, J., 530, Vizetelly, H., 12, Waller, Dr. J. E., 119, Weber, F. W., 480, Welton, Dr. O., 776, Whitney, Prof. W. D., 776, 806, Whittaker, J., 85, Wilkinson, J., 115, Wille, Madame E., 20, Woolson, Miss C. F., 150, Wright, Rev. J., 743, Wyss, G. von, 20, Yates, E., 670

Gossip.

- Mr. Im Thurn and the 'Lodge Monthly Magazine,' 19, Parliamentary Papers, 20, 51, 85, 118, 182, 215, 248, 289, 316, 342, 382, 447, 480, 613, 640, 615, 643, 682, 713, 744, 778, 807, 840, Lecture on Turkish Literature at Constantinople by Mr. J. H. Papsoglou, 85, Subscribers to the Mommien Fund, 115, 140, The Société des Humanistes Français, 115, Annual Meeting of the Harlequin Society, 140, Annual Report of the Council of the Girls' Public Day School Company, 181, Annual Meeting of the Newswriters' Benevolent Institution, 182, Free Libraries: Rochester, 247; Colne, Lancashire, 679, Memorial to Prof. Minto, 243, Report of the Directors of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, 289, Holiday Home at the Seaside for Booksellers, 447, 512, 776, 839, General Meeting of the Camden Society, 615, Report of the London Library, 647, Bodleian Library, Acquisitions, 712, Public Instruction in Turkey, 776

SCIENCE.

Reviews.

- Agassiz, Louis, his Life and Work, by Holder, 807, Astronomische Nachrichten, 183, 249, 415, 713, 777, Ball's (Sir R. S.) The Story of the Sun, 113, Ball's (W. W. B.) Essay on Newton's Principia, 80, Belgian Academy, Mémoires, 350, Berlin Geographical Society, Zeitschrift, 544, Berliner Astronomisches Jahrbuch, 281, Bonney's (T. G.) The Story of our Planet, 907, Calvert's (A. F.) The Discovery of Australia, 443, Carrington's (E.) Workers without Wage, 316, Civil Engineering Series: Tidal Rivers, by Wheeler, 643, Complete Angler, The, by Walton and Cotton, edited by Harting, 682, Comptes Rendus, 215, Connaissance des Temps for 1896, 630, Constable's Hand Atlas of India, prepared by Bartholomew, 116, Cope's (Prof.) Fourth Annual Report, 803, Corn's Cosmos, 544, Davies's (R. H.) Machinery for Metalliferous Mines, 218, Debitich-Pearry's (J.) My Arctic Journal, 613, Dupré's (A.) Short Manual of Inorganic Chemistry, 481, Eschell, Books I. to VI., edited by Brent, 215, Franklin's (P. F.) Our Secret Friends and Foes, 807, Furneaux's (W.) The Out-Door World, 340, Filist's (H.) The Protection of Woodlands, translated by J. Nisbet, 281, Galton's (Sir D.) Healthy Hospitals, 680, Gellard's (C.) Statics and Dynamics, 215, Geographical Journal, 281, 350, 514, 617, Geographische Blätter of Bremen, 847, Gray, Ann, Letters of, edited by Jane L. Gray, 413, Gutmann's (O.) Blasphem, 616, Hachette's Historical Atlas, 360, Hake's (H. W.) A Short Manual of Inorganic Chemistry, 481, Halliburton's (W. D.) The Essentials of Chemical Physiology for the Use of Students, 481, Harvard College, Astronomical Observatory of, Report of the Director, 644, Hamell's (A. H.) Narrative of a Busy Life, 150, Haughton's (T.) Physical, Industrial, and Historical Geography of England and Wales, 613, Holder's (C. F.) Louis Agassiz, his Life and Work, 807, Horwille's (E. E.) Qualitative Chemical Analysis in Inorganic and Organic Chemistry, 480, Howell's (P. W. W.) Icelandic Pictures drawn with Pen and Pencil, 513, Hunter's (Sir W.) Atlas of India, 117, Hutchinson's (Rev. H. N.) Creatures of Other Days, 776, Internationales Archiv für Ethnographie, 250, Jenner's (Sir W.) Lectures and Essays on Fevers and Diphtheria, 1849 to 1879, 530, Johnston's (W. & A. K.) Royal Atlas, 280, Kew Committee of the Royal Society, Report, 808, Loney's (S. L.) Plane Trigonometry, 543, Love's (A. B. H.) Treatise on the Mathematical Theory of Elasticity, 643, Lucas's (C. F.) West Africa, 513, Lum's (J.) Inorganic Chemistry for Beginners, 481, Lupton's (A.) Mining, 218, 317, Lydekker's (R.) Handbook to the Marsupialia and Monotremata—Horns and Hoofs, 776, Lynn's (W. T.) Celestial Motions—Remarkable Comets, 281, Manchester Geographical Society, Journal, 281, Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani, 415, 589, 713, Mills's (J.) Chemistry for Students, 480, Mitteilungen aus den Deutschen Schutzgebieten, 544, 541

Motley's (F.) Treatise on the Theory of Functions, 86
 Munro's (J.) The Romance of Electricity, 838
 Natal Observatory, Report of the Superintendent, 590
 Nautical Almanac for 1897, 215
 Nisbet's (J.) British Forest Trees, 280
 Observatory, The, 384
 Oriente, 384
 Paget, late Sir George E., Lectures by, edited by C. E. Paget, 150
 Paris, Tiemann's Rapport annuel sur l'Etat de l'Observatoire de, pour l'Année 1893, 777
 Partridge, The: Natural History, by Macpherson-Shooting, by Stuart-Wortley—Cookery, by Saintsbury, 382
 Petermann's Mittheilungen, 281, 544
 Priestman's (J.) God's Birds, 316
 Roscoe's (Sir H.) Inorganic Chemistry for Beginners, 481
 Royal Natural History, The, edited by Lydekker, Vol. I., 776
 Royal Society's Catalogue of Scientific Papers, 809
 Saville-Kent's (W.) The Great Barrier Reef of Australia, 615
 Scottish Geographical Magazine, 281, 550, 617
 Shipley's (A. E.) Zoology of the Invertebrata, 776
 Siemens, Werner von, Personal Recollections of, translated by Coupland, 161
 Sloane's (O. C.) Standard Electrical Dictionary, 182
 Smith's (W. G.) Man the Primeval Savage, 744
 Taylor's (R. L.) Chemical Problems, with Solutions, 481
 Tebbutt's (Mr.) Report on his Observatory at Windsor, N.S.W., 808
 Thomson's (J. J.) Notes on Recent Researches in Electricity and Magnetism, 183
 Thorpe's (T. B.) Essays in Historical Chemistry, 840
 Todhunter's (I.) History of the Theory of Elasticity and Strength of Materials, edited by Pearson, 543
 Vienna Geographical Society, Mittheilungen, 281
 Washington, Naval Observatory at, Report, 183
 Wald's (L. O.) A Short Course in the Theory of Determinants, 215
 Wheeler's (W. H.) Tidal Rivers, 648
 Whitehead's (J.) The Exploration of Mount Kine Balu, North Borneo, 55
 Wolsingham Observatory, Report, 183
 Woodward's (C. J.) A B C Five-Figure Logarithms for General Use, 215
 Woolhope Naturalists' Club, Transactions, 515

Original Papers.

Astronomical Notes, 183, 215, 249, 281, 414, 543, 590, 713, 777, 808
 Chemical Notes, 449, 514
 Galileo, A Letter of, 649
 Geographical Notes, 183, 281, 350, 544, 617
 Great Auk, The, 281
 Publishing Season, 281, 481
 Royal Observatory, Greenwich, 745
 Safe, 713
 Yagueli in India, 86

Societies.

Archæological Institute—Mr. C. J. Davies on the Heart of King Henry II. of England, 351. Also 216, 617, 777
 Aristotelian—Mr. H. W. Carr on Mr. P. H. Bradley's 'Appearance and Reality,' 55. Mr. A. Houtwood on the Ethical Interpretation of Life and Nature, 152. Mr. H. Fairbrother on Green and his Critics, 249. Mr. B. Bonanquet on the Conception of Soul in Plato and Aristotle, 282. Mr. J. B. Mackenzie on Mr. Bradley's View of the Self, 515. Mr. R. J. Ryle on Epictetus, 618. Also 383, 482, 745 Asiatic—Miss C. A. Foley on the Psychological Basis of Buddhist Ethics in the Sixth Century B.C., 151. Surgeon-Major Waddell on the Secret of Buddha as illustrated by an Ancient Cave Fresco and Tibetan Paintings, 415. Also 808
 Association for the Improvement of Geometrical Teaching—Election of Officers, 118
 Bibliographical—Annual Meeting, 118. Mr. S. J. Aldrich on the Augsburg Printers of the Fifteenth Century, 515. Mr. K. Almack on the Bibliography of 'Eikon Basilike,' 745. Also 250, 415
 British Archæological Association—Mr. A. Oliver on Ecclesiastical Antiquities, 215. Mr. B. B. Barrett on Riding the Stang, and Riding Slummington, 282. Mr. A. Wron on the Great Scale of England, 351. Also 51, 117, 415, 683
 British Ornithologists' Union—Annual Meeting, 650
 British Record Society—Annual Meeting, 613
 Entomological—Annual Meeting, 87. Elections, 216, 317, 383, 449, 514. Also 617, 778
 Folk-lore—Elections, 714. Mr. W. G. Wood on the Classification of Proverbs and Sayings of the Isle of Man, 714
 Geographical—Elections, 86, 151, 215, 282, 350, 481, 544, 517, 683, 808, 841. Anniversary Meeting, 714
 Geological—Elections, 86, 151, 215, 281, 351, 514, 580, 649, 718, 777. Anniversary Meeting, 249. Also 449

Hellenic—Elections, 250. Mr. S. Jones on a Reconstruction of the Chest of Cypselus, 250. Annual Meeting, 808. Also 432, 714
 Historical—Elections, 20, 249, 383, 544, 714, 841. Mr. A. S. Hume on Antonio Perez in Exile, 118. Annual Meeting, 249
 Huguenot—Elections, 57, 383, 650. Mr. H. M. Bower on the Fourteen of Menus, 87. Annual Meeting, 650
 Institution of Civil Engineers—Elections, 54, 184, 317, 419, 683. Annual Meeting, 746. Also 118, 249, 292, 321, 515, 521
 Linnean—Elections, 20, 151, 249, 316, 415, 481, 617, 777, 841. Mr. Laurie on the Morphology of the Peditipid, 183. Mr. G. Brelmer on the Origin of the Filamentous Thallus of Dumontia difformis, 318. Anniversary Meeting, 714. Also 281
 Mathematical—Elections, 87, 216, 351. Also 515, 650, 845
 Meteorological—Annual Meeting, 117. Elections, 282, 415. Mr. E. Mawley's Report on the Phenological Observations for 1893, 282. Mr. R. H. Curtis on some Characteristic Features of Gales and Strong Winds, 505. Also 514, 690
 Microscopical—Annual Meeting, Mr. A. D. Michael on the Growth and Present State of our Knowledge of the Acari, 151. Mr. A. D. Michael on the Uropodine, 514. Also 51, 550, 714
 Numismatic—Elections, 117, 383. Mr. H. Montagu on the Coinage of Edward V., 249. Mr. A. E. Packe on the Coinage as affected by the Administration of Henry II., 383. Also 544, 683
 Philological—Elections, 117. Dictionary Evening, 117. Mr. W. M. Lindsay on the Accented Element in Early Latin Verse, 317. Dr. Murray on the Progress of the 'New English Dictionary,' 514. Anniversary Meeting, 618. Also 746
 Physical—Annual General Meeting, 216. Elections, 282, 544. Also 181, 351, 581, 650, 714, 808
 Royal—Elections, 590. Annual Meeting for the Election of Fellows, 777. Also 117, 151, 183, 215, 249, 316, 350, 383, 544, 649, 714, 745, 808, 840
 Royal Institution—Elections, 184, 317, 449, 618, 746. Annual Meeting, 591
 Society of Antiquaries—Elections, 87, 316, 808. Mr. W. H. St. John Hope on a Statute Merchant Seal for Kingston-upon-Hull, 151. Mr. Payne on the Discovery of the Roman Walls of Rochester, 216. Anniversary Meeting, 649. Mr. Oldfield on his Restoration of the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus, 841. Also 183, 282, 350, 745 Society of Arts—216, 249, 282, 317, 351, 481, 551, 618. Annual Meeting, 841
 Society of Biblical Archæology—Anniversary Meeting, 54. Also 183, 317, 581, 745 Society of Engineers—Award of the Premiums, 216. Also 412
 Statistical—87, 514, 683, 808. Annual General Meeting, 841
 Zoological—Mr. P. O. Parsons on the Myology of the Hystriomorphine and Scleromorphine Rodents, 415. Also 117, 216, 282, 351, 481, 544, 617, 777

Obituaries.
 Baker, Sir S. W., 20. Bonenden, Prof. van, 55. Billroth, Prof. T., 217, 450. Boncompagni, Prince B., 515. Brown-Séquard, Dr., 449. Cameron, Capt. V. L., 414. Frémont, Prof., 184. Hasall, Dr., 482. Hertz, Prof. H. H., 55, 87. Hirsch, Prof., 152. Jablochkoff, M., 482. Marshall, Prof. A. M., 20. Middendorf, T. von, 217. Pengelly, W., 383. Plant, J., 55. Pouchet, M., 449. Romanes, G. J., 683, 713. Ruspini, Prince E., 544

Gossip.
 University College, Gower Street, 21. Award of the Medals and Funds of the Geological Society, 55. Herr L. Hirsch's Journey through Hadramaut, 87. The Durand Mission to Cabul—Mr. Gamble's Report on the Flora of the Interior of Sikkim and the Tibetan Frontier, 450

FINE ARTS.

Reviews.

Academy Notes for 1894, 654
 Art Journal, 1893, 21
 Arthes's (D. J.) Les Tribulations de Nicolas Mender, 88
 Benson's (W. A. S.) Elements of Handicraft and Design, 152
 Bent's (J. T.) Sacred City of the Ethiopians, 87
 Boncompagni Prince B., 515
 Blinn's (E. J.) A Mound of Many Cities, 809
 Blümmers (Prof.) Home Life of the Ancient Greeks, translated by Mrs. A. Zimmer, 88
 Brett's (E. J.) Record of the Origin and Development of Arms and Armour, 384
 British Sea: Pictureque Notes, 384
 Budge's (E. A. W.) The Mummy: Chapters on Egyptian Funerary Archæology, 283
 Bulletin de Correspondance Hellénique, 517

Catalogues: English Coins in the British Museum, Anglo-Saxon Series, Vol. II., by Graeber and Keary, 450; Engraved Works of J. F. Herring, Senior, by Muir, 829
 Cements, Pastes, Glazes, and Gums, compiled by Standage, 122
 Crowther's (J. S.) Architectural History of the Cathedral Church of Manchester, edited by Renaud, 181
 Dronard's (Madame M.) Grandes Voyages, 88
 Farrar's (F. W.) William Holmes Hunt, his Life and Work, 284
 Farrar (F. W.) and others' Our English Ministers, 184
 Haslett's (W.) Conversations of James Northcote, edited by Gosse, 581, 717
 Hunt, William Holmes, his Life and Work, by Farrar, 284
 Illustrated Archæologist, The, edited by Allen, Paris I.-III., 281; Vol. I., 779
 Jones, Inigo, and Wren, by Loftie, 618
 Lethaby's (W. R.) Leadwork, 482
 Lockyer's (J. N.) The Dawn of Astronomy, 515
 Loftie's (W. J.) Inigo Jones and Wren, 618
 Magazine of Art, 1893, 21
 Morelli's (G.) Italian Painters, translated by Foulkes, 773
 Northcote, James, Conversations of, by Haslett, edited by Gosse, 581, 717
 Paul's (J. B.) An Ordinary of Scottish Arms, 284
 Pictures from Punch, Vol. I., 619
 Portfolio, The, 1893, edited by Hamerton, 21
 Prentice's (A. N.) Renaissance Architecture and Ornaments in France, 321
 Rensselaer's (Mrs. S. van) English Cathedrals, 184
 Ruskin's (J.) The Poetry of Architecture, 482
 Studies from the Museums: Wood Carving, edited by Rowe, 152
 Studio, The, Vol. I., 1893, 21
 Vanity Fair Album, Vol. XXV., 1893, 21
 Walker's (J. A.) Theory and Practice of Perspective, Part I., 152
 Year's Art, The, 1894, 88

Original Papers.

Assyrian Antiquities, 384
 Athens, Notes from, 282, 452, 812
 Bishop's Barn, Wells, 717
 British Museum: Drawings at the, 250
 Chester, The North Wall of, 120
 Coptic, Prof. Vinders Petrie at, 120, 153
 Cyprus, Recent Archæological Work in, 749
 Euphrates Valley, Notes from the, 780
 Ghisah Museum, The latest Acquisition of the, 390
 Gray, Thomas, the Post, A Newly Discovered Portrait of, 261, 481
 Haslett and Northcote, 717
 Hook's (Mr.) New Pictures, 418
 Italy, Notes from, 219, 385, 548
 Morgan's (M. de) Excavations at the Pyramid at Dachour, 385
 Mycenaean System of Writing in Crete and the Peloponnese, 812
 New Prints, 20, 284, 811
 Nubia, Notes from, 219, 353, 451, 546
 Palace, From, to Pawnshop, 353, 483, 516
 Persian Inscription, A, 731
 Pictish Symbolism, 28
 Ruby, An Engraved, 24
 "Sabbell" Anulet, 547, 588, 811, 843
 Sales, 20, 219, 283, 285, 353, 385, 418, 462, 483, 516, 547, 588, 621, 655, 685, 717, 715, 749, 781, 814, 844
 Thickness, Mrs. The Portrait of, 153

Exhibitions.

Agnew's (Messrs.) Gallery, 285
 Burlington Fine-Arts Club, 186, 782
 Dowdeswell's (Messrs.) Gallery: Mr. W. L. Wyllie's Century of Drawings, 484
 Dudley Gallery: Mr. H. Quilter's Drawings, &c., 120
 Duntorne's (Mr.) Gallery: Mr. Pannell's Pen Drawings of the "Devils of Notre Dame, Paris," 186
 Fine-Art Society: Miss Kate Greenaway's Water-Colour Drawings—Mr. A. Parsons's Drawings in Black and White—Earl of Dunmore's Water-Colour Drawings, 120; Mr. H. Furniss's Drawings—Mr. Folgeroy's Water-Colour Drawings, 285; Mr. F. Goodall's Figures of "Egypt and Life in the Valley of the Nile," 484; Mrs. Ashington's Drawings, 516; Mr. T. Beadle's Pictures, 621
 French Gallery: Annual Summer Exhibition, 621
 Grafton Galleries, 119, 683
 Graves's (Mr.) Gallery: Mr. D. Adams's Sporting and other Pictures, 120
 Guildhall, Loan Collection of Pictures in the, 451
 Heraldic Exhibition, 748
 Institute of Painters in Water Colours, 332
 Japanese Gallery: Mr. Y. Ellis's Water-Colour Drawings, 120, 749
 McLean's (Mr.) Gallery, 484
 New Gallery: Winter Exhibition, 24, 55, 118, 416
 Summer Exhibition, 619, 810
 Royal Academy: Winter Exhibition, 21, 56, 88, 121, 152, 153, 185, 217, 252, 318; Summer Exhibition, 583, 650, 715, 745, 842
 Salons, The, 553, 684, 747, 779, 811, 841
 Society of Painter-Sculptors, 332
 Society of Painters in Water Colours, 545

FINE ARTS.

Obituaries.

Bellin, E. 120. Blaas, C. von, 410. Buckler, J. C., 91. Carlier, M., 155. Day, C. 91, 155. Forchhammer, Prof. 91. Gill, E., 749. Gray, J. M., 781. Holyoake, W., 121. Jacques, C., 854. Lejeune, E., 517. Lelling, Dr. H. G., 354. Madrazo, Don F. de, 782. Muller, J. L., 254. Marshall, C., 814. Millet, Madame J. F., 187. Owen, Sir P. C., 412. Benoit, E., 621. Rossetti, Lucy, 518. Satchel, Miss S., 92. Singsmyer, E., 621. Stanton, C., 58. Strell, O., 135. Tenchendorf, Prof. E., 514. Waddington, M. D., Wilson, F. R., 554.

Gossip.

Royal Academy: Elections, 56, 90, 718. Mr. Woodward's Proposals for the Remodelling of Trafalgar Square, 56, 91. National Gallery: Acquisitions, 154, 186, 220, 234, 285, 334, 355, 418, 422, 621, 718, 815, 847. Report of the Director, 223. Society of Painters in Water Colours: Elections, 220. British Museum: Acquisitions, 220, 285, 418, 841. Ninth Report of the Egyptian Commission for the Preservation of the Monuments of Arab Art, 220. Sir F. Leighton's New Picture, 'The Spirit of the Summit', 283. Mr. J. E. Taylor's Donations to Public Galleries, 280. Restoration of the Curlew Tower at Barking, 386. South Kensington Museum: Acquisitions, 218. Proposed Foundation of an Institute of Art History, 517. Hymns to Apollo found at Delphi, 517, 548, 548. A Napoleon Memorial, 547. Discovery of a Royal Tomb at Dachau, 548. Appointment of Mr. Foyot as Director of the National Gallery, 589. Mr. Alais Taisiens's 'Spring', 844. Arundel Society, Forty-fifth Report, 845.

MUSIC.

Reviews.

Hayreuther Taschenbuch für 1894, 57. New Quarterly Musical Review, 157. Organ Music, 91. Farry's (C. H. H.) The Art of Music, 254. Pianoforte Music, 24. Prout's (R.) Musical Form, 484. Song Publications, 56.

Original Paper.

Handel's Original Wind Parts to the 'Messiah', 419.

Operas, Concerts, &c.

Argiewicz's (Master A.) Recital, 719. Ashton's (Mr. A.) Concert, 321. Bach Choir, 121, 386, 622. Berlioz's 'Faust' as an Opera, 187. Berner Liedertafel Concert, 718. Bingham's (Mr. D.) Concert, 783. Bristol Orpheus Glee Society, 484. Chaminade's (Mlle.) Concert, 750. Cohn's (Mr. L.) Concert, 783. Covent Garden Opera: Puccini's 'Manon Lescaut', 654; 'Faust', 654, 719, 750; 'Orfeo', 654; 'Cavalleria Rusticana', 654, 719; Verdi's 'Falstaff', 686; 'Pagliacci', 719; 'Les Huguenots', 'Lucia di Lammermoor', 750; 'Rigoletto', 'Mascagni's 'Werther', 'Roméo et Juliette', 782; 'Lohengrin', 'Mascagni's 'La Navarraise', 814. Cowen's (Mr. F. H.) Wagner Concerts, 588, 623. Crystal Palace Concerts, 254, 286, 321, 354, 387, 419, 452, 484, 517, 549. Davies's (Miss F.) Concert, 687. Dawson's (Mr. F.) Recitals, 518, 623. Dolmetich's (Mr. A.) Concert of Antiquarian Music, 155. Drury Lane: 'Maritana', 'The Bohemian Girl', 420; 'Faust', 'Carmen', 452; 'Cavalleria Rusticana', 517; Gounod's 'Philémon et Baucis', Gluck's 'Orpheus', 589; 'Die Walküre', 814; 'Siegfried', 'Tannhäuser', 845. Eibenschütz's (Mlle.) Pianoforte Recital, 322. Elischer's (Madame A.) Concert, 719. Frickenhaus's (Madame) Concert, 518. Fry's (Mr. C.) Recital, 455. Geselschap's (Miss M.) Pianoforte Recital, 750. Gumpert's (Mr. B.) Concerts, 156, 220. Halle's (Sir C.) Manchester Concerts, 57, 155, 221, 355. Handel Festival, 845. Henschel's (Mr.) Popular Wagner Concert, 484. Hofmann's (Mr. J.) Wagner Recitals, 322, 655, 687, 783. Hubermann's (Master) Violin Recital, 783. Klesberg's (Mlle.) Pianoforte Recital, 719. Kuhn's (Mr.) Jubilee Concert, 718. Laistner's (Herr M.) Concert, 622. Leonard's (Miss E.) Concert, 625. London Academy of Music, Concert, 783. London Symphony Concerts, 11, 241, 286, 354. Ludwig's (Mr. J.) Concert, 751. MacCarthy's (Miss M.) Violin Recital, 655. Mumm's (Mr.) Benefit Concert, 389. Neubach's (Herr F.) Pianoforte Recital, 687.

Matthay's (Mr. T.) Pianoforte Recital, 815. Menter's (Madame S.) Pianoforte Recital, 783. Mithras's (Madame A.) Pianoforte Recital, 623, 719. Moberly's (Rev. E. H.) Orchestral Concert, 718. Nois's (Mr. and Mrs. P.) Recital, 485. Noth's (Herr P.) Concerts, 517, 688. Musical Artists Society, 87, 518. Musical Guild: Concerts, 719, 758, 846. Musical Union, 685, 782. Nache's (M. T.) Concerts, 623, 719, 815. Palliser (Miss E.) and Janson's (Miss A.) Concert, 815. Patti (Madame) in Signor E. Patti's 'Cabanilla', 720. Philharmonic Concerts, 355, 357, 548, 589, 718, 782, 845. Popular Concerts, 57, 91, 121, 155, 187, 220, 254, 287, 321, 355, 387. Purno's (M. R.) Recitals, 719, 750. Queen's Hall: 'Pagliacci' and 'Cavalleria Rusticana', 121, 255; Gounod's 'Faust', 321, 846. Richter Concerts, 750, 783, 814, 846. Rial's (M.) Pianoforte Recital, 687. Royal Academy of Music: Concerts, 287, 387, 750; Gounod's 'Philémon et Baucis', Leoncavallo's 'Pagliacci', 655; Commemoration Concert, 685. Royal Choral Society: 'The Golden Legend', 121; Gounod's 'Redemption', 187; Dr. Mackenzie's 'Bethlehem', 517; 'Elijah', 590. Royal College of Music: Concerts, 122, 187, 286, 322, 357, 845. Royal Normal College and Academy of Music for the Blind: Concert, 453. Sapellinkoff's (M.) Pianoforte Recital, 622. Saur's (M. E.) Chamber Concert, 455. Schindrowski's (Miss) and Zagury's (Miss) Concert, 750. Scuderi's (Signor) Concerts, 623, 719. Shinner (Miss E.), Borwick (Mr.), and Fallinger's (Miss) Concert, 815. Sissonetti's (Signor) Concert, 590. Silvinski's (M.) Pianoforte Recital, 750. Somervell's (Mr. A.) Concert, 815. Stock Exchange Orchestral Society: Concerts, 255, 548. Strolling Players' Amateur Orchestral Society: Concert, 622. Townshend's (Miss C.) Pianoforte Recital, 653. Verne (Miss M.) and Barnes's (Miss E.) Recitals, 623, 687. Westminster Orchestral Society: Concerts, 322, 549. Wild's (Miss M.) Pianoforte Recital, 846. Wing's (Mr. W. H.) Concert, 623.

Obituaries.

Alboni, Madame, 846. Arrieta, Señor, 255. Barbieri, Señor, 255. Bülow, Hans von, 221. Cook, A., 255. Parry, H., 453. Patey, Madame, 286. Sax, A., 221. Sivori, E. C., 255. Stewart, Sir R., 420, 452.

Gossip.

'The Messiah' at the Albert Hall—Financial Report of the Norwich Festival, 25. Ninth Annual Conference of the Incorporated Society of Musicians, 57. Annual Report of the Wagner Society (London Branch), 155. Mr. J. R. J. Johnston's 'The Magic Fountain', 187. Gounod's 'Requiem' from 'More et Vita' and 'Rustica's 'Stabat Mater' at the Albert Hall, 321. Concert by the Pupils of Mr. H. Klein—Recapitulation and Presentation to Herr Joachim and Signor Patti—Good Friday Concerts of Sacred Music, 420. Wagner's 'Tristan and Isolde' at the Grande Théâtre de la Monnaie, 453. English Opera at Drury Lane, the Grand, and the Standard, 485. Verdi's 'Falstaff' at the Paris Opéra Comique, 518. Saturday Afternoon Orchestral and Choral Performances at the Queen's Hall, 519. Registration of Qualified Teachers of Music, 590, 623. Opening of the New Royal College of Music, 590. The Cappella Choir, 835. Madame Patti at the Albert Hall, 687. Mr. W. H. Byrre's Benefit Concert—'Jubilee' Number of the Musical Times, 719.

DRAMA.

Reviews.

Alan's Wife, edited by Grein and Archer, 26. Archer's (W.) The Theatrical World for 1893, 485. Björnson's (B.) Pastor Sang, translated by Wilson, 58; A Gauntlet, translated by Edwards, 624. Booth, Edwin, Life and Art of, by Winter, 25. Gondiott, Edmond, Théâtre complet, Vol. III., 847. Lamb's (C.) Plays and Dramatic Essays, 623, 687. Legallière's (Julie) Impressions de Théâtre, Seventh Series, 257. Leslie, Fred, Recollections of, by Vincent, 751. Newbigging's (T.) Old Gamul, 25. Ogilvie's (S.) Hyppatia, 624. Pinero's (A. W.) The Schoolmistress, 387. Salvini, Tommaso, Leaves from the Autobiography of, 751. Specimens of Greek Tragedy, translated by Goldwin Smith, 255. Tudor Library: Narcissus, a Twelfth Night Merriment, 1692, edited by Leo, 783.

Vincent's (W. T.) Recollections of Fred Leslie, 751. Wilde's (O.) Lady Windermere's Fan, 36. Winter's (W.) Life and Art of Edwin Booth, 25.

Original Paper.

Mathews, Charles, as Othello, 322.

Theatres.

Adelphi—Vane's 'The Cotton King', 355; 'The Two Orphans', 655; Harvey's 'Shall We Forgive Her?', 815. Avenue—Tothunter's 'A Comedy of Sighs', 453; Yeats's 'The Land of Heart's Desire', 451; Shaw's 'Arms and the Man', 550; Parker's 'The Man in the Street', 656; Dawson's 'Cherry Hall', 848. Comedy—Buchanan's 'Dick Sheridan', 188; Meilhac and Halévy's 'Frou-Frou', 387, 651; Revival of Jones's 'The Middleman', 815; Barrie's 'The Professor's Love Story', 847. Court—Gaitie's 'The Transgressor', Brookfield and Huxley's 'Under the Clock', 156; Fendall's 'Fashionable Intelligence', 322; Thomas's 'Married', Scott's 'The Cape Mail', 687. Criterion—Burnard's 'The Headless Man', 26; 'Beyond', Pemberton and Wellings's 'The Dancing Master', 188; Lady Greyville's 'An Association Alliance', 455; Cheltenham's 'Charming Mrs. Gwynne', 550; Mrs. Alexander's 'Her Dearest Kin', 590; Mr. L. Irving's 'Time, Hunger, and the Law', McCarthy's 'The Candidate', 720; Duologue by Mr. E. H. Whitmore, 754. Daily's—'The Country Girl', 'A Woman's Word', 29; 'Twelfth Night', 57, 518; 'As You Like It', 589; Signora Duse in 'La Signora dalle Camelie', 624; Sardou and Nijac's 'Divorcina', 656; 'La Locandiera', 'La Cavalleria Rusticana', 687; Hobbes and M.'s 'Journers' and 'Lovers Meeting', 752; Silvestre and Morand's 'Isola', 815; 'La Tosca', 'La Dame aux Camélias', 'Phidre', 847. Drury Lane—'Gentleman Jack', 550. Gaitie—Pryce's 'Miss Rutland', 454; Sardou and Moreau's 'Madame Sans-touche', 847. Garrick—Grundy's 'An Old Jew', 57; Smith's 'A Case for Eviction', 58; Revival of Robertson's 'Caste', 188; Fleming's 'Mrs. Lessingham', 485; Revival of Lord Lytton's 'Money', 587, 816; Compton and Hockley's 'A Family Matter', 848. Globe—Wood's 'In the Eyes of the World', 486. Grand Opéra—Gilbert's 'Hypnotic', 590; Carr's 'Bowling the Wind', 624; Melford and Miller's 'The Jerry Builder', 754. Haymarket—Buchanan's 'The Charlatan', 122; Parker's 'Once upon a Time', 420; Grundy's 'A Bunch of Violets', 650. Lyceum—'Faust', 518. Lyric—Mrs. Greet and Mr. Sedger's 'The Little Squire', 485. Opéra Comique—'Uncle's Ghost', 92; Jerome's 'Sunset', 122; Hurst's 'His Highness', 221; Zola's 'The Heirs of Rabourdin', tr. by A. T. de Mattos, 287; Buchanan and Murray's 'A Society Butterfly', 625. Park Lane—Carr's 'Nerves', Walton's 'A Quarrel', 656. Prince's—'The World', 255, 288; De la Breidèche's 'Jean Mayeux', 655; Power's 'The Texan', 548. Royalty—A Gauntlet, from the Norwegian of Björnson by Edwards, 624; Poulton's, 122; Linton's 'The Legacy', Nelson's 'Judith Shakespeare', Fitzgerald's 'Two Hearts', 188; Jarman's 'The Little Window', 256; Ibsen's 'The Wild Duck', 624. St. James's—Carton's 'Liberty Hall', 288; Jones's 'The Masqueraders', 590. Strand—Durnley's 'Mrs. Dexter', 288; 'Jaunty Jane Shors', 454; Fryer's 'Gentle Ivy', 624; 'The Jerry Builder', 848. Terry's—Law's 'The New Boy', Paul's 'The Gentleman Whip', 156; 'King Kodak', 624. Toole's—Lumley's 'The Best Man', Pinero's 'Hester's Mystery', 322; Lemon's 'Domestic Economy', 624. Trafalgar Square—Morocco Bound, 25; Henry's 'A Silver Homonym', 624. Vaudeville—Law's 'The New Boy', 518.

Obituaries.

Broughton, F. W., 687. Hwaser, E., 188. Schack, Count F. A. von, 550. Vokes, Mus R., 156.

Gossip.

Sheridan's 'The School for Scandal', 156. Mrs. Vere Campbell's 'Misap Merry' at Glasgow, 222. New Theatre at Wakefield, 250. Presentation to Sir Augustus Harris, 356. Presentation to Mr. Oscar Barrett, 388. 'La Frolique' at the Empire, 688. Mr. Pigott's Circular to the Managers of Music-Halls, 751, 784.

MISCELLANEA.

Forbears, 26. Water-stamps, 518, 550.

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 6, 1894.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

ADVENTURES in MASHONALAND. By Two Hospital Nurses.

ROSE BLENNERHASSETT and LUCY SLEEMAN. Third Thousand. Extra crown 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.
SPECTATOR.—"Their book is emphatically a book to be read: not only for its own sake, for the entertainment which it affords, and for its pleasant and unpretending merit, but also because it is one which makes one think more highly of human nature as a whole. To speak well of themselves was evidently the very last thing in the authors' minds, who, indeed, studiously avoid any reference to their feelings; nevertheless, it is a book that should make Englishmen proud of their fellow-countrywomen."

REMINISCENCES of the GREAT MUTINY, 1857-59. Including the Relief, Siege, and Capture of Lucknow, and the Campaigns in Rohilkund and Oude. By WILLIAM FORBES-MITCHELL, late Sergeant 63rd Sutherland Highlanders. Extra crown 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.

TIMES.—"A striking and original contribution to the most thrilling chapter of our modern history."
SPECTATOR.—"One of the very best soldiers' books ever written."
NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"He has been enabled to produce a volume of extraordinary interest, force, and vividness."

WITNESSES to the UNSEEN, and other Essays. By Wilfrid

WARD, Author of 'William George Ward and the Oxford Movement' and 'William George Ward and the Catholic Revival'. 8vo. 10s. 6d.
TIMES.—"A series of brilliant and suggestive essays..... This pregnant and suggestive view of the larger intellectual tendencies of our own and other ages is enforced and illustrated by Mr. Ward with much speculative insight and great literary brilliancy."
SPECTATOR.—"The introductory essay, which is quite new, is not at all unworthy of the best of Mr. Ward's previous work."
MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"The essays are written with force, conviction, and sobriety."

The BOOK of REVELATION. A Course of Sermons. By Rev.

FREDERICK SHAW, M.A., late Vicar of Fen Drayton, St. Ives, Hunts. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d. net.

ESSAYS on QUESTIONS of the DAY, POLITICAL and SOCIAL. By GOLDWIN SMITH, D.C.L. Extra crown 8vo. 9s.

TIMES.—"A warm welcome is due, and will be readily awarded by all who appreciate pregnant reflection and rare felicity of presentation, to Mr. Goldwin Smith's 'Essays on Questions of the Day.'"
DAILY CHRONICLE.—"He is a thoroughly well-informed, incisive, and courageous critic of the new order of ideas."
GLASGOW HERALD.—"At once solid and brilliant, well reasoned, and often witty."

A THEORY of DEVELOPMENT and HEREDITY. By Henry

B. ORR, Ph.D., Professor at the Tulane University of Louisiana. Crown 8vo. 6s. net.
GLASGOW HERALD.—"His book will bear careful perusal because of its suggestive nature."
SCOTSMAN.—"Prof. Orr does not profess to have proved, or worked out in its detail, his new 'Theory of Development and Heredity.' But he has stated it with admirable perspicuity, and the solution which he offers of the problem, 'How are changes brought about in the structure of organisms, and how are these changes transmitted to succeeding generations?' deserves thoughtful examination as offering a key to certain of the deeper secrets of life and growth, both bodily and mental."

RICHARD ESCOTT. By Edward H. Cooper, Author of 'Geoffrey

Hamilton'. Crown 8vo. 6s.
BLACK AND WHITE.—"The author of that exceedingly clever study of men and manners, 'Geoffrey Hamilton,' has given us in 'Richard Escott' a good study of a counsellor of birth and breeding."
GLASGOW HERALD.—"A character drawn with much ability and consistency."

SYLVIE and BRUNO CONCLUDED. By Lewis Carroll. With

Illustrations by Harry Furniss. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

The SATIRES of DRYDEN. Edited, with Memoir, Introduction, and Notes, by J. CHURTON COLLINS. Globe 8vo. 1s. 9d. (Macmillan's English Classics.

The DISTRIBUTION of WEALTH. By John R. Commons,

Professor of Economics and Social Science, Indiana University. Crown 8vo. 7s. net.
SCOTSMAN.—"A carefully reasoned work..... Though a work of close and methodic reasoning, and not to be lightly read, the book is not without many bright and suggestive passages. Several diagrams are aptly used to illustrate the text under various headings."

NATURAL VALUE. By Friedrich von Wieser, Professor in the German University of Prague. Edited, with a Preface and Analysis, by WILLIAM SMART, M.A., LL.D., Lecturer on Political Economy in the University of Glasgow. The Translation by CHRISTIAN A. MALLOCH. 8vo. 10s. net.

TIMES.—"Of the school of Austrian economists which has applied itself to the elaboration and utility of that theory of value known as 'The Final or Marginal Utility Theory,' which the late Prof. Jevons was one of the first to expound in this country, Prof. von Wieser, of Prague, is one of the most distinguished leaders..... His work on 'Natural Value' is the latest and most complete exposition of the whole theory. As such it will be welcomed by all serious economical students in this country."

ELEMENTS of HANDICRAFT and DESIGN. By W. A. S.

BENSON, M.A. Oxon. With Illustrations. Extra crown 8vo. 6s. net.
SCHOOL BOARD CHRONICLE.—"It is a solid, practical work—practical always with an intellectual as well as a merely educational side to it."
GLASGOW HERALD.—"Mr. Benson has the useful habit of showing not only that a piece of work should be done in a certain way, but of explaining why it should be so done. Like Hudibras, 'For every why he has a wherefore'; and the lucid explanations of the 'wherefore' are perhaps the most distinctive features of the book."

DRAWING and DESIGN: a Class Text-Book for Beginners. By

H. R. TAYLOR, Head Master of the Birmingham Municipal School of Art. With Illustrations. Oblong crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.
SCOTSMAN.—"It is an admirable manual of its kind, and ought to be widely put in use in elementary schools of art."

LEAD WORK: Old and Ornamental, and for the most part

English. By W. R. LETHABY. With Illustrations. Extra crown 8vo. 4s. 6d. net.
SCOTSMAN.—"The book is admirably written, and its author's close knowledge of the subject enables him to awake and guide an interest which, it may be hoped, will do something to regenerate a lost art. If artistic lead-working is, however, lost for all time, the book is more valuable on that account, since, so far as we know, it is the only English book on the subject."
GLASGOW HERALD.—"Mr. Lethaby's book will assuredly direct attention to the subject, and all decorators and architects, who are something higher than tradesmen, will find suggestion and stimulus in its pages."

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. price 25s.

STUDIES

OF THE

GREEK POETS.

By JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

New and Enlarged Edition.

With a Chapter on HERONDAS.

Crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

AN INTRODUCTION

TO THE

STUDY OF DANTE.

By JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

Third Edition.

Crown 8vo. illustrated, price 7s. 6d.

OUR LIFE IN THE SWISS HIGHLANDS.

By JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS

And his DAUGHTER MARGARET.

Demy 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

EARLY GREEK PHILOSOPHY.

By JOHN BURNET, M.A.,

Professor of Greek, University of St. Andrews.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d. each.

NATURAL THEOLOGY.

The GIFFORD LECTURES

Delivered before the University of Edinburgh in 1891 and 1893.

By Sir GEORGE G. STOKES, Bart.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. price 25s.

THE REMAINS

OF

ANCIENT ROME.

By J. HENRY MIDDLETON,

Director of the South Kensington Museum.

Illustrated with 102 Wood Engravings and 4 Coloured Plans.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

WHERE TO GO ABROAD.

A Guide to the Watering-Places and Health Resorts of Europe, The Mediterranean, &c., and including a Trip through India.

Edited by A. R. HOPE-MONCRIEFF.

A. & C. BLACK, 80, Soho-square, London, W.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

NEW BOOK BY CANON OVERTON.
Next week, 8vo. 14s.

THE ENGLISH CHURCH IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

By the Rev. JOHN H. OVERTON, D.D.,
Canon of Lincoln, Rector of Epworth, Doncaster, and Rural Dean of the Isle of Axholme.

ESKIMO LIFE. By FRIDTJOF

NANSEN. Author of 'The First Crossing of Greenland.'
Translated by WILLIAM ARCHER. With 16 Plates and 15 Illustrations in the Text. 8vo. 16s.

"The book is a remarkably rich and suggestive repository of Eskimo lore, written in a style that is marked at once with virility and lucidity."—Scotsman.

ST. ANDREWS. By ANDREW

LANG. With 8 Plates and 24 Illustrations in the Text by T. Hodge. 8vo. 15s. net.

"This is a very enjoyable book. Mr. Lang modestly declares it is not a history, only 'a little sketch.' If so, then he has given us something better, infinitely more worthy of reading and study, than any history or historic notions of St.
Andrews. The many and beautiful illustrations (from the original drawings of Mr. Hodge) are worthy of Mr. Lang's most readable and suggestive book."—Glasgow Daily Mail.

AUSTRALIA AS IT IS; or, Facts

and Features, Sketches and Incidents of Australia and Australian Life. With Notices of New Zealand. By a CLERGYMAN. Thirteen Years Resident in the Interior of New South Wales. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

INSPIRATION: Eight Lectures on the Early History and Origin of the Doctrine of Biblical Inspiration. Being the Rampton Lectures for 1904. By the Rev. W. SANDAY, M.A. D.D. LL.D.,

Dean Ireland's Professor of Exegesis. 8vo. 12s.

The LITTLE SISTERS of the POOR. By Mrs. ABEL RAM. Author of 'The Most Beautiful,' 'Immanuel,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

(Next week.)

NEW NOVEL BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN. A GENTLEMAN of FRANCE:

being the Memoirs of GASTON DE BONNE, Sieur de Marzac. By STANLEY J. WEYMAN, Author of 'The House of the Wolf.' 3 vols. crown 8vo. 36s. 6d.

"This is really a great book. The reader is always thinking that the adventures must have reached their climax, but they rise one above another, each like a new summit in a stretch of mountains ascending and extending as the wondering traveller proceeds. It is much more than a clever story of adventure. It is a very fine work of literary art. The style is good, and the characters are real men and women.
De Marzac is a great creation, and the book ought to live."
Scotsman.

NEW NOVEL BY H. RIDER HAGGARD. MONTEZUMA'S DAUGHTER.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD, Author of 'Sbe,' 'Allen
Quatermain,' &c. With 24 Full-Page Illustrations by Maurice Greiffenhagen. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr. Haggard has never produced anything better, either in matter or in manner."—Observer.

The ONE GOOD GUEST: a

Story. By L. E. WALFORD. New and Cheaper Edition.
Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. (Next week.)

"Mrs. Walford has never written a pleasanter novel."
Scotsman.

"A story so full of the best of human nature that it is vastly pleasant to read, and equally grateful to remember."
National Observer.

THE SILVER LIBRARY.

NEW VOLUME.

CARTHAGE and the CARTHA-

GINIANS. By R. BOSWORTH SMITH, M.A., Assistant Master in Harrow School. With Maps, Plans, &c.
Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. (Next week.)

London: LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.
New York: 15, East 16th-street.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

With Portraits, 2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

SECOND EDITION OF THE LIFE AND CORRESPONDENCE OF ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY, LATE DEAN OF WESTMINSTER.

By ROWLAND E. PROTHERO, M.A.,

Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford.

With the Co-operation and Sanction of the Very Rev. G. G. BRADLEY, Dean of Westminster.

Crown 8vo. 9s.

SECOND EDITION OF A MEMOIR OF H.R.H. THE LATE DUKE OF CLARENCE. WRITTEN WITH THE SANCTION OF H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

By JAMES EDMUND VINCENT.

With Portraits and Illustrations by Wm. SIMPSON and others.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 34s.

SECOND EDITION OF The PAMIRS: being a Narrative of a Year's Expedition on Horseback and on Foot through Kashmir, Western Tibet, Chinese Tartary, and Russian Central Asia. By the EARL of DUMFRIES. With Maps and Illustrations taken by the Author on the spot.

With Portraits, crown 8vo. 6s.

SECOND EDITION OF The LETTERS of LADY BURGHERSH (afterwards Countess of WESTMORLAND) from GERMANY and FRANCE during the CAMPAIGN of 1813-14. Edited by her Daughter, Lady ROSE WIGGALL.

Medium 8vo. 15s.

ALONE WITH the HAIRY AINU; or, 3,800 Miles on a Pack- Saddle in Yezo and a Cruise to the Kurile Islands. By A. N. SAVAUGH LANDOR. With Map and numerous Illus- trations by the Author.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Mr. Landor's book is one of the most attractive records of research which has been brought to public notice in the present year."

TIMES.—"Mr. Landor is to be thanked for letting in light on this strange people, and for brushing away many fables circulated about them."

With 184 Plates, folio, 2l. 13s. 6d. net.

PLAYING CARDS, of Various Ages and Countries, selected from the Collection of Lady CHARLOTTE SCHREIBER.

Vol. II. FRENCH and GERMAN.

[Vol. I. ENGLISH and DUTCH, already published.]

Post 8vo. 1s. 6d.

HANDBOOK for NEW ZEALAND. Edited by F. W. PENNE- FATHER, LL.D. An entirely New Work. With numerous Maps and Plans.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

A HISTORY of MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE DURING FIFTY YEARS, from its Foundation to the Present Time, 1808. By A. G. BRADLEY, A. G. CHAMPNEYS, and J. W. BAINES. With numerous Illustrations.

Medium 8vo. 12s.

ST. JOHN'S WILD SPORTS and NATURAL HISTORY of the HIGHLANDS of SCOTLAND. A New and Cheaper Edition, thoroughly Revised. With hitherto unpublished Notes by the Author. Edited, with a Memoir of the Author, by the Rev. M. G. WATKINS. With Portrait of Mr. St. John, and several new Illustrations.

With 1,000 Illustrations, 2 vols. medium 8vo.

FERGUSON'S HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURE IN ALL COUNTRIES.

NEW EDITION, REVISED.

ANCIENT AND MEDIEVAL ARCHITECTURE.

Edited by R. PHENE SPIERS, F.S.A.

[Early in January.]

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

NEW WORK BY MACKENZIE BELL.

Now ready, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

SPRING'S IMMORTALITY, And other Poems.

By MACKENZIE BELL.

Athenæum.—"Has an unquestionable charm of its own."

Academy.—"There are poems in this volume which will bring light and cheer to many a drooping spirit. There are others—notably 'The Taking of the Flag' and 'The Keeping of the Vow'—that will be read with pleasure for the vigour with which they are written. And there are others—more particularly, perhaps, the sonnets—on which readers will dwell with the delight which thoughtful verse, the genuine outcome of true feeling, never fails to give.....Mr. Bell thinks his own thoughts, and expresses them in his own style and language."

Daily News.—"Throughout a model of finished workmanship and of that perfect sanity of the imagination which is the note of all our best work in this department of literature."

Review of Reviews.—"This graceful little volume.....One or two of the poems in the 'Pictures of Travel' section are, owing to the very great success with which the details of natural beauty are treated, really notable; while the religious poems breathe an atmosphere of sincerity and devotion not a little refreshing."

Bookman.—"Verse like Mr. Mackenzie Bell's.....is sufficiently rare, and should be valued. These selections from former volumes and some new poems give one not a little pleasure.....His verse leaves on us the impression that we have been in company with a poet."

Globe.—"Throughout one is struck by the evidence given of a sympathetic personality expressing itself in clear and well-turned strains. Everywhere the workmanship is good, the spirit serene, the standpoint generous. We have been attracted especially by the sonnets on Shakespeare, Browning, and Rossetti."

Black and White.—"Both tuneful and charming."

Publishers' Circular.—"Some of them have the rare quality of remaining in the memory. Contains much that lovers of genuine poetry will cherish."

Western Morning News.—"His descriptive poems are very fine, while his religious and historical efforts are by no means lacking in noble sentiment and poetic power."

"One of the hits of the season,"—Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR in the Weekly Sun.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A BOOK OF STRANGE SINS. Second Edition.

By COULSON KERNAHAN.

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR says in the WEEKLY SUN:—"I do not remember to have read for a long time a study of the seedliness to soul and body—of what I may call the murderousness of purely sensual passion—in which the moral is so finely and, I must use the word, awfully conveyed.....One of the hits of the season. I am not surprised."

Mr. J. ZANWILL in the FALL MALL MAGAZINE:—"The last half dozen pages of 'A Literary Gent' are of unsurpassable strength and originality."

The DAILY CHRONICLE says:—"We know of nothing published during recent years which in lurid impressiveness and relentless veracity of rendering is to be compared with the realization of the fatally dominant alcoholic craving in the study entitled 'A Literary Gent'.....A master of imaginative moral pathology."

The CHRISTIAN WORLD says:—"So vivid are the pictures that people with 'nerves' had better avoid the book. We know of nothing so morbidly realistic since the famous essay of Charles Lamb, and 'Confessions of an Opium-Eater.' 'A Suicide' might have been written by Edgar Allan Poe."

The FALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"If one of the wholesome offices of tragic literature be to purify the soul by terror, Mr. Kernahan has done something towards the purification of the world."

The DAILY CHRONICLE says:—"A writer not only possessing a fine literary gift and a marvellous power of intense emotional realization, but a fresh, strange, and fascinating imaginative outlook."

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS says:—"The whole of the dogmatic theologians must equip themselves for a contest with one who has such a potent individuality when discussing the tremendous questions he grapples in 'A Book of Strange Sins.'"

JOSEPH HOCKING'S WORKS.

Readers who want a story original in style and with a strong human interest; who are seeking for a tale which is told with straightforward strength, and which, while fearlessly outspoken and sincere, is, before all things, high and pure in tone, would do well to try the books of Mr. Joseph Hocking. Mr. Hocking has the rare art of interesting his readers, and of penning vigorous and graphic descriptions. He writes always from the Christian standpoint, and never wavers from his steadfast allegiance to the New Testament; but he is a man who thinks, who keeps abreast of the times, and who looks the questions of the day fully and fearlessly in the face. For young men, and for family reading, his books may be confidently recommended. They are full of life and "go," but their aim and tendency is, first and foremost, high, healthy, and good.

ISHMAEL PENGELLY: an Outcast. With Frontispiece and Vignette by W. S. Stacey. JUST READY, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

"A remarkable novel.....The plot of the story is ingenious, the manner of its telling essentially dramatic, the character drawing excellent and consistent."—Christian World.

The STORY of ANDREW FAIRFAX. With Frontispiece and Vignette by Geo. Hutchinson. SECOND EDITION, now ready, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"Rustic scenes and characters are drawn with free, broad touches, without Mr. Buchanan's artificiality, and, if we may venture to say it, with more realism than in Mr. Hardy's country pictures."—Manchester Examiner.

JABEZ EASTERBROOK: a Religious Novel. With Frontispiece and Vignette. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

"A book that can be read with interest and profit. A clever story, cleverly told."—Record.

ZILLAH: a Romance. With Frontispiece and Vignette. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

"Written with considerable vigour."—Manchester Guardian. ["The interest, as the plot unravels, is thrilling."—Black.

ELRAD the HIC: a Romance of the Sea of Galilee. Fourth

Thousand. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 1s. 6d.

"The book is one of exceptional interest."—Glasgow Herald.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

The FOOL of FATE. By MARY H. TENNYSON, Author of 'Friend

Ferditas,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2s.

"Interesting and exciting reading.....Well written and well constructed."—Stetman.

WHITE POPPIES. By MAY KENDALL, Author of 'Dreams to Sell,'

'From a Garret,' &c. With Full-Page Illustrations by E. Anning Bell. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"A very clever and pleasing novel.....Altogether an extremely clever and attractive book."—Scottish Leader.

The STORY of SYLVIA. By ROWAN HAMILTON, Author of 'Walks and Drives in Cairo.' With Frontispiece by Walter Stacey. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"An unusually lively novel, in which the troubles and cares of life are faithfully portrayed.....It is apparently Mr. Rowan Hamilton's first attempt at fiction, and it ought not to be his last, for we do not get many stories equal in merit to this one."—Bristol Times.

NEW WORK BY HENRY FRITH.—Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

The ROMANCE of NAVIGATION and MARITIME DIS-

COVERY. By HENRY FRITH. (With about One Hundred Illustrations.)

The Daily Telegraph says:—"The sort of book not to give to an English boy if you wish to keep him at home. It is full of stories of old voyages and discoveries.....A 'jolly' little book." "A capital book for boys."—Manchester Examiner.

NEW WORK BY DR. J. W. KIRTON.—Just ready, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

The CHRISTIAN GROWTH: a Book of Encouragement and Counsel. By the late Dr. J. W. KIRTON, LL.D., Author of 'Buy Your Own Churches,' 'True Nobility,' 'Cheerful Homes,' &c. Illustrated.

Dr. Kirton has here given us a book full of sound advice and persuasive argument, explained and enforced by unflinching picturesqueness of illustration.

INDISPENSABLE TO GARDENERS, AMATEURS, OR PROFESSIONALS.

Strongly bound in cloth, 1s.

GLENNY'S ILLUSTRATED GARDEN ALMANAC for 1894.

Containing the following Original Articles:—How to make some useful Garden Appliances—Vegetables: their Culture and Importation—Thomas Laxton, Gardener and Hybridiser—Garden Work throughout the Year—Good Things for Gardeners—Fertilisers in Flowers, Fruits, and Vegetables for 1894, &c.

London: WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN, LIMITED, Salisbury-square, E.C.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND RAILWAY BOOKSTALLS.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE

For JANUARY,

In which are commenced Two New Serial Stories:

A BEGINNER.

By RHODA BROUGHTON.

AN INTERLOPER.

By FRANCES MARY PEARD.

"One can never help enjoying TEMPLE BAR."—Guardian.
"Who does not welcome TEMPLE BAR?"—John Bull.

Monthly price ONE SHILLING.

NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

JUST READY.

The VICAR of LANGTHWAITE.

By LILY WATSON. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

JUST READY.

SPEEDWELL.

By Lady Guendolen RAMSDEN. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

SECOND EDITION.

DIANA TEMPEST.

By Mary Cholmondeley. Author of 'Sir Charles Danvers,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"The brightness of Diana, her good sense, and her loyalty, make her worth a dozen of ordinary heroines. Altogether the novel will be found exceptionally entertaining, and fully meriting the popularity it is likely to obtain."—Graphic.

NOW READY.

BRITOMART.

By Mrs. Herbert Martin. Author of 'Dorrie Lesley,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A truly beautiful story. It is the purpose of this delightful book to demonstrate the power of a pure and valiant woman to make the world better. 'Britomart' will rank among the most noteworthy literary productions of the year."—Daily Telegraph.

BY DR. KENNELLY.

MOLLY and her MAN-O'-WAR.

By DR. ARABELLA KENNELLY. Author of 'Dr. Janet of Harley Street.' In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A narrative of the raciest, freshest humour merging into one of the sweetest of love-stories."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

NOW READY.

A HEROINE in HOMESPUN.

By FREDERIC BRITTON. Author of 'The Crime of Maunell Grange,' &c. In 2 vols. crown 8vo.

"There is much strange and weird superstition in the tale; but apart altogether from its folk-lore it is remarkable and interesting. No better tale of the North has come under our notice for a long time. The heroine is a beautiful character."—Glasgow Herald.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'NEAR NEIGHBOURS.'

The SWING of the PENDULUM.

By FRANCES MARY PEARD. Author of 'The Baroness,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

TEMPE.

By Constance Cotterell.

Author of 'Strange Gods.' In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"In calling attention to Miss Cotterell's latest novel, we need not for a moment hesitate to say that it is one of the cleverest books of the year now fast drawing towards its close. It is a series of psychological studies, displaying the highest sort of analytical subtlety and descriptive power."—Daily Telegraph.

TWO NEW EDITIONS.

FROM MOOR ISLES.

By Jessie Fothergill. Author of 'The First Violin,' &c.

LOVER or FRIEND?

By Rosa M. CARRY. Author of 'Nellie's Memories,' &c.

Each is 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,

New Burlington-street,

Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.
Now ready. Second Edition. 1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved. 3s. 6d. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE and BARONETAGE for 1894. Corrected by the NOBILITY.

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORDY JEAFFERSON.

Now ready. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

A BOOK of RECOLLECTIONS.

By JOHN CORDY JEAFFERSON. Author of 'A Book about Lawyers,' 'A Book about Doctors,' &c.

"The book is readable enough, and full of pleasant gossip about men of letters and other celebrities, great and small, whom Mr. Jeafterson has known."—Times.

"Mr. Jeafterson's volumes are a rich storehouse of anecdotes to which the prudent reader will himself resort without a moment's delay."—Daily Telegraph.

"There are plenty of good stories in Mr. Jeafterson's volumes, which are sure to have a large number of delighted readers."—Globe.

NEW NOVELS.

GOOD DAME FORTUNE.

By Maria A. HOYER. 3 vols.

BROKEN FORTUNES.

By Henry CRESWELL. Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Willy Widow,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Creswell's pages are interwoven in the strongest of tangles by a series of subtle contrivances, the consequences of which never escape the limits of probability. 'Broken Fortunes' is entitled to a place of honour among the latest pictorial works of the year."—Daily Telegraph.

IN an ALPINE VALLEY.

By G. MANVILLE FENN. Author of 'Mahome Nozair,' 'The Master of the Ceremonies,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Fenn knows how to amuse, and he carries his readers along with him to his triumphant finish."—Athenæum.

AT SOCIETY'S EXPENSE.

By ALGERNON GISING. Author of 'A Moorland Idyll,' 'A Village Hampden,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Gising is a clever writer, and his new story is smart, original, and piquant."—Westminster.

SECOND EDITION OF

TO RIGHT the WRONG.

By Edna LYALL. Author of 'Domina,' 'We Two,' &c. 3 vols.

"The writer has been bold enough to make her romantic hero a Parliamentarian, and while in no way unjust to the Royalists, draws most of her good characters from the side which has hitherto supplied the villains. It is this fact which lends a special interest to the story before us, a story which we may say shows extraordinary industry and extraordinary good-sense."—Athenæum.

CHRISTINE.

By Adeline Sergeant. Author of 'Chapel Brook's Daughter,' 'Sir Anthony,' &c. 3 vols.

NEW ADDITION TO HURST & BLACKETT'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The WINNING of MAY.

By the Author of 'Dr. Edith Romney,' 'A Woman of the Helm,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DONOVAN: a Modern Englishman.

WE TWO. | IN the GOLDEN DAYS.

KNIGHT ERRANT. | WON BY WAITING.

A HARDY NONSENSEMAN.

A SELECTION FROM HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME, PRICE 8s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.'

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLE-CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.

MAY. | A NOBLE LIFE.

A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS. | HANNAH.

ABOUT WOMEN. | THE UNKIND WORD.

A LIFE for a LIFE. | A BRAVE LADY.

NOTHING NEW. | STUDIES FROM LIFE.

MISTRESS and MAID. | YOUNG MRS. JARDINE.

THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK.'

NATURE and HUMAN. | THE OLD JUDGE; or, Life in a Colony.

SAVAGE. | TRAITS of AMERICAN HUMOUR.

WISE SAWS and MODERN INSTANCES. | THE AMERICANS at HOME.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

DAVID ELGIBROD. | ALSO FORBES.

ROBERT FALCONER. | SIR GIBBY.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

ADAM GRAEME. | LIFE of IRVING.

LORD of NORLAW. | A ROSE in JUNE.

AGNES. | PHOEBE, JUNIOR.

IT WAS A LOVE and HIS LAMB.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

ARNOLD.—THE CONSTABLE OF ST. NICHOLAS.

By EDWIN LESTER ARNOLD, Author of 'Phra the Phœnician,' &c. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

[Jan. 10.]

OUIDA.—TWO OFFENDERS.

By OUIDA, Author of 'Under Two Flags,' &c. Small 4to. cloth extra, coloured edges, 6s.

[Jan. 10.]

Mrs. HUNGERFORD.—THE RED-HOUSE MYSTERY.

By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' &c. 2 vols. At all Libraries.

[Jan. 10.]

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

RED DIAMONDS.

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, Author of 'Dear Lady Disdain,' &c. 3 vols.

"If Mr. McCarthy had never written another novel, 'Red Diamonds' would of itself have sufficed to gain for him a good reputation among writers of fiction. Even his detractors will wonder at his perfect skill with which he subdues the defective part of the business. 'Red Diamonds' may be safely recommended not only to those who like Mr. McCarthy's pleasant social and political sketches but to all who can appreciate a really strong tale of crime and its detection."—Speaker.

The BURDEN of ISABEL.

By J. MACLAREN COBBAN, Author of 'The Red Sultan,' 3 vols.

"It will merit all the success it will certainly achieve."—Daily Chronicle.

VASHTI and ESTHER: a Story of Society To-day.

By the Writer of 'Belles' Letters,' 2 vols.

"Its bright vivacity, shrewd common sense, and real knowledge of life place it far above the average novel. It is decidedly a book to be read, enjoyed, and talked about."—Speaker.

TO HIS OWN MASTER.

By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols.

"Undoubtedly a readable and entertaining novel. The character of the hero's wife, the remorse of the drunken father and sundry passages in the career of the unfortunate estate, are described with remarkable tenderness and simplicity."—Athenæum.

OUTLAW and LAWMAKER.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL FRANK. 3 vols.

"A novel of high literary quality, remarkable power, and great interest."—Daily Telegraph.

The MAKING of a NOVELIST.

By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of 'Joseph's Coat,' With a Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

"An experiment in autobiography which we find as encouraging, and so provocatively cut short, that we long for further instalments."—Saturday Review.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

The DAYS of HIS VANITY: a

Passage in the Life of a Young Man. By SYDNEY GRUNDY.

"The book is exceedingly interesting."—Westminster Gazette.

The LUCK of GERARD RIDGELEY.

A Tale of the Zulu Border. By BERTRAM MILFORD.

Author of 'The Gun-Runner,' &c.

"A rattling tale of adventure. The wild life of the veldt is brought before us with admirable skill by one who knows his Africa."—Athenæum.

HEATHER and SNOW.

By GEORGE MACDONALD.

"A book which no one, having once taken it up, will lay down."—Speaker.

The WINDSOR PEERAGE.

BARONETAGE and KNIGHTAGE for 1894. Edited by E. WALFORD, M.A., Author of 'The County Families.' Crown 8vo. Windsor cloth, gilt edges, 12s. 6d.

It gives nearly all the information contained in other books, at little more than a third the cost. It contains also the blazon of the arms of all hereditary titles, and full accounts of all collateral branches in remainder to them.

THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE.

One Shilling Monthly. Contents for JANUARY:—The JUDGE'S DAUGHTER. By J. W. SHERRE, C.S.I.—A NEW POOL of BETHSADA. By Right Hon. Sir G. Osborne Morgan, Bart., M.P.—A PHRASE PARADISE. By George H. Powell.—Some NOBLES on ANA-LOGIES and HOMOLOGIES. By W. T. Freeman, F.R.C.S.—A RUN for the ATLANTIC RECORD. By James Milne.—IN FABLELAND. By William Tynbree.—OLD KILNURGH INNS. By Alex. W. Stewart.—"NO SPORTSMAN." By Fox Russell.—Mr. JEAFFERSON'S RECOLLECTIONS. By Alex. H. Japp, LL.D.—ON SOME of the OLD ACTORS. Part I. By Percy Fitzgerald, M.A.—PAGES on PLAYS. By Justin Huntly McCarthy.—THE GODS of PRIMITIVE MAN. By Sylvanus Urban.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 6, 1894.

CONTENTS.

COUNTESS CANNING AND THE MARCHIONESS OF WATERFORD	1
THE BOOK-HUNTER IN PARIS	9
THE STATE PAPERS OF 1649-49	9
OLD DORSET	10
NEW NOVELS (Won to the Conquest; Richard Recott; A Bundle of Life; Ishmael Pengelly; Helios)	11
THE BUCKINGHAMS	12
PATRISTIC LITERATURE	12
HOLIDAY TRAVEL	13
REPRINTS	13
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	14-15
COPYRIGHT AND COPYRIGHTS; THE HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION; THE LATE MR. W. H. SMITH; THE BOOK SALES OF 1893; ENGLISH LITERATURE IN 1893	16-17
LITERARY Gossip	19
SCIENCE—SIR SAMUEL WHITE BAKER; PROF. MILNER MARSHALL; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; Gossip	20-21
FINE ARTS—SERIALS; THE ROYAL ACADEMY; PICTURE SYMBOLISM; AN ENGRAVED RUBY; Gossip	21-24
MUSIC—NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC; Gossip; PERFORMANCE NEXT WEEK	24-25
DRAMA—EDWIN BOOTH; LIBRARY TABLE; THE WEEK'S Gossip	25-26
MISCELLANEA	26

LITERATURE

The Story of Two Noble Lives: being Memorials of Charlotte, Countess Canning, and Louisa, Marchioness of Waterford. By Augustus J. C. Hare. 3 vols. (G. Allen.)

THE story told in the three volumes of correspondence edited by Mr. Hare begins long before the "two noble lives" came into existence. We are taken back to the third quarter of the eighteenth century, and introduced to Anne, Countess of Balcarres, in the act of maintaining discipline in the family of eleven children which she presented to the fifth earl after he had attained the respectable age of sixty. One of the boys had vexed her not too patient soul, and she had him thrown into a pond by the footman. A second immersion having failed to break the boy's spirit, the Countess ordered him to be thrown in once more, when he turned upon her with "comic solemnity" and said, "Woman, wad ye droon your ain son?" upon which she desisted. Two results followed this rigorous school of manners: her children grew up to be "wise, clever, cultivated, and God-fearing men and women"; and Lady Balcarres herself, after attaining the age of ninety-three, died in 1820 in the odour of sanctity, or, as her daughter put it, "The habit of a pleasing piety remained to interest and cheer her.....Never was an aged person so well attended." As her "vivacity still shone out at times" this attention is easily to be understood.

The daughter who described the "pleasing piety" of the rigorous old Countess was Lady Elizabeth Lindsay, married in 1782 to Lord Hardwicke. Two of her sisters are connected with one of the most popular of modern Scotch ballads. Lady Margaret Lindsay was the victim in 'Auld Robin Gray' (though she married "Jamie" after Robin's—Mr. Fordyce's—death), and, according to Mr. Hare, her sister Lady Anne Barnard wrote the poem.

Lady Hardwicke, however, is the Lindsay sister with whom these volumes are especially concerned, for of her daughters Lady Caledon, Lady Mexborough, Lady Somers, and Lady Stuart de Rothesay, the last was mother of the two beautiful women whose lives are devoutly chronicled in these pages. Lady Hardwicke, who lived till 1858 (a hundred and seventy years after her father's birth), is a frequent contributor to the correspondence, and her letters are among the brightest in the book. Her husband was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland from 1801 to 1806, and she gives some amusing sketches of Dublin society at that time, and of their reception at the theatre, where Lord Cornwallis had refused to show himself, "lest the galleries should insult him." "I was a good deal alarmed," she wrote, "to find that from time immemorial the Lady Lieutenant enters before his Excellency. I proposed, therefore, with all becoming humility, that I should be permitted to follow him in; but I presently found that my humility was presumption, and that we were to enter in coronation order." However, though trembling with nervousness, she was received with applause; and then his Excellency entered, "and, with a coolness most provoking to one who had stood shaking, he made his semicircular bow to the audience, "God save the King" playing all the time." Another day she went to "the very pretty cascade at the salmon-leap, where we ate boiled potatoes, drank glasses of milk, and devoured newly caught trout broiled by the good woman of the cottage." Apropos of Charles Abbot (Lord Colchester) being "too little for that great wig" of the Speaker, Lady Hardwicke tells a story of her great-uncle, the President of the Court of Session:

"At the age of eighty he opened his mind to a friend on the prevailing foible of his life, that had been the bane of his happiness. 'But thank God,' said he, 'I have got over it, and as a proof of this I can venture to tell you my unceasing, unavailing regret at being a little man.' I hope this coincidence will not distress Abbot as much as it did the President, who took a most laudable care of the stature of posterity by marrying in succession four wives of six feet high—for the effects of which ride—the Clan Dalrymple."

During the riots of 1803 the Hardwicks had to live at the Castle, instead of the Viceregal Lodge, to avoid the fate of Lord Kilwarden, who was murdered in the streets of Dublin; the Phoenix Lodge was actually threatened. The news of Robert Emmet's arrest reached the Lord Lieutenant at a time when Lord Charles Fitzgerald, brother to Lord Edward, was dining at the Castle:

"I could not help feeling that the conversation must be painful to him, but he seemed to be more of a loyal subject than a tender brother, and he rejoiced most heartily in the event, although the names of Emmet [sic] and Major Sirr were enough to recall bitter recollections."

The consecutive correspondence may be said to begin with Lady Hardwicke's letter of April 24th, 1814, in which she describes a great reception at Carlton House, to meet the exiled King of France and the Duchesse d'Angoulême:—

"A platform covered with red cloth was prepared, that poor Louis might walk upstairs on a flat surface.....The Regent led the Queen, the Duke of York the poor lame Majesty of France, the Princess Elizabeth came next with her Imperial Highness, and the Princess Mary with the Duchesse d'Angoulême, whose mild, placid, yet melancholy countenance rendered the scene doubly interesting, as it almost painfully connected the memory of past sufferings with the happiness and splendour of the present hours..... I wish I could transport you to the splendid scene; there was something chiridraus in it which made it unlike anything I ever saw or felt before, and which you will understand, though none of us are naturally courtiers. A King of France, attended by British Princesses, receiving homage in a London palace, where he was neither a conqueror nor a captive, is, to my imagination, as fine a moment for Britannia as I can conceive.....The occasion can never return again: it has taken centuries to prepare it."

Two years later Lady Hardwicke yields the first place in these memorials to her daughter Elizabeth, who married in 1816 Sir Charles Stuart, the first English ambassador at Paris after "poor Louis's" restoration; but though the daughter now takes the lead in the correspondence, the reader will rejoice to find the lively pen of the mother running on with all its old vivacity for another forty years. Lady Elizabeth, he it said, is every whit as bright and mordant in her sketches of her contemporaries as her mother; indeed, all the ladies of the elder generation were full of wit and spirit, and to hear their quick retorts in a family discussion was, as we happen to know, positively alarming to their younger contemporaries. The account of life at the Paris Embassy is admirably told in the letters of the mother and daughter, with here and there a letter from the Miss Berrys, who certainly did not outshine these correspondents in wit or descriptive powers. That eccentric diplomatist Sir Charles Stuart, whose sudden disappearances, coupled with the insubordination of his own legs, caused a good deal of amusement and some consternation in later years, held the Embassy in the old Hôtel Charost—once Pauline Princess Borghese's—from 1815 to 1824, when Louis XVIII. acted the part of king, and again from 1828 to 1830, with the title of Lord Stuart de Rothesay, under Charles X. When he took up his duties the English were in high favour: our soldiers were described as "doux comme des demoiselles";

"the King shook the Duke of Wellington by the hand and spoke most handsomely to him; the Duchesse d'Angoulême said [in June, 1816], 'You were differently employed this day twelve months! It is to your successful talents that we owe all the happiness of yesterday.'"

The "yesterday" was the wedding of the little Duchesse de Berry, who had just arrived in France. "There was a dismal ceremony on her first entering the French territory," writes Lady Hardwicke, who acted the mother-in-law at the Embassy somewhat frequently, but with great discretion:—

"She stood surrounded by the attendants and nobles of her father's Court, and was by them delivered over to the French appointed to receive her. She was then undressed by the French ladies in an adjoining room, and clad from head to foot in Gallic attire, so that she was made to understand both figuratively and circumstantially that she has left all her friends and all her habits behind her. She is said to be gay and infantine in her ways."

After the wedding there was an assembly at the Tuileries, and

"the two ambassadresses were invited to play at the royal table, but the game was late, and so old-fashioned that no one knew it, and a tottering old courtier was called in to assist. Spirit of Lady Dover! where were ye then?"

The Embassy folk, of course, saw a great deal of the Duchesse de Berry, watched her early efforts in dancing, and went to her receptions. At a ball in 1818 they met the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia. "If you wish for a notion of Constantine," wrote Lady Elizabeth Stuart, rather unjustly, to her mother,

"I enclose him as I have just sketched him hastily, though I have not done justice to his corsets and total absence of nose. He is quite a caricature of Alexander, but the resemblance to our friend the ourang-outang is perhaps still more striking."

Two years after this the Stuarts were in the midst of the tragedy of the Duc de Berry's murder, and afterwards Lady Elizabeth went to the ceremony of "les Révélances":—

"This passing before the poor Duchesse de Berry's chaise longue is the only reception she has in her widow's mourning, and really most affecting it was to see her pale woe-worn young face in her widow's dress in the room hung with dark grey, and her ladies standing behind her, and Mademoiselle held by one of them. Madame de Gontaut, sitting at her right hand, held the little Duc de Bordeaux on her knee, all covered with magnificent lace."

The all-absorbing event in English affairs seems to have been Queen Caroline's proceedings. By a singular oversight Mr. Harle dates a letter announcing the Duke of Kent's and King George III.'s death "Nov., 1818," and it is to be hoped that similar inaccuracies do not mar the historical value of other letters. Lady Hardwicke, as well as her daughter, took a very strong line against the Queen, and was vexed with the Miss Berrys for visiting her at Geneva. "How could they forget England's ways so much," she asks, "and how could they forget that they have neither a particle of respect, esteem, or goodwill towards any one of her good or bad qualities?.....I am mortified for them and for myself; but Miss Berry's book will be all the more amusing hereafter." On June 7th, 1820, she writes:—

"Well, she is come! She has crossed the salt sea, and salt will probably be the tears that will be shed; but I have not yet made up my mind who is to shed them. I have no doubt that, for the moment, she has all the mad excitement of hope and revenge.....It is said that Lord Hutchinson was empowered to offer her 50,000*l.* a year, provided she dropped the name and title of Queen, and never appeared in this country.....London streets are in ecstacy. All the tradespeople are on her side, and really many better-natured people only know her as an injured innocent woman.....Amongst the smaller anecdotes of these times is that of the King and the Duchess of Gloucester flying up to the garrets of Carlton House to see her Majesty pass!"

"Jamais," adds Lady Hardwicke in another letter, referring to the Queen's trial, "jamais femme ne se trouvait à telle fête!" She is to sit, nay, she is now sitting close to the bar. I remember it was a part of the satanic policy of the Revolutionists in Paris to drag Antoinette to the guillotine in an old bed-gown and dirty night-dress; would that, at the present time, it was Caroline Regina herself, and not the nation, that was so dragged."

Of his Majesty, the outraged husband, we do not read very much in those memoirs; but in 1824 Lady Elizabeth Stuart was received at the lodge at Windsor, during "Mr. Wyattville's" repairs of the Castle. The King, she writes,

"was very gracious, and with Sir Charles exceedingly friendly when alone, and in company very chatty.....The King looked much older, and, amongst friends, took no pains to be young, which made him all the happier. He was very infirm on his feet, and could not get off his chair without assistance, which assistance was a good hard tag from Lady —. Lady E. had the charge of the walking-stick, and got a kiss for her trouble; so did I, for my return home, I suppose. The Cottage-Lodge, as it is now called, is hardly fit for a king, except in the dog days for a vagary, but it is very pretty. A mouse, or rat, as I suspect, which drove me out of bed in a hurry, made me think it rather too rural."

A little later on we come across a letter from Lady Hardwicke to the Miss Berrys with the following delicious passage:—

"June 29, 1830. Le Roi est mort, vive le Roi! is well exemplified at this moment. The old King, who was so lately our young King, was dead but a few hours when all his afflicted peers and commons were swearing their allegiance to William IV. The Privy Councillors next swore what Lord Hardwicke calls 'that damnable doctrine'; the new King read a speech to his Privy Council with good emphasis and discretion, and with so much feeling, when he spoke of an affectionate brother, as was both real and suitable, while one natural tear dimmed his spectacles."

But we must regretfully take leave of the delightful grandmother and mother—who, perhaps because their features were homely, managed to monopolize most of the letter-writing powers of the family—and turn to the "two noble lives" themselves, which began in the usual manner at the Paris Embassy in 1817 and 1818. There is much that is charming in Mr. Harle's account—filled in with Lady Waterford's reminiscences—of the childhood of the two lovely daughters of Lord and Lady Stuart de Rothesay at the Hardwicke seats of Wimpole and Tittenhanger, and at Bure Homage near Highcliffe, which last was to be the scene of many architectural follies on the part of their noble but fantastic father. Of Tittenhanger, the beautiful old house near St. Albans, where Henry VIII. and Katherine of Aragon sought refuge during the "sweating sickness" in London, Mr. Harle says—and there is so little of his writing in this book that we are glad to quote him:—

"Few houses have the same intrinsic attraction as the noble old house of Tittenhanger, with its high overhanging roofs, clustered chimneys, and rich mouldings of red brick; with its terraced garden, wide-spreading trees, and high grass-walks above what was the moat of monastic times; with its quaint low hall filled with fine old portraits of Blounts and Freemans, with its winding passages, its haunted chamber, and its glorious carved oak staircase. The young Stuarts adored it, and were always indulged and cherished by their grandmother, who continued to keep her own four daughters in great order and subordination, though they were perfectly devoted to her."

Bure and Highcliffe—the old house—were also delightful places for the children, when the New Forest stretched close to the Solent, and you could drive over a desolate moor, without a single house in sight, till at last you "came to a wild valley, where was one house only, and that Miss Tregonnell's; all was solitary and desolate. And this spot was the actual Bournemouth!"

In 1835 Charlotte Stuart married Charles John, the only son of "Mr." Canning, then a youth of twenty-three, but full of promise. Two years later he became Viscount Canning on his mother's death. In the same year the younger sister Louisa was presented, and at this time she was painted by Hayter, who often used to speak of the astonishing effect when Lady Stuart de Rothesay let down her daughter's hair, and he was "dazzled by a vision of the most supreme loveliness, robed in a rippled vestment of golden hair, reaching far below her knees." It was at the Eglinton Tournament in 1839 that Louisa Stuart met her fate, when among the knights the "wild Lord Waterford" dashed at full gallop into his tent, and followed up the impression by captivating the young girl with his skilful tilting. But he received the worse wound himself. Bystanders said that if the Queen of Beauty might have been an unmarried woman, there was no question that Louisa Stuart would have been acclaimed. In the end, in 1842, after much family debate, which is unnecessarily expounded in a somewhat tedious correspondence, the wild Marquis made his true and sterling qualities felt, and carried off the exquisite lady of his choice. Henceforward we have two lives interthreading, often in a rather perplexing manner, in the story. On the one hand we have the letters of Lady Canning, first when in waiting on the Queen, and afterwards as vice-queen herself in India during the memorable period which included the Mutiny; and on the other we see Lady Waterford devoting herself to good works and the happiness of her husband, who equally devoted himself to her, except when the duty of hunting kept him out till ten o'clock, and dinner was postponed to the hour of midnight. Both lives had their tragedy. Lord Waterford was killed with appalling suddenness by a fall in the hunting-field. Lady Canning died of fever when on the eve of her return home to rest and peace after the anxieties and horrors of the Mutiny. Her husband, who had half-killed himself with work, could not survive her long; in seven months he followed her. Both sisters were, unhappily, childless. Lady Waterford, as every one knows, endured her widowhood in voluntary solitude for over thirty years, during which she delighted all who knew her as much by her sympathy and intellectual charm as by her remarkable artistic talents. She continued at Ford Castle the unwearied well-doing among the poor which she had begun in happier years among her husband's tenantry at Curraghmore, and no dissension came in the North to stir up ingratitude among those she benefited, as it did in the ever "distressful country."

Nearly the whole of the second volume is concerned with the life of the Cannings in India, varied by slighter records of generally uneventful doings in Ireland. The third volume is occupied with the period of Lady Waterford's long and well-employed widowhood. Neither volume, in our opinion, can compare with the first in general interest. The granddaughters did not possess Lady Hardwicke's graphic pen. Even the letters during the Mutiny seem to want something to make them vivid; and scraps from Lady Waterford's diary and a long catalogue of her paintings cannot by any possibility be called interesting. Yet there are so many bits in the correspondence that chain the attention that it is difficult to skip a single chapter. The great soldiers and governors of the Mutiny time cross the pages continually, and always with some little touch or some slight anecdote that is new or forgotten; and every now and then comes a cry of anguish from some despairing outpost which fifty Europeans could save, yet there are not fifty to spare. One after the other the generals come up to Government House—Havelock, Outram, Colin Campbell, and the rest; and about each the Vice-Queen has something to say, a hurried sketch to send to her sister or to Lady Sidney, a characteristic trait to record. The portrait of Outram is not flattering:—

"A dark-looking Jewish-bearded little man, with a slow hesitating manner, very unlike descriptions or rather the idea raised in one's mind by his old Bombay name of the 'Bayard of the East,' and this year's Bombay saying of 'A fox is a fool and a lion a coward by the side of Sir J. Outram.' He never can have done the things Sir C. Napier accuses him of, but he is not the least my idea of a hero."

Colin Campbell quite won Lady Canning's heart:—

"Sir Colin is a charming old man, still full of life and enterprise, and quite able to undergo a good campaign to finish off his long career..... We are great friends and he gets on charmingly with C., and is not the least like Sir C. Napier. Sir Colin's eyes glisten at the telegraph of each ship arriving, and he is charmed to see his friends of Balaclava, the 93rd Highlanders..... As for that dear old man, I shall ever be deeply attached to him."

Much of the record is so exciting that one regrets the more deeply the frequent mixture of the commonplace.

And this brings us to Mr. Hare's work as editor. He has shown faultless taste and discretion, but it must strike every one that he has been too sparing of the pruning knife, that he has admitted a large number of vain repetitions, and that the memorials would have been all the better if they had been half the length. A great deal of the second and third volumes is quite trivial, and, however valuable and interesting as a family record for private reading, it is too ephemeral to possess permanent value for the public audience to which it is addressed. But if the materials might well have been shortened, Mr. Hare's own contributions might have been expanded. Whenever his own reminiscences of Lady Waterford in her later home at Ford Castle come in, they are full of his own charm; some of the very best stories in the book belong to this part; and we wish for more of them. As editor he is singularly sparing of his notes, except in the Indian period. As a rule he confines himself to what may be called Debrett notes, and tells us over and over again who Lady Charlotte Lindsay or Lady Anne Barnard, &c., was. But a number of people cross his pages about whom he says never a word. Who is to know who "Stratford" is in 1840? And in this connexion it seems strange that no letters of Lady Canning to Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, during the time she was sending out stores for the wounded in the Crimean War, are published. There must surely be a series of them among the Stratford papers. And among sins of omission we must positively class Mr. Hare's extraordinary indifference to French accents, and such spellings as "Pasquer," "Rostup-chine," "Crillon's," "Mohuma" (Moham-mera), &c. Charles Canning was never "Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs"; he was Under-Secretary, which is, as Mr. Hare knows, a very different thing. The index is quite inadequate, and an analytical table of contents is much needed. These, however, are spots on the sun. Every one must be grateful for so fascinating a record, diffuse and occasionally disjointed as it is, of so interesting a family. For the average Britisher "who loves a lord" it has the great merit of very seldom introducing him to anybody of lower rank than a baron's daughter; and for those who can appreciate noble and unselfish lives, strenuous in the search for all that is true and beautiful, these memorials will possess a deep and lasting attraction. A very charming feature is the profusion of portraits, and of sketches by Lady Waterford, which, especially in the india-proof stage in the magnificent large-paper edition, are full of beauty and even genius. In all respects 'The Story of Two Noble Lives' is a book to possess and to rejoice over.

The Book-Hunter in Paris: Studies among the Bookstalls and the Quays. By Octave Uzanne. (Stock.)

A TASK of more than ordinary difficulty attends him who seeks to translate into English M. Uzanne's sketches of Parisian bouquinistes. What are the dangers besetting an effort of the class is shown in the translation of the title, which with some ingenuity is converted into a misnomer. 'Physiologie des Quais de Paris' M. Uzanne calls his book. The quays on the left bank of the Seine, like the shops facing them and the streets leading off from them, are the paradise of the book-hunter. With this worthy, though he is a necessary feature of the quays, M. Uzanne only indirectly concerns himself. His chief aim is to paint the owners of the stalls, the bouquinistes, whose rapid extinction was prophesied by Charles Nodier, and whose assumed disappearance was bewailed by Jules Janin. To these men, "Aux Étalagistes riverains du gentil Fleuve de Seine," our author addresses his "Épître dédicatoire"; and his final chapter is occupied with the proceedings at the "Banquet des Bouquinistes," held on November 20th, 1892, under the presidency of M. A. Choppin d'Arnouville, at the famous Café Vefour, the dinner being due to a bequest for the purpose by the late M. Xavier Marmier, of the Academy, and the guests the book-stall keepers of the quays.

Book-hunters in a sense these men are, since they have to chase (at the sale-rooms or elsewhere) the volumes they display; but the sense is not that intended by the title. Two only of M. Uzanne's chapters are devoted to bouquinisme and bouquinistes. The style of M. Uzanne is, moreover, like that of his master Rabelais, charged with neologisms, many of them classical in origin, which have not yet won acceptance in England. Equivalents for these can only be found with difficulty, and an abundant employ of periphrasis is the result. Not seldom the translation is too literal. When M. Uzanne speaks of the days wherein one might find on the quays "des incunables à deux francs, des Vêrard à un écu, et des pièces originales de Molière à une livre six sous," we find the rendering: "Gone are the incunabula at eightpence, the Vêrards at half-a-crown, and the original editions of Molière at one and a penny." The italics are ours. In the main, however, the rendering is as good as was to be hoped in the case of a style so marked, and the manner in which impediments are surmounted is, at least, agile.

The illustrations of the original are in the main preserved, though one misses the engraved frontispiece. The physiognomy of the bookstall keepers of Paris has, of course, but moderate interest for the English reader; still the whole may be perused with amusement and pleasure, and many things (such as what is said about book thieves, the incomplete copy swindle, and the like) are of interest on both sides the Channel. 'The Book-Hunters of London' is promised. This, if it deals with the booksellers of the past, will treat of some quaint personages, and notably of old Sams, who, though he settled in Darlington (where he died a generation ago), was one of the most eccentric of dealers and the most successful of book-copers that England has produced.

A pleasant gossiping preface by Mr. Augustine Birrell awards the preference to M. Uzanne's writing over "the traditional, affected, sham-emotional style of the book-hunter—that style which in the heavy hand of the Rev. Dr. Dibdin becomes so unutterably wearisome and repulsive."

Calendar of State Papers, Domestic Series, of the Reign of Charles I., 1648-1649.
Edited by William Douglas Hamilton.
(Eyre & Spottiswoode.)

THE State Papers relating to the later years of Charles I., when they are contrasted with those which precede and follow them, form but a meagre collection. What is the reason of this? Can it be that in that disturbed time many of the public documents were never filed, but cast aside, and thus perished as soon as they had ceased to have any business value? This has been suggested. There is, however, another theory. It has been alleged that there was much damaging correspondence therein, so that when the restoration had become a certainty, those who had the custody of our national archives destroyed such documents as were calculated to incriminate themselves and their friends. All this is guessing. Of the two we are the more inclined to accept the latter alternative.

Mr. Hamilton has introduced the volume before us by an admirable preface. We wish it had been longer, but in view of certain ill-advised 'Instructions to Editors' which have been issued by authority, he cannot be blamed for having left so much unsaid with which his readers will desire to be acquainted. They should be very grateful for what he has given them. There are two subjects on which his remarks have a peculiar value. Mr. Hamilton has given an estimate of the personal character of Charles I. which, whether the reader agree with it or not, he must admit to have a permanent value unsurpassed by that of any other modern inquirer. Mr. Hamilton has, we may say with but little exaggeration, lived in the times of which he writes. The State Papers which have been so carefully studied by him give side-lights such as no mere student of printed histories can ever hope to become possessed of. The result at which Mr. Hamilton has arrived, after long years of conscientious study, is, on the whole, favourable to the king. He is, it need hardly be said, not among those who see nothing but what was heroic in the prisoner of Carisbrooke and the victim of Whitehall, but he is quite as far removed from those who, interpreting the past by the party watch-words of the present, denounce the king as an enemy of liberty:—

"That Charles was unhappy in his time, his reign, his circumstances, his friends, and even his enemies, there is no gainsaying. He was still more unhappy in that which gave encouragement to them all, the fatal facility for 'statecraft' as his father termed it, but which is designated by historians insincerity. His weakness of character, too, gave another handle to his enemies, so that his best intentions were often misconstrued into perfidy."

This seems to be reasonably just. We may remark, however, that there cannot be a doubt as to the king believing, not merely as a political argument, but as a sincere conviction of his deeply religious nature, that the theories as to the divine right of kings, which he had been instructed in from childhood, were an essential part of the Christian faith. So great has been the change between his times and ours that it is not easy to comprehend how it could be so. There are some things we are compelled by evidence to believe without understanding. This is among the number. He was not alone in accepting these monstrous assumptions. There cannot be a doubt that, however unfit for political or ecclesiastical rule, Archbishop Laud was an honest and sincere man, who would have shrunk from those mean forms of flattery by which some of his contemporaries disgraced themselves, yet he dared to say in one of his sermons that

"the king is God's immediate lieutenant upon earth, and therefore one and the same action is God's by ordinance and the king's by execution, and the power which resides in the king is not an assuming to himself, nor any gift from the people, but God's as well as in over him."

Pernicious nonsense of this kind, not to call it by a stronger term, had, when received without hesitation, a baneful effect. Charles did not know, as we do, that it was practically a new invention. The mediæval theologians had for the most part spoken rationally regarding the kingly office. The storm incident on the Reformation had led to exaggeration in the two opposite camps. Cranmer had exaggerated the powers of the kingly office for the sake of striking an effective blow at the Papal claims; the Court ecclesiastics of France, on the other hand, had maintained the same doctrines because they found them useful in their intellectual struggle with the Protestants. What wonder that a good, weak man should be led into perverse errors by such a chain of reasoning? Insincerity—lying, as plain speakers are apt to call it—is the necessary outcome of a state of mind which pictures the subject as having no rights which the sovereign may not infringe at his arbitrary pleasure.

The sketch which Mr. Hamilton supplies of the navy during those years is particularly useful. It is strange how little most of us know about nautical matters until we come near to our own time. The victory over the Spanish Armada was an event on so large a scale and of such poetic interest that it has never been lost sight of; after that writers have been inclined to skip until they come in contact with Blake. Yet there is much well worthy of attention during this, as it may be called, dark interval.

Is Mr. Hamilton quite right when he speaks of the navy "ever loyal" siding on this occasion with "the democratic party"? Of the loyalty of the navy there may be no question, but it seems to us that when the war broke out they had no idea as to the position into which they were drifting. That they were dissatisfied, as well they might be, with the Stuart management of naval affairs is certain, but we imagine that when the strife began they had no idea that they were about to wage war on the king's person, and still less on the royal authority. The fact that at length part of the fleet revolted, deposed their admiral, and declared for the king shows that the levelling principles which had permeated so many of the land forces had little influence over those on the sea. It gives a somewhat wrong impression when Rainsborough is spoken of as having "had some experience in naval affairs before he joined the army." His father William was a sailor often employed in the public service, and consulted on naval matters. Clarendon calls him "an eminent commander at sea." In 1637 he was sent to capture the pirate stronghold of Salce, a feat which he accomplished, liberating many English slaves. There is no proof, so far as we are aware, that the son was with his father on this occasion, but the presumption is that he was there. At the beginning of the troubles Thomas Rainsborough was employed watching the Irish coast. In June, 1643, he was serving with the rank of vice-admiral on board the Lyon. On this occasion he captured a vessel which had sailed from Ireland "round about Scotland," having two hundred Irish rebels on board, who were bound for Newcastle-upon-Tyne—doubtless volunteers for the Earl of Newcastle's northern army, in which so many Catholics were enrolled that it was commonly spoken of in the news-sheets and pamphlets as the "Papist army." In the latter part of October in the same year Rainsborough was captured in the Humber, but soon regained his liberty. This, however, seems to have brought his nautical career to an end until 1647. During that period many interchanges had taken place between the officers serving on sea and on land. He was a land officer once more, preparing to lay siege to Pontefract Castle, when he was murdered by raiders from that place on October 29th, 1648.

Old Dorset. By H. J. Moule, M.A. (Cassell & Co.)

THIS is a book of considerable charm and, within its modest scope, of excellent workmanship. It is the outcome of a series of lectures to Dorset folk upon the history of their own county, an opportunity which has been laid hold of by Mr. Moule to bring before his audience a succession of graphic sketches of the history of England, with object lessons attractively drawn from the neighbourhood.

The author goes back to the remotest antiquity, and in two early chapters treats of the geology and physical geography of the county, with its three main divisions of rich clay, chalk down, and heather, omitting from this survey the south-western corner of the county, which geologically belongs to Devon. No objection can be taken to this omission so far as these chapters are concerned; but the exception has unconsciously been too far extended into those periods of history which are not much affected by the consideration of subsoils. For instance, when we come to the great earthworks, whether Celtic or Roman, we find barely an allusion to the two great chains of these camps set over against one another near the western boundary of Dorset and the eastern end of Devon, which appear to mark the border fortifications of two considerable powers as plainly as before 1870 the borders of Germany and France were marked by Cologne, Coblenz, and Mayence on the one side, and Metz and Strasbourg on the other. But the author is free to make his own selection, and there is no lack of these camps or earthworks as object lessons in other parts of Dorset.

From geology Mr. Moule proceeds to a short and interesting speculation upon the palæolithic settlers; and thence to an estimate of the civilizations of the Ibers and Celts, the pre-Roman inhabitants; the Roman conquest, occupation, and evacuation; the Saxons; the Danish invasion; the Norman conquest and feudalism, illustrated especially by the reign of John, who was frequently here and made Corfe Castle his state prison; a slight glance at Tudor times and the Armada; a fuller story of the Civil War of the seventeenth century, with its sieges of Corfe and Sherborne Castles; and, finally, the rebellion of Monmouth—who landed at Lyme Regis and received his principal support in Dorset and Somerset—and the Bloody Assize.

The range of subjects is wide, and in a small volume the treatment cannot be exhaustive or systematic. But the materials and documents have been carefully studied and digested, and there goes along with this assimilation so vivid, if rather gossiping, a power of writing that every one of these periods is made to rise again before the reader with the breath of life in its nostrils. If we may make a selection by way of illustration we would take two epochs as examples of very different work excellently done, namely, the Roman occupation of Dorset, and the kingdom of the West Saxons or Gewissas. For the first there is a total absence of authority in historical documents, yet so great is the abundance of local material in the remains of Roman camps, coins, names, houses, &c., and so vivid is the author's constructive imagination, that, with the help of his knowledge of Roman civilization elsewhere, he produces almost as living a picture of this as of the Saxon epoch. Now the latter is a digest of abundant historical material, marking the zenith of Dorset's importance, when kings habitually lived there and were buried at Sherborne, Wimborne, and Wareham; but the picture-making is not allowed to be overburdened by the materials.

Almost all the periods handled are the subject of conflicting theories, but Mr. Moule is no dogmatist; he states them fairly, sometimes expressing an opinion in favour of one, sometimes abstaining. If he has one bias, it is the amiable patriotism of preferring any solution which makes for the glory of Dorset by bringing great events within its ambit. If Dr. Guest, for instance, will suggest that the Mons Badonicus, where King Arthur is reputed to have overthrown the Saxons, was really Badbury Rings, Mr. Moule is not the man to say him nay; though he does not suppress other theories that it was even in Scotland, or that King Arthur never lived at all. And if Camden holds that Beamdune, where the Saxons had their revenge on the Britons, was Bindon Hill at Lulworth, Mr. Moule is on the side of Camden. And this amiable patriotism is quite permissible where carefully guarded from misrepresentation. For his object is to teach history through the medium of Dorset feelings for Dorset.

Every University Extension lecturer, every one who attempts to teach history to a popular audience, might learn valuable lessons from this book. The university lecturer must, of course, be more systematic, but it would be well for most of his students if he would learn from writers like Mr. Moule that touch of "the vision and the faculty divine" which can make living pictures out of the dry bones of past ages.

NEW NOVELS.

Woe to the Conquered. 2 vols. By Alfred Clark. (Sampson Low & Co.)

THIS is a story dealing with a period which has not so far attracted the historical novelist—the revolt of the slaves under Spartacus in 73 B.C. Spartacus is rather a fine subject for romance, as very little is known about him personally, except that he was superior to the generality of his followers, while his extraordinary success over trained Roman soldiers lends itself to the imaginative novelist almost as much as the career of Rienzi or of Masaniello. It cannot be said that Mr. Clark quite rises to his subject. He faithfully records all that is known historically of the servile insurrection, and makes Spartacus appear in a favourable light; but the hero does not stand out with sufficient distinction to add very much to the conception to be gained of him from the too meagre historical notices. Besides, the account of Spartacus is made too subsidiary to the rather commonplace love stories of noble Romans; and the incident of the beautiful slave-girl who turns out to be the long-lost daughter of another noble Roman has a touch of mediocrity about it. Still, although Mr. Clark has not made the most of his opportunity, he has produced a readable book; and, in spite of a few painstaking notes to explain classical allusions, he has avoided the capital sin of appearing to weave articles of the 'Classical Dictionary' into the form of a novel. The most exciting incidents in the book are the rising at Decius Pollio's lonely villa, and Marcia's escape and adventures in the forest.

Richard Escott. By Edward H. Cooper. (Macmillan & Co.)

'RICHARD ESCOTT' is odd and unequal, yet rather clever, whether you take it as a realistic study of a life or an instance of the "wicked man" genus. Sometimes it misses an effect, and now and again hangs fire for some undefinable reason; but there are strong passages, and at times a not inexperienced air, though the skilled touch is never conspicuously present. A rather inartistic prologue and epilogue are intended to explain how the story came to be written, and to give the judgment on it by a village philosopher when it was written. If we mistake not, this is a superfluous addition, and it only produces an appearance of uncertainty and tentativeness. Escott, a well-born rascal, with almost no redeeming qualities, gradually, and for no very assignable reason, wins one into something approaching sympathy. There is a very forlorn atmosphere about him towards the end. Are we wrong in suggesting that the author might have done better had he admitted the reader to more share in the workings of the man's inner nature? Except for the occasional flash that illuminates his mental condition, his illness and self-appointed death are told a little too exclusively from an outside point of view. The weakness and pain and the dreadful spiritual isolation and loneliness in one who had been at least strong in evil doing are well divined and interpreted.

A Bundle of Life. By John Oliver Hobbes. "Pseudonym Library." (Fisher Unwin.)

AFTER a prolonged course of the ordinary, well-intentioned, but mediocre novel, which gives food if not satisfaction to the circulating library public, it is like entering a new world to suddenly come across a book by John Oliver Hobbes. 'A Bundle of Life' is a book that it is almost impossible to criticize—not the least because it is a great book, or one likely to have more than a passing vogue, but from the joy and exhilaration which its wit and its almost flashy brilliancy inspire. There is hardly a page on which at least one epigram does not occur, or some admirably phrased description; the whole very cynical and pessimistic, of course, but somehow all the more amusing for that, perhaps, because so it the better represents the mood of the day. On the first page a phrase like this titillates the attention: "Reformation" (in reference to a reformed man of the world) "had meant in his case, as in that of many, the substitution of many disagreeable virtues for a few atoning sins"; and it is never lulled to indifference again till the very last line of the letter at the end from the lady "who in unguarded moments was witty." It must be confessed that it is rather difficult to see the exact bearing of the prologue on the story proper, but nevertheless it would be a pity not to have it, for in itself it is amusing and certainly gives an account of the parents of one of the characters. The story itself is rather on the lines of Heine's

Ein Jungling liebt ein Mädchen, &c.

All the guests in a country house successively propose to one another in the course of twenty-four hours, and they all seem to accept the wrong people. But surely John Oliver Hobbes is rather unkind to the sex from whom she has borrowed her pseudonym—not one man in the book is anything but a poor creature; and though some of the women are hardly dealt with, at least one and possibly two are charming. This must certainly be placed very high among the books which have given the "Pseudonym Library" its reputation.

Ishmael Pengelly. By the Rev. Joseph Hocking. (Ward & Lock.)

A STOLEN will, the son of the woman from whom it was stolen, and the beautiful daughter of the thief, these are the elements of the story of which any diligent novel-reader can guess the ending. But though the ending is throughout obvious, and the narrative much too expanded—for the characters have a way of soliloquizing and repeating themselves in a superfluous manner—the book is to be recommended for the dramatic effectiveness of some of the scenes. The wild half-mad woman who has been wronged is always picturesque whenever she appears, and the rare self-repression of her son because of the girl whom he loves is admirably done. Moreover, some of the incidental characters of Cornish life add a local interest to a story which, though commonplace in motive, is skilfully elaborated.

Relics: Fragments of a Life. By Frances Macnab. (Heinemann.)

THE author of 'Relics' has not much of a story to tell; but we could have dispensed with all but the bare outline, for not on the story does the merit of the book depend. A couple of rather violent incidents which do occur appear to us strangely out of keeping with the atmosphere of 'Relics.' It is a series of quiet pictures of a small village community, by its charming touches revealing in the maiden lady who is supposed to tell the story a pleasing and gentle personality. When it begins, the glamour of her youth has faded into a serene and beautiful maturity. Her comments on life, its lets and hindrances, and the subtler aspects of its joys and pains, are instinct with thought and graceful feeling and shrewdness also. These leaves seem to be plucked at hazard from real personal experience intertwined with glimpses of other lives that touch one another at various points. There is an impression as of truth to nature untainted by bald realism. Only a writer with a very individual yet very human point of view could have produced it, so fresh and quick and yet carefully wrought is the little volume. The aspects of nature and the people are delightfully sketched, with a kind of old-world reposeful grace doubly precious and rare because of the thousand and one feverish pictures and morbid studies in mental effects that have been and still are rife. There are sundry passages we should like to quote; the likeness, yet unlikeness, between them and certain pages in highly artistic bits of work with a totally different outlook and moral key-note is striking.

The Buccaneers of America. By John Esquemeling. Reprinted from the Edition of 1684, to which is added a Reprint of the Fourth Part by Basil Ringrose (1685). Edited, with an Introduction, by Henry Powell. (Sonnenschein & Co.)

THE 'History of the Buccaneers' by Esquemeling—or rather, as the name appears in the original Dutch edition, by Exquemelin—with the continuation by Ringrose, has been such a popular book both with men and boys that it appears strange an accurate reprint of it has not appeared long before now. Abridgments and paraphrases have been common enough, but the original, with its quaint language and its very curious pictures, has been exceedingly scarce, and the wish for a good reprint has often been expressed. The present book aims at gratifying this wish. It has many good points. It is complete; it gives the pictures from the old English edition; it is well printed, and in a proper binding. On the other hand, it is a cruelly heavy volume, and is as much too large as it is too heavy to hold in the hand with any comfort. Now no one wishes to read about the buccaneers sitting up to his table or desk. It is a story to be read in an easy chair, or, better still, A-swing with good tobacco, in a net between the trees.

an association to carry the reader back to "the pleasant Isle of Aves" and thence to Jamaica, Santa Catalina, and Panama.

But a more deadly grievance is the modernization of the language. It may not seem much, but it breaks the charm. "Has" for hath, "says" for saieth, and so on, may seem a small matter, but the change is often sufficient to turn a quaint ballad-like diction into very bald prose. The pictures, too, though nominally "facsimiles" of the original engravings, are of inferior execution, and in some—as in 'The Cruelty of Lolonois'—can scarcely be understood without reference to the text. It may also be pointed out that they aim only at being reproductions of the old English pictures; but these were reproductions from the Spanish, which, in turn, were reproduced from the original Dutch; and in each case the reproduction is inferior to its original. It is a pity, therefore, that in the present instance the artist, instead of copying pictures which had already undergone two degradations, did not go to the Dutch, and the more so as the portraits have not only been degraded, but altered. Notably is this the case with that of Sir Henry Morgan, which in the original has the hair comparatively short and frizzed, a delicate moustache, and the left hand holding a baton of command; whilst in the Spanish copy, and in the English derived from it, the hair is long and flowing, the moustache is like that of a French poodle, and there is neither hand nor baton.

Besides reforming the turn of the quaint sentences and bringing them into consonance with those of our daily newspapers, the editor's principal work has been the contribution of an introduction of twenty-four pages. In this we think he has missed his chance. He might have given us an interesting and valuable discussion of the status of the buccaneers, and some estimate of the credit due to Exquemelin and Ringrose, both of whom claimed to be, and probably were, participators in many of the actions they describe. Exquemelin, indeed, says that he went out from France in 1666, so that his account of Roche Brasiliano, of Bartholomew Portuguese, or of Lolonois is entirely hearsay, gathered at second or third hand from the mouths of his drunken companions; considered as a contribution to history, the details are quite unworthy of credit. He no doubt shared in many of Morgan's exploits, and was an eye-witness of much that is related. But the question naturally arises as to the identity of Exquemelin the buccaneer and Exquemelin the narrator. There is much that would lead us to suppose the existence of two men, one of whom supplied the facts as far as he knew or remembered them, and the other contributed the moral deductions. Was it a buccaneer, who had himself borne a share in the robbing, ravishing, and murdering, that wrote, "Such as would not confess were tormented after a most cruel and inhuman manner," or such phrases as "they put him to another sort of torment that was worse and more barbarous than the preceding"; "at last these cruel tyrants"; "they committed there infinite number of murders, robberies, and such like insolencies"; "put an end to his life and a period to their cruel and inhuman tortures"; and very many of the same kind? This is a point that an editor might have examined into, possibly enough with some satisfactory result.

But, again, it should be remembered that Exquemelin the buccaneer knew little of Morgan personally, except that he believed—probably with perfect justice—that he cheated his companions out of the larger part of their booty. He did not know, and Mr. Powell does not seem to know, that in every one of his expeditions Morgan was acting under authority from Sir Thomas Modyford, the Governor of Jamaica, and that his achievements were approved of, not only by the Council of Jamaica, but by the Government at home. Notably was this the case with regard to the sacking of Panama, as to which Mr. Powell says:—

"Upon the conclusion of a treaty of peace in 1670 between the two nations [England and Spain] which confirmed England in her possessions in the West Indies, but forbade her subjects to trade to any Spanish port without a licence, a proclamation was issued in pursuance of such arrangement which greatly exasperated the freebooting community, and the direct result of which was the assemblage of the largest fleet ever brought together by the buccaneers, amounting to 37 ships of all sizes, manned by more than 2,000 pirates. They met in December, 1670, at Cape Tiburon.....and Morgan was elected Admiral."

But every single statement in this is erroneous, so far as Morgan and the buccaneers are concerned. Even Exquemelin contradicts it in two particulars, for he says distinctly, not that the buccaneers elected Morgan, but that Morgan summoned the buccaneers, and that "he needed not give himself much trouble to levy men for this or any other enterprise, his name being now so famous through all those islands, that that alone would readily bring him in more men than he could well employ. He undertook, therefore, to equip a new fleet of ships.....With this resolution, he wrote divers letters to all the ancient and expert pirates.....and to the planters and hunters of Hispaniola, giving them to understand his intentions..... Thus all were present at the place assigned and in readiness against the 24th day of October, 1670."

It made no difference to the buccaneers—the pirates, as the Spaniards called them, or the privateers, as they were officially styled—that Morgan was acting under a perfectly valid commission and instructions from the Governor of Jamaica in council, and that the peace with Spain did not come into the question one way or another. The privateers did not know this; Exquemelin did not know it, but it behoved Mr. Powell to know it, and yet we fear that he was as ignorant of it as Exquemelin and his fellows. Morgan's exploits were unquestionably those of a singularly bold and able man; and though quite unscrupulous, he was probably not altogether a monster of cruelty. It is much to be regretted that we have no really trustworthy account of his remarkable career, though much might have been done had the editor taken the trouble to compare the probably exaggerated descriptions of Exquemelin with the as probably softened accounts of the same transactions as given by Modyford or by Morgan himself to the Government. But whether he was, at any period, a buccaneer in the ordinary and accepted sense of the word, is extremely doubtful. He has been classed as such, because Exquemelin so classed him; and Exquemelin did it in ignorance.

Ringrose's narrative stands on much higher ground than Exquemelin's. Of his antecedents nothing seems to be known. He calls himself a gentleman, he seems to have been a man of some education, and he could observe and describe. The book, too, has no mystery about it; it may be accepted as the journal of one who knew and understood what he was writing about. If we find in it nothing so remarkable as the achievements of Morgan, nothing so horrible as the cruelties of Lolonois, it is partly that the author had a better understanding and a less vivid imagination than Exquemelin, though partly also that Morgan was really a more remarkable warrior than either Sawkins or Sharp.

PATRISTIC LITERATURE.

The Blessed Virgin in the Fathers of the First Six Centuries. By Thomas Livius, M.A. With a Preface by his Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster. (Burns & Oates).—This book is interesting as showing the method with which Roman Catholic writers deal with the early history of Christianity. It certainly is not the ordinary method of treating history. The best instance of the difference may be found in the discussion on the Assumption of the Virgin. Father Livius states the case thus: "We have now to deal with what must seem a strange fact, viz., that no direct reference to Our Lady's Assumption is to be found in any certainly authentic patristic writings now extant, earlier than the fifth century." Though the doctrine is thus not mentioned, Father Livius does not give it up as unknown. It was contained, according to him, implicitly in what he calls the Apostolic deposit. Out of this deposit, as out of a conjurer's hat, come all kinds of things which common mortals could not have expected. This belief in an Apostolic deposit handed down secretly in the Church enables Father Livius to discuss the patristic writings with great frankness and candour. There is no effort to force a meaning into them which they have not. The numerous translations are remarkably free from bias, and are, on the whole, accurate and fluent. Father Livius has gathered together an immense mass of information on the subject of which he treats, he shows competent scholarship, and he has arranged his material skilfully. The result is that his book deserves to rank as the best on the history of the doctrine of the Virgin Mary in the first six centuries which the English language possesses.

Index of Noteworthy Words and Phrases found in the Clementine Writings, commonly called the Homilies of Clement. (Macmillan & Co.)—The compiler of this index deserves great praise. He has done the work assigned him with competent knowledge and painstaking accuracy. There are indications in the book that he has studied the Clementines to purpose, and we regret that he has not taken the opportunity to explain the results of his labours more fully. In the preface he has proposed one admirable emendation, and he tells us that he has interpolated one or two other suggestions; but on looking to the passages which he has marked we have found that the emendations recorded have been proposed either entirely or partly by others. There are several misprints in the accents, such as οὐκὸςμος for οὐκὸςμος. It would be a great benefit to patristic scholars if similar indexes were prepared for other early Christian writings.

Selections from Early Writers illustrative of Church History to the Time of Constantine. By Henry Melvil Gwatkin, M.A. (Macmillan & Co.)—This work consists of passages from the early Christian writers in Greek and Latin bearing on the history of the Church. On the opposite page translations are given, some of them borrowed with acknowledgment and some original. "It has been thought best to give a translation for the benefit of such as are but mean scholars, but to leave everything in the way of notes to the teacher." The selection is judicious and calculated to be most useful. The texts are, on the whole, accurately printed, but there are no notes, no various readings, and only one or two emendations recorded, which in the circumstances would have been better omitted. Sufficient care has not always been taken with the editing of the texts. Thus, in extract 57, from a letter of Cyprian's at the top of p. 136, the text printed is different from the text which has been translated. Occasionally also misprints have been allowed to slip in, such as "orator" for ornator on p. 150.

HOLIDAY TRAVEL.

Clear Round! or, Seeds of Story from other Countries. By E. A. Gordon. (Sampson Low & Co.)—Mrs. Gordon, in a series of pleasant letters to "Marjorie and her brothers," written during a trip round the world lasting "three and a half blissful months," describes the experiences by the way of herself and her husband, who, however, prefer to style themselves "planet-pilgrims," repudiating the more vulgar name of "globe-trotters," which applies more fitly to those ordinary individuals who regard this world from a matter-of-fact point of view. If Marjorie and her brothers were able to follow and assimilate the innumerable references made in these letters—surely some must have been added to the original MSS.—their young minds must have undergone a terrible strain, if, indeed, their brains were not hopelessly muddled by such a diffuse course of cyclopedic reading before Mrs. Gordon's return home to "the city of the midday lamp." For instance, we find long quotations, amongst others, from Addison, Akbar (the great Mogul), Sir Edwin Arnold, St.

Augustine, Archbishop Benson, General Booth, Robert Browning, Buddha, John Bunyan, Lord Byron, Confucius, Coleridge, Columbus, Dante, Darwin, Lord Dufferin, Faber, the Emperor Frederick, General Gordon, Goethe, Pope Gregory (the Great), Bishop Haber, Georg Herbert, Herodotus, Homer, Keble, Kingsley, Sir Henry Lawrence, Isaiah, Lecky, Livingstone, Longfellow, Lovelace, George Mac Donald, Marco Polo, Maximus of Tyre, Michael Angelo, Michelot, Max Müller, Napoleon, Newton (not Sir Isaac, but the converted sailor John Newton!), Plato, Pliny, Sir Walter Scott, Shakespeare (without the musical glasses), Bishop Smith of Victoria, Archbishop Tait, Bayard Taylor, Tennyson, Mark Twain, of course Queen Victoria, Wesley, Whittier, Lord Wolseley, Wordsworth, and St. Francis Xavier. Mrs. Gordon brings her journal to a termination by a quotation from Whittier, a long Buddhist prayer, and three lines from Tennyson's "Morte d'Arthur." Fortunately for Marjorie and ourselves, we are spared all contact with ecstasie Buddhism and such like nonsense, the author being a firm follower of Prof. Max Müller. It may be added that all intelligent children, whose instincts will prompt them to judiciously skip the redundant, prosy interpolations, will find a decidedly amusing and interesting account of what Mrs. Gordon observed and noted during her brief pilgrimage through Canada, Japan, and other countries in 1891-92.

Here and There in Italy and Over the Border (Allen & Co.), by Madame Linda Villari, is a collection of bright and pleasant articles reprinted from various periodicals, and quite worthy of the author who wrote on "Tuscan Hills and Venetian Waters." Her descriptions of scenery are excellent, and her never-failing cheerfulness communicates itself to the reader. The best of these papers are that describing Bosco Chiesanuova—a place little visited by the British tourist, and in the spurs of the Alps, some twenty miles or so from Verona—and the account of Val Bregaglia. The description of the old mansion (now an inn) of the family of De Salis at Soglio may be quoted:—

"Built regardless of expense when the family fortunes were at their zenith over two hundred years ago, every detail is in harmony with the general design, and most intelligently carried out. The entrance is guarded by double doors of stout, sculptured oak. A long, vaulted banquetting room furnished with huge, carved presses, baronial chairs and a hooded hearth occupies nearly half the ground floor. A stone staircase arranged in short, arched flights, with branches to garden and side wing, leads past an entrance, or low first floor, to the second story, that after the Venetian style, is the grandest portion of the house. Here a central hall rises to the roof, decorated with stands of armour, weapons, escutcheons and family portraits, while open galleries on two sides lead to attics above. This picturesque interior is lighted by a huge window looking out on the poplars and pines of the garden beneath. A weeping willow, the crest of the clan, is carved on the mantel-shelf, and opposite, between steel clad effigies, hangs a very rare engraving of Kaiser Leopold I, surrounded by emblems of war and peace. The state rooms open from this hall, and our landlady proudly ushers us into a chamber of startling luxury and refinement. Walls covered with rich satin brocade, green and white, in excellent preservation, above a dado of chestnut root; doors with massive frames of the same wood, carved in delicate arabesques; chairs and sofas likewise of green and white satin, and so charming to the eye that it seemed frivolous to regret the absence of modern stuffs. But the bedstead is the glory of the room. It has thick, twisted columns, fit to shield the slumbers of a Doge, a carved head-board of dolphins supporting a knight's helm decked with three plumes, arranged like the Prince of Wales' feathers, and is draped with soft flowered silk of faded red, blue and yellow. The ceiling is decorated with mouldings of green and white stucco, in accordance with the classic and military tastes of the founder of the house. Homer, Aristotle, Alexander of Macedon and Numa Pompilius are enshrined in the four corners, while a larger medallion between the windows represents the periwigged profile of Frederick the Great. Our delightful chamber is flooded with sunshine, commands a fine view of the Bondasca glacier, mountains and forests, and is musical with the murmur of the village fountain. There are other good rooms right and left, wainscotted, stuccoed, and with more or less ancient furniture, but none to compare with this green and white nest."

We cannot quite agree with Madame Villari's view of the changes which have befallen Rome; and it is a mistake in her article on Capri to accept the old story of the debauchery of Tiberius. In his recent work Prof. Bury has rightly rejected the scandalous reports circulated about the emperor's seclusion. Men do not live to eighty who give themselves up to such excesses.

Two Roving Englishwomen in Greece, by Isabel Armstrong (Sampson Low & Co.), is an amusing volume, full of high spirits, and disarms criticism by its frank confessions. It will, no doubt, afford great satisfaction to the two travellers and their personal friends, but it is one of the many books upon Greece by people who feel they have found a new subject, because it is for ever fresh. Miss Armstrong thought Thebes and the monasteries of Meteora a terra incognita, whereas every inch of the country has already been frequently described. Nevertheless, her very vivid description of these monasteries cannot fail to be interesting. It is, however, to be hoped that this raid upon the monks will not stimulate other young Englishwomen to attempt similar pranks. The success of these spirited and clever ladies is no guarantee that other members of the rising sex would come off with the same success.

A Lotus Eater in Capri. By Alan Walters. (Bentley & Son.)—This is a book the reason for which it is difficult to discover. The author says in his preface that little English literature exists on the subject of Capri, but afterwards appends a bibliography, from which it appears that there is quite a sufficient number of works to meet the needs and capacity of the little island, not to mention the fact that Gregorovius has written exhaustively on this theme, which in itself should make other writers disinclined to enter the lists. We venture to think Mr. Alan Walters would have spent his own time better upon translating Gregorovius, and making the German's excellent book accessible to all English readers, than in compiling his own incorrect and inconclusive pages.

REPRINTS.

LIKE Sir Philip Sidney, Burton is one of those writers who are read with most satisfaction in a folio, and the shabby reprint produced by "the trade" early in this century strengthened the prejudice against an octavo Burton; but it can fairly be said that the three volumes in which Messrs. Bell & Sons have issued The Anatomy of Melancholy, edited by the Rev. A. R. Shilleto, and ushered in by a pleasant introduction from the pen of Mr. A. H. Bullen, should go far to dispel the feeling. The volumes, unluckily, are not of equal thickness, but they are well and accurately printed at the Chiswick Press in a clear and pleasant type. We have detected only two literals, both in the third volume, and due probably to the unfortunate illness which, we understand, prevented Mr. Shilleto from correcting the whole of the proofs—"paleat" for palliat in a quotation from Ovid on p. 163, and "secundum" for secundum at p. 329. In the former case the edition of 1676 which is before us reads "pallidus," which would make good sense, and which Burton, quoting from memory, was likely enough to substitute. "Caracallus," in a footnote in vol. iii., seems to be a slip of the editor's. The chief feature of the reprint, besides the welcome gift of a good index, compiled by the editor's brother, is that Mr. Shilleto has endeavoured to verify Burton's references. As far as classical authors are concerned this has been done with signal diligence and success; in fact, nearly every quotation has been run to earth. Much also has been achieved for the citations from the Fathers, especially St. Augustine; but little has been effected for the mediæval authors, excepting Æneas Sylvius and Erasmus. Sometimes it would have been easy to supply the reference; for instance, 'Decamerone,' Giorn IV. Nov. 1, when Burton quotes "Bersoldus e Boccaccio" for the story of Sigismonda and Guiscardo.

While Norman Tances in Salerno reigns.

An interesting article might be written on Burton's lines of study. It is obvious that, like most of his contemporaries, he read little Greek, generally relying on Latin translations. Ovid, Virgil, and Horace were primo favourites with him, and so were Seneca and Cicero, Plautus and Terence, and of the Greeks Lucian. Evidently he preferred Ben Jonson to Shakespeare, as academics did in his day; he knew French (yet it is rather odd that he does not quote Montaigne often), and probably Italian. Of Spanish he was most likely ignorant, as he always quotes the Latin version of 'La Celestina,' which he highly appreciated. Mr. Bullen suggests that some Student of Christ Church might occupy his leisure in ferreting out the editions Burton used—a task worthy of "the most flourishing college of Europe," and not an impossible one by any means. For instance, when he quotes Chalcocondyles and Nicéphorus Gregoras in following sentences, we may pretty safely infer that he had been turning over Wolf's edition of those Byzantine historians. But to return to Mr. Shilleto: he has thrown away his pains by translating Burton's quotations, for nobody ignorant of Latin is likely to get far in 'The Anatomy'; and on one occasion, at least, his modesty led him to paraphrase a passage that is tolerably harmless, but still had as well have been left alone. He would have done better to point out the instances, not infrequent, where Burton, from carelessness probably, has misunderstood his author. Mr. Shilleto is rightly sparing of explanatory notes, and in the few he has supplied we may point out a couple of mistakes. In a note on Burton's mention of Oleanderus, Mr. Shilleto says, "Begime was the name of the village where he was offered his living"; but in reality "Begim" means the church of the Béguines at Diest. A less pardonable error is the note on "Pampeluna, the chief town of Navarre in Spain," which runs, "Navarre only became French through Henri IV.," as if Pampeluna had been ruled by Henri IV. Talking of Spain, we may add that Mr. Shilleto might have pointed out Burton's strange error in saying, "Spaniards permit Moors to live amongst them," although the expulsion of the Moors from the Peninsula was one of the great events of Burton's early manhood. Is it possible that he had commenced his magnum opus before 1609, and forgot to alter the passage subsequently? We have only one remark to add on this excellent reprint. The text is that of the edition of 1651-2; and Mr. Shilleto ingeniously proposes, in the famous description of the poor scholar, for "Parson Chaff" to read "Parson Chuff." "Chaff" in the sense of "chafferer" is unknown to Dr. Murray's dictionary, and probably wrong. It is, however, to be noted that Sponser uses the verb chaffer of simony in 'Mother Hubbard's Tale':—

He chaffed chayres in which Churchmen were set.

That delightful series the "Tudor Translations," which Mr. Henley edits and Mr. Nutt publishes, contains some of the handsomest specimens of book-making that have appeared in recent years. The Golden As of Apuleius, in Adlington's translation, is a volume fit for the picture in books. The title-page does infinite credit to Mr. Constable; and the bold black headlines, and the general sturdiness, if one can use the phrase, of the typography, are admirable. Adlington's translation is an excellent example of Elizabethan English, and some years ago attracted the attention of Mr. Lang, who reprinted the tale of Cupid and Psyche from it. Although his prose is so good, Adlington had little knowledge of Latin, and Mr. Whibley in his clever introduction proves, what Mr. Lang suspected, that Adlington made free use of the French translation.

THE most recent additions to the "Aldine Poets" are The Poetical Works of Samuel Butler (Bell & Sons), edited by Mr. Brimley Johnson, and The Poetical Works of Herrick, edited by Mr. Saintsbury. This is the first time Herrick has appeared, we think, in the Aldine edition. Mr. Saintsbury has given us a good text, a pleasant introduction, and no more notes than were needful. We have not got Mitford's 'Butler' beside us, so we cannot compare it with Mr. Johnson's. Mr. Johnson has evidently taken pains. He has done a good deal for the text, and reprinted Butler's own annotations to 'Hudibras,' besides rewriting the memoir. Instead of reprinting Mitford's selection of Grey's notes, he would have done well to furnish a concise commentary of his own.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

THE late Camden Professor of Ancient History has contributed another volume—his third—to the "Story of the Nations" series. This time he treats of Parthia (Fisher Unwin), the subject of his 'Sixth Oriental Monarchy,' which was published in 1873. Canon Rawlinson generally writes a good, clear, narrative style, and makes his somewhat intricate subjects interesting; but it must be observed that historical research has not stood still in the past twenty years, and a mere abridgment of the 1873 'Monarchy' can hardly be taken as representing the present state of our information concerning the Parthian empire. Mr. Rawlinson gives no references to modern authorities—he does not even mention his own work, of which the present volume is a precipitate—so it is difficult to say what recent books he may have consulted. But to judge from internal evidence he has not made a very careful study of Gutschmid's 'Geschichte Irans,' or even of the article on Persia which that somewhat positive scholar contributed to the last edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.' One is perfectly at liberty to disagree with Gutschmid, but it is quite impossible to ignore him; and a history of Parthia in which his views find no place is distinctly arriéré. All that can be said of Canon Rawlinson's latest work is that it might have been a useful authority twenty years ago, if it had been more carefully revised. Some of the numerous misprints (as "the tract seem," "coarse, not to any [say] brutal") do not say much for Messrs. Unwin's readers. The illustrations consist mainly of coins, which possess very little attraction, we should imagine, to any but the specialists whom Mr. Rawlinson calls "numismatologists," and even these do not rave over the artistic charm of Arsacid coins; which reminds us that we have not discovered in this volume any announcement of the fact that the Parthian kings were known to the ancients—and are still known among scholars—as the "Arsacids."

On looking at Side Lights (Fisher Unwin) we are forced to the conclusion that the late James Runciman must have been a man of singular energy and strength of character to have attained the amount of success he did, considering the comparatively humble circumstances in which he was born. He was an ideal Board School master, uniting the requisite authority to assert himself against recalcitrant parents with sympathetic insight into his pupils' wants. He was also a successful journalist, who contributed largely to daily and weekly papers. So much appears from Mr. Grant Allen's pleasant little memoir, and even from Mr. Stead's creed, in which, as was inevitable, he talks of Berserkers and Vikings (for Mr. Runciman was a Northumbrian who loved the sea), and pours scorn on the dinners of Mayfair and the clubs in Pall Mall (for Mr. Runciman was not an aristocrat). But when Mr. Stead talks of him, as he does on his first page, as possessing "the materials of which an English Zola might have been made," he only prepares disappointment for the reader of these little essays, in which we vainly seek for the power of concentration and the strength of artistic purpose that mark the great French novelist. The papers were all contributed by Mr. Runciman to the Family Herald when he had succeeded Mr. Grant Allen in charge of the "Answers to Correspondents" in that journal, and though brightly written, they show no special originality or felicity of diction. They are, indeed, wonderfully unequal in merit; and while the best, without being anything remarkable, are very good specimens of the journalist's work, some of the others seem to be the veriest hack work, dashed off in the press of the moment. The pleasantest essay in the book appears to us to be the first, on 'Letter- Writers.' It gives a few hints and examples of the best way of writing letters, and talks in an interesting manner about some famous letter-writers, among whom a chief place is, with proper appreciation, given to Horace Walpole. 'Ill-assorted Marriages,' another subject trite enough in itself, is one on which the author writes with considerable freshness and insight into human nature; but even here there are some signs of haste and careless arrangement. But the articles on the 'Hopeless Poor' and on 'Stage-Children' are really valuable in their way, if only because a man who knew what he was talking about is here dealing without sentimentality with subjects on which writers are apt to waste much false sentimentality. When, however, Mr. Runciman is in a hurry, he is terribly commonplace and slipshod. The papers on 'Shrews,' on 'Gamblers,' on 'Vanity of Vanities,' to mention a few, are very poor and forced, and phrases like the following do not deserve to appear in a book: "Handicaps are arranged day by day and week by week, and the luxurious, loud, vulgar crew contrive to pass away the time pleasantly until the spring race meetings begin"; or "on the breezy heath where half a million gazers watched as the sleek Derby winners thundered round"; or "a rather popular writer who first came into notice by dint of naming a book of essays 'Is Life worth Living?'" Occasionally, too, we come across some rather extraordinary judgments, of which the following, perhaps, is the most remarkable:—

"Lord Salisbury is greater than Dean Swift as a political writer; the author of 'John Inglesant' is a finer stylist than any man of the last two centuries; as a writer of prose no man known in the world's history can be compared to Mr. Ruskin; with Messrs. Froude, Gardiner, Lecky, Trevelyan, Bishop Stubbs, and Mr. Freeman we can hold our own against the historian of any date."

With a final word of praise, however, we may leave the book, that all gratitude is due to a writer of so optimistic a tone and such a belief in human nature, which are based, except in literary matters, largely on knowledge and serious thought.

The Way they Lived at Grimpat: Village Idylls (Sampson Low & Co.), eight short stories about life in an English village, show Mrs. Ealer's understanding of some phases of human nature—feminine human nature especially. The idyllic quality emphasized in the title is less apparent. If we find an occasional reminiscence of Miss Wilkins (the magician of humble life in New England) it is only natural, as we have not much ground, so far, for other comparisons. Studies in pelle of our own rustic life have not been too common. To give examples, old and new, we might mention Miss Mitford and Mrs. Woods; but they are unlike each other, and both are unlike 'The Way they Lived at Grimpat.' Mrs. Ealer's work is more like the little

New England books in method, yet it has originality. The touch is subdued and quiet enough, but not so overpoweringly grey, so consciously "pot-bound"—if we may use the expression—as in the lives of Miss Wilkins's women. Most of these little studies are also of women; but they are tolerably cheerful, and have not always a doleful ending. 'Alice' and 'Good for Nothing' are the saddest. All in their way show knowledge of character and a shrewd, discriminating judgment.

A Companion to Dante, from the German of G. A. Scartazzini. By Arthur John Butler. (Macmillan & Co.)—Mr. Butler has before now established a strong claim on the gratitude of English Danteophiles, and he considerably increases it by the publication of the present volume. The book which he here translates is the 'Dante-Handbuch' of 1892, a work so comprehensive in its scope and so ably treated from its own point of view that a reader who has well mastered its contents may almost be said to know as much about Dante, his environment and his writings, as he need reasonably wish for. Mr. Butler opines that his author has in the course of time become somewhat too sceptical, and is too much inclined to say that Dante did not and cannot have done this or that act ascribed to him by earlier biographers, and cannot have meant such or such a thing believed in by commentators. It may well be that in this view Mr. Butler is correct; but, on the other hand, Dr. Scartazzini understands very well what he is talking about, and is never at a loss for a reason, except when he substitutes for a reason a peremptory ipse dixit. He believes, for instance, in a real Beatrice, but will not allow that this was the Beatrice Portinari of Boccaccio and of the endless tribe of his followers; he also totally rejects the statements made by Boccaccio and others representing Dante as a man of lax sexual morality. The Beatrice of the 'Commedia' he regards as decidedly and strictly symbolic; and he proves conclusively to his own satisfaction—relying directly upon a passage, certainly highly relevant, in the third book of the 'De Monarchia'—that she represents Spiritual Authority, leading up to Heaven, while Virgil, who leads up to the Earthly Paradise, stands for Temporal Sovereignty. He does not consider that Dante belonged to a noble family, nor that any one of the letters attributed to him can safely be accepted as genuine, most of them being pronounced clearly spurious; and this is still more manifestly the case with the discourse 'De Aquâ et Terrâ,' which Scartazzini dismisses with some amusing banter. His suggestion that Dante, when he visited during his exile the universities of Bologna and Paris, must have been engaged in teaching there, and not merely attending as a scholar, is valuable; the same employment in teaching is argued to hold good of Ravenna. The treatise 'De Vulgari Eloquentiâ' and the 'Convito' are, according to Scartazzini, probably in the nature of scholastic lectures, and their remaining uncompleted might thus be accounted for. The summary of the 'Commedia' is eloquent; and it would be difficult to say whether in discussing the events of Dante's life or the problems presented by his writings the author's success is the more observable. We rather regret that Mr. Butler has cut down the last two chapters of his original into a single chapter, entitled "Exposition and Dissemination" (of the 'Commedia'). He makes a few notes here and there, always to the purpose, notably one on p. 239, which points out a weakness in a statement of Scartazzini regarding the supposed date of the 'Convito,' as inconsistent with matter of leading importance in the 'Purgatorio.' A few casual errors may here be noted: on p. 34, "son [should be father] of Geri del Bello"; p. 38, "provincial" ought to be Provençal; p. 269, "some famous poets" should be some fame as poets; p. 346, "three notes to [should be from] the Countess of Battifolle."

Others, printers' slips of a rather annoying kind, are to be found on pp. 119, 258, 482, and 483.

ELEVEN short stories from the ready pen of Mrs. Walford—A Question of Penmanship (Griffith, Farran & Co.)—make a sufficiently pleasing volume. There is at times a happy knack about some of them, though the touch of this popular author is not, perhaps, pre-eminently fitted to display the merits of the short story in its most artistic form. The writer who cannot at once, vividly and with a word, place his reader in direct and vital contact with the characters and "environment" of an episode is not the ideal master. In these slight stories it is not of circumlocution we complain, and yet they are not all they might be. It is simply that firmness of grip and dramatic insight and divination strike one by their absence, which is not to say they have not some other qualities.

MESSES. MACMILLAN have sent us Our Village, by Miss Mitford, accompanied by an introduction by Mrs. Thackeray Ritchie, and illustrated by Mr. Hugh Thomson. Mr. Thomson has been always in sympathy with quiet, subtle gaiety, and he has done himself full justice in this volume. Miss Mitford would have looked at these dainty pictures with pleasure, and would have been charmed with the greater part of Mrs. Ritchie's introduction, though it contains some (perfectly just) condemnation of Dr. Mitford, not written for his daughter's eyes. Mrs. Ritchie has lately published her own reminiscences of a generation that was personally in touch with the author of 'Our Village,' and the present sketch is also "written out of the past and when everything is over." It recalls the time when for literary ladies "a copy of verses, a small volume of travels, a few tea-parties, a harp in one corner of the room, and a hat and feathers worn rather on one side, seemed to be all that was wanted to establish a claim to fashion and inspiration." Such were the days of Miss Mitford, and, in spite of severe domestic trials, she received and enjoyed her share of flattery and fame. The first edition of 'Our Village' was in five volumes, which were published in different years, and it is a pity that the method of selection here adopted has not been explained. Mrs. Ritchie has chosen the charming account of the village with which the series originally began, and the sketches headed "Walks in the Country," collected from different volumes, and has arranged them according to the time of year at which they were taken so as to form a kind of diary. The book has no table of contents, and the arrangement of headlines further conceals a plan which, though excluding some favourite papers, offers the reader a complete group of those which treat of the subjects nearest to Miss Mitford's heart.

LADY BURTON has now included in the "Memorial Edition" of her husband's works A Mission to Gelele, King of Dahome, by Capt. Sir Richard F. Burton, K.C.M.G., 2 vols. (Tylston & Edwards), and it is to be hoped that the new dress may tempt fresh readers to the perusal of this curious and interesting account of a singular people and their barbarous customs. The book is well worth re-reading by those who remember its first appearance in 1864; and for those who do not, it provides much novel entertainment, mingled with that strange jumble of miscellaneous learning which Burton loved to parade. Of course it is full of his eccentricities of style; but the reader will overlook the oddity for the sake of the vivid picture of unclothed men and manners, and he will not be needlessly offended by a display of the "anthropological" notes which became more of a foible in Burton's old age. Even in 1864, however, he waged war against whatever was "nice" and "proper." It is a pity that the revisers of this handsome edition did not bring the information up to our present state of knowledge—for even Capt. Burton did not know everything thirty years ago; and surely the obvious duty of the editor was to supply an index. An exact reprint is not all that is wanted; but it is very well got up, and ought to be widely read.

A BELGIAN professor, M. Léo Errera, publishes Les Juifs Russes through M. Muquardt, of Brussels, and through Messrs. Williams & Norgate in London. The book is on the lines of Mr. Harold Frederic's terrible exposure of the Russian persecution. It has by way of preface a most courageous letter from Prof. Mommsen, which ends: "Fanaticism is incorrigible. There is nothing left for us except to hope that.....a monarch who is the arbiter of Europe will not always be subject to the blindness of a re- arisen Torquemada." This title for the President of the Holy Synod of the Russian Empire is not undeserved.

SIR BERNARD BURKE's Dictionary of the Peerage and Baronetage (Harrison & Sons) now appears under other superintendence than that of the lamented author, and advantage might be taken of the change to clear away a good deal of the mythical genealogy which Sir Bernard was too kind-hearted to omit, although he made sundry reforms in that direction. The bulk of the book would be diminished, and the authority of a standard work would be enhanced.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Bain's (Rev. J. A. K.) For Heart and Life, Twenty Sermons, cr. 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Brown's (J. W.) Some Recent Contributions to the Unitarian Pulpit, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Fairbairn's (A. M.) Religion in History and in Modern Life, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hulse's (J.) Beauty of the Lord, and other Sermons, 5/6 cl.
Lumby's (Rev. J. R.) Epistles of St. Peter, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl. (Knapster's Bible)
Moine's (Rev. C.) The Good Cheer of Jesus Christ, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl. (Preachers of the Age)
Ottley's (H. B.) Christ and Modern Life, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Overton's (J. H.) The English Church in the Nineteenth Century 1843-1893, 8vo. 14/6 cl.
Tertuliani De Prescriptione Hereticorum ad Martyras, edited, with Introduction and Notes, by T. H. Bindley, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.

Law.

- Bull's (A. R.) and Greig's (J. W.) The Trusts Act, 1893, cr. 8vo. 4/6 net.

Fine Art.

- Lamb's (C.) Specimens of English Dramatic Poets, edited by I. Gollancz, 3 vols. 10/6 net; Extra Illustrated Edition, 40/ net.
Sturm's (G.) Animals in Ornament, Part 1, folio, 4/6 swd.

Poetry.

- Mac Donald's (M.) Poems, imp. 16mo. 6/ net.
Scott's (Sir W.) Lyrics and Ballads, with Introduction by A. Lang, cr. 8vo. 5/ net; large paper, 8vo. 10/6 net.
Steinbock's (Count S. E.) The Shadow of Death, 2/6 post.
Thom's (J.) The Pleasures of Home, and other Poems, 8vo. 6/ net.
Well's (H. T.) Bruce's Heart, and other Poems, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Wood's (T. W.) Collected Poems, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net.

History and Biography.

- Chapman (G.) A Narrative of a Devoted Life, by R. S., 4/6 Conway's (W. D.) Centenary History of the South Place Place Society, cr. 8vo. 5/6 half parchment.
Conry (Marie Charlotte Anne de), A Century Monograph, by M. Jefferson, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Garner's (H. M.) History of the English Landed Interest, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Hewison's (J. K.) The Isle of Bute in the Olden Time, Vol. 1, 8vo. 15/6 cl.
Ogle's (A.) The Marquis D'Argenson, a Study in Criticism, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Reeves (Lt. Rev. Wm.), Lord Bishop of Down, Connor, &c., by Lady Ferguson, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Sutherland's (A. and G.) History of Australia and New Zealand, 1600 to 1890, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.

- Hughes (W.) and Williams's (J. F.) Compendium of Modern Geography, cr. 8vo. 10/6 half-morocco.

Philology.

- St. John's (R. F. St. A.) A Burmese Reader, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Sonnenschein's (A.) German through English, cr. 8vo. 3/6

Science.

- Fromard's (J. D.) The Nickel Ores of Sudbury (Canada), 12mo. 3/ net.
Geipel (W.) and Kilgour's (M. H.) Pocket-Book of Electrical Engineering Formulae, 2mo. 7/6 net.
Heaviside's (O.) Electromagnetic Theory, Vol. 1, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Kneipp's (A.) Thus Shalt Thou Live, Hints and Advice for the Healthy and the Sick, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Martin's (C.) The After-Treatment of Cases of Abdominal Section, 8vo. 2/ net.
Thornton's (J.) Human Physiology, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Vickerman's (C.) Woolen Spinning, a Text-Book for Students, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

General Literature.

- Baudelaire (C.) Some Translations from, by H. C., 3/6 post.
Burrow (J. C.) and Thomas's (W.) Moist Mines and Mines, or Underground Scenes by Flash Light, 4to. 21/ cl.

Cuthbertson's (Rev. J.) Hawthornvale, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
 Davies's (D.) Talks with Men, Women, and Children, 8th Series, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
 Dickinson's (J. W.) Yorkshire Life and Character, 8vo. 7/6
 Douglas's (L. M.) Manual of the Port Trade, cr. 8vo. 5/6 cl.
 Headon's (Miss) Domestic Kindergarten, or Household Object Lessons, cr. 4to. 3/6 net.
 Headon's (M. E.) Housework and Domestic Economy, cr. 4to. 5/6 net.
 Ireland as it is and as it would be under Home Rule, 5/6 cl.
 Lillie's (A.) Modern Mystics and Modern Magic, cr. 8vo. 6/6
 Mahier's (H. W.) Under the Trees and Kneeberr, 3/6 net.
 Malory's (Sir T.) Birth, Life, and Acts of King Arthur, Introduction by Prof. Rhys, 2 vols. 4to. 35/ net.
 Mason's (J.) Principles of Chess in Theory and Practice, 2/6
 Mellor's (C.) The Death Penalty, a Modern Story, cr. 8vo. 2/6
 Oliphant's (Mrs.) Lady William, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
 Ram's (Mrs. A.) The Little Sisters of the Poor, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
 Sadler's (Mrs. J.) The Hermit of the Rock, a Tale of Cashel, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Sergeant's (C.) A Threepenny Mystery, a Tale of Monte Carlo, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Slater's (K. T.) The Woe of Oxyth, a Story of the Eastern Counties in Saxo Times, 3/6 cl.
 Strange's (Major-General T. B.) Gunner Jingo's Jubilee, 10-6 Thousand and One Quarters of an Hour (Tartarian Tales), edited by Smithers. Large-Paper Edition, 21/ net, pict.
 Walford's (L. B.) The One Good Guest, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Law.

Annuaire de Législation étrangère, 18fr.
Annuaire de Législation française, 3fr.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Cybulski (S.) Tabula quibus Antiquitates Græcorum et Romanorum Illustrantur, Series 1, Tab. 8, 4m.

Poetry.

Nicopain (J.) Mes Parades, 3fr. 10.

History and Biography.

Pölitische Correspondenz Friedrich's des Grossen, Vol. 50, 12m.

Bibliography.

Bibliotheca Döllingeriana, Katalog der Bibliothek J. J. J. v. Döllingers, 10m.
 Rocchi (A.) De Censibus Cryptoferratensis ejusque Bibliothecæ, 10fr.

Philology.

Gautier (L.) Les Épopées françaises, Vol. 2, 30fr.
 Lederer (Ph.) Heterische u. chaldäische Abbréviationen gesammelt u. erklärt, 1m.

Science.

Willkomm (M.) Prodromus Floræ Hispaniæ, Supplementum (1862-1893), 20m.
 Zittel (K. A.) Handbuch der Palæontologie, Div. I, Part 16, 7m. 50.

General Literature.

Almanach cycliste pour 1894, 3fr.

COPYRIGHT AND COPYRIGHT.

Grand Hotel, Athens, Dec. 19, 1893.

Would you kindly allow me to bring the following facts to your notice? I published this year in England a novel called "Dodo," but, as it was not published simultaneously in America, I lost copyright there. A few months later Messrs. Appleton & Co., of New York, offered me terms for its publication in America, which I accepted; and after this arrangement had been concluded I heard from a Chicago publisher, O. H. Sergel, who also offered to publish it. Naturally I refused his offer.

Shortly after the book had been published by Messrs. Appleton I heard from them that an edition by Sergel had also appeared, of which I now have a copy. I see on the back of the title-page the words "Copyright, 1893, by Charles H. Sergel & Co., Chicago." The book was not published simultaneously with its appearance in England, and therefore cannot be copyright. I learn, however, that if new matter is introduced copyright can be obtained, so I read the book and find that it contains about half a dozen misprints, and the substitution of the word "Keewahn" for Hatma. I do not know what "Keewahn" may be; but I should much like to learn if its introduction, coupled with a few misprints and the omission of accents in French words, is sufficient grounds for calling this edition copyright.

E. F. BENSEN.

THE HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.

It was scarcely to be expected that the special interest which attached to the first volume of the Portland papers could extend to what is to all intents a supplementary report on that portion of the collection which is not immediately concerned with the career of the Bentinck family. Moreover, although a first instalment of the state papers connected with the ministry of Robert Harley appears in this Calendar, by far the most important part of the collection yet remains to be dealt with. At the same time it must be remembered that, as in so many other cases, the muniment room at Welbeck Abbey was richly furnished with manuscripts of local and historical interest long before the advent of the house of Bentinck at the close of the seventeenth century, and Mr. Maxwell Lyte has doubtless been well advised in directing the immediate publication of this part of the Portland collection, which is chiefly composed of seventeenth century documents of a very miscellaneous description, most ably arranged and edited by Mr. Richard Ward.

Amongst these are included some papers relating to the English navy which possess a special value as a record of the varied service and experiences of a typical English sailor, Capt. Wm. Penn, which could be matched with difficulty at such an early date, and which should prove invaluable material to Prof. Laughton for the forthcoming biography of this naval worthy in the 'Dictionary of National Biography.' Amongst other official correspondence in this Calendar there are a few diplomatic papers of some interest, including certain royal letters. Some characteristic letters of James VI. of Scotland are printed here, though they are not of so pronounced a type as the specimens of begging letters lately edited by Mr. H. E. Malden for the Royal Historical Society. Far more interesting than these is the admirable description of the domestic life and economy of the Turks given in the form of a newletter from Constantinople by Dr. J. Corvill in the year 1674. The picture of a plague-stricken city loses none of its realistic effect from the prosaic relation of a scientific observer. This English traveller was no mean herbalist, and had contrived to hold the sickness at bay with doses of Recoartium animale and the fumes of vitriol. He was also discreet in his professional character, for he has "many stories tending to the business of physic among them, but it is not convenient here to trouble you with them, especially what relates to their women." Selections from Dr. Corvill's letters have just been issued by the Hakluyt Society.

The Vere and Holles and Cavendish papers are of some interest if only for their connexion with the later and more important collection of Harley papers. They embrace a period of about a hundred years, but only become full during the reigns of Charles II. and James II. After this date they overlap the Bentinck papers, and become merged in the great Harleian collection in the reign of Queen Anne. Amongst the most noticeable papers are a narrative of the battle of Sedgemoor by a military eye-witness and some curious information respecting the Jacobite plots in the reign of William III.

The Harley papers calendared here consist almost entirely of the newletters of Nathaniel Harley, a merchant at Aleppo, whose knowledge of Oriental life and character seems to have been more than usually profound. His correspondence is also not without interest from the point of view of the economic historian.

The volume concludes with the diaries of Thomas Baskerville, descriptive of a somewhat extensive tour, chiefly in the eastern counties of England, at the end of the reign of Charles II. This compilation is of purely local interest, but some of the writer's personal observations have an occasional value, such as the fact that the soil of the site of Barnwell fair was enriched by the oyster shells which were tumbled "under the table without more ado." An index to this and the previous volume is appended to the Calendar, and deserves notice as a very perfect specimen of its kind.

THE LATE W. H. SMITH.

Reform Club, Pall Mall, Jan. 2, 1894.

At p. 116 of the first volume of Sir Herbert Maxwell's interesting 'Life' of the late W. H. Smith, and under date 1865, it is written:—

"Smith's name had been for some time on the candidates' book of the Reform Club; when he came up for election the haughty susceptibilities of the Whig members of the committee were set in arms against the admission of a tradesman, and he was blackballed. This apparently trivial act—lightly done and as lightly dismissed from thought—was perhaps to have a more lasting effect on the course of politics for a quarter of a century than anybody could have foreseen at the time."

The statements in the foregoing paragraph are inaccurate.

1. Smith's name was not entered in the candidates' book "for some time"; it appeared there on May 11th, 1860; the ballot at which Smith was rejected took place on June 14th in the same year.

2. The Whig members of the committee had no more power of making their influence felt than any other members of the Club, the election of candidates being then, as it still is, in the hands of the Club as a whole.

The reason why W. H. Smith was blackballed was that his proposer and seconder, both of whom were strong Radicals, had misdescribed him, and the rules did not then empower the committee, as they now do, to rectify an error which, though unintentional, might prove fatal to a candidate. Mr. Frank Crossley proposed him, and Mr. Edward Baines, M.P., seconded him; he was described as "William Henry Smith, Esquire, 1, Hyde Park Street, Publisher." If he had appeared in the candidates' book as "of the firm of W. H. Smith & Son, Newsagents," I feel certain that he would have been elected. I write this with a clear recollection of the prevailing opinion in the Club at the time. I voted for him; and, in common with many fellow members, I felt that he had been harshly treated. The committee took that view, and communicated with his proposer and seconder a few days after the ballot, saying that if Mr. W. H. Smith were again proposed, he would doubtless be elected. The reply was that he had become, or would soon be, a candidate for the Carlton. If he had not been blackballed at the Reform, it is improbable that he would have died Lord Warden of Walmer Castle and First Lord of the Treasury.

W. FRASER RAE.

THE BOOK SALES OF 1893.

I.

It cannot be supposed that different classes of books come into prominence or recede from popular favour with anything approaching a spasmodic movement, though it is undoubted that changes, depending to a very large extent on contemporary fashion, are continually taking place. Observations merely confined to the space of a year would not be sufficiently representative to justify an opinion that any alteration noticeable during that space of time would or would not be likely to be permanent, but if the record of a series of years be carefully considered, it is, I believe, even possible to arrive at a conclusion with regard to the future ups and downs of the book-market that will to some extent at least be borne out by results. This is not such pure speculation as it seems, for progress is slow in the book-world, and a real, as distinguished from a fictitious, impetus once given is almost certain to continue. The difficulty consists in detecting small initial movements and in gauging their upward or downward tendency, regard being had to intrinsic merit, which has everything to do with the question of the ultimate fate of a book in the market. There are, of course, other considerations—such, for example, the number of copies published to the edition—which are of the greatest importance, so much so that many authors of the highest repute are passed over quickly enough in the auction-room because, for one thing, they have had the good fortune to be popular from the first. Sir Walter Scott may be mentioned as one, and perhaps the greatest, of many examples that could be adduced to prove the truth of this assertion. The editions of that prolific author were issued in prodigious quantities, and for that reason were never in much request as collectors' books until a year or two ago, when it was recognized that, although rebound and cut-down copies of the original editions of all his books were common enough, the very reverse was the case with regard to clean copies in their original boards. There was obviously no valid reason why Scott at his best should be neglected while other authors of less ability should be favourably regarded, and so what was, in fact, predicted two or three years ago has actually come to pass: original editions of all Scott's works, provided they are in the same state as when published, but not otherwise, are selling at prices greatly in advance of what they have ever brought before. On the other hand, the rather cool reception accorded the "Limited Edition" movement accentuates the common mistake of supposing that, merely because a small number of copies of a new book are published, they must necessarily on that account become sought after, and therefore valuable. This by no means follows. Scarcity is only one incident in the life of a book; there are many more, such as novelty, sterling merit, utility, and interest of subject; and unless one or more of these qualities are conspicuously present, mere scarcity will not atone for the defect. Some books, no doubt, are prized for no other reason than because they are seldom met with, but they are invariably old or curious, and commonly both. Whatever the reason, it seems clear that these quite modern volumes issued in strictly limited numbers have, as a whole, failed to establish themselves in the open market; and if any appreciable number are held by the dealers, a heavy fall is certain to follow. With the exceptions mentioned, all classes of books are substantially in the same position as they were a year ago, though it may be advisable to mention that the evidence in favour of Scott seems to apply to some extent to original editions of Lytton, which have hitherto been almost entirely neglected. These, if good copies in their original covers, should rise in value in the near future. If dirty, imperfect, or rebound, they are better left alone, in accordance with the general rule that prevails in such cases.

During the year 1893, or, to be more accurate, from December, 1892, to last November, both inclusive, fifty high-class sales by auction have been held in London and the provinces, and will be found reported in the forthcoming volume of 'Book Prices Current.' Nearly 50,000 lots of property, representing probably double that number of books, were brought to the hammer, the total sum realized amounting to 66,470*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*, a good but not an unusual average. The first sale, comprising the library of the late Mr. F. W. J. Deacon, which was dispersed by Messrs. Sotheby early in December, contained little of importance; and Mr. Elsted's library, which the same firm sold on December 3rd, was very little better. Bateman's 'Orchidaceae of Mexico and Guatemala,' 1843, folio, brought 9*l.* 15*s.* (half-morocco). A copy of this book had not appeared in the auction-room since March, 1891, on which occasion it realized 6*l.* 15*s.* Haisted's 'Kent,' 12 vols., 1797-1801, 8vo., brought 4*l.* 16*s.*, and the earlier and better edition of 1778-99, in 4 folio volumes, 16*l.* 10*s.* Hodgson's 'History of Northumberland,' the three parts complete, in 7 vols. 4to., sold for 27*l.* 10*s.*, as against 40*l.* in April, 1889, the great difference in price being due to foxed leaves and ill condition. Later on Messrs. Puttick & Simpson disposed of a miscellaneous collection that included a few good books, e.g., Ainsworth's 'Jack Sheppard,' 3 vols., first edition, cloth, uncut, 1839, 6*l.* 12*s.*; a large-paper copy (imperial) of Bewick's 'Birds,' 2 vols., 1805, in the original boards, 8*l.*; Sir Egerton Brydges's 'Restituta,' 18 vols. 8vo., 1814-15, 9*l.* 5*s.* (calf); Egan's 'Life of an Actor,' 1825, additionally illustrated with coloured and other caricatures and numerous scarce portraits, 11*l.*; Thackeray's 'Vanity Fair,' in the original 20 monthly parts, 13*l.* 5*s.*, a cheap set; and a copy of the Kilmacott Press reprint of the 'Golden Legend,' 3 vols. 4to., 1892, 7*l.* (published at 9*l.* 9*s.*). As a good deal of interest is manifested in Mr. William Morris's Hammersmith productions, the sales of the whole year may be conveniently tabulated at once. The following were all in the original covers precisely as when published: 'Recuyell of the Histories of Troy,' 3 vols. in 2, 4to., 1892, 6*l.* 5*s.*, 29*l.* (vellum); 'History of Reynard the Foxe,' 1892, folio, 2*l.* 11*s.*, 2*l.* 17*s.*, 16*l.* 10*s.* (vellum); Mr. W. S. Blunt's 'Proteus, Love-Lyrics, Songs and Sonnets,' 1892, 8vo., 2*l.* 4*s.* (published at 2*l.* 2*s.*); 'The Nature of Gothic,' 1892, 8vo., 1*l.* 3*s.* (published at 1*l.* 10*s.*); 'Poems by the Way,' 1891, 8vo., 3*l.* 12*s.*, 3*l.* 5*s.* (published at 2*l.* 2*s.*); 'The Defence of Guenevere,' 4to., 1892, 2*l.* 6*s.* (published at 2*l.* 2*s.*); 'A Dream of John Ball,' 1892, 4to., 1*l.* 10*s.* (published at 1*l.* 10*s.*); 'The Story of the Glittering Plain,' 1891, 4to., 4*l.* 12*s.* (published at 2*l.* 2*s.*); and one or two more. These statistics are eminently satisfactory, and, considering the short length of time the Kilmacott Press has been established, would be hard to equal. On December 13th Messrs. Sotheby disposed of "a portion of the library of a gentleman, deceased," a small but exceedingly choice collection. Although there were only 418 lots, they brought 2,411*l.* 11*s.*, showing the large average of nearly 6*l.* Bowick's 'Fables of Æsop,' 1818, and 'Select Fables,' 1820, both on large paper (royal), sold for 13*l.* (calf extra); Blake's 'Illustrations of the Book of Job,' 21 proof plates, 1826, folio, 8*l.* 5*s.*; Theodore de Bry's 'Emblemata,' 1593, 4to., 60*l.* (morocco extra, covered with gold tooling); a set of chronicles from Col. Johnes's Hafod Press, in 25 vols. 4to., 37*l.*; an extra-illustrated copy of Clarendon's 'Rebellion,' 3 vols., large paper, Oxford, 1702-4, folio, 20*l.* 10*s.*; Gould's 'Birds of Europe,' 5 vols. folio, 1837, 85*l.* (morocco super extra); the 'Birds of Asia,' 7 vols. folio, 1850-80, 78*l.* (half-morocco, uncut); the 'Monograph of the Trochilidae,' 5 vols., 1861, folio, 45*l.* (morocco extra); 'Birds of Great Britain,' 5 vols. folio, 48*l.* (ibid.); and the 'Mammals of Australia,' 3 vols. folio, 30*l.* (ibid.). A set of the "H. B." sketches, 917 plates, in 9 folio volumes, sold for 25*l.*; McLan's 'Clans of the Scottish Highlands,' 2 vols. 4to., 1857, 8*l.* (morocco extra); a complete set of the Percy Society's Publications, 94 works in 30 vols. 8vo., 1840-53, 13*l.* 13*s.*; Silvestre's 'Universal Paleography,' 2 vols. atlas folio, 1850, 16*l.* 10*s.* (half-morocco); a set of Strutt's Works in 11 vols. 4to., 50*l.* (ibid.); a complete set of the Surtees Society's Publications, from its establishment in 1834 to 1890 inclusive, 88 vols. 8vo., in the original cloth, 33*l.*; and a splendid copy of 'Antiquities of the Russian Empire,' 6 vols. in 7, folio, with the 4to. volume of text, 1849-56, 64*l.* Another copy of this same book, without the text, 6 vols. in 4, subsequently sold for 43*l.* Later an assortment of Robert Browning's Poems in 24 vols., all first editions, realized 10*l.* 15*s.* The books were nicely bound by Zaehnsdorf, but the series comprised nothing before 1850, except 'Paracelsus,' 'Strafford,' and 'Sordello.' The next lot consisted of the eight numbers of 'Bells and Pomegranates,' 1841-46, original covers, 8*l.* At the same sale (Mr. H. Walton Lawrence's library) a set of Crowe and Cavalcaselle's art works in 10 vols. 8vo. realized 26*l.* (morocco extra by Zaehnsdorf); a Missal, printed by Plantin on vellum in 1672 at Antwerp, 19*l.*; and a first folio Shakespeare, 25*l.* This copy had the title with portrait, verses, preliminary leaves, and 'Cymbeline,' reprinted in facsimile. No other copy of the first folio was sold during the year, but three copies of the second folio (1632) appeared, and six of the fourth (1685). A quite perfect copy of the former produced 53*l.* (old calf), and of the latter, 19*l.* This has been a bad Shakspearean year, the important sales including only a copy of the 'Merchant of Venice,' first edition, 1600, 4to., 90*l.* (last leaf in facsimile); 'Henry V.,' 1608, 4to., 50*l.*; the folios already mentioned; two sets of Halliwell-Phillipps's edition, 16 vols., 1853-68, folio, which brought 63*l.* and 66*l.* respectively; and Boydell's edition, 9 vols. folio, 1802, 61*l.* (extra illustrated). The last time a perfect copy of Shakespeare's third folio of 1664 was seen in a London auction-room was at the Gaisford sale in 1890 (168*l.*), though a good copy sold at New York in March, 1891, for 960 dollars. Though the third folio is not so important as the first, it seems to be much more difficult to meet with. In June last Messrs. Christie sold Shakespeare's jug and cane for 155 guineas. Very possibly these relics were genuine, for they were bequeathed by the great dramatist to his sister Joan, who married a Mr. Hart, of Tewkesbury, and in the possession of their descendants they remained till the commencement of the present century. Two works which, like Scrope's 'Salmon Fishing' and 'Deer-Stalking,' seem to be getting more expensive every day are Col. Crealock's 'Among the Red Deer,' folio, n.d., 6*l.*, and the same author's 'Happy Hunting Grounds of Loch Leuchart,' folio, n.d., 4*l.* 10*s.* A third book, 'Deer-Stalking in the Highlands of Scotland,' 1892, folio, is, however, more valuable than either. Three copies have been publicly sold during the last twelve months for 11*l.*, 12*l.* 10*s.*, and 14*l.* 14*s.* Only 265 copies of the book were printed, and very few reached the hands of the booksellers. Cordiner's 'Antiquities and Scenery of the North of Scotland' and 'Remarkable Ruins and Romantic Prospects of North Britain,' 1780, &c., 4to., brought 92*l.* 8*s.*, a remarkable price, which is accounted for by the fact that seventy-one original drawings by Cordiner, many of them never published, were included in the sale. A set of 298 engravings in mezzotint, after Sir Joshua Reynolds, proofs on French paper, 1820, &c., folio, sold for 53*l.* 11*s.* This sale of Major E. Hill's library, which also included other properties, was remarkable for the number of art books it contained, and the prices realized were considerably above the average. J. H. SLATER.

ENGLISH LITERATURE IN 1893.

THE year 1893, in its literary aspect, has been a year given over almost entirely to the younger writers, who have discovered one another throughout its course with unanimous and touching enthusiasm. The older men have been silent, while the juniors have enjoyed the distinction of limited editions and the luxury of large sales. Only one novelist of high renown, Mr. Stevenson, has published a volume; and only one really eminent poet, Miss Rossetti. But a single book by an unknown novelist, 'The Heavenly Twins,' has attained a larger sale than any English novel, probably, since 'Robert Elsmere'; and a publishing firm, the Bodley Head, has achieved the unique feat of living and flourishing entirely on polite literature, mainly verse. There has been a distinctly new growth in the short story (with two or three exceptions, all the best fiction of the year has been in the form of short stories), and along with the short story ("poisonous honey stol'n from France") has come a new licence in dealing imaginatively with life, almost permitting the Englishman to contend with the writers of other nations on their own ground; permitting him, that is to say, to represent life as it really is. Foreign influences, certainly, have begun to have more and more effect upon the making of such literature as is produced in England nowadays; we have seen a certain acceptance of Ibsen, a popular personal welcome of Zola, and literary homage paid to Verlaine. What do these facts really mean? It is certain that they mean something.

The visit of Zola, for instance—how impossible that would have been a little while ago! A little while ago we were opening the prison doors for the publisher who had ventured to bring out translations of 'Nana' and 'La Terre'; now we open the doors of the Guildhall for the author of 'Nana' and 'La Terre'; and the same pens, with the same jubilation, chronicle both incidents. To the spectator of the comedy of life all this is merely amusing; but to the actor in the tragic comedy of letters it means a whole new répertoire. Not so very many years ago Mr. George Moore was the only novelist in England who insisted on the novelist's right to be true to life, even when life is unpleasant and immoral; and he was attacked on all sides. Now every literary lady is "realistic," and everybody says, "How clever! how charming!" One of the popular novels of the year treats of a question which even men in club smoking-rooms are chary of discussing; another successful book of short stories is remarkable chiefly on account of the hysterical frankness of its amatory abandonment. Both books are by women. Such, then, are the opportunities of the writer of fiction in England at the present moment; and of these opportunities the triumphant visit of Zola is typical.

The visit of Paul Verlaine, too—unofficial, unadvertised, as it was—seems to be significant of much. In the first place, it shows, as in the case of Zola, a readiness on the part of some not unimportant section of the public to overlook either personal or literary scandal connected with a man of letters who has done really remarkable work. But the interest of Verlaine's visit was much more purely literary than that of Zola; his reception was in no sense a concession to success, but entirely a tribute to the genius of a poet. It was one of many indications that literature is coming to be appreciated as literature; that a poet is once more a person of importance. Indeed, for the moment, poetry is actually said to pay; books of verse are really sold, not only to their authors, and the authors receive cheques instead of giving them. A new book of verse has only to be of moderate quality to be at once praised in the papers, at least as much as it deserves. The periodic discovery of new poets is in danger of becoming a little ridiculous; but it is better for the chances of literature than the indifference of the past. As we write we observe the announcement of the Fortnightly Review for January, with an article by Mr. Coventry Patmore on 'Mr. Francis Thompson, a New Poet.' Mr. Francis Thompson is the discovery of the year, and his book of 'Poems' is, indeed, of remarkable quality, though not, we venture to think, so very much better than Crashaw as we have lately been assured. But to make this reservation is not to say that he is not far finer than Mr. Norman Gale and Mr. Richard Le Gallienne, who were last year's discoveries; finer even than Mr. William Watson, who was the discovery—was he not?—of the year before. One of these, Mr. Gale, has this year done some more of his charming pastoral work, quite sincere in a sort of delicate insincerity; Mr. Watson has published only one tiny volume of verse, the barren burlesque of 'The Eloping Angels,' which should never have been printed, and a book of prose, 'Excursions in Criticism,' the criticism and the style being alike as immature and unbalanced as his verse is generally mature and accomplished; while Mr. Le Gallienne has forsaken the domesticity of the muse, to officiate, in 'The Religion of a Literary Man,' as the Canon Farrar of the younger generation. The most really poetic of the younger poets, Mr. W. B. Yeats, who has yet to be "discovered" by the average critic and the average reader, has this year published a new volume of verse, 'The Countess Kathleen,' as well as a book of prose stories, 'The Celtic Twilight,' and, in conjunction with Mr. Edwin J. Ellis, a laborious study in the mysticism of William Blake. Mr. Yeats's work, alone among recent work in verse, has the imaginative quality of vision; it has the true Celtic charm and mystery; and while such admirable verse as Mr. Watson's, such glowing verse as Mr. Thompson's, are both superior, on purely technical grounds, to Mr. Yeats's, neither has the spontaneous outflow of the somewhat untrained singing-voice of the younger poet.

Another writer of verse who has not yet been estimated at his proper value, Mr. John Davidson, has also published a new book of poems, 'Fleet Street Eclogues,' and a book of prose, 'A Random Itinerary.' It is difficult to do justice to Mr. Davidson, for he never does justice to himself. His verse is always vivid and striking; at its best it has a delightful quality of fantastic humour and quaint extravagance; but it is singularly uneven, and never, in our opinion, at its best in purely modern subjects. The 'Random Itinerary' is a whole series of happy accidents; but there are gaps in the series. Mr. Davidson strikes one as a man who might do almost anything; why, then, does he not do it? To Michael Field, who has this year published a volume of lyrics, 'Underneath the Bough,' and a play in prose, 'A Question of Memory,' we might put a very different question, and ask why a writer who has achieved excellent work in the poetic drama should attempt prose and the lyric, without, apparently, a special impulse or an exceptional capacity for either. Among new writers, Mr. A. C. Benson has attained a certain quiet degree of success with a book of 'Poems' which contains some careful and accomplished work; and a little volume called 'My Book of Songs and Sonnets,' by Maude Egerton King, which has a profound personal note, the very soul of a woman, appears to have attracted no attention whatever. Nor has an excellent volume of translations into verse, by Mr. G. A. Greene, of 'The Italian Lyrists of To-day,' which is the first introduction to English readers of the very interesting contemporary poets of Italy. Lord de Tabley, who has received a good deal of notice since the reissue of his 'Poems, Dramatic and Lyrical,' might almost be classed among the new writers, so completely were his quaint echoes and ornamental transcripts forgotten. The ultra-modern school of verse has found a new recruit in Mr. Theodore Wratislaw, whose 'Caprices' are fervently fin-de-siècle, an interesting attempt to paint impressions in verse; while Count Stenbock, in 'The Shadow of Death,' has succeeded, here and there, in giving expression to curiously morbid sensations. Mr. Oscar Wilde, in 'Salome,' must, perhaps, be included among the English poets, though he has written in prose, and in French.

The one really eminent poet, as we have said, who has published a volume this year, is Miss Christina Rossetti, and it need scarcely be said that her book of 'Verses' is, in verse, the book of the year. So, in fiction, Mr. Robert Louis Stevenson's 'Catriona'—a sequel to 'Kidnapped,' and almost as fascinating as that wonderful romance—is, from a purely literary point of view, the novel of the year. But it is a curious fact that the two novels which have made the greatest popular success, 'The Heavenly Twins' and 'Dodo,' are both by amateurs, and neither of them owes its success to purely literary qualities. Both are undeniably clever, but the one succeeded mainly by the audacity with which it handled what are called "social abuses," the other by the audacity with which it brought real people, people in "society," on the public stage. The one three-volume novel of the year which makes its appeal simply as a piece of literature is 'The Comedy of Masks,' by Ernest Dowson and Arthur Moore. We have not before seen the name of Mr. Moore, but that of Mr. Dowson is familiar to some people in connexion with a few scattered poems of singular charm and sweetness, and a few short stories of a very subtle and original kind. The novel, in which both have collaborated, is in many ways imperfect as a novel; its plot and situations are amateurish; but in the manner of its writing, in its general handling of character, it is fine, assured, masterly; in a word, it is a piece of literature. It is for quite opposite qualities that we place at the head of the short stories of the year Mr. Hubert Crackanthorpe's very remarkable studies called 'Wreckage.' Mr. Crackanthorpe's book is notable by reason of the skill which he shows in giving direct, often brutal expression, in significant incidents, to the hard, bare realities of mainly sordid life. It is daring in the extreme; alike in subject and in method it suggests Guy de Maupassant; there is the same disregard of the soul, the same cynical acceptance of the animal passions as being really at the root of things; but there is not the same perfectly accomplished style. Another book of short stories which clutches at that opportunity for licence on which we have already commented is 'Keynotes,' by George Egerton. That opportunity is more calmly and discreetly taken by Mr. Henry Harland in 'Mademoiselle Miss,' which brings a whiff of the boulevards into English air, and by Mr. Frederick Wedmore, whose 'Renunciations' are clever, polite studies in a sort of genteel realism. Mr. Kipling, in some of his 'Many Inventions,' comes very close to the ugliness of life; and Mrs. Steel, the newest novelist of India, has been outspoken enough in her curious, interesting pictures of native life and manners. Miss Olive Schreiner has scarcely done herself justice in the tiny book of 'Dream Life and Real Life'; nor, perhaps, has the brilliant talent of John Oliver Hobbes in 'A Study in Temptations.' Of Miss Braddon and the other novelists who regularly produce their tale of bricks, there is nothing particular to be remarked. Not to the credit of English letters, we must say that by far the most remarkable novel which has appeared in English during the year is a translation, and a translation from a language which has never had a literature: 'Under the Yoke,' from the Bulgarian of Ivan Vazoff.

Passing from prose fiction to the prose which is mainly critical and of the nature of essays, we find two books of permanent value, by two writers who, of all the distinguished men of letters of the day, have written the least, and with the greatest care—Mr. Walter Pater's 'Plato and Platonism,' and Mr. Coventry Patmore's 'Religio Poetæ.' Of the latter we spoke last week, and it is unnecessary to recapitulate; of the former we need but say that it is the most beautiful prose book of the year. Two books by Mr. John Addington Symonds, 'In the Key of Blue' and a study of Walt Whitman, have the pathetic interest of being the last work of an accomplished and devoted man of letters, whose death is the one melancholy event that we have to chronicle in the literary history of the year. Mr. Symonds did too many things to do anything supremely well; but he did nothing that was not full of artistic feeling, and of the most genuine and generous appreciation of every form of art. In criticism pure and simple the two most interesting books of the year are Mr. Gosse's 'Questions at Issue,' which is politely polemical, and Mr. George Moore's 'Modern Painting,' which is fiercely polemical. Mr. Gosse's urbanity and Mr. Moore's intolerance are equally charming, in their various ways; but it must be said that Mr. Gosse never goes so far wrong as Mr. Moore, and rarely comes so close to the soul of things as Mr. Moore sometimes does. A book which is not exactly a piece of literature, but which has literary merit as well as interest of another kind, is Mr. Pearson's much discussed 'National Life and Character.' The publication of Scott's letters, under the editorship of Mr. David Douglas, of Lowell's correspondence, under the editorship of Mr. Charles Eliot Norton, of Lady Burton's life of her husband, and of Mr. Leland's and Mr. Vizetelly's reminiscences, should not be overlooked, and need scarcely be insisted upon; nor the additions to ecclesiastical biography, such as the 'Life of Stanley' and the first half of a memoir of Pusey on a Brobdingnagian scale. Mr. Dykes Campbell's edition of Coleridge must be mentioned as a masterpiece of editing; the completion of Mr. Miles's anthology of the 'Poets and Poetry of the Century' may be chronicled without regret; and the appearance of a second edition of 'Living English Poets,' with seventeen new names in place of the fourteen that have dropped into the past during the ten years now ended, may be welcomed not without satisfaction; for, at all events, whatever the quality of their work, we have now, it would seem, three poets extra.

Literary Gossip.

At the end of January, Messrs. Osgood, McIlvaine & Co. will publish a new collection of Mr. Thomas Hardy's "Wessex Tales," uniform with 'A Group of Noble Dames' and the present edition of 'Tess,' of which book the twenty-third thousand is nearly sold out.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. will shortly publish a new volume by Mr. Alfred Austin, called 'England's Darling, and other Poems.' The name 'England's darling' is that by which Alfred the Great was, Mr. Austin thinks, for centuries best known to the English people. 'The Garden that I Love,' by the same author, which has been appearing in the National Review, will be republished in the course of the year in a volume appropriately illustrated.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON have in the press a volume of short stories by the Hon. Mrs. Henniker, sister of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, which is to be published under the title of 'Outlines,' and dedicated to Mr. Thomas Hardy, who, it seems, has expressed a favourable opinion upon the work.

THE Hon. Warren Vernon will shortly publish, through Messrs. Macmillan & Co., in two volumes, his 'Readings in the Inferno of Dante, chiefly based on the Commentary of Benvenuto da Imola.' This work, to which Dr. Moore, Principal of St. Edmund Hall, contributes an introduction, will be uniform with the previously published series of 'Readings in the Purgatorio.'

MR. A. C. COWLEY, of Trinity College, Oxford, and Mr. T. G. Stenning, Magdalen College, Oxford, have just left for St. Catharine's Convent, Mount Sinai, in order to continue the investigations begun by Mrs. Lewis and Prof. Rendel Harris.

MR. SIDNEY LEE would be glad to hear from those who are in favour of a conference on the subject of parish registers and the question of their security and accessibility. Mr. Lee's address is the office of the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' 15, Waterloo Place.

PROF. D. S. MARGOLIOUTH, who has just published the text of two Arabic papyri in the Bodleian Library, is preparing an edition of the Arabic translation of the 'Rhetoric' of Aristotle, according to the unique MS. in the National Library of Paris, and will supplement it with copious notes bearing upon the Greek text. We hope that he will add a photographic page of the MS., which is mostly written without discritical points, and therefore it is possible to read words in many different ways. He neglected to do so in his edition of the 'Poetics.'

THE death of Lord Sandford—better known to the public as Sir Francis Sandford, and long head of the Education Office—has to be recorded.

MISS FRANCES FORBER ROBERTSON is bringing out through Messrs. Reeves & Turner at the end of January a volume entitled 'The Devil's Pronoun.' It is a book of stories, or rather fantasies, and will be illustrated with numerous designs.

MESSRS. TILLOTSON & SON for this year have secured serials from Mr. William Black, Mr. Hall Caine, Miss Braddon, Mr. G. M. Fenn, Mr. D. C. Murray, Miss Dora Russell, Mr. Henry Herman, Mr. W. Clark Russell, Mr. F. W. Robinson, Miss Florence Marryat, Mr. Joseph Hutton, and Mrs. Hungerford.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR has completed an entire revision of the text and notes of his 'Life of Christ,' and the new edition of this work will be issued by Messrs. Cassell & Co. during the present month.

A NEW volume by Mr. Augustine Birrell, entitled 'Essays about Men, Women, and Books,' is to be issued by Mr. Elliot Stock.

THE death of Mr. Henry Vizetelly, after a lengthy and painful illness, occurred on New Year's Day. A man of great ability and resource, he enjoyed, as his recently published 'Glances Back' serve to show, many opportunities of attaining wealth, especially during the earlier days of illustrated journalism; but he failed to turn them to permanent account. Perhaps his very versatility had something to do with this. He was full of energy, and always ready to turn author, publisher, or newspaper correspondent as occasion offered. He was never daunted by ill success, and as long as his health lasted retained his buoyancy of spirits. In the course of his varied career he had more ups and downs than fall to the lot of most men.

MR. IM THURN writes from British Guiana:—

"A friend, who knows my interest in my old school, having recently sent into these distant parts a copy of the September number of the Ludgate Monthly Magazine, in which appears an article on Marlborough College, I began to read this article with the pleasantest anticipations. Almost at once there arose in me that curious sensation of doing over again something which one has done long before in some unremembered past. But on this occasion the explanation of the sensation very soon followed. For I recognized that rather more than two-thirds of the article I was reading is 'cribbed,' word for word, from an article which I wrote some eighteen years ago for the New Quarterly Magazine, which article, after duly appearing in that magazine, was reprinted as one chapter of a book entitled 'Our Public Schools,' which was published by Messrs. Kegan Paul & Co. in 1881. I think the literary dishonesty of the man who now uses my article without a word of acknowledgment, but with some interpolations of his own, deserves notice."

THE Jewish pulpit has lost its most gifted orator by the death, which occurred on the 27th of December, of Dr. Adolf Jellinek, of Vienna, at the age of seventy-three. The deceased was also very well known in the field of Hebrew literature. His chief works and editions bear upon the origin and development of the Kabbalah, and on the literature of minor Midrashim. In the last years of his life Dr. Jellinek contributed largely to Hebrew bibliography.

On the 19th of last month there passed away at Heidelberg, in his eighty-first year, in consequence of an attack of influenza,

Dr. Alois Sprenger, one of the most distinguished of Arabic scholars. Born in Tyrol in 1813, he studied medicine at Innsbruck, but at the same time he devoted himself to Oriental languages, especially Arabic, and his interest in them induced him, after his medical examination was passed, to visit Silvestro de Sacy at Paris. Soon after, he entered the service of the East India Company as a military surgeon. In India, however, he passed into the Educational Department. Dr. Sprenger was for a long time director of the Mohammedan schools, and in this capacity acquired such extensive knowledge of Islamic sciences that he became famous in historical research, especially as regards Mohammed. He published in India a number of treatises, among which were his first attempt at a life of Mohammed and editions of Arabic and Persian works. He then collected a quantity of Oriental MSS., which are now in Berlin. He made for the King of Oude a catalogue of his library, which was unfortunately soon after destroyed by fire. After his return from India he went to Berne, and was made Professor of Arabic in the university there. Later he retired to Heidelberg, where for the last twelve years he had spent a quiet life. His principal works are his 'Lebensgeschichte Mohammeds,' in three volumes, and his 'Alte Geographie auf Grund des Ptolemæus.'

THE Swiss historian Georg von Wyss died in Zurich, of which city he was a native, on December 17th, in his seventy-seventh year. He held the Chair of History in the university for several years, and had been president of the Swiss Geschichtsforschende Gesellschaft since the year 1854. His wife, a worthy colleague of her husband, died only a few hours before him. They had celebrated their "golden wedding" during the year.—Madame Eliza Wille, who was a native of Hamburg and the author of several novels and poems, has just died at Zurich, at the age of eighty-four. She had taken an active part in the movement of "Jung Deutschland," and was married to a journalist, Dr. François Wille, whose scar-covered face is described by Heine in Caput XXIII. of his poem 'Deutschland.'

THE only Parliamentary Paper likely to interest our readers this week consists of a Proposal made by the Government of the United States for the Settlement of International Disputes by Arbitration (1d.).

SCIENCE

SIR SAMUEL WHITE BAKER.

WITH Sir Samuel White Baker, who died on December 30th at his residence of Sandford Orleigh, near Newton Abbot, there has passed from our midst the last of the three men with whose name the discovery of the Nile source will for ever be most closely associated. Baker was born at Thorngrove, Worcestershire, on June 21st, 1821. He received an excellent education, and when still a young man, in 1845, proceeded to Ceylon, where he won experience and even fame as a sportsman, but failed in the commercial enterprise which had taken him to that enchanted island. After his return to Europe he married a German lady from Pest, who proved his faithful companion throughout all his subsequent travels. For a time he superintended the construction of a railway from Varna to Rushtchuk; but his spirit of adventure and love of sport found little satisfaction in such a humdrum occupation. Early in 1861 he proceeded to Egypt with a vague hope of being able to meet his old friends Speke and Grant, then on their way from Zanzibar to the Upper Nile. He spent a full year in the sportsman's paradise watered by the Atbara and other Nile tributaries rising in Northern Abyssinia, and thus only reached Gondokoro on February 2nd, 1863. A fortnight afterwards he was joined there by his friends, and whilst they proceeded on their way to Europe, he remained behind to discover the only missing link which connected the river issuing out of the Victoria Nyanza with the river which flowed past Gondokoro. After suppressing a mutiny among his men by timely concessions, he started for the south. He visited Kammari, the ruler of Unyoro; and on March 14th, 1864, he saw lying below him the lake of which he was in search, and upon which he bestowed the name of Albert Nyanza. For thirteen days he followed the eastern shore of that lake, visited the Murchison Falls, and then proceeded home, fully satisfied that the Nile problem, in all its essential features, had now been solved. At home he met with an enthusiastic reception. The Royal Geographical Society had already voted him its Patron's Medal, the Royal Society elected him one of its Fellows, and the Queen bestowed upon him the honour of knighthood.

Whilst in the Sudan and on the Upper Nile Baker had become deeply impressed with the horrors of the slave trade. He hoped to be able to abolish this scourge by annexing the whole of this region as far as the lakes to the Egyptian dominions, and opening it to legitimate commerce. The Khedive, either tempted by the promised extension of his dominions or anxious to gain favour in the sight of England, entertained his propositions, and Baker was thus able to leave Khartum in February, 1870, at the head of a small army. Fortune, however, did not smile upon him. Like Caesar's centurions he found the Nile choked with masses of vegetation, but unlike them he did not turn back, but forced his way up a side channel, the Bahr Zeraf. It was thus April, 1871, before he reached Gondokoro. Two years were spent by him fighting slave-dealers and natives, and in Unyoro he might have come to a disastrous end had not the timely approach of a friendly army sent by King Mtesa produced a diversion in his favour. In April, 1876, he finally left Gondokoro for Europe, never again to return to Africa as an explorer or reformer, being content to seek sport in Cyprus and in other countries more readily accessible and more attractive than the regions of the Upper Nile. Yet he ever took a deep interest in the future of Africa, and no one protested more strongly than he did against the abandonment of the Sudan.

Baker's work as an explorer was well done. He laid down his routes with the aid of astronomical observations, determined the altitudes of the places he visited, and collected vocabularies of native languages. In all this he found a useful help in his wife, Lady Baker, and, during his second expedition, in his son Lieut. Baker.

The accounts of his travels and sporting adventures are models of what such books should be, and enjoyed a well-deserved popularity in their day and continue to do so. They include 'The Rifle and the Hound,' 1855; 'Eight Years' Wanderings in Ceylon,' 1855; 'The Nile Tributaries of Abyssinia,' 1867; 'The Albert Nyanza,' 1866; 'Ismaïlia,' 1874; and 'Cyprus as I saw it in 1879.' The discovery of the Albert Nyanza was announced in a letter to the Athenæum, which appeared on July 15th, 1865.

PROF. MILNES MARSHALL.

WE regret to record the death of Prof. A. M. Marshall, killed by a fall on Scafell on Sunday last. He was born in 1852, and graduated at Cambridge in Natural Science in 1874. After assisting his friend the late Prof. Balfour for a short time, he entered at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, intending to follow the medical profession; and although he gave up this idea on his appointment to the Chair of Zoology at the Owens College, Manchester, he proceeded to the degree of M.D. at Cambridge. He was formerly a Fellow of St. John's College, and was a D.Sc. in the London University; in 1885 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society.

His original contributions to science were not numerous, and related chiefly to the morphology of the vertebrate head. Of late years he had largely occupied himself with academic business, and his loss will be greatly felt at the Victoria University and the Owens College. The unflagging energy and spirits which made him a most capable organizer and administrator were never more clearly shown than in his secretaryship to the successful British Association meeting at Manchester in 1887. His text-books 'The Frog' (1882), and 'Practical Zoology' (1886) in conjunction with Dr. Hurst, are, and are likely to remain, in deservedly high favour; the last one, 'Vertebrate Embryology,' was noticed in these columns a few weeks ago.

SOCIETIES.

LINNEAN.—Dec. 21.—Prof. Stewart, President, in the chair.—Col. Sir H. Collett and Mr. H. H. Johnson were admitted, and Messrs. G. R. Greene and A. G. Tansley were elected.—Mr. F. L. Simmonds exhibited a collection of New Zealand mooses formed by Mr. G. W. Simmonds while surveying in H.M.S. Pandora.—Mr. Murray offered some critical remarks on the nature and value of the collection, which the owner was understood to say would be presented to the Botanical Department of the British Museum.—The President exhibited and described two curious examples of associated ants and plants, namely, Iridomyrmex caudatus with Myrmecodia beccarii and Camponotus planatus with Pseudomyrma belti, the plant being Acacia Aindii.—Mr. J. E. Harting exhibited some shells of Planorbis cornus which had been found by the riverside at Weybridge, and which from some unascertained cause were curiously bisected. Alluding to the piscivorous habits of the water shrew, Sorex fodiens, he suggested that it might be the work of this little animal.—Mr. A. D. Michael thought it likely to be the result of frost, the lower half of each shell being preserved by being imbedded in or adherent to the frozen mud.—Referring to a M.S. letter of Dr. S. Hales (the author of 'Vegetable Statics,' and a friend and neighbour of Gilbert White), which was exhibited by Mr. G. Murray, an excellent engraved portrait of him was exhibited by Mr. Harting, who made a few remarks upon his life and work. As this portrait was not to be found amongst the 600 engravings of 'Scientific Worthies' recently presented to the library by the late Lord A. Russell, he offered it for the acceptance of the Society.—On behalf of Mr. H. N. Ridley, Director of the Gardens and Forests Department, Singapore, the Secretary read a paper dealing with all the Orchideæ hitherto recorded from Borneo.—In the discussion which followed, Mr. C. B. Clarke made some interesting remarks on the distribution of these plants in the Indian and Indo-Malay regions, and on the way in which a knowledge of the species had been gradually acquired and extended.—On behalf of Mr. R. Spruce (whose unexpected death the Society has had recently to deplore), Mr. A. Gepp gave an abstract of a paper on the Hepaticæ collected by Mr. W. R. Elliott in the islands of St. Vincent and Dominica, including thirty new species, and took occasion to describe in some detail the nature and extent of Mr. Spruce's work, which he characterized as a most careful and excellent contribution to botanical science. The paper was accompanied by a series of minute and beautiful drawings.

HISTORICAL.—Dec. 21.—Sir M. E. Grant Duff, President, in the chair.—The following were elected Fellows: Alice Gibbons, E. E. Wild, W. A. Shaw, A. W. Andrews, J. Bonwick, and Luigi Schiaparelli.—A paper was read by Mr. C. R. Beasley 'On the Colonial Empire of the Portuguese to the Death of Albuquerque.'—A long and interesting discussion followed, in the course of which Mr. Beasley's views were examined and criticized in detail by Mr. Morse Stephens and Major M. Hume.—Dr. Wells (Harvard, U.S.A.) pointed out that the actual discoverers of the New World were largely indebted to the colonial enterprise of the Portuguese.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- Mon. London Institution, 8.—'The Poet and his People,' Rev. Dr. Hallinger.
 — Institute of British Architects, 8.
 — Aristotelian, 8.—Mr. F. M. Bradley's 'Appearance and Reality,' Mr. R. W. Carr.
 — Royal Academy, 8.—Painting, Mr. J. E. Hodgson.
 — Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'Trade Chalmers,' Mr. R. J. Harper.
 — Library Association, 8.—'Scientific Text-books and the Question of the Disposal of Out-of-date Editions,' Mr. A. Christie.
 — 'Plan for a Closer Union between Public Libraries and other Public Educational Institutions, with the Tablins of a Plan,' Mr. J. Y. W. MacAlister.
Tues. Royal Institution, 8.—'Air, Gases and Liquids,' Prof. Dewar. (Juvenile Lecture).
 — Geographical, 8.—'Mountains,' Mr. D. W. Freshfield. (Juvenile Lecture).
 — Biblical Archaeology, 8.—'Anniversary Meeting: 'Tarsheeb and Navigation among the Jews,' Rev. A. Lowy.
 — Civil Engineers, 8.—'Concentration and Sliding of Crushed Minerals,' Mr. R. E. Cummins.
 — Colonial Institute, 8.
 — Society of Architects, 8.—'Proposed Public Improvements at Charing Cross,' Mr. W. Woodward.
 — Anthropological Institute, 8.—'The Federal Union from Loochoo, Prof. R. H. Chamberlain. 'Biological Notes on the New Hebrides,' Lieut. B. T. Somerville. 'The Arango and Marumbo Ceremonies among the Tahitians, and other Notes,' Mr. L. Doole.
Wed. Society of Arts, 8.—'Plants, their Uses and Defences,' Mr. W. Gardiner. (Juvenile Lecture).
 — Geological, 8.—'Minerals and some Liasic Osteocods of Britain,' Prof. T. R. Jones. 'Light Creek Jurassic Coal-Measures of South Australia,' and 'Physical and Chemical Geology of the Interior of Australia. Recent Substratal Metamorphism of Sediment into Quartz, Gneiss, &c.,' Mr. J. Parham.
Thurs. Geographical, 8.—'Mountains,' Mr. D. W. Freshfield. (Juvenile Lecture).
 — London Institution, 8.—'Shakespeare in Relation to his Contemporaries in the Fine Arts,' Mr. W. H. W. Russell.
 — Geographical, 8.—'The Mission of Geography to History,' Mr. H. J. Mackinder.
 — Royal Academy, 8.—Painting, Mr. J. E. Hodgson.
 — Mathematical, 8.
 — Electrical Engineers, 8.—President's Inaugural Address.
 — Antiquaries, 8.—Meeting of Fellows.
Fri. Astronomical, 8.
 — Philological, 8.—Dictionary Evening.

Science Gossip.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, GOWER STREET, is to make a new departure. During Easter Term Dr. L. E. Hill, Assistant-Professor of Physiology, will give a practical course of instruction in psychophysiology. The course will take the student methodically over the several senses, and familiarize him with the methods by which the new branch of science known as physiological psychology or psycho-physics determines the precise manner in which sensation varies, both quantitatively and qualitatively, with variations of the stimulus, of the particular portion of the sensitive surface stimulated, and so forth. This is, we believe, almost the first attempt in this country to give to students systematic laboratory instruction in those experimental methods of investigating sense-phenomena which have already borne such valuable fruit in Germany and America. As supplying an exact and practical method of measuring sensibility the course should further prove valuable to teachers and others.

The translation of Theophrastus 'De Ventis' and 'De Pluviarum Signis' which Mr. J. G. Wood is preparing will be sent to press when Padre Denza's photograph of the marble in the Pio Clemente Museum is received. Mr. G. J. Symons will receive subscribers' names at 62, Camden Square. Mr. Wood supplies a long introduction dealing with Aristotle's theory of the winds.

The general meeting of the Association for the Improvement of Geometrical Teaching is to be held at University College, Gower Street, on Saturday next. A new undertaking will be proposed by the Council, viz., the establishment of a journal of elementary mathematics, to appear thrice a year, and to be specially devoted to such subjects as are usually taught in secondary schools.

FINE ARTS

SERIALS.

The Art Journal, 1893. ('Art Journal' Office.)—The most ambitious and, on the whole, the most complete essay in this instalment is Miss Julia Cartwright's intelligent but rather gushing article on 'Edward Burne-Jones, A.R.A.' But the best piece of criticism in the volume is a too brief article, 'Impressionism in France: a Debatable View,' signed 'G. B. B.' (M. Berne-Bellecour), which, though ending with 'à suivre,' has not as yet been continued. There is, of course, a great deal of amateurish writing in the volume; but, on the whole, the letterpress is at least as good as usual. Mr. W. Armstrong dilates on the Irish National Gallery as if it were a great institution, and writes sensibly about the Tate Collection and Michael Angelo. To say that Mr. L. F. Day has contributed much is to congratulate the Art Journal; the same may be said of Mr. J. Brett's belligerent article on texture. Mr. W. Crane furnishes a humorous and good-humoured reply to some puzzle-headed criticisms (which he had better have ignored) on his own opinion of Mr. Whistler. Mr. J. K. Hodgson and Mr. F. Eaton write on the Royal Academy, and Mr. H. Wallis on Chinese and Japanese bronzes. Most of the plates and cuts are excellent.

The Portfolio, 1893, edited by P. G. Hamerton (Seeley & Co.), is more really than most of its rivals "an artistic periodical." As we have already mentioned, this, the twenty-fourth volume, is its final appearance in the present form, although its well-won reputation is worthily sustained by the cuts and plates, and the letterpress that accompanies them. It contains some capital essays, first among which stands a thoughtful and tasteful estimate of the comparative merits of MM. Dalou and Rodin, by Mr. C. Phillips, with which we do not entirely agree, because we are not able to rank either of the clever French sculptors so highly as he does. Mr. Hamerton's lively review of M. Corroyer's too patriotic book on Gothic architecture is capital. Several of the articles having reappeared in other forms, and, as such, been noticed in these columns, we shall not again refer to them, although they fill the greater portion of the volume. Besides these we have read with pleasure Mr. C. Phillips's essays on Perugino; Mr. Hamerton's accounts of Meissonier, and the Médaille d'Honneur at the last Salon, the latter including much sound and learned criticism we heartily agree in; M. E. Müntz's discriminating notice of 'L. da Vinci and the Study of the Antique'; and Mr. Watkins Lloyd on 'The Picturesque in Homer,' a learned, penetrating, and sympathetic dissertation.

The Magazine of Art, 1893 (Cassell & Co.), fully retains the position coveted for it as a bright, varied, and thoroughly popular collection of papers, the greatest defect of the majority of which is their unwise brevity and insufficiency. Most of the cuts are better than they usually are in publications for the general public, while the more ambitious instances leave nothing to complain of, and have much to praise. The interesting 'Illustrated Note-Book,' to the value of which we have already referred, is as acceptable as ever. The articles we like best are that of Mr. H. Silver on 'The Art Life of John Leech'; that of Mr. Alma Tadema on 'Art in its Relation to Industry'; 'Design,' by Mr. W. Crane, a first-rate analysis; and 'St. Anne,' by Mr. A. Marks. These are the freshest contributions, but the volume comprises more or less excellent, competent, and clever essays by Mr. F. Wedmore, Mr. T. Watts, Prince Karageorgevitch, Mr. Brett, Mr. Meynell, Mr. C. Phillips, Mr. W. Armstrong, and Mr. J. E. Hodgson. Mr. Spielmann writes variously and copiously, but always with animation. There is too great lack of critical faculty and knowledge in the papers on the art galleries and collections of English amateurs, which are seldom worthy of a magazine of art.

The Studio, Vol. I. 1893. ('Studio' Office.)—This is the latest, and not the largest or best-equipped, aspirant to a position as an art journal, but it has an individuality of its own, being more artistic, or rather more decorative, than its elders. It appears to be feeling its way for a public and as yet to be hardly sure of its right to exist. Photography, as art or not as art, seems to trouble the promoters considerably, and this volume continues what, to those who can read between the lines, is an amusing correspondence of artists, professors, and amateurs, on whether the camera has done more good or harm to design. Most of the cuts (there are no plates) are satisfactory, if not good, but we do not see why such rubbish as deforms pp. 186, 187, and 188, and pp. 242 and 243, need be reproduced in what aims to be an artistic journal. On the other hand, the marine sketches of Mr. Henry Moore are distinctly valuable, and the letterpress generally is promising because it is intelligent and sympathetic.

The Vanity Fair Album. Vol. XXV. 1893. ('Vanity Fair' Office.)—The youthful King of Spain fares ill in the portrait by an anonymous draughtsman, who has given him two (!) violent casts in his eyes; but still more ungallant is Mr. L. Ward, who has made a wretched likeness of the Princess Victoria Mary of Teck. 'On the Terrace,' a group of statesmen and politicians, is not up to the mark, and little better than a caricature. 'Spy's' 'Duke of Somerset,' on the other hand, is very good, like most of his portraits, which include the capital 'Sir F. S. Hunt' and 'Mr. Alpheus Cleophas Morton,' on the latter of whom the cartoon will confer a painful immortality. The head of 'Lord Thring,' by the same draughtsman, is admirable and full of kindly humour, nor is his genial 'Duke of Beaufort' unworthy of his brush. 'Stuff,' a new hand, does not ill with 'Sir J. Rigby.' 'Jehu Junior's' remarks on 'Mr. W. G. E. Macartney' are good-naturedly incisive; and 'Spy's' portrait of that legislator ought to become a heirloom in Ulster.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—WINTER EXHIBITION.

(First Notice.—English Pictures.)

THIS, the twenty-fifth exhibition of the series, is chiefly remarkable for the general merit and interest of its British section, comprising a collection of pictures by Hogarth, Reynolds, and Gainsborough, and of the works of Stothard, Blake, and the late Mr. Pettie. The developed schools of Italy are not seen to so much advantage as usual, but of the primitives of Italy and the Low Countries there are some excellent and characteristic specimens; there are no Spanish paintings; and, with the exception of a superb Van Dyck of his Genoese period and two other good pictures by him, a tolerable Rubens, one acceptable Rembrandt, two Halses, an Ochtervelde, and a more interesting than beautiful Vermeer, the later schools of Holland and Flanders are hardly so strongly represented as in former years. We should add that the number of pictures unexhibited till now is great. The chief contributors are Her Majesty, Mr. Agnew, Lord Amherst, Lady Burdett-Coutts, Lord Burton, Mr. C. Butler, Mr. Falcke, Mr. Heseltine, Capt. Holford, Mr. C. A. Ionides, Mr. C. Morrison, Mr. H. Vaughan, Lady Wallace, and Mr. J. Wertheimer.

The only painter born in England during the seventeenth century who is represented on these walls is Hogarth (1697-1764), whom it is always instructive and pleasant to meet, especially when, as is the case with Mrs. Doudes's Wedding of Mr. Beckingham and Miss Corbett (No. 98), the example has not been seen till now in a public gallery, nor engraved, nor even mentioned in any of the catalogues of Hogarth's works. A few such pictures have turned up from time to time. They belong to that period, soon after his marriage in 1739, when, as he said himself, he "commenced painter of small Conversation-Pieces, from twelve to fifteen inches high; which, having novelty, succeeded for a few years." The primitive character of the technique indicates that No. 98 was painted about 1739. Some indications of unwonted carelessness on the part of the artist militate against its being a Hogarth. Still, for our part we have no doubts of its genuineness. As the wedding occurred in 1739, and the costumes agree very well with the period as well as with the style of the master at the date, 1740, of 'The Four Times of the Day,' two of which series were here in 1885 (44 and 48), there is less difficulty in accepting this highly attractive work as genuine. Where it came from and how it escaped notice till now are matters we should like to hear accounted for. The charm of the colour of its leading features is all in its favour, and is delightfully distinct in the pearly hues of the dresses of the bride and her groom, and in the sound and bright flesh painting. The general design, a mixture of humour and quaintness, is decidedly Hogarthian, and especially so in the group of chubby Cupids floating in the air above the heads of the happy pair, and emptying over them the very substantial contents of a huge cornucopia; quite Hogarthian too are the prim properties of some of the lookers-on, and the painter's tendency to exaggerate the characteristic features of his sitters. On the other hand, Hogarth, who was mostly loyal to the laws of perspective, was napping when he drew so ill the altar-rails, a sort of pen in which the officiating parson—the type of an eighteenth century vicar—stands. The execution of this interesting picture is very slight and unequal, and the too monotonous brown of the architecture indicates that the artist never saw the church he depicted.

Of the eleven Reynoldses on view this year several are admirable, but as a whole they hardly do him justice. The collection is not such as we have often had the pleasure of seeing here on former occasions. Sir James D. Linton's Venus disarming Cupid (4) is a late example, somewhat slight, rough, and badly drawn. Venus, a model, and the chubby boy, are less spiritual than ordinary with Reynolds. No. 4 must not be confused with a very similar composition, earlier and better known, of two figures, called 'Venus chiding Cupid for not learning to cast Accounts,' which was last exhibited at the Grosvenor Gallery in 1884 by Lord Northbrook. The latter picture was engraved by Bartolozzi, and it is probably the 'Venus chiding Cupid' painted in 1776, and sold to Sir B. Boothby, and afterwards purchased of him by Sir T. Bernard, who lent it to the British Institution in 1813. The point is open to question, and Walpole's comment on the "chiding" picture at the Academy in 1771, that it is "charming, but the drawing faulty," would apply to either Sir J. D. Linton's or Lord Northbrook's Reynolds. A third Cupid is in a picture that belonged to Lord Charlemont in 1865. The carnations of No. 4 are florid, rather heavily painted, and approach the "brandy-bottle" type exemplified in 'Hercules strangling the Serpent.' The Portrait of Mrs. Treby (12), a not quite finished life-size bust in white, is attractive, owing to the dainty and refined air and expression of the high-bred face, the taste of the coiffure and dress. The ermine robe and the flesh tints assort charmingly. Mr. Treby was a great man at Plimpton, and his wife was a "Trelawny of the old descent." The picture, with this name, was unknown till now, and, being incomplete, has doubtless not been exhibited before. The Portrait of Lady Wray (16) is a mediocre Reynolds, and the present condition of the face suggests that it has been made "beautiful for ever." Mr. W. Lee lent it as No. 2 to the Academy in 1882. The lady sat in April, 1767, and her picture was the subject of a note in Reynolds's book, "Lady Wray to be framed in oval, and sent to Sir Cecil Wray, at Sommer Castle, near Lincoln, May 18"; and, again, to the effect that it had been painted with wax, Venice turpentine, and pigments ground in oil. Lady L. Phipps and her Son (18) was painted about 1758-59, and its rosy tints have mostly vanished, leaving the solid and careful underpainting of bluish colour and grey quite sound. The lady was the eldest daughter of John, Lord Herry, and wife of the first Lord Mulgrave. "Master Phipps," probably the boy before us, sat to Reynolds five times in June, 1757. This group has not been seen before, perhaps because there was no exhibition until 1760, the year after it was finished. The next Reynolds, Boy with Bunch of Grapes (24), is much better known, and lately became the property of Sir C. Tennant, who showed his taste in buying a picture in such perfect condition, and in which the drawing is unusually good and the modelling solid, while the wondering look of the boyish eyes, seen through the shadow of the drooping mass of curling hair which falls upon his forehead, is particularly charming. The drapery of white and saffron is painted with firm and sweeping touches by a powerful brush. The analogous 'Boy eating Grapes,' which Spilbury engraved after Sir Joshua, and which, as Dr. Hamilton noticed, was so named by Northcote when the property of "Sir J. F. Leicester, late Mr. Shelley's," is nearly naked and there is a basket of grapes on a table. The picture before us is, technically speaking, the best Reynolds in the galleries, although it is, perhaps, the least ambitious.

One of the best known of Sir Joshua's portraits, the three-quarters-length, life-size figure of Sir Jeffery Amherst (127), has never appeared to us very interesting, except for its subject, good condition, and vigour. Sir Jeffery is supposed to be looking at the landscape, which represents one of the scenes of his exploits in Canada, with the St. Lawrence and boats full of troops, and this background is a fine example of the master's great success in that sort of painting, a success which several other pictures on the adjoining wall here go to prove. Although quite middle-aged when he sat to Reynolds for this picture, in May, 1765, the old soldier survived his painter, and was more than eighty years of age when he died, August 3rd, 1797. There is a small equestrian portrait of him by Sir Joshua, which Sir F. Bourgeois bought at the artist's sale in 1796; it next belonged to the Countess of Essex (Miss Stephens), and was lent to the Academy in 1870. The picture before us has been for 130 years a heirloom at Riverhead. In 1766 James Watson made from it one of his capital mezzotints. It first appeared in public with the Reynoldses collected at the British Institution in 1813, as 'Portrait of Lord Amherst,' and again in 1843; it was at the National Portrait Exhibition of 1867, and at the Grosvenor Gallery in 1884, and is a capital specimen of Reynolds's solid manner. A certain dryness and greyness differentiate it from such contemporary Reynoldses as 'Lady C. Beauclerk,' 'Miss Murray' (which was lately here), 'Lord Pembroke,' and 'Lord North.' Mrs. J. Powys and her Daughter (128) are dressed, according to Reynolds's custom at the period (1777) when the work was painted, in warm white semi-classic draperies, enriched with gold, pink, and red. The chromatic scheme is pleasing enough to place the picture in the first rank, in that respect, among the artist's productions. The charm of its coloration remains, despite some failure of the roses of the flesh, and originally it must have been a choice piece, its brightness and its gay tints helping it to be highly attractive. Nevertheless it had not been seen till 1824, when the then Earl of Denbigh, the lady's descendant, lent it to the British Institution; the late earl lent it, in 1873, to the Academy, and again, in 1891, to the New Gallery. In Reynolds's pocket-book we find entered under February, 1778, a second payment of 112*l.* 1*7s.* 6*d.* for "Mrs. Powis, for Self and Daughter." Such a price as 22*5*l. for two life-size whole-length figures like these would disgust a fashionable portrait painter of our time. The child lived till 1852, one of the last survivors of Sir Joshua's sitters. The design is marked by the artificial pose of the figures, their somewhat affected air, and false graces; only the faces and hands are by Reynolds. The admirably painted and ably modelled draperies are clearly, apart from their general character and disposition, not the accomplished work of poor Peter Toms, R.A., the President's ablest and most tasteful drapery painter, whose sense of style, feeling for colour, and firm handling are not to be detected in this creditable piece of work, or in 'Mrs. Carnac' (131) and 'Lady Sunderlin' (134), in which the draperies are undoubtedly by the craftsman of No. 128. Marchi was probably the drapery painter employed.

Mrs. Carnac (131), a famous portrait in its way, was painted by Sir Joshua in 1777-8, and except, perhaps, as an anonymous 'Portrait of a Lady,' not exhibited until the late Sir Richard Wallace lent it to the Bethnal Green Museum in 1872. It is well known through the capital mezzotint, 'Published June 10th 1778 by J. R. Smith No 10 Batemans Buildings Soho Square,' a print so popular that it exists in four states, and lastly bore the imprimatur of H. Humphrey, of New Bond Street. The plate is believed to be still in existence, but it is deplorably worn. The only daughter of Mr. Thomas Rivett, of Derby, M.P., the lady was well known in the ton in the third quarter of the last century, and distinguished by her good taste and accomplishments; she married a brilliant officer in the East India Company's army, who, after many exploits, died in 1800. The picture is, despite its somewhat artificial graces and minuterie, a charming illustration of the times when the "hoop and hood" were beginning to go out of fashion—a result which was, perhaps, partially due to the influence of Reynolds at the period of this portrait, when he greatly affected such quasi-classic draperies as enhance the figures of Mrs. Powys, Mrs. Carnac, and Lady Sunderlin, figures which, it is permitted to suspect, were sometimes improved by the artist: at least, the figures of the matrons, as well as the maids, Reynolds painted at this epoch are so strikingly alike as to suggest the influence of the models, if not of the lay figures with whom Peter Toms and his fellows were closeted in the back regions of the house in Leicester Fields. The draperies have nothing of the somewhat harsh and dry modelling of Northcote, who, besides, left Reynolds in 1776, and they glow with clear warmth, being in harmony with the bright and pure flesh tints of the lady, and the truly fine landscape, in which we recognize the hand and poetic feeling of Reynolds himself. The late Lord Hertford gave, in 1861, 1,79*5*l. 10*s.* for 'Mrs. Carnac.' It is in excellent condition, and, if not quite intact, has been most ably restored. This picture belongs to the period of 'The Dilettanti Society' groups, 'The Countess of Powis' (which Val. Green engraved), 'Master and Miss Parker' (belonging to Lord Morley), and 'The Young Fortune-Tellers' (which was till lately at Blenheim, and was lent by Sir C. Tennant to the Academy in 1891). We refer to these fine contemporaries of 'Mrs. Carnac' because the painting of the draperies in each of them is curiously different from that of Nos. 128, 131, and 134, which, as we have remarked, closely resemble each other. Lady Sunderlin (134) was painted in June, 1788, or ten years later than 'Mrs. Carnac,' and under similar conventions which detract so much from the undoubted merits of the pictures they were employed upon that the portraits excite but a languid sort of interest in the minds of any but experts. The schemes of the tones, coloration, designs at large, and even attitudes and expressions, though these pictures extended over a considerable period of Reynolds's practice, differ from each other only owing to the personal characters of the sitters, and to the greater or less warmth of the lighting of the canvases. 'Lady Sunderlin' was painted with 'Lady Elizabeth Foster, now at Chatsworth, and the still more renowned 'Simplicity,' in the flesh of which we recognize Sir Joshua's touch to be slightly less firm than before. 'Lord Heathfield,' now in the National Gallery, was at the Academy in the year 'Lady Sunderlin' was painted. It must not be forgotten, however, that 'Lord Heathfield' is now, as a piece of flesh painting, very different from what it was originally, while the flesh of 'The Sleeping Girl,' now at Broadlands, which resembles that of 'Lady Sunderlin,' proves the comparatively unimpaired condition of both the examples. The next Reynolds, Lady Frances Marham (136), was at the Academy in 1777 as "No. 283. Portrait of a Lady." It seems to have received additional touches of Spanish red on the cheeks, and to have been otherwise not unskillfully repaired. Painted in November, 1776, it belongs to the same class as the whole-length portraits of ladies we have already mentioned. The account-book of Reynolds records the receipts on "Nov., 1776, Lady Frances Marham, 75*l*. 5*s*., a first payment, and "Oct., 1777, 75*l*., a second and final instalment. A three-quarters-length version of this portrait was lent by the late Earl of Carnarvon to the British Institution in 1851, and to the Grosvenor Gallery in 1884; that before us is, doubtless, the original and more important picture. It was at the Academy a second time in 1875, and, as No. 256, lent by the Earl of Romney. It now belongs to Lord Burton. Reynolds painted the lady's husband and his sisters, a group of whole-length figures, and, for the Society of Arts, his father, Lord Romney, a whole-length in peer's robes, which is now in the Adelphi. Portraits, all by Reynolds, of the lady before us have been exhibited under her maiden name, under the family name of her husband, and under the title to which he attained. She sat as "Lady Frances Marham" for this portrait, and it ought to be called so still. The last of the Reynoldses we have to notice is the half-length figure of the ill-starred Francis, Marquis of Tavistock (137), husband of the Lady Elizabeth, one of the fair Keppels, who is said to have died of grief at his death from a fall from his horse while he was hunting near Dunstable, March 22nd, 1767. No. 137 was painted between August, 1765, and February, 1766, and till a few years ago remained at Quiddensham; it was at the Grosvenor Gallery in 1885. The Duke of Marlborough has, or had, another portrait of this young nobleman by Reynolds. J. Watson mezzotinted one of these portraits, with a statuette on the table, on which the sitter leans his elbow.

F. Cotes, a capital portrait painter, whose reputation has been obscured by the greater celebrity of his contemporaries, was born three years after Sir Joshua. The Academy might do worse than collect a representative group by the able painter of Lord Burton's portrait of Master Smith (38). It is noteworthy because of its careful and learned painting and sincerity rather than on account of any spontaneity or verve. Somewhat cold and unsympathetic as it is, the picture indicates why its skilful painter failed to touch a world which turned to greater masters, though it did not quite abandon him. Good as it is, one sees that Cotes never put a thing into his pictures which he did not find in the externals of his sitters; on the other hand, you might rely on him for a likeness.

It is pleasant to turn from Cotes's commonplace to Gainsborough's brilliant productions, nine in number, and including landscapes as well as portraits. The anonymous Portrait of a Lady (22), lent by Mr. Joseph, is not a particularly good example; the carnations are, for Gainsborough, unusually waxy, if not opaque, although at the period of this work the master commonly exaggerated, rather than otherwise, the freshness and clearness of his flesh painting. The picture may have been repaired, a perilous, though sometimes inevitable proceeding with a Gainsborough. It is, of course, impossible to trace its history. A Page (31) is a large, vividly coloured, life-size sketch in the manner of 'The Blue Boy,' though much looser and worse drawn. He wears a Van Dyck vest and breeches of very bright light blue, luminously painted, white stockings, and a wide collar, over which his long dark brown hair is trailing. That it has preserved the splendour of its colours is, doubtless, due to Gainsborough's use of copal whenever he desired luminosity of this kind. Would that Sir Joshua had always done the like! No such picture with this title is known to collectors of Gainsboroughs, yet it has every claim to be by him, and, despite its slightness, deserves a high place among pictures such as 'The Blue Boy' (Master Buttall); 'The Pink Boy' (Master Nicholls, which was here in 1879); 'The Scarlet Boy' (Master Wade); and 'John Plampin' in a white Van Dyck dress—all of which were splendid tours de force of colour and luminosity, such as neither Reynolds nor Romney cared to attempt, and of which the latter at least was incapable. Miss Haverfield (34), a choice Gainsborough from the collection of Lady Wallace, represents, at full length and at life size, a pretty and naive child, walking in a landscape, wearing a huge white hat covered with bows, and in the act of tying with both hands the string of the black cloak which partly covers her white frock. The mass of rich and broken black in the cloak was managed with characteristic skill and taste; the colour of the flesh is beautiful and true, and it is almost intact, although the picture is certainly not less than a hundred and twenty years old. It was probably inspired by Reynolds's 'Lady Caroline Montagu-Scott,' another little girl wearing a black cloak over a white dress, which dates from 1777. Nothing is recorded of the history of this capital example, except that, as 'The Morning Walk,' it was sold with the pictures of Mr. Haverfield in 1859 for 750*l*. It had a companion in 'The Evening Walk,' a portrait of a little Miss Fox.

The Portrait of Queen Charlotte (99), which the Corporation of Abingdon has lent, is one of those presentation pieces which kings delight to bestow on loyal public bodies. As her Majesty was born in 1744, it is manifest that she must have been much older in 1794, the date on the picture, than the portrait represents her to be; besides this and the wooden painting throughout, of which not even the face seems to be wholly Gainsborough's, we are a little disturbed by recollecting that the artist died in 1788. If its date is right, No. 99 must be the copy it seems to be. It is not for a moment to be compared with the masterpiece at Buckingham Palace, painted in 1781, which was here in 1876, and No. 57 at the Guelph Exhibition, 1891. The Portrait of the Hon. Mrs. Thicknesse (101) is extremely interesting to all Gainsborough's admirers, because it evidently represents a devoted player on the mandolin and viol-di-gamba, one of the wives of that vain and exacting patron of whom we have read so much in the memoirs of the painter, and who wrote the 'Sketch of the Life of T. Gainsborough.' To the astonishment of the world, Mr. Thicknesse published his own memoir, an exhibition of spite, jealousy, and folly not often attempted, and this is the portrait referred to in his account of his quarrel with the irritable artist, when he said that it had been sent from Bath, c. 1760, by the carrier Wiltshire, wrapped up in a large landscape, "put as a case to protect it." Gainsborough adding, in his letter which accompanied the works, "I now return you many thanks for having procured me the favour of her sitting to me; it has done me service, and I know it [the portrait] will give you pleasure." The portrait before us is in fine condition, brilliantly painted, in its effect and coloration rather spotty, a remarkable example of brush-power, luminous, gaily coloured, and charming in the silvery sheen of the dark grey, much-bedoued silk dress. Her "fine lady" air and other indications of vanity are reproduced with rare humour, likewise the touches of artificial bloom in her cheeks. We are inclined to think that it is a portrait of Thicknesse's second wife, better known as Miss Ann Ford, a capital professional musician and player on the mandolin, and not of Mary, daughter of James Touchet, fifth (not sixth, as the Catalogue has it) Earl of Castlehaven, by whom Thicknesse became "unhappily," as he called it, the father of George, fifteenth Baron Audley. The Hon. Mary was married in 1749 and died in 1762. Here is the ancient viol-di-gamba, made in 1612, with which Gainsborough fell in love, and, it is said, privately bought of the lady for a hundred guineas, while her fidgety spouse imagined the price to be his own portrait painted by the master, which was actually begun, but, a sharp squabble intervening, the latter returned the instrument and put the unfinished canvas away rather than pay twice over for his fancy. Miss Ann Ford's portrait by Gainsborough was last publicly sold, with that title, in 1870 for 525*l*. It seems to have been renamed since then, and the renaming is, we suspect, an error. The Portrait of C. P. Abel (104) is undoubted and much better known. It is a life-size, whole-length figure, seated, with a bright and genial expression, which is in keeping with the capital musician's intimate relations with Gainsborough. First-rate colour and painting are seen in the saffron satin vest and brown cloth coat, with frags of gold silk, which he wears. At his feet is his white Pomeranian dog, which Gainsborough painted as often as Reynolds his gaudy macaw. At his side is the viol-di-gamba, on which he was a famous player, and which Gainsborough bought of him. "Abel's viol-di-gamba," said Jackson of Exeter, "was purchased, and the house resounded with melodious thirds and fifths." Walpole thought this portrait of Abel, which he saw at the Academy in 1777, "very like and well," and, a rare circumstance at that period, it bore the name of the sitter, 'Mr. Abel.' Mr. Cummings lent the picture to the Grosvenor Gallery in 1885, in the catalogue of which the reader will find, under No. 46, many details of this capital work, as well as, under No. 113, an account of the Pomeranian dog and her puppy. Reynolds as well as Gainsborough is said to have painted the dog. The Portrait of Frederick, Lord North (132), is well known. So is the last of the Gainsboroughs before us, the very interesting Portrait of ("Perdita") Mrs. Robinson (139), in which Abel's dog (or the puppy) appears again. Exquisite harmony is to be observed in the white muslin dress, with a bronze undertint, and the blue scarf. The peculiar bloom of the face and the "amorous lidded eyes" belong to the lady and the painter alike. Reynolds, Romney, and Gainsborough painted her each more than once; her best portrait is by the last, and at Windsor. The picture before us has not been exhibited till now, so far as we know; Mr. Espinasse sent a three-quarters picture of her by Gainsborough to the National Portrait Exhibition, 1868.

PICTISH SYMBOLISM.

Bournemouth, Dec. 27, 1893.

IN reference to the notice of my book 'The Origins of Pictish Symbolism' in last week's Athenæum, may I point out that the writer seems to have somewhat misapprehended my meaning, where he states that one of my arguments is "arbitrary,"—viz., that in which I observe that "the Oriental theory would relegate the origin of our [the Pictish] monuments to an unduly remote antiquity, by necessitating a prehistoric date for the arrival of the hypothetical Asiatic missionaries,"—seeing that, as I must know, "Celtic coins have been found in Scandinavia, in Orkney, and as far south as Lancashire.....[so that] there must have been some intercourse, however slight, between Scotland and the East as late, at any rate, as the tenth century A.D."

I have not denied that Oriental ideas may have influenced the inventors of the symbolism—e.g., see the foot-note on p. 38, "To dispute the possibility of a remote and indirect Oriental origin for the symbolism is no part of my argument," and again (p. 4), "The Oriental Theory.....in one sense stands above dispute...the East is the parent of mysteries, all occult science worth mention being ultimately traceable to Egyptian or Mesopotamian origins,"—my argument in the passage quoted by your reviewer is solely directed against the hypothesis advanced by so many writers, that a band of Buddhists or other Oriental missionaries penetrated through Europe to Pictavia, and introduced a ready-made symbolism. Such a mission, granting its possibility, could not, I contend, have taken place unnoticed in the historic times to which, if I am right, the symbolism must be held to belong.

But further, assuming that any number of Oriental objects may have passed into Pictland, through Scandinavia or otherwise, I argue (p. 5) that "neither in the architectural decorations, nor on the coins and gems of any part of India.....nor anywhere on the continent of Asia," are the symbols to be found "as they appear in our own land," and consequently, whatever their indirect origin, that the symbols were not imported from the East in that form, but were developed elsewhere, and almost certainly in Pictavia itself. According to my argument (pp. 8, 81), the invention of these symbols could not be placed at a later date than c. 450 A.D.; and, assuming this, discoveries of Cufic coins and other objects belonging to periods extending thence to the tenth century have no relevancy in the question. My book concerns itself almost solely (see pp. 1, 7) with those symbols that appear on the rude natural boulders of the earlier period, inscribed with mystical objects incised in outline and devoid of all traces of Christianity, to which I assign the date of c. 450-600 A.D.; I only incidentally deal with the hewn and dressed monuments which bear the Christian cross along with the symbols and many other objects, cut in relief, and richly decorated—works belonging to the period 600-842 A.D., or in some cases, perhaps, to an even later date. Several of these Christian monuments bear designs of Byzantine and semi-Oriental character, which are in no way connected with the ancient Pictish symbolism.

SOUTHERN.

AN ENGRAVED RUBY.

Science and Art Museum, Dublin.

It was with no little interest that I heard some months ago of the existence of a large precious stone, which was stated to have certain Persian characters engraved upon it. Through the kindness of Lady Carew, to whom it belongs, I have recently had an opportunity of examining this remarkable uncut ruby, for such it proves to be. So fine a stone deserves to be recorded, and I write the following in the hope that we may hereafter be able to trace more of its earlier, or rather its intermediate, history.

The time and the facilities at my disposal when the inscription was being read and the stone modelled did not admit of a crystallographic examination, nor could its specific gravity be taken, which would have decided the question as to whether it is a spinel or a corundum ruby. A jeweller who examined it, however, has given it as his opinion that it is a true ruby. This question will, I hope, be settled on some future occasion. Owing to a small attached mount, an allowance had to be made by the jeweller above referred to in estimating the weight of the stone; but it may be taken at about 130 carats. The length is 1·62 in., and the greatest breadth ·91 in. The stone, like many other well-known Oriental rubies, is pierced from end to end along its greatest diameter. The general form is somewhat pear-shaped; but there are numerous irregularities, and on four of the smoother surfaces there are engraved characters as follows:—

- (1) اکبر شاهی
Akbar Shahi.
- (2) شاه اکبر جهانگیر شاه
Shah Akbar, Jahangir Shah.
1021 A.H. (=1612 A.D.)
- (3) صاحب قران سانی
Sahib Quiran Sani.
1039 A.H. (=1629 A.D.)
- (4) عالمگیر شاهی
Alamgir Shahi.
1070 A.H. (=1659 A.D.)

I am indebted to Prof. Mir Aulud Ali, of Trinity College, Dublin, for his aid in revising a previous reading which appeared to me to be doubtful, although the characters are very sharp and beautifully cut. From them the following may be deduced. The ruby probably belonged (1) to Akbar, (2) to his son Jahangir, and (3) to his son again, Shah Jahan, who is indicated by the title Sahib Quiran Sani (i.e., the second lord of the conjunction). Lastly, it seems to have belonged to Alamgir Shah, i.e., Aurangzeb, at about the time of his accession, viz., 1659. Two of these inscriptions (Nos. 2 and 3) are almost identical with the two which were on an engraved diamond, sometimes called Jahangir's, before it was recut. Copies of that stone are to be seen in some collections of diamond models; but the account of it published in several works on diamonds and precious stones is full of misreadings and other inaccuracies.

It is probable that both the diamond and the ruby passed into Persia as part of Nadir Shah's loot in 1739. On the murder of Nadir Shah, on the death of Karim Khan, and on other occasions of disturbance, jewels have disappeared from the treasures of the successive monarchs of Persia, and this ruby was probably one of them. I am not at present prepared to identify it with any of the rubies which have been recorded, as the evidence is not sufficient; but it may be pointed out that Malcolm relates how Aga Mohammed Khan tortured Shah Rukh in order to obtain from him "Aurangzeb's" ruby. Then we have Lord Pollington's statement, which is repeated in Mr. Curzon's recent work on Persia, that Aurangzeb's ruby is one of the present ornaments of the Shah's crown. But I venture to suggest that the large ruby so referred to may really be one known long before Aurangzeb's time.

An engraved ruby, said to have had Aurangzeb's name upon it (on the somewhat doubtful testimony of Murray), was figured by the Hon. Miss Eden with the Koh-i-Nur and other jewels belonging to Ranjit Singh. It was, however, of quite a different shape from the stone at present under consideration. I hope to discuss this question more fully on another occasion. In the mean time, perhaps some of your readers may be able to supply the missing links in the history of the stone.

The ruby was purchased from a merchant in Teheran, before the year 1870, by Her Majesty's minister, Mr. C. Alison, C.B., Lady Carew's uncle; and it is now in her possession, being worn as a pendant to a gold chain, which was specially made for it.

V. BALL.

P.S.—Since the above was written, my inquiries have led to the discovery of a model and wax impressions of another and larger ruby —it no longer exists, having been cut—but it had the same four names on it as has Lady Carew's ruby. I hope to describe and figure them both fully hereafter.

Just-It Gossy.

Mr. Hook has made much progress with two or three pictures of coast scenes in the north of England, where he spent the recess; these, if not other works left unfinished last year, when he contributed but one canvas to Burlington House, will enable him to send this season at least his customary four subjects, if not more. The new rules, should they come in force, will restrict the Academicians to six works, and outsiders, with some exceptions, to four in all.

BETWEEN February and Easter Judge Thomas Hughes will visit Rugby for the unveiling of his portrait, which Mr. Lowes Dickinson has painted as the first of a series of likenesses of notabilities associated with the school, including those of Stanley, Matthew Arnold, and A. H. Clough, and intended to be continued as subscriptions and occasion may arise. During the present month the picture may be seen by past and present members of the school at the artist's studio, No. 1, All Souls' Place, Portland Place. It is a capital and animated likeness, full of character and faithful, as all the painter's pictures are. It is also life size. The author of 'Tom Brown's School Days,' at half length, is seated in a chair, bare-headed, wearing a brown overcoat trimmed with fur, and, with crossed knees, turned in three-quarters view to our right. Subscriptions for other portraits are desired.

THE New Gallery's Exhibition of Early Italian Art, which opened to the public on Monday last, contains, amid a good deal of archaic rubbish, not a few pictures of a high class, especially Botticelli's, an Antonello da Messina which no one should overlook, a Bronzino of good quality, a Franciabigio, some capital Ghirlandaios (of which a lovely 'Portrait of a Lady,' No. 159, lent by Lord Crawford, cannot be admired too much), two or three Lippis, "Raphael's" we must not too criticize, and specimens of other admirable masters, none of them above the average. Besides these treasures, the gallery is crowded—indeed, we think undesirably so—with furniture, medals, plate, decorative bronzes, armour, carvings, ceramics, ivories, embroideries, illuminated MSS., printed books, and drawings. Altogether, since the great and comprehensive collection of Mediaeval Art, so called, which was held at South Kensington in the "fifties," we do not know of an English exhibition devoted to the art and art-craftsmanship of from 1300 to 1550 which has equalled this one. The catalogue is a mere descriptive list, sometimes not so much as that, and neither historical nor critical. We shall hope to say something more about the exhibition next week.

A HOST of friends will be glad to hear that the health of Mr. T. Faed having considerably improved, he has, at least partially, and in an important degree, recovered his sight. We hope to have pictures of his at the next Academy exhibition.

At the gallery of Messrs. H. Graves & Co. may be seen a collection of sporting pictures and others by Mr. D. Adams.

By an oversight we spoke last week of Mr. H. S. Milman as a son, instead of a nephew, of the late Dean of St. Paul's.

MUSIC

NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

Echoes: a Musical Birthday Book. Selected and arranged by Eleanor Brett. (Leadenhall Press.)—This quarto volume contains 366 brief extracts, from about six to about twenty bars each, from almost every conceivable source, either composed or arranged for the pianoforte, with blank spaces for names or inscriptions. No particular method seems to have been followed in making selections. The Christmas hymn "Adeste fideles" appears on March 4th, and Christmas Day itself oddly associated with one of Haydn's minuets. A "Papillon" of Schumann is placed against May Day, which is, to say the least, rather premature; and Schubert's "Der Tod und das Mädchen" looks grim and inappropriate on the 24th of the same month, which, by the way, is the Queen's birthday. But if there is little evidence of design in the excerpts, the book itself is well got up, and is, therefore, suitable as a birthday present.

Musical Kindergarten, by Carl Reinecke, Op. 206, Book 9, Part 2 (Augener & Co.), contains ten brief sketches in the industrious Leipzig composer's best style, arranged both as solos and duets. They are intended for moderately advanced players.—Trois (Tanzstücke), by S. Noskowski, are elegantly written pieces, and have the character of song-transcriptions.—Far simpler are Feuilles Volantes, by C. Gurliitt, a series of twelve little pieces after the style of Schumann's "Kinderscenen".—Those who need new piquant and unpretentious pieces for four hands will probably be pleased with Trois Nouvelles Danes Espagnoles, by Anton Streletzki. By the same prolific composer we have Nos. 51 to 63 of Morceaux pour Piano, a series of agreeable salon trifles written in an artistic style, and mostly in dance rhythm.—Dorfmusik is the title of eighteen little sketches by Richard Kleinmichel, certain to please juvenile pianists owing to their attractive titles and general brightness. Nothing better for young players has been issued for some time than this series of "village scenes," which, it should be added, are published as separate pieces.—Short Original Pieces consist of twenty-five compositions, averaging perhaps twenty bars, by Reinecke, Gurliitt, Krause, Pauer, Scharwenka, Schumann, Mendelssohn, and other composers of mark.—More elaborate, though not very difficult, are Four Characteristic Pieces issued in one book, by Charles Wood, Op. 6, at once genial and musicianly, and noteworthy for touches of contrapuntal ingenuity.—Sonatina in G, by A. Laubach, is an unpretending work in two symmetrically written movements, the style being that of the Hummel-Dumek period. The same composer's Valse Caprice is far more modern and more difficult, though it is marked moderato.—A pleasing piece of a sentimental character, with the melody partly in the left hand, is Chant des Naviads, by George Mart; and Rondo Scherzando con Moto Perpetuo and Die Lori vom Berge, by F. Kirchner, may be commended as easy and agreeable sketches.—Anthologie Classique et Moderne is the title of a series of standard compositions, the examples before us containing respectively Beethoven's "Twelve Variations on a Russian Dance" and "Nine Variations on 'Quant à Bello.'"—Messrs. Augener also send twelve of Haydn's symphonies, admirably arranged for four hands by Max Pauer; Beethoven's symphonies, No. 1 in C, and No. 2 in D, equally well transcribed by E. Pauer; a new edition of twelve sonatinas in two books by Clementi, phrased and fingered by Dr. Hugo Riemann; transcriptions of Mendelssohn's overtures to "The Wedding of Camacho" and "Athalia," by E. Pauer; and a new edition, from the same hand, of Sterndale Bennett's Concerto in F minor, No. 4, with a compressed score of the accompaniments to be used on a second pianoforte.

Musical Society.

A NEW volume of extracts from the works of Mr. Ruskin is in preparation, in the shape of a collection of all his scattered sayings about the art of music. The volume is to be edited by Miss Mary Wakefield, who adds to her distinction as a musician the qualification of being a neighbour and friend of Mr. Ruskin's in North Lancashire.

THE New Year's Day performance of "The Messiah" at the Albert Hall was in some respects very successful. The audience was exceptionally large, and the choruses were exceptionally well sung, Sir Joseph Barnby taking some of the florid numbers at a more moderate tempo than usual. The principal vocalists were Madame Albani, Madame Belle Cole, Mr. Philip Newbury, and Mr. Plunket Greene. Mr. Newbury has a tenor voice of very fine quality, and he sings with intelligence, but he needs some lessons in elocution.

THE financial report concerning the recent Norwich Festival has been issued, and shows very satisfactory results. The receipts were greater than at any previous festival in the east-country town for nearly thirty years, and notwithstanding the increased expenditure on account of the chorus and the engagement of M. Paderewski and Señor Sarasate, there remained a surplus of £261.

AN orchestral and vocal society in connexion with the Imperial Institute is in course of formation. Communications from those willing to join, either as acting or non-acting members, should be addressed to the secretary of the society at the Institute.

A NEW volume of Liszt's letters is about to be published by Messrs. Breitkopf & Härtel, under the editorship of Frau Marie Lipsius. The letters were addressed to a lady who was formerly a pupil of the Weimar virtuoso.

THE Musical Times, which will complete a half-century of its existence in June next, is now enlarged to seventy-two pages, and much improved in appearance. Supplements, consisting of compositions for church choir or choral societies, will be frequently presented.

M. CHARRIER's opera "Gwendoline" was produced in Paris last week, and appears to be extremely successful. The book in some respects resembles that of Wagner's "Der Fliegende Holländer," and the music is said to be rather advanced in character. The production of "Tristan and Isolde" for the first time in French, with Mesdames Bréval and Deschamps-Johin and MM. Jean de Reszke and Delmas, is therefore postponed until next autumn.

THE popularity of Smetana's operas is rapidly increasing in Germany, "Die verkaufte Braut" and "Der Kuss" being equally successful wherever they have been produced.

HERR MAX BRUCH has just published a new cantata, entitled "Loonidas," for baritone solo, male chorus, and orchestra.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.
Mon. Popular Concert, 4, St. James's Hall.
Tue. Symphonic Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Wed. Popular Concert, 4, St. James's Hall.

DRAMA

Life and Art of Edwin Booth. By William Winter. (Fisher Unwin.)

SINGULARLY little is known in England of that American stage of yesterday and to-day of which Mr. Winter has constituted himself the historian. Not a few of the more celebrated actors have visited and played in this country. Edwin Booth himself has been more than once among us, and Joseph Jefferson, John E. Owens, "Billy" Florence, and a score of other excellent comedians have given us a taste of their quality; while one comic actor of remarkable abilities, John S. Clarke, all but took up his abode in our midst.

To the fact that most of these artists played amidst unfamiliar surroundings, in pieces difficult of comprehension to Englishmen, and with companies incapable of doing justice to American humour, must be attributed the fact that few of them attained a reputation in England equal to that assigned them in their own country. We are not now speaking of such later arrivals as Miss Rehan and the Daly Company, Mr. Mansfield, and others. Of artists such as Burton, Burke, and Clara Fisher, whose names are as immortal as those of Munden, Liston, and Mrs. Nisbett, we know nothing except by report. It is to be hoped that Mr. Winter may carry out a scheme he once meditated in connexion with the man whose biographer he now is, and supply a full record concerning these worthies.

The position of Edwin Booth in America is foremost. If any rivalry is to be dreaded, it is not that of our Macready or Irving nor of Forest or Wallack; it is that of his father, "the elder Booth," whose adolescence in his art belongs to England, and his manhood to America. Next to Cooke and Kean, Junius Brutus Booth appears to have been the most inspired of tragedians. Some of his readings are preserved, and imitations of his style convey an idea of superb, if in a sense undisciplined power, and of a strange and wayward genius. From this man, whose portrait is far the most striking in Mr. Winter's fully illustrated book, Edwin Booth inherited what was highest in his art and most infirm in his nature. A man ordinarily of reserved habits, he was subject to periodical fits of gloom, directly transmitted from his father. Domestic conditions were calculated to foster melancholy, and the brilliant success which attended him did little to cheer his life. Like the greatest modern actors among ourselves, Macready, Phelps, Irving, he was an admirable character actor, good, as are all these, in parts such as Wolsey, Richelieu, and Iago; acceptable even in Bertuccio in Taylor's emasculated rendering of "Le Roi s'amuse"; and more than acceptable in Hamlet. Mr. Winter says that he was a tragedian. This gives us pause. Mr. Winter's opportunities are unexampled, since he has witnessed practically Booth's entire career, and his opinion is in a sense authoritative. Appreciation, however—one of the most indispensable of gifts for a critic—is in Mr. Winter's case carried to extreme. The most eloquent and poetical of qualifying phrases descend from Mr. Winter's gracious pen. We thus read that "the salient attributes of Booth's art were imagination, insight, grace, intense emotion, and melancholy refinement," and "the controlling attribute—that which imparted individual character, colour, and fascination to his acting—was the thoughtful introspective habit of a stately mind, abstracted from passion, and suffused with mournful dreaminess of temperament." Now, rhapsodical as this is, we find no fault with it. It conveys even an idea, and a just idea, of what was distinguishing in Booth's art. It is none the less apotheosis. A similar strain of eulogy is maintained, and it is not confined to Booth. So keen is the love of Mr. Winter for the profession he has watched, and so wrapt up is he in its followers and all that appertains to it, that he is less a critic than a priest. He is fervent, eloquent, earnest, pious, unconvincing—unconvincing, that is, to those whose familiarity with the subject is approximate to his own. Mean time his biography of Booth is a great advance upon most similar work. From the scandalous memoirs struck off immediately after the death of the subject by Curll to the jejune biographies of Boaden, lives of actors are inaccurate, insincere, unedifying. Campbell's life of Siddons is a piece of literary hack work. Barry Cornwall's 'Kean' is delightful, but inadequate. Mr. Fitzgerald's 'Garriek' is an apology for a man and an account of an epoch. As such it comes nearest to Mr. Winter's book, which is only not an apology because there is nothing to defend. Yet it is a melancholy tale of joyless triumph that Mr. Winter tells. He brings his subject before us as artist and man, he writes a book that for subject and treatment is alike delightful, and he furnishes interesting revelations of the American stage in the time of its highest glory. There are some striking illustrations. The portraits in character are as a rule inferior to those in private dress.

Alan's Wife: a Dramatic Study in Three Scenes. With an Introduction by William Archer. (Henry & Co.)—'Alan's Wife,' first produced at Terry's Theatre, May 2nd, 1893, with Miss Elizabeth Robins as the heroine, constitutes No. 2 of the printed series of plays performed by the Independent Theatre. It is ushered in by an explanatory preface by Mr. J. T. Grein, the editor, followed by a dissertation longer than the play by Mr. William Archer. Interesting, and in a sense important, is the exposition of Mr. Archer's views as to the limits of art. It takes, however, the curious form of a polemic between Mr. Archer, as representative of his own views, and Mr. Walkley, as, for once, the exponent of the more conventional order of criticism. It seems, indeed, as if it were the established order of things in the new school that critic shall call unto critic even as "deep calleth unto deep." It is a not unacceptable form of log-rolling, and is likely to please a limited public. The grim story of infanticide which is told by the anonymous author may be read with interest. Miss Elizabeth Robins, Mr. Grein, and Mr. Archer unite in describing it as of considerable dramatic achievement. We are indisposed to quarrel with the view, but hold, with Mr. Walkley, that it is a class of work of which we may easily have a surfeit.

Old Gamul: a Lyric Play. By Thomas Newbigging. (Fisher Unwin.)—To a well-known story from the 'Gesta Romanorum,' which he has already versified, Mr. Newbigging has given what purports to be a dramatic setting. How far he has succeeded in attempting to produce a play he leaves to the critical reader. He has at least modernized and vulgarized a story which was best left in the original; he has introduced choruses of fairies and the like, supplied a rustic love interest, and furnished lyrics with a certain measure of lilt, but with no higher quality. He has not produced a play. He has, in fact, without making a spoon, spoilt a horn.

Lady Windermere's Fan. By Oscar Wilde. (Mathews & Lane.)—The opinions expressed concerning Mr. Wilde's play at its first production are confirmed upon perusal of the printed volume. It is saucy, clever, amusing, insincere, and unconvincing. The sustained silence of the hero to his wife, and that, moreover, of Mrs.

Erynn to her daughter, though not motiveless, are inadequate in motive; and Mrs. Erynn herself, with her airs and extravagances, is unplesant and unnatural. Forget these things, and the comedy, to which Mr. Wilde has added a second title, 'A Play about a Good Woman,' is entertaining. Not very deep nor perhaps very original is its epigram. It is none the less smart and acceptable; the characters of the play are lifelike, and the satire of modern society goes home. The work is now issued in a form that would have delighted the soul of Sir Benjamin Backbite, of whose compositions it has at least the flippancy. A daintier volume the publishers have not issued.

THE WEEK.

DALY'S.—'The Country Girl,' based by David Garrick on Wycherley's 'Country Wife.' Played in Three Acts.

MISS ADA REHAN'S performance of Peggy Thrift in the revival at Daly's Theatre of 'The Country Girl' has the petulance and the animal spirits characteristic of her performances in comedy. It is too pronounced in scenes, as her impersonations are apt to be, and is lacking in the witchery that has been assigned to Peggy. It is none the less a vivacious and, in a sense, inspired presentation of a romp, and where it goes farthest astray is in scenes introduced into the play by the latest adapter, Mr. Daly, for the express purpose of offering opportunity for exaggeration and of thus quickening the action. When Belville gives the heroine, dressed as a boy, her first lesson in modish life, she benefits by his counsel, and to escape the kiss for which she longs dodges in and out among the promenaders in the park. Beaux and belles, wheeled about her in her impetuous progress, fail to resent her impertinence, and contemplate with amusement her riotous escapades. Tired and out of breath, she throws herself on the seat, and, when her lover catches her, kisses him with as free a heart as ever a London maiden kissed her pursuer in the now almost forgotten revels of Greenwich Fair. This does not belong to last century comedy, but the scene interpolated is not of the time of Molière, Wycherley, or Garrick, through whose hands the comedy successively passed. It is scarcely, we should suppose, of the present time in America. Its interpolation is accordingly a specimen of the mistaken effort now constantly renewed to lighten old comedy with modern farce. In her entire bearing in feminine guise Miss Rehan would have done better had she exhibited more gaucherie and less high spirits. The performance has none the less very genuine power to amuse. Mr. Farren plays Moody in most effective style, and shows the value of the traditions he inherits. Miss Violet Vanbrugh is an agreeable Alithoa; but Mr. George Clarke as Sparkish, Mr. Allan Ayneworth as Belville, and Mr. Herbert Gresham as Harcourt are only moderately successful. The costumes are quaint and fantastic rather than pleasing, yet the whole was received with favour.

Dramatic Gossip.

WHAT is called a "professional matinee" of 'The Headless Man' was given on Tuesday at the Criterion. Mr. Burnand's piece was received with enthusiastic applause by a representative company of actors, including many "lights of the profession." What added special interest to the occasion was the delivery by Mr. Wyndham as Sam Hedley of a speech conceived and spoken in the very spirit of that oblivious personage. This pleasant and witty address was equally novel and amusing.

'A WOMAN'S WON'T' now forms the tear de rideau at Daly's Theatre. In this Miss Isabel Irving is the wife, Mr. Sidney Herbert the husband, Mr. James Lewis the father-in-law, and Mrs. G. H. Gilbert the mother-in-law.

MRS. BERNARD BEERK will appear for a charitable purpose at an afternoon performance at the Criterion in a dramatic study entitled 'Beyond.'

THOUGH much pulled down by his severe illness, Mr. Hare is sufficiently recovered to permit of his performance of the arduous part assigned him in 'An Old Jew,' which will accordingly be produced to-night at the Garrick.

FOR Monday next Mr. Daly promises 'Twelfth Night,' with Miss Ada Rehan as Viola.

A FANCE by Mr. Sapto, entitled 'Uncle's Ghost,' is said to be in contemplation at the Opéra Comique.

AFTER a long spell of success at the Shaftesbury, 'Morocco Bound' has been transferred to the Trafalgar Square.

MISCELLANEA

Forbearance.—This well-known Lowland Scotch word for "ancestors" is ill explained by Jamieson, who entirely misses its etymology, though he records the spelling forbearers, which gives the clue to it. It has nothing to do with the verb to bear, as he supposes. It is precisely fore-beer, i.e., one who is (or exists) before; and is so derived in the 'Century Dictionary.' However, the said dictionary neither proves the point nor explains the spelling. The spelling is due to the use of -ar for -er in Lowland Scotch, which has makar for maker, and the like; the plural being written makaris, later makars, instead of M.E. makers or Mod.E. makers. Hence be-ar stands for be-er, and be-aris or bears is the equivalent of be-ers; formed with the suffix -ar or -er from the verb to be. We actually use the suffix -ar, for clearness, in the word li-ar, because the spelling lier looks dubious. The Scotch for liar was leair or leir. The simplest proof that the old pronunciation is in accord with the etymology is to observe the following lines in Montgomerie's 'Poems,' ed. Cranston (Scot. Text Soc.), p. 211, ll. 213-4:—

Quibk was begun, they said, in their forbear;
Some held thair treu, and others held them lears.

The evidence afforded by this rhyme is so satisfactory that it frees the etymology from all doubt. Jamieson remarks that the first syllable should rather be fore- than for-, which is of course, in any case, true. But his instance is unfortunate. He cites the spelling forbearis from Gawain Douglas; but Small's edition has forbearis, which appears as forbearis in the glossary. Perhaps he found such a spelling in an older edition. Jamieson further remarks that "this word appears in no other language." Nevertheless it is fairly paralleled by the Germ. Forreiser, a prodigal.

WALTER W. SKRAT.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—R. W.—G. E.—A. I.—C. G. D.—R. T.—C. H. E.—F. L. S.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	...	...	...	15	6
For Six Months...	...	...	...	7	6
For all Countries within the Postal Union.
For Twelve Months...	...	...	...	15	0
For Six Months...	...	...	...	9	0

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

MRS. E. B. BROWNING'S
POETICAL WORKS.

Uniform Edition.

SIX VOLUMES, small crown 8vo. 6s. each. This Edition is uniform with the 16-Volume Edition of Mr. Robert Browning's Works. It contains the following Portraits and Illustrations:—
Portrait of Elizabeth Barrett Moulton-Barrett at the Age of Nine—Coxhoe Hall, County of Durham—Portrait of Elizabeth Barrett Moulton-Barrett in Early Youth—Portrait of Mrs. Browning, Rome, February, 1850—Hope End, Herefordshire—Sitting Room in Casa Guidi, Florence—May's Love, Facsimile of Mrs. Browning's Handwriting—Portrait of Mrs. Browning, Rome, March, 1850—Portrait of Mrs. Browning, Rome, 1861—The Tomb of Mrs. Browning in the Cemetery at Florence.
* Vol. VI.—Aurora Leigh—can also be had bound and lettered as a separate volume.

ROBERT BROWNING'S
WORKS.

Uniform Edition.

SIXTEEN VOLUMES, lettered separately, small crown 8vo. 6s. each; or bound in Sets, 4/ the Set.
This Edition contains 3 Portraits of Mr. Browning at different periods of life, and a few Illustrations.

1. Pauline; and Sordello.
2. Paracelsus; and Strafford.
3. Pippa Passes; King Victor and King Charles; The Return of the Dragoon; and A SOLID TRIANGLE. With Portrait of Mr. Browning.
4. A Blot in the 'Scutcheon; Colloquies BIRTHDAY; and MEN and WOMEN.
5. Dramatic Romances; and Christmas Eve and EASTER DAY.
6. Dramatic Lyrics; and Luria.
7. In a Balcony; and Dramatis PERSONÆ. With a Portrait of Mr. Browning.
8. The Ring and the Book. Books 1 to 4. With 7 Illustrations.
9. The Ring and the Book. Books 5 to 8.
10. The Ring and the Book. Books 9 to 12. With a Portrait of Guido Franceschini.
11. Balaustion's Adventure; Prince Hohenstiel-Schwangau, Saviour of Hungary; and FIFTEEN at the FAIR.
12. Red Cotton Night-cap Country; and The INN ALBUM.
13. Arctophanes' Apology, including a TRANSCRIPT from KRYPTIDES, being the LAST ADVENTURE of BALACSTION; and The AGAMEMNON of ÆSCHYLUS.
14. Pacchiarotto, and How he WORKED in DINTENHOF, with other POEMS, LA SALLE, and The TWO PORTS of CROCHIC.
15. Dramatic Idyls, First Series: DRAMATIC IDYLS, Second Series; and JOKESERIA.
16. Perishtah's Fancies; and Parleyings with CERTAIN PEOPLE of IMPORTANCE in THEIR DAY. With a Portrait of Mr. Browning.

Also Mr. BROWNING'S Last Volume,
ASOLANDO: Fancies and Facts.
Ninth Edition. Demy 8vo. 6s.

WORKS

BY LESLIE STEPHEN.

- An Agnostic's Apology, and other Essays.* Large crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.
- Hours in a Library.* New, Revised, Unarranged, and Cheaper Edition, with Additional Chapters. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 6s. each.
- Life of Henry Fawcett.* With Two Steel Portraits. Fifth Edition, large crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.
- A History of English Thought in the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.* Second Edition. 3 vols. demy 8vo. 21s.
- The Science of Ethics: an Essay upon Ethical Theory as Modified by the Doctrine of Evolution.* Demy 8vo. 10s.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE.

PRICE SIXPENCE MONTHLY.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION, INCLUDING POSTAGE TO ANY ADDRESS IN THE POSTAL UNION, EIGHT SHILLINGS, PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

"The 'Cornhill' is the most interesting
of English magazines."

NOTICE.
A NEW SERIAL STORY
By W. E. NORRIS,
Author of 'His Grace,' 'No New Thing, &c., &c.'

ENTITLED MATTHEW AUSTIN, IS COMMENCED IN THE JANUARY NUMBER
OF THE
CORNHILL MAGAZINE.
The same Number contains the Continuation of the POPULAR SERIAL STORY, WITH EDGED TOOLS.
And the usual Complement of interesting Articles upon Miscellaneous Subjects.

PALL MALL
GAZETTE.

The Number is now ready at all Booksellers' and Newsagents'.

A NEW GUIDE TO EMPLOYMENTS FOR WOMEN.

Now ready, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

WHAT OUR DAUGHTERS CAN DO FOR THEMSELVES: a Handbook of Women's Employments. By Mrs. H. COLEMAN DAVIDSON, Author of 'Dainties: English and Foreign,' 'Bake,' &c.

NEW VOLUME OF 'THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'
Now ready, price 15s. net, in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20s. net.
Volume XXXVII. (MASCARRIEN—MILYNG) of

THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.
Edited by SIDNEY LEE.

* Volume I, was published on January 1, 1885, and a further Volume will be issued quarterly until the completion of the work.

NOTE.—A Full Prospectus of 'The Dictionary of National Biography,' with Specimen Pages, may be had upon application.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

THE LIBRARY EDITION.

Twenty-four Volumes large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. each, with Illustrations by the Author, Richard Doyle, and Frederick Walker.

Sets in cloth, 9/; or, in half-russia, 13/ 13s.

CONTENTS OF THE VOLUMES

- VANITY FAIR. A Novel without a Hero. 2 vols. With 40 Steel Engravings and 165 Woodcuts by the Author.
- THE HISTORY OF PENDENNIS: his Fortunes and Misfortunes; his Friends and his Greatest Enemy. 2 vols. With 40 Steel Engravings and numerous Woodcuts by the Author.
- THE NEWCOMES: Memoirs of a most Respectable Family. 2 vols. With 40 Steel Engravings by Richard Doyle, and numerous Woodcuts.
- THE HISTORY OF HENRY ESMOND, Esq. a Colonel in the service of Her Majesty Queen Anne. With 40 Illustrations by George de Mareur, and numerous Woodcuts.
- THE VIRGINIANS: a Tale of the Last Century. 2 vols. With 40 Steel Engravings and numerous Woodcuts by the Author.
- THE ADVENTURES OF PHILIP on his WAY THROUGH THE WORLD, showing how Healed Him who Helped Him and who Tamed Him by. To which is prefixed A SHABBY GENTLE STUNNY. 2 vols. With 25 Illustrations by the Author and Frederick Walker.
- THE PARIS SKETCH-BOOK OF MR. M. A. TITMARN and the MEMOIRS of MR. C. J. YELLOWPLUSH. With Illustrations by the Author.
- THE MEMOIRS OF BARRY LYNDON, Esq. Written by Himself, with THE HISTORY of SAMUEL TITMARN, and THE GREAT HOGGARTY DIAMOND. With Illustrations by the Author.
- THE IRISH SKETCH-BOOK; and Notes of a JOURNEY from CORNHILL to GRAND CAYSTO. With Illustrations by the Author.
- THE BOOK OF SNOBS; SKETCHES and TRIVIALS in LONDON, and CHARACTER SKETCHES. With Illustrations by the Author.
- BURLESQUES:—
Novels by Edmund Randa—Adventures of Major Goshawk—James's History—A Legend of the Rhine—Rebecca and Kenneth—The History of the Next French Revolution—A Diary. With Illustrations by the Author and Richard Doyle.
- CHRISTMAS BOOKS OF MR. A. TITMARN.
Mrs. Ferriar's Hall—Ty Birch—Our Street—The Kitchener's on the Rhine—The Rose and the King. With 16 Illustrations by the Author.
- BALLADS and TALES. With Illustrations by the Author.
- THE FOUR GEOMES; The ENGLISH HUMOURISTS of the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. With Portraits and other Illustrations.
- ROUNDABOUT PAPERS. To which is added the (SECOND) FUNERAL of NAPOLEON. With Illustrations by the Author.
- DENIS DUVAL; LAUREL the WIDOWER; and other Stories. With Illustrations by Frederick Walker and the Author.
- CATHERINE; a Story; LITTLE TRAVEIA THE FITZGIBBONS PAPERS, CRITICAL REVIEW, and THE WOLVES and the LAMB. Illustrations by the Author and a Portrait.
- MISCELLANEOUS ESSAYS, SKETCHES, and REVIEWS. With Illustrations by the Author.
- CONTRIBUTIONS to 'PUNCH.' With 152 Illustrations by the Author.

OTHER EDITIONS OF MR. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

THE STANDARD EDITION. 24 vols. large 8vo. 10s. 6d. each.
* This Edition contains some of Mr. Thackeray's Writings not before collected, with many additional Illustrations.

THE POPULAR EDITION. 13 vols. crown 8vo., with Frontispiece to each Volume, marbled cloth, gilt top 3/ 3s., and in half-morocco gilt top 4/ 10s.
* The Volumes are sold separately, in green cloth, 6s. each.

THE CHEAPER ILLUSTRATED EDITION. In Twenty-six Volumes crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each, sets in cloth 4/ 10s.; or in half-morocco bound in half-morocco, 6s. 6d. Containing nearly all the small Woodcut Illustrations of the former Editions, and many new Illustrations by Edmund Arliss. This Edition contains altogether 1,773 Illustrations.

THE POCKET EDITION. 27 vols. in handsome elbonized case, 3/ 12s. 6d.
* The Volumes are sold separately, in half-cloth, cut or uncut edges, 1s. 6d. each; or in paper cover, 1s. each. They are also supplied daintily bound in cloth, with gilt top, as follows:—

THE NOVELS. 13 vols. in gold-lettered cloth case, 21s.
THE MISCELLANIES. 14 vols. in gold lettered, cloth case, 21s.

MISS THACKERAY'S
WORKS.

Uniform Edition.

Each Volume illustrated by a Vignette
Title-Page. 10 vols. large crown 8vo. 6s. each.

1. Old Kensington.
2. The Village on the Cliff.
3. Five Old Friends and a Young PRINCE.
4. To Esther, and other Sketches.
5. Bluebeard's Keys, and other Stories.
6. The Story of Elizabeth; Two HOUSES; FROM AN ISLAND.
7. Tollers and Spinsters, and other Essays.
8. Miss Angel; Fulham Lawn.
9. Miss Williamson's Divagations.
10. Mrs. Dymond.

WORKS BY JOHN
ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

Renaissance in Italy:

The REVIVAL of LEARNING. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. 16s.

The PINNANTS. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. 16s.

The CATHOLIC REACTION. In 2 Parts. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 32s.

Sketches in Italy and Greece. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Animi Figura. Fcap. 8vo. 5s.

Shakespeare's Predecessors in the ENGLISH DRAMA. Demy 8vo. 16s.

New and Old: a Volume of Verse. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The Sonnets of Michael Angelo RUDENHUTTI and TOMMASO CAMPANELLA. New for the first time Translated into Rhymed English. Crown 8vo. 7s.

Many Moods: a Volume of Verse. Crown 8vo. 6s.

WORKS BY MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Last Essays on Church and RELIGION. With a Preface. Crown 8vo. 7s.

Mixed Essays. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Contents:—Democracy—Equality—Irish Catholicism and British Liberalism—Pope's Essay on Criticism—A Guide to English Literature—Shakespeare—A French Critic on Milton—A French Critic on Goethe—George Sand.

Literature and Dogma: an Essay towards a Better Apprehension of the Bible. Popular Edition, with a New Preface. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

God and the Bible: a Sequel to 'Literature and Dogma.' Popular Edition, with a New Preface. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

St. Paul and Protestantism; with other Essays. Popular Edition, with a New Preface. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

Contents:—St. Paul and Protestantism—Puritanism and the Church of England—Modern Heresy—A Comment on Christmas.

Culture and Anarchy: an Essay in Political and Social Criticism. Popular Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

Irish Essays, and Others. Popular Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

On the Study of Celtic Literature. Popular Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

Passages from the Prose Writings of MATTHEW ARNOLD. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.
Contents:—1. Literature 2. Politics and Society 3. Philosophy and Religion.

* Messrs. SMITH, ELDER & CO. will be happy to forward a CATALOGUE of their PUBLICATIONS post free on application.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Just ready, crown 8vo. over 1,000 pages, handsomely bound, cloth extra gilt, gilt edges, 10s. 6d.

DOD'S PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, AND KNIGHTAGE FOR 1894.

"Aims at giving a great deal of information in a small space, and signals success in doing so. For purposes of rapid reference it has no competitor."—Athenæum.

The ORGANIST and CHOIR- MASTER'S DIARY for 1894. Arranged by RALPH HINDLE BAKER. Demy 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The WAY THEY LOVED at GRIM- PAT. By E. RHYNOLDS. 1 vol. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Clever and delightful transcripts from life."—Publishers' Circular.
"A book of peculiar charm."—Standard.
"Should secure one of the most solid literary successes of the season."—Daily Telegraph.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES. RUSSIA'S MARCH TOWARDS INDIA.

By an "INDIAN OFFICER."

With New Map of Central Asia showing the disputed Territory. 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.
"A bold historical survey... of the gradual development of Russian military power in Central Asia."—Times.

CHINESE CENTRAL ASIA: A RIDE TO LITTLE TIBET.

With FAUNA and BIBLIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES. By HENRY LANSDELL, D.D. M.R.S. F.R.G.S., Author of "Through Siberia," "Russian Central Asia," &c. With Maps and nearly One Hundred Illustrations. In 3 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, 36s.

"Dr. Lansdell's book is a treasure in Central Asia has long been established. His two new volumes are the record of his latest and, in some respects, his most adventurous journey."—Times.

PICTURESQUE CEYLON: Colombo and the Kandy Valley. By HENRY W. CAVE. Demy 8vo. numerous Full-Page Illustrations in Woodbury- engraving, gilt edges, Houghton binding. ONE GUINEA net.

"Everybody likes pictures, and in an age of illustration, so that 'Picturesque Ceylon' by Mr. Henry W. Cave, a pretty drawing-room table book just issued by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., will have, as it deserves, a Christmas vogue. The author frankly owns that the work is a pictorial, not a literary effort; but many a volume might be written of close-printed, descriptive matter which would not convey nearly so good an idea of the beautiful island of Ceylon as the excellent photographs which are here interspersed with a light and interesting running comment."—Daily Telegraph.

TALES OF THE CHILDREN'S WARD.

By HONOR MORTEN.

Author of 'Sketches of Hospital Life,' and H. F. GETHIN. With Illustrations. 4to. cloth, 3s. 6d.
"A collection of hospital stories is furnished by Honor Morten and H. F. Gethin, in 'Tales of the Children's Ward.' The title chosen by the authors explains their general purpose. With a large experience of the little sufferers to whom it has been their duty to attend Miss Morten and Miss Gethin write their pathetic annals in a series of little sketches, which are capably told, and very interesting. The book should command a ready sale."—Daily Telegraph.

DR. NOAH PORTER, PRESIDENT of YALE. A Memorial by his Friends. Edited by GEORGE S. MERIAM. With Portraits. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"This memorial was admirably conceived and has been admirably executed. The book is full of information, unfamiliar to English readers, on Church life and College life in New England."—Daily Telegraph.

SECOND EDITIONS AT ALL LIBRARIES. THE HANDSOME HUMES. By WILLIAM BLACK.

In 3 vols.

"Told with all the grace and charm of Mr. William Black's familiar narrative style... A charming wholeheartedness of thought and tone pervades Mr. Black's excellent book."—Daily Telegraph.

THE EMIGRANT SHIP. By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

In 3 vols.

"Movement and incident crowd in every chapter, and the protestant little love story flows as an undercurrent among these billows of adventure."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NOW READY, price One Shilling. SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE. JANUARY NUMBER.

Contents.

CONTANTYNOPOLE. (Continuing Paper.) F. Marion Crawford. Illustrated.

DEEP WATER. W. G. van Tassel Stephens. An INCOMPARABLE PORT. Miss Perry.

THE WOLF at the DOOR. Charlotte Perkins Stetson. The ACTUAL. John Irem. Illustrated. (The Sixth Article in the Series on "Moral Crises.")

THE FIFTH. Philip Gilbert Hamerton. Painted by Edward Mallet. With Full-Page Illustration (Frontispiece) and Portrait of Hamerton.

ON HER RADIAN FAS AVE. L. MORGAN. Arthur Sherbourne Hardy. JOHN MARR. SOUTHERNER. George W. Cable. Chaps. I-V. (The last in this Number to be continued.)

"WHITHER THOU GOEST." Solomon Wells-Cohen. STORIES IN STONE from NOTRE DAME. Theodore Andrea Cook. (Illustrated.)

A MAINT AFTERNOON. George A. Hubbard. Sir JOSHUA REYNOLDS. Frederick Koppel. Illustrated from Engravings of his works.

THE PLACE of the RHODOS in the HISTORY of EGYPT. A. L. Lewis. WINTER'S REPLY to MAYNE. Hon. Robert G. Winstanley. 2s.

JANUARY Number now ready, price One Shilling. FASHIONS OF TO-DAY.

In Dress, Fancy Work, Art, Music, Literature, Women's Work, &c. With Coloured Plate, Pattern Sheet, and numerous Illustrations.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

L. REEVE & CO.'S NEW WORKS.

No. 100, JANUARY (commencing a New Volume), 3s. 6d.

The BOTANICAL MAGAZINE: Figures and Descriptions of New and Rare Plants. By Sir J. D. HOOKER, F.R.S., &c. Third Series. Vols. I to XLIX. each 42s. Published Monthly, with 6 Plates, 3s. 6d. Coloured. Annual Sub- scription, 42s.

A SET OF

CURTIS'S BOTANICAL MAGAZINE, Complete from the commencement to the end of 1892. 11s. 6d. and Index to the first 60 vols. in 15 vols. The first 70 vols. and Index in 26 vols. half green morocco, the remaining 30 vols. new, in cloth, 12s. 6d. each.

IN THE PRESS.

The HEMIPTERA HOMOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By JAMES EDWARDS, F.R.S. To be published in Eight Parts, with Coloured Plates. Prospectus and Form for Subscribers may be had on application.

NOW READY.

The HYMENOPTERA ACULEATA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Part III. with 4 Coloured Plates, &c. Prospectus and Form for Subscribers may be had on application.

The HEMIPTERA HETEROPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Complete in 1 volume. Small Edition, with a Structural Plate, 14s. Large Edition, with 21 Coloured Plates, &c.

The BUTTERFLIES and MOTHS of TERRIFLY. By A. E. MOLT-WHITE. With 4 Coloured Plates, containing 24 Figures. 7s. 6d.

The LEPIDOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By CHARLES G. BARRETT, F.R.S. Vol. I (RHODOP- LOPHIA), with 40 Coloured Plates, 50s. Parts XI to XIV. each with 4 Coloured Plates, &c. Prospectus and Form for Subscribers may be had on application.

LEPIDOPTERA INDICA. By F. Moore, F.R.S. Part XVI. 15s. Also Vol. I., with 14 Coloured Plates, 14s. 6d. cloth; 15s. 12s. half-morocco. Prospectus on application.

The COLEOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By the Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. Large Edition, complete in 3 vols., with 140 Coloured Plates, 101. Small Edition, complete in 3 vols., with 3 Structural Plates, 41.

CATALOGUE of BRITISH COLE- OPTERA. By D. RHAFY, M.A. F.R.S., and Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. Price 1s. 6d.; or printed on one side only, for labels, 5s. 6d.

THE STRUCTURE and LIFE- HISTORY of the COCKROACH. An Introduction to the Study of Insects. By L. C. MIAL, F.R.S., and Prof. ALFRED DENNY, 12s. Woodcock, 7s. 6d.

The BUTTERFLIES of EUROPE. Described and Figured by H. C. LANG, M.D. F.L.S. With 35 Coloured Plates, containing upwards of 600 Figures. 2 vols. imper- royal 8vo. 14s.

THE PHYSIOLOGY of the INVERTE- BRATA. By A. S. GRAY, F.R.S. Part I. 15s. 6d. Part II. 15s. 6d. Demy 8vo. with 11 Illustrations, 14s. 6d.

BRITISH FUNGI, PHYCOMYCETES and USTULAGINAE. By GEORGE MARRAS. 2 Parts, 7s. 6d.

BRITISH FUNGUS. By the Rev. M. J. BARKER, M.A. F.L.S. Reissue. With a Supplement of nearly 60 pages by WORTHINGTON G. SMITH, F.L.S. 2 vols. 24 Coloured Plates, 50s.

HANDBOOK of the BRITISH FLORA. By G. BENTHAM, F.R.S. Sixth Edition. Revised by Sir J. D. HOOKER, C.B. K.C.S.I. F.R.S. 10s. 6d.

ILLUSTRATIONS of the BRITISH FLORA. Drawn by W. H. FICK, F.L.S., and W. G. SMITH, F.L.S. 1,215 Wood Engravings. Third Edition. Revised and Enlarged. 10s. 6d.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the FLORA of MONTANA and to a WINTER FLORA of the RIVIERA, including the Coast from Marseilles to Genoa. By T. MOOREHEAD, F.L.S. With 39 Coloured Plates, 42s.

PHYCOLOGIA BRITANNICA: a History of British Seaweeds. By Sir W. H. HARRIS, F.R.S. New Edition. Royal 8vo. 4 vols. 30s. Coloured Plates, 71. 50s.

PHYCOLOGIA AUSTRALICA: a History of Australian Seaweeds. By Dr W. H. HARRIS, F.R.S. Royal 8vo. 2 vols. 50s. Coloured Plates, 71. 50s.

The BRITISH FERNS. Coloured Figures and Descriptions, with Analysis of the Frondification and Venation of the Ferns of Great Britain and Ireland. By Sir W. J. HOOKER, F.R.S. Royal 8vo. 40 Coloured Plates, 15s.

The NARCISSUS: its History and Culture, with Coloured Figures of all Known Species and Principal Varieties. By F. W. BARKER, and a Review of the Classification by J. A. BARKER, F.L.S. Super-royal 8vo. 40 Coloured Plates, 21s.

BRITISH MOSSES: containing all that are known to be Members of the British Isles. By the Rev. M. J. BARKER, M.A. F.L.S. 24 Coloured Plates, 21s.

CURTIS'S BRITISH ENTOMOLOGY. Illustrations and Descriptions of the Genera of Insects found in Great Britain and Ireland. 3 vols. royal 8vo. 75s. Coloured Plates, 20s.

L. REEVE & CO.,

Publishers to the Home, Colonial, and Indian Governments,
6, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

THE JANUARY NUMBER, which commences a NEW VOLUME, contains CONTRIBUTIONS by—

The RIGHT HON. PROFESSOR HUXLEY.
"Professor Tyndall."

The RIGHT HON. LORD EGERTON of TATTON.
"The Manchester Ship Canal" (with a Chart).

MRS. CHACKANTHORPE.
"The Revolt of the Daughters."

G. WALTER STEEVES, M.D.
"Sanitary Insurance: a Scheme."

The REV. DR. L. H. MILLS.
"Zoroaster and the Bible."

SIR JULIUS VOGEL.
(1) "The Scramble for Gold."

J. F. HESELTINE.
(2) "The Scramble for Gold."

WILLIAM GRAHAM.
"Chats with Jane Clermont" (Concluded).

The REV. DR. JESSOPP.
"A Word for our Cathedral System."

WILLIAM SHARP.
"The New Winter-Land."

HERBERT A. GILES.
"Chinese Poetry in English Verse."

ARTHUR SILVA WHITE.
"Chartered Government in Africa."

The RIGHT HON. the EARL of DUNDONALD.
"Protection for Burmese."

PRINCE KROPOTKIN.
"Recent Science."

HIS MAJESTY the KING of SWEDEN and NORWAY.
"Charles the Twelfth and the Campaign of 1713-12."

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & Co. Limited.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

Next week, at all Libraries and Booksellers',
RIDING RECOLLECTIONS and TURF ANECDOTES. By HENRY CUSTANCE,
Three Times Winner of the Derby. With numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 18s. Also a Large-Paper Edition, 21s. net.

Now ready, at all Libraries and Booksellers',
SEVENTY YEARS of IRISH LIFE.
By W. R. LE FANU. With Portraits. Demy 8vo. 16s.
(THIRD EDITION.)
"Mr. Le Fanu has given us a charming book and we are grateful."
—Saturday Review.

"One of the most amusing collections of Irish anecdotes and remembrances that we have ever seen."—Daily Chronicle.

RECOLLECTIONS of Life and WORK. By LOUISA TWINING. Demy 8vo. 15s.
"Charming in its simplicity, and it is a valuable contribution to the history of some of the noblest reformers of the past half century. Price 22s. 6d. net."—Athenæum.

THIS TROUBLESOME WORLD. By the Authors of 'The Medicine Lady.' 3 vols. 31s. 6d.
"An extremely vigorous, well-constructed, and readable story. It abounds from first to last in clever contrivances and thrilling interest."
—Daily Telegraph.

THE LIFE, ART, and CHARACTERS of SHAKESPEARE. By HENRY N. HUDSON, LL.D., Editor of 'The Harvard Shakespeare,' &c. 3 vols. large crown 8vo. cloth, 31s.

A GENERAL ASTRONOMY. By
CHARLES A. YOUNG, Professor of Astronomy in the College of New Jersey, Author of 'The Sun,' &c. In 1 vol., 550 pages, with 250 Illustrations, and supplement with the necessary Tables. Royal 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 6d.

POLITICAL SCIENCE and COM-PARATIVE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. By JOHN W.
BURNES, Ph.D., LL.D., Dean of the University
Faculty of Political Science in Columbia College, U.S.A.
In 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 35s.

ANIMAL LIFE and INTELLIGENCE.
By C. LLOYD MORGAN, F.R.S., Principal of University College, Bristol. With 40 Illustrations and a Photoetched Frontispiece. Second Edition. 613 pp. demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, W.C.
Publisher to the India Office.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON'S LIST.

FIVE EDITIONS of Mr. FRANKFORT MOORE'S New Novel,

A GRAY EYE OR SO,

in 3 vols., having been exhausted, a SIXTH EDITION is now ready at all Libraries.

The ATHENÆUM says:—"One of the most amusing and taking of contemporary modern novels. The book is packed with vivacious cleverness of speech, sparkle of wit, and shrewdness of observation; it overflows with good things. The talk is kept constantly on brilliant lines. There are besides passages that have charm, real charm, in spite of the very whimsical and biting irony."

New Novel by

HELEN PROTHERO-LEWIS.

HOOKS OF STEEL.

In 3 vols.

[At all Libraries January 15,

The large First Edition of Mrs. CONNEY'S New Novel,

GOLD FOR DROSS,

has been bought up by the Libraries. A SECOND EDITION will be ready this week.

"To the list of gifted women who have achieved legitimate triumphs in the realm of fiction must now be added the name of Mrs. Conney, whose latest story, 'Gold for Dross,' is entitled to a place of honour in the very front rank of contemporary romance."—Daily Telegraph.

SEVENTIETH THOUSAND.

The STORY of an AFRICAN

FARM. By OLIVE SCHREINER. In handsome cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"There was a most exciting debate at the Pioneer Club on 'Favourite Women Novelists.' When the vote came to be taken Olive Schreiner stood first on the list."—British Weekly.

SIXTH EDITION.

I FORBID the BANNS: the Story of a Comedy which was Played Seriously. By FRANKFORT MOORE. In cloth gilt, 6s.

The Athenæum says:—"So racy and brilliant a novel."

SECOND EDITION.

DAIREEN: a South African

Novel. By FRANKFORT MOORE. In cloth gilt, 6s.

The Morning Post says:—"Daireen" is indeed a fine story, remarkably original, and well constructed."

EIGHTH THOUSAND.

UNDER the GREAT SEAL. By

JOSEPH HATTON. Cheap Edition in crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

BY PROF. A. J. CHURCH.

PICTURES from GREEK LIFE and STORY. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt and gilt top, with 16 Full-Page Illustrations, 5s.

"Written with enviable skill; a volume of quite unusual excellence. It would be difficult to name a more attractive book."—Spencer.

BY J. BLOUNDELL-BURTON.

The DESERT SHIP: a Story of Adventure by Sea and Land. With numerous illustrations by Hume Nisbet and Walter Buckley. In large crown 8vo. handsome cloth gilt and gilt edges, 6s.

"It is the story of a treasure hunt as exciting as anything Verne ever wrote, and with the reality of Robert Louis Stevenson. Will mark a period in the existence of anybody who is fortunate enough to get it as a present or prize. Need we say more to recommend it?"—Trust.

HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster-row,

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S LIST.

Rev. AUGUSTUS JESSOP'S NEW WORK.

RANDOM ROAMING. By Rev.

AUGUSTUS JESSOP, D.D., Author of 'Trials of a Country Parson,' &c. Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

By H. C. BUNNER.

"MADE in FRANCE": French

Tales Retold, with a United States Twist. By H. C. BUNNER, Author of 'Short Stories,' &c. With illustrations by C. J. Taylor. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

By the late FRANCIS ADAMS.

The NEW EGYPT: a Social

Sketch. By the late FRANCIS ADAMS, Author of 'The Australians,' &c. Introduction by J. W. LONGSDON. Cloth, 1s.

THIRTY-SIXTH VOLUME OF "THE STORY OF THE NATIONS."

SPAIN: being a Summary of Spanish History from the Moorish Conquest to the Fall of Granada (711-1492 A.D.). By HENRY EDWARD WATTS. Maps and many illustrations. Cloth, 1s.

"A concise and judicious narrative, which fully maintains the high standard of the series to which it belongs."—Times.

THE STANNHOPE PRIZE ESSAY, 1893.

The MARQUIS d'ARGENSON:

a Study in Criticism. By ARTHUR OGLE. Frontispiece. Cloth, 6s.

ENLARGED AND REVISED THROUGHOUT.

TWO SPHERES; or, Mind & Instinct.

By T. B. S. T. Demy 8vo. cloth, 5s.

NEW VOLUMES OF "THE REFORMERS' BOOK-SHELF."

BAMFORD'S PASSAGES in the LIFE of a RADICAL. Edited, and with an Introduction, by HENRY DUNCLEBY ("Verax"). 3 vols. cloth, 3s. 6d. each. [Jan. 5.]

By THOMAS A. SPALDING, LL.B.

The HOUSE of LORDS: a Retrospect and a Forecast. By THOMAS ALFRED SPALDING, LL.B., Barrister-at-Law. Cloth, 10s. 6d. [Jan. 5.]

MRS. BESANT'S LIFE.

ANNIE BESANT: an Autobiography.

With 12 illustrations, 9 being Photographs. Portraits. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

"The interest of her narrative never flags."—Glasgow Herald.

Rev. SAMUEL COX'S LAST WORK.

The HEBREW TWINS: a Vin-dication of God's Ways with Jacob and Esau. By the late Rev. SAMUEL COX, D.D., Author of 'Expositions,' &c. With Preliminary Memoir by his Wife. Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE SPIRIT OF NATURE.'

The RESCUE, and other Poems.

By HENRY BELLISSE BAILDON. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The MERRY MONTH, and other Prose Pieces. By HENRY BELLISSE BAILDON. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

"Mr. Baildon is readable and entertaining."—Spencer.

NEW VOLUMES OF "THE INDEPENDENT NOVEL SERIES."

THEORIES: Studies from a

Modern Woman. By A. N. T. A. F.

LADY PERFECTA. Translated

from the Spanish of B. PEREZ GALDOS, by MARY WHARTON.

Demy 12mo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

* * * The Publisher can arrange for Purchasers to see these Works at the nearest Bookshop or on receipt of address.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN,
Paternoster-square, E.C.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

The FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

JANUARY.

THE IRELAND of TO-MORROW. By X.
MR. FRANCIS THOMPSON, a NEW POET. By Coventry Patmore.
FOOTBALL. By Cresson.
THE EMPLOYMENT of WOMEN. By Miss Bailey.
THE TRUE DISCOVERY of AMERICA. By Captain Gombler, R.N.
CHEMICAL ACTION of MARINE ORGANISMS. By Prof. Judd, F.R.S.
THE ORIGIN of MANKIND. By Prof. Beechey.
THE FRENCH in INDIA. By Lewis R. Newing.
THE LEPHANT COMMISSION. By Dr. Thib.
PRINCE ALEXANDER of BATTENBERG. By J. D. Bouchier.
THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE is DANGER. By E. S. Lakin.
IRISH RAILWAYS. By X.

SECRETS of the PRISON-

HOUSE; or, Gael Studies and Sketches. By Major ARTHUR GRIFFITHS, H.M. Inspector of Prisons, Author of 'Chronicles of Newgate,' &c. With numerous illustrations by George D. Rowlandson. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30s.

The SPECTATOR says:—

"This is a very valuable book.....Major Griffiths has treated a most important subject thoroughly and comprehensively.....An extremely readable book."

AROUND TONKIN and SIAM.

By Prince HENRI D'ORLÉANS. With 28 illustrations. Demy 8vo. 16s.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—

"A highly intelligent record, a frank, outspoken statement.....Prince Henri D'Orléans has amassed a large amount of most instructive and valuable information.....Extremely interesting reading.....A valuable book."

OLD COURT-LIFE in SPAIN.

By FRANCIS MINTO ELLIOT, Author of 'Old Court-Life in France,' 'Diary of an Idle Woman in Italy,' &c. In 3 vols. demy 8vo. 34s.

The TIMES says:—

"Mrs. Minto Elliot has written a very attractive book, full of novel romance, and at least founded on a sound historical basis, if not entitled to be regarded as a serious contribution to Spanish history proper."

GERMANY and the GERMANS:

Social Life, Culture, Religious Life, &c. By WILLIAM HARBUTT DAWSON. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 96s.

The DAILY CHRONICLE says:—

"With Mr. Dawson's two volumes before him, the ordinary reader may well dispense with the perusal of previous authorities.....For his work, on the whole, is comprehensive, conscientious, and eminently fair."

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—

"This excellent work—a literary monument of intelligent and conscientious labour—deals with every phase and aspect of state and political activity, public and private life, in the Fatherland.....Teems with entertaining anecdotes and introspective glimpses of character."

ABOUT ORCHIDS, a CHAT.

By FREDERICK BOYLE. With Coloured Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The SCOTSMAN says:—

"Mr. Boyle is an enthusiast with a practical turn, and with the pen of a ready writer; and something of his taste or passion for the superb and beautiful specimens of plant life which are his theme will spread with his book."

LIFE ABOARD a BRITISH

PRIVATEER in the TIME of QUEEN ANNE; being the Journal of Captain WOODS ROGERS. With Notes and Illustrations by Robert C. Leslie. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—

"A stirring story of audacious sea adventures, with a fine briny flavour about them."

The WAIF from the WAVES: a

Story of Three Lives, Touching this World and Another. By W. J. KNOX LITTLE, Canon Residentiary of Worcester and Vicar of Hoar Cross. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The COURT JOURNAL says:—

"Very graceful and pretty, very thoughtful and full of inner meaning.....Interesting and high-toned story."

The GENTLEWOMAN says:—"A charming story."

SUPPLEJACK: a Romance of Maoriland. By R. WARD. With 8 illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The ACADEMY says:—

"Well planned, well put together, and well written.....Delightful from the first page to the last."

The GUARDIAN says:—

"The story is crammed with the most astounding incidents, and would fully satiate the most exacting boyish appetite for exciting wonder and daring deeds."

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, London.

TYLSTON & EDWARDS' LIST.

MEMORIAL EDITION OF THE WORKS OF SIR RICHARD BURTON.

1. A PERSONAL NARRATIVE OF A PILGRIMAGE TO AL MADINAH AND MECCAH.

Complete, in 2 vols., price 12s. net.

"The brilliant narrative reads as vividly as ever."—Athenæum.
"One of the most marvellous records of daring ever penned."
"Two most fascinating volumes."—Star.
"Even Burton never wrote anything better than his 'Pilgrimage to Meccah'."—Bookman.

2. A MISSION TO GELELE, KING OF DAHOMEY.

In 2 vols. price 12s. net.

"Carefully edited and excellently set up."—Glasgow Herald.
"An uncompromising account of a race which has, perhaps, been Christianized more than any other."—Star.
"Exceedingly interesting."—St. James's Gazette.

3. VIKRAM AND THE VAMPIRE: Tales of Hindu Devilry.

With 30 Illustrations by Ernest Griset.

In 1 vol. price 6s. net.

There is also a Large Hand-made Paper Edition of this book, limited to 250 Copies, the Full Page Illustrations on special China paper, & new Photographs Frontispiece by Albert Lockhead, and a specially designed cloth cover, price 12s. net.

"Can hold its own in point of depth and interest with any of those stories of myth and mystery which are so especially characteristic of the East, and will prove of interest alike to the student and casual reader."—Literary World.

4. FIRST FOOTSTEPS IN EAST AFRICA.

In 2 vols. price 12s. net. [Ready in January.]

It is followed, probably, by

5. THE LAKE REGIONS OF CENTRAL AFRICA.

And other Works, which will be duly announced.

EACH WORK IS SOLD SEPARATELY.

Messrs. TYLSTON & EDWARDS, Publishers,
13, Clifford's Inn, London, E.C.

Trade supplied by

Messrs. SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMMOND, KEAY & CO., Ltd.

Stevens & Sons' Quarterly List.

Now ready, No. XXXVII (JANUARY), price 6s.
Annual Subscription, post free, 12s. 6d.

The LAW QUARTERLY REVIEW. Edited by Sir FREDERICK POLLOCK, Bart. M.A. LL.D., Corpus Pro- fessor of Jurisprudence in the University of Oxford.

Contents.

NOTES.—The Last Days of Beattie in Great Britain. Stephen March Lusk. —Fishing and Arbitration. The rule of Goods Bill.—Interpretation of Statutes.—The Trusts Act, 1888 (Sumner v. Earl Farnham).
—The Purchase and Hire System. &c.
THE GERMAN CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE. By H. A. D.
Philips.
MODERN LEGISLATION IN THE UNITED KINGDOM. By Francis E.
Bradley.
THE VAGABOND CASE IN AUSTRALIA. By Arthur R. Battersworth.
INSURANCE OF LIMITED INTEREST. By William Harvey.
SCIENTIA IN COURT from the YEAR BOOKS. By Edward Mansel.
THE DETERMINATION OF THE MOWBRAY AMBASSANCE. By J. H.
Bosch.
THE NEW RULES OF THE SUPREME COURT. By Thomas Snow.
BOOK REVIEWS.

Now ready, Ninth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

WILLIAMSON'S LAW OF EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS. Ninth Edition. By the Hon. Mr. BOWLAND
WILLIAMSON, a Justice of the High Court. 1893.
"We can conscientiously say that the present edition will not only maintain but enhance the high reputation which the book has always enjoyed."—Law Journal, December 9, 1893.

Seventh Edition, royal 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

ADDISON ON TORTS.—A TREATISE ON
THE LAW OF TORTS. Seventh Edition. By HENRY ADDISON, Esq., Metropolitan Magistrate, and A. P. PERCEVAL KEMP, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.
"As an exhaustive digest of all the cases which are likely to be cited to practice, it stands without a rival."—Law Journal, May 13, 1893.

Ninth Edition, royal 8vo. 1622 pp. cloth, 21s. 6d.

ADDISON ON CONTRACTS.—A TREATISE
ON THE LAW OF CONTRACTS. Ninth Edition. By HENRY
ADDISON, Esq., Metropolitan Magistrate, assisted by A. P. PERCEVAL
KEMP, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.
"No law library is complete without Addison up to date."

Third Edition, royal 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

ELLIS'S GUIDE TO THE INCOME-TAX
ACTS for the Use of the English Income-Tax Payer. By ARTHUR
M. ELLIS, LL.M., Solicitor, Author of 'A Guide to the House Tax Act.'
"Contains in a convenient form the law bearing upon the Income-Tax."—Law Times.

Ninth Edition, super-royal 8vo. cloth, 11s. 6d.

WHARTON'S LAW LEXICON. Forming an Epitome of the Law of England, and containing full explanations of the Technical Terms and Phrases (both Ancient and Modern), including the various Legal Terms used in Commercial Instruments, together with a Translation of the Latin Maxims and Solonized Titles from the Civil, Scotch, and Indian Law. Ninth Edition. By J. M. LEBY, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1893.

CATALOGUE GRATIS ON APPLICATION.

STEVENS & SONS, Limited, 119 and 120, Chancerylane, London.

"LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'" Edinburgh Review.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or Newsmagist in England, price 4d.; or free by post to the Continent, 4½d.

Subscription, 10s. 3d. for Six Months; 20s. 6d. for Twelve Months, including postage.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN AND GENERAL READERS.

The Sixth Series of NOTES AND QUERIES, complete in 12 vols. price 10s. 6d. each Volume, contains, in addition to a great variety of similar Notes and Replies, Articles of Interest on the following Subjects:—

English, Irish, and Scottish History.

The Plagues of 1665 and 1679—Wolves in England—
Fries in the Middle Ages—Executions of 1745—The "Monty Plot"—Episcopacy in Scotland—English
Roman Catholic Martyrs—Hereward the Wake—Hiding-
Places of Charles II.—Where did Edward II. die?—
Battle between Armies of Bostonians and Roundheads—
William III. at the Battle of the Boyne—The Green
Bag—Confidential Letters to James II. about Ireland—Anne Boleyn's Heart—Robert de Burgh—Henry Martin the Hagride—Lord Hussey and the Lincolnshire Rebellion.

Biography.

Laird de Camoens—Thomas Bell—Cromwell—William Penn—Neil Gwynne—Coleridge—Curll the Bookseller—
Sir John Cheke—Gibson, Bishop of London—Thorpe the Architect—Sir Richard Whittington—Charles Wolfe.

Bibliography and Literary History.

Shakespeareans—Chap-Book Notes—"Adeste Fideles"—
"The Land of the Leal"—John Gilpin—"Reynard the Fox"—"Lead, kindly Light"—Rabelais—London Publishers of 18th Century—The Welsh Testament—The Libraries of Balliol, All Souls, Brasenose, and Queen's Colleges, Oxford—Key to "Endymion"—Early Roman Catholic Magazines—Stuart Literature—The Libraries of Eton, and Trinity College, Cambridge—"Dame Europa"
Bibliography—Unpublished Letters of Dr. Johnson—
"Rock of Ages"—Eikon Basilike Deputa—William of Tyre—Bibliography of Stating—"The Book"—Notes on the "Religio Medici"—Authorship of the "Imitatio" —Tristram Shandy—Critical Notes of Charles Lamb.

Popular Antiquities and Folk-lore.

Diavonic Mythology—Folk-lore of Leprosy—Lycanthropy—North Italian Folk-lore—Friday unlucky for Marriage—West Indian Superstitions—"Milky Way"— Folk-lore of Birds—Feather Superstition—Medieval and Funeral Folk-lore.

Poetry, Ballads, and Drama.

The Drama in Ireland—"Tom Jones" on the French
Stage—"Auld Robin Gray"—"Harplings of Lena"—
M.B. of Gray's "Elegy"—The "Mystery" of S. Pant-lemon—Roger's "Pleasures of Memory"—"Blue bonnets over the Border"—Swift's Verse on his own Death—Tennyson's "Palace of Art"—Ballad of "William and Margaret"—The Australian Drama—Foss by J. M.
Steele—Shelley's "Ode to Mont Blanc"—Hymns by Chas. Wesley—"Cross Purposes"—Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women"—"Logie o' Buchan."

Popular and Proverbial Sayings.

"To rule the roast"—"Licked into shape"—"Boob"
—Joining the majority—Up to snuff—"To the bitter end"—Conspicuous by his absence—Play old Gooseberry—"The grey mare is the better horse"—Bred and born—Drunk as David's cow—Cut off with a shilling—Tin—money—Getting into a scrape.

Philology.

Tennis—Puzzle—Rickets—American Spelling—Boob-
Jolly—Boycotting—Argosy—Jennet—Bedford—Maiden in Place-names—Deck of Cards—Manber—Belfry—Brug —Bulrush—Tram—Hearse—Whitting—Boat-sailer—
Boom—At bay.

Genealogy and Heraldry.

The Arms of the Popes—Courtesy Titles—Rolls of Arms —Book-plates—Earldom of Mar—Arms of the See of York—Fitchardings of Berkeley—Heraldic Differences —Barony of Valence—Colonial Arms—Earldom of Ormonde—The Violet in Heraldry—Arms of Vasco da
Gama—Seal of the Templars—Earldom of Suffolk.

Fine Arts.

Hogarth's only Landscape—The "House" of Raphael—
Rubens's "Daniel and the Lions"—Early Gilberts—Retzsch's Outlines—Portraits of Byron—Voltaire and his Works—Tadpole's Modellings—Copley's "Attack on Jersey."

Ecclesiastical Matters.

The Revised Version—Pulpits—The Episcopal Wig-Vestments—Temporal Power of Bishops—Master Sepulchre—Canonization—The Basilican Rite—The Scottish Office—Tulchan Bishops—Seventeenth Century "Indulgence"—The "Month's Mind"—Clergy hunting in Scarlet—The Irish Hierarchy—Libraries in Churches—
Lambeth Degrees—Fifteenth Century Wood-carvings—
Franciscans in Scotland—Bishops of Dunblair—Prayer-Book Rule for Easter—Fur Tippets—The Church in the Channel Isles—Metrical Psalms—Order of Administration.

Classical Subjects.

"Perseid Satire"—Roman Arithmetic—The Alastor of Augustus—"Acerbum Mercurii"—"Vaseus" in Georgia,
B.C. 175—Oppian—Juvenal's Satire II.—Translation of Diod. I.—Aristophanes' "Bans"—Simplicius on Epilotosis—Tablet of Oebus—Imitative Verse—"Felix quous facient," &c.

Topography.

Grub-street—Porta del Popolo—"Turk's Head" Sign—
The Old Corner of St. Paul's Cathedral—Thames
Embankments—Status in Brasenose Quadrangle—Middle Temple Lane—Ormond-street Chapel—Roman Villa at Sandown—Ashburnham House—Curew Castle—Rushton
Hall, Westenhough—Wotton House.

Miscellaneous.

Christian Names—Election Colours—Buried Alive—O. K.
—Ladies' Clubs—Zoo-dome—Berkeley-square Mystery—Wife Selling—The Telephone—Scrutin de Liste—Cros-dile's Tears—Jingo—The Gipsies—Hell-Fire Club—Tarot —Tobacco in England—Sea Sickness unknown to the Ancients—Names of American States—Curcates—Female Soldiers and Sailors—Mistletoe—Giant—Jewesses and Wigs—Memories of Trafalgar—Green Eyes—Beaumont-tague—Secret Chambers in Ancient Houses—The Bonaparte-Patterson Marriage—Ace of Spades—Wig Cutlers—
Female Churchwardens—The Opal—House of Keys—
Church Registers—Arm-in-arm—E. O.—Napoleon—Legacy to Castillon.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

NEW YEAR'S DOUBLE NUMBER OF THE BUILDING NEWS.
READY JANUARY 2, 1906.

Among the numerous illustrations will be found
THE MUSIC OF LIFE,

These beautiful reproductions, taken direct from the original oil paintings, will be issued in halfpenny red printed in their order of presentation. The first series, "The Dance of the Hours," consists of 12 plates, ready for framing. The panels represent "Cradle Music, Fossil Music, Love Music, Martial Music, and, lastly, Funeral Music." These from the nursery cells followed by the joys of youth enlivened with the merriment of the dance the scene finds a centre in the burlesque of love, which in turn leads for the music of divorce if not the conquest of death. The last, "The Last Chime," ends the tableau, as music's final resting place. (L.R.V.)

Included this chef-d'œuvre, the following double-page plates will be included in the number, with which will be commenced a unique series of direct photo-lith reproductions of the original water-color drawings by the celebrated architectural artist the late Joseph Nash the famous author of the 'Mansions of England. THE MALL OF WYKE MALL, LANCSHIRE, will form No. 1 of this series, taken from the auto-representing Thomas Readington Kinkaid.

The new exhibition, "The Art of William Morris," will begin a valuable series of illustrated articles descriptive of typical examples of Ecclesiastical and other Metalwork in gold silver, iron, and lead from our National Collections, with others in applied arts or decorative crafts which are available in the Museum's stores and galleries. The first plate will illustrate a SHEET OF CHALICE.

Mr. Charles L. Morelake, the Keeper of the National Gallery, will describe Edward M. Ward's magnificent piece of KING JAMES III'S BREAKING TIDINGS OF THE LANSHIRE REBELLION.

Next comes the famous METALWORK form part of the OLD MASTERKIS series from the NATIONAL GALLERY, as the conclusion of which a comprehensive selection from the great Galleries of Europe will follow.

MICHELLE AND THE DRAGON from the world-famed Bayeux Tapestry will be illustrated with a detailed account from the pen of Miss May Morris whose article will be given in continuation of her series on THE BURNED EMBROIDERY.

FURTHER CATHARIAL PORTALS from an enlarged pictorial series of the Middle Ages Photograph Exhibition this year, YORK MINSTER and NOTHAM HALL, from the Press drawing by Mr R. Hindle and THICKLING HALL, NORFOLK represented with a photograph of the interior of the church taken before its destruction and a sketch of the exterior.

London: 332, Strand, W.C., and all Newsmen and Bookstalls.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI,
EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 18th, 7th JUNE 10th, 24th and JULY 8th contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN'S HISTORY OF THE EARL OF BEACONFIELD' and 'THE EARL OF BEACONFIELD'S HISTORY OF THE EARL OF BEACONFIELD'.

Price of the Six Numbers, 2s. ; or free by post, 3s. 3d.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1899, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1900, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 4d.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.
John C. Fennell, Press and Quiver Office, Dream's buildings, Chancery
Lane, E.C.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE
COMPANY INSURES AGAINST

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS,
PERSONAL ACCIDENTS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY

Capital, 1,000,000. Established 1848.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON.
W. D. MARY.

A PENNY A DROP.

THE PURE OTTO of ROSE
TOILET "VINOLIA" SOAP

TOILET POWDER
AND
"VINOLIA" TOILET POWDER

HOW COSTS NEARLY A PENNY A DROP.
BLONDIAU ET CIE. Myland-road, London, N.W.

EPPS'S COCOA, WITH BOILING MILK.
CRATEFUL and COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA. —

BREAKFAST and SUPPER.
 FRPP'S COCOA, WITH BOILING WATER

A L L E N ' S S O L I D L E A T H E R

PORTMANTEAUS.
ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
39, West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA
The best remedy for
ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, HEADACHE,

and INDIGESTION.
And makes Apperiant for Delicate Constitutions,
Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORDS MAGNETS

Digitized by C

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOTICE.—'The DAWN of ASTRONOMY: a Study of the Temple Worship and Mythology of the Ancient Egyptians,' by J. NORMAN LOCKYER, C.B. F.R.S., &c., will be published on January 15, price 21s.

NEW VOLUMES.

The STORY of the SUN. By Sir ROBERT S. BALL, LL.D. F.R.S. F.R.A.S. With 8 Coloured Plates, and other Illustrations. 21s.

"Astronomy has never been made more fascinating than it is in Sir Robert Ball's 'Story of the Sun,' nor would it be easy to find a book so well suited for a holiday present for readers whose curiosity about the phenomena of the heavens is tempered by a passion for romance." Daily News.

The STORY of OUR PLANET. By Prof. T. G. BONNEY, D.Sc. LL.D. F.R.S. F.S.A. F.G.S. With Coloured Plates and Maps, and about 100 Illustrations. 31s. 6d.

"A companion volume to Sir Robert Ball's 'Story of the Heavens.' In every respect worthy of its companionship.....The work of a writer singularly well qualified by his scientific eminence and his rare literary gifts to render the main principles and results of geological reasoning intelligible to non-scientific readers of ordinary education."—Times.

SOCIAL ENGLAND: a Record of the Progress of the People in Religion, Laws, Learning, Arts, Science, Literature, Industry, Commerce, and Manners, from the Earliest Times to the Present Day. Edited by H. D. TRAILL, D.C.L. With Contributions by eminent Authorities.

Vol. I. now ready, price 15s. Vol. II. in active preparation.

"The utility of such a work is obvious, its interest to all cultivated people enormous, and the scale on which the book is to be written adequate."—Speaker.

'LISBETH. By LESLIE KEITH, Author of 'The Chilcotes,' 'In Spite of Herself,' &c. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

"Unqualified praise may be cordially and unhesitatingly accorded to 'Lisbeth,' in which are readily discoverable all the inventive, constructive, and literary elements that, when felicitously combined, furnish the material of which a really first-class novel may be fashioned by a master hand."—Daily Telegraph.

The STANDISHS of HIGH ACRE. A Novel. By GILBERT SHELDON. 2 vols. 21s. [Ready shortly.]

FARRAR'S LIFE of CHRIST. New and Enlarged Edition, Revised and Corrected. 7s. 6d. [Ready shortly.]

Q'S NEW BOOK.

Just published, cloth, 6s.

The DELECTABLE DUCHY. Stories, Studies, and Sketches. By Q.

* A Second Edition is already in the press.

ILLUSTRATED EDITION, just published, 6s.

The LITTLE MINISTER. By J. M. BARRIE. With Illustrations from Original Drawings by W. Hole, R.S.A.

"Mr. Hole, R.S.A., has contributed here nine new illustrations of rare merit. He appears to have thoroughly caught the spirit of the book."—Glasgow Herald.

R. L. STEVENSON'S NEW WORK.

Fifteenth Thousand, 6s.

CATRIONA. A Sequel to 'Kidnapped.' Being the Memoirs of the Further Adventures of David Balfour at Home and Abroad. By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

"Mr. Stevenson has here given us a novel of extraordinary fascination."—Athenæum.

"Mr. Stevenson has achieved the almost unique success of producing a 'sequel' that is as good as the story which it continues and concludes."—Academy.

DEDICATED BY PERMISSION TO LORD ROBERTS.

Now ready, 6s.

A KING'S HUSSAR: being the Military Memoirs for 25 Years of a Troop Sergeant-Major of the 14th (King's) Hussars. Edited by HERBERT COMPTON.

"It is rarely our privilege to call public attention to so interesting, instructive, and wholesome a book as 'A King's Hussar.'"—Daily Telegraph.

The MAN in BLACK. By Stanley WEYMAN. Author of 'A Gentleman of France,' &c. With 12 Full-Page Illustrations. 3s. 6d. [Ready shortly.]

The ADMIRABLE LADY BIDDY FANE. By FRANK BARRETT. Popular Edition. With 12 Full-Page Illustrations. 6s. [Ready shortly.]

LOST on DU CORRIG; or, 'Twixt Earth and Ocean. By STANDISH O'GRADY. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations. 5s. [Ready shortly.]

CASSELL'S STOREHOUSE of GENERAL INFORMATION. Fully illustrated with High-Class Wood Engravings, and with Maps and Coloured Plates. Vol. VI. Cloth, 5s.

Ready shortly, the SECOND SERIES of

THE DIPLOMATIC REMINISCENCES OF LORD AUGUSTUS LOFTUS, P.C. G.C.B.

1862 to 1879. 2 vols. 32s.

The Second Series of these Reminiscences covers the period of Lord Loftus's residence at the Courts of Bavaria, Berlin, and St. Petersburg.

N.B.—A Third Edition of the First Series of these Reminiscences is now on sale, 2 vols. (covering the period from 1837 to 1862), 32s.

Ready shortly,

OUR RAILWAYS:

Their Development, Enterprise, Incident, and Romance.

By JOHN PENDLETON,

Author of 'A History of Derbyshire,' and 'Newspaper Reporting in Olden Time and To-day.'

2 vols. illustrated, 24s.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, Ludgate-hill, London; Paris and Melbourne.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Newman's Buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Printed by JOHN C. FALCON, Athenæum Press, Newman's Buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by the old JOHN C. FALCON at Newman's Buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Brewster and Mr. John Macdonald, Edinburgh.—Saturday, January 6, 1894.

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

Modern and Miscellaneous Books—Stationery and Fancy Goods —Framed Etchings, &c.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

With 179 Illustrations and 2 large and 4 small Coloured Maps. 3 vols. 8vo. 42s.

DISCOVERY OF LAKES RUDOLF AND STEFANIE:

AN ACCOUNT OF COUNT SAMUEL TELEKI'S EXPLORING AND HUNTING EXPEDITION IN EASTERN EQUATORIAL AFRICA IN 1897 AND 1898.

By his Companion, Lieutenant LUDWIG VON HÖHNEL.

Translated by NANCY BELL (N. D'ANVERS).

NEW BOOK BY CANON OVERTON.

THE ENGLISH CHURCH IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

By the Rev. JOHN H. OVERTON, D.D.,

Canon of Lincoln, Rector of Epworth, Doncaster, and Rural Dean of the Isle of Axholme.

8vo. 14s.

ST. ANDREWS. By ANDREW LANG. With 8 Plates and 24 Illustrations in the Text by T. Hodge. 8vo. 18s. net."St. Andrews has had among her many lovers some who have aspired also to be her historians. These older chronicles are like to be superseded, except with those of dry-as-dust tastes, by Mr. Andrew Lang's story of the fortunes of the 'dear city of youth and dream.' It is the record of St. Andrews that will henceforth be read and remembered."—Scotsman.INSPIRATION: Eight Lectures on the Early History and Origin of the Doctrine of Biblical Inspiration. Being the Bampton Lectures for 1893. By the Rev. W. SANDAY, M.A. D.D. LL.D., Dean Ireland's Professor of Exegesis. 8vo. 16s."This book will be found in a very high degree both interesting and illuminating by any man of ordinary literary intelligence who has a taste for candid inquiry in regard to the Bible and for well-grounded conclusions. For here we have an account of the Bible by a man very remarkably well qualified to give it. No writer of any school or on any subject could give us the impression of unprejudiced intelligence more strongly."—Guardian.The LITTLE SISTERS of the POOR. By Mrs. ABEL RAM, Author of 'The Most Beautiful,' 'Emmanuel,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.The STUDENT'S DICTIONARY of MEDICINE and the ALLIED SCIENCES. Comprising the Pronunciation, Derivation, and Full Explanation of Medical Terms, together with much Collateral Descriptive Matter, numerous Tables, &c. By ALEXANDER DUANE, M.D., Assistant-Surgeon to the New York Ophthalmic and Aural Institute, Reviser of Medical Terms for 'Webster's International Dictionary.' 8vo. 21s.

NEW NOVEL BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

A GENTLEMAN of FRANCE: being the Memoirs of GASTON DE BONNE, Sieur de Mareac. By STANLEY J. WEYMAN, Author of 'The House of the Wolf.' 3 vols. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d."The book is not only good literature, it is a 'rattling good story,' instinct with the spirit of true adventure and stirring emotion. Of love and peril, intrigue and fighting, there is plenty, and many scenes could not have been bettered."—Athenæum.

NEW NOVEL BY H. RIDER HAGGARD.

MONTEZUMA'S DAUGHTER. By H. RIDER HAGGARD, Author of 'She,' 'Allan Quatermain,' &c. With 24 Full-Page Illustrations by Maurice Greiffenhagen. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s."Readers will thank the good fortune which has put into their hands a book for these long winter evenings which will chain and rivet their attention and awaken their interest to the highest pitch. Mr. Haggard has never produced anything better, either in matter or in manner."—Observer.The ONE GOOD GUEST: a Story. By L. B. WALFORD. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d."Mrs. Walford has never written a pleasanter novel."—Scotsman."A story so full of the best of human nature that it is vastly pleasant to read, and equally grateful to remember."—National Observer.WHAT NECESSITY KNOWS. By L. DOUGALL, Author of 'Beggars All,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s."A very remarkable novel, and not a book that can be lightly classified or arranged with other works of fiction. It is a distinct creation, and we approach it in the spirit of wonder, not unmixed with suspicion, which is the greeting that awaits most new things."—Manchester Guardian.THE SILVER LIBRARY.—TWO NEW VOLUMES.*CARTHAGE and the CARTHAGINIANS.

By R. BOSWORTH SMITH, M.A., Assistant Master in Harrow School. With Maps, Plans, &c. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The EXPANSE of HEAVEN: Essays on the Wonders of the Firmament. By R. A. PROCTOR. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW, No. 367,

Will be published on January 16.

Contents.

1. MEMOIRS of CHANCELLOR PASQUIER.
2. THE ECONOMY of HIGH WAGES.
3. THE POETRY of RURAL LIFE.
4. RECENT EDITIONS of TACITUS.
5. POPULAR LITERATURE of MODERN ITALY.
6. The LAST CAMPAIGN of MONTROSE.

7. The RESULTS of the CRUSADES.
8. AMONG the HAIRY AINU.
9. ADDRESSES of the late EARL of DERBY.
10. The PROGRESS of ANGLING.
11. The SESSION of 1893.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. New York: 15, East 16th-street.

NOW READY.

LABOUR AND THE POPULAR WELFARE.

BY

W. H. MALLOCK,

Author of 'Is Life Worth Living?' 'Social Equality,' &c.

Crown 8vo. price 6s.

Vol. I. demy 8vo. price 15s.

THE PRINCIPLES OF POLITICAL ECONOMY.

BY

J. SHIELD NICHOLSON,

Professor of Political Economy in the University of Edinburgh.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. price 25s.

STUDIES

OF THE

GREEK POETS.

By JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

New and Enlarged Edition.

With a Chapter on HERONDAS.

Crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

AN INTRODUCTION

TO THE

STUDY OF DANTE.

By JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

Third Edition.

Crown 8vo. illustrated, price 7s. 6d.

OUR LIFE IN THE SWISS HIGHLANDS.

By JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS

And his DAUGHTER MARGARET.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. price 25s.

THE REMAINS

OF

ANCIENT ROME.

By J. HENRY MIDDLETON,

Director of the South Kensington Museum.

Illustrated with 102 Wood Engravings and 4 Coloured Plans.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

WHERE TO GO ABROAD.

A Guide to the Watering-Places and Health Resorts of Europe, The Mediterranean, &c., and including a Trip through India.

Edited by A. R. HOPE-MONCRIEFF.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London, W.

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Now ready, 3 vols. price 31s. 6d.

'LISBETH. By LESLIE KEITH,
Author of 'The Chilcotes,'
'In Spite of Herself,' &c.

"Unqualified praise may be cordially and unhesitatingly accorded to 'Lisbeth,' in which are readily discoverable all the inventive, constructive, and literary elements that, when felicitously combined, furnish the material of which a really first-class novel may be fashioned by a master hand."

Daily Telegraph.

DEDICATED BY PERMISSION TO LORD ROBERTS.

Now ready, price 6s.

A KING'S HUSSAR: being the Military Memoirs for Twenty-five Years of a Troop Sergeant-Major of the 14th (King's)
Hussars. Edited by HER-BERT COMPTON.

"It is rarely our privilege to call public attention to so interesting, instructive, and wholesome a book as 'A King's Hussar.'"

Daily Telegraph.

Now ready, price 6s.

DR. DUMÁNY'S WIFE. By MAURUS JÓKAI.

"In the story itself the most noticeable qualities are the judicious courage and the brilliant invention of the writer. The most trivial incidents of the story are not taken from the common stock of common novelists; each of them forms a part of an artistic representation of real life."—Speaker.

POPULAR EDITION, now ready, price 6s.

The STORY of FRANCIS
CLUDDE. By STANLEY J.
WEYMAN, Author of 'A Gentleman of France,' &c.

"There is one book among all these new books which kept a weary reviewer from his bed. That book is 'Francis Cludde,' by Mr. Stanley Weyman. All fathers, guardians, and uncles should buy a copy to keep, and another, or several others, to give away to boys."—Mr. ANDREW LANG in the New Review.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED,
Ludgate-hill, London.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

LADY WILLIAM. By Mrs. Oliphant. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

RICHARD ESCOTT. By Edward H. Cooper, Author of 'Geoffrey Hamilton.' 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

ATHENÆUM.—"The weakness and pain and the dreadful spiritual isolation and loneliness in one who had been at least strong in evil doing are well defined and interpreted."

STANDARD.—"A book that will not easily be put down till it is finished."

MARION DARCHE: a Story without Comment. By F. Marion

CRAWFORD. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 12s.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Charming in style, and very easy to read."

ATHENÆUM.—"The characters are thoroughly interesting, the dialogue easy, and the situations effective. Readers in search of a good novel may be recommended to lose no time in making the acquaintance of Marion Darche, her devoted friends, and her one enemy."

SYLVIE and BRUNO CONCLUDED. By Lewis Carroll. With
Illustrations by Harry Furniss. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

The LOVER'S LEXICON: a Handbook for Novelists, Playwrights, Philosophers, and Minor Poets; but especially for the Enamoured. By FREDERICK GREENWOOD.
Crown 8vo. 6s.

SPECTATOR.—"In conception and plan the book is most original. Endless are the questions which arise out of this fascinating volume. Each page provides a fresh problem for discussion."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Mr. Greenwood's pages often blossom into great literary beauty, but over them all is the light of that 'loveliness' which comes of humanity."

REMINISCENCES of the GREAT MUTINY, 1857-59. Including the Relief, Siege, and Capture of Lucknow, and the Campaigns in Rohilkund and Oude. By WILLIAM FORBES-MITCHELL, late Sergeant 93rd Sutherland Highlanders. Extra crown 8vo. 5s. 6d. net.

FALL GAZETTE.—"It is only from such a book as this that the civilian can know anything worth knowing of what may be styled the minor history of actual warfare from the point of view of the ranks. The most vivid effort of the fictionist pales before the bare grim truths which this Scottish ex-sergeant describes with an unstrained vigour of realism."

SPECTATOR.—"One of the very best soldiers' books ever written."

TIMES.—"His narrative is vivid and full of strange and romantic incidents."

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"A volume of extraordinary interest, force, and vividness."

The GROWTH and INFLUENCE of CLASSICAL GREEK

POETRY. Lectures delivered in 1893 on the Percy Turnbull Memorial Foundation in the Johns Hopkins University. By R. C. JEBB, Litt.D. M.P. Crown 8vo. 7s. net.

MORNING POST.—"It is impossible to part from Dr. Jebb's work without a word of hearty commendation on account of the masterly style in which it is written. His long and living familiarity with the exquisite beauty of the Greek literary style has clearly influenced his own."

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"Nothing but this easy mastery of the whole subject, arising from long and detailed study of every section of it, could have made it possible for him to give a survey at once so fresh and so complete."

TIMES.—"We know of no book upon the same subject and upon the same scale which is of equal excellence."

WITNESSES to the UNSEEN, and other Essays. By Wilfrid

WARD, Author of 'William George Ward and the Oxford Movement' and 'William George Ward and the Catholic Revival.' 8vo. 10s. 6d.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"His whole book recalls men to those witnesses for the unseen, which laboratories cannot analyse, yet which are abundantly rational."

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"Mr. Ward's reputation as a philosophical thinker at once accurate, candid, and refined, and as the master of a literary style alike vigorous, scholarly, and popular, has been amply established by his previous works. That it is well worthy of his reputation is enough to say in commendation of his new book."

TIMES.—"A series of brilliant and suggestive essays. This pregnant and suggestive view of the larger intellectual tendencies of our own and other ages is enlivened and illustrated by Mr. Ward with much speculative insight and great literary brilliancy."

MEDIÆVAL RECORDS and SONNETS. By Aubrey de Vere.

Globe 8vo. 5s.

SPECTATOR.—"When he writes of chivalry, of saints, of miracles, it seems as if one of Chaucer's freed figures, with its at once fresh and yet formal simplicity, had descended from the wall and were talking to us in its own person."

LETTERS of TRAVEL. By the Right Rev. Phillips Brooks, late Bishop of Massachusetts. Extra crown 8vo. 5s. 6d. net.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"They are brightly written, and written, obviously enough, for the information and pleasure of the family circle in Philadelphia or, latterly, in Boston. Easy and natural in style, they are naturally easy reading."

ELEMENTS of SYNTHETIC SOLID GEOMETRY. By Prof.

M. P. DUPUIS, M.A. F.R.S.C., Professor of Pure Mathematics in the University of Queen's College, Kingston, Canada. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d. net.

ELECTRIC WAVES: being Researches on the Propagation of Electric Action with Finite Velocity through Space. By Professor HEINRICH HERTZ, of Bonn. Authorized Translation by Professor D. B. JONES, B.Sc. With Preface by Lord KELVIN, F.R.S. Illustrated. 8vo. 10s. net.

DRAWING and DESIGN: a Class Text-Book for Beginners. By

B. R. TAYLOR, Head Master of the Birmingham Municipal School of Art. With Illustrations. Oblong crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

BIRMINGHAM DAILY POST.—"All the lessons are nicely calculated to cultivate eye, hand, and taste. We have never seen a book of instruction for beginners comparable to this. It ought to be in the hands of every young person in the land."

LEAD WORK: Old and Ornamental, and for the most part

English. By W. R. LETHABY. With Illustrations. Extra crown 8vo. 4s. 6d. net.

BUILDING NEWS.—"The author has brought his artistic feeling and skill into the consideration of a craft which has been too long left to plumbers. We recommend this book to the attention of the architect and all craftsmen in lead."

BRITISH ARCHITECT.—"We have in this little book of his the enunciation of principles of treatment and methods of working as exemplified in old examples of the craft."

PLUMBER and DECORATOR.—"Plumbers do not have many books which help them to grasp what can be done with lead, so we recommend them to buy this one. Architects should possess themselves of copies, and thus be better able to utilize such an imperishable material as lead in their external decorations. Even the idle reader would find something to interest him."

WOOLLEN SPINNING: a Text-Book for Students in Technical

Schools and Colleges, and for Skillful Practical Men in Woollen Mills. By CHARLES VICKERMAN, Author of 'The Woollen Thread' and 'Notes on Carding.' With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6s.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

CROSBY LOCKWOOD & SON'S EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

DE FIVAS' FRENCH CLASS BOOKS.

DE FIVAS, NEW GRAMMAR OF FRENCH GRAMMARS. Comprising the substance of all the most approved French Grammars extant, but more especially of the Standard Work, 'La Grammaire des Grammaires,' sanctioned by the French Academy and the University of Paris. With numerous Exercises and Examples Illustrative of every Rule. By Dr. V. DE FIVAS, M.A. F.R.S.E., &c. Fifty-second Edition, Revised and Enlarged, with the Author's latest Notes, Corrections, and Additions, and an Appendix on the HISTORY and ETYMOLOGY of the FRENCH LANGUAGE. 448 pp. strongly bound, 2s. 6d.

"This French Grammar has for a long time been recognized as the best we have in England, and it seems to be rapidly superseding most others."—Educational Times.

"The addition of an Appendix on the History of the French Language, compiled from the best authorities, gives a new value to this old-established school-book."—Athenæum.

"The best and most complete grammar of the French language ever prepared for English students."—Schoolmaster.

"It would be difficult to name a grammar better suited for instilling a sound knowledge of the French language."—Schoolmaster.

DE FIVAS, ELEMENTARY FRENCH GRAMMAR. To which is added a FRENCH READER; with a FRENCH-ENGLISH VOCABULARY of all the Words used. Third Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d. cloth.

"Those who are engaged in teaching French to beginners could not base their teaching upon a more useful school-book. The elementary rules are explained in a clear and coherent system, and the selection of extracts in prose and verse is admirably well adapted for the study of junior classes."—Schoolmaster.

DE FIVAS, NEW GUIDE TO MODERN FRENCH CONVERSATION; or, the Student and Tourist's French Vade-Mecum. Thirty-first Edition, Revised, with Additions. 18mo. 2s. 6d. half bound.

"Compiled with great labour and care, and modernised down to the latest changes in the custom of ordinary French speech."—School Board Chronicle.

DE FIVAS, INTRODUCTION à la LANGUE FRANÇAISE; ou, Faibles et Contre Châtes, Anecdotes Instructives, Fables Mémorables, &c. Avec un Dictionnaire de tous les Mots traduits en Anglais. Twenty-eighth Edition. 12mo. 2s. 6d. strongly bound.

"We strongly advise students who have read carefully a good French grammar to read this excellent book."—Public Opinion.

DE FIVAS, BEAUTÉS des ÉCRIVAINS FRANÇAIS, Anciens et Modernes. Augmentée de Notes Historiques, Géographiques, Littéraires, &c. Fifteenth Edition. 12mo. 2s. 6d. strongly bound.

"A better book for advanced students it would be difficult to have."—Teacher.

DE FIVAS, Le TRÉSOR NATIONAL; or, Guide to the Translation of English into French at Sight. Seventh Edition. 12mo. 1s. 6d. strongly bound.

"Idiomatical and Conversational Phrases, Anecdotes told and untold, and Scraps from various English Writers. The FRENCH LANGUAGE: a Complete Compendium of its History and Etymology. By H. ROUBAUD, B.A., Paris, Editor of 'Caesari's French Dictionary.' (Written expressly as an APPENDIX to DE FIVAS' GRAMMAR.) Fcap. 8vo. 1s. cloth.

"A most desirable book for students who wish to perfect themselves in a knowledge of French."—School Gazette.

ELEMENTARY FRENCH BOOKS.

PETITES CAUSERIES: being Elementary French and English Conversations for Young Students and Home Teaching. Fully illustrated. By ACHILLE MOTTEAU. Two parts, 6d. each; or 1 vol. 1s. 6d.

BARBAUD, LEÇONS pour des ENFANTS de l'ÂGE de DEUX ANS JUSQU'À CINQ. Traduites de l'Anglais de Mme. BARBAUD par M. PASQUIER. Suivies des MYMES en PROSE pour les ENFANTS. Avec un Vocabulaire. 18mo. 2s. cloth.

La BAGATELLE: intended to introduce Children of Five or Six Years Old to some Knowledge of the French Language. 18mo. 2s. cloth.

VOCABULAIRE SYMBOLIQUE ANGO-FRANÇAIS. A Symbolic French and English Vocabulary. By L. C. MAGNOT. Twelfth Edition. 4to. 3s. 6d. cloth.

FRENCH EXAMINATION PAPERS. Set from 1881 to 1890, and the French Papers set for Commercial Certificates from 1885 to 1890. With Vocabularies and Notes, by O. BAUMANN, B.A. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d. cloth.

"Will prove of great service to schools preparing for the Cambridge Locals."—Educational Review.

FRENCH SENTENCES and SYNTAX. For Students entering the Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations, College of Preceptors' Examinations, Army Preliminary, &c. By O. BAUMANN, B.A. Fourth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. cloth.

"Invaluable for students entering for such examinations."—Civil Service Gazette.

COMMERCIAL EDUCATION.

LESSONS in COMMERCE: a Text-Book for Students. By Prof. R. GAMBARO. Revised and Edited by Prof. JAMES GAULT. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Of considerable service to the cause of commercial education."—Chamber of Commerce Journal.

The FOREIGN COMMERCIAL CORRESPONDENT. By C. B. BAKER. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Thoroughly good, well arranged, and reliable."—Schoolmaster.

SPANISH GRAMMAR and READER. By OSWALD NORTH. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d. cloth.

"A very good introduction to Spanish."—Schoolmaster.

CIVIL SERVICE HANDBOOKS.

The ESSAY WRITER. By HENRY SEIPTON. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

A HANDBOOK OF ENGLISH LITERATURE. By H. A. DOBSON, Board of Trade. 2s. 6d.

The CIVIL SERVICE GEOGRAPHY. By L. M. D. SPENCE. Tenth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 6d.

The CIVIL SERVICE HISTORY OF ENGLAND. By F. A. WHITE, B.A. Seventh Edition. Revised by H. A. DOBSON. 2s. 6d.

The PRÉCIS BOOK. By W. COSMO MONKHOUSE. 2s. 6d. cloth.—KEY, 2s. 6d.

The CIVIL SERVICE BOOK-KEEPING; or, Book-keeping no Mystery. Fcap. 1s. 6d.

The CIVIL SERVICE ENGLISH GRAMMAR. By W. V. YATES. Fcap. 1s. 6d.

The CIVIL SERVICE FIRST FRENCH BOOK. By A. MOTTEAU. 1s. 6d.—KEY, 2s. 6d.

The CIVIL SERVICE COACH. By S. SAVILL. New Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

WEALE'S EDUCATIONAL SERIES.

DICTIONARIES & GRAMMARS.

LATIN GRAMMAR. By T. GOODWIN. 1s. 6d.

LATIN and ENGLISH DICTIONARY. By T. GOODWIN. Latin-Eng., 2s.; Eng.-Latin, 1s. 6d.

GREEK GRAMMAR. By H. C. HAMILTON. 1s. 6d.

GREEK and ENGLISH LEXICON. By H. H. HAMILTON. Greek-Eng., 2s. 6d.; Eng.-Greek, 2s.

HEBREW GRAMMAR. By Dr. BRESSLAU. 1s. 6d.

HEBREW-ENGLISH DICTIONARY. By Dr. BRESSLAU. 700 pp. 6s.

ENGLISH-HEBREW DICTIONARY. By Dr. BRESSLAU. 200 pp. 3s.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR. By HYDE CLARKE, D.C.L. 1s. 6d.

DICTIONARY of the ENGLISH LANGUAGE. By HYDE CLARKE, D.C.L. 470 pp. 3s. 6d.

FRENCH GRAMMAR. By G. L. STRAUSS, Ph.D. 1s. 6d.

DICTIONARY of the FRENCH LANGUAGE. By A. ELWES. 420 pp. 3s.

GERMAN GRAMMAR. By G. L. STRAUSS, Ph.D. 1s. 6d.

GERMAN TRIGLOT DICTIONARY. By N. E. S. A. HAMILTON. 240 pp. 3s.

ITALIAN GRAMMAR. By A. ELWES. 1s. 6d.

ITALIAN TRIGLOT DICTIONARY. By A. ELWES. 800 pp. 7s. 6d.

SPANISH GRAMMAR. By A. ELWES. 1s. 6d.

SPANISH and ENGLISH DICTIONARY. By A. ELWES. 800 pp. 4s.

PORTUGUESE GRAMMAR. By A. ELWES. 1s. 6d.

PORTUGUESE and ENGLISH DICTIONARY. By A. ELWES. 8s.

* List of WEALE'S SERIES (360 Vols.) on application.

SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL.

AGRICULTURE.

Farm Live Stock of Great Britain. By R. WALLACE, Professor of Agriculture, Edinburgh University. Third Edition, Revised and Enlarged. With 120 Illustrations. 12s. 6d. cloth.

The Complete Grazier. Originally written by W. YOUNG. Rewritten by W. FREEM, LL.D., Author of 'Elements of Agriculture.' With 400 Illustrations. Imperial 8vo. 51s. 6d. half bound.

British Dairying: a Handy Volume on the Work of the Dairy Farm. By Professor J. P. SHELDON. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. cloth.

The Complete Text-Book of Farm ENGINEERING. By Professor J. SCOTT. With 600 Illustrations. Fcap. 8vo. 12s. half bound.

The Fields of Great Britain: a Text-Book of Agriculture. By H. CLEMENTS. Second Edition, Revised. 12mo. 2s. 6d. cloth.

BUILDING.

Practical Building Construction: a Handbook for Students Preparing for Examinations, &c. By J. P. ALLEN. Containing about 1,000 Illustrations. 8vo. 12s. 6d. cloth.

The Mechanics of Architecture: a Treatise on Applied Mechanics, especially adapted to the use of Architects. By H. W. TARN, M.A. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth.

The Science of Building: an Elementary Treatise on the Principles of Construction. By E. W. TARN, M.A. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d. cloth.

Concrete: its Nature and Uses. A Book for Architects, Builders, and Clerks of Works. By G. L. SUTCLIFFE, A.R.I.B.A. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth.

Ventilation: a Text-Book to the Practice of the Art of Ventilating Buildings. By W. P. BUCHAN. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d. cloth.

Plumbing: a Text-Book to the Practice of the Art or Craft of the Plumber. By WM. P. BUCHAN, R.P. Sixth Edition. 12mo. 3s. 6d. cloth.

ELECTRICITY.

The Electric Transformation of Power, and its Application by the Electric Motor, including Electric Railway Construction. By PHILIP ATKINSON, A.M. Ph.D. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth.

The Electrical Engineer's Pocket-Book of MODERN RULES, FORMULÆ, TABLES, and DATA. By H. R. KEMPE, M.I.E.E. Second Edition, Revised, with Additions. 5s. leather.

Dynamo Construction: a Handbook for Engineer Constructors and Electricians in Charge. By J. W. URQUHART. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth.

Electric Light: its Production and Use. By J. W. URQUHART. Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Electric Light Fitting: a Handbook for Working Electrical Engineers. By J. W. URQUHART. Second Edition, Enlarged. Crown 8vo. 6s. cloth.

Electric Ship-Lighting: a Handbook on the Practical Fitting and Running of Ships' Electrical Plant. By J. W. URQUHART, C.E. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The Standard Electrical Dictionary. By T. O'CONNOR SLOANE, A.M. Ph.D. 620 pp. with 350 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 12s. 6d. cloth.

ENGINEERING AND MINING.

A Handbook on the Steam Engine. By H. HARDER, C.E. Translated from the German by H. E. P. POWLES, A.M. Inst. C.E. With 1,100 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 5s. cloth.

Text-Book on the Steam Engine. By Prof. T. M. GOODRICK, M.A. Twelfth Edition, Enlarged. Crown 8vo. 4s. cloth.

Practical Surveying: a Text-Book for Students. By G. W. USILL, A.M.I.C.E. Third Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth.

* This Paper Edition for Field Use, 12s. 6d. leather.

The Colliery Manager's Handbook: a Comprehensive Treatise on the Laying-out and Working of Collieries. By 'ALBION' FARMLEY, M.E. Second Edition, Revised and much enlarged. 8vo. 11s. 5s. cloth.

Machinery for Metalliferous Mines. A Practical Treatise for Mining Engineers, Metallurgists, and Managers of Mines. By R. HENRY DAVIES, F.O.S. M.E. Crown 8vo. 350 pp. with 314 Illustrations. 12s. 6d. cloth.

London: CROSBY LOCKWOOD & SON, 7, Stationers' Hall-court, E.C.

BLACKIE & SON'S EDUCATIONAL LIST.

CLASSICS.

CAESAR'S GALLIC WAR. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, Exercises, and Vocabularies, by JOHN BROWN, B.A., Worcester College, Oxford. With Coloured Map, Pictorial Illustrations, and Plans of Battles. Book I., cloth, 1s. 6d. Book II., cloth, 1s. 6d.

VIRGIL'S AENEID. Book I. Edited, with Introduction, Outline of Prosody, Notes, Exercises on the Hexameter, Vocabularies, &c., by Rev. A. J. CHURCH, M.A., sometime Professor of Latin in University College, London. [Nearly ready.]

LATIN STORIES: Short Selections from the best Prose Authors. Edited, with Notes, Vocabularies, and an Introductory Note on Translation, by A. D. GODLEY, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Magdalen College, Oxford. Cloth, 1s.

[This book is suitable as a Reader, and as a practice-book in "unseen."]

XENOPHON'S ANABASIS. Book I. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Appendix on Greek Construction, and Vocabulary, by C. E. BROWN RIGG, M.A., Chief Classical Master in Magdalen College School, Oxford. With Map, Plans of Battles, &c. [Nearly ready.]

A CLASSICAL COMPENDIUM: being a Handbook to Greek and Latin Constructions. By C. E. BROWN RIGG, M.A., Chief Classical Master in Magdalen College School, Oxford. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

[This book will be of great assistance to students of prose composition.]

ENGLISH.

INTRODUCTION to SHAKESPEARE. By Professor DOWDEN. Illustrated. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

The WARWICK SHAKESPEARE. A New Series of the Greater Plays.

HAMLET. Edited by R. K. CHAMBERS, B.A., sometime Scholar of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

MACBETH. Edited by the same. Cloth, 1s.

RICHARD II. Edited by G. H. HERFORD, Litt.D., Professor of English at University College, Aberystwyth. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

JULIUS CAESAR. Edited by A. D. INNES, M.A., sometime Scholar of Oriel College, Oxford. Cloth, 1s.

BLACKIE'S JUNIOR SCHOOL SHAKESPEARE.

The MERCHANT of VENICE. Edited by GEORGE H. HLY, B.A., sometime Assistant Master in the United Westminster Schools. Cloth, 6d.

HENRY the EIGHTH. Edited by the same. Cloth, 6d.

HENRY the FIFTH. Edited by W. BARRY, B.A., English Master at Tottenham College, Staffordshire. Cloth, 6d.

CORIOLANUS. Edited by WALTER DENT. Cloth, 10d.

JULIUS CAESAR. Edited by the same. Cloth, 2d.

SCOTT'S LAY of the LAST MINSTREL.

Complete, with Introduction and Notes. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

Also in Two Parts, Cantos I.-III. and IV.-VI., cloth, 10d. each. And in Single Cantos, paper, 3d. each; cloth, 3d. each.

ADDISON'S Sir ROGER de COVERLEY.

Edited by FRANCIS B. WILCOFF. Cloth, 10d.

GRAY'S ELEGY, ETON COLLEGE ODE, and the BARD. Edited by ELIZABETH LEE, Lecturer in English at the Sutherland Hill High School. Paper, 3d.; cloth, 3d.

The PUPIL'S ENGLISH GRAMMAR: an

Introduction to the Study of English Grammar, based upon the Analysis of Sentences. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

MODERN LANGUAGES.

FRENCH STORIES: a Reading Book for Junior and Middle Forms. With Notes, English Exercises, and Vocabulary, by MARGUERITE NINET, French Mistress at the Girls' High School, Graham Street, Eaton-square. Cloth, 1s.

A MODERN FRENCH READER: Interesting Extracts from Contemporary French. With Notes and Vocabulary by J. J. BRUZMAKER, B.A., Examiner to the College of Preceptors, &c. Cloth, 1s.

SCHILLER'S SONG of the BELL, and other Poems. Edited by GEORGE MACDONALD, M.A., Balliol College, Oxford. Cloth, 6d.

HISTORY.

OUTLINES of the WORLD'S HISTORY, ANCIENT, MEDIEVAL, and MODERN, with special reference to the History of Civilization and the Progress of Mankind. By the Rev. EDGAR SANDERSON, M.A., sometime Scholar of Clare College, Cambridge. With many Illustrations and Coloured Maps. 664 pp. cloth, red edges, 9s. 6d.

Also separately:—Part I., ANCIENT ORIENTAL MONARCHIES, 1s. Part II., GREECE and ROME, 2s. Part III., MEDIEVAL HISTORY, 1s. Part IV., MODERN HISTORY, 2s. 6d.

A HISTORY of the BRITISH EMPIRE. With Pictorial Illustrations, Tables, Maps, and Plans. By the Rev. EDGAR SANDERSON, M.A. 476 pp. cloth, 2s. 6d.

A SUMMARY of BRITISH HISTORY. With Appendixes. By the Rev. EDGAR SANDERSON, M.A., Author of 'A History of the British Empire,' &c. 205 pp. cloth, 1s.

An EPILOGUE of HISTORY, ANCIENT, MEDIEVAL, and MODERN. For Higher Schools, Colleges, and Private Study. By CARL FLOETE. Translated by W. H. TILLINGHAST. 636 pp. cloth, 7s. 6d.

A SYNOPSIS of ENGLISH HISTORY; or, Historical Note-Book. Compiled by HERBERT WILLS. Cloth, 2s.

GEOGRAPHY.

A PRONOUNCING VOCABULARY of MODERN GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES, nearly Ten Thousand in number. With Notes on Spelling and Pronunciation, &c. By GEORGE G. CHISHOLM, M.A. B.Sc., Author of 'A Handbook of Commercial Geography.' Cloth, 1s. 6d.

A SYNOPSIS of the WORLD, a Concise Handbook for Examinations and for General Reference. With a complete Series of Maps. Cloth, 1s.

ZEHDEN'S COMMERCIAL GEOGRAPHY of the WORLD: Chief Centres of Trade and Means of Communication, Natural Productions, Exports, Manufactures, &c. Translated from the German of Prof. ZEHDEN, Handels-Akademie, Leipzig. With Map of the Chief Trade Routes. Second Edition, Corrected to date. 362 pp. cloth, 3s.

MATHEMATICS.

EUCLID'S ELEMENTS of GEOMETRY.

With Notes, Examples, and Exercises. Arranged by A. E. LAYNG, M.A., Head Master of Bedford Grammar School, formerly Scholar of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. Books I.-VI. with XI. and Appendix, and a wide Selection of Examination Papers. Cloth, 4s. 6d.

Books I.-IV. in 1 vol., 2s. 6d. Book I. 1s.; II., 6d.; III., 1s.; IV., 6d.; V. and VI. together, 1s.; XI. 1s. 6d.

PRELIMINARY ALGEBRA. By R. WYKE BAYLISS, B.A., Vice-Principal of the United Service Academy, Southsea, formerly Scholar and Prize-man of Peterhouse, Cambridge. Cloth, 2s.

ALGEBRA. Up to and including Progressions and Rules of Notation. By J. G. KERR, M.A., Head Master of Allan Glen's Technical School, Glasgow. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

ALGEBRAIC FACTORS. How to Find Them and How to Use Them. Factors in the Examination Room. By Dr. W. T. KNIGHT, Head Master Towcester School. Cloth, 2s.

ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK of TRIGONOMETRY. By R. H. PINKERTON, B.A., Balliol College, Oxford. Cloth, 2s.

MATHEMATICAL WRINKLES for MATRICULATION and other EXAMS. By Dr. W. T. KNIGHT, Head Master Towcester School. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

An INTRODUCTION to the DIFFERENTIAL and INTEGRAL CALCULUS. With Examples of Applications to Mechanical Problems. By W. J. MILLAR, C.E. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

PICKERING'S MERCANTILE ARITHMETIC. By R. T. PICKERING, Accountant to the Birmingham School Board. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

SCIENCE.

HEAT, and the PRINCIPLES of THERMODYNAMICS. By C. H. DRAPE, D.Sc. B.A. With many Illustrations. Cloth, 4s. 6d.

HYDROSTATICS and PNEUMATICS. By R. H. PINKERTON, B.A., Balliol College, Oxford. Fully illustrated. Cloth, 4s. 6d.

The STUDENT'S INTRODUCTORY HANDBOOK of SYSTEMATIC BOTANY. By JOSEPH W. OLIVER, Lecturer on Botany and Geology at the Birmingham Municipal Technical School. Crown 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK of PHYSICS. By Prof. EVERETT, D.C.L. F.R.S. Fifth Edition. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

DESCHANEL'S NATURAL PHILOSOPHY. Translated and Edited by Prof. EVERETT. Twelfth Edition. Cloth, 15s.; also in Parts, limp cloth, 4s. 6d. each.

Part I. Mechanics, &c. Part II. Heat. Part III. Electricity, &c. Part IV. Sound and Light.

OUTLINES of NATURAL PHILOSOPHY. By Prof. EVERETT. Enlarged Edition. Cloth, 4s.

THEORETICAL MECHANICS. By R. H. PINKERTON, B.A., Balliol College, Oxford, Lecturer in Mathematics, University College, Cardiff. Cloth, 2s.

ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK of DYNAMICS and HYDROSTATICS. By R. H. PINKERTON, B.A. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

The ARITHMETIC of MAGNETISM and ELECTRICITY. By ROBERT GUNN. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

MAGNETISM and ELECTRICITY. By W. JEROME HARRISON and CHARLES A. WHITE. Cloth, 2s.

LIGHT, HEAT, and SOUND. By CHARLES H. DRAPE, D.Sc., Head Master of Woolwich High School. Cloth, 2s.

A TEXT-BOOK of ORGANIC CHEMISTRY. By A. BERNTHSEN, Ph.D., formerly Professor of Chemistry in the University of Heidelberg. Translated by GEORGE M'GOWAN, Ph.D. Cloth, 1s.

ELEMENTARY INORGANIC CHEMISTRY, THEORETICAL and PRACTICAL. With Examples in Chemical Arithmetic. By A. HUMPHOLDT SEITON, F.R.S.E. F.I.C. F.C.S. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

CHEMISTRY for ALL; or, Elementary Alternative Chemistry in Accordance with the Science and Art Syllabus. By W. JEROME HARRISON, F.G.S., and E. J. BAILLY. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

QUALITATIVE CHEMICAL ANALYSIS, INORGANIC and ORGANIC. By EDGAR E. HOWELL, F.C.S. Cloth, 2s.

An ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK of PHYSIOLOGY. By J. M'GREGOR-ROBERTSON, M.A. M.B., Lecturer in Physiology, Queen Margaret College. New and Revised Edition. Cloth, 4s.

ELEMENTARY PHYSIOLOGY. By VINCENT T. MUNCHIE. Cloth, 2s.

EARTH KNOWLEDGE. A Text-Book of Geography. By W. JEROME HARRISON, F.G.S., and M. ROWLAND WAKFIELD. Cloth, 2s. Also in Two Parts—Part I., 1s. 6d.; Part II., 2s.

ELEMENTARY BOTANY. By JOSEPH W. OLIVER, Lecturer on Botany and Geology at the Birmingham and Midland Institute. Cloth, 2s.

An ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK of GEOLOGY. By W. JEROME HARRISON, F.G.S. Cloth, 2s.

An ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK of APPLIED MECHANICS. By DAVID ALLAN LOW (Whitworth Scholar), M.Inst.M.E. Cloth, 2s.

ELEMENTARY AGRICULTURE. Edited by R. P. WRIGHT. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

ELEMENTARY HYGIENE. By H. ROWLAND WAKEFIELD, Science Demonstrator, Swansea School Board. Cloth, 2s.

* * Detailed CATALOGUE of EDUCATIONAL WORKS will be sent post free on application.

London: BLACKIE & SON, Limited, 49 and 50, Old Bailey.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST OF SCHOOL-BOOKS.

SIR WILLIAM SMITH'S
EDUCATIONAL SERIES.YOUNG BEGINNER'S LATIN COURSE.
2s. each.

- I. First Latin Book. Grammar, Easy Questions, Exercises, and Vocabulary.
- II. Second Latin Book. An Easy Latin Reading Book, with Analysis of Sentences.
- III. Third Latin Book. Exercises on the Syntax, with Vocabulary.
- IV. Fourth Latin Book. A Latin Vocabulary for Beginners, arranged according to Subjects and Etymologies.

PRINCIPIA LATINA.

*Part I. Grammar, Delectus, Exercises, and Vocabulary. 3s. 6d.

*APPENDIX to PART I. Additional Exercises and Examination Papers. 3s. 6d.

*Part II. A First Latin Reading Book. 3s. 6d.

*Part III. A First Latin Verse Book. 3s. 6d.

*Part IV. Latin Prose Composition. 3s. 6d.

*Part V. Short Tales and Anecdotes for Translation into Prose. 3s. 6d.

Students' Latin Grammar. 6s.

Smaller Latin Grammar. For Middle and Lower Forms. 3s. 6d.

A Child's First Latin Book. Comprising a Full Practice of Nouns, Pronouns, and Adjectives, with the Verbs. By T. D. HALL. Revised and Enlarged Edition. 2s.

GREEK COURSE.

INITIA GRÆCÆ.

*Part I. Grammar, Delectus, Exercises, and Vocabulary. 2s. 6d.

*APPENDIX to PART I. Additional Exercises and Examination Papers. 2s. 6d.

*Part II. A Greek Reading Book. 3s. 6d.

*Part III. Prose Composition. 3s. 6d.

Students' Greek Grammar. 6s.

Smaller Greek Grammar. For Middle and Lower Forms. 3s. 6d.

Greek Accidence. 2s. 6d.

Plato.—Selections. With Notes. 3s. 6d.

ENGLISH COURSE.

*English Grammar. With Exercises. 3s. 6d.

*Primary English Grammar. With Exercises and Questions. 1s.

Primary History of Britain. New and thoroughly Revised Edition. Coloured Map. 430 pp. 2s. 6d.

Modern Geography. 5s.

Smaller Modern Geography. 2s. 6d.

English Composition. Examples and Exercises. 3s. 6d.

FRENCH COURSE.

FRENCH PRINCIPIA.

*Part I. Grammar, Delectus, Exercises, Vocabulary, and Materials for Conversation. 3s. 6d.

*APPENDIX to PART I. Additional Exercises and Examination Papers. 2s. 6d.

*Part II. A French Reading Book, with Etymological Dictionary. 4s. 6d.

*Part III. Prose Composition. 4s. 6d.

Students' French Grammar. With an Introduction by M. LITTRE. 6s.

Smaller French Grammar. 3s. 6d.

GERMAN COURSE.

GERMAN PRINCIPIA.

*Part I. Grammar, Exercises, Vocabulary, and Materials for Conversation. 3s. 6d.

*Part II. Reading Book, with Dictionary. 3s. 6d.

Practical German Grammar. For Advanced Students. 3s. 6d.

ITALIAN COURSE.

ITALIAN PRINCIPIA.

*Part I. Grammar, Delectus, Exercises, Vocabulary. 3s. 6d.

*Part II. An Italian Reading Book. 3s. 6d.

MURRAY'S
STUDENTS' MANUALS.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. each. With Maps and Woodcuts.

THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

From its Establishment to the Reign of Commodus, 180.

By J. E. BURY.

The Students' Home: a History of England from the Earliest Times to 1086. Thoroughly Revised Edition. Continued to the Treaty of Berlin, 1878. By Prof. J. S. BREWER. 830 pp.

The Work may also be obtained in Three Divisions, price 2s. 6d. each. Part I. B.C. 65–A.D. 1485; Part II. A.D. 1485–1688; Part III. 1688–1878.

Modern Europe. By R. LODGE, M.A.

Europe during the Middle Ages. By HENRY HALLAM.

Constitutional History of England. By HENRY HALLAM.

Old and New Testament History. By PHILIP SMITH. 2 vols.

Ancient History. To the Conquests of Alexander the Great. By PHILIP SMITH.

Ecclesiastical History. 2 vols.: I. A.D. 90–1003; II. 1003–1604. By PHILIP SMITH.

English Church History. 3 vols.: I. 596–1509; II. 1509–1717; III. 1717–1844. By Canon PERRY.

Greece, to the Roman Conquest. By Sir WILLIAM SMITH. With Coloured Maps and Woodcuts.

Rome, to the Establishment of the Empire. By Dean LIDDELL.

Gibbon. By Sir WILLIAM SMITH.

France, to the Fall of the Second Empire. By W. H. JENKINS.

Ancient Geography. By Canon BRUN.

Modern Geography. By Canon BRUN.

Geography of British India. By Dr. GEORGE SMITH.

English Language: its Origin and Growth. By GEORGE F. MARSH.

English Literature. With Biographical Notices of the Authors. By T. B. SHAW.

Specimens of English Literature. By T. B. SHAW. 3s.

Moral Philosophy. By Dr. FLEMING.

SIR WM. SMITH'S
SMALLER HISTORIES.

Maps, Plans, and Woodcuts. 16mo. 3s. 6d. each.

England, from the Earliest Times to 1887. New and thoroughly Revised Edition.

Scripture History, continued down to A.D. 70.

Ancient History. Down to the Conquests of Alexander the Great.

Ancient Geography.

Modern Geography, Physical and Political. 2s. 6d.

Rome, to the Establishment of the Empire.

Greece, to the Roman Conquest.

Classical Mythology. For Ladies' Schools and Young Persons.

English Literature. With Lives of our Chief Writers.

Specimens of English Literature.

LITTLE ARTHUR'S HISTORIES.

England, from the Earliest Times, continued down to 1878. With 36 Woodcuts. 1s. 6d.

France, from the Earliest Times to the Fall of the Second Empire. Maps and Woodcuts. 2s. 6d.

MRS. MARKHAM'S HISTORIES.

England, from the First Invasion by the Romans down to the Year 1880. 100 Woodcuts. 3s. 6d.

France, from the Conquest of Gaul by Caesar down to 1878. 70 Woodcuts. 3s. 6d.

Germany, from the Invasion by Marius to 1880. 50 Woodcuts. 3s. 6d.

SIR WILLIAM SMITH'S
SCHOOL DICTIONARIES.
LATIN.

Smaller Latin English Dictionary. With a Dictionary of Proper Names. Thirty-first Edition. By Sir WILLIAM SMITH and Prof. T. D. HALL, M.A. 730 pp. 7s. 6d.

Smaller English-Latin Dictionary. 7s. 6d.

Larger Latin-English Dictionary. 16s.

Larger English-Latin Dictionary. Compiled from Original Sources. 16s.

An English-Latin Gradus, or Verse Dictionary. By A. C. AINGER, M.A., and H. G. WINTLE, M.A. 448 pp. Crown 8vo. 9s.

BIBLE.

Concise Dictionary of the Bible. Illustrations. 21s.

Smaller Bible Dictionary. Illustrations. 7s. 6d.

CLASSICAL.

Classical Dictionary of Greek and Roman Mythology, Biography, and Geography. With 750 Woodcuts. 18s.

Smaller Classical Dictionary. 200 Woodcuts. 7s. 6d.

Smaller Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities. 100 Woodcuts. 7s. 6d.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF THE GREEK TESTAMENT.

With CONCISE GRAMMAR, NOTES, and VOCABULARY. By THEOPHILUS D. HALL, M.A.

This Volume is intended to aid those who desire to study the New Testament in the original Greek Text without any previous knowledge of the language.

MURRAY'S UNIVERSITY EXTENSION MANUALS.

Edited by Prof. KNIGHT, of St. Andrews University.

An Introduction to Modern Geology. By Dr. R. D. ROBERTS. With Illustrations and Coloured Maps. 5s.

The Realm of Nature: a Manual of Physiology. By Dr. H. R. MILL. 19 Coloured Maps and 68 Illustrations. 5s.

The Study of Animal Life. By J. ARTHUR THOMSON. With many Illustrations. 5s.

The Elements of Ethics. By JOHN H. MUIRHEAD. 3s.

English Colonization and Empire. By A. CALDECOTT. Coloured Maps and Diagrams. 3s. 6d.

The Fine Arts. By Prof. BALDWIN BROWN. Illustrations. 3s. 6d.

The Use and Abuse of Money. By Prof. CUNNINGHAM, D.D. 3s.

The Philosophy of the Beautiful. By Prof. KNIGHT. Parts I. and II. 3s. 6d. each Part.

French Literature. By H. G. KENNEDY. 3s.

The Rise of the British Dominion in India. By Sir ALFRED LYALL. From the Early Days of the East India Company. Coloured Maps. 4s. 6d.

The Physiology of the Senses. By Professor MCKENDRICK and Dr. SHODGRASS. With Illustrations. 4s. 6d.

Chapters in Modern Botany. By Professor PATRICK GEDDES. With Illustrations. 3s. 6d.

The French Revolution. By C. H. Mallett. 3s. 6d.

English Literature. By WILLIAM BENTON. With Diagrams. 3s. 6d.

Logic, Inductive and Deductive. By WILLIAM MISTO, late Professor of Logic, University of Aberdeen. With Diagrams. 4s. 6d.

Greece in the Age of Pericles. By A. J. GRANT, King's College, Cambridge. With Illustrations. 3s. 6d.

* Keys to these Works supplied to Authenticated Teachers on written application.

♦♦ DETAILED CATALOGUE SENT GRATIS BY POST ON APPLICATION.

London: JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street, W.

A SELECTION FROM BENTLEY'S FAVOURITE NOVELS.

Each Work can be had separately, uniformly bound, price 6s.

Of all Booksellers in Town or Country.

By ROSA N. CAREY.

Lover or Friend?
For Lilies. | Nellie's Memories.
Barbara Heathcote's Trial.
Heriot's Choice.
Not Like other Girls.
Only the Governess.
Queenie's Whim.
Robert Ord's Atonement.
Uncle Max. | Wee Wife.
Wooded and Married.
Mary St. John.

By MARIE CORELLI.

The Soul of Lilith.
A Romance of Two Worlds.
Vendetta. | Thelma.
Ardath. | Wormwood.

By W. E. NORRIS.

A Bachelor's Blunder.
Major and Minor.
Miss Shafto. | The Rogue.

By JESSIE FOTHERGILL.

From Moor Isles.
The "First Violin." | Aldyth.
Borderland.
Kith and Kin. | Probation.

By HELEN MATHERS.

Comin' thro' the Rye.

By RHODA BROUGHTON.

Mrs. Bligh.
Cometh up as a Flower.
Good-bye, Sweetheart!
Joan. | Nancy.
Not Wisely but Too Well.
Red as a Rose is She.
Second Thoughts. | Belinda.
"Doctor Cupid." | Alas!

By FLORENCE MONTGOMERY.

Misunderstood.
Thrown Together. | Seaforth.

By MARY LINSKILL.

Between the Heather and the Northern Sea.
The Haven under the Hill.
In Exchange for a Soul.
Clevedon.
Tales of the North Riding.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER.

The Wooing o't.
Her Dearest Foe.
Look before you Leap.
Which shall it be?

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY
Now ready, 2nd Edition, 1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 3s. 6d. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONET- AGE for 1894. Corrected by the NOBILITY

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORBY JAFFRESON.
Now ready, in 2 vols. crown 8vo. 2s.

A BOOK OF RECOLLECTIONS. By JOHN CORBY JAFFRESON, Author of 'A Book about Lawyers,' 'A Book about Doctors,' &c.

"The book is readable enough, and full of pleasant gossip about men of letters and other celebrities, great and small, whom Mr. Jaffreson has known."—Times.
"Mr. Jaffreson's volumes are a rich storehouse of anecdotes, to which the prudent reader will himself resort without a moment's delay."—Daily Telegraph.
"There are plenty of good stories in Mr. Jaffreson's volumes, which are sure to have a large number of delighted readers."—Globe.

NEW NOVELS.

The PRICE of a PEARL. By Eleanor HOLMES, Author of 'Through Another Man's Eyes,' &c. 3 vols.

GOOD DAME FORTUNE. By Maria A. HOYER. 3 vols.

BROKEN FORTUNES. By Henry CHERRWELL, Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Willy Widow,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Cherrwell's pages are interwoven in the strongest of tangles by a series of subtle contrivances, the cleavage of which never oversteps the limits of probability. Broken Fortunes is entitled to a place of honour among the ablest fictional works of the year."—Daily Telegraph.

IN an ALPINE VALLEY. By G. MANTVILLE PENN, Author of 'Makno Nodan,' 'The Master of the Circumlocution,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Penn leaves him to amuse, and he carries his readers along with him to his triumphant finish."—Athenæum.

AT SOCIETY'S EXPENSE. By ALGERNON GERRARD, Author of 'A Moorland Idyl,' 'A Village Hampton,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Gerrard is a clever writer, and his new story is smart, original, and pleasant."—Athenæum.

SECOND EDITION OF

TO RIGHT the WRONG. By Edna LYALL, Author of 'Demerol,' 'We Two,' &c. 3 vols.

"The writer has been bold enough to make her romantic hero a Parliamentarian, and while in no way unjust to the Royalists, draws most of her good characters from the side which has hitherto supplied the villains. It is this fact which lends a special interest to the story before us, a story which we may say shows extraordinary industry and extraordinary common-sense."—Athenæum.

CHRISTINE. By Adeline Sergeant, Author of 'Casper Brooke's Daughter,' 'Sir Anthony,' &c. 3 vols.

NEW ADDITION TO HURST & BLACKETT'S
THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The WINNING of MAY. By the Author of 'Dr. Beth Ramsey,' 'A Woman at the Helm,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DOVON: a Modern Englishman.

WE TWO. | IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.
KNIGHT ERRANT. | WON BY WAITING.
A HARDY HORNEMAN.

A SELECTION FROM

HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME, PRICE 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX'

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLE-CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.

MAN. | A NOBLE LIFE.

A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS. | HANNAH.

ABOUT WOMEN. | THE UNKIND WORD.

A LIFE for a LIFE. | A BRAVE LADY.

NOTHING NEW. | STUDIES from LIFE.

MISTRESS and MAID. | YOUNG MRS. JARDINE.

THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM. | BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK'

NATURE and HUMAN. | THE OLD JUDGE; or, Life

NATURE. | in a Colony.

WISE SAWS and MODERN. | TRAITES of AMERICAN

INSTANCES. | HUMOUR.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

DAVID ELGINBROD. | ALSO FORBES.

ROBERT FALCONER. | SEE GIBBIE.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

ADAM GRAEME. | LIFE of IRVING.

LAIRD of NORLAW. | A NOSE in JUNE.

AGNES. | PROBE, JUNIOR.

IT WAS A LOVER and HIS LAMB.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S LIST.

MARK RUTHERFORD'S NEW WORK.

CATHARINE FURZE: a
Novel. By MARK RUTHERFORD,
Author of 'Miriam's Schooling,' &c. 2 vols.
cloth, 12s. [Ready next week.]

DR. JESSOP'S NEW WORK.

RANDOM ROAMING. By Rev.
AUGUSTUS JESSOP, D.D. With Portrait.
Cloth, 7s. 6d.

Contents.

1. RANDOM ROAMING.—2. CASTLE ACRE.—3. HILL-
SIDE DIGGING and MAGIC.—4. A FOURTEENTH-CENTURY PARSON.—5. A RUSTIC RETROSPECT, 1799.
—6. A SCHEME for CLEVER PENSIONERS.—7. SOME-THING about VILLAGE ALMSHOUSES.

"There is much curious and entertaining matter in the paper on 'Hillside Digging and Magic'.....Very readable."—Daily Telegraph.

BY THE LATE DR. SAMUEL COX.

The HEBREW TWINS: a Vin-dication of God's Ways with Jacob and Esau. By the late Rev. SAMUEL COX, D.D., Author of 'Expositions,' &c. With Prefatory Memoir by his Wife. Portrait. Cloth, 6s.

"The book is thoroughly readable and informing, and will take its place with the best on the subject."—Glasgow Herald.

PICTURESQUE SPAIN.

The HEART and SONGS of the SPANISH SIERRAS. By GEORGE WHIT
WHITE. 7 Illustrations. Large crown 8vo.
cloth, 6s.

THE REFORMER'S BOOK-SHELF.

NEW VOLUMES.

BAMFORD'S PASSAGES in the LIFE of a RADICAL. Edited, with an Introduction, by HENRY DUNCLEBY ("Verax").
2 vols. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

INDEPENDENT NOVEL SERIES.

NEW VOLUME.

LADY PERFECTA. Translated from the Spanish of B. PEREZ GALDOS, by MARY WHANTON. Demy 12mo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

THE CHINAMAN AT HOME AND ABROAD.

BRIGHT CELESTIALS. By John
COMING CHINAMAN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

THE STORY OF THE SECOND ESTATE.

The HOUSE of LORDS: a Retrospect and a Forecast. By THOMAS ALFRED
SPALDING, LL.B. Cloth, 10s. 6d.

THIS DAY, full size, demy 8vo. cloth, 5s.

TWO SPHERES. By T. E. S. T.
Fp. 512. Revised and Enlarged throughout.

* * The Publisher can arrange for Purchasers to see these Works at the nearest Bookseller's on receipt of address.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN,
Paternoster-square, E.C.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 13, 1894.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
PRISON LIFE	41
THE BURMISE A HUNDRED YEARS AGO	43
TWO BOOKS OF ENGLISH HISTORY	43
SKELEY'S CRITICISMS ON GÖTTE	44
A HISTORY OF THE GOLD COAST	45
NEW NOVELS (A Buried Sin; The Burden of Isabel; 'Liebeth; Such a Lord is Love; Old Caleb's Will; The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes; Joyce Martin-dale)	45-47
THE LITERATURE OF POLITICAL ECONOMY	47
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	48-50
COPYRIGHT AND COPYRIGHTING; SOME EARLY MESOPOTAMIAN KINGS; BACON AND BARTHOLOMEW ANGLIUS; THE BOOK SALES OF 1893	50-51
LITERARY GOSSIP	52
SCIENCE—THE EXPLORATION OF KINA BALU; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	53-55
FINE ARTS—THE NEW GALLERY; GOSSIP	55-56
MUSIC—NEW SONG PUBLICATIONS; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	56-57
DRAMA—THE WEEK; LIBRARY TABLE; GOSSIP	57-58

LITERATURE

Secrets of the Prison-House; or, Gaol Studies and Sketches. By Arthur Griffiths. 2 vols. (Chapman & Hall.)

MAJOR GRIFFITHS is so able a writer on prisons, and so considerable an authority on questions of penal discipline, that we opened these handsome volumes with a strong hope of finding them instructive and sometimes amusing. And though we wish the Major had been more communicative in certain of his chapters about the prisons and prison discipline of foreign countries, we close a careful examination of his book with increased respect for his industry and judgment. The work would have been more satisfactory to exacting critics, and no less acceptable to the generality of its perusers, had the Major confined his attention to matters of his own official experience, and avoided topics on which he has drawn information wholly or chiefly from other writers. Failing to justify its rather sensational title in the chapters which are mere matters of compilation, the book is especially sound and praiseworthy in the sections devoted to the author's reminiscences and the conclusions to which they have brought him. And in these same divisions of his work the Inspector of Prisons is the more entertaining because he is a shrewd student of criminal human nature, and is enough of a humourist to enjoy telling a good story, even though it makes against himself.

Four-and-twenty years have passed since the author, whilst he was acting on the staff of the Gibraltar garrison as brigade-major of the Infantry Brigade, received a sudden order from Sir Richard Airey (afterwards Lord Airey) to take charge of the Gibraltar convict establishment, at a moment when the prison, containing some six hundred convicts, was in a state of disorder, threatening uproar and mutiny. The brigade-major was on the point of mounting his horse when, at a moment's notice, he was required to undertake duties in which he was wholly inexperienced, and to restore discipline in a gaol whose prisoners were hourly becoming more unruly, and whose overworked and harassed warders had for weeks been losing heart. Ignorant alike of the penal law and the Queen's regulations, the Major may well have mistrusted his ability to do the work so unexpectedly put upon him. For a while the new gaoler-in-chief busied himself at night with studying the rules which he had been appointed to enforce, whilst he found much employment by day in dealing with complaints of prisoners, who came to him as applicants for justice, or petitioners for consideration, on countless grounds. The Major was still new to his place when Ebenezer Nafton—a tall, gaunt, black-haired, pale man, whose sorrowful eyes accorded with his doleful visage and remorseful speech—approached with a confession and a prayer. Declaring himself one of the two perpetrators of an especially atrocious murder that was in 1869 known in London as "the Knightbridge Street murder," the man averred that remorse would no longer allow him to be silent; and as he told how the victim of the outrage, an aged and feeble female caretaker, had been brained with a knuckle-duster, Ebenezer twitched his hands, and swayed his long body to and fro, whilst he sobbed convulsively. "I confess it," he said,

"and am prepared to answer for my crime. God knows it lies heavy upon my conscience; I can bear it no longer; but I must make a clean breast of all."

For that end Ebenezer went on to say that his confederate in the affair was one Albert Grooly, at that time undergoing punishment in the gaol for another offence. Grooly having been sent for in order that he should be confronted with his accuser, Major Griffiths was in a few minutes taking view of a "round-faced chubby-looking man," who had grown stouter than his fellow prisoners in the hospital of the gaol, where he worked as "a cleaner and nurse," and enjoyed opportunities for picking and pilfering from the rations prepared for the patients under his charge. For a while Albert Grooly declared his innocence of the charge preferred against him by the contrite Ebenezer Nafton, and was indignant at the notion of being called upon to admit or traverse the statements of an accuser who by his own confession was an atrocious miscreant. But this show of virtuous indignation was succeeded after a brief interval by Grooly's sudden submission. "We did it, sir, I admit; did it together," he exclaimed. "I struck the first blow. Nafton finished her. Now you may do your worst. Top me, scrag me; but mind, act on the square and scrag us both." Having been put in proper form upon paper, the confessions, duly signed and attested, were sent to London, together with an official requirement for instruction on the case; and whilst the authorities at Gibraltar were awaiting a reply from the seat of government the culprits escaped daily labour on "the works," and enjoyed the higher diet accorded by rules and regulations to prisoners awaiting trial on a capital charge. Some six weeks having passed since the day of the two confessions, the authorities on the rock received intelligence from London that the statements of both prisoners were false in every particular. Nafton and Grooly were a hundred miles away from Knightbridge Street at the time of the murder, and under lock and key for a minor offence. The two old "pals" had imposed upon the new governor's credulity in order to compass a pleasure trip to England for a trial that would end in their acquittal, and also to obtain for some six weeks at Gibraltar the privileges and better fare accorded to prisoners awaiting trial for life. "Since then," says Major Griffiths,

"I have come across many spurious confessions, but, remembering Nafton and Grooly, my first attitude towards all is one of incredulity or at least of cautious, suspicious reserve."

From one of the Major's several anecdotes touching Wormwood Scrubs, it appears that even as apothecaries are honoured in accordance with a familiar precept of Ecclesiastical, prisoners are sometimes respectfully entreated by their gaolers, for the uses that can be had of them. "What convict workmen," says Major Griffiths,

"can do with tools if allowed full scope, I once saw, myself, displayed in rather an amusing way. I was leaving the prison enclosure one day when in charge of the new works at Wormwood Scrubs, and on handing over my keys to the gate-keeper for consignment to the prison safe, he through some mischance hampered the safe lock, and could not open the safe. I waited some time impatiently, as I was expected elsewhere, but to no purpose. The safe could not be opened, and until it was, not only must I remain on the spot, but so must every other official. It is a strict rule that no one can leave prison until the keys are collected and safely put away. At last, in despair, I turned to the chief warden and asked, 'Have you any especially good crackman in custody?' 'There is K—, sir,' he replied promptly, 'one of the most noted housebreakers in London; doing fifteen years. He is employed at this moment in the carpenter's shop.' 'Send for him,' I said; and presently K— appeared under escort, carrying his bag of tools like any British workman arrived to execute repairs. He was a tall, very dark-haired, rather good-looking man; clean, industrious, and an excellent prisoner. 'Can you open that safe, K—?' I asked quietly, when he was marching into the lodge. 'Do you mean it, sir?' he replied, looking at me with an intelligent and irrepressible smile. 'Certainly I do. Examine the door. If you can manage it, go ahead.' K— made only a short inspection, and then picked up a couple of tools. 'I think I can do it, sir; shall I try?' I nodded assent, and in less than three minutes the safe-door swung open; the lock was completely conquered. I will not risk mentioning the names of the makers of the safe, which indeed I do not remember. But it was a patent, and presumably a first-class safe, which thus succumbed so easily to the skilful housebreaker. Fortunately there was an inner smaller safe, which answered all our purposes of security until the outer could be properly repaired. As for K—, I thanked him, and the next time he came with a request for one of the small privileges, so coveted by prisoners, I think it was not denied him."

A story of another kind—the doleful narrative of the torments inflicted on the body and mind of one John Henry Smith, as he was pleased to style himself for the concealment of his identity—occupies the whole of one of the several chapters in which Major Griffiths deals with the prisons and penal settlements of Franco. A man of gentle culture and bearing, and presumably of gentle birth, this luckless Englishman had severed himself from his kindred, and fallen to the condition of a Parisian vagabond shortly before the collapse of the Second Empire. Without being a Communist in opinion or sentiment, he drifted into association with the rabble of the Commune, and in mere self-defence took the side of the insurgents in one of the closing street fights. Caught in the act of fighting against the Republic, he was imprisoned, and in due course brought before a court-martial. Forbearing to assert his nationality for reasons that are left to the reader's imagination, John Henry Smith accepted the fate imposed on him by circumstances, and, after receiving sentence, passed to a cell in Mazas, and lingered there in a condition of stupor bordering on contentment until he learned that his capital sentence had been commuted to one of transportation for life to a penal colony. Denied the repose which the gun or the guillotine would have afforded him, he was compelled to don a canvas suit of green and red colours; to submit himself to a barber-convict, who clipped his hair and cut his beard into a grotesque fashion; to lie flat upon the ground, and place one of his legs on an anvil, so that a blacksmith-convict could rivet an iron basil about the ankle. Thus accoutred, and wearing an iron anklet fitted with a chain weighing twelve pounds, he was drafted, together with some two or three hundred French convicts, from Paris to a seaport, in the dockyard of which they toiled by day in chained couples till they were marched on board the overcrowded frigate which conveyed them to New Caledonia. Labouring by day in the dockyard, the convicts took their midday meal, like famished dogs, from great troughs charged with a bran soup of coarse ingredients and nauseous flavour, and slept on an enormous wooden guard-bed, in a damp and filthy casemated chamber. Recalling what he endured in this vast dormitory, where use had mitigated his disgust at its uncleanness and fetid atmosphere, John Henry Smith told how at every movement of his unhappy bed-fellow the silence of the chamber was broken by the rattling of their chains.

At the outset he was fortunate in being coupled with a comparatively inoffensive gaol-bird, a poor and chicken-hearted creature, whose most disagreeable habit was his almost incessant utterance of lamentations over his lot. But when death had silenced the plaintive wretch, John Henry Smith was "married" to a tall and muscular Arab, almost as dark-skinned as a negro, and remarkable for a visage that accorded with his reputation of having committed three murders. At his first view of Sidi Mourad's face, John Henry Smith loathed him, and was visited with a presentiment that evil would come to him from so morose and revolting a chain-mate. Hating one another from the moment when they were linked together, the two men had been chain-mates for only a few hours when they grappled with one another in a fierce struggle for mastery. At their first midday rest from labour in the dockyard, the Arab desired to lie in the scorching sunshine, whilst the Englishman was no less desirous to rest in the shade. To compass his desire Sidi Mourad offered to play his chain-mate for his half of their common chain; but John Henry Smith preferred to settle the dispute by a trial of strength. In an instant the two had sprung at one another. The victory was with our countryman. Throwing the Arab to the ground, the Englishman fell upon him, and saw with ferocious delight the blood flow freely from the part of his enemy's chained fore-leg where the iron basil had cut the flesh of his ankle. Beaten in the conflict, Sidi Mourad waited for his revenge. A servile, fawning knave, he conciliated his keepers, and won their favour so far that they made him the overseer of the convicts, who occupied a cage on the lower deck of the old-fashioned sailing frigate that was their floating prison during their voyage from France to New Caledonia—a prison whose captives were relieved of their coupling chains while one of them still bore the basil at his ankle. It devolved on Sidi Mourad to see that his fellow captives in the cage observed the rules for keeping their barred-off portion of the lower deck clean and orderly, and for performing their divers servile tasks. It was he who told off the messes, "detailed the fatigue parties," and made reports to the chief surveillant. In the exercise of these powers Sidi Mourad had daily opportunities for wreaking his spite on the man who had conquered him in the wrestling bout. Associating him with the vilest miscreants of the party, the dusky and truculent Arab put him to the filthiest tasks, and was continually reporting him to the chief superintendent for laziness and insubordination. To escape from his vindictive persecutor, rather than from a thirst for freedom, John Henry Smith became one of a small party of convicts who vainly essayed to recover their liberty by dropping from the side of the frigate whilst she lay in Pernambuco harbour, and putting out to sea in one of her boats. John Henry Smith was neither the originator nor the controlling spirit of this futile attempt at escape; but through Sidi Mourad's influence he was arraigned before a court of the frigate's officers on a charge of having been the ring-leader, was found guilty, and was sentenced to fifty strokes with the martinet, the French "cat with five tails," each thong being made of fine twine closely plaited and enclosing three small shot. Stiffened by being steeped in coal tar, the five lashes of the whip were rendered yet more excruciating by being soaked in strong vinegar just before they were applied. On being marched up the main deck amid the beating of drums and the handling of arms of the whole ship's company, the Englishman saw to his horror that Sidi Mourad had been appointed to inflict the chastisement. "To be flogged before hundreds by an Arab assassin!" said John Henry Smith, when he told the story of his degradation to Major Griffiths, "I have never shaken off that stain. The visible scars which I must carry with me to the grave are as nothing to the stigma within!"

At New Caledonia, when he had been set to work on preparing the rocky soil for cultivation, he lived for a while in comparative contentment, albeit he spent his days in hard labour, and at night slept with a company of exiles on the coarse straw of the convict-hovel that was their only and common home. In the absence of Sidi Mourad he even knew something of happiness, for strength returned to his body, he contrived to take interest in his labour, and at night he enjoyed sinking into the sleep of a man who has earned repose. "All would have gone fairly well" with the outcast had Sidi Mourad kept away from Mioti Miopa. But official changes unfortunately brought the Arab to the station as overseer, and he had not been for many weeks there when a gourd of a coarse spirit of which the convicts received rations, was taken from among his possessions by a convict, who subsequently confessed the theft. Accused by Sidi Mourad of the petty crime, the Englishman was found guilty on the Arab's unsupported evidence, and was again sentenced to fifty strokes of the martinet from his foe. On the morning after this second flogging, John Henry Smith, in the full view of his fellow convicts, threw himself on Sidi Mourad, and settled accounts with him by stabbing him to the heart with a knife—an act of vengeance for which he was again sentenced to death. But on proof of his innocence of the theft for which he had been flogged, the Communist for the second time escaped capital execution. Not that he went without additional punishment for slaying Sidi Mourad. Ceasing to be rated as a political offender who might hope for eventual pardon, he was "turned over to the common side," and was condemned to penal servitude for life. Speaking of this change in his lot, Smith observed with melancholy reasonableness, "It was, of course, my own fault: I yielded to fatal passion, and forgot, however great the provocation, that I must bear the consequences of taking a fellow creature's life." Grace was, however, accorded to so grave an offender, who participated in "the special clemency," and on his restoration to France he was set at large under conditions that placed him under the surveillance of the police, and required him to keep away from Paris. Unable for long to comply with this condition, the luckless adventurer returned to the capital to enjoy its beauty and stir, and was taken to the Dépôt of the Paris Prefecture, where, in the presence and hearing of Major Griffiths, he was sentenced to a month's discipline at La Santé.

It speaks much for the humanity of H.M. Inspector of Prisons that he troubled himself about this English-born vagabond, whose criminal record certified that he had been a dangerous Communist, convicted of arson, theft, and murder. On his release from prison for the last and slightest of his offences against the law of France, the aged ne'er-do-well returned to England upon the advice and with the assistance of Major Griffiths, who was at pains to put his strange protégé in the way of earning an honest livelihood. "I got him some work," says the Major,

"as a reader for the press, for which his knowledge of languages well qualified him, and I often saw him while he lived, and talked over his experiences as a French convict."

Though it is strongly interesting, 'Secrets of the Prison-House' is, as has been said, not a perfect book. Sometimes prolix on matters of small moment, it is at other times silent or insufficiently communicative on matters of importance. Of Broadmoor it tells scarcely anything more noteworthy than is to be found in a brief account of Christina Edmunds. Instead of dealing with the several questions touching the detention and treatment of the poor women convicted of killing their infants in frenzy from puerperal fever, Major Griffiths merely admits that "infanticides are of various degrees of guilt; some meriting compassion, others so brutal and abandoned, the details of their deed so revolting, that one death seemed hardly sufficient expiation." Surely the revealer of the secrets of our prisons should have given his readers particulars of the infanticides who merit compassion, and some information respecting the rules and arrangements for the treatment and eventual release of the sufferers from their own transient insanity. Moreover, the insufficient and, in other respects, faulty index is a vexatious performance. For example, the entry "Sing Sing Prison, i. 106, 122, 123, 294; ii. 441, 449, 498," should be "Sing Sing Prison, i. 106, 441, 449; ii. 122, 123, 294, 496." To spare himself trouble at the cost of the reader's time and temper, the maker of the index has in several places merely indicated by two sets of numerals, joined by a dash, a set of pages, on some of which a particular name appears, instead of setting forth precisely the exact pages on which the name may be found; e.g., by "Wraskoy, M. Galkine, founder of the Savatow Reformatory, i. 491-426," the reader is informed that on searching twenty-six consecutive pages he will come now and then on references to M. Wraskoy. Here is a muddle that should have been set right when the proof of the index was being verified and corrected: "Wormwood Scrubs, i. 125; ii. 482-493; the safe at, i. 87; combined misconduct at, i. 144, 147; attempted escape from, ii. 308." But, notwithstanding the several imperfections of the text and the slips of the index-maker, 'Secrets of the Prison-House' is a book to be thankful for.

The Burmese Empire a Hundred Years Ago, as described by Father Sangermano. With an Introduction and Notes by John Jardine. (Constable & Co.)

THE first edition of Father Sangermano's work was published in English at Rome at the expense of the Oriental Translation Fund, and under the supervision of the late Cardinal Wiseman. This appeared in 1833, and was derived from the Italian text of a manuscript left by Father Sangermano in the hands of the Barnabite Fathers at Arpinum when he died in 1819. About 1884 Mr. Jardine, at that time employed in Burma, finding that the book had become scarce, made it his business to discover and borrow a copy. This is the volume from which a second edition was printed by order of the Chief Commissioner of Burma: an edition which has now—some ten years later—been brought up to date, and published in London.

Father Sangermano resided in Burma from 1783 to 1808, and as he supplemented his own long experience with information collected on the spot from the most trustworthy sources available, he is generally correct in the accounts which he gives. The special value of the book, therefore, lies herein, that it gives us a picture of how things stood then—a picture which may usefully be compared with the condition of the country and its inhabitants at important epochs since; at the moment, for example, when Independent Burma was annexed, or at the time when the last census was taken. Necessarily there is much in the good missionary's pages which has been superseded by the fuller knowledge of later writers, as, for instance, the chapter on the natural productions of the Burmese Empire; and it must be confessed also that in a book of this class a great deal has to be told about the crude and fantastic imaginings by which the beginnings of the world, the mysteries of the heavens, the destinies of mankind, and similar recondite subjects are attempted to be explained, that furnishes but sorry food for the general reader's appetite. The silly fables about Mount Meru have, by this time, become almost as familiar to us as the stories of the gods of classical mythology; but the scientific discoveries of modern Europe must surely to some extent be now known also to the philosophers and theologians of cultured Asia, and we cannot help wishing that Mr. Jardine, in his careful introduction to this work, had been able to tell us whether the learned priests in Burma have at all modified their views since the days when they instructed Sangermano in the tenets associated with their faith. But though there are portions of the volume which readers who seek principally for entertainment may be inclined to skip, there is also much to be found which illustrates Eastern manners, or is for other reasons interesting. Thus among the semi-independent hill tribe known as the Chins "there prevails a strange custom" "of tattooing with black the faces of the women," and this custom is alleged to have commenced at a time when the Burmese kings were in the habit of sending soldiers to carry off the most beautiful of the women and girls. To free themselves from this oppression the Chins are alleged to have adopted the practice of disfiguring the faces of their women. Here, then, we have something of value in support of the view that savages may make themselves hideous to avoid attack or capture (perhaps also to frighten their enemies in battle) rather than from perverted notions of prettiness. Significant also, as illustrating the system of child-marriages in India, are the remarks on p. 74 as to the habit of the Burmese to engage their daughters while young in real or fictitious marriages, in order to save them from the hands of the king's ministers, custom having established a rule, which is rarely if ever violated, that no married woman can be seized, even for the king himself.

On p. 58 it is related that in the year 959 Gnaunjan was King of Ava; "his principal queen was his own sister." In the year 967 his firstborn son succeeded Gnaunjan: "he took for wife his own sister." This usage prevails, we believe, in the royal family of Siam at the present day, and is a subject which deserves fuller investigation. A little further on in the book we find the form of address which ambassadors from any foreign court were required to use when received in audience by the King of Burma. A good idea may be got from this address of the petty difficulties which envoys from the Viceroy of British India encountered when efforts were made from time to time to put matters at Mandalay on a satisfactory footing, and thus avoid the extreme stop of annexation. The concluding chapter supplies an abstract of the Burmese code of laws, a code based largely on Indian sources, and one which nominally governed the administration of justice in the days when the country was independent. This abstract lacks the fulness of detail which a complete translation alone can give: hence probably the reason why many sections are obscure; at any rate, as a mere abstract the value of the compilation is but slight. Thus when we read in one section that "if an inhabitant of a village, whilst carrying fire in his hands, quarrels with the inhabitant of another village, and is the cause of its taking fire, the inhabitants of the last-mentioned place may for vengeance set fire to the village of the incendiary, without being liable to any prosecution," we cannot suppress the suspicion that there may be something in the original text which would put this remarkable enactment in a somewhat different light. Again, it is laid down that "if a person dies in debt, and religious and pious men charitably defray the expenses of his funeral, they are not subject to any claims from the creditors; but if they were friends or acquaintances who performed this office, they must pay a quarter of the debts, and half of them if they were relations."

Many deceased persons of rank, from the king downwards, are kept a long time after embalment till the proper period for their cremation arrives: that, indeed, is for reasons of dignity and state; but it is also true that among the less well-to-do classes a funeral ceremony may be deferred for months because the creditors have not been settled with, and the legal provision above quoted explains the necessity for this procedure; it may also partly explain why at particular temples certain enclosed precincts exist in which corpses are cast out to the dogs and vultures. The lawgiver, however, is seen in a better light in the following enactment: "When a master commands a slave to marry one of his female slaves, both are thereby made free"; but there may be readers who will think that he speaks most wisely when he says, if "a lawyer promises his client to finish a lawsuit in a certain number of days or months, and does not fulfil his promise, he must pay twice the value of the fees he has received." To thoughtful students of Eastern character this book can be commended, for it is a suggestive one.

History of England and the British Empire.

By Edgar Sanderson, M.A. (Warne & Co.)

A Summary of British History. With Appendices. By the Rev. Edgar Sanderson, M.A. (Blackie & Son.)

THE two text-books of English history which Mr. Sanderson has published are very different in scope, size, and method. The 'History of England' is a stout octavo of nearly 1,100 pages, in which Mr. Sanderson aims, as he tells us, at furnishing "both general readers and young students of British history with a record based upon the best authorities and written in an interesting narrative style." He strives above all after comprehensiveness. Besides the ordinary political history, literature, science, art, commerce, and discovery are all passed in review. He hopes, not very modestly, that the work will be found of "essential and indispensable use in schools and colleges." The 'Summary,' on the other hand, is a little volume of 200 pages, in which the bare facts of English history are put "in as convenient and accessible a form as possible," with the hope of the manual's "systematizing historic knowledge" and serving as a "handy book of reference." Issued by different publishers, the lesser book does not even profess to be based on the larger. But both books show the same characteristics, and both may be conveniently considered together.

The 'History' and 'Summary' are alike rather old-fashioned, and belong to a class which we might have expected would not be added to. But Mr. Sanderson has made a creditable effort to pour the new wine of fairly recent research into the old bottles of antiquated school histories. His outline is rather wooden and hardly up to date; but his details are carefully got together from respectable sources, and it is only an occasional slip that reveals the limitations in scholarship, taste, style, and method which prevent either volume from attaining more than a place in the second rank of school-books. Faults of execution apart, their conspicuous lack of originality would prevent either from taking a higher position.

The 'Summary' need not detain us long. Stripped of rhetorical garb, the wooden and old-fashioned outline appears yet more clearly than in the flowing periods of the 'History.' An arrangement which, for example, relegates the Scottish and Welsh policy of Edward I. to an appendix, does not commend itself to us. The tendency to give summary and not always very masterly judgments side by side with the bare statements of fact that alone should be found in an analysis, is equally to be condemned. The whole of the mediæval part is meagre; the modern periods are ill arranged, and not well balanced. But the book has the merit of giving a great mass of the bare facts in a tolerably accurate form. The errors that we have found can best be dealt with as they occur in the bigger book.

In the 'History' Mr. Sanderson shows that he has taken great pains to secure accuracy. As far as facts go, he seldom gets far astray. But his historical scholarship has plainly grave limitations. He begins rather badly with a confused and misleading sketch of the early ethnology of Britain. He talks of Agricola fighting "at the foot of the Grampian hills"; speaks of the "Emperor Theodoric the Great"; describes the sons of twelfth and thirteenth century kings as "princes"; thinks that Edward II. was made Prince of Wales immediately upon the death of his brother Alfonso; tells us how a twelfth century writer like William of Newburgh became "a monk of the abbey of the Austin friars"; uses "Franciscan monk" and "Franciscan friar" as interchangeable terms; and supposes that a friar could become a student of Merton College, Oxford. On constitutional points these inaccuracies are particularly conspicuous. Mr. Sanderson is hopelessly wrong in his account of the growth of municipalities. He tells his readers that the present number of shires in England existed at the Norman Conquest, apparently, if we may judge from p. 105, including Monmouthshire in the number. It is misleading to say that the tenants-in-chief were "absolute proprietors of the land"; and it was highly rash to accept Orderic's statement that after the Conquest "the whole territory of the kingdom was divided into 60,215 fiefs." No one who knows Mr. Round's work would still think that Henry I.'s charter to London was granted at the same time as his general charter of liberties; and it shows great misapprehension of the Norman character to think that the Norman barons looked upon the marriage of a Norman and a "Saxon" much as a Southern planter would look on the marriage of a white man with a "coloured girl of African origin." Mr. Sanderson's grasp on ecclesiastical history is somewhat faulty when he tells us on one page that Bede learned Greek at Canterbury, and that, apparently at the same period, Medeshamstead (Peterborough) contained a cathedral. On p. 121 he misses the point of the investiture contest. Mr. Sanderson is too enthusiastic a Wycliffite to suit our taste; but he ought not to have omitted to tell us how his hero made some sort of recantation before he was suffered to retire to Lutterworth and end his days in peace. Still these slips are never numerous, and after we approach the Reformation are found much less seldom. It is, however, very wrong indeed to say that the Puritans "were first accounted a sect," and hardly impartial to speak of Laud as a "mean" figure, or accurate to make Wentworth for eleven years the chief minister of Charles I.'s will. "Ather-ton Moor" is not in "South Lancashire," but near Dewsbury, in Yorkshire, and called "Adwalton Moor" in modern maps. There is a bad confusion on p. 738, where the terms of the Treaty of Utrecht are very inadequately described. On p. 1062 Mr. Sanderson darkens counsel by calling the old Jamaica legislature a "democratic oligarchy." But in a book including a vast number of facts, and extending to nearly 1,100 printed pages, such errors cannot be deemed of vital importance.

The maps, which are numerous, are not particularly useful. In attempting such an impossible task as giving in a single map "Britain from 500-1066," Mr. Sanderson's colouring suggests that Derby, Lichfield, Tamworth, and Northampton were in the hands of the Welsh, for so only can we without explanation interpret the thin wedge of red colour that runs south almost as far as Oxford. And equally great errors result from trying to give on one map "France in 1360 and until 1453." The later maps of England can hardly be called historical maps at all, and we turn with greater satisfaction to a map showing clearly the British share in the modern "partition of Africa."

In the latter part of the book there is some want of proportion. We are glad of the fulness with which the writer deals with the colonies, India, and the reign of Victoria; but to assign so much as thirty-five pages to James II. and twenty-nine to William III., while only awarding nineteen to Anne, and about eighty to the crowded period between 1714 and 1803, is to sin against knowledge. And paragraphs like the one which begins on p. 682, and goes on until p. 687, and its successor that continues without a break from p. 687 to p. 692, are of altogether unmanageable length for teaching purposes.

Mr. Sanderson's style is easy, flowing, and fairly readable; but he does not despise threadbare rhetorical effects, and makes rather vain efforts to write in a sort of pseudo-Macaulayese that is not particularly edifying. It is neither new, nor true, nor striking to tell us how "the Londoners loved their city as an Athenian, in the age of Pericles, clung to the favoured home of Pallas, or as a Florentine, under the Medicis, cherished the fair and flourishing town by the Arno"; while it is perfectly detestable to say, à propos of the Victorian age, that "its sky is adorned with a most significant and expanding rainbow of popular and reforming legislation." A heading like "Great Britain finds a Man at Need" is thought to lead up well to the account of Chatham, and "Disraeli becomes Lord Beaconsfield" is chosen as a good title for a chapter containing all the events between 1874 and the Queen's Jubilee. Such are the defects of Mr. Sanderson's volumes; but in calling attention to such shortcomings we do not wish to ignore the utility of these manuals and their meritoriousness as, on the whole, careful pieces of compilation.

Goethe: Reviewed after Sixty Years. By J. R. Seeley, Litt.D. (Seeley & Co.)

THE Professor of Modern History at Cambridge is the author of several books which illustrate the saying that what is worth reading once is worth reading twice; and even of his miscellaneous essays there are few which fail to deserve the same compliment. Whatever his subject may be, he approaches it by a new path, and treats it with an agreeable independence of traditional opinion. If he asks the reader's attention to views which have not been expressed before, or not expressed with a similar application, he is always interesting; where he is not conclusive, he at least opens up a vein of luminous suggestion, rich enough to repay more than one examination. So it is that we extend a welcome to the reprint of a series of articles on Goethe, contributed some ten years ago to the Contemporary Review. No one can have read these articles when they first appeared, or can have turned to them since, without a feeling that they were too good to share the brief life of a magazine, or without a desire to possess the pith of so much intelligent criticism in a convenient form. The articles, as they are now presented afresh, have been revised with care and largely altered; some additions have been made; and for a frontispiece there is a fair reproduction of Stieler's well-known portrait of Goethe in his old age. It is a little book which ought to be bought by every one who is interested in Goethe's writings.

The number of persons in this country who are so interested is not so large as it ought to be—not even, perhaps, so large as it might be supposed to be, if we consider the magnitude of Goethe's fame. It has been said that his influence has passed away; that his ideas are antiquated; that in the revolution of thought his teaching is no longer of any use. If this is true, it may be Goethe's misfortune or it may be ours. Certainly the social schemes of the age are little tinged with the rigorous individualism which he preached. The man who made no professions of universal philanthropy, published no plans for setting everything right next week, but with a high calling quietly did his own business to the utmost of his power, is not likely to be popular in a day of faddists and notoriety-mongers. It would be nearer the truth to say that for the great bulk of cultured Englishmen his influence has never yet properly begun; that at no time has a full or even a fair appreciation of his work been widespread in this country. Upon one or two conspicuous writers he has exercised a profound influence; but, as Prof. Seeley well says, he has never been domesticated.

Goethe had little fortune among us at the start. Coleridge, with all his knowledge of German thought, neglected him; in the whole range of his writings he mentions him only once. Some of this neglect may be due to the reason which Prof. Seeley urges, namely, that Coleridge was too much afraid of what has been called Goethe's "heathenism" to undertake the responsibility of introducing it here; but it is at least as probable that the neglect arose from a positive dislike on Coleridge's side to Goethe's whole method of thought; the counterpart, indeed, of that antipathy which Goethe felt and everywhere expressed for all abstract speculation. The influence which he exercised on Scott and Byron hardly passed beyond them, and the same may be said of outlying works of minor writers. If for many years after his death Goethe inspired us with more alarm than respect, it was probably the religious movements of the time that precluded a fair appreciation of his ideas. The popular notion of him was accurately reflected by Tennyson in a well-known passage in 'The Palace of Art.' It is commonly held that he was pointing at Goethe when he spoke of

A glorious Devil, large in heart and brain,
That did love Beauty only.

And again:—

I sit as God, holding no form of creed,
But contemplating all.

Nor has this extraordinary notion of Goethe entirely disappeared. Even when he found a champion in Carlyle, he was not altogether lucky; it was by a strange freak of destiny that his champion was a man so different from himself; nay, in personal life and temper, in ideals, modes of thought, and literary aims, almost, it might be said, so antagonistic. This curious literary friendship does not, of course, escape Prof. Seeley, who gives a fair explanation of it. He admits to the full that Goethe's reputation among us has been in the main Carlyle's work. Yet he fails to notice that if Goethe had been more fortunate in his champion he might have enjoyed not only reputation, but a greater influence, a greater success, in England. It is difficult to say how much an intelligent appreciation of his writings has suffered under the simple fact that Carlyle was not in any real or essential sympathy with Goethe; that he was not quite fit to bear his message. The unfitness was nowhere more apparent than when Carlyle took it upon himself—as at the close of 'Past and Present,' and in his essay on the 'Death of Goethe'—to quote from Goethe and deliberately to change his meaning.

That Goethe had a message, and of all great poets was, in fact, the most frankly a teacher, is shown with much felicity of instance in Prof. Seeley's pages, more particularly in the chapter on 'Wilhelm Meister.' It is refreshing to find so sound, simple, and clear an explanation of the literary phases through which Goethe passed—phases which puzzled his contemporaries, and make him, for many of his students, a standing perplexity. But as his final lessons of life were the growth and outcome of his development, something more definite might profitably have been said on the reconciliation of the romantic with the classical ideal in Goethe's old age, as the resolution of difficulties not only in his art, but in his life also.

Prof. Seeley insists that Goethe was rather the greatest moralist, the most pregnant thinker among poets than independently a great moralist and philosopher; and that, therefore, his greatness is in the main literary. This is a hard saying, especially when it is enforced by the criticism that Goethe's contempt for philosophic method deprived his thought of all systematic character, while at the same time he lacked the combative temperament of the reformer. But Prof. Seeley elsewhere appears to praise this very contempt for system, and reminds us, as, indeed, is obviously true, that to Goethe philosophy is not merely a study, but a life:—

"It is not summed up in thinking and classifying and constructing systems, but extends to all departments of activity. And it would be difficult to name the philosopher who has devoted himself with more methodical seriousness than Goethe to the problem of leading and then of teaching the best and most desirable kind of life. He conceives the problem in its largest possible extent. From prudential maxims in the style of Johnson he rises to more general precepts on the choice of a vocation, pouring out a fund of wisdom peculiarly his own on the mistakes men make about their own aptitudes; then he dwells more particularly on the life of the artist, a subject till then scarcely noticed by moralists, but treated by Goethe with the greatest comprehensiveness; then he rises to morality and religion. On all subjects alike he is serious, on all subjects perfectly unfettered. He has the advantage of a vast experience..... Had Goethe appeared as a thinker and philosopher only he would have been similar to Bacon. Can we say that he would have been at all inferior? His observation extends over wider provinces of life; he is more honest, more kindly. His faculty of style is at least equally great."

In a work of this diminutive size—diminutive, at least, in comparison with the magnitude of its subject—we naturally find that several of the thoughts, some of them put forward as it were tentatively, are inadequately discussed; and the most obvious objection to the essay is its many convolutions. This is at times very tantalizing. No sooner are we planted firmly on some definite thought—and Prof. Seeley is never vague—no sooner do we begin to examine it in its bearings, than the ground shifts and we find ourselves somewhere else. Now and then the process leads to a slight inconsistency, such as arose in the foregoing extract. And, again, on pp. 57 and 166, it is uncertain whether Prof. Seeley does or does not mean that 'Faust' is to be taken as the great poem of the nineteenth century. Some imperfections of this sort come not so much from inadequacy on the author's part as from the greatness of his subject. If we survey the many aspects of Goethe's genius in quick succession, and try to grasp them all, there is no formula that will suffice; and if we would criticize and distinguish, we are driven against our will into some verbal contradiction.

In treating of Goethe's greatest works, his 'Werther,' 'Tasso,' 'Meister,' 'Faust,' Prof. Seeley is apt to take only one character in each work as typical of Goethe himself; whereas Goethe hardly ever fails to delineate by two characters the duplex nature of his own personality, or the conflicting tendencies of his own mind. When against Werther he places Albert; against Tasso, Antonio; against Faust, Mephistopheles, he is doing more than bring out character by giving it a foil: he is faithful to his method of translating his own inmost experience into life.

It is surprising that two or three very obvious misprints should have been allowed to pass. On pp. 140 and 141 an explanation by the author finds its way into the middle of a verse which he is quoting.

A History of the Gold Coast of West Africa.

By A. B. Ellis, Lieut.-Col. 1st Battalion West India Regiment. (Chapman & Hall.)

COL. ELLIS is fairly qualified for the task which he has assumed. He has not only written on kindred subjects, but he possesses considerable local experience. Such a subject, however, offers more instruction than interest, and it is rather a pity that he should have thought it necessary to disdain Racine's advice and commence with the Phœnicians. At any rate, till a good deal more has been done in the way of research, the history of the Gold Coast must be considered as beginning, to all intents and purposes, when the Portuguese touched at a place where they obtained so much gold that the name La Mina, afterwards corrupted into Elmina, was given to it. Twelve years later Diego d'Azambuja landed and founded a settlement, and built the inevitable church and fort. For some time the Portuguese did a thriving trade on the Gold Coast, but their monopoly did not last three-quarters of a century, although protected by the well-known Papal Bull. In 1553 Thomas Windham visited the Gold Coast and brought back 150 lb. of gold dust, a result deemed so encouraging that for some years both French and English carried on a considerable trade on the Gold Coast. The Portuguese naturally objected to these merchant adventurers, and destroyed their vessels, sending the crews to the galleys. Frequently they induced the natives to entice both English and French on shore with a view to murdering them, a price being paid for every head. The result was what the Portuguese desired: after a few years their rivals abandoned the Gold Coast. In 1595, however, the Dutch appeared on the scene, and were not so easily daunted. Since the incorporation of Portugal with Spain in 1580 the African trade had, like the rest of Lusitanian commerce, declined.

Encouraged by the success of the Dutch, the English recommenced their visits. In 1618 a company was formed for the purpose, but, it not being successful, the charter was allowed to expire. A second company was formed in 1631, which established trading posts and did a large business, principally in slaves for America. In 1640, taking advantage of the revolt of the Duke of Braganza, the Dutch expelled the Portuguese from the West Coast, after an occupation of 160 years. In 1662 a third English company was founded. There had always been bickering between the Dutch and English, but in 1663 the former proceeded to open hostility, seizing by surprise the English Castle at Cape Coast. In reply Holmes, the Achates of the general's fight;

Who first bewitch'd our eyes with Guinea gold.

was sent with a squadron to the Gold Coast, where he captured all the Dutch posts except Elmina and Axim, and, thence proceeding to America, seized New Amsterdam and turned it into New York. His expedition was a principal cause of war with Holland. In the autumn of 1664 Ruyter appeared on the scene, and drove the English out of all their forts and factories, save Cape Coast Castle; and by the treaty of Breda, although the Dutch retained all the ports they had captured, the right of the English to Cape Coast Castle was confirmed. After this the Dutch settlements seem gradually to have declined; in the Napoleonic wars they were seized by the British, and between 1867 and 1870 the Dutch abandoned the whole of their settlements.

The history of the somewhat spasmodic progress of the English down to the present day is well told by Col. Ellis, and the impression left on the mind of the reader is that their success was not due to the talent or firmness of either the Colonial Office or the local governors. There were, of course, exceptions among the latter, notably Mr. Maclean, the husband of L. E. L. Of him our author says:

"He ruled with a strong hand, firmly suppressed outrages, and did much to put down human sacrifices. If any chief refused to obey his commands, instead of wasting time in negotiations, he sent a few soldiers to arrest him, confined him in the Castle till he was repentant, and made him pay an indemnity. This kind of rule is one that appeals directly to the sympathies of uncivilised peoples; and the natives not only feared the Governor, but respected and admired him for his strength of purpose. His authority was so well established that only on one occasion had he to resort to anything like armed force."

Governor Pine, too, especially in 1863, showed himself to be clear-sighted and energetic, but the Colonial Office displayed feebleness and incapacity, and helped to bring about the Ashanti war. On his arrival in 1872, in order to effect the transfer of the Dutch forts, Sir John Pope Hennessey wrote to the King of Ashanti, announcing

"the transfer and sending some presents; but in addition he informed the King that, as a token of friendship, he had ordered the trade with Ashanti to be reopened, and the embargo on munitions of war, which had been maintained for some months, to be removed; and offered to pay double the sum [as ground rent] that had been paid yearly by the Dutch for Elmina. He said nothing about the ransom of the European captives or the settlement of a peace; and, in fact, ignored all the matters in dispute, while he went out of his way to remove the prohibition upon the importation of munitions of war, and make war easier for the Ashantis.....Although Mr. Hennessey [sic] was a total stranger to the Gold Coast and native affairs, he acted in this matter directly counter to the advice of the experienced officials..... Mr. Hennessey [sic] was, in fact, full of self-confidence."

On the King of Ashanti sending word that the only matter now requiring settlement was the ransom of the missionaries, Sir John Hennessey replied that he could not think of exchanging men for money, but that the Bala Mission, to which the captives belonged, might very properly be asked to pay the actual expenses incurred by the Ashantis on their behalf. After making this curious statement he released the principal hostage for the missionaries, and paid his expenses back to Kumassi. Col. Ellis devotes considerable space to an account of the campaign, the chief difficulty in which was the question of transport, and calls attention to an extraordinary arrangement by Sir Garnet Wolseley. This arrangement, relating to the pay to be given to the natives, gave great dissatisfaction to the chiefs:—

"From their point of view it was unjust that the men who would have to incur the risks of war should only receive sevenpence halfpenny a day, while those who would be engaged in the comparatively safe duties of the commissariat should receive one shilling."

The feeble action of the Colonial Office greatly nullified the wholesome effects of the success of Sir Garnet Wolseley and Sir John Glover. The Ashantis gradually became insolent and encroaching again, and never paid more than 4,000 of the 50,000 oz. of gold dust agreed upon. To use our author's words:—

"Within less than two years after the burning of Kumassi the Ashantis had, thanks to the Government policy of non-intervention, recovered the whole of their lost territory except Kwao and Adansi, and escaped the payment of the greater part of the indemnity."

On December 1st, 1880, Mr. Griffith—now Sir William Brandford Griffith—arrived to administer the government. A few weeks later a messenger with the golden axe arrived from Kumassi to demand the surrender of a political refugee, and Mr. Griffith refused to give him up. But although he might have known that months would elapse before the Ashantis, if they did carry out their veiled threats, could reach the coast, and that their approach would be heralded by the flight of the inhabitants of the villages on their route, he seems to have been alarmed by his own boldness, and to have acted as if an Ashanti army might any day appear at Cape Coast Castle. Reinforcements were hastily sent for, fortifications were constructed with feverish activity, and it was decided to abandon the whole of the protectorate. In pursuance of this hysterical policy,

"the detachments of Housa Constabulary, which had been maintained at Prahu and Mansu since 1875, were withdrawn in such haste, that several thousand rounds of Snider ammunition were left behind for want of carriers to transport them."

Fortunately the King of Ashanti was as much frightened as the Lieutenant-Governor of the Gold Coast, and sent reassuring and apologetic messages which dissipated the

The explanation of the chronic mistakes made on the Gold Coast is extremely simple. As Col. Ellis observes, the climate is so bad that "no really capable and first-rate men will accept the governorship, no matter what addition may be made to the salary." Further, there is not likely to be continuous and systematic improvement in internal administration, because of the constant changes in the officials, including the Governor, as care for his health obliges every European to return in a short time to recruit in Europe. Finally, the chief clerks of the Colonial Office, necessarily ignorant of local affairs, exercise a close supervision. Now no colony can be properly ruled by post and telegraph wire.

The book before us is useful enough, but it is to be regretted that it does not contain a large-scale map of the protectorate and Ashanti, as well as a diagram of the adjoining territory. As it is, only one exceedingly small map of the protectorate is given. Another defect is the absence of an index.

NEW NOVELS.

A Buried Sin. By Lady Duffus Hardy. 3 vols. (White & Co.)

THE reader of 'A Buried Sin' would have less hesitation in accepting it as the work of Lady Duffus Hardy if the publishers had vouchsafed some explanation of its appearance in three volumes more than two and a half years after the death of its reputed author. The public is certainly entitled to know, in the case of works published posthumously, whether the manuscripts were left in a completed form or only in the shape of notes requiring completion by others. There have been recent instances in which amplified notes have been published without a frank and public admission; but the practice involves manifest disadvantages, and is not one that deserves encouragement. The title of this story appeals to two recognized tastes of the more indiscriminating novel-reader by proposing a "sin" as the centre of its interest, and promising the unearthing of a hidden crime. The corpus of the mystery is a batch of bank-notes, stolen by the villain, whilst the titled hero has been basely saddled with disgrace and punishment. The motives of the well-to-do scoundrel in keeping his notes buried underground are not quite evident. He takes them up one fatal night in order to assure himself of their safety, and this excess of caution proves to be his undoing. The thread of villainy is not so attractive as the more human elements of the story, which are cleverly and tenderly dealt with.

The Burden of Isabel. By J. Maclaren Cobban. 3 vols. (Chatto & Windus.)

THERE is a refreshing straightforwardness about Mr. Maclaren Cobban's method which is in agreeable contrast to the elaborate indecision of the modern impressionist. When the thread of his story has got tangled Mr. Cobban simply deals with it as Alexander dealt with the Gordian knot, and certainly the majority of his readers will cordially endorse his mode of procedure where the happiness of so attractive a heroine and so spirited a hero is concerned. Mr. Cobban's portraiture is vigorous and telling, though inclined at times to exaggeration; but his cheerfulness is infectious, and whether he writes of love or cotton, Grub Street or opium dens, his alert and vivacious manner never deserts him.

'Lisbeth.' By Leslie Keith. 3 vols. (Cassell & Co.)

'LISBETH' has industry, thoughtful observation, and a very careful building up of character and situation. In one or two places something more than these qualities crops up; but that is about the general level of attainment. A more brilliant touch now and then would have been refreshing. The author has a long story to tell, and it becomes slightly wearisome and monotonous to the conscientious reader before it draws to a close. Most of the time passes in London, though the story is principally concerned with several Scotch families, who, as shop and lodging-house keepers, make their more or less successful way. Perhaps, as some of these people would say, there are "ower mony folk" about, and yet the author has differentiated them with care. The sisters of the Mitchell stock and their quarrels, tempered by a certain clannish instinct that keeps the tribe together in spite of friction, are given with too much detail. One imagines that some of their family peculiarities and angles would have been more effaced by the struggle for existence. Still there is good workmanship now and again. Effie the angelic is almost as much the heroine of the piece as 'Lisbeth the strong. Both characters are fairly interesting. Several quite superfluous people and some extraneous material are dragged in—Laura Robson, a case in point, is not badly done, though she does not fuse well with the rest. Sundry pictures of the quite "minor literati" of London suggest the real thing.

Such a Lord is Love. By Mrs. Stephen Batson. 2 vols. (Innes & Co.)

READERS of Mrs. Batson's first novel will not be surprised to find that the contents of her second do not furnish a cheerful interpretation of its oracular title. "A woman's love," as she remarks in the last chapter, "is not always based on principles of reason." If the matrimonial experiences related in 'Such a Lord is Love' may be taken as fair samples, Mrs. Batson might have added, as a rider, that "marriage nine times out of ten is a dismal failure." There is nothing to prevent a novelist from illustrating this pessimistic text at the expense, in the majority of cases, of the husband. All that the reader asks is that the story should be interesting and convincing. These conditions, unfortunately, cannot be said to have been realized in the present book. An attempt at humour is made in the character of an Oxford professor; but the satire on modern philosophical terminology is crude and childish.

Old Caleb's Will. By Frances Armstrong. (Jarrold & Sons.)

'OLD CALEB'S WILL' is a well-meaning rather than a well-written story. The drunkenness is of the mild type; but the cases "make up in number what they lack in weight." We are almost tempted to think we prefer to it the rabid temperance novel, where the most exaggerated casualties take place through "the drink." Nothing particularly awful happens here, yet the story makes little appeal to common sense, or to our ideas of ordinary life or even of the drunkard's progress. The works of fiction that really deal with the evil strongly, and at the same time convincingly, might be numbered on the fingers of one hand. Needless to say, 'Old Caleb's Will' is not among them, nor, to be just, do we see any symptom that the author expected it should be so placed. It is just a humourless, in-artistic story of a common kind.

The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes. By A. Conan Doyle. (Newnes.)

PRETTY well everybody reads Mr. Conan Doyle; and none of those who agreed in the general verdict that 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' were unsurpassed of late years as stories of detective ingenuity will wait for a recommendation to read the final 'Memoirs' of the same suprasubtle unraveller of mysteries. The word "final" is open to some demur; it faithfully interprets a strong protestation on the part of the ingenuous Mr. Watson that he, at least, will have no more to tell the world of Sherlock Holmes, whose dramatic death he records in the present volume. But one cannot feel so sure of Mr. Conan Doyle, and at any rate the public will expect to hear something by-and-by of Sherlock's brother Mycroft, who is evidently a reserved card, ready to be played at a pinch. The story of the last exploit of the hero of 'A Study in Scarlet,' ending with his apotheosis at the Falls of Reichenbach, brings his memoirs to a close in a sufficiently striking manner, though not, it must be confessed, without an extra allowance of the bizarre and the improbable. It was fitting that, if Mr. Holmes was to die a violent death at the hands of an enemy, this enemy should be a thaumaturgist like himself, only not benevolent, and not quite so clever. In other words, he had to be an impossible monstrosity, and that is what Mr. Conan Doyle has drawn, with a good deal of plausible verisimilitude. It is only fair to add that the 'Memoirs' are as attractive and as appetizing as the 'Adventures.'

Joyce Martindale. By Mrs. H. E. Russell. (Remington & Co.)

'JOYCE MARTINDALE' is a novel containing pictures of Australian life in town and country. The latter is the more interesting part of the volume. The author knows something of the conditions of life in both places, and the position of the country generally, but there is no charm in her pictures. Joyce is not an interesting heroine, nor are her family, surroundings, or curate lover entertaining. There are a good many tiresome conversations and quantities of quotations. Black Dick, his employers, and their sheeprun have rather more vigour and purpose. The rejection of the good curate's suit because his brother once embezzled a sum of money is a provoking business. The "high-toned" solicitor who calls Joyce daughter constrains his exceedingly dutiful offspring to take the step, and the departure of the magnanimous curate excites less compassion and interest than might be supposed.

THE LITERATURE OF POLITICAL ECONOMY.

IN A Ready Reckoner of the World's Exchanges (Sampson Low & Co.) Mr. Norman has continued the useful series of works on the subject of the foreign exchanges over which he has so carefully laboured. The full title of his work explains that the 'Ready Reckoner' enables the foreign and colonial exchanges to be understood "with the aid of less than 2,000 figures, whereby 756 tables of exchange, consisting of from 13,800 to 200,000 figures each, can be dispensed with." The mass of figures referred to shows how laborious and heavy such calculations necessarily are. In all books of this description a good deal of trouble must be taken by one of two persons—the writer or the reader. Mr. Norman has taken the trouble on himself, to the corresponding advantage of those who use his book. There are many ways employed in practice for working out the foreign exchanges. Bankers and bullion and exchange dealers mostly arrive at the results by means of exchange tables. What Mr. Norman has aimed at, and has succeeded in demonstrating, is the substance which underlies the surface, namely, that between countries possessing effective monetary systems it is a given "weight of pure gold or pure silver" that is dealt with; and he has worked out a method by which the result desired can be readily attained. His labours extend to the monetary systems of 161 countries. And impossible as it may seem, amusing illustrations are found in his book—as of six men of different nationalities who, each with standard gold money of his country in his pocket, take "lunch at a hotel in Yokohama. The landlord agrees to receive their gold in payment for their lunch and give each his change in Japanese money at the absolute par of the day established by the silver price of gold. This price is 388 yens 654 senn per 100 monme, or 8797.06332 troy grains of pure gold. Each man's proportion of the bill amounted to 2 yens 23 senn. What is the charge in the money of each man's country, and the change each man receives in Japanese money for the standard coin of his nation?"

The whole of the working of this series of questions is contained in little more than two pages of small size, which are easily to be understood by any one who will take the trouble to master Mr. Norman's method. Currency questions are, at the present time, very much before the public mind. For instance, the arrangement which the Indian Government has recently made with the view of keeping the exchange between India and this country continually at a fixed point is one which is likely to exercise a far-reaching influence on the finances of India and the trade of that country. Yet we wonder how many men, even among those engaged in business, could give a clear explanation of the basis on which the Indian Government acted. The book which Mr. Norman has written gives information which may assist in making such matters intelligible to ordinary readers, and we therefore welcome its appearance, and hope it may obtain a wide circulation.

It is well calculated to dispel the ignorance which exists in matters connected with the foreign exchanges, and to assist to restore to the merchants of this country that "masterly skill in bullion and coin" which was more generally possessed, we believe, some generations back in this country than at the present time.

MR. CANNAN'S History of the Theories of Production and Distribution in English Political Economy from 1776 to 1848 (Percival & Co.) deals with the period during which economic inquiry shook itself clear from the mediæval garb, as we may almost call it, which had clothed its modes of expression ever since England became a great trading power. The days of "political arithmetic" had passed by. The study was recognized as an independent branch of thought, and the course which economic inquiry was to take for the future became settled. The influence of the opinions prevalent from the days of Adam Smith to those of J. S. Mill abides with us to the present day. Though the domination of those opinions has been rudely shaken, they still powerfully sway the minds of men. The testimony to their force, for instance, which Prof. Nicholson expressed in his address at Nottingham to the meeting of the British Association in September last may remind us that their reign is by no means over. The purpose for which Mr. Cannan has written this book is explained in his preface: "My object is simply to show what the various theories concerning production and distribution were, and to explain how and why they grew up, and then either flourished or decayed." The very careful and ingenious criticism which, in carrying his purpose out, Mr. Cannan has made of the views of every English economist of note from Adam Smith onwards, can hardly be summarized here. It brings out clearly what every one who has read the writers included must have felt—how largely the economic opinion of their age was coloured by the political events of the time. This may be true of economists in all ages, but it certainly was eminently true of such writers as Malthus, Ricardo, and J. S. Mill. The commencement of this century—the period when the first two of these economists flourished—was overshadowed by the events of the great war, and the writings both of Malthus and Ricardo bear evidence of this; and though J. S. Mill survived to happier and more peaceful days, yet the years when his mind and character were being moulded by the stern influence of his father were all tinged by the same influence. It was natural that these writers should not only have been saddened, but rendered rigid in thought, by the bitter struggle which surrounded them. The errors they fell into were the natural result of those circumstances. Mr. Cannan traces these errors carefully and thoroughly, and the influence which they have had: thus the mistakes made by economists of the Maltho-Ricardian school "in the discussion of free trade, the poor law, and the resumption of cash payments, have often been extremely pernicious in their influence on the later controversy." The theory which represents that there is "some mysterious process whereby 'Capital' cheats 'Labour' out of a part of its legitimate reward, owes its origin to the old subsistence theory of wages, to the confusions about the nature and functions of 'capital,' and to a natural reaction against the attempt to explain interest as the reward of some painful or meritorious action." Mr. Cannan's criticism is always ingenious and frequently able. He has read carefully the works which he discusses, and the analysis contained in his index will be of service to all students of English economic thought, while it remains a monument of his industry and research. We part from Mr. Cannan expressing our thanks for the labour he has taken in illustrating a most important period of our economic history, our feeling of gratification at the immense progress he has made in his studies since his first volume appeared—now some years since—and our hope that in his future writings he may work himself clear of a slight asperity of tone which hinders his readers from sympathizing with him as much as they would otherwise do.

DR. VON SCHULZE-GAVERNITZ is a German writer of the school of Dr. Brentano. His Social Peace, which has for its second title "A Study of the Trade Union Movement in England," is now translated by Miss Wicksteed, edited by Mr. Graham Wallas, and published by Messrs. Swan Sonnenschein & Co. It is not a very complete study of the English trade union movement, but, as its chief title implies, it contains a great deal of information on the subject of conciliation. The author does not appear to realize, any more than do Mr. Mundella, Sir Albert Rollit, Mr. Bousfield, M.P., and many others who have taken up the question, the very large amount of either hostility or indifference which exists among trade unionists with regard to such proposals. There are some who say, and there are a great many more who, when consulted privately, show that they think, that undue importance is attached to either arbitration or conciliation. Their argument is that if trade unions are as powerful in any particular trade as they ought to be, such schemes are hardly necessary, as the masters and the union can deal with the matter from time to time for themselves; and the recent arbitration in the coal dispute was undoubtedly somewhat of a demonstration for the public after the more critical matter pending had really been privately settled between the parties, and before the lasting question at issue was ripe for settlement. If, on the other hand, many trade unionists are inclined to argue, unions are weak in a particular trade, then no form of arbitration or conciliation will prevent the interests of the workers being sacrificed. Some very able articles have lately been appearing upon this subject in a weekly organ of the workers in the textile trades published at Manchester, and are attributed (we know not whether truthfully or the reverse) to Mr. Mawdaley, J.P. The view taken by the writer is that the idea of arbitration is said to be gaining a strong hold on what is called the public mind, but that this only means the public as represented by the daily newspapers, or, in other words, the upper and middle classes. It is imagined, the workman author says, that a large section of the workers are in favour of arbitration, and in this belief the organs of the upper class "serve out to their readers platitudes" as to strikes being clumsy proceedings which should be replaced by

"what they term an impartial tribunal.....It may be considered a certainty that early in the next session we shall be confronted with a Government Bill dealing with the subject. One of the reasons why even that section of the press which is supposed to especially represent democratic views has gone in favour of arbitration is because the new unions are almost all on the same side. We need not analyze their position very keenly to ascertain why this is so. In recent fights their weakness and lack of staying power has been so thoroughly exposed that at present they can do nothing but meekly accept what their employers—who in their case are their masters—choose to give them. No genuine friend of the workers can feel any gratification at this fact, but no useful purpose can be served by concealing it, as the employers know it better than the men themselves. We mention it for the reason that it explains the attitude of the officials of the new unions on the arbitration question. The members will not pay such a contribution to their union funds as will enable them to hold their own in a square fight, and the authorities will not allow them to use physical force, so they are driven back to demanding arbitration. They have, of course, had no experience of it, or we question whether, even in their present straits, they would not prefer to take their chances in open warfare. But with the whole of the middle and upper classes and the lower grades of the workers asking for it, the unions of skilled workers will have to devote some time to thinking out where their own interests lie."

The author of this very interesting exposition of what we have no doubt is the real view of the strongest trade unionists in the country, and those of the greatest influence, goes on till he reaches the conclusion that with regard to reductions in wages the workmen

"will be well advised in retaining in their own hands the power to say when that time has arrived, rather than delegate it to irresponsible umpires, whose whole policy may be summed up by saying that they send the workpeople to their employment with a verdict as much against them as they can be made or persuaded to stand."

We may dispute the conclusions to which this writer comes; but no one who knows working-class feeling will deny that Dr. Schulze-Gavernitz has been too much in the hands, during his English visits, of the Board of Trade and its advisors, to be allowed to hear the side of the question which will come to the front in the course of the next few years. Dr. Schulze-Gavernitz is sometimes a little hasty in the information that he gives to his readers, as, for example, when he states that the Women's Provident League—by which he explains that he means the Women's Trade Union League—has received assistance from Lord and Lady Brassey in starting a labour bureau in London. That society works through the officials of the trade unions affiliated to it, and through the leaders of the Lancashire textile workers in industries employing men and women; and we are not aware that Lord and Lady Brassey, or, indeed, any influential patrons, have been concerned in its recent operations.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO. publish Essays on Questions of the Day, Political and Social, by Mr. Goldwin Smith. This volume is hardly worthy of the great and perfectly deserved reputation of its author. The articles are reprinted from the North American Review, the Forum, the National Review, and other periodicals, and are of somewhat varying degrees of freshness, and some of them a little out of date. Those which we shall not specifically notice concern the Irish question, the Jewish question, Prohibition in Canada and the United States, woman suffrage, and such like matters, on which the author lays down his well-known opinions. An interesting article is that on Disestablishment, but then this chapter contains several very doubtful statements, and is indeed based, as we think, on a mistake. Its first words are: "Disestablishment of the Church of England is a question evidently at hand." Now putting out of sight altogether, as unfitted for our non-political and unsectarian pages, the question of whether, in the interests of either State or Church or both, the principle of Establishment is a sound one, how, we should ask Mr. Goldwin Smith, can it be with truth asserted that the Disestablishment cause as regards England is making rapid progress? A few years ago it seemed as though a large minority of the people—the great majority of one of the two parties in the State—supported immediate Disestablishment. That minority and that party are now urging forward Disestablishment in Wales, and basing their demand on local Welsh opinion. It can hardly be doubted, although it may be the duty of Churchmen to make common cause with their Welsh brethren, that, as regards mere policy, the interest of those who desire the continuance of the Establishment is the other way. There is, and will be for long, a considerable local majority against Disestablishment in England without Wales, and in Parliament among the English members of any parliament likely to be elected for many years; and if Wales is to be dealt with by itself on the ground of Welsh opinion, the case against carrying Disestablishment in England by means of Scotch,

Welsh, and Irish Roman Catholic votes will be strong indeed. Mr. Goldwin Smith deals at some length with the bearing of the position of the so-called Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States upon the possible future of things in England. He says of that Church, "No change of importance has been made in the Prayer Book besides the omission of the Athanasian Creed." Probably these words are intended to be governed by their context, and to refer to change since the laity have been admitted to a share of power. They are, however, somewhat ambiguous. It is a striking fact that when, late in the last century, the American bishops fixed the Prayer Book of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States, they inserted in the Communion service explanations of the doctrine of the Church with regard to the elements which are more anti-Catholic than any explanations which have ever been officially made on behalf of the Church of England. These remain unexpurgated, but the ritual of the branch of the Church across the Atlantic in communion with the Church of England has become to some extent Laudian. Mr. Goldwin Smith is a high authority on the ecclesiastical history of the Reformation in England, so that we somewhat wonder to find him quoting another writer as authority for the statement, which he makes as though concurring in it, that, while the body of the English clergy remained Catholic through all the early changes, "no regard was paid in any case to its wishes." It is possible that this may be intended to be confined to the reign of Mary and the accession of Elizabeth, but, as the reign of James I. is immediately afterwards mentioned, it would seem more probable that the statement is intended to be more general. But surely Mr. Goldwin Smith knows that, in the controversies with regard to the doctrine of the Church which arose between the Queen and the House of Commons, the bishops were repeatedly, during the reign of Elizabeth, the advisers of the Queen, and that their opinion often carried the day against the real feeling of almost every independent member of the House of Commons.

MR. CHRISTIE MURRAY'S autobiography, The Making of a Novelist (Chatto & Windus), has in it the ring of sincerity and good-fellowship that is better than any amount of morbid analysis and modern introspection. The little volume consists of matter more or less interesting and actual; the writing is direct and vigorous, and therefore pleasing. His experiences up to the present—he is now not much past the prime of life—have been varied. He has taken a turn at soldiering and landscape painting, was a war correspondent in Constantinople in the seventies, an amateur tramp, and is, as we all know, a novelist, play-writer, and actor. Like many successful tellers of tales he began by journalism, and has never found the training thrown away. His first post was as reporter to a provincial daily. How he came to witness a gruesome and unforgettable hanging, how once on a time he outdid a celebrated fellow journalist in the race to "write up" a mining disaster, are amongst the episodes told in this volume. Many are the ups and downs that came into his life before he attained his share of fame and fortune; he tells something—he could probably tell more—of the days when with others he enjoyed or suffered the cold hospitality of the hostelry of the Beautiful Star. Sundry of his experiences have already gone to the making of two or three of his most successful stories. We like to think of him as the writer of 'Rainbow Gold,' 'Joseph's Coat,' and 'Aunt Rachel'; and the present volume at least does nothing to lessen an already sympathetic interest in their author.

It is only natural that one reading a volume of aphorisms like Sentences and Paragraphs, by Mr. John Davidson (Lawrence & Bullen), should adopt a more than usually critical attitude. One feels that the only justification that a man can have for dogmatizing in unconnected paragraphs is either an extraordinary originality of thought or an especially marked aptitude for brilliancy of expression: otherwise the result seems impertinent and affected. Mr. Davidson's book is made up partly of short aphorisms and partly of rather longer paragraphs, which have the appearance of being suggestions thrown out for more detailed criticisms. But neither are the isolated aphorisms and paragraphs characterized by any special novelty of thought or expression, nor is the book as a whole calculated to give the reader any very distinct idea of the author's general theory of life or of art—a result which by its interest might have atoned for a want of distinction in individual passages. The book starts off badly: it seems almost incredible that a writer of aphorisms should allow such a cheap and commonplace piece of cynicism as the following to stand on his first page in all the glory of a paragraph separately numbered and marked off:—

"If you praise a man you please only himself. In order to provide the greatest happiness for the greatest number, you must damn with faint praise, for then you please all a man's friends."

"Dignity is impudence" is another thought on which a paragraph seems wasted; and the following, though perfectly true, is not such a portentous novelty as Mr. Davidson would appear to imagine:—

"Those who are convinced of the absolute truth of evolution are merely bigots, as intolerant as those who formerly believed in witchcraft or a concrete hell. No mind is so much given over to delusions as the logical one."

Some of the longer paragraphs are interesting in their way, but the irrelevance which somehow characterizes the whole book is, if possible, more noticeable in them. There are paragraphs, for example, about "Heather in Literature," about "Henry Lemoine," and about the Wise Men of Gotham, which contain amusing stories or interesting information; but they do not lead to anything, and they only leave the reader asking for more. It must not, of course, be imagined that there are not some good things in the book; it were to be wished, for example, that there were more paragraphs like this one, which contains a truth deserving of considerable meditation:—

"The chief hindrances in the consideration of any matter are the thoughts of others. It is not so much a test of genius to think originally as to know what one actually does think. Some men upon most subjects have two judgments: a public one for daily use, and a private one, which they deceive themselves into the belief that they never held. There are decent, honest men who opine the opinions of others, persuaded that they are their own. Few, indeed, can detach their proper thought from the mass of ideas."

This also is a suggestive idea:—

"Conscience is a pretext which we have invented to save us the trouble of thinking."

But this is not Mr. Davidson's own—only one of a series of quotations.

We have looked through the three volumes of the fifth edition of Meyer's Konversations-Lexikon (Leipzig and Vienna, Bibliographisches Institut) with envy and admiration—with envy more especially, because nothing so good in the way of a popular encyclopedia has been produced in this country. We are quite aware of the merits of the new edition of 'Chambers's Encyclopedia,' but it only fills ten volumes of 800 pages apiece and is thereby hampered, while this is on a larger scale. Each volume contains over a thousand pages, and the third only reaches to the article 'Chemikalien,' while the article 'Chemistry' in Chambers ends on p. 154 of the third volume. So far as we have examined the articles they are exactly what they should be, clear and full, accurate and yet popular enough to be understood by any educated man, and although, of course, intended primarily for the Fatherland, will be of much use to English readers who understand German. One great feature of the book consists of the illustrations, which are scattered in great profusion throughout the volumes, and are most of them excellently selected. The maps are particularly good, more especially the plans of towns and of the districts surrounding them. The coloured illustrations are, like most specimens of German colour-printing, coarse; still they help to make the objects illustrated comprehensible. The illustrations to the articles on sculpture and architecture are notably excellent. Upon the whole this encyclopedia is really a wonderful work, and sets the critic thinking how much better undertakings of the sort are managed abroad.

We sympathize with Mr. Lang's warm eulogy of Quentin Durward in his preface to the Border edition of that romance (Nimmo). He thinks it superior to 'Ivanhoe,' and no doubt the plot, as he points out, is better constructed; but the later novel does not possess the wonderful vigour of the earlier. It is a pity Mr. Lang's account of the Scots Guard is not more carefully put together. A sentence about Malplaquet has strayed into the notice of the deeds of the Scottish soldiers of the fifteenth century, and Mr. Lang must be well aware of the difference between the Scots Guards of Louis XI. and their representatives under Louis XIV. M. Lalauze's etchings add to the charm of this reprint.—Messrs. A. & C. Black send us their reissue of Pereril of the Peak. It is a nice reprint, but Mr. Berkeley's designs are more praiseworthy in intention than execution, and the compiler of the glossary should have made up his mind whether he would put Christian names or surnames first.—Another reprint may be noticed with these, The Lyrics and Ballads of Sir Walter Scott (Dent & Co.), to which Mr. Lang has supplied an excellent piece of criticism by way of introduction. It is disappointing, however, to find that Mr. Lang has not arranged either the lyrics or the ballads in chronological order, and he has omitted some of the poems—not very good ones, no doubt; but if the collection was not intended to be complete, the reader should have been warned that it was not.

Christowell has been added to the reprint of Mr. Blackmore's novels, Guild Court to the reissue of Dr. Mac Donald's, which Messrs. Low & Co. are bringing out. Prince Fortunatus, the most recent instalment of the cheap edition of Mr. Black's romances, comes to us from the same firm.—Darrell Chetamey, by Curtis Yorke, has been included by Messrs. Jarrold in their series of popular novels.—The Poems of William Blake have been edited by Mr. Yent in a pretty little volume issued by Messrs. Lawrence & Bullen.

We have on our table A Digest of the Law of Coroners, by S. Taylor (Cox),—The Legal Code of Alfred the Great, edited by M. H. Turk (Nutt),—The Tutorial History of Rome to 14 A.D., by A. H. Allcroft and W. F. Mason (Clive),—Hughes's Constitutional Reader (Hughes),—The Learner's Shorthand Reader (Pitman),—Pitman's Pocket Dictionary of the English Language (Pitman),—Boys, Vol. I. (Low),—Chums, Vol. I. (Cassell),—Walter Treloarney, by J. S. Fletcher (Chambers),—Lays of the Scottish Highlands, by R. N. Breeze (Ward & Downey),—Ballads of High and Humble Life, by R. C. Jenkins (Folkestone, Kentfield),—The Expository Times, edited by the Rev. J. Hastings, Vol. IV. (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—Cambridge Sermons, edited by O. H. Prior (Methuen),—The Old Testament and its Contents, by J. Robertson, D.D. (A. & C. Black),—The Early Spread of Religious Ideas, especially in the Far East, by J. Edkins, D.D. (R.T.S.),—The Revelation of St. John the Divine, with Notes and Introduction by the Rev. W. H. Simcox (Cambridge, University Press),—and The Revelation and the Record, by the Rev. J. Macgregor, D.D. (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark). Among New Editions we have The Science of Mechanics, by Dr. E. Mach, translated by T. J. McCormack (Watts),—Story of the Life of Sir Walter Scott, by R. Chambers, LL.D. (Chambers).—Hervard the Wake, by C. Kingsley (Macmillan).—Scott's Legend of Montrose (Low).—Butler's 'Analogy' and Modern Thought, by A. R. Egar, D.D. (S.P.C.K.).—The Design of Love, by E. B. (Stoneman).—On Guard, by Major M. Quayle-Jones (Gale & Polden).—Progressive Studies in Phonography (Pitman).—The Shilling Geography, by Dr. C. Morrison (Arnold).—and Underneath the Bough, a Book of Verses, by M. Field (Bell).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

- Theology.
Davies's (Rev. J. P.) The Comfortable Season of Lent, Sermons, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Elliot's (C. J.) Foundations of Sacred Study, 12mo. 2/ cl.
Fry's (J. H.) The "Receipts" of Christ, or the Conditions of Salvation, 12mo. 2/ cl.
Kemp's Imitation of Christ, Facsimile Reproduction of First Edition, Introduction by Canon Little, 3/6 pbct.
Knight's (W.) The Christian Ethic, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Littling's (Rev. G.) Consider your Ways, Twenty-one Brief Sermons, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Westcott's (Bishop) The Incarnation and Common Life, 9/ Law.
Baden-Powell's (B. H.) Forest Laws, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Fine Art.
Academy Architecture, 1893, roy. 8vo. 4/ swd, net; 4/10 cl. net.
Fergusson's (J.) History of Architecture in all Countries, Ancient and Medieval, 3rd Edition, 3 vols. 8vo. 63/ cl.
Poetry and the Drama.
Gemmings's (J. F.) Temperance in Memoriam, its Purpose and its Structure, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Millard's (Late J.) Shakespeare for Recitation, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Wilde's (O.) Salomé, done into English, illustrated by A. Beardsley, 15/ net.
Philosophy.
Vint's (R.) History of the Philosophy of History, 8vo. 21/ cl.
Scott's (W. E.) A Simple History of Ancient Philosophy, 2/6 History and Biography.
Durrows (H. W.) Memorials, by R. Wordsworth, cr. 8vo. 6/ Coleridge (Samuel Taylor), a Narrative of the Events of his Life, by J. D. Campbell, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Cousance's (H.) Reading Recollections and Turf Stories, 15/ cl.
Davies's (H. R.) The Rulers of the Mediterranean, cr. 8vo. 6/6 Fraser's (L. M.) History of Trinidad (First Period) from 1781 to 1821, 1st. 8vo. 10/ net.
Leslie's (F.) Recollections of, by W. T. Vincent, 2 vols. 30/ cl.
Rawle's (H. J.) Annals of the Ancient Royal Forest of Ranmore, 4to. 30/ net.
Geography and Travel.
Dale's (J.) Round the World by Doctor's Orders, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Höbner's (Lieut. L. von) Discovery of Lakes Rudolf and Stefania, trans. by Nancy Bell, 2 vols. 8vo. 42/ cl.
Philology.
Frazier (The) of the Great Bible of 1539, a Landmark in English Literature, ed. by J. H. Rieu, 8vo. 16/ cl.
Rumpelt's (H. B.) The German Numerals Historically Treated, ed. by K. L. Lentner, royal 8vo. 5/ net.
Science.
Atkinson's (F.) The Electric Transformation of Power, 7/6 Braithwaite's (J.) Retrospect of Medicine, Vol. 108, 6/8 cl.
Campbell's (H.) Hemiplegia and other Morbid Cerebral Sensations, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Dupuis's (N. F.) Elements of Synthetic Solid Geometry, cr. 8vo. 4/6 net.
Furman's (H. van F.) Manual of Practical Assaying, 15/ cl.
Hertz's (Dr. H.) Electric Waves, translated by D. N. Jones, 8vo. 10/ net.
Hickson's (S. J.) The Fauna of the Deep Sea, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Parke's (L. C.) Infectious Diseases, 12mo. 4/6 cl.
Taylor (J. C.) and others' The Veil Lifted, Modern Development of Spirit Photography, cr. 8vo. 3/ net.
General Literature.
Arnold's (B. L.) The Constable of St. Nicholas, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Bryant's (S.) Short Studies in Character, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Douglass's (L.) What Necessity Knows, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Dowling's (B. R.) A Baffling Quest, cheap edition, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Galdes's (B. P.) Lady Perfecta, trans. by M. Wharton, 3/6 cl.
Gordon's (W.) Guides and Markers' Duties in Company, Battalion, &c., Movements, 32mo. 2/ cl.
Grand's (S.) The Heavenly Twins, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Harlett's (W.) Essays selected from the Spirit of the Age, Introduction by B. B. Johnson, 18mo. 2/6 cl.
Hungerford's (Mrs.) Lady Patty, 12mo. 2/6 cl.; The Red House Mystery, a Novel, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 21/ cl.
Kirk's (V.) Zorg, a Story of British Guiana, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Knight (W.) and Oliphant's (T. T.) Stories of Golf, 2/6 cl.
Maartens's (M.) A Question of Taste, Popular Edition, 3/6 cl.
McCausland's (Lieut.-Col. W. H.) Deferred Pay, or a Major's Dilemma, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Mac Donald's (G.) Home Again, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Oliphant's (Mrs.) The Sovereigns, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.; The Cuckoo in the Nest, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Ouida's Two Offenders, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Putnam's (G. H.) Authors and their Public in Ancient Times, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Ramsden's (Lady G.) Speedwell, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Spalding's (F. A.) The House of Lords, a Retrospect and a Forecast, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Superficious Woman (A.), a Novel, 3 vols. 12mo. 31/8 cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

- Analekta Hymnica Medii Aevi, frag. v. G. M. Dreyer, Vol. 16, 9m.
Buchmann (J.) Der Prophet Jesaja nach der äthiopischen Bibelübersetzung, Part 1, 20m.

Carus Scriptura Sacra, auctoribus R. Cornely, I. Knabenhauer aliisque Soc. Jesu premytoris: N. T., Part 1, No. 2, 7m.

Hahn (G. L.) Das Evangelium des Lucas, Vol. 2, Part 1, 6m.

Gosse (A.) Die attischen Grabreliefs, Part 5, 66m.

Kalkmann (A.) Die Proportionen des Gesichts in der griechischen Kunst, 7m.

Poetry and the Drama.

Déroutède (F.) Chants du Paysan, 1fr.

Dumas (A.) Le Théâtre des Autres, 3fr. 50.

Gondinet (B.) Théâtre complet, Vol. 3, 3fr. 50.

History and Biography.

Janssen (J.) Geschichte des deutschen Volkes seit dem Ausgang des Mittelalters, Vol. 7, 6m.

Joinville (Prince de) Vieux Souvenirs, 3fr. 50.

Marmangy (L. B. de) Le Chevalier de Vergennes, son Ambassade à Constantinople, 3 vols. 16fr.

Philology.

Heyne (M.) Deutsches Wörterbuch, Part 3, 5m.

Science.

Flammarion (C.) Annuaire astronomique et météorologique, 1fr.

General Literature.

Bazin (H.) Les Italiens d'aujourd'hui, 3fr. 50.

Delpit (E.) Marcienne, 3fr. 50.

Gyp Le Troisième, 3fr. 50.

Le Roux (H.) Gladya, 3fr. 50.

Mabouss (H.) Préjugé, 2fr. 50.

Spœlberch de Lovenjoul Les Lendils d'un Chercheur, 3fr. 50.

COPYRIGHT AND COPYRIGHTING.

THE only valid answer to Mr. R. F. Benson's inquiry respecting the Chicago reprint of 'Dodo' will be found in No. 166 of the United States Public Statutes, 1891, which provides (section 4959) that "the proprietor of every copyright book shall deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress a copy of every subsequent edition wherein any substantial changes shall be made: Provided, however, that the alterations, revisions, and additions made to books by foreign authors, heretofore published, of which new editions shall appear subsequently to the taking effect of this Act, shall be held and deemed capable of being copyrighted as above provided for in this Act."

It remains for the lawyers to decide whether the change of a name, misprints, and the omission of accents from French words—the only amendments Mr. Benson alleges to have been made by the reprinter on the original work—constitute "substantial changes," "deemed capable of being copyrighted" in America. If not, then the English author or his agent might make use of section 4963 of the same statute, which enacts that "every person who shall insert or impress such [copyright] notice in or upon any book, for which he has not obtained a copyright, shall be liable to a penalty of 100 dollars, recoverable, one-half for the person who shall sue for such penalty, and one-half to the use of the United States."

ADAM W. BLACK.

SOME EARLY MESOPOTAMIAN KINGS.

30, Colingham Place, Earl's Court.

THE late Mr. Freeman, who was suspicious and sceptical about the results of Cuneiform interpretation, indulged in frequent sarcasms about the new names which were being continually given to the same kings and heroes by those who claimed to interpret the writings. He would not see that when names are represented by ideographs, and not written phonetically, we can only make guesses as to the actual sounds represented by the characters, and treat them as provisional names.

So far Cuneiform scholars had a perfectly good answer to Mr. Freeman. A much more unreasoning habit, and one for which I know of no excuse, is that of representing precisely the same ideograph by quite different sounds. This has had some serious historical consequences, and I am writing to point out one notable instance.

In the last published part of Schrader's 'Keilinschriftliche Bibliothek,' Dr. P. Jensen gives translations of the oldest known inscriptions from Mesopotamia. In this work he in one place transcribes an ideograph by the name

Urban, and in another by that of Ur-gur, not only making two kings, but also two entirely different names, out of precisely the same ideographic characters. This seems to be not only arbitrary, but quite indefensible.

This is not all. The two kings referred to were, I believe, the same person, and Mr. Pinches, who has done so much to illustrate early Babylonian history, tells me that he is now of the same opinion. Hommel in his history has taken the view that they were different persons bearing the same name, and, so far as I know, chiefly on the ground that one calls himself patesi of Lagash, and the other lugal of Ur. Hommel, whose history is a masterpiece of combined learning and ingenuity, allows that Urban, the founder and ruler of Ur, belonged to the royal stock of Lagash, but he separates him by a considerable interval from his namesake. I cannot appreciate his reasons. We know that one of the patesis of Lagash was also one of the most powerful rulers of Babylonia. We know that Urban was the founder of Ur, as his name occurs on its foundation bricks; and it seems to be plain that he could not have built himself a new capital, and done the things he did, unless he had been a considerable personage at home. It seems to me plain that it was Urban, patesi of Lagash, who built Ur, and having built it and transferred his seat of government there, he thenceforward called himself king (lugal) of Ur, and king of Sumir and Akkad, a phrase which he seems to have been the first to use. It is a confirmation, if not a proof, of this position that Urban, king of Ur, actually built or restored a temple at Lagash.

The only apparent reason why Hommel makes two different persons out of Urban is that he considers Gudea, the patesi of Lagash, must have lived before the rulers of Ur, and after the Urban of Lagash. For the latter conclusion I know no good grounds. Whatever Gudea styled himself, he acknowledges no dependence upon any one but his God in his inscriptions, and he was, apparently, one of the most powerful sovereigns reigning over Northern and Southern Babylonia; and it was the power and wealth he acquired which probably enabled his successor Urban to found the new city of Ur, and other cities as well, such as Larsa. We know that a son of Gudea was named Ur Ningirau (i.e. the Man of the God Ningirau), and it is, therefore, very probable that another son should have been called Ur Bau (the Man of the Goddess Bau), a name constructed after the same pattern.

A proof, it seems to me, that Gudea preceded Urban of Lagash is to be found in the fact that the former—as we know from a very long and elaborate inscription on one of his statues, labelled B—was the founder and builder of the famous temple of the god Ningirau known as Inninû, or "the Temple of the Fifty." This temple is also mentioned in one of the inscriptions of Urban, patesi of Lagash (see Schrader, op. cit. p. 23), and he seems to have either enlarged it or restored it; this seems nearly conclusive that Urban the patesi was a successor of Gudea.

I am, therefore, of opinion that Gudea preceded Urban as patesi of Lagash.

Lastly, a careful reading of the inscriptions compels me to a somewhat different view from that of Amiaud in regard to the relative value and importance of the titles lugal and patesi. The latter does not, it seems to me, imply dependence, except dependence upon a god. Gudea, one of the greatest of the early Babylonian rulers, as I have said, uses nothing else, while a dependent ruler who refers to Dungi of Ur as his patron and overlord styles himself lugal. We cannot, therefore, depend upon the use of these titles for arranging the early kings in a series.

I should be obliged if some of my friends who have occupied themselves with the history of these early rulers would favour me with a criticism of these views.

HENRY H. HOWORTH.

BACON AND BARTHOLOMEW ANGLICUS.

January 3, 1904.

MR. ROBERT STEELE suggests (Athen. 3463, p. 916) that "the professor at Paris so much blamed by Roger Bacon" was no other than Bartholomew the Englishman, the author of the famous compendium 'De Proprietatibus Rerum.' He gives eleven notes of identification.

Bacon's professor was, he says, "(1) A Franciscan." But Bacon calls him simply a friar: "intransit ordinem Fratrum puerulus" ('Op. Min., ed. Brewer, p. 327), and the reference to "ordine suo" implies, if anything, that he belonged to a different order than Bacon's.

"(2) A most famous professor at Paris." Bacon couples him with Alexander of Hales; he speaks "de duobus doctoribus principalibus." It is incredible that Bartholomew, whose teaching at Paris is only attested by a single notice of Salimbene, should be mentioned in this way.

"(3) Not a student at any university." There is no evidence on this head with regard to Bartholomew. It is well known that the rules both of the Dominican and Franciscan orders forbade their members to engage in the study of philosophy or the liberal arts unless by special dispensation. Any one who, like Bacon's "professor," entered his order as a lad would be carried on immediately to the study of theology without the preliminary course in arts pursued by seculars. Bacon complains elsewhere ('Compend. Stud., pp. 425 ff.), in terms which recall the passages upon which Mr. Steele relies, of the injury caused to learning by this premature admission to the profounder regions of study.

"(4) Has written 'De Naturalibus.'" Bacon, however, so far as I can see, says that his "professor" wrote on philosophy at large ('Op. Tert., p. 30).

"(5) In twenty books or so." Bacon's words are that "tota potestas illarum scientiarum posset coarctari.....in vicesima parte illorum voluminum" (ibid.).

The four following heads, concerning the teacher's ignorance of languages and mathematics, &c., his good birth, and the faults of his writings, are too vague to prove anything.

"(10) A Master in Theology or in Philosophy." The form of this statement indicates a certain want of familiarity with the mediæval academic system. The degree was no doubt that of master or doctor—the terms are synonymous—in theology.

"(11) Living in 1267."

From all these notes we gather little more than that the object of Bacon's criticism was a friar who, having been professed early, had not enjoyed the advantage of a university course in arts, but who had afterwards become a doctor of divinity. Such facts do not go far to help us in an identification. But when it is added that the friar was quoted in the schools of Paris "like Aristotle, or Avicenna, or Averroes" ('Op. Tert., pp. 30, 31), we see at once that we have to do with some one on a different plane from the worthy plodding Bartholomew. It is no mere compiler that Bacon attacks, but the exponent of some principles which he conceives to be erroneous and absurd; and the terms in which he describes a doctrine concerning matter and form widely supported in his time ('Op. Tert., pp. 120 ff.) render the suggestion that this was the opinion against which he declared himself at least probable. But who the "professor" was is harder to conjecture. Albertus Magnus had left Paris many years before Bacon wrote. Friar Richard of Cornwall was scarcely, perhaps, a man of sufficient note to satisfy the conditions. It is a tempting solution to follow the late Dean Plumptre and Mr. A. G.

Little ('The Grey Friars in Oxford, p. 73, note) in discovering in this misleader of the Paris youth no less a teacher than the great enemy of the Franciscans, St. Thomas Aquinas himself.

REGINALD L. POOLE.

THE BOOK SALES OF 1893.

II.

UP to a certain date very few of those favourite books with coloured plates by Rowlandson, Alken, Leech, and the rest had been observed, but, as frequently happens, a large number came into the market at once. Alken's 'Hunting Accomplishments,' 1850, 'Hunting Casualties,' 1850, 'Hunting Sketches,' 1859, 'Steeple Chase Scenes,' 1848, and 'Symptoms of being Amused,' 1823, in all five folio books with coloured plates, sold for 21l. (half-calf and half-morocco); Combe's 'Life of Napoleon,' 30 coloured plates by George Cruikshank, 1815, 7l. 2s. 6d. (uncut); 'The Loving Ballad of Lord Bateman,' in the original green cloth and quite clean, 1839, 16mo., 8l. 5s.; Westmacott's 'English Spy,' 2 vols., coloured plates and woodcuts by R. Cruikshank, 1825-6, 8vo., 12l. 15s.; and many more that will be referred to as they arise. More unusual books which occurred for sale at the beginning of the year include Cowper's 'History of John Gilpin,' n.d. (1785), 5l. 6s. (uncut); Audubon's 'Birds of America,' 4 vols. double elephant folio, 1827-38, 290l., an amount which, though large, is considerably below the average; Goldsmith's 'Good-Natured Man,' first edition, 1768, 5l. (morocco extra); 'The Traveller,' first edition, 1765, 7l. 7s. (ibid.); and 'The Deserted Village,' first edition, 1770, 10l. (ibid.); a series of fifteen works, all of which related in some way to lace and lace-making, including Vinciolo's 'Singuliers et nouveaux Pourtraicts pour toutes Sortes d'Ouvrages de Lingerie,' 2 vols. in 1, 1589, of which only two or three copies are known to exist, 165l.; Milton's 'Poems both English and Latin,' 1645, 8vo., 33l. (morocco extra); the Sealed Book of Charles II., being the folio Prayer Book of 1662, 34l. (large paper, measuring 16½ in. by 10 in., original red morocco); and a copy in the original calf of Richardson's 'Clarissa Harlowe,' first edition, 7 vols., 1748, 22l. Had these last-named volumes been rebound and at all cut down in the process the price would have fallen to 2l. or 3l., or perhaps even less. The sale of the original autograph manuscript of 'Poems by Two Brothers,' will be fresh in the recollection of readers of the Athenæum, where the facts were chronicled at the time. The price paid (480l.) was considerably exceeded on a resale to an American collector. Admirers of Thackeray will be pleased or the reverse to learn that good copies of his novels, original editions of course, are still rising in value. A bid of 13l. for the 'Paris Sketch-Book,' 2 vols., 1840, is unusual, and 8l. 8s. for Marry's 'Sketches after English Landscape Painters,' n.d., quite high enough. It is Rugue's edition of this book that sells so well; that with Griffin's imprint, also without date, is much inferior. In connexion with Thackeray may be mentioned 'Britannia, a Weekly Journal of News, Politics, and Literature,' 3 vols., 1840-2, folio, which sold for 24l. 10s. at the Ditchfield sale in April last. These volumes contain five original articles, signed "M. A. Titmarsh," published under the collective title of 'Loose Sketches,' which have never been reprinted. The discovery of these interesting additions to Thackeray bibliography is due to the researches of Mr. C. P. Johnson, our authority on all matters relating to the novelist.

As in the case of Thackeray, so in that of Dickens. Original copies of works by either author are becoming more and more difficult to obtain, provided they are in the covers as issued and quite clean. There are hundreds of inferior copies in the market, but these invariably sell for small sums, and do not appear to excite much interest. One extraordinarily rare pamphlet of Dickens's is worthy of notice: 'To be Read at Duak,' reprinted from the Keepsake of 1852. A copy sold at the Dalziel sale in June for 8l. 10s., but it had been bound. About 20l. is a much more likely price for an example in the original wrapper. Really good copies of the works of Dickens have not appeared in the market recently, except on rare occasions and at long intervals. They appear to be rising in value, and are already quite beyond the reach of the ordinary collector. The same remark applies to many of Lever's works, particularly 'Tales of the Train,' 16mo., 1845, and nearly all Ainsworth's earlier publications. At the end of January the very scarce 'Rules and Regulations of the Walton and Cotton Club,' privately printed in 1840, brought 14l. 6s., and Besumarchais's 'La Folle Journée,' first edition, 1785, 8vo., 12l. This particular copy was unusually fine. It had a double set of the plates by St. Quentin, and the leaf of "Errata," nearly always missing. Joan Bouchet's 'Triumphes de la Noble et Amoureuse Dame,' Paris, 1536, brought 18l., but the binding, which was very choice, had much to do with this high figure. Later on, a set of Sibson's illustrations to 'Master Humphrey's Clock,' 72 plates, inclusive of engraved title and frontispiece, 1842, 8vo., sold for 14l. (original cloth); and a set of the parts of the 'Pickwick Papers,' for 13l. These would, no doubt, have produced more, but only parts x. and xv. had the "Addresses," which should also be found in parts ii. and iii. An ideal copy of the 'Pickwick Papers' is the despair of everybody, and has been so for years. A very superior 'Pickwick' was sold, however, in April last, for 29l. though rebound. The scarcity of Blake's engraved works has become proverbial, yet several copies have been sold during the past twelve months at reasonable prices, considering the wide demand there is for these extraordinary productions. In February, a large-paper copy of Laborde's 'Choix de Chansons,' 4 vols. 8vo., 1773, engraved throughout, and including the scarce portrait of Laborde à la Lyre, brought 96l.; and a number of books either printed in or in some way relating to North America sold at prices that preclude any idea of a fall. One of these, 'Encouragements for such as shall have Intention to be Undertakers in the new Plantation of Cape Breton,' Edinburgh, 1625, brought 70l., and two 'Epistoles' of Christopher Columbus, the first known as the "thirty-three-line edition," and the second as the "forty-two-line edition," 315l. It is well known to collectors that writers on the voyages of Columbus and the discovery of America are by no means agreed as to which of the many editions in Latin is the original, or editio princeps. A very good example of the difference in price obtainable for books in their original bindings and the same books when rebound is afforded by lots 1129 and 1130 in the Buckley sale. Both these comprised Fielding's 'Tom Jones,' first edition, 6 vols., 1749, both were the first issue with the leaf of "Errata" to vols. i.-v., yet one copy sold for 60l. and the other for 4l. 12s. The only difference observable was that in the first case the original binding was intact, while in the second the work had been rebound, and of course cut down. At this same sale Goldsmith's 'Vicar of Wakefield,' 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766, produced 39l. 10s., a price, however, that was considerably exceeded a few weeks ago; Keats's 'Poems,' 1817, in the original boards, 23l. 10s., and 'Endymion,' 1818, 10l. 5s., also as issued; Milton's 'Lycidas,' 1638, 4to., 67l. (morocco). At Sir Robert Comyn's sale, in March, that scarce pamphlet Byron's 'Curse of Minerva,' 1812, 4to., brought 60l. (original wrappers); 'The Walts' has not, however, appeared in the auction-room for some time. More recently, Marlowe's 'Tamberlaine the Great,' 1606, and the second part, 1606, in one quarto volume, brought 17l.; Richard de Bury's 'Philobiblon,' 1483, 4to., 31l. 10s.; Allot's 'England's Parnassus,' 1600, 8vo., 17l. 6s. (russia extra); the Block Book printed in Italy (Venice, G. A. Vavassone, circa 1510) commencing "Opera nova contemplativa," 34l.; the first edition of Cocker's 'Arithmetick,' 1678, 8vo., 15l., and of the 'Decimal Arithmetick,' 1685, 8vo., 5l. 12s.; Spenser's 'Complaints,' 1591, 4to., 22l. 10s.; and "Virgill's XII. Bukes of Eneados, translated into Scottish Metre by Gawan Douglas," 1553, 4to., 25l. 10s.

Some very valuable books appeared at the sale held by Messrs. Christie of Lord Hastings's library, but they were not sufficiently exceptional to demand a detailed notice, and moreover several of them have been already referred to incidentally. The Bateman heirlooms contained, however, some very unusual items, e.g., Augustinus 'De Arte Predicandi,' printed by Fust about 1460, folio, 34l.; Bancroft's 'Two Bookes of Epigrammes and Epitaphs,' 1639, 4to., 6l.; Bateman's 'Travayled Pilgrime,' 1569, 4to., 6l. 6s.; one of Schoiffer's Latin Bibles in the original oak boards, 2 vols. folio, 1472, 20l.; the 'Byrthe and Comynge of Antechryst,' printed by Wynkyn de Worde about 1495, 4to., 25l. (imperfect); Caxton's 'Doctrinal of Sapience,' 1489, folio, 58l. (six leaves in facsimile); Higden's 'Polychronicon,' printed by Caxton in 1482, folio, 122l. (six leaves missing); the 'Cronicles of Englonde,' St. Albans, n.d. (but 1483), 96l. (with all faults); Lyndewode's 'Opus super Constituciones Provinciales,' s. l. and a. (but Oxford, 1485), folio, 58l.; and the 'Statuta Nova Anglie,' printed by Lettoun and Machlinia, the first printers who carried on business in the City of London, in or about 1490, folio, 85l. These books are seldom seen in any condition outside the walls of large libraries.

At the Dalziel sale eight volumes (including 'Hunting') of the Badminton Library, large paper, produced 29l. 10s., but the finest collection was dispersed at the sale of the library of Bishop Stortford School at the end of July. There were seventeen volumes, all on large paper, and the sum realized for the whole amounted to 55l. 13s. At the same sale Alken's 'National Sports of Great Britain,' coloured plates, 1821, folio, sold for 23l. 10s., and a copy of the edition of 1823 for 18l.; both works were half-bound. A number of Apperley's sporting novels sold at prices that have not materially varied for several years, but all had been rebound, and, as already stated, these rebound books are not showing any improvement. Cicero's 'Cato Major; or, his Discourse of Old Age,' Philadelphia, B. Franklin, 1744, 8vo., sold for 49l. This copy had been cut down, or it would, perhaps, have brought more. In November a portion of the library formed by the late Earl of Clancarty should have been offered for sale, but an injunction was obtained, and so the dispersion did not take place. Judging from the catalogue, the books were not of much importance. The library of the late Mr. Joseph Crowther, of Alderley Edge, near Manchester, was not productive of anything out of the common. The 'Essays on Several Subjects' written by Sir Thos. Pope Blount, which Mr. Crowther thought excessively rare and valuable, was not sold. A letter from Mr. David Bryce referring to the subject appeared in the Athenæum of November 4th last, p. 629.

The sale of Mr. William Hazlitt's books, manuscripts, and letters, which took place on November 23rd and 24th, was in one respect the most important event of the year, the Hazlitt papers being, as might have been expected, a unique feature. The original MS. of the 'Liber Amoris' brought 32l., and two folio volumes full of autograph letters and miscellanies, 122l. The original draft, in Hunt's autograph, of the first letter to Hazlitt upon the question of the Shelley criticisms sold for 20l. 10s., and there were several other manuscripts and collections of the highest value from a literary point of view. The printed books, too, which went the way of all libraries on this occasion, were of considerable importance. The whole sale realized 1,810l. and some few shillings. Another dispersion to which special reference may well be made took place at Liverpool on the last days of November, when Messrs. Branch & Leete, of that city, sold the library of the late Mr. John Bouch. Some of the books brought most extraordinary prices, and must have been in the finest possible condition.

Some of these days, perhaps, the great mass of book-collectors in Great Britain, who, when everything is said and done, hold the market with a firm grip, may be pleased to turn it topsy-turvy, and so take their revenge on a few fortunate mortals who follow the fashion regardless of cost; but until they do this, it is highly improbable that there will be any great change to report. The fashion in books, as at present existing, has had a growth of years, and is not to be discarded in a moment, except by a concerted effort directed from some common and authoritative centre, which, however, at present does not exist. It is every man for himself, and the libation to his gods is of gold, poured out as water, without stint. J. H. SLATER.

Literary Gossip.

THE Marquis of Dufferin is going to furnish a memoir of his mother, Helen, Lady Dufferin (whose second husband was the Earl of Gifford), to the volume of her 'Poems and Verses' which he is editing and Mr. Murray is to publish. Two portraits will be given.

THE Duchess of Buckingham and Chandos is going to give to the world through Mr. Murray a selection from the letters she wrote home during her tour last year in Australia, New Zealand, and North America. Her title will be 'Glimpses of Four Continents.'

Mrs. BROOKFIELD will contribute her 'Early Recollections of Tennyson' to the February number of Temple Bar.

MR. J. K. FOWLER, the author of 'Echoes of Country Life,' is going to print through Messrs. Longman 'Further Recollections of Busy Life.' The same firm have in preparation an illustrated journal made by Mr. Burn Murdoch in a whaling barque belonging to the Dundee expedition of 1892-3, under the title of 'From Edinburgh to the Antarctic.' Mr. Burn Murdoch supplies the sketches, and the naturalists of the party the scientific notes.

OTHER books promised by Messrs. Longman are 'Tales of a Nomad,' by Mr. O. Montague, and 'On the Wallaby,' by Mr. Guy Boothby. "On the wallaby" is an Australian phrase applied to people tramping the bush in search of employment. Messrs. Longman also announce 'Legends of the Micmacs,' collected by the Rev. Dr. Rand when a missionary among the Micmac Indians of Nova Scotia.

MR. MURRAY intends to follow up 'A Plea for Liberty' with another series of essays, also edited by Mr. Mackay, and entitled 'A Policy of Free Exchange.' In this new volume Mr. Acworth writes on 'The State in Relation to Railways,' The Hon. J. W. Fortescue on 'State Socialism and the Collapse in Australia,' Mr. Wynward Hooper on 'The Influence of State Borrowing on Commercial Crises,' the Hon. A. Lyttelton on 'The Law of Trade Combinations,' and Mr. Mackay himself about 'The Interest of the Working Classes in Free Exchange.' Mr. Dunning Macleod and other writers contribute.

ARCHDEACON AGLEN is going to edit a selection from Dean Stanley's writings which Mr. Murray will publish.

THE annual dinner of the Royal Literary Fund will be held this year on April 25th. The chair will be taken by Lord Roberts.

THE February number of St. Nicholas will contain a short story by Mr. Rudyard Kipling, entitled 'Tiger, Tiger.'

PRIOR to his last illness, the late Mr. Henry Vizetelly had prepared the materials for a further series of his reminiscences. Mr. Vizetelly still had to tell the story of his career from the time of the Franco-German war to his retirement subsequent to the Zola prosecution. By his express desire this task will now be undertaken by his son, Mr. Ernest Vizetelly, who was his constant companion, not only in Paris during the siege and Commune, but also in Germany, Austria, Hungary, Spain, Portugal, &c. The new volume will contain a full account of Mr. Vizetelly's prosecution for publishing translations of M. Zola's novels, and in this connexion many curious circumstances will for the first time be made public.

MR. FREDERICK DOUGLASS, the negro orator, and late United States minister in San Domingo, has, it seems, written an introduction for a translation of the life of Toussaint L'Ouverture by the late M. Victor Schoelcher. The translation will be by Mr. Theodore Stanton, an American journalist in Paris.

THE forthcoming volume of Mr. Stevens's 'Facsimiles of Manuscripts in European Archives relating to America, 1773-1783,' covers but little more than two months of the year 1777, that critical period being productive of much correspondence at the Court of France. The letters from Count de Vergennes to the Marquis d'Ossun and the Marquis de Noailles, French ambassadors in Madrid and London respectively, lay bare the policy of his Court with an exactitude which no other historical papers afford. One document is a formal and elaborately worded reply from Spain to the memorial of the American Deputies for support and assistance, given in the preceding volume of Mr. Stevens's 'Facsimiles.' Lord Stormont's letters are continued. Amongst others from Beaumarchais is one narrating, over a very shaky signature, the accident which befell him when returning from Passy with M. Grand, the banker, after hearing the news, brought from Congress by Mr. Austin, of the surrender of Burgoyne. There may also be noticed the reproduction of the seal used by Dr. Franklin in Paris (1728), and of one belonging to Arthur Lee (1713); that of the third commissioner, Silas Deane, has been given in previous volumes.

THE modern battle of Hastings, which began in the Quarterly Review of July, 1892, and has since been waged in the Contemporary Review of last April and the Quarterly of last July, as well as in some correspondence in our columns, will be resumed by Mr. T. A. Archer and Miss Norgate in two articles in the forthcoming number of the English Historical Review. In the same issue Mr. G. F. Warner, of the British Museum, will print two hitherto unpublished letters of James Howell, the author of the 'Epistola Holiana,' which throw light on the proceedings of Prince Charles and Buckingham at Madrid in 1623.

Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench & Co. will publish some time in March the first number of a quarterly magazine of bibliography. It will consist of a series of papers by writers of authority on various points of book-lore. A novel departure, as far as this country is concerned, has been taken in fixing beforehand that the magazine is only to last for three years, ending, no matter what its success, with the appearance of the twelfth number in December, 1896. Subscribers will thus know from the first when their set will be complete. The following articles will appear in early numbers: 'English Illuminated MSS.,' by Mr. Maunde Thompson; 'The Stationers at the Sign of the Trinity,' by Mr. Gordon Duff; 'The Books of Queen Christina of Sweden,' by Mr. Charles Elton; 'The Illustrated Books of Augsburg and Ulm,' by Mr. William Morris; and 'On some Engravers of English Book-Plates,' by Mr. W. J. Hardy. Among the other contributors to the magazine will be Mr. Austin Dobson, Dr. Copinger, Dr. Garnett, Chancellor Christie, Mr. Graves, Mr. Jenkinson, Mr. A. Lang, Mr. Madan, Mr. Fuller Maitland, Mr. Fairfax Murray, Mr. Russell Martineau, Mr. Pollard, Mr. W. B. Squire, Mr. Tedder, M. Uzanne, Mr. Warner, Mr. H. Wheatley, and Mr. Weale.

MR. PROTHERO writes to us disclaiming the idea of attributing to the Bishop of St. Andrews the distich we quoted in our notice of his 'Life of Dean Stanley.' We are sorry we misapprehended Mr. Prothero, but we confess his way of putting matters seems to us to give the lines to the Bishop. Both before and immediately after he is speaking of Latin compositions of the Bishop's, and his exact words are: "Bishop Wordsworth repeated to Stanley a Latin inscription which he proposed to place on the walls of a summer-house. The first distich expresses the feeling of a heathen; the second gives the answer of a Christian. The Dean's English version might have been the spontaneous utterance of a thought that after 1876 was ever uppermost in his heart:—

Inveni portum: spes et fortuna, valet!

Sat me lustralis; ludite nunc alios.

Immo alii lovantur ego quem, Christo auspice, portum,

Spes ubi non fallax, Forsque perennis adest."

Then follows the Dean's English translation.

MR. GORDON DUFF's portfolio of facsimiles illustrating 'Early English Printing,' which has been unavoidably delayed, is now in an advanced stage of preparation, and will be issued to the subscribers early in the spring.—Mr. Horne's volume on 'Book-Bindings,' the publication of which has been hindered by the compiler's ill-health, is promised for February.

MR. THOMAS GREENWOOD asks us to say that he has removed to Frith Knowl, Elstree, Herts, and communications regarding library matters should be addressed there, and not to Stoke Newington.

MISS BESSIE HATTON is going to try to win public favour by publishing in two volumes a novel that has appeared in the Gentlewoman.

MR. A. C. MADAN, student of Christ Church, and a member of the Universities' Mission to Central Africa, has compiled an English-Swahili dictionary for the use of the mission. Mr. Madan has resided for eleven years in Zanzibar, and his book will bear the joint imprint of the Clarendon Press and of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.

A SERIES of lectures on the language and literature of Babylonia and Assyria are to be delivered by Mr. Pinches in the rooms of the Society of Biblical Archaeology. They will be held every Wednesday at half-past four o'clock, until the 21st of March inclusive.

AN interesting discovery has just been made in Germany. The original MS. of the diary of the travels of Duke Philip Julius of Pomerania in 1602, the English portion of which was recently edited for the Royal Historical Society by Dr. von Bülow of Stettin and Mr. Wilfrid Powell from a transcript, has been missing since the time of the Napoleonic wars. It has now been discovered at Berlin, having been sold out of the ducal library as waste paper, and resold by its fortunate purchaser about the year 1810 to the State Secret Archives, where it has remained unnoticed ever since. Dr. von Bülow will be able to incorporate some valuable foot-notes in the text of the diary which he is preparing for publication.

MR. EDMUND ROUTLEDGE has, upon the recommendation of the Lord Lieutenant, been placed on the Commission of the Peace for the County of London.

THE Parliamentary Papers most likely to interest our readers this week are the Thirteenth Report of the Historical MSS. Commission, Appendix, Part II., MSS. of the Duke of Portland (2c.); and Life Insurance in Germany (1d.).

SCIENCE

The Exploration of Mount Kina Balu, North Borneo. By John Whitehead. (Gurney & Jackson.)

THIS handsome quarto contains the narrative of a journey undertaken by Mr. Whitehead to investigate the zoology of Kina Balu, the highest mountain in Borneo. It had been previously ascended by the travellers Low, St. John, and Burbridge, who confined themselves mainly to an examination of its plants; "for the zoologist it was as yet a virgin field." Although Mr. Whitehead neglected no group in zoology, his pet objects were ornithological, and his observations refer, therefore, in large measure to birds.

As, on his way to Borneo, he had to break his journey at Singapore, our author made a short excursion into Malacca to try his hand at tropical collecting and climbing on Mount Ophir, famous as one of Mr. A. R. Wallace's hunting grounds. "The results were insignificant," he reports. . . . "but [the trip] was by no means time wasted, and served me in after years."

Continuing his journey from Singapore via Labuan, he arrived on April 10th, 1885, at Sandakan, the seat of government of the British North Borneo Company. Here Mr. Whitehead at once began preparations for his expedition, but just when he was quite ready—he was, indeed, on the pier head—to embark for Kina Balu, news came of serious disturbances among the natives, which rendered it impossible for him to venture into the interior:—

"This was a great blow to all my preparations, but I believe it was for the best, as, judging from my experience when I did reach that mountain two years later, I am sure that the preparations made by my guide would have been fatal to any chances of success; so I was advised to try the Padas River, and started in that direction the following morning."

On arriving in the interior he found the weather against him, it was impossible to obtain provisions, the natives were not too friendly, and the mosquitoes were undisguisedly hostile, so that after a short sojourn he was forced again to return to the coast. His readers will sympathize with the entry in his journal at this date: "I am now beginning to be quite doubtful of ever doing anything in this country, and at times almost make up my mind to return home." Luckily for ornithology this despondent mood did not last long, for a few weeks later he was on the Benkoker river, daily adding to his collections many interesting species of birds. Among them Mr. Whitehead specially mentions a ground thrush (Pitta baudi), "one of the most lovely eastern birds," which he cites as an unexpected instance of protective coloration:—

"Though adorned with the brightest of colours, this Pitta is difficult to see, frequenting gloomy parts of the forest, where with its back towards you, it will remain motionless and unnoticed; even the scarlet breast does not attract attention amongst the dead leaves and husks of forest fruits which cover the ground and equal it in brightness."

In the following January Mr. Whitehead made a second attempt to reach and ascend

"that superbly grand mountain Kina Balu. This wonderful mountain looks more imposing than many mountains of a much greater altitude, from the fact that it is an almost isolated mass, at the highest end mounting up to the height of 13,698 ft. (Belcher), and finishing off abruptly in sheer precipices of 10,000 ft.; its proximity to the sea-coast, being less than forty miles in a direct line, allows of it being viewed at once from the lowest level, none of its imposing grandeur being lost by a series of intervening plateaus which dwarf so many mountains. Kina Balu is nearly always visible until 9 A.M.; after that time clouds begin to creep over the hills at the less elevated north-eastern end, and gradually increase in volume, first skirting along the foot of the mountain, then gradually rising and spreading until the whole of this mighty giant is swathed in mist; the mountain remains hidden until nearly sunset, when deluges of rain clear the atmosphere in time for Kina Balu to receive a rosy kiss from the setting sun. During the night this mountain is free from vapour, and forms a splendid sight when the moon is full. Before sunrise I think there is no more beautiful sight than to see Kina Balu, then of a dark blue shade, standing out in the clear morning air with all its rugged precipices backed up by the yellow tints of the rising sun."

Mr. Whitehead succeeded in getting as far as the Tampassuk plains, where it was necessary to stop and collect buffaloes to transport his baggage as far up as possible:—

"After the level coast plains are left the slow travelling buffalo is no longer useful, and man himself becomes the beast of burden; and of all beasts, he is perhaps the most difficult to manage. The highway from the coast is generally up the river-courses, which are choked with boulders and have to be crossed and re-crossed as many as ten or fifteen times a day. The fords are often dangerous and at times impassable, owing to the deluges of rain which fall on the mountains. Progress is therefore slow indeed, and is at times brought to a complete standstill."

By the middle of February, 1886, when our author's convoy was nearly ready, he received an intimation from the North Borneo Company that as all the natives were on the war-path it would be dangerous and foolish to proceed further inland. The author was, therefore, once again under the necessity of abandoning his project, and returning to Labuan. After a few days' delay there he started for another locality, the Lawas river, which debouches opposite Labuan, and is one of the last strongholds of the Murut head-hunters, among whom he spent a profitable season. Seeing no chance, however, of accomplishing the purpose on which his heart was set, Mr. Whitehead decided to make a trip to the eastern highlands of Java. The 25th of January, 1887, saw him back again in Labuan, undaunted, and ready to make his third attack on Kina Balu. Attended with good fortune, he succeeded early in February in reaching Melangkap, a highland village of the Dusun tribe, situated on a grassy slope facing the mountain, which he made his headquarters. From this village Kina Balu "looked wonderfully near. . . . but at a glance one could see that the mountain on this side was inaccessible, the water falling thousands of feet without touching the rock; and I found out later it was a very tough job to reach it." The toughness of the job can be pretty well realized from the beautiful coloured sketch opposite p. 104, which gives a vivid idea of the rugged and imposing character of its precipices and serrated summit. From his subsidiary camps on the slopes of the mountain above this village Mr. Whitehead obtained many of the new insects, reptiles, and mammals, of which the long appendix to his book affords the scientific details, and the bulk of the wonderful collection of birds which won him the reputation of a keen ornithologist. In the beginning of April, his provisions and barter running short, he was forced once more to retrace the weary road to Labuan, from which he had been absent nearly three months. Of this time,

"eight weeks were spent in bird-collecting in the neighbourhood of Melangkap and amongst the mountain spurs. During this period we collected some 300 birds, eighteen of which were new to science, and many others added to the ornithology of Borneo for the first time. . . . During the month spent by us in the defiles of Kina Balu we were greatly hampered by the almost incessant rain, not having more than three really fine days and many entirely wet ones. . . . With good food one would be able to do more, but half starved, living on tinned provisions entirely, in this miserably damp climate, hemmed in on all sides by the steepest and roughest of mountains for our collecting grounds it took no little persuading and bribing, by the gathering of some of Nature's prizes, to keep my energy and spirits up to the mark."

Although the weather is rainy in the neighbourhood of Kina Balu during most of the year, it is naturally worse during the height of the wet season. This period Mr. Whitehead consequently spent on a collecting trip to Palawan, an island ninety miles north of Borneo. An interesting chapter is devoted to its natural history and to the customs of the tribes inhabiting it. At the close of the year he was once more on his way back to his favourite mountain, and by the 27th of January, 1888, he and his party of Kandyans were camped, after overcoming great difficulties, at an altitude of about 5,000 ft. This day he enters in his journal:—

"I have come to the conclusion that fifty new species of birds would hardly repay me for the miseries endured during the last few days. . . . but my determination if possible to reach the higher altitudes is not for a moment shaken, it is only this miserable camp that depresses me."

Next day he ascended to 8,000 ft., and "my spirits revived as I well knew that the birds of highland Borneo are still unknown." At last, on the 11th of the following month, "after travelling along this gradually rising slope for a distance which must have been close upon two miles, we reached the tooth-like. . . . St. John's Peak. . . . From this point, however, we could see that a huge pile of loose rocks to our right on the opposite side of the granite slope was decidedly higher; this we reached, and after climbing amongst the loose rocks sat on the top, where I opened my aneroid case—it read 13,525 feet. . . . The mountain in front of us is walled off by the 'huge cyclopean wall' (described by Mr. St. John), a perpendicular rock of, perhaps, 60 or 70 feet in height. . . . Mr. Spencer St. John is the only other European who has reached the base of this wall, which bars all further progress."

Mr. Whitehead spent three more months in adding to his collections in these higher altitudes, finally returning on the 30th of May to Labuan, whence he reached England in August, 1888. The fact that during this expedition, in addition to the large and important collections made in Malacca, Java, and Palawan, no fewer than twenty-five genera and sixty-nine species of birds, not to mention many new insects, reptiles, and mammals, were added to the fauna of Borneo, is sufficient to indicate how successful the author's exploration was.

Mr. Whitehead in his introduction tells us that he is essentially and by choice a "field naturalist." "I find it," he says, "far easier to explore an unknown tract of country than to write an account of my researches." It is no doubt possible to detect throughout the book signs of an unpractised pen. It is, however, a straightforward narrative, free from theories, but full of facts and observations—in great part transcribed from his journal—which can lose none of their value from lack of literary embellishment. It is a record, moreover, of dogged perseverance and of success in face of great difficulties and continuous discomforts. The size and price of this volume will to some extent limit its circulation; but it will be studied and appreciated by all interested in the natural history of the Eastern Archipelago. With the exception of one or two discrepancies between the spelling of names in the text and on the plates which have escaped detection, the book is carefully and beautifully printed, and profusely illustrated (exclusive of numerous woodcuts) by over thirty full-page plates, most of them hand-coloured, representing scenery, birds, natives, implements, &c., all of them, we believe, even to the design on the cover, drawn and put on stone by the author himself. The most of them are well executed, but Mr. Whitehead might, perhaps, have been better advised if he had entrusted his bird-plates to Mr. Keulemans, one of the very few artists who can transfer a really lifelike bird to the pages of a book. It is to be regretted that Mr. Whitehead has altered the form of some of the natural history appendices, which now seem somewhat confused.

SOCIETIES.

BRITISH ARCHEOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—Jan. 3.—Mr. C. H. Compton in the chair.—An interesting series of drawings was exhibited by Rear-Admiral Tremlett of the Celtic tumulus of Mont St. Michel, Carnac. The mound is wholly artificial, and it consists of a mass of stones piled around a chamber roofed with stone, the whole being covered with a layer of clay, thick enough to prevent entrance of water. It stands nearly east and west, and a small ancient church is built on its summit, where are also a cross and the ruins of a semaphore station.—Mr. Loftus Brock exhibited a series of lamps which have recently been found at Jerusalem and its environs by the operations of the London Society for Promoting Christianity amongst the Jews. They are variously ornamented, one having a curious pattern of palm branches. They are of pre-Christian date.—The Chairman exhibited a wall-tile of Delft ware, most probably made at Malines, obtained from an old house in the City of London recently demolished.—A paper was read on the Roman altar which has recently been found at Lancaster. It was prepared by the Rev. Dr. Hooppell, and read, in his absence, by Mr. W. de Gray Birch. Photographs of all sides of the altar were exhibited. The altar has recently been set up for preservation within the porch of Lancaster Church, not far from the place where it was found.—A second paper, by Mr. F. H. Williams, was then read, on an ancient crypt which has recently been opened out for observation, in Crypts Court, Chester, the new buildings having been arranged by its owner to admit of its preservation. It is of fourteenth century date, and groined with transverse and diagonal ribs.—The Deputy Mayor of Chester, Mr. G. Brown, reported the clearing out of a crypt of late Norman date on his property, close to the above, which he is having repaired.

MICROSCOPICAL.—Dec. 20.—Mr. A. D. Michael, President, in the chair.—Mr. E. M. Nelson exhibited and described a new pattern microscope specially designed for agriculturists. Mr. Nelson also exhibited a new form of metallic chimney for microscope lamps.—On behalf of Mr. J. W. Lovibond, Mr. Nelson exhibited some new coloured screens for use with the microscope.—Mr. J. W. Gifford read a paper 'On a New Monochromatic Light Screen,' illustrating the subject by means of the lantern.—Mr. T. F. Smith read a paper 'On the Resolution of Pleurosigma angulatum,' illustrated with photomicrographs shown by the lantern.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—Jan. 2.—Mr. Giles, President, in the chair.—It was announced that the Council had recently transferred six gentlemen to the class of Member, and had admitted twenty-five Students. The monthly ballot resulted in the election of five Honorary Members, three Members, and thirty-five Associate Members.—The subject of the 'Concentration and Sizing of Crushed Minerals' was dealt with in a paper by Mr. R. E. Commans.

SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL ARCHEOLOGY.—Jan. 2.—Anniversary Meeting.—Mr. P. le P. Renouf, President, in the chair.—The Secretary's report for the year 1883 was read.—The following are the officers and Council for the current year: President, Mr. P. le P. Renouf; Vice-Presidents, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Archbishop of York, Right Hon. Lord Amherst of Hackney, Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Right Hon. Lord Halsbury, Right Hon. Sir A. H. Layard, F. D. Mocatta, W. Morrison, Sir C. T. Newton, Sir C. Nicholson, Canon G. Rawlin-son, Sir H. C. Rawlinson, and Very Rev. R. P. Smith, Dean of Canterbury; Council, Rev. C. J. Hall, Rev. C. A. de Cam, A. Cates, T. Christy, W. Golenischeff, C. Harrison, G. Hill, Rev. A. Löwy, Rev. J. Marshall, C. G. Montefiore, A. Peckover, Prof. Dr. K. Piehl, J. Pollard, E. B. Tylor, and K. T. Whyte; Honorary Treasurer, B. T. Bouanquet; Secretary, W. H. Rylands; Hon. Secretary for Foreign Correspondence, Rev. R. Gwynne; Honorary Librarian, W. Simpson.

ARISTOTELIAN.—Jan. 8.—Mr. S. H. Hodgson, President, in the chair.—Mr. H. W. Carr read a paper 'On Mr. F. H. Bradley's "Appearance and Reality".' The starting-point of the theory of reality expounded by Mr. Bradley is the contention that in the criterion of reality which all judgment presupposes, we already possess substantive knowledge of reality. It was urged against this that a mere criterion, such as the real is self-subsistent, does not give any positive information, and so cannot serve as a basis for constructive theory. The paper then examined the argument that reality is the absolute as individual and a system, and that its content is sentient experience, and particularly criticized the distinction between experience and consciousness, and between feeling and thought. It was contended against Mr. Bradley's view that it does not succeed in avoiding the inconsistency of the thing-in-itself. Against the whole theory it was urged that the concept of the absolute is a pure abstraction, and that to describe it as the one reality, and at the same time to consider it as directly connected with each and every aspect of the world and as enriched with all its diversity, as the reality which appears, cannot enlighten us, but is mere assumption so long as we can only say it must be so, and cannot explain how it is so.—The paper was followed by a discussion.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- Mon. Bibliographical, 3.—Annual Meeting.
—London Institution, 5.—Pottery and Porcelain, Mr. C. P. Rans.
—Institute of British Architects, 8.—Presentation of Prizes.
—Royal Academy, 8.—Painting, Mr. J. R. Hodgson.
—Victoria Institute, 8.—Eastern Discoveries: confirmation of Berghius, Prof. Hall.
—Geographical, 8.—Expedition to the Glacier of Mount Kemm, Dr. J. W. Gregory.
- Tues. Horticultural, 1.—Fruit and Floral Meeting.
—Royal Institution, 3.—Lectures on the Fixation in Plants and Animals, Prof. C. Stewart.
—Botanical, 7.—Notes of Census-taking in the British Islands, Mr. H. H. Johnston.
—Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'The Concentration and Sinking of Crude Oil', Mr. R. T. Tinsley.
—Zoological, 8.—Points in the Structure of the Young of Scaphiopus, Prof. W. H. Parker. 'Collection of Reptiles made in Malacca, Tropical South-east Africa, by Mr. P. C. Folsom in the Year 1888', Mr. R. Tinsley. 'Remarks on Cnemidophorus', Dr. A. H. Meyer.
- Wed. Entomological, 7.—Annual Meeting.
—Society of Arts, 8.—White Lead substitutes, Mr. A. Lentin.
—Folk-lore, 8.—Annual Meeting.
—British Archaeological Association, 8.—Lords and Grounds, 'Parishes Kent, Rev. J. Cave-Inverness, 'Visita to Seguntum (Charnwood)', Mr. H. Johnston.
—Microscopical, 8.—Annual Meeting.
—Meteorological, 8.—Annual Meeting, President's Address 'On the Climate of Southern England'.
- Thurs. Royal Institution, 8.—Self, Canon Alinger.
—London Institution, 8.—Some Curiosities of Natural History, Prof. C. Stewart.
—Royal Academy, 8.—Painting, Mr. J. R. Hodgson.
—Geographical, 8.—The Relations of Geography to History, Mr. H. J. Mackinder (Introductory Lecture).
—Chemical, 8.—The Molecular Form of some Liquids as determined by their Molecular Surface Energy, Prof. Ramsay and Miss R. Aston. 'Contributions to our Knowledge of the Acute Alkaloids', 'On Microcristalline', Prof. Dunsan and Mr. R. F. Harrison. 'The Action of Heat on Acetone', and 'Further Observations on the Conversion of Acetone into Isopropanol', Prof. Dunsan and Mr. F. H. Carr. 'The Interaction of Benzene and Ethyl Chloride', Mrs. Mason and Mr. W. H. Raper.
- Fri. Linnean, 8.—Origin of the Structural Peculiarities of Climbing Stems by Self-Adaptation in Response to External Mechanical Forces, Rev. G. Henslow.
—Antiquaries, 8.—Some General Forms of Roman Lamps lately found in Chichester, Mr. H. Lauer. 'Roman and other Remains found near Lymington', Mr. G. Lovell-Gower.
—Society of Arts, 8.—The Picturesque Fields of India, Mr. R. D. Oldham.
—Historical, 8.—Antonio Perez in Rome, Major M. A. S. Home.
—Architectural Association, 7.—Wood Carving, Practically Illustrated, Mr. J. Day.
—Civil Engineers, 7.—Discharging and Storing Grain, Mr. W. G. Waite.
—Royal Institution, 8.—Scientific Uses of Liquid Air, Prof. Secar.
—Royal Institution, 8.—English Schools of Musical Composition, Prof. W. H. Cummings.

Science Gossip.

A MOVEMENT is on foot at Manchester having for its object a memorial to the late Prof. A. Milnes Marshall, and a meeting is to be held to discuss the matter and form a committee to carry it out.

PROF. HEINRICH HERTZ, of Bonn, who greatly distinguished himself by his researches in the field of physical science, died on the 1st inst. at the early age of thirty-seven.

THE medals and funds to be given at the anniversary meeting of the Geological Society of London, to be held on February 16th, have been awarded as follows: The Wollaston Medal to Prof. Karl A. von Zittel; the Murchison Medal to Mr. W. T. Aveline; the Lyell Medal to Prof. John Milne, F.R.S.; the balance of the proceeds of the Wollaston Fund to Mr. A. Strahan; that of the Murchison Fund to Mr. G. Barrow; that of the Lyell Fund to Mr. William Hill; and a portion of the Barlow-Jameson Fund to Mr. Charles Davison.

THE death is announced of Mr. John Plant, for upwards of forty years librarian and curator of Peel Park Museum, Salford, which post he resigned in 1892. He died in Anglesey last week at the age of seventy-four.

THE decease is reported of Prof. van Beneden, the distinguished zoologist. He was born at Malines, became Keeper of the Museum at Louvain, and after holding for a short time a chair at Ghent he became a professor at Louvain. Among his writings were 'Zoologie Médicale,' 'Iconographie des Helminthes,' 'Osteographie des Cétacés Vivants et Fossiles' (written in conjunction with M. Gervais), 'La Vie Animale et ses Mystères,' and 'Les Chauvessours de l'Époque du Mammouth et de l'Époque Actuelle.'

THE jubilee meeting of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Berlin will take place on the 25th inst., on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of the first sitting after its revival by Frederick the Great. The German Emperor is expected to be present.

THE Clarendon Press will publish very shortly a new volume of Mr. C. P. Lucas's 'Historical Geography of the British Colonies,' dealing with West Africa. The compiler has received much assistance from Mr. R. L. Antrobus, of the Colonial Office, and from other authorities on African subjects.

A NEW (eighth) edition of Mr. Lynn's 'Celestial Motions, a Handy Book of Astronomy,' is in the press (Stanford); also a second edition of 'Remarkable Comets,' by the same author.

FINE ARTS

THE NEW GALLERY.

IN a general way, but with no great exactness, the pictures in the New Gallery are hung in chronological order, beginning not, as heretofore, on the east side of the West Gallery, but on the north side of the South Room, a method of arrangement which leads to the placing of the primitives in one room, which they fail to fill; most of the Botticellis, Ghirlandaios, Lippis, and the Signorellis in the West Gallery; and the later examples in the North Gallery, where they form a highly interesting group, but by no means so free from spurious intruders as those in the West Gallery, the majority of which are undoubtedly genuine. The primitives are decidedly a mixed body.

Falling in with this arrangement, we may begin our notes with No. 1, the Virgin and Child, ascribed to Giovanni da Pisa, which aptly enough illustrates the transition from the quasi-Byzantine, or rather Romanesque, phase of art in Northern Italy to what is commonly known as the early Italian, which forms the staple of this exhibition and differs greatly from the real Byzantine art. There is a good deal of beauty in the pale Virgin's face and figure, and her attitude is decidedly graceful, whilst the lines of her draperies—of which even the timid and laborious hand of the painter, and his timid and narrow conception of the subject, could not destroy the elegance—are evidently due to classic traditions. These qualities were valued by the Pisan painter for their own sake. The figures are placed upon a flat gold ground. The bench on which the Madonna is seated is inlaid with mosaics distinctly Eastern in type, and the pattern of the diapered cushion is obviously of a similar origin. A touch of Gothic taste is manifest in the beautifully designed crown of gold and in the radiating nimbus. The Virgin's traditional blue mantle has a broad border in punctured gold, and the gown or kirtle is of course red, but, as was the custom in Pisan art, the colours are lighter than in later Florentine days. The Child is wrapped in a robe of cloth of gold, and he holds, not the usual dove or cardellino, but the much rarer cormorant in one hand, a heavy ear of millet in the other hand. The faces evince exceptional animation and character.

A comparison between No. 1 and the Triptych (2) which comes next illustrates with exceptional clearness the radical differences between the artistic motives of Pisa and Florence. The 'Triptych' belonged to Street, and he believed it to be by Giotto, an idea to which we make no objection, while we accept the name all the more readily because—while it contains a whole pictorial history of Christ, from the Annunciation to the Gift of Tongues—it is more robust and less mystical and dreamy inspiration, its statelier forms, deeper emotions, more lively attitudes and expressions, indicate the influence of a thoroughly dramatic and human way of looking at the subjects. The contemplative Pisan looked within for his types and motives, and even the colours in which they are represented are abstract and unreal. The Florentine—Giotto or another, it matters little—preferred to look around him, and adopted more mundane motives for the series of little pictures before us. It was, however, deference to tradition which led the painter to depict at the foot of the central panel, and in the conventional robes and colours, the tall and stately Virgin and her Babe, on a much larger scale than the figures which fill the minor compartments of the triptych. Although this is the case with the leading group, nothing could be more worthy of Giotto than the free dramatization of the incidents of the smaller designs, than the general style of the work, the noble quasi-classic disposition of the stately draperies—which, let it be remembered, were the dresses of the time of the artist—and the insight evinced in the expression of the numerous faces, not one of which is other than appropriate.

An excellent specimen of that turn of fancy rather than thought, combined with much grace and humanity rather than strength, which we associate with the name of Cosimo Roselli, occurs in St. Catherine of Siena delivering the Rule to the Sisters of the Second Order of St. Dominic (3), a large panel in tempora (not fresco, as the Catalogue has it), of which the motives are entirely Florentine, and so are the faces and expressions of the kneeling nuns clad in black and white, whose attire rules the coloration of the picture. Very moving indeed is the rapture of the kneeling donor on our right, who wears a lay dress of light blue and a red petticoat, the Virgin's colours. The individuality of each face is carefully sought for and insisted on, a fact that marks a distinct step towards that naturalistic and dramatic treatment of devotional themes which was destined to develop into a kind of genre, even when religious themes were in question, and ultimately to eliminate the devotional element altogether.—Filippo di Dalmazio's Assumption of the Virgin (4) is a very grand reading of the subject, noble if archaic in its treatment, and free from the mere conventions of an earlier day.

Beautiful colour signalizes Angiolo Gaddi's Virgin and Child (5). The whole is an example of a very high order, painted in a beautiful manner and distinguished by the expression of the chief figure.—A Virgin and Child (6) may or may not be by Cimabue. The latter is more probable. Still, the name will serve to show the type which it illustrates not unhappily, although, as it seems to us, in a more developed style than Cimabue's.—The St. Anthony (12), which Mr. Willett has lent, a spirited and mundane piece of work, reminds us of the picture Browning mentioned as of "that prim saint by 'Haute-thee-Luke!'"—Matteo da Siena's beautiful and spiritual Virgin and Child with the Baptist and St. Michael (13) shows the soft style of Siena, influenced indeed by the more vigorous art of Florence, yet having lost nothing of its love for beauty and purity. The charm of the faces is great.—The Triumph of Chastity (15), painted for the front of a canzone by a Florentine in the middle of the fourteenth century, came from the Barker Collection, and is justly prized as a conspicuous example of the pretty paganisms which often cropped up in allegories of the decorative sort, constituting a chapter of art history which has never been adequately studied, although they are full of spirit, supply a quantity of archaeological details, and possess many picturesque qualities of a precious kind.—We hesitate to say that the fine Coronation of the Virgin (16) is by Giotto; it looks rather like the work of a Pisan painter, but it is hard to find a suitable name for it. It is noteworthy for suavity and grace, for pure forms, and colours which originally must have been extremely harmonious and vivid; even now they have a good deal of the splendour of an illumination. The brilliance of the piece, its refined conventions, still intensity, and love for beauty devoid of severity, but, above all things, pure, are most noble.—The intensity is of another sort in Buoninsegna's Crucifixion (21), a cabinet devotional piece, rich in fine colour.—Probably Fra Angelico painted Mr. W. Fuller Maitland's well-known Assumption of the Virgin (23), a very fine thing indeed, though somewhat too conventional for him; nevertheless, its peculiar types and sentiment, rather than anything else, justify the attribution of it.—Giottoesque, if not by Giotto, is Mr. Willett's Presentation in the Temple (24), which, like all the master's genuine work known to us, and the majority of the many pictures that are assigned to him, is remarkable for the choice brilliance of its colours, the vivid harmonies of its coloration, and the pure brightness of its lighting. The figures are more dramatic, not to say more emphatically humanized, than usual with Giotto, while the beautiful Gothic altar and its graceful canopy of carved marbles, which distinguish the centre of the Temple, are certainly in his style. The tall and stately figures belong to that noble pictorial race who look so grand and fine in the 'Triptych' (2) named above.

Mr. Benson's diptych The Crucifixion and The Pieta (30) thoroughly deserves study; they belong to the interesting series of which two more panels are in the Bargello.—No. 31, Lord Wantage's fine Lorenzo di Credi, Coronation of the Virgin, a luminous, vividly coloured work, is admirable for its solid modelling, sound and skilful drawing, and tones more powerful than usual at the time. The visitor should not overlook the landscape background, which is quite as well developed as in the majority of Peruginos of that painter's middle period, and quite worthy of him. Lord Rosebery's St. George (35), ascribed to Lorenzo di Credi, is distinguished by the somewhat affected sentiment and attitude of the figure. The design is not without a pretty sort of paganism. It is devoid of the devout enthusiasm which appears in most of the pictures about us. It is smooth, rather laboured, and somewhat insane.—St. Peter restoring Tabitha (33), by Sano di Pietro, the property of Mr. W. F. Maitland, is a capital illustration of the growth of the taste for treating such subjects as genre rather than in a spirit of devotion; like a good many of the smaller pictures before us, it seems to be part of the prodella of a more ambitious altarpiece.—A good representative of the Florentine school of the later portion of the middle of the fourteenth century is to be found in Mr. C. Butler's Miracle of St. Nicholas (37), another predella of sound technique, and full of character.—No. 38, Virgin and Child, is Mr. Wayne's often admired Botticelli, one of the most beautiful and tender of the painter's works. It differs from the productions of any of his forerunners in being more akin to humanity, in the modern sense of the term. Religious art had, till this period, been absolutely reverential, content to deal with abstractions and with types of ideals. Not so Sandro, whose Virgins are not only devout and tender, but always women; not always beautiful, it must be admitted, but invariably creatures of flesh and blood. The significance of the matter was prodigious. Fra Filippo Lippi, born thirty-five years before Botticelli, had initiated the change; the Paduan, Schiavone (1450-70), and, with less courage, Cosimo Roselli, a Florentine (1441-1521), had advanced further in the same direction; but Sandro outstripped them all, and, as such pictures as No. 38 indicate, worked in what it would not be unfair to call a modern and very revolutionary spirit. No doubt the naturalistic manner of painters like Pollajuolo (1433-98), when treating realistically such mundane incidents as martyrdoms and the preaching of saints, had favoured the change in regard to devotional themes, which had till then always been kept apart; but this left much to be done by Botticelli, and next to him by Ghirlandajo, who was his junior by two years. Before long we find Mansueti and Signorelli treating religious subjects as if they were Italians of the sixteenth century. Nevertheless, great as the influence of these masters must have been in effecting what has been called the democratizing of religious art, which inevitably led to its vulgarization and ultimate downfall, the elder school of art died hard.

Not far from Mr. Wayne's fine Botticelli we find a capital Death of the Virgin (48) by Taddeo Gaddi, a quaint and earnest master, who adhered to the old paths, although he improved considerably on the technique of his predecessors. It belongs to Mr. I. Falke, and is most curious on account of its treating the subject in the Gothic manner, with singular sweetness and beauty of style, and passionate emotion free from anything like the grotesque exaggerations which prevailed at a somewhat later period. The Virgin lies on a couch, and her death is witnessed by a Pope wearing the tiara, several saints carrying their emblems, and other personages grouped with skill and designed with sympathy. The little picture shows an amount of feeling not always discoverable in works ascribed to Taddeo Gaddi, and the fervour of the whole marks a great difference between the art of Florence, even at the time it must have been painted—if it, indeed, be by Gaddi—and the tranquil devotion of the almost melancholy masters of Siena and Pisa, his contemporaries and immediate successors. Like the Giotto lent by Mr. A. E. Street, the picture illustrates, but in an extremely different way, two methods of treatment—that to which we have referred, and the devotional method which predominates in the upper section of the picture, where Christ, seated in majesty, holds the soul of His mother in His left arm.

Five Art Society.

At a general assembly of Academicians and Associates held on Tuesday, Mr. John S. Sargent and Mr. Frank Bramley, painters, and Mr. G. G. Frampton, sculptor, were elected Associates.

The Grafton Galleries will reopen on Saturday next with an exhibition of pictures by the late Mr. Albert Moore, and of works of modern British and foreign artists.

The Spring Exhibition at the Walker Art Gallery will be held during the months of February and March. The London agents are Messrs. Dicksee & Co., of Ryder Street.

A COLLECTION of antiquities, chiefly of the Greek and Roman periods, has been lent for exhibition in the Guildhall Library by Mr. W. Romb.

SIR J. D. LINTON writes:—

"I have just seen your notice of my picture by Sir Joshua Reynolds, entitled 'Venus disarming Cupid,' which is now in the old masters' exhibition at Burlington House. I wish to inform you that your art critic is mistaken in its identity. It is the original picture by Sir Joshua which was in the collection of the late Sir Thomas Baring, and which afterwards passed into the possession of Lord Northbrook, from whom it was lately purchased. I may add that on the back of the original frame is the book-plate bearing the crest and monogram of Sir Thomas Baring."

MR. CLARK STANTON, R.S.A. and Curator of the Life School of the Scottish Academy, died on Monday. Born at Birmingham in 1832, and originally employed as a modeller by the Elkingtons, he settled as a sculptor in Edinburgh when he was twenty-three years or so of age, and there he remained till his death. Not meeting with much patronage, he latterly gave a good deal of time to painting in oil and water colours.

THE private view of Miss R. J. Leigh's exhibition of oil paintings (landscapes) will be held on Wednesday, the 17th inst., at No. 9, Conduit Street. The exhibition will be opened to the public on Thursday, the 18th inst., and closed on the 27th inst.

THE architectural world has been exercised of late by the proposals of Mr. W. Woodward for the remodelling of Trafalgar Square. Besides opening the Mall to Charing Cross, and thus destroying one of the very few oases of peace in this noisy metropolis—a change almost fatal to the pleasantness of St. James's Park—he would substitute a sort of bastard podium (with a sloping front!) for the well-designed steps of St. Martin's Church, shift the statues of Gordon, Napier, and Havelock, and bring the Shaftesbury fountain to the centre of the enclosure, where the statue of Gordon now stands. Further—besides minor operations with regard to the granite posts and balustrade—Mr. Woodward proposes to get rid of the stupid what-nots in granite which have long disgraced British taste at the "finest site in Europe," and thus make room for Mr. Gilbert's fountain. Some such operation is certainly to be hoped for; but we think the first thing to be done should be, as more than twenty years ago we proposed, to take Nelson from the summit of the absurd pillar on which he has so long stood, quite out of sight, in defiance of common sense. It would be as well to remove the shaft, capital, and base-mouldings proper of the column, and erect the statue, or, better still, a new and superior work, upon the base of the monument as it now exists, adding, of course, appropriate mouldings. The whole square, including the National Gallery, with the façade of which Mr. Woodward desires to meddle considerably, would thus be brought into scale, and its size made manifest. The Shaftesbury fountain might then take the place of the Gordon statue, for which a site, almost as good as the present one, could be had close by. As to the front of the National Gallery, no scheme for its improvement yet known to us approaches in simplicity, beauty, and small cost, the design submitted by Mr. Aitchison at a recent exhibition of the Royal Academy, and commented upon by us at the time.

MUSIC

NEW SONG PUBLICATIONS.

English County Songs. Collected and edited by Lucy E. Broadwood and J. A. Fuller Maitland. (Leadenhall Press.)—This volume of about 170 ditties embodies an attempt to do for England what has been accomplished for Wales, Scotland, and Ireland, namely, to gather together and preserve a portion of the folk-music of our rural districts, which, as the editors somewhat satirically observe, is in danger of disappearing in face of the all-absorbing tonic sol-fa system, "with all that it involves in the way of fatuous part-songs and non-alcoholic revelries." The work does not clash with Chappell's 'Popular Music of the Olden Time,' since many of the ditties belong to the last and the present century. The endeavour to localize their origin is, of course, only partially successful, since different versions of the same song are preserved in various districts. The accompaniments are appropriately simple, though in some instances too modern in phraseology. As the latest effort in a department of musical literature rapidly developing, 'English County Songs' should be welcomed.

Among other albums on our table are Irish Songs and Ballads, consisting of thirty traditional airs arranged by Villiers Stanford, with new words by Alfred P. Graves; Twenty-four Songs, by Tchaikowsky, selected and translated into English by Lady Macfarren; Muarr's Songs, a book containing nineteen lyrics, with an English version of the words by the Rev. J. Troutbeck; and Seven Songs, words selected from Tennyson, music by Sydney Thomson, very expressive and thoughtfully written, though only suitable for accomplished vocalists (Novello, Ewer & Co.); Seven Songs to Sing, edited by Harold Boulton (Leadenhall Press), a well-got-up quarto volume containing lyrics of average merit by A. J. Caldicott, Cotsford Dick, L. Denza, Malcolm Lawson, T. Marzials, J. L. Roedel, and Lord Henry Somerset; Fifteen English Songs, written by Gwendolen Gore, composed by Jacques Blumenthal (Joseph Williams); Album of Songs, by Gwen Lewis, containing six simple but tastefully written ballads (same publisher); the Loewe Album, Vol. III., containing twenty Lieder, edited, with English and German words and a preface, by Albert B. Bach (Weeske & Co.); London Songs, written by J. Strang and F. R. Coulson, music by T. Mee Pattison (Curwen & Sons), apparently intended for juvenile singers; and Nos. 20 and 21 of Metzler & Co.'s Red Album, containing respectively six contralto and six baritone songs by well-known composers.

Musical Society.

THE Popular Concerts were resumed last Saturday, when Beethoven's Septet formed the principal feature in the programme, the executants being Lady Halle and Messrs. Gibson, Egerton, Paernch, Wotton, Reynolds, and Piatti. Sir Charles Halle played Beethoven's Sonata in E flat, Op. 31, No. 3, in his best manner, and joined Lady Halle in Rubinstein's rarely heard Sonata in A minor for pianoforte and violin, Op. 19. Mr. Eugene Oudin rendered songs by Massenet, Chaminade, and F. Clay with perfect taste.

SCHUBERT'S Octet received a particularly fine rendering on Monday with the executants named above, together with Mr. L. Ries. Beethoven's Sonata in A for pianoforte and violoncello, Op. 69, was superbly played by Mr. Leonard Borwick and Signor Piatti; and pianoforte solos by Chopin and Liszt completed the instrumental programme. Tchaikowsky is not so well known as a song-writer in this country as he deserves to be. The four examples brought forward by Mr. Oudin on this occasion are all charming lyrics, this adjective applying especially to 'Gesognet auf mir Wald' and a 'Russian Serenade.' The German and French words in the book were full of singular misprints. Thus we had "Keit" for Kein, "Freude" for Freude, "antwort" for Antwort, "en" for ein, "par ais" for parais, "Neus" for vons, and several others equally unsparadable.

THE first appearance in London of the eminent Karlsruhe and Bayreuth conductor Herr Felix Mottl will prove one of the most interesting events of the forthcoming season. Under the direction of Mr. Schulz Curtius he will conduct a programme of Wagner's music at the Queen's Hall on Tuesday evening, April 17th. The scheme will only include familiar selections, namely, the overtures to 'Rienzi,' 'Der Fliegende Holländer,' and 'Tannhäuser'; the preludes to 'Lohengrin,' 'Die Meistersinger,' and 'Parsifal'; the prelude and Death Song from 'Tristan und Isolde'; the "Feuertänzer" from 'Die Walküre'; and the "Trauermarsch" from 'Götterdämmerung'; but to many it will be interesting from the opportunity afforded of comparing Herr Mottl's reading of the various items with that of Herr Richter.

STATEMENTS having been made to the effect that M. César Thomson would make his first appearance in London at the Symphony Concert on Thursday this week, it may be as well to remind our readers that the Belgian artist played at the Crystal Palace on November 5th, 1887, when he was heard in Beethoven's Violin Concerto. On that occasion we wrote concerning him: "He gave Beethoven's Concerto with considerable effect. He is an able executant, though his tone is rather poor, a defect which may be due to his instrument."

THE Ninth Annual Conference of the Incorporated Society of Musicians, held at Scarborough last week, seems to have been eminently successful in every respect. At first regarded askance by many eminent musicians, the Society steadily grew in numbers and influence, and since its incorporation the development has been rapid. It has been decided to hold next year's conference at Dublin.

BROOK'S curious Notturmo in C for fifteen wind instruments, bass drum, cymbals, and triangle, Op. 34, was announced to be performed, probably for the first time in England, at Sir Charles Halle's Manchester concert on Thursday evening this week.

HERR SIEGFRIED WAGNER has won favourable opinions as a conductor at Berlin, in spite of the fact that he wields the baton with his left hand. It is understood that he will be permitted to direct the orchestra on one or more occasions at the next series of representations at Bayreuth, and it is then that a decision will be made as to his future career.

THE success of Wagner's 'Die Walküre' at La Scala, Milan, has been imperilled by a mise en scène which on all hands is pronounced ineffective and ridiculous. With the exception of Miss Macintyre, the principals are also spoken of in disparaging terms, but the Scottish soprano seems to have won a triumph in the part of Sieglinde. Her voice, style, and appearance are all praised in flattering terms, which is surprising, as Italian critics are not noted for independence of judgment, and are notoriously severe on singers belonging to other nationalities.

THE Bayreuther Taschenbuch für 1894, published by P. Thelen, of Berlin, contains an interesting bibliography of the literature concerning Wagner. It has been compiled by Dr. Heinrich Welti.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Mon. Popular Concert, 4, St. James's Hall.
Tues. Mrs. Swan's Recital, 2, Steinway Hall.
Wed. Concert in Aid of the Home for Consumptive Women, 2, Queen's Hall.
Thurs. Mr. Aguirre's Musical Afternoon, 3, Beethoven Rooms.
Fri. Royal Choral Society, 'The Golden Legend,' 4, Albert Hall.
Sat. Mr. Theodore Proust's Concert, 8.30, Steinway Hall.
Sun. Popular Concert, 2, St. James's Hall.
Mon. Performance of 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci,' 2, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

GARRICK.—'An Old Jew,' a Comedy in Five Acts. By Sydney Grundy.
DAILY.—'Twelfth Night; or, What You Will,' Played in Four Acts.

THE apotheosis of the Jew begun by Mr. Irving in his presentation of Shylock has been accomplished by Mr. Grundy in his new play. Shylock's vindication of his race is tame beside that now effected. "Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions . . . as a Christian has?" demands Shylock. With Mr. Grundy the boot is on the other leg, and we feel concerned to ask a similar question on behalf of the Christian. A Galahad among men is Julius Sterne, otherwise Paul Venables; his son takes after him, and is brave, loyal, virtuous, and chivalric; his daughter is fair, pure, and richly endowed. That a separation between a father and his children has become necessary is due to the Christian mother, who, having married a paragon of all the virtues, has wronged him for a "far worse," as of necessity is. In his revenge Julius Sterne has, as Shylock promised, bettered Christian instruction. He has spared the woman and left her the custody of her children, who, at her bidding, are taught to consider their mother innocent and their father a base fugitive. At the end of a score years Julius, weary of wandering, comes back to see if he can regain the affection he has discarded. Between himself and the attainment of his desire stands the gulf he has himself dug. After acting for some short time as a benign providence, a good genius, or a princely Santa Claus, and lavishing upon his children no small share of the enormous wealth he has accumulated, he is allowed to clasp his daughter to his heart, and wins a somewhat churlish acceptance from his son. After this he has but to pardon a wife who during twenty years has expiated in blameless solitude a moment's lapse from virtue.

The play is an answer in the affirmative to the often propounded theory whether for the wife who has wronged her husband pardon is conceivable. From this point of view the story has interest. That, however, is swallowed up and lost in the contemplation of the struggle between Jewish virtue and Christian vice. In his attempt to establish the fortunes of his son, a would-be dramatist, Julius is introduced to a good many Christians, to whom his reputation for enormous wealth facilitates his access. These are, indeed, as Mr. Jones's Tempter says, "a rickety crew." A Bohemian club, to which Julius and his son are taken, is their usual haunt. A more abject, crapulous lot never surely assembled. Those who are not knaves are idiots, and some appear to be both. Here is a depraved drunkard and adulterer, once the pride of his college; here an apparently respectable gentleman, a thief and fraudulent trustee; and here a disreputable parson sniggering over the obscenities in French novels. The other inmates of the club consist of log-rolling journalists who, influenced by the basest of motives, scarily plays that they have not seen. That Mr. Grundy intended no such contrast between Christian and Jew is to be believed. It is obtained, however, and it detracts from the value of a well-conceived and an original work. Mr. Grundy's hand is too heavy. In 'Society' Robertson showed how Bohemia should be painted. His sketch was effective, Mr. Grundy's is overcharged.

'An Old Jew' has good situations. The meetings between father and son, and father and daughter, are touching; the reconciliation with the wife is wisely made as short as it can be; epigrammatic dialogue is employed, and the play is alternately tender and amusing. It received an admirably competent interpretation. Looking too aged for the years assigned him, which are but sixty, Mr. Hare presented the Old Jew with admirably artistic subtlety and success. Miss Kate Rorke's tender womanliness was again of highest use. Mrs. Theodore Wright played with quiet sincerity in a difficult part. Mr. Gilbert Hare was becomingly impetuous as a youth. By careful acting Mr. Gilbert Farquhar saved a disagreeable character from becoming revolting. Mr. Anson all but did the same, but in the end was betrayed into exaggeration. Messrs. Day, De Lange, Harwood, and Abingdon were seen to advantage.

The production of 'Twelfth Night' is the most interesting feature in Mr. Daly's programme since his memorable revival of 'Taming of the Shrew.' As in most recent Shakespearean representations, too much stress is laid upon the setting, and accessories are elevated into undeserved and, in a sense, inartistic prominence. Yet only when similar conditions prevail are we likely to see Shakespearean comedy at all, and to complain of means when the result is delightful would be churlish. For delightful the representation is. The perfume of the love scenes is preserved, and the whole is shown to be comedy, and not farce. To no character is allotted undue prominence; the whole is even, artistic, fragrant. In the scenes in Orsino's palace the grouping is, perhaps, a little too formal, and the sustained chorus to Feste's songs, though agreeable, is unimaginative. The result, however, as has been said, is pleasing, and lovers of Shakespeare should not fail to visit the performance. They must be prepared to see Shakespeare's disposition of the scenes "knocked about," and to find some occasional extravagances. Mirthful as it is, the laugh with which Maria more than once quits the stage is conventional and out of place. Still the right atmosphere is preserved, and the performances generally are excellent. Miss Ada Rehan's Viola is bewitching. Miss Rehan looks surprisingly well in her page's costume, and delivers her lines with admirable music and with that sense of humour which is necessary to bring out their full significance. Nothing in which this actress has been seen conveys a higher estimate of her powers and endowments. Miss Violet Vanbrugh gives the right rendering of Olivia; and Miss Catherine Lewis, with the reservation before mentioned, leads off the revels with admirable spirit. Mr. James Lewis is the best Sir Toby Belch we can recall; Mr. Clarke's Malvolio is full of spirit; and Sir Andrew Aguecheek, Orsino, Feste, and the characters generally are modestly and well sustained. Mr. Daubigny's singing is excellent, and the general musical effects are delightful. Those who fail to see the representation will have cause for regret.

Pastor Sang: being the Norwegian Drama 'Over Ævne.' By Bjørnstjerne Bjørnson. Translated by William Wilson. (Longmans & Co.)—'Over Ævne' has been pronounced by the more enthusiastic of Bjørnson's Scandinavian admirers to be a "genial psychological divination" instinct with the "purest and most majestic poetry," the like of which is not to be found in modern dramatic literature. In this piece, we are told, the author has excelled himself, and reached, at length, the topmost summit of the Pisgah of his literary ambition. If this be so, we can only say that the sooner he condescends to come down again to the lower levels of common sense, the better it will be for the health and wealth of Norwegian literature. In plain English, 'Over Ævne,' despite its dramatic form, is neither more nor less than a peg for the author to hang his latest crotchets on. It is partly an attempt to explain so-called miracles by the hypothesis of hypnotic suggestion, and partly a clumsy and spiteful satire on his old bugbear the Norwegian parson. The attempt of a simple-minded country clergyman to heal his bedridden wife by the power of prayer is the central motive of the play, which owes what little interest it has to the effect of this long suspended and ineffective miracle on the spectators. There are two really striking scenes, and ever and anon we come across glimmerings of that peculiar power which used to hold us spellbound in 'Synnöve Solbakken' and 'Arne'; but compared even with his earlier dramas (e.g., 'Halte Hulda') it must be pronounced very poor stuff indeed. The whole atmosphere of this curious production is morbid and unwholesome, and the real dramatic personae (the parsons introduced in Act II. being, transparently, only so many puppets set up for the author's wit to practise upon) are more or less of religious monomaniacs. The translator has done his best to make a feeble play still feebler by a slavish literalness which even reproduces the original punctuation, but too often ignores differences of idiom, and sometimes meanders into sheer gibberish. Altogether we may say that the title of this silly and unpleasant book is not inappropriate, for whether we apply it to the work of the author or the work of the translator it is obviously over ævne—beyond his powers.

Dramatic Society.

THURSDAY next is fixed for the production at the Haymarket of 'The Charlatan,' by Mr. Robert Buchanan. Mr. and Mrs. Tree, Messrs. F. Terry, F. Kerr, Nutcombe Gould, and C. Allan, Misses Lily Hanbury, Gertrude Kingston, and Irene Vanbrugh, and Mrs. Brooke will be included in the cast.

THE Court, it is now determined, shall be the scene of the production by Miss Olga Nethercole of Mr. A. W. Gattie's new play, temporarily, and perhaps definitely, christened 'The Transgressor.' The date of production will, it is hoped, be the 27th inst.

'THE TALESMAN,' an adaptation, by Mr. Louis N. Parker, from the German of Herr Fulda, will, it is said, succeed 'The Charlatan' at the Haymarket.

MR. THEYRE SMITH's comedietta 'A Case for Eviction' is played as an opening piece at the Garrick by Mr. Scott Buist, Miss Mary Harvey, and Miss Helen Luck. Miss Luck has developed into an interesting actress.

THE production at the Royalty of Bjørnson's 'Gauntlet' has been postponed from Thursday in this week to Tuesday in next.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—G. S., jun.,—E. G. T.—B. R.—E. A.—H. B.—W. W.—G. A.—M. B. A.—E. S.—G. F. M. P. P.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	15	4
For Six Months...	7	8
For all Countries within the Postal Union.
For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months...	9	0

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES RUSSIA'S MARCH TOWARDS INDIA.

By an "INDIAN OFFICER."

With New Map of Central Asia showing the disputed Territory. 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.
"A bold historical survey... of the gradual development of Russian military power in Central Asia."—Times

CHINESE CENTRAL ASIA: A RIDE TO LITTLE TIBET.

With PAUNA and BIBLIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES.
By HENRY LANSDALE, D.D. M.R.S.S. F.R.G.S., Author of 'Through Siberia,' 'Russian Central Asia,' &c. With Maps and nearly One Hundred Illustrations. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, 36s.
"Mr. Lansdale's name as a traveller in Central Asia has long been established. His two new volumes are the record of his latest and, in some respects, his most adventurous journey."—Times

PICTURESQUE CEYLON: Colombo and the Keland Valley.

By HENRY W. CAVE. Demy 8vo. numerous Full-Page Illustrations in Woodcut, engraving, and lithography. One Guinea. "Everybody likes pictures, and it is an age of illustration, and this Picturesque Ceylon, by Mr. Henry W. Cave, a pretty drawing-room talker, just issued by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., is a welcome, as it deserves, a Christmas welcome. The author frankly avows that the work is a pictorial and a literary effort, but many a volume might be written of close-printed descriptive matter which would not convey nearly as good an idea of the beautiful island of Ceylon as the excellent photographs which are here interspersed with a light and interesting running comment."—Daily Telegraph

DOD'S PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, and KNIGHTAGE for 1904.

Crown 8vo. over 1,000 pages, handsomely bound, cloth extra gilt, gilt edges, 10s. 6d.
"Aims at giving a great deal of information in a small space, and signals success in doing so. For purposes of rapid reference it has no competitor."—Athenæum

THE ORGANIST and CHOIR-MASTER'S DIARY for 1904.

Arranged by RALPH HINDLE BAKER. Demy 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

THE WAY THEY LOVED at GRIM-PAT.

By E. RENTOU ELLER. 1 vol. 8vo. 3s. 6d.
"A book of peculiar charm."—Speaker
"Should secure one of the most solid literary successes of the season."—Daily Telegraph
"Clever and delightful illustrations from life."—Publishers' Circular

TALES of the CHILDREN'S WARD.

By HONNOR MORTEN, Author of 'Sketches of Hospital Life,' and H. P. GETHEN.

With Illustrations. 4to. cloth, 3s. 6d.
"A collection of hospital stories furnished by Honor Morten and H. P. Gethen, in 'Tales of the Children's Ward.' The title chosen by the authors explains their general purpose. With a large experience of the little sufferers to whom it has been their duty to attend, Miss Morten and Miss Gethen write their pathetic annals in a series of little sketches, which are capably told and very interesting. The book should command a ready sale."—Daily Telegraph

DR. NOAH PORTER, PRESIDENT of YALE.

A Memorial by his Friends. Edited by GEORGE A. MERRILL. With Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.
"This memoir was admirably conceived and has been admirably executed. The book is full of information, unfamiliar to English readers, on Church life and College life in New England."—Daily Telegraph

SECOND EDITIONS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THE HANDSOME HUMES.

By WILLIAM BLACK.

In 3 vols.
"Told with all the grace and charm of Mr. William Black's familiar narrative style... A refreshing wholesome dose of thought and tone pervades Mr. Black's excellent book."—Daily Telegraph

THE EMIGRANT SHIP.

By W. CLARE RUSSELL.

In 3 vols.
"Movement and incident crowd in every chapter, and the prettiest little love story flows as an undercurrent among these billows of adventure."—Fruit and Garden

NOW READY, price One Shilling.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

JANUARY NUMBER.

Contents.

CONSTANTINOPLE (Concluding Paper) F. Marion Crawford

Illustrated.

DEEP WATERS. W. O. van Tassel Rappaport.

AS THUNDERBOLTS FELL. Miss Perry.

THE WOLF at the DOOR. Charlotte Perkins Stetson.

THE ACTOR. John Dew. Illustrated. (The Ninth Article in the Series on 'Men's Occupations'.)

With Full Page Illustrations (Frontispiece) and Portrait of Manet.

ON THE BARRAGE PAR AVENUE LA MONT. Archer Abernethy Hardy.

JOHN MARSH, FORTRESS. George W. Cable. (Chapter 1-7. (Begun in this Number to be continued.)

"WHITHER THOU? GOD?" Solomon Solis-Chen.

STORIES IN STONE. BY NOTRE DAME. Theodore Andrea Cook.

Illustrated.

A LUNY AFTERNOON. George A. Kirkland.

DR. JEREMY RYLANDS. Frederick Keppel. Illustrated from the drawings of his wife.

THE PLACE of the WOMEN in the HISTORY of EGYPT. A. L. Lewis.

WHISTLER'S REPLY to HAYDN. Hon. Robert C. Winthrop.

London.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,

St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NOTICE.

The TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE for January, 1894, contains the commencement of a Serial Story by RHODA BROUGHTON, entitled 'A BEGINNER,' and one by FRANCES MARY PEARD, entitled 'An INTERLOPER.'

NEW WORKS.

FREDERIC HILL: an Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform. Being the Recollections of a Retired Civil Servant. Edited by his Daughter, CONSTANCE HILL. In 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portraits. 16s. [Just ready.]

The CONVERSATIONS of JAMES NORTH-COTE, R.A. Recorded by WILLIAM HAZLITT. A New Edition. Edited, with an Essay on HAZLITT and a Note on NORTH-COTE, by EDMUND GOSSE. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s. [Just ready.]

A HISTORY of the POST-OFFICE, from its ESTABLISHMENT down to 1836. By HERBERT JOYCE, C.B., one of the Secretaries to the Post-Office. In 1 vol. demy 8vo. 16s.

A LOTOS-EATER in CAPRI. By Dr. ALAN WALTERS, Author of 'Palms and Pearls;' or, Scenes in Ceylon. With Illustrations and a Map. In 1 vol. large crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The PRIVATE LIFE of NAPOLEON. From the French of ARTHUR LÉVY, by STEPHEN LOUIS SIMMON, Translator of 'The Youth of Frederick the Great,' &c. In 3 vols. demy 8vo. 38s. [Just ready.]

WOMEN of LETTERS, including Memoirs of Lady Morgan, the Misses Berry, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, Lady Ann Barnard, Mrs. Ogle, Sarah Countess Cowper, and Lady Duff Gordon. By GERTRUDE TOWN-SHEND MAYER. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 71s. [Just ready.]

A HISTORY of ENGLISH DRESS — Saxon, Plantagenet, Tudor, Stuart, and Modern. By GEORGIANA HILL, Author of 'Mundus Muliebris.' In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with numerous Illustrations on Steel. 30s.

MEMOIRS of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. By LOUIS ANTOINE FAUVELLET DE BOURBONNE. Edited by Colonel H. W. PHIPPS. A New Edition. In 4 vols. crown 8vo. 38s.

NEW NOVELS AT THE LIBRARIES.

DIANA TEMPEST. By MARY CHOLMONDELEY, Author of 'The Danvers Jewels,' 'Sir Charles Danvers,' &c. Second Edition. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

The VICAR of LANGTHWAITE. By LILY WATSON. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

TEMPE, By CONSTANCE COTTERELL, Author of 'Strange Gods.' In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

The GREATER GLORY. By MAARTEN MAARTENS, Author of 'An Old Maid's Love,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo. [Just ready.]

BRITOMART. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Bonnie Leslie,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

A HEROINE in HOMESPUN. By FREDERIC BRETTON. In 2 vols. crown 8vo.

NEW SIX-SHILLING BOOKS.

MOLLY and her MAN-O'-WAR. By Dr. ARABELLA KEMALY, Author of 'Dr. Janet of Harley-street.' In 1 vol. crown 8vo.

FROM MOOR ISLES. By JESSIE FOTHERGILL, Author of 'The First Violin,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo.

SPEEDWELL. By LADY GUENDOLEY RAMSDEN. In 1 vol. crown 8vo.

CHEAP EDITIONS OF STANDARD WORKS.

Each in crown 8vo. To be had at all Booksellers'.

RECOLLECTIONS of a MEMOIR of the Rev. LITERARY LIFE. With Selections from her Favourite Poets and Prose Writers. By MARY RUSSELL MITFORD. Crown 8vo. with Portrait, 6s.

MY REMINISCENCES. By W. P. FRITH, R.A. A New and Cheaper Edition, being the Eighth. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

The PRIVATE LIFE of MARIE ANTOINETTE. By HENRIETTE FELICITE CAMPAN. First Lady-in-Waiting to the Queen. With 2 Portraits. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

DEAN HOOK: his Life and Letters. Edited by the Rev. W. R. W. STEPHENS. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

STRAY RECORDS. By CLIFFORD HARRISON. A New Edition. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

JOHN RUSSELL, of Tordoun, North Devon. By the Author of 'Dartmoor Days,' 'Wolf-Hunting in Brittany,' &c. In crown 8vo. with a Portrait, 6s.

The RECOLLECTIONS of MARSHAL MACDONALD during the WARS of the FIRST NAPOLEON. Translated by STEPHEN LOUIS SIMMON. A New Edition, with Notes, Portrait, and Engraving of Couroettes. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The LIFE of LORD PALMERSTON. By the Hon. EVELYN ASHLEY, M.P. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece to each Volume, 12s.

The LIVES of PAINTERS: Hogarth, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, Fuseli, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Turner. By JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A. Crown 8vo. with Portraits, 6s.

The LIFE of MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS. From the French of M. MIGNET, by ANDREW SCOBLE. With 3 Portraits. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The LIFE of OLIVER CROMWELL. From the French of M. GUIZOT, by ANDREW SCOBLE. Crown 8vo. with 4 Portraits, 6s.

The LIFE of LORD WOLSELEY. By CHARLES RATHBONE LOW, F.R.S. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with a Portrait, 6s.

The LIFE of the Rev. RICHARD HARRIS BARHAM. Author of 'The Ingolby Legends.' By his Son, the Rev. RICHARD H. DALTON BARHAM. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Portraits, 6s.

MY LIFE. By Thomas SIDNEY COOPER, R.A. In crown 8vo. with Portrait, 6s.

The AUTOBIOGRAPHY of a SEAMAN. THOMAS, TENTH EARL OF DUNDONALD. Popular Edition. With a Sequel relating Lord Dundonald's Services in Liberating the Spanish and Portuguese Colonies in South America, and in the War of the Greek Independence, and with an Account of his later Life and Scientific Inventions. With Portraits, Charts, and 9 Illustrations on Wood. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The LIFE of THEODORE EDWARD HOOK. By Rev. RICHARD H. DALTON BARHAM. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The LIVES of STATESMEN: Burke and Chatham. By JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A. Crown 8vo. with Portraits, 6s.

The LIVES of WITS and HUMOURISTS: Swift, Pope, Steele, Goldsmith, the Colmans, Sheridan, Parr, Sydney Smith, Theodore Hook, &c. By JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with Portraits, 12s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

DAVID NUTT, 270-271, STRAND.

THE JEWISH QUARTERLY REVIEW.

EDITED BY
I. ABRAHAM and G. G. MONTEFIORE.
Vol. VI. JANUARY, 1894. 3s.

Contents.

- The JEWS in the WORKS of the CHURCH FATHERS. III. By Dr. S. Krause.
REFORMED JUDAISM. By Oswald John Simon.
The SECOND JEREMIAH. By G. H. Skipworth.
MISS SMITH: a Protest. By Rev. David Fay.
MISS SMITH: Notes in Reply. I. By I. Abraham; II. By G. G. Montefiore.
BELIEFS, RITES, and CUSTOMS of the JEWS, CONNECTED WITH DEATH, BURIAL, and MOURNING. By A. P. Bender.
MISCELLANEA LITURGICA. The שְׁמִינִי. By Dr. Neubauer.
CRITICAL NOTICES.—Joseph Jacobs's The Jews of England in the Twelfth Century, by Prof. W. Bacher, M. J. Savage's Jews and Modern Life, by C. G. Montefiore, H. Brody's Frances's Hebrew Poetry, by G. Margoliouth.
CORRIGENDA. By H. Hirschfeld.
LITERARY GLEANINGS.—X. Joseph Al-Ashkar; XI. The MSS. of the late Moses Lattes. By Dr. Neubauer.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS.

H. H. ROMILLY. Letters from the Western Pacific and Maabonaland. With Memoir by his Brother, S. H. ROMILLY. Introduction by LORD STANMORE. Portrait and 16 Full-Page Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 400 pp. cloth, 7s. 6d.

Daily Telegraph.—"The most entertaining book that has been published in this country for many a day." Glasgow Herald.—"Extremely interesting records of a varied and adventurous career." Times.—"It is a relief to turn to such a character and career as those of this bright, frank, and generous young fellow." Daily News.—"A satisfactory feature of these letters is the kindly spirit they breathe towards the aborigines."

The GOLDEN ASS of APULEIUS.

Translated out of Latin by WILLIAM ADLINGTON. Anno 1588. With an Introduction by CHARLES WHIBLEY. Small 4to. xxx-249 pp. half-backram, 12s. net. (No. 2 of the TUDOR TRANSLATIONS.)

Pall Mall Gazette.—"May well stand next to the 'Arabian Nights' for imagination, variety, the fantastic, the exhilarating." St. James's Gazette.—"A book of books." Graphic.—"Delightful for its physical no less than for its spiritual qualities." Notes and Queries.—"A veritable treasure." Glasgow Herald.—"All lovers of literature will be grateful for this delightful edition." Athenæum.—"A volume fit for the epicure in books."

LOW TIDE on GRAND PRE.

Poems by BLISS CARMAN. Small 4to. 116 pp. cloth, 5s. net.

Academy.—"All these Acadian lyrics are dominated by an overmastering sense of beauty, and permeated with a love of nature, for which there is no epithet so apt as the much misused and hackneyed word 'intense.'" Sketch.—"Of Mr. Carman's themes, that which brings out his greatest sweetness, eloquence, and inspiration is that of the wandering life. He should be the laureate of those who love to go afoot upon the roads of endless quest."

CUSTOMS and FASHIONS in OLD NEW ENGLAND. By ALICE MORSE EARLE. 12mo. 320 pp. cloth, 7s. 6d.

National Observer.—"This most pleasant book." Sketch.—"Bristles with the liveliest interest from first to last." Saturday Review.—"Applause rather than criticism must be given to this most fresh, erudite, and entertaining book."

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' PUBLICATIONS.

This day is published,

HISTORICAL PHILOSOPHY IN FRANCE And French Belgium and Switzerland.

By ROBERT FLINT, Corresponding Member of the Institute of France, Hon. Member of the Royal Society of Palermo, Professor in the University of Edinburgh, &c. 8vo. 21s.

On Monday will be published,

EARLSCOURT: A Novel of Provincial Life.

By ALEXANDER ALLARDYCE, Author of 'The City of Sunshin', 'Halmoral: a Romance of the Queen's Country', &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 25s. 6d.

This day is published,

MARCHMONT AND THE HUMES of POLWARTH.

By ONE OF THEIR DESCENDANTS. With numerous Portraits and other Illustrations. Crown 4to. 21s. net.

THE RISE OF OUR EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE:

Early Efforts in Nyasaland and Uganda. By Capt. F. D. LUGARD, D.S.O., Hon. F.R.G.S., Diplom. F.R.S.G.S. With 130 Illustrations, and 14 Maps specially prepared for the work. 3 vols. large demy 8vo. 45s.

"Many as are the tales of pluck and endurance which have arisen out of English exploration in Africa, none of them surpass in vividness and vitality this of Capt. Lugard's."—Globe.

LIFE AND TIMES OF

THE RT. HON. W. H. SMITH, M.P.

By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., Author of 'Passages in the Life of Sir Lucian Dipkin', 'Meridianna', &c. With Portraits and numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 25s.

"A handsome contribution to English literature, and a worthy memorial of a statesman who personified one of the best types of the national character."—Manchester Courier.

This day is published,

DOORSIDE DITTIES.

By JEANIE MORISON, Author of 'Alois', 'There as Here', 'Sordello', &c. With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"The pieces are always written with a simplicity and earnestness which make them more effective than much verse of far higher pretensions."—Scotsman.

This day is published. SEVENTH EDITION.

MONA MACLEAN, Medical Student.

By GRAHAM TRAVERS. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"The cleverest novel we have read for a long time."—Spectator.

This day is published,

ON SOME OF SHAKESPEARE'S FEMALE CHARACTERS.

By HELENA FAUCHT, LADY MARTIN. Dedicated by permission to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. With Portrait by Lehmann. Fifth Edition. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION.

JOHNSTON'S ELEMENTS OF AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY.

From the Edition by Sir CHARLES A. CAMERON, M.D. F.R.C.S.I. Revised and brought down to date by C. M. AIKMAN, M.A. B.Sc. Crown 8vo. 6s. (Next week.)

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW LIST.

NEW BOOK by the AUTHOR of
'OBITER DICTA.'

Ready on the 15th January. In foolscap 8vo., tastefully printed, and bound in olive cloth, uniform with 'Obiter Dicta,' price 5s. Also 50 Large-Paper Copies, price 21s. net. ESSAYS ABOUT MEN, WOMEN, and BOOKS. By AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Q.C., M.P.

Contents.

- | | |
|--|---|
| SWIFT.
BOLINGBROKE.
STERNE.
JOHNSON.
RICHARD CUMBERLAND.
ALEXANDER KNOX and
THOMAS DE QUINCY.
HANNAH MORE.
MARIE BASHKINETSEFF.
SIR JOHN VANDRUGH.
ROGER NORTH'S AUTO-
BIOGRAPHY. | JOHN GAY.
BOOKS: OLD and NEW.
BOOKBINDING.
PORTS-LAUREATE.
PARLIAMENTARY CANDI-DATES.
The BONA-FIDE TRA-VELLER.
HOURS in a LIBRARY.
FREE QUOTATIONS.
AUTHORS and CRITICS. |
|--|---|

NEW VOLUME OF THE BOOK-LOVERS' LIBRARY.

In foolscap 8vo. tastefully printed on antique paper, and bound in olive cloth gilt lettered, price 4s. 6d.; Hand-made Paper, Roxburghe binding, 7s. 6d. net; Large-Paper Roxburghe binding, 21s. net.

BOOK-SONG, an Anthology of

FORMS of Books and Bookmen from Modern Authors. Edited by GLENNON WHITE, Editor of 'Belladonna and Boudicca,' 'Garde Joyeuse,' &c.

In crown 8vo. handsomely bound in cloth, price 5s.

A THREEFOLD MYSTERY: a Tale of Monte Carlo. By CONSTANCE BEEJEANT.

Tastefully printed in demy 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d. Copiously illustrated with Sketches and Photographs.

ROUND THE WORLD BY DOCTOR'S ORDERS.

Being a Narrative of a Year's Travel in Japan, Ceylon, Australia, China, New Zealand, Canada, United States, &c. By JOHN DALE, J.P., Scarborough.

Tastefully printed and bound in cloth, price 2s. 6d. With Illustrative Diagrams.

A SIMPLE HISTORY OF ANCIENT PHILOSOPHY.

By W. R. SCOTT, M.A., Trinity College, Dublin. Author of 'An Introduction to Cicero's "Treatise concerning Eternal and Immutable Morality."'

Contents:—The Three Earliest Schools—The Philosophy of Change—The Claims of Man—Socrates—Plato—Aristotle—The Characteristics of the Last Period of Greek Philosophy—Epicurus and his Followers—Scepticism in the New Academy—Ecclesiasticism—Neo-platonism—Index of Terms and Glossary—Index of Names and Chronological Table.

Tastefully printed and appropriately bound in cloth, 1s. 6d.

UNPOPULAR POLITICS:

Being Non-popular Aspects, Political and Economic, of some Prominent Contemporary Questions. By G. EDWARD TARNER.

Contents:—State-provided Education—Combinations in Restraint of Trade—The Progressive Transfer of Political Power to the Largest Class.

London:

ELLIOT STOCK, 68, Paternoster-row, E.C.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

*Subjects for the Cambridge Local Examinations, December, 1894.The ELEMENTS of ENGLISH GRAMMAR. By ALFRED R. WEST, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge. 2s. 6d.The CHURCH CATECHISM EXPLAINED. By the Rev. A. W. ROBINSON, M.A., Jesus College, Cambridge, Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Wakeford. 2s.PROSPER MERIMÉE.—COLOMBA. Edited by ARTHUR R. MOPES, M.A., late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. 2s.CASIMIR DELAVIGNE.—LOUIS XI. Edited by H. W. EVE, M.A., Head Master of University College School, London. 2s.KLEE.—Die DEUTSCHEN HELDEN SAGEN (HAGEN und HILDE and GUDRUN). Edited by M. J. WOLSTENHOLME, B.A. Lond. 2s.GUTZKOW.—ZOPF und SCHWERT. Lustspiel in fünf Acten. With a Biographical and Historical Introduction, English Notes, and an Index. By H. J. WOLSTENHOLME, B.A. Lond. 2s. 6d.CAESAR.—De BELLO GALlico. BOOK VII. Edited by A. G. FERGUSON, M.A., Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. 2s.VERGIL.—ÆNEID. BOOK IX. Edited by A. SIDGWICK, M.A., Tutor of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. 1s. 6d.LIVY.—BOOK VI. Edited by the Rev. H. M. STEPHENSON, M.A., late Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge. 2s. 6d.CICERO.—DE SENECTUTE. Edited by J. S. REID, Litt.D., Fellow and Tutor of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. 2s. 6d.XENOPHON.—ANABASIS. BOOK IV. Edited by A. PRETOR, M.A., Fellow of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge. 2s.EURIPIDES.—HECUBA. With Introduction and Notes by W. R. HADLEY, M.A., Fellow of Pembroke College, Cambridge. (Preparing.)HERODOTUS. BOOK VI. Edited by E. S. SHUCKENBURY, M.A., late Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. 4s.PLATO.—CRITO. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Appendix, by J. ADAM, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Emmanuel College. 2s. 6d.PLATO.—EUTHYPHRO. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by J. ADAM, M.A. 2s. 6d.

THE PITT PRESS SHAKESPEARE.

A MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Glossary, by A. W. VERITY, M.A., sometime Scholar of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1s. 6d.

THE CAMBRIDGE MILTON FOR SCHOOLS.

"Mr Verity is an admirable editor of Milton."—Athenæum.MILTON.—PARADISE LOST. BOOKS I, II. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Index, by A. W. VERITY, M.A. 2s.

MATHEMATICS.

ARITHMETIC for SCHOOLS. With or without Answers. By C. SMITH, M.A., Master of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. 1s. 6d.EUCLID'S ELEMENTS of GEOMETRY. BOOKS I-VI. Edited by H. M. TAYLOR, M.A., Fellow and formerly Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 4s. BOOKS I. and II., 1s. 6d. BOOKS III. and IV., 1s. 6d. BOOKS I.-IV., 2s. BOOKS V. and VI., 1s. 6d.ELEMENTARY ALGEBRA. By W. W. ROUSE BALL, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 4s. 6d.An ELEMENTARY TREATISE on PLANE TRIGONOMETRY. By E. W. HOBSON, Sc.D. F.R.S., Fellow and Tutor of Christ's College, Cambridge, and University Lecturer in Mathematics; and C. M. JESSOP, M.A., Fellow of Clare College. 4s. 6d.MECHANICS and HYDROSTATICS for BEGINNERS. By S. L. LONEY, M.A. 4s. 6d.ELEMENTS of STATICS and DYNAMICS. By S. L. LONEY, M.A. Third Edition. 7s. 6d.

Part I. ELEMENTS of STATICS. | Part II. ELEMENTS of DYNAMICS. 4s. 6d. 8s. 6d.

PLANE TRIGONOMETRY. By S. L. LONEY, M.A., late Fellow of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. 7s. 6d. Part I. up to and including the Solution of Triangles, is published separately. 2s.HEAT. An Elementary Text-Book, Theoretical and Practical, for Colleges and Schools. By R. T. GLAZEBROOK, M.A. F.R.S., Assistant Director of the Cavendish Laboratory. (Immediately.)

PITT PRESS SERIES.

*Books suitable for Oxford Local, Oxford and Cambridge Certificate, College of Preceptors' Examinations, &c., 1894.ARISTOPHANES.—PLUTUS. With English Notes and Introduction by W. C. GILLEN, M.A., late Assistant Master at Rugby School. 2s. 6d.ARISTOPHANES.—VESPAE. By C. E. GRAYES, M.A., Classical Lecturer and Fellow of St. John's College. (Nearly ready.)HERODOTUS. BOOKS VIII. and IX. Complete, with Introduction, Notes, and Map, by E. S. SHUCKENBURY, M.A., late Fellow of Emmanuel College. 4s. each.PLATO.—PROTAGORAS. With Introduction and Notes by J. ADAM, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Emmanuel College, and A. M. ADAM. 4s. 6d.PLATONIS APOLOGIA SOCRATIS. With Introduction, Notes, and Appendix, by J. ADAM. 2s. 6d.SOPHOCLES.—ŒDIPUS TYRANNUS. School Edition. By R. C. JENN, LL.D. LL.D. 4s. 6d.XENOPHON.—ANABASIS. By A. PRETOR, M.A. Text and Notes. Complete in 2 vols. Vol. I., Text, 2s. 6d. Notes, 4s. 6d. BOOKS I., III., IV., and V., 2s. each. BOOKS II., VI., and VII., 2s. 6d. each.CÆSAR.—DE BELLO GALlico. With Introduction, Notes, and Maps. Edited by A. G. FERGUSON, M.A., Fellow of Magdalene College. BOOKS I., III., VI., and VII., 1s. 6d. each. BOOKS I., III., 2s. BOOKS II., III., 2s. BOOKS IV., V., 1s. 6d. BOOK VII., 2s.CICERO.—PHILIPPICA SECUNDA. With Introduction and Notes by the same Editor. 2s. 6d.CICERO.—DE SENECTUTE. With Introduction and Notes by J. S. REID, Litt.D., Fellow and Tutor of Gonville and Caius College. 2s. 6d.CICERO.—PRO MURENA. With Introduction and Notes by W. R. HEITLAND, M.A., Fellow and Classical Lecturer of St. John's College. 2s.HORACE.—EPISTLES. BOOK I. With Notes and Introduction by E. S. SHUCKENBURY, M.A., late Fellow of Emmanuel College. 2s. 6d.LIVY. BOOK IX. With Introduction and Notes by Rev. H. M. STEPHENSON, M.A. 2s. 6d.VERGIL.—COMPLETE WORKS. Edited by A. SIDGWICK, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. In 2 vols. Vol. I., Text and Introduction, 2s. 6d. Vol. II., Notes, 4s. 6d. Or in separate Books.—ÆNEID. BOOKS I.-XII. 1s. 6d. each. | GEORGICS. BOOKS I., II. 2s.BUCOLICS. 1s. 6d. | GEORGICS. BOOKS III., IV. 2s.

GRADUATED PASSAGES from GREEK and LATIN

AUTHORS, for First Sight Translation. Selected and supplied with Short Notes for Beginners by H. HENRIALL, M.A., Head Master, and C. E. LAURENCE, B.A., Assistant Master of Hush Heath Proprietary School. Crown 8vo.

Part I. EASY. 1s. 6d. | Part III. MODERATELY DIFFICULT. 2s.

Part II. MODERATELY EASY. 2s. | Part IV. DIFFICULT. 2s.

MOLIÈRE.—LE BOURGEOIS GENTILHOMME. (1670.) Edited by Rev. A. C. CLAPHAM, M.A. Revised Edition. 1s. 6d.HAUFF.—DIE KARAVANE. Edited, with Notes, by A. SCHLOTTMANN, Ph.D., late Assistant Master at Uppingham School. 2s.SCHILLER.—WILHELM TELL. Edited, with Notes, by KARL HERMANN HERRL, M.A. Ph.D. 2s. 6d. Abridged Edition, 1s. 6d.ELEMENTARY COMMERCIAL GEOGRAPHY. A Sketch of the Commodities and the Countries of the World. By H. R. MILL, F.R.S., Librarian to the Royal Geographical Society, and late Lecturer on Commercial Geography in the Heriott-Watt College, Edinburgh. 1s.An ATLAS of COMMERCIAL GEOGRAPHY. Intended as a Companion to the above. By J. G. BARTHOLOMEW, F.R.G.S. With an Introduction by Dr. H. R. MILL. 3s.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria-lane.

THE NEW REVIEW.

ANALYTICAL Their History and Organization.

The NEW MUSEUM and the SIDON SARCOPHAGI. By Prof. Max Müller. (Illustrated.)

The FUTURE of HUMOUR. By H. D. Tveit.

DISMEMBERMENT IN ENGLAND. By Augustine Horrell, M.P.

SOME IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA. By Walter Crane. (Illustrated.)

THE PARACHUTE of CHRIST and the PRACTICE of HIS CHURCHES. By Count Lyot Tolstoi.

IS OUR LIFEBOAT SYSTEM EFFECTUAL? By E. H. Bayler, M.P.

PROFESSOR TYNDALL. By P. Chalmers Mitchell.

FRENCH PLAYS and ENGLISH MONEY. By William Archer.

PAROCHIAL SELF-GOVERNMENT (1780-1880). By Rev. J. Froom Wilkinson.

A LUCKY GILPENCE.

London: Wm. Heinemann, 25, Bedford-street, W.C.

Price 1s. net; post free, 1s. 3d. Monthly

A SECOND EDITION IS NOW READY of the

INVESTORS' REVIEW for JANUARY,

Edited by A. J. WILSON.

containing the Article 'A Paralytic Part of England,' and numerous other Contributions of importance to people of means.

Subscription price 36s. per annum, post free.

Order through a Bookseller, or direct from the Publisher.

The INVESTORS' REVIEW Office, 59, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

Advertisements should be sent in not later than the 15th of the month.

Just published, 8vo 7s. 6d. net.

THE GREAT PESTILENCE (A.D. 1348-9), now commonly known as the Black Death. By FRANCIS AIDAN GASKETT, D.D. O.S.A.

London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

In 3 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies.....The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion..... We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."

Liverpool Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis.....As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A fascinating page of literary history."—Illustrated London News.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

TYLSTON & EDWARDS' LIST.

MEMORIAL EDITION OF THE WORKS OF SIR RICHARD BURTON.

1. A PERSONAL NARRATIVE OF A PILGRIMAGE TO AL MADINAH AND MECCAH.

Complete, in 2 vols., price 12s. net.

"The brilliant narrative reads as vividly as ever."—Athenæum.
"One of the most marvellous records of daring ever penned."
"Two most fascinating volumes."—Star.
"Even Burton never wrote anything better than his 'Pilgrimage to Meccah.'"—Standard.

2. A MISSION TO GELELE, KING OF DAHOMEY.

In 2 vols. price 12s. net.

"Carefully edited and excellently got up."—Glasgow Herald.
"An uncompromising account of a race which has, perhaps, been misunderstood over more than any other."—Star.
"Exceedingly interesting."—St. James's Gazette.

3. VIKRAM AND THE VAMPIRE: Tales of Hindu Devilry.

With 25 Illustrations by Ernest Griset.

In 1 vol. price 6s. net.

There is also a Large Hand-made Paper Edition of this book, limited to 500 Copies, the 36 Full-Page Illustrations on special China paper, a new Photographure Frontispiece by Albert Leblond, and a specially designed cloth cover, price 12s. net.

"Can hold its own in point of depth and interest with any of those stories of myth and mystery which are so especially characteristic of the East, and will prove of interest alike to the student and casual reader."—Literary World.

4. FIRST FOOTSTEPS IN EAST AFRICA.

In 2 vols. price 12s. net. (Ready in January.)

So is followed, probably, by

5. THE LAKE REGIONS OF CENTRAL AFRICA.

And other Works, which will be duly announced.

EACH WORK IS SOLD SEPARATELY.

Messrs. TYLSTON & EDWARDS, Publishers,

13, Clifford's Inn, London, E.C.

Trade supplied by

Messrs. SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & CO., Ltd.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.

THE NEW NOVEL.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'GOOD DAME FORTUNE.'
WHAT HAPPENED at MORWYN. By MARIA A. HOYER. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

NEW MILITARY NOVEL.

DEFERRED PAY; or, a Major's Dilemma. By Lieut.-Col. W. H. McCausland. Crown 8vo. 6s. [Just out.]

THE NEW SOCIETY NOVEL.

FIRST EDITION EXHAUSTED, SECOND NOW READY.

UPPER BOHEMIANS: a Romance. By P. G. WALPOLE, Author of 'Lord Floysham.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

FROM MORN TILL EVE. By EMILIE DUNFORD, Author of 'Evening Shadows.' 2s. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Just out.]

A CENTENARY MONOGRAPH.

CHARLOTTE CORDAY; or, a Hundred Years After. By MARY JEAFERSON, Author of 'Roman Camille.' 2s. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just out.]

THE WELCOME HOUR.

VOLUME 1893. Edited by FERDY RUSSELL. Profusely illustrated and beautifully bound in pictorial cloth, gold lettered, with gilt edges, price 2s. 6d.
ARMY AND NAVY STORES GAZETTE:—"A marvellous issue at the price, well edited, well written, and well illustrated."

SIXTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE.

as an IRISH LANDLORD. Memoirs of John Hamilton, D.L., of St. Ernan's, Donegal. Edited, with introduction, by the Rev. H. C. WHITE, late Chaplain, Paris. With Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Immediately.]

DIGBY, LONG & Co., Publishers,
13, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

DAVID DOUGLAS'S LIST.

2 vols. demy 8vo. 32s.

FAMILIAR LETTERS OF SIR WALTER SCOTT.

From Originals at Abbotsford and elsewhere.

"In perusing these fascinating pages we seem to live Sir Walter's life over again along with him."—Daily Telegraph.

2 vols. demy 8vo. 32s.; and 1 vol. crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE JOURNAL OF SIR WALTER SCOTT.

"Reads like a romance."—Scotsman.

"As thrilling as any tragedy."—Times.

1 vol. crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

SACRIFICE: Its Prophecy and Fulfilment.

The Baird Lecture for 1892-3. By ARCHIBALD SCOTT, D.D., Minister of St. George's, Edinburgh, Author of 'Buddhism and Christianity: a Parallel and a Contrast.'

2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated, 25s.

THE HEREDITARY SHERIFFS OF GALLOWAY.

Their "Forbear" and Friends, their Courts and Customs of the Times, with Notes of the Early History, Ecclesiastical Legends, the Baronage, and Place-Names of the Province. By the late Sir ANDREW AGNEW, Bart., of Lochmaw.

In demy 8vo. Vol. I., now ready, 12s. 6d.

HISTORY OF THE SCOTTISH CHURCH.

By W. STEPHEN,
Rector of St. Augustine's, Dunbarton.

3 vols. demy 8vo. 45s.

CELTIC SCOTLAND: A History of Ancient Alban.

By the late WILLIAM F. SKENE, D.C.L. LL.D., Historiographer-Royal for Scotland. Second Edition, carefully Revised by the Author, with a New Index to the Entire Work.

Vol. I. HISTORY and ETHNOLOGY. 15s.

Vol. II. CHURCH and CULTURE. 15s.

Vol. III. LAND and PEOPLE. 15s.

3 vols. crown 8vo. 22s. 6d.

HORÆ SUBSEQUIÆ.

By JOHN BROWN, M.D. F.R.S.E.

Vol. I. LOCKE and SYDENHAM. Sixth Edition, with Portrait by James Paed. 7s. 6d.

Vol. II. RAB and HIS FRIENDS. Fourteenth Edition. 7s. 6d.

Vol. III. JOHN LEECH. Sixth Edition, with Portrait by Sir George Reid, F.R.S.A. 7s. 6d.

Edinburgh: DAVID DOUGLAS, 10, Castle-street.
London:
SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & CO. LIMITED.

HOLY COMMUNION SERVICE in the KEY of G.

By Rev. MAURICE BELL (St. John's, Westminster).

Price Sixpence.

Novello, Ewer & Co.

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 36 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

BRIEF LESSONS IN ASTRONOMY.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

G. Stottman, 71, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SIR BERNARD BURKE'S PEEWEE, BARONET-AGE, KNIGHTHOOD, &c., for 1894.

Has for more than half a century been regarded as containing a history of all the great titles families in the empire. There is scarcely a page in the volume that is not full of interest. There is an excellent index to the work. Considerable space is devoted to the question of precedence. — Times.

56th Edition, super-royal 8vo. cloth gilt, price 38s.
London: Harrison & Sons, Bookbinders and Stationers to Her Majesty, 40, Pall Mall.

ENLARGED EDITION—Completing 170,000.

BELL'S STANDARD ELOCUTIONIST.

Principles and Exercises, with a Copious Selection of Extracts in Prose and Poetry, adapted for Reading and Recitation.

BY

D. C. BELL and ALEX. MELVILLE BELL, F.E.I.S.

With Frontispiece and Diagrams.
Roxburgh binding, 608 pages, price 3s. 6d.

* This Edition contains sixty-four additional pages, comprising a NEW SELECTION OF CLASSIFIED RECITATIONS.

"It is far the best of the many books of the kind—perhaps the only one that explains the principles of its subject with scientific precision." — Scotsman.

London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

On demand at all Libraries.

A SUPERFLUOUS WOMAN.A NEW NOVEL.

In Three Volumes.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

Now ready, price 10s. 6d.

THE CLERGY LIST FOR 1894.

The Proprietors of the CLERGY LIST are authorized to state that in many important particulars, and especially as regards the Values of Benefices and the arrangement of new Parochial Districts, they are largely indebted to the ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSION for SPECIAL and VALUABLE INFORMATION supplied from that Office.

KELLY & Co., Ltd., 182-184, High Holborn, W.C.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

READY THIS DAY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.

MR. CUSTANCE'S RIDING RECOLLECTIONS AND TURF STORIES.

With numerous Illustrations, demy 8vo. 15s. Also a Large-Paper Edition, 51s. net.

THIRD THOUSAND, NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS.

MR. LE FANU'S REMINISCENCES.

With Portraits. Demy 8vo. 16s.

TENTH THOUSAND NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS.

STEPHEN REMARK.

By the Hon. and Rev. JAMES ADDERLEY. Small 8vo. paper, 1s.; elegantly bound, 3s. 6d.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C., Publisher to the India Office.

HODDER BROTHERS' NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY,

Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, with Portrait of the Author, price 3s. 6d.

The VISIONARY; or, Pictures from Nordland. By JONAS LIE.

Translated from the Norwegian by JESSIE MUIR.

"That so striking and powerful a romance should have escaped the translator until now is something strange. Miss Muir's work is well done and should find many readers." — Saturday Review.

"Its hero's autobiographical narrative seems not only with personal experiences of extra-natural apparitions, but with appalling tales of goblins and fiends....Lie's masterpiece....A book worthy of careful and repeated perusal." — Daily Telegraph.

"A fine work." — Scotsman.
"Full of goblins and 'second sight.'....This most fascinating book." — Star.
"Summa, the love of David Hoin's youth, is one of the most fascinating characters in Scandinavian fiction." — Koke.
"Then the picture of Summa, the heroine of the story, though limned with the utmost simplicity, hardly anything finer or more elevated in tone could be conceived." — Aberdeen Free Press.

NEW WORK BY EDWIN HODDER.

Crown 8vo. cloth, with Plates and Illustrations, price 6s.

TRUTH in STORY; or, Simple Home Discourses for Young People.

By EDWIN HODDER, Author of 'The Life and Work of the Seventh Earl of Shaftesbury,' &c.

"A beautifully bound, printed, and illustrated volume....This light yet earnest, entertaining yet devout, collection of carefully written essays." — Star.

"Pictures and stories are the delight of children, and both are here furnished in a plentiful and attractive manner. The book is beautifully got up, mainly in its tone, and interesting throughout, and altogether is decidedly one of the best of its kind." — Scotsman.

"Mr. Hodder has hit upon a singularly effective plan of conveying instruction to children. The work is admirably planned." — Rock.

"Full of wise and timely counsels....could hardly be surpassed as a gift-book for young men." — British Weekly.

London: HODDER BROTHERS, 18, New Bridge-street, E.C.

ON NEURASTHENIA (Brain and Nerve Exhaustion, Weariness and Failure); and the NEURASTHENIC OF INFLUENZA.

By T. STURGEON DOWSE, M.D. 7s. 6d.

Baillière, Tynand & Co., King William-street, Strand.

Now ready,

THE OLD ENGLISH POPULAR MUSIC.

By the late WILLIAM CHAFFELL, F.R.S.

A New Edition, in two volumes, of the Popular Music of the Olden Time (under the above title).
A Collection of the best Song, Ballad, and Dance Tunes of England, from the earliest times to the end of the reign of George II.

With a Preface and Notes, and the earlier Manuscripts carefully Revised, by H. KELLS WOODWARD, F.R.S.

Demy 4to. Edition, bound in buckram, 2 vols. 2 Guinea net.

Edition de Luxe, on Large Hand-made Paper, bound in half-vellum, limited to 100 copies, 2 vols. 4 Guinea net.

Chappell & Co. New Bond-street, and Macmillan & Co. London.

Household Words says:—"We would recommend every mother to hang up in her nursery 'A Nursery Card, to be had of James Noy & Co.'"

A NURSERY CARD

On Rollers, for Hanging, 24in. by 18in., 6d.; or on Linen and Varnished, 1s. 6d. post free.

WHAT TO DO, AND HOW TO DO IT. Simple

Directions for Immediate Treatment in Twenty Cases of Accident and Sudden Illness common to Children. It provides against Nits of Animals, Broken Limbs, Bruises, Burns, Child-growing, Choking, Convulsions, Croup, Cuts, Drowning, Fainting, Fits, Nose-Bleeding, Poisonous Plants, Stings, Substances in the Ears, Eyes, or Nose, Swallowing Coins, Buttons, &c. Wounds.

London: James Noy & Co. Limited, 170, Fleet-street, and 45, Threadneedle-street.

Just published, crown 8vo. 180 pp. 3s. 6d. net.

THE STORY of the NEW GOSPEL of INTERPRETATION.

Told by its Surviving Recipient, EDWARD MAITLAND.

"The days of the Covenant of Manifestation are passing away: the Gospel of Interpretation cometh."

"There shall nothing new be told: but that which is ancient shall be interpreted." — Isa. p. 41.

"A fascinating volume....The history of a work...unique on far as we are aware...Calculated to effect a fundamental revolution in religion....Reminding in language which leaves nothing to be desired, whether for simplicity, lucidity, or dignity...experiences and their philosophical issues transcending and surpassing in kind as well as in degree. All that has been put before the world since the age of Occultism, Spiritualism, Theosophy, and Psychical Research."

Agnesic Journal, December 30.

Lamley & Co. 1 and 3, Exhibition-road, S.W., and all Bookellers.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE.

Just published, price 1s.

A REJOINDER to PROF. WEISMANN. By HERBERT SPENCER.

Also recently published, price 1s.

THE INADEQUACY of NATURAL SELECTION.

By the SAME AUTHOR.

TRANSACTIONS OF THE ROYAL IRISH ACADEMY.

Just published, Vol. XXX Part I.

ON a SYRIAC MS. of the NEW TESTAMENT

RELATING to the EARL of CHAWFORD and BALCARNE, and ON an INEDITED VARIATION of the APOCALYPSE THEREIN CONTAINED. By the Rev. JOHN GWYN, D.D. D.C.L. With Plates. Price 3s. 6d.

14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, and at Edinburgh.

BIBLIOGRAPHY of BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL of BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 3d.
John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Broom's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY of THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1893, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1894, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 4d.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.
John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Broom's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

PREMIER

"VINOLIA" SOAP

FOR THE HOUSEHOLD COSTS

4d. a TABLET.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of speaking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in time, 1s. 1d. by Chemists, labelled 'James Noy & Co. Limited, Homoeopathic Chemists, 170, Fleet-street, and 45, Threadneedle-street, London.'

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, HEARTBURN, GOUT, and INDIGESTION. And Satisfies All for Dilation Constipation, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

1. Mrs. HUNGERFORD'S New Novel, The RED-HOUSE MYSTERY, by the Author of 'Molly Bawn,' is now ready, in 2 vols., at all Libraries.
2. OUIDA'S New Book, TWO OFFENDERS, is now ready, small 4to. cloth extra, 6s.
3. LESTER ARNOLD'S New Novel, The CONSTABLE of ST. NICHOLAS, is now ready, crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d., with a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.
4. WILLIAM JAMESON'S New Novel, MY DEAD SELF, will be ready on January 18, post 8vo. picture cover, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.
5. ERNEST GLANVILLE'S New Novel, A FAIR COLONIST, will be ready on January 18, crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d. With a Frontispiece.
6. JOHN HILL'S New Novel, The COMMON ANCESTOR, will be ready, in 3 vols., at every Library on January 25.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

SECOND EDITION IN THE PRESS OF

RED DIAMONDS. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, Author of 'Dear

Lady Diadem,' &c. 3 vols.

"If Mr. McCarthy had never written another novel, 'Red Diamonds' would of itself have sufficed to gain for him a good reputation among writers of fiction. 'Red Diamonds' may be safely recommended, not only to those who like Mr. McCarthy's pleasant social and political stories, but to all who can appreciate a really strong tale of crime and its detection." Speaker.

The BURDEN of ISABEL. By J. MACLAREN COBBAN,

Author of 'The Red Sultan,' 3 vols.

"This is a story of love and cotton, and cotton and love are so skilfully interwoven that the reader enjoys following the skeins of the one as much as the skeins of the other. Will merit all the success it will certainly achieve." Daily Chronicle.

VASHTI and ESTHER: a Story of Society To-day. By the Writer of 'Belle's' Letters. 3 vols.

"'Vashti and Esther' will assuredly rank among the most brilliant of recent novels." Morning Post.

TO HIS OWN MASTER. By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of

'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols.

"The book is brilliantly written." Daily Telegraph.

OUTLAW and LAWMAKER. By MRS. CAMPBELL PRAED.

3 vols.

"It is full of go from beginning to end." Academy.

The MAKING of a NOVELIST. By DAVID CHRISTIE

MURRAY, Author of 'Joseph's Coat.' With a Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

"To talk of self and not be offensive," says Mr. Murray in the Preface to this pleasant little book, "demands an art which is not always given to man." Nothing could be truer, but it is almost equally true that the author of 'Aunt Rachel' possesses the art in question." Glasgow Herald.

Uniform with 'It is Never Too Late to Mend' and 'Peg Woffington.'

The CLOISTER and the HEARTH. By CHARLES READE.

Medium 8vo. in picture cover, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

[Pub. I.]

THIERS' HISTORY of the CONSULATE and the EMPIRE of FRANCE UNDER NAPOLEON. New Edition, with 36 fine Steel-plate Illustrations. Complete in 13 monthly vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, 12s. each. The FIRST FIVE VOLUMES are now ready.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

The DAYS of HIS VANITY: a Passage in the Life of a Young Man. By SYDNEY GRUNDY.

"The book is exceedingly interesting." Westminster Gazette.

The LUCK of GERARD RIDGELEY. A Tale of the Zulu

Border. By BERTRAM MITFORD, Author of 'The Gun-Runner,' &c.

"A rattling tale of adventure. The wild life of the veldt is brought before us with admirable skill by one who knows his Africa." Athenæum.

HEATHER and SNOW. By GEORGE MAC DONALD.

"A book which no one, having once taken it up, will lay down." Spectator.

"TO LET." By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.'

"Well-told stories, all interesting and brightly written." World.

The SCALLYWAG. By GRANT ALLEN, Author of 'The Tents of Shem,' &c.

"The Scallywag" is an extremely amusing book." Guardian.

WALFORD'S WINDSOR PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, and KNIGHTAGE (1894). Crown 8vo. Windsor cloth, 12s. 6d.

WALFORD'S COUNTY FAMILIES of the UNITED KINGDOM (1894). Containing notices of the Descent, Birth, Marriage, Education, &c., of more than 12,000 distinguished Heads of Families, their Heirs Apparent or Presumptive, the Offices they hold or have held, their Town and Country Addresses, Clubs, &c. Royal 8vo. cloth gilt, 50s.

Walford's Shilling Peerage | Walford's Shilling House of Commons (1894).

Walford's Shilling Baronetage | Walford's Shilling Knightage (1894).

WALFORD'S COMPLETE PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, KNIGHTAGE, and HOUSE OF COMMONS (1894). Royal 32mo. cloth extra, gilt edges, 6s. (Just ready.)

SOME OF CHATTO & WINDUS'S BOOKS FOR THE LIBRARY.

CRUIKSHANK'S COMIC ALMANACK. Complete in Two Series. The First from 1855 to 1863, the Second from 1864 to 1883. With Hundreds of Plates and Woodcuts by Cruikshank, Mase, Landells, &c. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d. each.

The COMPLETE WORKS in VERSE and PROSE of FRANCY SYSSON ADELLEY. Edited by H. HERNE SHEPHERD. 4 vols. crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

CHARLES LAMB'S COMPLETE WORKS in PROSE and VERSE, including 'Poetry for Children' and 'Prince Ivor.' With 2 Portraits and a Facsimile of a Page of the 'Essay on Roast Pig.' Crown 8vo. half bound, 7s. 6d.

The MACLISE PORTRAIT GALLERY of ILLUSTRIOUS LITERARY CHARACTERS. 48 Portraits, with Memoirs Illustrative of the Literature of the Former Half of the Present Century, by WILLIAM BATES, B.A. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES of ILLUSTRIOUS MEN. Translated from the Greek, with Notes, Critical and Historical, and a Life of Plutarch, by JOHN and WILLIAM LANGEHORNE. With Portraits. 2 vols. demy 8vo. half bound, 10s. 6d.

BURTON'S ANATOMY of MELANCHOLY. Complete Edition, with Translations of the Quotations. Demy 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

JOSEPHUS'S COMPLETE WORKS; containing 'The Antiquities of the Jews' and 'The Wars of the Jews.' With 12 Illustrations and Maps. 2 vols. demy 8vo. half bound, 12s. 6d.

The LIFE of the GREEKS and ROMANS described from Antique Monuments. By KINKEID GUTHRIE and W. BOWEN. Edited by Dr. HILFERT. With 545 Illustrations. Large crown 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

The THOUSAND and ONE NIGHTS, commonly called in England 'The Arabian Nights' Entertainment. Translated from the Arabic, with Notes, by EDWARD WILLIAM LAM. Illustrated by many hundred Engravings from Designs by Harvey. Edited by EDWARD STANLEY POOL. With a Preface by STANLEY LANE-POOLE. 3 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d. each.

STRUTT'S SPORTS and PASTIMES of the PEOPLE of ENGLAND, including the Rural and Domestic Recreations, May Games, Mummings, &c. &c. from the Earliest Period to the Present Time. Edited by WM. HONE. With 180 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

BRAND'S OBSERVATIONS on POPULAR ANTIQUITIES, chiefly illustrating the Origin of our Vulgar Customs, Ceremonies, and Superstitions. With the addition of our HENRY BLISS, and numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

A HANDBOOK of HERALDRY. With Instructions for Tracing Pedigrees and Designing Arms and Blazons. By JOHN E. CUGAN. With 60 Woodcuts, 2 Coloured and 3 Plate Plates. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

A HANDBOOK of ARCHITECTURAL STYLES. By A. HORNBOURNE. Translated by W. COLLETT SANDERS. With 60 Illustrations. Large crown 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

SIGNBOARDS: their History. By JACOB LALWOOD and JOHN CAMDEN HOTTER. With Coloured Frontispiece and 94 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

A HISTORY of ENGLISH LITERATURE. By HENRY TANNER. 4 vols. small demy 8vo. cloth boards. NEW FORTLAN EDITION, 2 vols. large crown 8vo. cloth extra, 12s.

A HISTORY of FRENCH LITERATURE. By HENRY VAN LAUN. 8 vols. demy 8vo. cloth boards, 7s. 6d. each.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

Subscribers' Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Broom's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C. Printed by JOHN G. PEARCE, Alderman Press, Broom's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.; and Published by the said JOHN G. PEARCE at Broom's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Balfour and Mr. John Macdonald, Edinburgh.—Saturday, January 13, 1894.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3456.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, 1894.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.—The WINTER EXHIBITION is now open till 6 p.m., and is lighted by electricity at dusk and on dark days.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.—NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the PRESIDENT and COUNCIL will receive on TUESDAY, January 30, TWO THOUSAND ANNUAL APPLICANTS for the Turner Annual, which is of the value of £50,000, must be Artists of repute in need of aid through the unprofitable failure of professional employment or other causes. Forms of application can be obtained by letter addressed to the Secretary, Royal Academy of Arts, Piccadilly. They must be filled in and returned on or before Saturday, January 27th. By order.
FRED. A. RAYON, Secretary.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The WINTER EXHIBITION OF SKETCHES AND STUDIES is now open, at Pall Mall East, from 10 till 5.

ELECTION OF ASSOCIATES.—The day appointed for receiving Works by Candidates is WEDNESDAY, February 1st, and the day of Election, FRIDAY, 2nd.
ALFRED D. FRIPP, R.W.A., Secretary.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF BRITISH ARTISTS. South-east, Pall Mall East.—WINTER EXHIBITION NOW OPEN DAILY, Ten to Five.
ADAM R. PROCTOR, Hon. Secretary.

THE DORÉ GALLERY OF PAINTINGS, &c.

The INTERNATIONAL ART ASSOCIATION, Limited, are prepared to receive TENDERS for the PURCHASE of the Celebrated DORÉ GALLERY OF PAINTINGS, SKETCHES, &c., together with a Large Stock of Engravings. Tenders to be delivered not later than February 15th. For forms and further particulars apply to the INTERNATIONAL ART ASSOCIATION, Limited, 28, Chapel-street, Liverpool, or J. SCHWARTZ, 28, New Bond-street, London, and 510, Seventh Avenue, New York.

SOCIETY OF AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order.
J. PORTER, Secretary, 4, Portland-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

STRADIVARI.—For the Work they have in preparation upon Stradivari. W. E. WILL & SONS of 38, New Bond-street, London, WOULD LIKE TO SEE ANY VIOLINS or other INSTRUMENTS by STRADIVARI that may be unknown to them, and would therefore invite their possessors to communicate with them.

MR. DANNREUTHER begs that all LETTERS concerning Musical Manuscripts, London, &c., may be addressed to his NEW RESIDENCE, 20, HAYLEY STREET, Coventry-square, W.

TO PUBLISHERS.—A Position as SUB-EDITOR or MANAGER of PUBLICATION DEPARTMENT desired by Advertiser. Fifteen years' experience in the Literary and Publication and Advertisement Department of a leading firm of Publishers. Thoroughly conversant with Printing. Highest references.—A. B. & Queen's-road, Chelsea.

LONDON LIBRARY.—A well-educated ASSISTANT WANTED. Salary £1.10s. per week. Library experience necessary.—Apply, by letter, to C. T. MAXWELL, Secretary and Librarian, 21, James's-square, S.W.

GENTLEMAN (30) desires ENGAGEMENT as PRIVATE SECRETARY, TRAVELLING COMPANION, &c. Good references.—Write E. W., Writing's Advertising Office, 1st, Finsbury, W.

A GRADUATE of BALLIOL, A.C.M. L.M.S.C.L. & B.A. OXON. is OFFER to undertake LITERARY or EXAMINING WORK in connection with Music.—E. W., 12, Ship-street, Oxford.

TALES WANTED.—A few good sprightly STORIES for the YOUNG REQUIRED for independent (not serial) publication. 3000 or 5000 words. MSS. not to be sent before previous communication with full particulars.—H. A. R., care of Mr. G. C. Mill, 17, Boulevard-street, London, E.C.

A FELLOW of the ROYAL HISTORICAL and ARCHEOLOGICAL SOCIETIES UNDERTAKES the COMPILATION of HISTORIES and BIOGRAPHIES, also Translations from Ancient and Modern Classical Authors. Has just completed Translation of a Post-Augustinian Author. Is the Author and Reviser of several works (Price and Terms), and a Contributor to Magazines and Reviews. Also undertakes Reviews in Heraldry, &c.—H. A., 4, Sevington-street, Southwark, London, S.E.

MARYBOROUGH, QUEENSLAND.—A FIRST ASSISTANT MISTRESS is REQUIRED for the Girls' Grammar School. Age 25 to 35 years. Full experience in an English High School necessary. Must be qualified to teach English subjects generally with Science. Will have to leave England immediately.—All particulars may be obtained on application to Mr. A. Strickland, care of James McEwan & Co., Limited, 27, Lombard-street, E.C.

BLACKBURN GRAMMAR SCHOOL. HEAD MASTER REQUIRED after EASTON, Graduate. Experienced. Yearly salary £200, and a Capitation Fee of £2.10s. for each Scholar up to 100. 21 beyond. Home fees. Applications by January 25. Copies of Scheme, price 5s. per copy, and other particulars, from the undersigned.
ARTHUR J. ROBERTSON, Clerk to the Governors.
2, King-street, Blackburn.

DOVER COLLEGE.—Terms, 80s. per annum. No extra Junior School. Ten Twenty Exhibitions this Term for Sons of Officers and Clergy. Qualifying Examination. Head Master, Rev. W. C. COMPTON, M.A.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly reliable ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs ANKIN, GARHMAN & THING, who from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful future in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—25, Tavistock-street, W.

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to best University or Army Tutor, and Schools for Boys or Girls, at Home or Abroad, may be obtained, free of charge, by sending a statement of requirements to R. J. HAZEN, M.A., 2, Lancaster-place, Strand.

ASSISTANT SCHOOLMISTRESSES.—Miss LOUISE BROOK can RECOMMEND University Graduates, Trained and Certificated Teachers, Foreign Teachers, Kindergarten Mistresses, &c.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Caven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

M I N E R A L O G Y.

Mr. O. SYNGE, F.R.S., is willing to take a FEW STUDENTS in his LABORATORY for the following ELEMENTARY COURSE to begin on FEBRUARY 1st, and finish JUNE 22nd.—Chemical Analysis (Qualitative), Microscopic Analysis, Spectrum Analysis, Heliographic Analysis, Crystallography, Determination by Hardness by Specific Gravity, Magnetic Properties, &c. Special arrangements for Ladies wishing to study the Elementary Branches of this subject. For particulars and syllabus of Course apply by letter, any time, to Mr. O. Syngé, 4, Addison-street, Hyde-road, W. Kensington, or personally, any Wednesday morning between 11 and 1. Kindly enclose visiting card.

MOUNT VIEW, HAMPSTEAD, N.W.—The NEXT TERM will begin on MONDAY, January 27th.—Reference kindly allowed to Mrs. Munson, Lambeth Palace, Professor Moulton, Brasenose College, 21, J. J. Rogers, 21, Gower-street, Hampstead.—Prospectus on application to Miss Helen E. Munson.

MR. HENRY BLACKBURN'S STUDIO.

INSTRUCTION in DRAWING for the PRESS with Technical Assistance. Students join at any time. Advice and instruction by Correspondence.—122, Victoria-street, Westminster (near Army and Navy Stores).

MISS SOPHIA BEALE gives INSTRUCTION in "BLACK AND WHITE" DRAWING for the PRESS. Classes for Painting and Drawing (Ladies and Children) as heretofore.—Terms and times on application to 20, Albany-street, Regent's Park, N.W.

TO ARTISTS in BLACK AND WHITE.—CLASSES are held for STUDY for the MODEL for Book and Newspaper Illustration. Terms for Technical Instruction moderate.—Address 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

STUDENT INTERPRETERS, Turkey, &c., leading to handsomely paid Consular Appointments, salary rising to 1000. Next Examination February 21st. Highest successes at this Examination recently obtained by our Students, including first, second, and third prizes. Most efficient staff in London. Fees half those of West End Colleges. THE CIVIL SERVICE MANUAL, post free 1s. 6d.—Apply Mr. BARNES, Civil Service and University College, 61 and 62, Chancery-lane. Boundaries reserved.

GOUIN'S SERIES METHOD (Oral and Written). Central School of Foreign Languages, Howard House, Arundel-street, Strand, W.C.

NEW BEGINNERS' CLASSES, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Russian, NOW FORMING. Also Hebrew and Greek shortly.—Apply SECRETARY.

HIGH-CLASS BOARDING SCHOOL for YOUNG LADIES (10-17). Villa with garden.—For prospectus and particulars apply to Miss MacKAY, Principal, Krumpholtzstrasse 11, Osnabrück, North Germany.

BRUSSELS.—A LADY WISHES strongly to RECOMMEND a COMFORTABLE HOME, with thorough Educational Advantages, for ENGLISH GIRLS.—For all particulars apply F. J. 2, Fowling-green, Mayfair.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE and TRAINING FARMS (Limited), Holford, Devon, Suffolk.

For the Training of those destined for Colonial Life, &c. The College owns and farms for the instruction of its students a fine British Estate of 1500 acres. Prospectus on application to the Manager, Exeter.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE, Cooper's Hill, Sussex.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 60 Students will be admitted in September, 1894. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the Manager, at the College.

TO AUTHORS.—The PRINTING and PUBLISHING of MAGAZINES, Works of History, Fiction, Travel, Verse, &c., are undertaken at reasonable rates; Estimates Free. All Accounts Settled by the Manager, 25, Victoria-street, Westminster.

PUBLISHING and LITERARY INVESTMENT AGENCY.—N. A. MONCRIEFF late Managing Clerk to Messrs. Messager & Co. in Paris, is now engaged in PUBLISHING PARTNERSHIPS and LITERARY INVESTMENTS to best Advantage. Correspondents on application. Confidential investigations for purchase. Valuations of Copyright for Transfer, Presses, and other purposes.—St. Paul's Chambers, 18, Long-street, E.C.

THE AUTHORS' BUREAU, Limited.—A Literary Agency and Press Agency. A Limited of Communications between Authors, Editors and Publishers. Advice upon revision and negotiation. MSS. Unpublished (by appointment only) free.—Address the Manager, 25, Victoria-street, Westminster.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

ANTHENS, ANTHENS, BRANLEUR-SUR-MER, HARRIS, BON-DEUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTON, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, &c.

And at the GALLIENI LIBRARY, 22, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

TO AUTHORS.—Mr. PERCY RUSSELL, Author of the 'Authors' Manual' (11th Edition, highly commended by the Right Hon. W. R. Gladstone, M.P.), is now prepared to REVISE MSS. and ADVISE on PLANT, CONSTRUCTION, STYLE, &c. Testimonials from leading men. Terms moderate.—Address: Trout House, Trout-road, Brighton-Hill, S.W.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY, Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGESS, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors carefully represented. Proposed Agreements, Manuscripts, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Twenty-five years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Production. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. Burgess, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKERELL-STREET, CHANCERY CROSS, E.C.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, Undertake Valuations for Private or Public, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.

12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, at 1d. per folio. Short-hand Notes taken. Manuscripts to Authors.—Miss O'LEARY, 252, South Lambeth-road, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING by a CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER. Authors' MSS., German, French, &c. Copied promptly. Authors' references given. 1s. per 1000 words, reduction long MSS.—Miss SKEW, 12, Welverton-gardens, Hampstead.

THE FLEET-STREET TYPE-WRITERS, 112, Fleet-street, E.C.

TYPE-WRITING and STENOGRAPHY in all its branches at moderate rates. MSS. carefully Copied. Terms 75 per cent. below the average sent on application. Tuition in both subjects. Open 9 a.m. till 9 p.m.—Messrs. W. & L. Broad-street House, Old Broad-street.

TYPE-WRITERS.—SECOND-HAND MACHINES, equal to new. FOR SALE, EXCHANGE, or HIRE. Machines sold by instalments on terms to suit purchasers. Use of Machine taught free to buyers or purchasers. Remingtons, Yods, Hammonds, (Mylar), Parlochs, Fitch, &c. from £1.10s. Copied with accuracy and despatch at lowest rates. Highest references. Illustrated Catalogue from—N. TAYLOR, Manager, National Type-Writer Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane, London (Holborn side).

Catalogues.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Alcott, &c. Books illustrated by G. & H. Colburn, 112, Fleet-street, &c. The largest and choicest collection offered for sale in the world. Catalogues issued weekly and sent post free on application. Books bought.—WALTER T. BRADSHAW, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms. CATALOGUES on application.

ELLIS & ELLY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books, NEW CATALOGUE (No. 76) of RECENT PUBLICATIONS, now ready, post free, 6s. 6d. stamps.

25, New Bond-street, London, W.

BOOK COLLECTORS' CATALOGUES FREE.— POETRY and DRAMA, 32 pp. PHOTOGRAPHY, 32 pp. THROLOGY, 24 pp. YODS (Books wanted, 1s. to 1s. each item. Bibliography and Prices Catalogue of Old Library Books, 120 pp., 1s. Edward Barker, 11 and 12, John Bright-street, Birmingham. The most expert book-binder extant. Prices made waste.

TURNER, RUSKIN, and other Masters.—Choice and Rare Engravings, Drawings, and Books. Speciality, Turner's 'Liber Studiorum' & NEW CATALOGUE now ready, price 6d., post free.—Wm. Wain, 2, Church-corner, Richmond, Surrey.

CATALOGUE of IRISH and MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, many of them scarce, just ready. Haines, Finnis & Co., Limited, Grafton-street, Dublin.

CATALOGUE of ANCIENT and MODERN BOOKS now ready, post free on application, includes Filkins's Dictionary of Writers (illustrated unique copy—Barnard's Scarce Book—Dickens's Christmas Books—First editions—Rare Collection of Printed Editions of Religious Authors—Books on America, Sport, Amateurs, &c. &c. in any quantity purchased for Cash. Sporting Books a Speciality.—W. BARNARD & SONS, 4, Broad-street-corner, Birmingham.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW, No. 355,

Published on January 17th.

Contents.

- | | |
|--|-------------------------------------|
| 1. ANARCHIST LITERATURE. | 7. The BIBLE in the BRITISH MUSEUM. |
| 2. HISTORY and FABLE. | 8. BETTERMENT and LOCAL TAXATION. |
| 3. CHURCH MISSIONS. | 9. "The CHILTERN HUNDREDS." |
| 4. OLD ENGLISH COOKERY. | 10. ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY. |
| 5. SOME THEORIES of the ICE AGE. | 11. The PERIL of PARLIAMENT. |
| 6. LATIN POETRY of the CÆSAREAN EPOCH. | |

FERGUSON'S HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURE IN ALL COUNTRIES.

With 1,000 Illustrations, 3 vols. medium 8vo. 2l. 2s.

NEW EDITION, REVISED.

ANCIENT AND MEDIÆVAL ARCHITECTURE.

Edited by R. PHENÉ SPIERS, F.S.A.

[Just out.]

8vo. 16s.

THE PSALTER OF 1539. A Landmark of English Literature.

COMPRISING THE TEXT, IN BLACK-LETTER TYPE.

Edited, with Notes, by JOHN EARLE, M.A.,
Professor of Anglo-Saxon in the University of Oxford.

[Just out.]

Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

THE CHRISTIAN ETHIC.

By WILLIAM KNIGHT, LL.D.,

Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of St. Andrews.

[Just out.]

With Portraits, 2 vols. 8vo. 35s.

SECOND EDITION OF THE LIFE AND CORRESPONDENCE OF ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY, late Dean of Westminster.

By ROWLAND E. PROTHERO, M.A.,

Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford.

With the Co-operation and Sanction of the Very Rev. O. G. BRADLEY, Dean of Westminster.

Crown 8vo. 9s.

SECOND EDITION OF

A MEMOIR OF H.R.H. THE LATE DUKE OF CLARENCE.

WRITTEN WITH THE SANCTION OF H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

By JAMES EDMUND VINCENT.

With Portraits and Illustrations by Wm. Simpson and others.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 24s.

SECOND EDITION of the PAMIRS: being a Narrative of a

Year's Expedition on Horseback and on Foot through Kashmir, Western Tibet, Chinese Tartary, and Russian Central Asia. By the EARL OF DUNMORE. With Maps and Illustrations taken by the Author on the spot.

With Portraits, crown 8vo. 6s.

SECOND EDITION of the LETTERS of LADY BURGHES

(afterwards Countess of Westmorland), from Germany and France during the Campaign of 1813-14. Edited by her Daughter, Lady ROSE WHIGALL.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

A SKETCH of the LIFE of GEORGIANA, LADY de ROS.

With some Reminiscences of her Family and Friends, including the Duke of Wellington. By her Daughter, the Hon. Mrs. J. R. SWINSTON. With Portraits and Illustrations. (Second Edition ready shortly.)

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LIFE in PARLIAMENT: a Record of the Daily Experiences of a Member of the House of Commons. From 1856 to 1893 Inclusive. By Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart., M.P., G.O.S.I. D.C.L. LL.D., &c.

"An interesting series of reminiscences of a striking epoch of parliamentary history, that cannot fail to be exceedingly attractive, not merely to those who were themselves in the thick of the fight, but equally to those outside the pale of parliamentary life."—St. James's Gazette.

With Portraits, crown 8vo. 9s.

JENNY LIND the ARTIST. New and Abridged Edition of the Memoir of Madame Jenny Lind-Goldschmidt. 1850-51. From MSS. and Documents Collected by Mr. GOLD-SCHMIDT. By H. SCOTT HOLLAND, Canon of St. Paul's Cathedral, and W. S. ROCKSTEDT, Author of 'The Life of Mendelssohn.'

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

A HANDBOOK ON THE LABOUR QUESTION.

LABOUR

AND THE

POPULAR WELFARE.

BY

W. H. MALLOCK,

Author of 'Is Life Worth Living?'
'Social Equality,' &c.

Crown 8vo. price 6s.

"Students who are used to associate economics with a laborious style will be agreeably surprised at the lucidity and simplicity of Mr. Mallock's exposition, the brilliance of his manner, and the aptitude of his illustrations."—Times.

"The book is one of the most valuable contributions that have been offered to the discussion of what has now become the problem of social problems.... Regarded as a popularly-written exposure of current economic errors and fallacies, it is without an equal in both comprehensiveness and excellence."—Liberty Review.

"In this work Mr. Mallock combats militant Collectivism with every weapon left in the armoury of Individualism.... He outlines with really remarkable lucidity the parts respectively played in production by Land, Fixed Capital (plant), Circulating or Wage Capital, Labour, and Ability."

Daily Chronicle.

"'Labour and the Popular Welfare'.... is an invitation to the labourer and to the friend of labour to leave off dreaming Socialist dreams that never have been, and never can be realized, and to study, instead, the forces that are at work in producing national progress and wealth."—Scotsman.

"An important and carefully-reasoned treatise. It deserves careful study."

Daily Telegraph.

"'Labour and the Popular Welfare' should be studied by the Radicals.... They will find wisdom in it, and much food for reflection."

Echo.

"No one can resist a tribute of admiration to Mr. Mallock for his luminous exposition, and for the exceeding brilliance of his style."

Weekly Sun.

"Perceiving no reason why the salient facts which underlie the social problems of to-day might not be made for the benefit of 'the general reader' 'as stimulating and fresh as any novel or book of travels,' Mr. Mallock has furnished forth a revised version of Political Economy. His work justifies his estimate of how rousing such an entertainment should be."—Saturday Review.

ADAM & CHARLES BLACK,
Soho-square, London, W.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW NOVELS.

A SECOND EDITION of JUSTIN MCCARTHY'S New Novel, 'RED DIAMONDS,' is now ready, in 3 vols., at every Library.

"The story is capital reading, for we are hurried along without having much time to think."—Saturday Review.

"A very refreshing novel, light, full of 'go,' with a good plot."—Gleaner.

Mrs. HUNGERFORD'S New Novel, 'THE RED-HOUSE MYSTERY,' is now ready, in 2 vols., at all Libraries.

JOHN HILL'S New Novel, 'The COMMON ANCESTOR,' will be ready, in 3 vols., at every Library, on January 23.

OTHER NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

VASHTI and ESTHER: a Story of Society To-day By the Author of 'Della's' Letters in the World. 2 vols.

"Its bright vivacity, shrewd common sense, and real knowledge of life, place it far above the average novel. It is decidedly a book to be read, enjoyed, and talked about."—Standard.

OUTLAW and LAWMAKER. By Mrs. CAMPBELL FRANK. Author of 'The Romance of a Nation.' 2 vols.

"A novel of high literary quality, remarkable power, and great interest."—Daily Telegraph.

THE BURDEN of ISABEL. By J. MACLAREN CORRIAN. Author of 'The Red Sultan.' 2 vols.

"Will merit all the success it will certainly achieve."—Daily Chronicle.

TO HIS OWN MASTER. By ALAN ST. AUBYN. Author of 'A Yellow of Trinity.' 2 vols.

"Undoubtedly a readable and entertaining novel."—Advertiser.

TWO OFFENDERS. By OUIDA. Author of 'Under Two Flags,' &c. Small 6s. cloth extra, 6s.

"Nothing that Ouida ever wrote is comparable to her best recent stories, and here, as usual, we are conscious of a keen insight, sympathy, and grasp of the point of view which is in the best sense imaginative. It would not be easy to find a story more moving than that of Abeldino in this story."—Westminster Review.

MY DEAD SELF. By WILLIAM JAMESON. Post 8vo. Illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

A FAIR COLONIST. By ERNEST GLANVILLE. Author of 'The Last Retreat,' &c. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

The CONSTABLE of ST. NICHOLAS. By EDWIN LESTER ARNOLD. Author of 'Firm the Foundation.' With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"The story is extremely well told, equally dramatic in its construction and its mise en scène. It is a book which one can read at a sitting, and in which the interest is strongly maintained from the first page to the last."—Irish Telegraph.

The MAKING of a NOVELIST. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY. Author of 'Joseph's Quest.' With a Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

"To talk of art and not be offensive," says Mr. Murray in the Preface to this pleasant little book, "demands an art which is not always given to man. Nothing could be truer, but it is almost equally true that Mr. Murray possesses the art in question."—Advertiser.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

The DAYS of HIS VANITY: a

Passage in the Life of a Young Man. By STURGEY GRAY. "We have not read such an amusing book as this for a long time."—Black and White.

The LUCK of GERARD RIDGELEY.

A Tale of the Zulu Border. By HENRY MATTUPPO. Author of 'The Gun Hammer,' &c.

"A rattling tale of adventure. The wild life of the veldt is brought before us with admirable skill by one who knows his Africa."—Advertiser.

"TO LET." By B. M. CROKER. Author of 'Diana Harrington.'

"Well-told stories. All interesting and brightly written."—World.

The SCALLYWAG. By GRANT ALLEN. Author of 'The Taste of Them,' &c. With a Frontispiece.

"The Scallywag" is an extremely amusing book. — Gleaner.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

BLACKWOOD'S EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

This day is published.
AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION,
JOHNSTON'S ELEMENTS

OF AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY.

From the Edition of Sir C. A. CAMERON, M.D. F.R.C.S. Revised and to great part rewritten by C. M. ALKMAN, M.A. B.Sc., Professor of Chemistry, Glasgow Veterinary College, &c. Sixteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. 8s. 6d.

Immediately will be published,

MANURES

AND THE PRINCIPLES OF MANURING.

By C. M. ALKMAN, M.A. B.Sc., &c. Professor of Chemistry, Glasgow Veterinary College; Examiner in Chemistry, University of Glasgow, &c.; Author of 'Fertilizing Manures,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

This day is published,

COMMENTARIES ON THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND.

From the Earliest Times to 1885. By MONTAGU BURROWS, B.Sc. Professor of Modern History in the University of Oxford, Captain R.N., F.R.S., &c.; 'Officier de l'Instruction Publique,' France. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

This day is published,

NEW EDITION, REWRITTEN AND ENLARGED, TEXT-BOOK OF ZOOLOGY.

For Junior Students. By HENRY ALLESTREE NICHOLSON, M.D. D.Sc., &c. Regius Professor of Natural History in Aberdeen University. Fifth Edition. With numerous Engravings. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

By the SAME AUTHOR.

MANUAL of ZOOLOGY. Seventh Edition, Rewritten and Enlarged. Post 8vo. with Engravings, 18s.

INTRODUCTORY TEXT-BOOK of ZOOLOGY. Sixth Edition. With Engravings. Crown 8vo. 2s.

OUTLINES of NATURAL HISTORY for BEGINNERS. Third Edition. 1s. 6d.

By Professor MINTO.

MANUAL of ENGLISH PROSE LITERATURE. Third Edition. 1s. 6d.

CHARACTERISTICS of ENGLISH POETS. New Edition. 1s. 6d.

PLAIN PRINCIPLES of PROSE COMPOSITION. Crown 8vo. 1s. 6d.

By Rev. Dr. MACKAY.

MANUAL of GEOGRAPHY. Eleventh Thousand. 1s. 6d.

ELEMENTS of GEOGRAPHY. Fifty-fifth Thousand, Revised. 2s.

INTERMEDIATE GEOGRAPHY. Seventh Edition. 2s.

OUTLINES of GEOGRAPHY. One Hundred and Ninety-first Thousand, Revised to date. 1s.

By Dr. PAGE.

INTRODUCTORY PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY. Twelfth Edition, Revised and Reorganized by Professor LAFWORTH. 1s. 6d.

ADVANCED TEXT-BOOK of PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY. With Engravings. Revised and Enlarged by the SAME. Third Edition. 6s.

INTRODUCTORY TEXT-BOOK of GEOLOGY. With Engravings. Twelfth Edition, Revised and almost entirely rewritten by the SAME. 3s. 6d.

ADVANCED TEXT-BOOK of GEOLOGY. Ninth Edition, Revised and Enlarged, with Glossary. 7s. 6d.

STORMONT'S DICTIONARY of the ENGLISH LANGUAGE. Etymological and Pronouncing. The Pronunciation Revised by the Rev. F. H. PHILLIPS, M.A. College Edition, crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. School Edition, 2s.

ENGLISH PROSE COMPOSITION. By Dr. CURRIE. Fifty-fourth Thousand. 1s. 6d.

ADITUS FACILIORES: an Easy Latin Compendium. By Dr. POTTS and Rev. C. DARNELL, M.A. Tenth Edition. 3s. 6d.

ADITUS FACILIORES GRAECI: an Easy Greek Compendium. By the SAME AUTHORS. Fifth Edition. 3s.

PRACTICAL REMINISCENCES of the LATIN LANGUAGE. By JOHN BOSS, M.A. Third Edition. 1s. 6d.

JOHNSTON'S CATECHISM of AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY. From the Edition of Sir C. A. CAMERON. New Edition, Revised and entirely rewritten by C. M. ALKMAN. With Engravings. 1s.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO'S PUBLICATIONS.

In large crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d. cloth extra,
HISTORY of ENGLAND and the BRITISH EMPIRE: a Record of Events, Political, Constitutional, Naval, Military, and Literary, from B.C. 55 to A.D. 1890. By EDGAR SANDERSON, M.A. With Genealogical Tables, Index, and 16 Maps printed in Colours.

"No department has been left unnoticed, and the national progress has been depicted in forcible and concise language. Mr. Sanderson's history will undoubtedly be highly appreciated, not only for the purpose of study, but also for reference."—Daily Telegraph.

"An excellent book, which should find its place in the collections of every student or thinking intelligent men."—Schoolman.

Now ready, the Tenth Thousand, in demy 8vo. cloth gilt, price 7s. 6d.

DICTIONARY of QUOTATIONS, from Ancient and Modern, English and Foreign Sources. Containing 30,000 Quotations, and a most Complete Index. Selected and Compiled by the Rev. JAMES WOOD, Editor of 'Nuttall's Standard Dictionary.'

"Mr. Wood deserves our thanks not only for an immensely enlarged collection, but for the catholic spirit he displays in exploiting areas that have been sparingly gleaned by his predecessors."—Daily Chronicle.

"There is a surprising freshness in the volume, and the work is one which no writer will care to be without after he becomes aware of its permanent worth."

Liverpool Mercury.

Now ready, the Tenth Thousand, in crown 8vo. cloth gilt, price 6s.

The ONE I KNEW the BEST of ALL. By FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT. Author of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,' &c. With 20 Illustrations by Reginald Birch.

"With its blending of simple pathos and childish humour, with the innumerable delicately sympathetic touches, with the quaint terms of expression, and the genial reflection of the fancy of a gifted child, the book will please many people more than 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.'"—Times.

"This is not a book for Christmas only, but for all time. It is written in Mrs. Burnett's most charming style. The book is unique, and it ought to be allowed to remain so."—Lady's Pictorial.

Third Edition (Fourteenth Thousand) now ready. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, gilt edges, price 3s. 6d.

ONE in CHARITY. By Silas K. HOCKING, F.R.H.S., Author of 'Where Duty Lies,' 'Real Grit,' &c. With Original Illustrations by Gordon Browne.

"Full of stirring incident, and strong, clearly-drawn characterization; full, too, of a wholesome, manly sentiment, which at once commands the sympathy of the reader."—Court Circular.

"A delightful example of this writer's power. The narrative is vigorous, with much wholesome instruction."

Leeds Mercury.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO.
London and New York.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO.'S NEW AND RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

ARNOLD, Walter T.—A MODERN XANTHIPPE	3 6	KEBBEL, T. E.—The AGRICULTURAL LABOURER. (Social Science Series)	2 6
AVELING, Edw., D.Sc.—INTRODUCTION to BOTANY. Illustrated	6 0	— MY FIRST GROUSE. Plates	1 0
BAX, E. Belfort.—PROBLEMS of REALITY	2 0	LANE, Geoffrey.—A SONG for the SEASON, and other Poems	2 6
BELLARS, Rev. Wm.—IN the KING'S PRESENCE: Extracts from 'Before the Throne'	1 0	LANGE, Prof. F.—GERMAN CHRONICLES of WAR. Maps. (School Authors)	3 6
BEVAN, G. PHILLIPS, F.G.S.—HOME GEOGRAPHY of ENGLAND and WALES. 12 Maps	4 6	LILLIE, Arthur.—BUDDHIST INFLUENCE on PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY	2 6
BERDOE, Edw., M.R.C.S.—ORIGIN and GROWTH of the HEALING ART	12 6	— MODERN MYSTICS and MODERN MAGIC	6 0
BONAR, Jas., LL.D.—PHILOSOPHY and POLITICAL ECONOMY in their HISTORICAL RELATIONS. (Library of Philosophy)	10 6	MALET, LUCAS.—The WAGES of SIN. New Stereotyped Edition	6 0
BOSANQUET, Bernard, M.A., LL.D.—HISTORY of AESTHETIC. (Library of Philosophy)	10 6	MAYET, Prof. L.—AGRICULTURAL INSURANCE and SAVINGS BANKS	10 6
— CIVILIZATION of CHRISTENDOM. (Ethical Library)	4 6	MELLOR, C.—The DEATH PENALTY: a Modern Story	2 0
BOWLEY, A. L., B.A.—ENGLAND'S FOREIGN TRADE in NINETEENTH CENTURY. (Social Science Series)	2 6	MIGULA, Dr. W.—PRACTICAL BACTERIOLOGY. Illustrated, (Introd. Science Text-Books)	6 0
BRADLEY, F. H., M.A.—APPEARANCE and REALITY. (Library of Philosophy)	10 6	MOELLER, Prof. W.—HISTORY of the CHRISTIAN CHURCH. 2 vols. each	15 0
BRENTANO, Prof. L.—HOURS and WAGES of LABOUR. (Social Science Series)	2 6	MOLINARI, G. DE.—RELIGION. (Philosophy at Home Series)	2 6
BRYANT, Sophie, D.Sc.—STUDIES in CHARACTER. (Ethical Library)	4 6	MORRIS (Wm.) and BAX (E. B.).—SOCIALISM: its Growth and Outcome. 6s.; Large Paper	15 0
CAMPBELL, H. J., M.D.—ELEMENTARY BIOLOGY. Illustrated. (Introd. Science Text-Books)	6 0	OGER, Prof. V.—SELECT FRENCH READINGS. (School Authors)	1 6
CHAMIER, D.—MANUAL of ROMAN LAW	6 0	OSTROGORSKI, M.—RIGHTS of WOMEN. (Social Science Series)	2 6
CHAPMAN, Rev. George: NARRATIVE of a DEVOTED LIFE. Plates	4 6	OWEN, Rev. John.—The SKEPTICS of the ITALIAN RENAISSANCE	10 6
CICERO.—PRO MILONE: PRO LEGE MANILIA. (School Authors) Each	1 6	— The SKEPTICS of the FRENCH RENAISSANCE	10 6
CLARKE, H. BUTLER, M.A.—HISTORY of SPANISH LITERATURE	6 0	PALMBERG and NEWSHOLME, Drs.—PUBLIC HEALTH and its APPLICATION. Illustrated	21 0
CLARKE, Marcus.—TWIXT SHADOW and SHINE	2 6	PARALLEL GRAMMAR SERIES. Edited by Prof. E. A. SONNENSCHN, M.A. (Oxon.). Full List on application.
COMPAYRE, Prof. GABRIEL.—HISTORY of PEDAGOGY. Second Edition	6 0	PARSONS, Harold.—HANDBOOK to WESTERN AUSTRALIA and its GOLDFIELDS	1 0
DADSON, A. J.—EVOLUTION and RELIGION	10 6	PINKERTON, Thos.—BLIZZARD, and Another Phantasy	2 6
DANTE'S INFERNO. Translated by G. MUSGRAVE	2 6	"PLAIN TORY, A."—JUSTICE for ENGLAND: how to Fight Socialism	1 0
DE BAYE, Baron.—INDUSTRIAL ARTS of the ANGLO-SAXONS. Steel Plates	21 0	— TORY DEMOCRACY and CONSERVATIVE POLICY	2 6
DEFRIES, E. P.—A BROWNING PRIMER. Fourth Edition	1 0	PLAUTUS.—COMEDIES. Translated by E. H. SUGDEN, B.A. B.Sc. Vol. I.	6 0
DEMARR, JAS.—ADVENTURES in AUSTRALIA FIFTY YEARS AGO. Plates	6 0	PUBLIC SCHOOLS YEAR BOOK.—Fifth Year of Issue. Fifty-nine Schools, with Nine Appendices	2 6
DENSMORE, E., M.D.—HOW NATURE CURES	7 6	REIN, Prof. W.—OUTLINES of PEDAGOGICS	2 6
ELLIS, T. Mullett.—REVERIES of WORLD HISTORY	1 0	REINICH, Robert.—SHORT STORIES. Illustrated. (School Authors)	2 0
— The BEAUTY of BOSCASTLE	6 0	RELIGIOUS SYSTEMS of the WORLD. Third Edition	10 6
EPPS, Wm.—LAND SYSTEMS of AUSTRALIA. (Social Science Series)	2 6	RICHTER, EUGENE.—PICTURES of the SOCIALISTIC FUTURE	3 6
ERDMANN, Dr. J. E.—HISTORY of PHILOSOPHY. 3 vols. Third Edition	42 0	RIEHL, W. H.—Die VIERZEHN NOTHELFER. (School Authors.)	1 6
ERNST, Wm.—LIFE of LORD CHESTERFIELD. Engraved Portraits	10 6	RITCHIE, D. G., M.A.—DARWIN and HEGEL, and other Studies	7 6
ESQUEMELING, John.—The BUCCANEERS of AMERICA. Plates, &c.	15 0	SALT, H. S.—RICHARD JEFFERIES: a Study. (Dilettante Library) 2s. 6d.; Large Paper	10 6
EVANS, Elizab. E.—STORY of LOUIS, XVII. Engraved Portraits	10 6	SCHAFFLE, Dr. A.—LABOUR PROTECTION. (Social Science Series)	2 6
EVERITT, Graham.—HISTORY of ENGLISH CARICATURISTS. Illustrated	10 6	SCHULZE-GAVERNITZ, Prof.—SOCIAL PEACE. (Social Science Series, double vol.)	3 6
FLETCHER, A. E. [ed.]—SONNENSCHN'S CYCLOPEDIA of EDUCATION. Third Edition	7 6	SEYFFERT, Prof. O.—DICTIONARY of CLASSICAL ANTIQUITIES. Second Edition	21 0
GARNIER, B. M.—HISTORY of the ENGLISH LANDED INTEREST. 3 vols.	21 0	SHAKESPEARE.—RECITATIONS. Edited by JOHN MILLARD	2 0
HATCH, F. H., F.G.S.—TEXT-BOOK of PETROLOGY. Illustrated	7 6	SICHEL, EDITH.—WORTHINGTON JUNIOR: a Story of Contrasts. 3 vols.	31 6
HASCHKE, Prof. B.—INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of the AMPHIOXUS. Plates	6 0	SMITH, Dr. G. VANCE.—The BIBLE and its THEOLOGY	5 0
HAVILAND, A., M.R.C.S.—GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION of DISEASE. Maps	15 0	SOAMES, L.—PHONETIC METHOD. Readers 1 and 2, each 4s.; 3	0 8
HAZLITT, W. C.—COINAGE of the EUROPEAN CONTINENT. Fully Illustrated	21 0	SONNENSCHN, A.—GERMAN GRAMMATICAL READER. Preface by H. W. EVE, M.A.	3 6
HERBERT, J. F.—The SCIENCE of EDUCATION. Portrait	4 6	STORY, A. T.—WILLIAM BLAKE. (Dilettante Library) 2s. 6d.; Large Paper	10 6
HERTWIG, Prof. O.—EMBRYOLOGY of MAN and MAMMALS. Illustrated	21 0	STRAHAN, J. A. K., M.D.—SUICIDE and INSANITY	5 0
HOLYOAKE, G. J.—HISTORY of the ROCHDALE PIONEERS. (Social Science Series)	2 6	STRASBURGER and HILLHOUSE, Profs.—PRACTICAL BOTANY. Third Edition. Illustrated	9 0
HOPPS, Rev. J. Page.—DEATH a DELUSION	1 0	SWANN, H. K.—The BIRDS of LONDON	2 0
HULME, Prof. F. E., F.S.A.—BIRTH and DEVELOPMENT of ORNAMENT. Illustrated	7 6	THEAL, G. McCALL.—HISTORY of SOUTH AFRICA, Vol. IV. (1834-48)	15 0
JERROLD, Walter.—OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. (Dilettante Library)	2 6	TUTT, J. W.—RANDOM RECOLLECTIONS of WOODLAND, FERN, and HILL	3 6
KAYSER, Prof.—TEXT-BOOK of COMPARATIVE GEOLOGY. Illustrated	18 0	VINES, Prof. S. H., D.Sc. F.L.S.—The STUDENT'S BOTANY. Part I. Illustrated	7 6
		WAWN, Capt. W.—The SOUTH SEA ISLANDERS. Maps and Illustrations	18 0
		WILLIAMS, E. Aldred.—FIRST BOOK of FRACTIONS	1 0
		WILSON, G. R., M.D. DRUNKENNESS. (Social Science Series)	2 6
		WORTHINGTON, LOCKE, F.R.I.B.A.—DWELLINGS of the POOR. (Social Science Series)	2 6
		ZIEHEN, Dr. T.—PHYSIOLOGICAL PSYCHOLOGY. Illustrated. (Introd. Science Text-Books)	6 0

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO. Paternoster-square, London.

MESSRS. BELL'S EDUCATIONAL BOOKS

FOR THE EXAMINATIONS OF 1894-5.

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE LOCAL EXAMINATIONS,

JUNIOR AND SENIOR, DECEMBER, 1894.

- Cæsar's Seventh Campaign in Gaul. B.C. 52. De Bello Gallico, Lib. VII. Edited, with Notes, Racemæus, and Tables of Idioms, by Rev. W. COOK WORTHY COMPTON, M.A. Head Master of Dover College. With Illustrations from Sketches by E. T. Compton. Maps and Plans. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 4s.
- "A really admirable class-book."—Spectator
- "One of the most original and interesting books which have been published in late years as aids to the study of classical literature." I think it gives the student a new idea of the way in which a classical book may be made a living reality."—Rev. J. K. Wilson, Harrow.
- Cicero.—De Senectute. Edited by GEORGE LONG, M.A. 1s. 6d.
- Horace.—Odes. Edited by A. J. MACLEANE, M.A. 2s.
- Virgil.—Æneid. Book IX. Conington's Edition, Abridged, with Notes at end or foot of page. 1s. 6d.
- Euripides.—Hecuba. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by E. P. COLERIDGE. 1s.
- Plato.—The Apology of Socrates and Crito. Edited by WILHELM WAGNER, Ph.D. 2s. 6d.
- Plato.—Euthyphro. Edited by O. H. WELLS, M.A. 3s.
- Xenophon.—Anabasis. Macmichael's Edition, Revised by J. E. MELHUISE. With Life, Introduction, and Maps. BOOK IV. 1s. 6d. This may be had with the Notes at end or at foot of page.
- Notes on Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream. With Introduction, Summary, Notes (Psychological and Explanatory), Prosody, Grammatical Preliminaries, &c. By T. DUFF BARNETT, B.A. London. Specially adapted for the Local and Preliminary Exams. 1s.
- Milton's Paradise Lost. Books I. and II. Edited by C. P. MASON, B.A. F.C.P. 1s. each.
- Gutskow's Zopf und Schwert. Edited by F. LAXER, Ph.D. 2s. 6d.

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE HIGHER LOCAL EXAMINATIONS.

JUNE, 1894.

- Horace.—Satires and Epistles. Edited by A. J. MACLEANE, M.A. 1s.
- Virgil.—Æneid. Book XI. Conington's Edition, Abridged. 1s. 6d.
- Aristophanes.—Nubes. Edited by H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D. 1s. 6d.
- Plato.—Protagoras. Edited by W. WAYTE, M.A. 4s. 6d.
- Sophocles.—Electra. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by E. P. COLERIDGE. 1s.
- Notes on Shakespeare's Macbeth and The Merchant of Venice. By T. DUFF BARNETT, B.A. Lond. 1s. each.
- Burke's Reflections on the French Revolution. Sewed, 1s.
- Ten Brink's History of English Literature. Vol. I. EARLY ENGLISH LITERATURE to WYCLIF. Translated by HORACE M. KENNEDY. 2s. 6d.
- Vol. II. WYCLIF, CHAUCER, EARLIEST DRAMA, RENAISSANCE. Translated by W. CLARKE ROBINSON, Ph.D. Small post 8vo. 2s. 6d.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE SCHOOLS EXAMINATION BOARD.

HIGHER CERTIFICATE EXAMINATION, JULY, 1894.

- Horace. Edited by A. J. MACLEANE, M.A. 3s. 6d.
- Plautus.—Trinummus. Edited by W. WAGNER, Ph.D. 4s. 6d.
- Virgil.—Æneid. Conington's Edition, Abridged. BOOKS VII. and VIII. and BOOKS IX. and X., with Notes at foot of page, 1s. 6d. each. BOOK VII., BOOK VIII., and BOOK IX., with Notes at end, 1s. 6d. each.
- Aristophanes.—Nubes. Edited by H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D. 1s. 6d.
- Aristophanes.—Plutus. Edited by H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D. 2s.
- Euripides.—Hecuba. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by E. P. COLERIDGE. 1s.
- Euripides.—Bacchæ. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by E. P. COLERIDGE. 1s.
- Sophocles.—Oedipus Tyrannus. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by E. P. COLERIDGE. 1s.
- Sophocles.—Antigone. Edited by F. A. PALEY, LL.D. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by E. P. COLERIDGE. 1s.
- Cornille.—Horace. Edited by F. E. A. GASC. 6d.
- Molière.—Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Edited by F. E. A. GASC. 6d.
- Molière.—Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Edited by F. E. A. GASC. 6d.
- Mignet.—History of the French Revolution. Translated. 3s. 6d.
- Goethe.—Iphigenia. Translated by ANNA SWANWICK. 3s. 6d.
- Hauff.—The Caravan. Translated by Professor S. MENDEL. 1s.
- Lessing.—Nathan the Wise. Translated. 1s.
- Schiller.—Wilhelm Tell. Translated by Sir THEODORE MARTIN, K.C. LL.D. 3s. 6d.
- Notes on Shakespeare's King John. Edited by T. DUFF BARNETT, B.A. Lond. 1s.

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD LOCAL EXAMINATIONS. JULY, 1894.

- Cæsar.—De Bello Gallico. Edited by GEORGE LONG, M.A. BOOKS IV. and V. 1s. 6d. BOOKS VI. and VII. 1s. 6d. Complete, 4s.
- Cicero.—De Senectute. Edited by GEORGE LONG, M.A. 1s. 6d.
- Horace.—Odes. Edited by A. J. MACLEANE, M.A. 2s.
- Virgil.—Æneid. Book IX. Conington's Edition, Abridged. 1s. 6d.
- Æschylus.—Septem Contra Thebas. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d.
- Euripides.—Alceste. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by E. P. COLERIDGE. 1s.
- Xenophon's Anabasis. Macmichael's Edition, Revised by J. E. MELHUISE. M.A. BOOKS II. and III. with Life, Introduction, and Maps. 1s. 6d.
- Notes on Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar. By T. DUFF BARNETT, B.A. Lond. 1s. Also with the Text, cloth, 7s.
- Hauff's Caravan. Translated by S. MENDEL. 1s.

LONDON UNIVERSITY EXAMINATIONS.

MATRICULATION AND DEGREES IN ARTS, 1894-5.

MATRICULATION. JUNE, 1894.

- Salust.—Catiline. Edited by GEORGE LONG, M.A. Revised by J. G. FRASER, M.A. 2s.
- JANUARY, 1895.
- Virgil.—Æneid. Conington's Edition, Abridged. Books III. and IV., 1s. 6d. Books V. and VI., 1s. 6d.

JUNE, 1895.

- Cæsar.—De Bello Gallico. Book VII. Edited, with Notes, Racemæus, and Tables of Idioms, by Rev. W. COOK WORTHY COMPTON, M.A. Head Master of Dover College. With Illustrations from Sketches made on the spots represented, and Drawings of the Fortifications, &c. Maps and Plans. Crown 8vo. 4s.

INTERMEDIATE.

JULY, 1894.

- Horace.—Epistles. Edited by A. J. MACLEANE, M.A. 2s.
- Notes on King Henry V. By T. DUFF BARNETT, B.A. Lond. 1s.

JULY, 1895.

- Horace.—Satires. Edited by A. J. MACLEANE, M.A. 2s.
- Livy.—Book III. Prendeville's Edition, Revised by J. H. FREEMAN, M.A. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by J. H. FREEMAN, M.A. 1s.
- Sophocles.—Electra. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by E. P. COLERIDGE. 1s.
- Milton's Paradise Regained. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by K. DEIGHTON. 7s. 6d.

B.A. OCTOBER, 1894.

- Terence.—Phormio. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d.
- Aristophanes.—Vespæ. Edited by H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D. 2s.
- Demosthenes.—Adv. Leptinem. Edited by R. W. BRATTON, M.A. 2s. 6d.

OCTOBER, 1895.

- Juvenal. Edited by HERMANN PRION. 2s. 6d.
- Æschylus.—Eumenides. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d.

COLLEGE OF PRECEPTORS.

PUPILS' CERTIFICATE EXAMINATIONS, JUNE AND DECEMBER, 1894.

- Cæsar. Edited by GEORGE LONG, M.A. Books IV. and V., 1s. 6d. Books VI. and VII., 1s. 6d.
- Cæsar, Book VII. Edited by the Rev. W. C. COMPTON, M.A. 4s.
- Cicero.—De Senectute. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d.
- Horace.—Odes. Edited by A. J. MACLEANE, M.A. 2s.
- Virgil.—Æneid, Book IX. Conington's Edition, Abridged. 1s. 6d.
- Æschylus.—Septem Contra Thebas. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d.
- Euripides.—Hecuba. Edited by F. A. PALEY, M.A. LL.D. 1s. 6d. Literal Translation by E. P. COLERIDGE. 1s.
- Xenophon.—Anabasis. Macmichael's Edition. Revised by J. E. MELHUISE. Books II. and III., 1s. 6d. Books IV. and V., 1s. 6d.
- Notes on Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream and Julius Cæsar. By T. DUFF BARNETT, B.A. Lond. 1s. each.
- Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by F. HOLDEN. 2s. 6d.
- Milton's Paradise Lost, Books I. and II. Edited by C. P. MASON, B.A. F.C.P. 1s. each.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS. Cambridge: DEIGHTON, BELL & CO.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S LIST.

RIDING RECOLLECTIONS AND TURF STORIES.

By HENRY CUSTANCE. With numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 15s.

The LARGE-PAPER EDITION, 21s. net, is now out of Print.

The First Edition of this work having been exhausted on the day of publication, a SECOND EDITION is now ready at all Libraries and Booksellers'.

THIRD THOUSAND, NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES. SEVENTY YEARS OF IRISH LIFE.

By W. R. LE FANU. With Portraits. 8vo. 16s.

EDUCATIONAL BOOKS FOR SCHOOLS.

THE BEST ARITHMETIC FOR BOYS ENTERING BUSINESS OR COMMERCE.

The MERCANTILE ARITHMETIC. By Dr. R. Wormell, Head Master of the Central Foundation Schools of London. New issue in Paris, as follows:—

The MERCANTILE ARITHMETIC. Part I., strongly bound, 2s.

The MERCANTILE ARITHMETIC. Part II., strongly bound, 2s.

The MERCANTILE ARITHMETIC. Complete, 2s. 6d.; with Answers, 4s. Answers separately, 1s.

Dr. OULTON, George Watson's Coll., Edinburgh:—"Admirably adapted for preparing pupils for mercantile life."

A CHEAP ELEMENTARY ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

An INTRODUCTION TO ENGLISH GRAMMAR and ANALYSIS. By FRANCIS BOND, M.A., formerly Head Master of the Hull and West Riding College. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

"It makes an excellent school grammar."—Schoolman.

MATHEMATICS AND SCIENCE.

An ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK of MECHANICS. By Dr. WORMELL. Specially adapted for the Science and Art Department and other Examinations. Fully Illustrated. Crown 8vo. 3s. net. A Volume of Questions for Teachers and Private Students. 2s. net.

LECTURES on SOUND, HEAT, and LIGHT. By Dr. WORMELL. Popular Courses of Instruction for Junior Students and Evening Classes. Each in 1 vol., with numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d. each.

The STANDARD COURSE of CHEMISTRY. By R. J. COX, Head Master of the Birmingham Technical School. Adopted by the School Boards for London, Edinburgh, &c.

Parts I.-IV. cloth, price 7d. each. Part V. cloth, price 1s. Complete in 1 vol., 2s. 6d. net. Each Part is fully illustrated, and forms a simple, well-graded, and interesting course of study.

WILLIAMS and LASCELLES' INTRODUCTION TO CHEMICAL SCIENCE. Second English Edition. Edited by R. F. LASCELLES, M.A., Assistant Master at Harrow School. With 30 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

An INTRODUCTION TO PHYSICAL SCIENCE. By A. F. GAGE, Instructor in Physics in the English High School, Boston, Mass. With numerous Illustrations, and a Chart of Colours and Spectra. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.

A GENERAL ASTRONOMY. By CHARLES A. YOUNG, Professor of Astronomy in the College of New Jersey, Associate of the Royal Astronomical Society, Author of 'The Sun,' &c. In 1 vol., 400 pp. With 250 Illustrations, and supplemented with the necessary Tables. Royal 8vo. half-morocco, 17s. 6d.

THE ELEMENTS of ASTRONOMY, with a URANOGRAPHY. By Professor CHARLES A. YOUNG. Author of 'A General Astronomy,' &c. With numerous Illustrations and 4 Star Maps. Crown 8vo. half-morocco, 7s. 6d.

A COURSE of BENCH-WORK in WOOD. A Handbook for Teachers and Pupils in Technical Schools and Manual Training Classes. By W. F. M. GUNN. With over 200 Illustrations. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

MODERN LANGUAGES.

A FIRST FRENCH READER. By W. J. GREENSTREET, M.A. Progressive Lessons for Translation, with Corresponding Exercises in Composition based on the French Lessons. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

FRENCH REVOLUTION READING. Edited by A. JAMSON SMITH, M.A., Head Master of King Edward's School, Camp-hill, Birmingham, and C. M. DEE, M.A., Assistant Master at the Oratory School. Square 8vo. cloth, 2s. net.

MODERN FRENCH READINGS. Edited, with Notes and Helps for Composition, by A. J. SMITH, M.A., Head Master of King Edward's School, Camp-hill, Birmingham. 8vo. cloth, with red edges, 3s.

BALZAC.—UNE TÉNÉBREUSE AFFAIRE. Edited for Schools by JAMES BOIELLE, M.A. (Univ. Coll.), Officer d'Académie, Senior French Master at Dulwich College, Assistant-Examiner in the University of London, &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

DR. MORRISON'S GEOGRAPHIES.

Entirely New Editions of these well-known works are now ready. Revised and largely Rewritten by W. L. CARRIE, M.A., Assistant Master at George Watson's College, Edinburgh.

The HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The SHILLING GEOGRAPHY. Small 8vo. cloth, 1s.

A COMPLETE INTRODUCTORY MANUAL FOR SCHOOLS.

A FIRST FRENCH COURSE. By James Boielle, Senior French Master at Dulwich College, &c. Cloth, 1s. 6d.

Mr. Boielle's long experience in teaching has enabled him to produce exactly the book required for teaching French to English boys on a sound and intelligent basis.

STAHL.—MAROUSSIA. By P. J. STAHL. Edited, for use in Schools, by JAMES BOIELLE, M.A. (Univ. Coll.) Senior French Master at Dulwich College, &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

VICTOR HUGO.—QUATRE-VINGT-TRIZE. Edited, for use in Schools, by JAMES BOIELLE, M.A. Notes, Introduction, and Life of Hugo. Square 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

DUMAS.—MONTE CRISTO. Edited, for use in Schools, by FRANCIS TAYLER, M.A., Senior French Master at St. John's College, With Notes, Introduction, and Life of Dumas. Square 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. net.

HENRY GRÉVILLE.—PERDUE. Edited, for use in Schools, from the Thirty-fourth French Edition, by JAMES BOIELLE. Square 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. net.

DUMAS.—LES TROIS MOUSQUETAIRES. Edited, for use in Schools, by Prof. ALMCHAMST, of Harvard University. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

THE BEGINNER'S BOOK in GERMAN. By SOPHIE DORNOT. Illustrated with Numerous Pictures. Square 8vo. boards, 4s. 6d.

GERMAN LESSONS. A Complete Manual, with Exercises and Vocabulary, for use in Schools. By W. C. COLLAR, M.A. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

GERMAN EXERCISES. Passages for Translation into German. With Notes and Brief Hints upon Conjugation. By J. P. BEYER, Instructor in German at the English High School, Boston. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

ENGLISH.

HUDSON'S SCHOOL SHAKESPEARE. A Series of Twenty-three Plays. Edited for use in Schools, with Notes and Introductions, by H. S. HUDSON, LL.D. Each Play separately, paper covers, 1s. 6d., cloth, 2s.

This Edition of Shakespeare's Plays will be found well adapted for pupils preparing for Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations, for the University of Toronto, for the Ontario Education Board, for the Training Colleges, &c.

FRIENDS of the OLDEN TIME. By ALICE GARDNER, Lecturer in History at Newnham College, Cambridge. Illustrated. Square 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LAMB'S ADVENTURES of ULYSSES. With an Introduction by ANDREW LANG. Square 8vo. 12s. pages, cloth, 1s. 6d. Price Edition, gilt edges, 3s.

MEN of MIGHT: Studies of Great Characters. By A. C. RENNIE, M.A., and H. F. W. TATHAM, M.A., Assistant Masters of Eton College. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

LATIN.

ALLEN and GREENOUGH'S LATIN GRAMMAR. A Latin Grammar for Schools and Colleges, founded on Comparative Grammar. By J. B. ALLEN, Lecturer at Harvard University, and J. H. GREENOUGH, Professor of Latin at Harvard University. New Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 400 pp. Crown 8vo. half-morocco, 6s.

The BEGINNER'S LATIN BOOK. Complete with Grammar, Exercises, Collocations, Selections for Translation, and Vocabulary. By W. C. COLLAR, M.A., and M. GRANT DAINIEL, M.A. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

The GATE to CÆSAR. By W. C. COLLAR, Author of 'Practical Latin Composition,' &c. 153 pp., cloth, 2s.

PRACTICAL LATIN COMPOSITION. By W. C. COLLAR, Author of 'The Beginner's Latin Book,' &c. 708 pp., crown 8vo. cloth, 4s. A NET, 2s. 6d., on Teachers' order only.

The COLLEGE SERIES of LATIN. AUTHORS. Edited under the Supervision of Prof. C. L. SMITH, Harvard University, and Prof. THAYER PECK, Yale University, on lines similar to those of the College Series of Greek Authors.

HORACE.—SATIRES and EPISTLES. By Prof. J. B. Greenough. 6s. 6d.

CICERO.—BRUTUS, SEU DE CLARIS ORATORIBUS. By Prof. Kellogg. 6s. 6d.

TACITUS.—ANNALS. Books I.-VI. By Prof. Allen. 7s. 6d.

LIVY.—Books I. and II. By Prof. J. B. Greenough. 6s. 6d.

LIVY.—Books XXI. and XXII. By Prof. J. B. Greenough and Prof. Tracy Lee. 6s. 6d.

CATULLUS. By Prof. Elmer Truesdell Merrill. 6s. 6d.

GREEK.

The COLLEGE SERIES of GREEK. AUTHORS. Edited under the Supervision of Professor J. W. WHITE and Professor T. D. ARYSDOU.

This Series comprises a number of Volumes selected from the Works of the best Greek Authors, carefully edited, for the Use of University Students and the Higher Forms in Schools. Each Volume contains a full Introduction, with Notes, Critical and Explanatory, Rhythmic and Syntactic were necessary, and Appendixes, giving a brief Bibliography, &c.

The Volumes are uniformly bound in cloth, square 8vo.

THUCYDIDES. Book I. By Prof. C. D. Morris. 7s. 6d.

THUCYDIDES. Book V. By Prof. H. N. Fowler. 6s.

THUCYDIDES. Book VII. By Prof. C. F. Smith. 6s.

HOMER.—INTRODUCTION to LANGUAGE and VERSE. By Prof. Seymour. 4s. 6d.

HOMER.—ILIAD. Books I.-III. By Prof. Seymour. 6s.

HOMER.—ILIAD. Books IV.-VI. By Prof. Seymour. 6s.

HOMER.—ODYSSEY. Books I.-IV. By Prof. Forster. 6s.

PLATO.—APOLOGY and CRITO. By Prof. L. Dyer. 6s.

PLATO.—PROTAGORAS. By Principal Towle. 6s.

PLATO.—GORGIAS. By C. Lodge. 7s. 6d.

SOPHOCLES.—ANTIGONE. By Prof. Dodge. 6s.

ÆSCHYLUS.—PROMETHEUS VINCTUS. By Prof. Allen. 7s. 6d.

EURIPIDES.—BACCHANTES. By Prof. Beckwith. 6s.

EURIPIDES.—IPHIGENIA in TAURIS. By Prof. Flagg. 6s.

ARISTOPHANES.—The CLOUDS. By Prof. Humphreys. 6s.

ÆSCHINES.—CTESIPHONTEM. By Prof. Richardson. 6s.

XENOPHON.—HELLENICA. Books I.-IV. By Prof. Mansel. 7s. 6d.

XENOPHON.—HELLENICA. Books V.-VII. By Prof. Perrott. 7s. 6d.

Mr. Edward Arnold's Complete Educational Catalogue will be forwarded post free on application.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.,
Publisher to the India Office.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW LIST.

NEW BOOK by the AUTHOR of
'OBITER DICTA.'

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries.

In folscap 8vo. tastefully printed, and bound in olive cloth, uniform with 'Obiter Dicta,' price 5s.

ESSAYS ABOUT MEN, WOMEN, AND BOOKS.

By AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Q.C. M.P.

Contents.

SWIFT.	JOHN GAY.
BOLINGBROKE.	BOOKS: OLD AND NEW.
STERNE.	BOOKBINDING.
JOHNSON.	POETS-LAUREATE.
RICHARD CUMBERLAND.	PARLIAMENTARY CANDI-
ALEXANDER KNOX and	DATES.
THOMAS DE QUINCY.	THE BONA-FIDE TRA-
HANNAH MORE.	VELLER.
MARIE BASHKERTSEFF.	HOURS in a LIBRARY.
SIR JOHN VANBRUGH.	FREE QUOTATIONS.
BOOTH NORTH'S AUTO-	AUTHORS and CRITICS.
GRAPHY.

Tastefully printed on fine paper, large 8vo. handsomely bound in cloth, price 7s. Fifty copies only have been printed on Large Paper for Collectors, price 12. 2s. net.

THE BOOK-HUNTER IN PARIS.

Being Studies among the Bookstalls of the Quays. By NOTAWE UZANNE. With an Introduction by AUGUS-TINE BIRRELL. Author of 'Obiter Dicta,' 'The Judicator,' &c., and 144 Characteristic Illustrations inter-persed in the Text.

"A very interesting book. Mr. Birrell's introduction is a pleasant and useful explanation of the volume, which is presented in a form fully deserving of its literary merits."
Times.

"M. Uzanne discourses as one learned in the ways of that curious world, and handles his subject as one who loves it.
Lightly does he carry his learning, and brightly does he sketch the bookmen and their riverside market. Of present interest to all book-lovers are his piquant contrasts of the old order and the new."—Saturday Review.

NEW VOLUME OF THE BOOK-LOVERS' LIBRARY.

In folscap 8vo. tastefully printed on antique paper, and bound in olive cloth gilt lettered, price 4s. 6d.: Hand-made Paper, Roxburghe binding, 7s. 6d. net; Large Paper, Roxburghe binding, 7s. net.

BOOK-SONG, an Anthology of

POEMS of Books and Bookmen from Modern Authors.
EDITED by OLIVER WHITE, Editor of 'Ballades and Rondeaux,' 'Garden of Joyeuse,' &c.

"Charming and valuable."—Globe.
"There is much in this anthology to delight the reader."
Saturday Review.

Tastefully printed in demy 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.
Copiously illustrated with Sketches and Photographs.

ROUND THE WORLD BY DOCTOR'S ORDERS.

Being a Narrative of a Year's Travel in Japan, Ceylon, Australia, China, New Zealand, Canada, United States,
&c. By JOHN DALY, J.P., Scarborough.

Tastefully printed and bound in cloth, price 3s. 6d. With Illustrative Diagrams.

A SIMPLE HISTORY OF ANCIENT PHILOSOPHY.

By W. R. SCOTT, M.A., Trinity College, Dublin.
Author of 'An Introduction to Outworn's,' Treatise concerning Eternal and Immutability.

Tastefully printed and appropriately bound in cloth, 1s. 6d.
UNPOPULAR POLITICS:

Being Non-popular Aspects, Political and Economic,
of some Prominent Contemporary Questions. By G.
EDWARD TAYLER.

Contents:—State-provided Education—Combinations in Restraint of Trade—The Progressive Transfer of Political Power to the Largest Class.

London:

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION, with Frontispiece and Vignette by H. J. Ford. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE:

BEING THE MEMOIRS OF GASTON DE BONNE, SIEUR DE MARSAC.

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN,

Author of 'The House of the Wolf.'

(On Monday next.

"This is, in fact, quite the best historical romance that has appeared for some years. It is full of emotion, and the adventures hang very naturally upon the hero. Never since D'Artagnan was there a better swordsman."
Pall Mall Gazette.

DISCOVERY of LAKES RUDOLF and STEFANIE: an Account of Count SAMUEL TELLEMI'S Exploring and Hunting Expedition in Eastern Equatorial Africa in 1887 and 1888.
By his companion Lieut. LUDWIG VON HORNEL. Translated by HANCY BELL (L. D'ANVERS). With 179
Illustrations and 3 large and 4 small Coloured Maps. 2 vols. 8vo. 43s.

NEW BOOK BY CANON OVERTON.

The ENGLISH CHURCH in the NINETEENTH CENTURY.

By the Rev. JOHN H. OVERTON, D.D., Canon of Lincoln, Rector of Epworth, Doncaster, and Rural Dean of the Isle of Axholme. 8vo. 14s.

ST. ANDREWS. By ANDREW LANG. With 8 Plates and 24 Illustrations in the Text by T. Hodge. 8vo. 12s. net.

"St. Andrews has had among her many lovers some who have aspired also to be her historians. These older chronicles are like to be superseded, except with those of dry-as-dust tastes, by Mr. Andrew Lang's story of the fortunes of the 'dear city of youth and dream.' It is the record of St. Andrews that will henceforth be read and remembered."—Spokesman.

LEONIDAS POLK: Bishop and General. By WILLIAM M. POLK,
M.D. LL.D. With Maps and Illustrations. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 14s.

"After thirteen years' work as a Missionary Bishop of the American Episcopal Church, the subject of this memoir accepted an important command in the Confederate Army, and after three years' service was killed in action."

LEGENDS of the MICMACS. By the Rev. SILAS TERTIUS RAND,
D.D. D.C.L. LL.D. 8vo. 12s.

"These Legends were collected by Dr. Rand during his forty years' work as a missionary among the Micmac Indians of Nova Scotia."

TALES of a NOMAD; or, Sport and Strife. By CHARLES MONTAGUE.
Crown 8vo. 6s.

Contents:—A Ride for Dear Life—My Five Buffaloes—My Three Sea Cows—Various—Flat Game and Small Game—The Storming of Seacoast—The Siege of Marabast—A Lucky Kill—My Big Tusker—A Tale of Three Elephants.

THE ONE GOOD GUEST: a Story. By L. B. WALFORD. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Mrs. Walford has never written a pleasanter novel."—Spectator.

"A story so full of the best human nature that it is vastly pleasant to read, and equally grateful to remember."
National Observer.

WHAT NECESSITY KNOWS. By L. DOUGALL, Author of 'Beggars
All,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A very remarkable novel, and not a book that can be lightly classified or arranged with other works of fiction. It is a distinct creation, and we approach it in the spirit of wonder, not unminged with suspicion, which is the greeting that awaits most new things."—Manchester Guardian.

THE SILVER LIBRARY.—NEW VOLUMES.

CARTHAGE and the CARTHAGINIANS.
By R. BOSWORTH SMITH, M.A., Assistant Master in Harrow School. With Maps, Plans, &c. Crown 8vo.
3s. 6d.

The TOILERS of the FIELD. By RICHARD
JEFFRIES. With Portrait from the Bust in Salisbury
Cathedral. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The ORBS AROUND US: Essays on the
Moon and Planets, Meteors and Comets, the Sun and Coloured Pairs of Stars. By E. A. PROCTOR. Crown
8vo. 3s. 6d.
(Nearly ready.)

The EXPANSE of HEAVEN: Essays on the Wonders of the Firmament. By E. A. PROCTOR.
Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW, No. 367.

1. MEMOIRS of CHANCELLOR PASQUIER.

2. The ECONOMY of HIGH WAGES.

3. The POETRY of RURAL LIFE.

4. RECENT EDITIONS of TACITUS.

5. POPULAR LITERATURE of MODERN ITALY.

6. The LAST CAMPAIGN of MONTROSE.

7. The RESULTS of the CRUSADES.

8. AMONG the HAIRY AINU.

9. ADDRESSES of the late EARL of DERBY.

10. The PROGRESS of ANGLING.

11. The SESSION of 1893.

THE ENGLISH HISTORICAL REVIEW.

Edited by S. R. GARDINER, M.A. LL.D.

No. 33, JANUARY. Royal 8vo. 6s.

1. Articles.

The BATTLE of HASTINGS. Part I. By T. A. Archer.

The BATTLE of HASTINGS. Part II. By Miss Kate Norgate.

Pieter Corneliszoon HOOFT. By the Rev. George Edmundson.

The ROYAL NAVY UNDER CHARLES I. Part II. By M. Oppenheim.

2. Notes and Documents.—3. Reviews of Books.—4. Correspondence.—5. List of Historical Books recently published.—6. Contents of Periodical Publications.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. New York: 15, East 16th-street.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE. A Narrative of the Events of his Life. By JAMES DYKES CAMPBELL. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

LADY WILLIAM. By Mrs. Oliphant. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

RICHARD ESCOTT. By Edward H. Cooper, Author of 'Geoffrey Hamilton.' 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

ATHENÆUM.—"The weakness and pain and the dreadful spiritual isolation and loneliness in one who had been at least strong in evil doing are well divined and interpreted."
STANDARD.—"A book that will not easily be put down till it is finished."
PUNCH.—"I like 'Richard Escott,' says the Baron."

MARION DANCHE: a Story without Comment. By F. Marion Crawford. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 12s.
SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Charming in style, and very easy to read."

SYLVIE and BRUNO CONCLUDED. By Lewis Carroll. With Illustrations by Harry Furness. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

SCOTSMAN.—"The book is likely to be as great a favourite with children as any of its author's former productions. For readers who are grown up—he must be a misanthropical, bilious, and abandoned wretch whom its whims, fancies, and follies will not heartily amuse."

GOBLIN MARKET. By Christina G. Rossetti. With 18 Page Illustrations and other decorations by Laurence Housman. Cloth elegant, 6s.

* Also an ÉDITION DE LUXE, super-royal 8vo. Hand-made Paper, 21s. net. [All sold.]
SATURDAY REVIEW.—"A charming reprint, elegant in binding, and illustrated with remarkable felicity by Mr. Laurence Housman."
GUARDIAN.—"A new edition of the 'Goblin Market,' with very quaint and characteristic illustrations by Laurence Housman. The paper, printing, and cover of the volume are remarkably attractive."
WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"It is a dainty little volume, and much of Mr. Housman's work shows a pretty fancy."

SING-SONG: a Nursery Rhyme Book. By Christina G. Rossetti.

With 120 Illustrations by Arthur Hughes, engraved by the Brothers Dalziel. Small 4to. 4s. 6d.
GUARDIAN.—"A new and enlarged edition of her delightful 'Sing-Song.'"
MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"The verses to babyhood and childhood in their simplicity and tenderness frequently recall William Blake, with whose soul this genuine poet has much affinity.....The illustrations are thoroughly in keeping with the spirit of the verses."

MEDIAEVAL RECORDS and SONNETS. By Aubrey de Vere. Globe 8vo. 6s.

SPECTATOR.—"When he writes of chivalry, of saints, of miracles, it seems as if one of Giotto's frescoed figures, with its at once fresh and yet formal simplicity, had descended from the wall and were talking to us in its own person."

SOME ASPECTS of the GREEK GENIUS. By S. H. Butcher, Litt.D., LL.D., Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh, formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and of University College, Oxford. Second Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo. 7s. net.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"He has written a delightful book, in a pleasant style, full of learning, suggestive, stimulating—a book which no student of Greek literature can lay down without a hearty feeling of gratitude to the author."

LETTERS of TRAVEL. By the Right Rev. Phillips Brooks, late Bishop of Massachusetts. Extra crown 8vo. 6s. 6d. net.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"They are brightly written, and written, obviously enough, for the information and pleasure of the family circle in Philadelphia or, later, in Boston. Easy and natural in style, they are naturally easy reading."

ROMANCE of the INSECT WORLD. By L. N. Badenoch. With Illustrations by Margaret J. D. Badenoch and others. Crown 8vo. 6s.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Has much of the charm of fairy-tale, and proves the peculiar felicity of the poet's phrase when applied to the world of insects."

ELEMENTS of SYNTHETIC SOLID GEOMETRY. By N. F. DUPUIS, M.A. F.R.S.C., Professor of Pure Mathematics in the University of Queen's College, Kingston, Canada. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d. net.

ELECTRIC WAVES: being Researches on the Propagation of Electric Action with Finite Velocity through Space. By HEINRICH HERTZ, late Professor of Physics in the University of Bonn. Authorized Translation by Professor D. M. JONES, B.Sc. With Preface by Lord KELVIN, F.R.S. Illustrated. 8vo. 10s. net.

NATURE.—"The subject is of immense importance; the work described is of the highest order of experimental investigation; the results obtained have contributed more than any other recent results to revolutionize the view taken by the majority of scientific workers as to the nature of electromagnetic actions.....The whole work is most interesting, and well deserves the best attention of all interested in the greatest scientific advance of the last quarter of the nineteenth century."

DRAWING and DESIGN: a Class Text-Book for Beginners. By E. R. TAYLOR, Head Master of the Birmingham Municipal School of Art. With Illustrations. Oblong crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

BIRMINGHAM DAILY POST.—"All the lessons are nicely calculated to cultivate eye, hand, and taste.....We have never seen a book of instruction for beginners comparable to this. It ought to be in the hands of every young person in the land."

LEAD WORK: Old and Ornamental, and for the most part English. By W. R. LETHBRIDGE. With Illustrations. Extra crown 8vo. 4s. 6d. net.

BUILDING NEWS.—"The author has brought his artistic feeling and skill into the consideration of a craft which has been too long left to plumbers.....We recommend this book to the attention of the architect and all craftsmen in lead."

BRITISH ARCHITECT.—"We have in this little book of his the enunciation of principles of treatment and methods of working as exemplified in old examples of the craft."

PLUMBER and DECORATOR.—"Plumbers do not have many books which help them to grasp what can be done with lead, so we recommend them to buy this one. Architects should possess themselves of copies, and thus be better able to utilize such an imperishable material as lead in their external decorations. Even the idle reader would find something to interest him."

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

Colonel ELLIS, 1st West India Regiment.

THE YORUBA-SPEAKING PEOPLES OF THE SLAVE-COAST OF WEST AFRICA,

Their Religion, Manners, Customs, Laws, Language, &c.

By Colonel A. B. ELLIS, Author of 'The Ewe-speaking People of the Slave Coast' and 'The Tshi-speaking Peoples of the Gold Coast.'

With an Appendix and Map. Demy 8vo. [Next week.]

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

HISTORY OF THE GOLD COAST OF WEST AFRICA.

Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

HON. MRS. GREVILLE-NUGENT.

A LAND of MOSQUES and MARABOUTS. By the Hon. Mrs. GREVILLE-NUGENT. Illustrated, demy 8vo. 14s. [This day.]

HERBERT SPENCER.

APHORISMS from the WRITINGS of HERBERT SPENCER. Selected by JULIA RAY-MOND GINGELL. With Portrait of Herbert Spencer. Crown 8vo. [Shortly.]

MAJOR ARTHUR GRIFFITHS.

SECRETS of the PRISON.

HOUSE, or, Gaol Studies and Sketches. By Major ARTHUR GRIFFITHS, H.M. Inspector of Prisons, Author of 'Chronicles of Newgate,' &c. With numerous Illustrations by George D. Howlandson. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30s.

"A very valuable book.....An extremely readable book." [Spectator.]

MRS. F. M. ELLIOT.

OLD COURT-LIFE in SPAIN.

By FRANCES MINTO ELLIOT, Author of 'Old Court-Life in France,' 'Diary of an Idle Woman in Italy,' &c. In 3 vols. demy 8vo. 24s.

"Mrs. Minto Elliot has written a very attractive book, full of novel romance, and at least founded on a sound historical basis, if not entitled to be regarded as a serious contribution to Spanish history proper."—Times.

WILLIAM HARBUTT DAWSON.

GERMANY and the GERMANS:

Social Life, Culture, Religious Life, &c. By WILLIAM HARBUTT DAWSON. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36s.

"This excellent work—a literary monument of intelligent and conscientious labour."—Daily Telegraph.

FREDERICK BOYLE

ABOUT ORCHIDS, a CHAT.

By FREDERICK BOYLE. With 8 Coloured Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 8s.

"No orchid fancier can well afford to deny himself this volume. It should prove a very classic on the subject." "Fascinating book."—Academy. Black and White.

FREDERICK BOYLE.

The PROPHET JOHN: a

Romance. By FREDERICK BOYLE. Crown 8vo. 5s. [This day.]

CANON KNOX LITTLE.

The WAIF from the WAVES, A

Story of Three Lives, touching this World and Another. By Canon KNOX LITTLE. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

London: CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NOTICE.

MISS BROUGHTON, the Author of 'Nancy,' &c., commences a New Serial Story entitled 'A BEGINNER,' and MISS PEARD, the Author of 'Near Neighbours,' commences one entitled 'An INTERLOPER,' in THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE for JANUARY, 1894.

NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY.

FREDERIC HILL: an Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform. Being the Recollections of a Retired Civil Servant of Old Birmingham—The Press Gang—Wiltshire—De Quincey—Catholic Emancipation—The Reform Bill—Lord John Russell—Earl Grey—Prison Inspection—Mrs. Siddons—Sir John Herschel—Nansy—The Penny Post—Maria Edgeworth, &c. Edited by his Daughter, CONSTANCE HILL. In 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 10s.

NOW READY.

The PRIVATE LIFE OF NAPOLEON. From the French of ARTHUR LÉVY. By STEPHEN LOUIS BIRCH. Translator of 'The Youth of Frederick the Great,' &c. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 29s.

"The author has collected with rare skill and industry, from a vast literature of correspondence and memoirs, the more amiable and magnanimous traits of the great Corsican. He has produced a book of fascinating interest, and thrown vivid and various lights on the whole period of which he treats."—Mr. W. M. H. LECY on 'Napoleon Intimate,' in the Full Mail Gazette.

NEW NOVELS

JUST READY.

The GREATER GLORY. By MAARTEN MAARTENS. Author of 'An Old Maid's Love,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

A HEROINE in HOMESPUN. By FREDERIC BRETON. Author of 'The Crime of Maunsell Grange,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.
"A romantic idyl of the Outer Hebrides. The author seems to know the Grofers well, and to be familiar with the scenery of that mist archipelago. He makes discreet use of the many local superstitions which still linger. There is power as well as pathos in the novel, and the local colouring is excellent."—Saturday Review.

NOW READY.

MOLLY and her MAN-O'-WAR. By DR. ARABELLA KENRALY. Author of 'Dr. Janet of Harley Street,' In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.
"A narrative of the raciest, freshest humour merging into one of the sweetest of love-stories."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

NOW READY.

The VICAR of LANTHWAITE. By LILY WATSON. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

SPEEDWELL. By Lady Guendolen RAMSDEN. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOW READY.

BRITOMART. By Mrs. Herbert MARTIN. Author of 'Bonnie Lealey,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.
"A charming story by a writer already favourably known in the world of pure and pleasant fiction. The plot is distinctly clever, and the dénouement exceedingly dramatic."—Birmingham Daily Gazette.

SECOND EDITION.

DIANA TEMPEST. By Mary CHOLMONDLEY. Author of 'Sir Charles Danvers,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.
Now ready, 63rd Edition, 1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 21s. 6d. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE and BARONETAGE for 1894. Corrected by the NOBILITY.

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORDY JEFFRESON.

Now ready, in 2 vols. crown 8vo. 22s.

A BOOK of RECOLLECTIONS. By JOHN CORDY JEFFRESON. Author of 'A Book about Lawyers,' 'A Book about Doctors,' &c.

"The book is readable enough, and full of pleasant gossip about some of the letters and other celebrities, great and small, whom Mr. Jeffreson has known."—Times
"Mr. Jeffreson's volumes are a rich storehouse of anecdotes, to which the prudent reader will himself resort without a moment's delay."—Daily Telegraph
"There are plenty of good stories in Mr. Jeffreson's volumes, which are sure to have a large number of delighted readers."—Globe

NEW NOVELS.

The PRICE of a PEARL. By Eleanor HOLMES. Author of 'Through another Man's Eyes,' &c. 3 vols.

GOOD DAME FORTUNE. By Maria A. HOYER. 3 vols.

BROKEN FORTUNES. By Henry CRESSWELL. Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Willy Widow,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Cresswell's pages are interwoven in the strongest of tangles by a series of subtle contrivances, the cleavage of which never oversteps the limits of probability. Broken Fortunes is entitled to a place of honour among the latest fictional works of the year."—Daily Telegraph

IN AN ALPINE VALLEY. By G. MANVILLE FENN. Author of 'Makno Kossan,' 'The Master of the Ceremonies,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Fenn knows how to amuse, and he carries his readers along with him to his triumphant finish."—Athenæum

AT SOCIETY'S EXPENSE. By ALGERNON GISSING. Author of 'A Moorland Idyl,' 'A Village Straggler,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Gissing is a clever writer, and his new story is smart, original, and playful."—Spectator

SECOND EDITION OF

TO RIGHT the WRONG. By Edna LYALL. Author of 'Dorothy,' 'We Two,' &c. 3 vols.

"The writer has been bold enough to make her romantic hero a Parliamentarian, and while in no way unjust to the Royalists draws most of her good characters from the side which has hitherto supplied the villains. It is this fact which lends a special interest to the story before us, a story which we may say shows extraordinary industry and extraordinary conscientiousness."—Athenæum

CHRISTINE. By Adeline Sergeant. Author of 'Casper Brooke's Daughter,' 'Sir Anthony,' &c. 3 vols.

NEW ADDITION TO HURST & BLACKETT'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.
In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SIR ANTHONY. By Adeline Sergeant. Author of 'Casper Brooke's Daughter,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.
DONOVAN: A Modern Englishman.

WE TWO.

KNIGHT ERRANT.

IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.

WON BY WAITING.

A HARDY NORSEMAN.

A SELECTION FROM HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME. PRICE 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.'
JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN. CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.

MAN. A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS

ABOUT WOMEN. A LIFE for a LIFE.

NOTHING NEW. MYSTERY and MAID.

THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM. BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK.'

NATURE AND HUMAN NATURE. WISE SAYS and MODERN INSTANCES.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

DAVID ELGINBROD. ALEX FORBES.

ROBERT FALCONER. SIR GIBBIE.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

ADAM GRAEME. LIFE OF IRVING.

LIFE OF NORLAW. A ROSE IN JUNE.

AGES. PHOEBE, JUNIOR.

IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LASS.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S LIST.

NOTICE.

The First Edition in One Volume of
THE HEAVENLY TWINS,
By SARAH GRAND,
having been exhausted on the day of its publication, a reprint is in preparation, to be ready on the 22nd inst., price Six Shillings.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR, UNIFORM WITH ABOVE.

IDEALA: a Study from Life.
SIXTH EDITION.

JUST PUBLISHED.

A SUPERFLUOUS WOMAN,
A NEW NOVEL, IN THREE VOLUMES.
AT ALL LIBRARIES.

A COMEDY OF MASKS. By Ernest DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE. In 3 vols.
[At all Libraries.]

"A fascinating book.....The concluding scene is very powerful."—Full Mail Gazette.

RELICS: Fragments of a Life. By FRANCES MACNAB. Author of 'No Reply.' Crown 8vo. 6s.

"The author's comments on life, and the subtler aspects of its joys and pains, are instinct with thought and graceful feeling."—Athenæum.

HEINEMANN'S INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY.
Edited by EDMUND GOSSE.

UNDER THE YOKE. From the Bulgarian of IVAN VAZOFF. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper cover, 2s. 6d.

"By far the most remarkable novel which has appeared in English during the year is a translation, and a translation from a language which has never had a literature—'Under the Yoke,' from the Bulgarian of Ivan Vazoff."—Athenæum.

A NEW ILLUSTRATED BOOK OF TRAVEL.
IN THE TRACK OF THE SUN.

The Diary of a Globe-Trotter. By F. D. THOMPSON. Containing 78 Full-Page Illustrations and numerous Text Illustrations, by H. FENN, and from Photographs. 1 vol. 4to. cloth extra, 25s.

"A magnificently appointed itinerary and companion for tourists who may desire to circumnavigate the earth. As for illustrations, there are nearly eighty of full-page dimensions and many number of smaller ones, and all are excellent. In fact the book is a handsome and superbly illustrated volume."—St. James's Gazette.

STORIES OF GOLF. Collected by WILLIAM KNIGHT and T. T. OLIPHANT. With Rhymes on Golf, by Various Hands; also Shakespeare on Golf, &c. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

London:

WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, 1894.

CONTENTS.

PEPYS'S DIARY	75
THE DELIGHTABLE DUCRY	76
BROWN'S ACCOUNT OF MODERN PERMIA	76
THE ART OF SWIMMING	76
OFFICIAL PAPERS OF THE INDIAN MUTINY	79
RECENT VERSE	80
SCHOOL-BOOKS	80
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	81-82
THE BOOK SALES OF 1893; WESTMINSTER WRITS; THE WILLY ADVENTURER; DRINKERS IN YORKSHIRE	83
LITERARY GOSSIP	85
SOURCE—MATHEMATICAL LITERATURE; VERPUCCI IN INDIA; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	86-87
FAIR ARTS—BENT'S SACRED CITY OF THE ETHIO- PIANS; LIBRARY TABLE; THE ROYAL ACADEMY; NEW PRISMS; GOSSIP	87-90
MUSIC—THE WEEK; NEW ORGAN MUSIC; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	91-92
DRAMA—GOSSIP	92

LITERATURE

The Diary of Samuel Pepys. Transcribed from the Shorthand Manuscript by the Rev. Mynore Bright, with Lord Braybrooke's Notes. Edited, with Additions, by Henry B. Wheatley, F.S.A. Vol. III. (Bell & Sons.)

EACH successive instalment of Mr. Wheatley's delightful edition of the celebrated 'Diary,' while it increases the critic's satisfaction with this literary acquisition, increases also his surprise that the public should so long have been put off with what can only be called a mangled and garbled abridgment. That Lord Braybrooke, looking on the first issue as a costly experiment, should not care to venture on the whole, was but natural; though when he had once proved its success, it is not easy to understand why he did not presently bring out the 'Diary' in something like its entirety; still less is it possible to understand the many omissions which Mr. Mynore Bright so deliberately made, whilst asserting that he was publishing the whole "with the exception of such parts as I thought would be tedious to the reader, or that are unfit for publication." On this last point Mr. Wheatley professes to be in agreement with his predecessor, though he has formed a more liberal estimate of what is fit. We have already stated our opinion that, though probably a commercial necessity, the excisions are to be regretted from the literary point of view, and the more so—we may now say—as the extreme liberality of the editor's opinion leaves it difficult to believe that the passages or expressions which have been cut out are much more indelicate or more disgusting than some which have been left in; in which case the only definite result of the excisions is to mar the completeness of the work.

That point, however, having been decided, there is left to consider, what is also of very much greater importance, the addition now made to our knowledge of Mr. Pepys and the personal history of the age. We conjectured at the beginning that this might be but little. It proves to be more than could have been expected; and with the new light now thrown on many incidents and passages, it becomes easy to see how much they have been misunderstood or ignored. Thus, for instance, in the delicious account of Pepys's going about in terror of Capt. Holmes, we had the entry of March 22nd, 1662/3: "I could not get yesterday's quarrel with Captain Holmes out of my mind, and a natural fear of being challenged by him for the words I did give him, though nothing but what did become me as a principal officer"; as well as that of March 23rd: "To Whitehall, being fearful almost, so poor a spirit I have, of meeting Major Holmes"; and his satisfaction when, meeting Holmes, "he did as good as desire excuse for the high words that did pass in his heat the other day"; but of the quarrel we knew nothing. In Mr. Bright's pages it seemed as if the dispute might have grown out of the jealousy the tailor's son entertained of Holmes's "gold laced suit," which, we were led to believe, had on a former occasion sadly interfered with Pepys's devotions; and since the publication of Mr. Wheatley's second volume it has appeared the outcome of Pepys's jealousy of the stalwart major, with which, however, as is now shown, it had little or nothing to do. Some time before, as we were duly told, Pepys had got a man named Cooper to give him lessons in navigation and seamanship, and had—partly, at any rate—remunerated his services by procuring him an appointment as master of Holmes's ship. Holmes had objected to him at the time, and had again complained of his conduct. So, as we now learn, at a full meeting of the Navy Board on March 21st,—

"Captain Holmes being called in, he began his high complaint against his master, Cooper, and would have him forthwith discharged. Which I opposed, not in his defence but for the justice of proceeding not to condemn a man unheard, upon which we fell from one word to another that we came to very high terms, such as troubled me, though all and the worst that I ever said was that that was insolently or ill manneredly spoken. When he told me that it was well it was here that I said it. But all the officers.....cried shame of it. At last he parted and we resolved to bring the dispute between him and his master to a trial next week, wherein I shall not at all concern myself in defence of anything that is unhandsome on the master's part nor willingly suffer him to have any wrong. So we rose and I to my office, troubled though sensible that all the officers are of opinion that he has carried himself very much unbecomingly."

A few days later, and after Holmes's apology, Pepys wrote:—

"I find Cooper a fuddling, troublesome fellow, though a good artist, and so am contented to have him turned out of his place."

Altogether, when Mr. Wheatley's readers remember Holmes's antecedents, and the character which rendered his future adventures possible, they can understand Pepys feeling alarmed at the prospect of a challenge or a caning. For Pepys was distinctly a man of the pen, not of the sword, and, though probably not more timorous than the average of penmen, comes before us with this difference, that he—through the confidence of his diary—tells us he was afraid, and others do not. There is nothing to show that by his contemporaries he was supposed to be wanting in the first of manly virtues; and it does not follow that he would have proved so, even though he has confessed to being very much frightened at the attack of a big dog, or to being glad when he found that a fellow, whom he cuffed "on the chops" for insolence to his wife, was too drunk to defend himself.

Pepys as a jealous husband is, to a great extent, a new character. Slight indications of uneasiness on his part did, indeed, appear; but, on the whole, the more serious differences between him and his young wife seemed to spring out of the man's inordinate desire to kiss every comely young woman that came near him. But in these volumes of Mr. Wheatley's he is presented as madly, frantically jealous, and—so far as the evidence is before us—without any adequate cause. Formerly the object of his suspicions was Major Holmes; now, in vol. iii., it is one Pembleton, a dancing master, of whom the notices in Mr. Bright's edition are extremely slight. In Mr. Wheatley's he is the hero of the volume. Here is a sample, entered on May 15th:—

"Home, where I found it almost night, and my wife and the dancing master alone above, not dancing but talking. Now so deadly full of jealousy I am that my heart and head did so cast about and fret that I could not do any business possibly, but went out to my office, and anon late home again and ready to chide at everything, and then suddenly to bed and could hardly sleep, yet durst not say anything, but was forced to say that I had bad news from the Duke concerning Tom Hater as an excuse to my wife, who by my folly has too much opportunity given her with the man, who is a pretty neat black man, but married. But it is a deadly folly and plague that I bring upon myself to be so jealous and by giving myself such an occasion more than my wife desired of giving her another month's dancing. Which however shall be ended as soon as I can possibly."

And the next day, the 16th:—

"Up with my mind disturbed and with my last night's doubts upon me, for which I deserve to be beaten if not really served as I am fearful of being, especially since God knows that I do not find honesty enough in my own mind but that upon a small temptation I could be false to her, and therefore ought not to expect more justice from her, but God pardon both my sin and my folly herein."

It is only when read in connexion with these and similar entries that that of May 21st can be understood:—

"Being at supper my wife did say something that caused me to oppose her in, she used the word devil, which vexed me, and among other things I said I would not have her to use that word, upon which she took me up most scornfully, which, before Ashwell and the rest of the world, I know not now a days how to check, as I would heretofore, for less than that would have made me strike her. So that I fear without great discretion I shall go near to lose too my command over her, and nothing do it more than giving her this occasion of dancing and other pleasures, whereby her mind is taken up from her business, and finds other sweets besides pleasing of me, and so makes her that she begins not at all to take pleasure in me or study to please me as heretofore."

There are many other entries about Pembleton, and though, once the dancing lessons finished, Mrs. Pepys seemed to lose her interest in the man, the sight of him at church, even when accompanied by his own wife, continued to the end of the volume to disquiet Pepys's evil imagination. It is pleasant to read how, on May 25th,

"Sarah Kite my cousin, poor woman, came to see me and borrow 40s. of me, telling me she will pay it at Michaelmas again to me. I was glad it was no more, being indifferent whether she pays it me or no, but it will be a good excuse to lend her nor give her any more. So I did freely at first word do it, and give her a crown more freely to buy her child something, she being a good natured and painful wretch, and one that I would do good for as far as I can that I might not be burdened. My wife was not ready, and she coming early did not see her, and I was glad of it."

Here, of course, Pepys has belittled himself, to himself in the first instance and afterwards to posterity, by entering the cynical reflections that crossed his mind. He wished to pose, even to himself, as a cool, selfish man of the world, and would doubtless have been ashamed if his wife had detected him in an act of pure kindness of heart.

Some of his new experiences with his servants are very modern. Mutatis mutandis, this one does not seem strange in 1894. Susan, it may be remembered, was an old servant who had left, and come back temporarily, "on the job." So he says, on May 24th:—

"This morning it seems Susan, who I think is distracted, or however is since she went from me taught to drink, and so gets out of doors 2 or 3 times a day without leave to the alehouse, did go before 5 o'clock to-day, making Griffin rise in his shirt to let her out to the alehouse, she said to warm herself, but her mistress, falling out with her about it, turned her out of doors this morning, and so she is gone like an idle slut."

Of the editor's more particular labours little can be said but in commendation. His notes are excellent, and for the most part all that could be wished. If sometimes a further explanation might be desired, it is that what is perfectly clear to one man may be obscure to another. Some readers, for instance, might stick at the following sentence on p. 206, especially at "Lynes" printed with a capital:—

"Commissioner Pett showed me alone his bodys as a secret, which I found afterwards by discourse with Sir J. Minnes that he had shown them him, wherein he seems to suppose great mystery in the nature of Lynes to be hid, but I do not understand it at all."

It is quite conceivable that a reader may say, "Neither do I." The difficulty—if, indeed, it exists—is that the sentence is introduced suddenly, without any explanatory context, the equivalent of which is to be found on p. 214:—

"Comes Mr. Deane with his draught of a ship, and the bend and main lines in the body of a ship very finely, and which do please me mightily, and so am resolved to study hard, and learn of him to understand a body."

One or two trivial misprints may also be noted. On p. 165 Jemimah is printed "Jeminah," and on p. 139 there is surely a comma too much in the motto of the Royal African Company.

The Delectable Duchy. By Q. (Cassell & Co.)

THE art of writing short stories has within the last ten years made great advance in this country. By the French, and even by the Americans, it was brought to a high pitch of perfection before it was seriously attempted by any English writers of repute. Now it has many votaries. The majority fail, a few succeed, and "Q" is one of those who are successful. The art admits of many styles, and perhaps none could be more opposed than those of "Q" and Mr. Rudyard Kipling. Both are masters in their peculiar line, and the contrast may possibly help the reader to anticipate what he will, and what he will not, find in 'The Delectable Duchy.'

Mr. Kipling's short stories are broad, vigorous, almost barbaric in their strength. The scenes are, for the most part, laid in India and Egypt, and the stories glow with the hot glare of an Eastern climate; every object stands out clear, distinct, sharply defined in the clear atmosphere. If the scene is laid in a Western clime, the same treatment is adopted; actors and surroundings are painted with the strength and the dash of one who has formed his style in the torrid zone. "Q's" method is essentially adapted to the English landscapes which form the background of his stories. He paints with a more delicate touch and in less brilliant tints. It is not that he is afraid of colour or that his pictures ever fall into the grey tanneness of timidity. But his effects are harmoniously blended; his colours, though fresh, are never fierce; his atmosphere has not the metallic clearness of the East, but the haze, the softness, the gleams of light alternating with darker shadows, which characterize the scenery of his native land. His pictures do not force themselves upon the mental vision with the strength of his rival; yet because they steal more subtly upon the senses they do not the less create the exact impression which the author desires to produce.

The view of English life in Cornwall which "Q" presents is varied. Local superstitions exercise over him a peculiar charm, and he knows that they only reveal themselves to the patient observation of the quiet watcher. He who runs can never gather them. The lover of old-world life will find in this little volume some curious relics saved from the wreckage of centuries—such as the practice of burying the clothes of a faithless lover, the charm of pine in a well, and the "Kimbley" or christening cake. These and other venerable pieces of rural lore or custom are cast into the form of stories so skilfully that the superstition crops out as simply and unexpectedly as in real life. The stories never seem to have been written for the sake of illustrating the popular belief which they enshrine. One of "Q's" most successful tales turns upon a practice which is fast dying out in less delectable counties than Cornwall. 'The Spinster's Maying,' in its pathos, its humour, its descriptive touches, is a gem of its kind. 'The Paupers,' though it is a most mournful little story, is an admirable example of that gift of reticence which is even more valuable than expression to the writer of short stories. It might be compared, and not unfavourably, with one of Daudet's 'Contes choisis,' and we know no higher praise.

To tell any one of "Q's" stories would be superfluous; but we cannot forbear from making a quotation which shows his familiarity with natural effects. We will not proclaim the impression which the spring day produced upon the elderly Registrar in 'When the Sap Rose'; but there can, we think, be no question of the power of picture-making:—

"The road towards the coast dipped—too steeply for tight boots—down a wooded combe, and he followed it, treading delicately. The hollow of the V ahead, where the hills overlapped against the pale blue, was powdered with a faint brown bloom, soon to be green—an infinity of bursting buds. The larches stretched their arms upwards, as men waking. The yellow was out on the gorse, with a heady scent like a pine-apple's, and between the bushes spread the grey film of coming blue-bells. High up, the pines sighed along the ridge, turning paler; and far down, where the brook ran, a mad duet was going on between thrush and chaffinch—'Cheer up, Cheer up, Queen!' 'Clip clip, clip, and kiss me—Sweet!'—one against the other."

The stories are not all equally good, and we prefer "Q" on his own ground to "Q" in a London drawing-room. But the book well repays being read by every one who likes good work done by a master of his craft.

A Year among the Persians: Impressions as to the Life, Character, and Thought of the People of Persia, received during Twelve Months' Residence in that Country in the Years 1887-88. By Edward G. Browne, M.A., M.B. (Black.)

PERSIA has no just reason to complain that of the many European travellers who have visited her shores, crossed her mountain ranges, moved along her plateaux and valleys, or made personal inspection of her principal towns, shrines, and monuments, those who have placed their experiences on record have been few or, as a rule, incapable. The bibliography of that country, to which Englishmen and Englishwomen have largely, perhaps mainly, contributed, is not alone noteworthy from its bulk, but the truth and excellence of certain works of which it is composed have been generally admitted. Nor can this praise be confined by any means to the publications of that brilliant array of travellers and geographers who flourished in the first quarter of the present century—Malcolm and Morier, Ouseley and Kinneir, Porter and Fraser. These, and possibly other contemporary writers, will long remain standard authorities for Persia under Fath 'Ali Shah, in whose long reign relations with Great Britain were especially active; but much valuable matter has been added by authorities of our own times; and quite recently the volumes of Mrs. Bishop, the Hon. George Curzon, and Mr. Granville Browne have afforded ample proof that the literature of Persian travel is yet far from exhausted.

It is with the last named that we have now to do; and rich as the bibliography of the Shah's dominions already is, this latest addition could ill be spared. Whatever opinion may be passed on the merits or demerits of the newly published volume, considered as a book of travel or of entertainment intended for the perusal of the ordinary reader, it may be affirmed, without fear of doing injustice to many able predecessors, that Mr. Browne has written an account, unsurpassed so far as it goes, of the "life, character, and thought" of the people amongst whom his twelvemonth has been spent. It must, however, be borne in mind that, from first to last of the limited period specified, his movements were not those of a stranger, but of one who had thoroughly trained himself to the self-imposed task of travel and observation by a course of previous study, prompted and aided by natural tastes and natural gifts.

Of the actual ground traversed little need be said. A journey across the Turco-Persian frontier to Tabriz, via Constantinople, Trebizond, Erzeroum, and Khûy, and continued to Teheran by the post road through Kazvin (350 weary miles), is an oft-told tale. In a similar category may be placed the journey from Teheran to Ispahan, and Ispahan to Shiraz. From Shiraz to Yezd there is more novelty in the track, and Mr. Browne's description of the section from Dihbid to Yezd will have interest for geographers, though the distance be not great. The following extract relates to the position reached at two days' march from the latter city:—

"The road which we traversed this day was singularly beautiful, and the country looked prosperous and well cared for. We passed two villages, however, one on the right and another on the left, named Haydar-âbâd and 'Abbâs-âbâd respectively, which had been deserted owing to the failure of their water supply. The trees in their gardens were still for the most part green and luxuriant, but already the fragile mud walls were falling into ruin; and, meditating on this process of rapid decay, I ceased to wonder at the many Persian towns and villages mentioned by early geographers and historians of which no trace remains, and which it seems impossible to identify. At a considerable distance to the right (north), on a low conical hill, the Castle of Bunâft, with the village of the same name below it, was clearly visible; and, farther east, the precipitous black crag called Kal'at-i-Zard (the Yellow Castle), which, as Bâbâ Khân informed me, is only accessible by one path, and at the foot of which lies the village of Balkh-u-Gurfa. Farther on we passed the village of Kattûl (also on the right), by which runs the direct road from Yezd to Bawânât, and soon afterwards turned the northern end of the vast pile of cliffs which forms this western face of the Shîr-Kûh, and, following a ravine to the left, down which rushed a clear, cool mountain stream, presently reached the beautiful Alpine village of Sunj, a mass of gardens and groves situated amidst the grandest rock-scenery. A more charming spot for a summer residence could hardly be conceived, and the people of Yezd are fortunate in being able to retreat so easily from their baking, sandy plains to this and other equally delightful highland resorts."

Some places here mentioned will be new to most readers of Persian exploration. Even the Shîr-Kûh, or "Lion mountain," passed by the Sistan Mission in 1870, and actually reached by Stack in 1881, was comparatively unknown to map-makers in 1866, when its height and beauty were commented on by Major Murdoch Smith, R.E., and his travelling companion, who estimated it at about 12,000 feet above the sea. "We could get no general name applicable to the range," were the words used in Smith's official report, "but one of the highest and most beautiful peaks seems to be universally known as the Shîr-Kûh." Stack justly calls it "a noble mountain, capped with a crown of rock many hundred feet high." For a great part of the year snow may be seen on its summit.

From Yezd, Mr. Browne proceeded to Kirman, whence, after a prolonged stay, and a visit to a neighbouring shrine at Mahun, he returned to Yezd again, by much the same route as before chosen. Pushing on from Yezd by the direct road through Kashan, he returned to Teheran, and after transacting all necessary business at the capital, he proceeded through the province of Mâzandarân to Mashhad-i-Sar, there to embark in the Russian steamer for Bâkû, take the railway thence to Batum, embark in the Batum steamer for Odessa, and from Odessa make for London. That, compared with the difficulties and obstructions from the Custom House which the traveller had to experience in Europe, the ways and rules of uncivilized Persia were mere child's play, is a statement which seems to involve no exaggeration. Eccè signum:—

"At 11.30 on the night of this miserable day the train stopped at Ozwicim, and I emerged into the black wet night, the cheerlessness of which was revealed rather than mitigated by a few feeble oil lamps. With some difficulty I found a porter (for the place seemed wrapped in slumber), who, making me leave all my luggage in a locked room to await the Customs' examination on the morrow, and suffering me to retain only my greatcoat, led me through a perfect sea of mud to the miserable hotel opposite the station. There was a light in one of the windows, but, though we knocked vigorously for some time, no one came. At last the door was opened, on a chain, by a most ill-looking fellow, clad in a night-shirt and trousers, with a beard of two days' growth on his ugly chin. So little did I like his looks that I did not press for admission, which he on his part showed no inclination to grant me. So I returned to the empty waiting-room of the station, with its dimly-lighted, beery, smoke-laden atmosphere, thinking that after all I should not be much worse off sleeping on the wooden bench which ran round the walls, than in some of the Turkish stables and Mâzandarân hovels to which I had become inured in the course of my travels."

But the contemplated interval of repose—rough as it promised to be—was denied. In spite of remonstrance the weary traveller was compelled to move on:—

"Finally, a gendarme with a gun and bayonet appeared, and I was invited to follow him, which I did apathetically, without the least idea as to whither we were bound. Tramping after my guide through dark muddy lanes, I presently found myself at the door of a house, where the gendarme bade me wait for a minute while he entered. Presently, after much wrangling in Polish, he again emerged, and beckoned to me to follow him. We passed through an outer bedroom where several persons were sleeping, and entered a smaller inner room containing two beds, occupied by the owner of the house and his son. Between the former and my guide a further altercation ensued, and it seemed as though here also I was to find no rest. At last the owner of the house got out of bed, led me to a sort of window looking into an adjacent room which I had not hitherto noticed, and, pointing to a mass of human beings (vagrants, I suppose) sleeping huddled together on the floor, remarked that it was 'pretty full in there.'"

Now let us come to the true gist of the remarkable book before us—remarkable because it is the expression of an outsider's opinion on the inhabitants of Persia, from a standpoint more nearly approaching that of an intellectual native imbued with Western learning than of an (even advanced) European Orientalist. Able and instructive as are Mr. Curzon's admirable volumes published in 1892, they cannot be deemed, nor were they meant to be, an exhaustive delineation of the inner life of the Persian people, or of the more intricate phases of the Persian mind—an analysis which could only be attempted by one intimately acquainted with the writings most in favour with the dreamy multitude, and the philosophies and subtleties expressed or signified in them, to the delight and mystification of the million admirers. Not many Englishmen possess the time and opportunity, nor perhaps the taste or temperament, to qualify for such a task; and qualification, the natural outcome of a labour of love, and not of a conventional course of reading and study, implies a conviction that the acquired knowledge has been rightly apprehended. Mr. Browne's command of the Persian language, spoken and literary; his sympathy with Oriental thought; his heedlessness of personal discomfort, and rejection of conventional trammels; the single-mindedness with which he pursues his object, and the enthusiasm, refreshing as it is rare, with which he treats his subject—all these, self-evident or provable facts, if they do not in all cases arouse a fellow feeling on the part of the reader, cannot fail to impart interest and attract serious attention to his pages. They have the unmistakable stamp of truth and special acquirement. On the other hand, apart from his picture of Persian inner life, illustrated by the dramatis personæ of his surroundings both in act and speech, as well as by his own skilful descriptions and comments, there is not much on which the critic need dwell in the narrative before us. Here and there are scraps of useful information for general readers; here and there are vouchsafed practical hints for future travellers; here and there the reader catches a glimpse—as we have above shown—of new landscapes. There is little of novelty in the descriptions of Teheran and Ispahan as towns, though to each a full chapter is allotted; and Shiraz and its environs—attractive as may be their associations to the lovers of Persian poetry—are, we venture to think, sketched with too glowing colours for the matter-of-fact English tourist. Here is the part description of a Persian dinner party, which indicates how the writer entered into the spirit of the occasion, and culminates in an opinion which, perhaps, few of his fellow countrymen would share, though they might not dispute its possible accuracy:—

"When the host thinks that the entertainment has lasted long enough, he gives the signal for supper, which is served either in the same or in another room. A cloth is laid on the floor, round which are arranged the long flat cakes of 'pebble-bread' which do double duty as food and plates. The meats, consisting for the most part of pûdius and chûdius of different sorts, are placed in the centre, together with bowls of aherbet, each of which is supplied with a delicately-carved wooden spoon, with deep boat-shaped bowl, whereof the sides slope down to form a sort of keel at the bottom. The guests squat down on their knees and heels round the cloth, the host placing him whom he desires most to honour on his right side at the upper end of the room (i. e., opposite the door). At the lower end the musicians and minstrels take their places, and all, without further delay, commence an attack on the viands. The consumption of food progresses rapidly, with but little conversation, for it is not usual in Persia to linger over meals, or to prolong them by talk, which is better conducted while the mouth is not otherwise employed. If the host wishes to pay special honour to a guest, he picks out and places in his mouth some particularly delicate morsel. In about a quarter of an hour from the commencement of the banquet most of the guests have finished and washed their hands by pouring water over them from a metal ewer into a plate of the same material, brought round by the servants for that purpose. They then rinse out their mouths, roll down their sleeves again, partake of a final pipe, and, unless they mean to stay for the night, depart homewards, either on foot or on horseback, preceded by a servant bearing a lantern. Such is the usual course of a Persian dinner-party; and the mid-day meal (nahâr), to which guests are sometimes invited, differs from it only in this, that it is shorter and less boisterous. Although I have described the general features of such an entertainment in some detail, I fear that I have failed to convey any idea of the charm which it really possesses. This charm results partly from the lack of constraint and the freedom of the guests; partly from the cordial welcome which a Persian host so well knows how to give; partly from the exhilarating influence of the wine and music (which, though so different from that to which we are accustomed, produces, in such as are susceptible to its influence, an indescribable sense of subdued ecstasy); but more than all from the vigour, variety, and brilliancy of the conversation. There is no doubt that satiety produces somnolence and apathy, as is so often seen at English dinner-parties. Hence the Persians wisely defer the meal till the very end of the evening, when sleep is to be sought. During the earlier stages of the entertainment their minds are stimulated by wine, music, and mirth, without being dulled by the heaviness resulting from repletion. This, no doubt, is one reason why the conversation is, as a rule, so brilliant; but beyond this the quick, versatile, subtle mind of the Persian, stored, as it usually is, with anecdotes, historical, literary, and incidental, and freed for the time being from the restraint which custom ordinarily imposes on it, flashes forth on these occasions in coruscations of wit and humour, interspersed with pungent criticisms and philosophical reflections which display a wonderful insight. Hence it is that one rarely fails to enjoy thoroughly an evening spent at a Persian banquet, and that the five or six hours during which it lasts hardly ever hang heavily on one's hands."

Mr. Browne is at his best when in practical quest of his philosopher's stone—in plainer words, in the midst of his endeavours to render full justice to Bâbî-ism, by a disclosure of all its merits. It is to be apprehended that the pages in which he thus exhibits himself will not be the most generally appreciated. Yet the chapter on "Kirmân Society"—a motley gathering of many shades and sides of Islam and of kindly disposed Zoroastrians—is the most brilliant piece of Orientalism in the volume. By politicians Kirmân has hitherto been regarded as a convenient emporium at which a British consular agent should be stationed for the encouragement of a Perso-Indian land traffic, à la Baluchistan. Its governors had been helpful and hospitable to English visitors, and upon the whole it has enjoyed a good reputation among writers of books of travel. To Mr. Browne it has presented itself in a new aspect. In no other town which he visited in Persia had he made "so many friends and acquaintances of every grade of society, and every shade of piety and impiety." When quitting the place, and recalling the names of those who had visited him there or whom he had visited, he found the number whom he could remember to be "little short of a hundred." Moreover:—

"Amongst these almost every rank, from the Prince-Governor down to the mendicant dervish, was represented, as well as a respectable variety of creeds and nationalities—Beldûchis, Hindoos, Zoroastrians, Shi'ites and Sunnis, Shoykhis, Sûfis, Bâbis, both Behâ'î and Ezeli, dervishes, and kalandars belonging to no order, fettered by no dogma, and trammelled by but few principles. Hitherto I had always been more or less dependent on the hospitality of friends, whose feelings I was obliged to consult in choosing my acquaintances; here in Kirmân the garden where I dwelt was open to all comers, and I was able without let or hindrance to pursue that object which, since my arrival in Persia, had been ever before me, namely, to familiarise myself with all, even the most eccentric and antinomian, developments of the protean Persian genius. I succeeded beyond my most sanguine expectations, and found myself in a world whereof I had never dreamed, and wherein my spirit was subjected to such alternations of admiration, disgust, and wonder, as I had never before in my life experienced."

Enough has now been said to explain the lines on which this highly original volume has been written. The Oriental student may be advised on no account to hurry over its excellent introduction, treating, among other things, of the nature of linguistic study. To some it may savour of egotism; to others the character involved will possess sufficient interest to counteract such a notion. In any case, the experiences related are valuable, and the views expressed worthy of close consideration. Before taking leave of Mr. Browne it may not be superfluous to add that if any one expects to find in this book any new developments of Russian intrigue or statecraft, or any specimens of political gossip at the capital (for Teheran has now its diplomatic salons), he or she will be grievously disappointed. It eschews politics as its writer eschewed the society of Europeans generally, and of those native government officials whose business is rather the mysticism of diplomacy than that of Omar Khayyam and Hafiz.

The Badminton Library.—Swimming. By Archibald Sinclair and William Henry. (Longmans & Co.)

THE long and genial summer of last year fortified many a swimmer with reminiscences which will enable him to look without a shudder on the frontispiece of the present admirable addition to the "Badminton Library." The Serpentine Club on Christmas morning presents an example of heroism which it is not given to every one to follow; but the warmth of the season we have passed must have been enjoyed by every lover of the water, and tempted many to swim who never swam before. To all these the book will commend itself. Of modern scientific swimming it tells as much as can be gathered from written instructions; and the land drill here given, whereby it is attempted to teach the ordinary stroke, is probably a great advance on the old recipe of spreading oneself on a table with a live frog in a basin to copy. Those who desire to learn the formule of the old and new side stroke, the Trudgeon stroke (the swift arm stroke practised by the Indians of North and South America), and all the various complications of exhibition swimming, will find ample particulars at their service. The lesson of the book is that a knowledge of the art has spread remarkably among the town population of this country in the last twenty or thirty years. Swift swimming, such as is learned in covered baths, is becoming a common accomplishment, and "records" are constantly broken.

Only last August J. Nuttall, the Stalybridge swimmer, won a victory in his race against McCusker, the American. They swam in the sea, and this brings us to what we think is to some extent a defect in the book. It is too much a book of reference for the sporting performances of clubs in "Baths and Washhouses," and not sufficiently a general guide to open-water swimming. It is true that the authors speak in strong terms of the value of bathing in the open, and as honorary secretaries of the Life-Saving Society they cannot but dwell incidentally on the supreme value of back-swimming and familiarity with rough water; but they omit a good many details both in the way of instruction and example. Capt. Webb's gallant feats of swimming are recorded, notably that by which he won the first Stanhope Medal, presented to him at the centenary dinner of the Royal Humane Society in 1874, when the Duke of Edinburgh read the record of the achievement as follows:—

"On the 22nd of April, 1873, as the steamship 'Romea' was proceeding on her voyage from New York to Liverpool, with a stiff breeze blowing and the ship cutting through the water at the rate of fourteen and a half knots an hour, a seaman named Michael Heines, who was up in the rigging in performance of his duty, fell overboard. Immediately on this being perceived, a shipmate, named Matthew Webb, jumped overboard and swam to the place where the poor fellow had disappeared. He was too late, however, to recover him, seeing nothing but the man's cap, which he brought on board. The steamer was stopped, a boat was lowered and sent to the rescue, and after cruising about for half an hour, returned to the ship with Webb, who was found swimming nearly a mile astern of the ship, not at all exhausted, though suffering somewhat from the cold."

And a splendid selection of the performances of medal winners of the Society (of which it is pleasant to remember that Oliver Goldsmith was one of the original members) makes us acquainted with many heroes, some of whom, as Col. R. C. Hart, V.C., and Lieutenant-General Fraser, V.C., C.B., had previously shown other forms of courage. Yet there are few anecdotes of sea swimming as such. We will say nothing of a gentleman, long since dead, who was reported to have saved his life by swimming, for the first time, when washed off Aberdeen pier in a storm; but the authentic feat of Samuel Brock, fisherman of Yarmouth, who kept afloat, unaided, seven hours and a half after being capsized, was worthy of insertion in this volume. The date of his adventure was October 6th, 1835. Some hints, too, on the proper way of meeting breakers, and getting into a boat, simple matters as these are, might have been useful to fresh-water students.

In the interesting chapters on the art as practised at the public schools and universities, Rugbeians will note the omission of all reference to the river Avon and the classic "Swift's"; and Haileybury men will be surprised that there is no mention of one of the largest open-air baths in England. The training ships on the Thames and Mersey, too (Webb was a Conway boy), have been no mean schools of swimming, and their lists of winners of the competitions of the Royal Humane Society should have been recorded with those of other institutions. But these defects are trifling when compared with the mass of information afforded us on current matters of interest. Of all these the rescue and resuscitation of drowning persons are the most widely useful; and the whole subject is treated, from the first ventilation of the discovery of "Mr. William Tossack, surgeon in Alloa."

"November 11, 1732, early in the morning, an unusual steam was observed to come out of a coal-pit in this neighbourhood, belonging to the Honourable Sir John Schaw, of Greenock, which the people who went down to enquire the cause of it found to be the smoke of coals that lay about ten fathoms from the bottom of the pit, and were some way or other set on fire in two places. This pit, and all the others which had any communication with it, were shut up close, to smother the flame, and continued thus shut till December 3, when they were all opened. The one where the fire had been sent out a most nauseous steam, so that nobody could come near it, except to the windward. After some hours the colliers and others ventured down by the ladders into this pit, which was thirty-four fathoms deep, but soon came running up, all panting and breathless; they that came latest being scarce able to speak so much as to tell that one of their number, James Blair, was left dead. Two men who were no colliers offered soon after to go down, and others, animated by their example, accompanied them, and brought up the poor man by head, shoulders, legs, or arms; their hurry was so great they did not think how they carried him. When he came to the mouth of the pit, which was between half an hour and three-quarters after he had been left in the bottom of it, two had him by the arms, and two by the feet, with his back upmost. I made them immediately set him down at a little distance from the pit, turning him supine. The colour of the skin of his body was natural, except where it was covered with coal-dust. His eyes were staring open, and his mouth was gaping wide; his skin was cold; there was not the least pulse in either heart or arteries, and not the least breathing could be observed, so that he was in all appearance dead. I applied my mouth close to his, and blew my breath as strong as I could, but having neglected to stop his nostrils, all the air came out at them; wherefore, taking hold of them with one hand, and holding my other on his breast at the left pap, I blew again my breath as strong as I could, raising his chest fully with it, and immediately I felt six or seven very quick beats of the heart; his thorax continued to play, and the pulse was felt soon after in the arteries. I then opened a vein in his arm, which, after giving a small jet, sent out the blood in drops only for a quarter of an hour, and then he bled freely. In the mean time I caused him to be pulled, pushed, and rubbed, to assist the motion of the blood as much as I could, washed his face and temples with water, and rubbed sal volatile on his nose and lips. Though the lungs continued to play after I had first set them in motion, yet for more than half an hour it was only as a pair of bellows would have done—that is, he did not so much as groan, and his eyes and mouth remained both open. After about an hour he began to yawn, and to move his eyelids, hands, and feet. I then put water, in which I had dropped some sal volatile, into his mouth, which he swallowed, and caused him to be carried into a house hard by, where I set him in a chair, reclining backward. In an hour more he came pretty well to his senses, and could take drink, but knew nothing of all that had happened after his lying down at the foot of the ladders till his awaking, as it were, in the house. Within four hours he walked home, and in as many days returned to his work, but complained for a week or two of a violent pain in his back, which, I believe, was owing to the way of carrying him up out of the pit. Lady Schaw, Mr. Bruce of Kennet, and the Rev. Mr. Thomas Turner, and several other gentlemen, with three or four hundred people of the neighbourhood, were witnesses to what I have now related."

To this indefatigable surgeon and to Drs. Fothergill and Hunter are undoubtedly due the processes now systematized into a regular drill under the care of the Life-Saving Society. The "rescue" drill appears particularly important, as it enables the rescuer to deal scientifically with the resistance of a panic-stricken or ignorant subject. The illustrations in this part of the book are excellent.

But prevention is better than cure. Let us hail the great revival of swimming—an art practised by our ancestors, we find, in the days of Piers Plowman and of Beowulf before him. And as Mr. Robertson sang of "duck-puddle" (so quote our learned authors),—

Poscimus,—ingenni proles robustior ævi,
Nos quoque ut illis proniteamus avia,

Selections from the Letters, Despatches, and other State Papers preserved in the Military Department of the Government of India, 1857–58. Edited by George W. Forrest. Vol. I. With a Map and Plans. (Calcutta, Military Department Press.)

THE volumes that have appeared on the subject of the great Indian uprising in 1857 already fill several shelves, and yet there is room for more literature on the subject, and the interest of the public in that momentous drama is not likely to fade away altogether. So much of the personal element has been introduced, so many reputations have been on trial, and, let us add, so large an amount of prejudice exists in connexion with the Mutiny that it is difficult to ascertain either the facts or their bearing on each other and on the entire course of events. It was, therefore, a happy thought of Sir George Chesney to request the Director of Records to arrange systematically with a view to publication "all the State papers relating to the revolt of the Bengal native army in 1857 deposited in the different military offices of the Government of India." These documents are trustworthy expressions of contemporary opinion and records of facts by credible witnesses, and as such provide excellent materials for the historian; but very possibly in some instances they will be found to require elucidation, which may be forthcoming in course of time. As might be anticipated,

Mr. Forrest has done his work well, and the volume before us is the first instalment, containing papers relating to the manifestations of disaffection at Berhampore and Barrackpore, the revolt at Meerut and Delhi, and the siege and capture of the latter city. Documents relating to the events at Lucknow and Cawnpore, and, finally, the operations in Central India, and Sir Colin Campbell's campaign in Oudh, are to follow in future volumes.

As to the manner in which the first acts of disaffection and mutiny were dealt with, a perusal of the documents proves that, whatever may have been the subsequent errors of Lord Canning, his conduct with respect to the mutineers was firm and resolute; and a careful consideration of the different episodes cannot fail to impress the reader with the highest admiration for the calmness, energy, tact, and courage, both moral and physical, displayed by Major-General Hearsey, commanding the Presidency division of which Barrackpore was the headquarters.

It is less pleasant to read the papers connected with the outbreak at Meerut. The major-general commanding the division showed from the first singular unfitness for the responsible and important position which he held. He had plenty of evidence of disaffection. Not only, on April 24th, did eighty-five troopers of the 3rd B.L.C. refuse to use the new cartridges, but on the 28th the artillery recruits imitated their example. In the face of these facts, when the sentences of the eighty-five mutineers of the 3rd B.L.C. were read out to them at a garrison parade, he kept the whole force fermenting for several hours while irons were being riveted on the prisoners. Such unusual, and, under the circumstances, unwise conduct was condemned alike by the Commander-in-Chief and the Governor-General. His folly on that occasion was, however, cast into oblivion by his feebleness on the following day, when he made no attempt to break up the mutineers after their failure to surprise the European troops. As a matter of fact they were left unmolested for some time to commit atrocities at Meerut, and then to march to Delhi. The general was content to assume the defensive, an attitude which he preserved for several days, and the thought of what the mutineers would do or where they had gone never seems to have occurred either to him or the brigadier, Archdale Wilson. The brigadier calmly confessed, "It was not until next morning I learnt the mutineers had made for Delhi." There is some reason to think that, had the mutineers been followed up by the Carabineers and the troop of horse artillery, the rising at Delhi might not have taken place. General Hewitt threw the blame of inaction on Brigadier Wilson, who was in actual command of the station, and the brigadier cast it back on the general, saying that he was only in executive command, and acted entirely under the general's orders. To our mind the blame must be divided, the greater share, however, going to the general.

On the other hand, General Anson has been blamed for not having moved with sufficient promptitude on Delhi, but the censure is shown by the book before us to have been without justification.

Late on the 12th of May a copy of a telegram from Delhi to Umballa was brought by Sir Henry Barnard's aide-de-camp, which announced that mutineers had arrived and were burning bungalows. Immediately measures were adopted for collecting a force at Umballa, and on the morning of the 14th the Commander-in-Chief and his staff started for that station, arriving there on the night of the 15th and 16th. According to the statement of Sir Henry Norman, then belonging to the adjutant-general's department at headquarters,

"his Excellency considered that a force must be moved on Delhi, but the number of available troops was small, very little carriage and hardly any dhooly bearers were available, the artillery had only the ammunition in their waggons, which might be expended in one action, and even the infantry had very little ammunition with which to commence a campaign; and without some heavy guns it seemed useless to attack Delhi. However, the Commander-in-Chief decided that an advance must be made as soon as practicable, and the greatest possible exertions were required from departmental officers to enable the move to be made."

On the morning of the 17th, the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers arrived at Umballa, bringing up the force there to the following strength: two troops of horse artillery, one regiment of European cavalry, three regiments of European infantry, one regiment of native cavalry, a native company of artillery, and two regiments of native infantry. Four companies of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers and all the native troops save one squadron of cavalry and one regiment of native infantry were left either at or near Umballa. On the night of the 17th, two guns, a squadron of the 9th Lancers, and four companies of the 1st Bengal Fusiliers were moved forward to Kurnal, two-fifths of the entire distance to Delhi, and this advance guard was pushed on as troops could be spared to support or reinforce it. On June 2nd the advance guard—consisting of three squadrons of cavalry, six guns, and one European regiment—was within two marches of Delhi. On the 25th the Commander-in-Chief arrived at Kurnal, but he was seized with cholera the next day, and died early on the 27th. It will thus be seen that there was no want of energy, activity, and audacity on the part of General Anson.

Sir Henry Barnard, General Anson's successor, having been joined at Alipur—ten miles from Delhi—on June 6th, by a small siege train and the headquarters of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, and on the 7th by Brigadier Wilson with a small brigade from Meerut, marched at two in the morning of the 8th. That day he fought the battle of Budli-ki Serai—four miles from Delhi—beat the enemy, and established himself on the ridge in front of the city with a force in round numbers of 3,000 men and 22 field guns.

In order to connect the various documents and to impart clearness to his narrative of events Mr. Forrest has prefaced his valuable work with an introduction. Its accuracy may be considered established by the revision to which it has been subjected by Lord Roberts, who served throughout the siege of Delhi. The volume is further enriched by a copious index, and by maps and plans, and altogether it may be considered a most serviceable contribution to the history of the Mutiny.

RECENT VERSE.

Herod, and other Poems. By Hamilton Drummond. (Kegan Paul & Co.)

Agnes, The Bower of Souls, and other Poems. By Robert Calow. (Remington & Co.)

Footsteps of the Gods, and other Poems. By Elinor Sweetman. (Bell & Sons.)

Leisure-Hour Verses. By Alexander Small. (Andrew Elliot.)

A Legend of Florence, and other Poems. By Percy G. Mocatta. (Simpkin, Marshall & Co.)

Poema Paratitico: Odi Nuvoli. Di Gabriello d'Annunzio. (Milan, Fratelli Treves.)

MR. HAMILTON DRUMMOND'S poem 'Herod' has some power, but a good deal more effort at being powerful. It presents a picture of a "grey dole," oppressive with a ghastly barrenness and calm, wherein there sits and broods a spectral being whose reminiscences show him to be Herod the Great—to whom presently enters another such being, under the same doom, the Tetrarch Herod Antipas (as his subsequent desperate talk of his murder of John the Baptist and his sin to Christ at the judgment seat reveal), and the son, recognizing the father, bursts into devilish gloating. The scene is horrible and loathsome rather than of true dramatic awfulness, but as what it is it shows imagination—as when Herod Antipas, on his entry,

Slipped his tall height, and with ungentle hand
Thrust back the other's head, and while a child
Might count to twenty, gazed into his eyes,
Then broke into a noiseless, horrid laugh,
That wrinkled all his aged face with glees
More devilish than a scowl; then cried aloud:
Father!

upon which follows his outburst of jubilation. The atrocious intensity of the son's malignity against his father seems to be solely produced by the grievance that the father brought him up badly—a grievance which, though in truth of the worst, cannot with artistic faithfulness to nature be made motive of unalloyed vindictiveness in a son. Mr. Drummond's imagination serves him better, because less tasked, in short lyrical poems indistinct and suggestive, after a manner which seems somewhat of an idiosyncrasy of his, than in the wrought-out violences of 'Herod'; he has a power of making a theme loom into shape through a poetic semi-supernatural mistiness, and of using miraculousness naturally. He gives poems of other kinds—several of them attractive—but they have less individuality.

Of 'Agnes, The Bower of Souls, and other Poems,' by Mr. R. Calow, not much need be said. The "other Poems" have a merit which is lacking in 'The Bower of Souls'—they are not preposterously ambitious. But they cannot be said to possess poetic quality. 'Agnes,' a short novel in blank verse, aims its discourse above the author's ability. The volume concludes with a little prose tale, 'The Legend of the Moss Chapel,' which in simplicity and mistakenness is like the production of a clever child at its dawn of authorship.

The volume by Miss (?) Elinor Sweetman, 'Footsteps of the Gods, and other Poems,' contains nothing of distinct originality, nor of deep or markedly felicitous thought; but it is in euphony, in choice and natural diction, and in picturesqueness and poetic tenderness, considerably above the average of customary verse. Now and then, however, there is the blenship of a straining after supposed poetic effect and of a grasping at the adornment of fictitious similes. Thus we meet with an aspiration that the last fibres of some one's life may be a golden lattice to eternity; sunlight on the sea is called sun-spears piercing the deep; the song of a thrush when the hearer is in disquiet is a dagger-note; a primrose darts rays over the bank on which it grows;

hooded purposes appear
Like frozen giants cold and still;

and—a very odd excess in simile for a poem that is not jocular—

Every star as twilight grows
Nimbly twirls its silver toes.

Simile is otherwise than a beauty when the comparison does not at once strike home as faithfully suggested by its subject and faithfully suggestive of it. The longest poem in the book, 'The Silent Knight,' is spoiled by uninteresting versification. It is in blank verse so far that it is rhymeless, but the author has not perceived that the true nature of blank verse is not at all that of the unrhymed couplet, and that some variety in accentuation is necessary, together with some use of the caesura.

Most of Mr. Small's 'Leisure-Hour Verses' have appeared, he states, in the United Presbyterian Magazine, Life and Work, the Christian Leader, the People's Friend, the Children's Friend, and other publications. They are religious and moral pieces, wholesome in tone, and written in cheery metres. They can scarcely claim rank as poetry, but they are too unambitious to deserve disparagement.

'A Legend of Florence, and other Poems,' is a very small volume of very brief pieces of verse. The 'Legend' consists of a prettily fancied little story rhymed in but threescore lines: of the other pieces, all of them much shorter, several have been set to music by various composers, including Mr. Mocatta himself.

The exquisite artificer Gabriello d'Annunzio has published under an attractive title a collection of poems which have already appeared in the Italian newspapers and magazines. D'Annunzio, like Mr. Swinburne, has a remarkable faculty for poetical and mellifluous speech, but he is apt to be carried away by the sound of words, and his ideas suffer in consequence. In fact he may be called a virtuoso of words, and has shown to us once more how exquisitely musical the Italian language is. It seems hard to say that his speech is more often sound than sense. Nevertheless now and again he has graceful and delicate ideas, not very profound, but distinctly poetical. For the sea D'Annunzio, again like Mr. Swinburne, has a deep love, and the poems that touch on it are by far the best and most beautiful collected in the volume.

SCHOOL-BOOKS.

Things New and Old; or, Stories from English History for the Use of Schools. Standard III. By H. O. Arnold-Forster. (Cassell & Co.)—Mr. Arnold-Forster's third volume of 'Things New and Old' is written much on the same lines as the two volumes published a few months ago, which were adapted for the young children in the first two "standards" of our elementary schools. There is the same laudable desire to work from what the children know to what they do not know, and make the present explain the past. There are the same pleasant and simple style, the same ardent patriotism, and the same good and attractive "get-up." But this volume seems to us to mark an advance on those already published. The patriotism is under more restraint, and the facts are less carelessly prepared, though even now it is necessary to put in an errata slip explaining that the dates accompanying the frontispiece with its picture of a union jack are mostly wrong. The facts in this volume are nearly all quite accurate enough for the purpose. Mr. Arnold-Forster might, however, have remembered that if Alfred were taught to read by the "queen," as a well-known, but quite discredited story tells us, it must have been, not his mother Osburgh, but his foreign stepmother Judith, who "gave a beautiful book as a prize." Some of the geographical details are not quite precise. The "White Horse" can only be seen several miles west of Wantage Road station by the traveller on the Great Western Railway, and is by no means so well and clearly cut an animal as the greyhound-like quadruped figured on p. 109. It is by no means certain that the battle of Brunanburh was fought "near Beverley in Yorkshire" (p. 121). Bolton Abbey is not a ruin, as its name is used as the modern parish church, and the picturesque and decayed structure represented on p. 126 is apparently some other place. We should rather have seen the authentic picture of "Harold taken prisoner" reproduced from the Bayeux tapestry than the highly imaginative illustration of that event on p. 157. It is a pity that the maps fall into the old and certain error of making Surrey a part of the "heptarchic" kingdom of Sussex. But, such slight slips apart, we have little but praise for this able and successful attempt to put before the pupils of our elementary schools some of the chief turning-points of the national history.

The Invaders of Britain: an Introduction to the Study of British History. By Preston Weir, B.A. (Clifton, Baker & Son; London, Simpkin, Marshall & Co.)—Mr. Preston Weir may be right in his contentions that "the period of British history preceding the Norman Conquest is familiar to few," and that it "may fairly claim special attention as the great formative age of the nation." But if this is the case we fear that Green's 'Short History' and Freeman's 'Old English History'—to say nothing of more elaborate or less original books—have been written in vain; and we doubt whether Mr. Weir's little book of less than 200 pages will, with all its merits, succeed in attracting that attention of the great public which, on his showing, seems to have been denied to his better-known predecessors in the same field. For the truth is that there is no period of English history in which a new popular working up is less wanted than the period before the Conquest, and, though we cannot say that Mr. Weir has done his work of popularization badly, there is nothing in the standpoint, information, or literary quality of the book that seems to justify its existence. Mr. Weir tries hard to write a connected story, and, though hampered by the fact that there are sometimes no connected materials, he has by no means altogether failed. He has been very fairly successful in making his narrative interesting and lively. He believes, quite rightly, that disconnected facts have little educational value, and seeks to give us a "description of scenes." To "describe scenes" is, indeed, his constant endeavour, whether his authorities enable him to do so or not. He writes of neolithic man as if he had just come back from a visit to his underground habitation. He describes the battles of Romans and Britons, or English and Danes, as if he had been sent to the field as the special correspondent of a very modern newspaper. He knows exactly what songs the English sang the night before the battle of Hastings, and he knows why they did not indulge in riot and excess, as the Normans falsely report. Sometimes his efforts after the picturesque lead him very near the fault of "making copy," as when, for example, he writes of the landing of William the Conqueror near Pevensey: "There was no Channel fleet to engage the enemy at sea, no powerful batteries to sink his approaching vessels, no submarine mines to hurl them into the air, no telegraph to flash the news of danger through the land." This is poor stuff which might, perhaps, serve well in a university extension lecture, but it ought not to be printed and published in cold blood. But Mr. Weir is seldom so bad as this, and sometimes he is so bright and clear that he suggests the hope that some day he may do much better work. The facts are well chosen, and for the most part accurate. Though never original, Mr. Weir has used good modern books. Sometimes he gets a little beyond his mark, as when he tells us in his florid way how the Druids in Anglesey celebrated the praise of Bran the Blessed. Now

Bran the Blessed is at best a highly mythical character, but his chief claim to remembrance in fable is the story in a triad that he first brought Christianity to Britain, an act that would hardly commend him to Druids!

A Spanish Grammar for Schools. By H. Butler Clarke. (Sonnenschein & Co.)—A First Spanish Reader and Writer. (Same author and publishers.)—These volumes belong to the "Parallel Grammar Series," and share its advantages of good arrangement and clear type. Mr. Clarke is a well-read scholar, but we do not like his treatment of what he terms a "by-form" of the past subjunctive. Occasionally there is lack of clearness of statement. For instance, the following will confuse the beginner:—

"Proper Names admitting inflection take the mark of the Plural (as in English):—

i. When they refer to individuals:

e.g. los dos Argensolas, the two Argensolas...

iii. When they do not denote individuals:

e.g. los Valdes, men like Valdes; los Quijotes; don Juanes."

Similar obscurity marks some other statements. Occasionally he is too brief. To translate, for example, entender en "to understand" without further remark is to mislead learners.—The English of the 'Reader' has apparently been Hispanized to make translation easy. The wisdom of this device is dubious.

Sir Walter Scott: The Lay of the Last Minstrel. With Introduction and Notes. (Blackie & Son.)—The Warwick Shakespeare: The Tragedy of King Richard II. Edited by C. H. Herford.—The Tragedy of Julius Caesar. Edited by A. D. Innes. (Same publishers.)—The notes to the anonymous edition of the 'Lay' are sensible enough, but rather too numerous. The most valuable feature of Prof. Herford's excellent edition of 'Richard II.' is the appendix on Shakespeare's prosody. Its notes also seem to us a trifle over-elaborate. Is not "W. P. Daniel," on p. 7, a misprint for P. A. Daniel? We do not see why Prof. Herford's learned dissertation on metre should not have sufficed, and why Mr. Innes has also written an essay on metre. Mr. Innes's notes are less elaborate than Prof. Herford's, and are more suitable to schoolboys. The professor's annotations are better adapted to somewhat advanced students of English.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. JOHN OWEN's Skeptics of the French Renaissance (Sonnenschein) is so closely knit unto his former work on the 'Skepticism of the Italian Renaissance' that the paging is continuous. It will not, however, we fear, prove quite so satisfactory to readers as its forerunner. In the monograph on Pomponazzi more particularly that volume was a distinct addition to English literature. Of the writers here treated—Montaigne, Ramus, Charron, Sanchez (of the 'Quod Nihil Scitur,' not of the 'De Matrimonio'), La Mothe le Vayer, and Pascal—the greater are already fairly known to Englishmen who are likely to care about them. Moreover, Mr. Owen has in the present volume chosen, or at least titled, his subject very oddly indeed. Montaigne, his first name, does indeed belong to the "French Renaissance," and, by some stretch of kindness, the same may be said of Charron. But the latter is not really a man of the Renaissance at all; while Montaigne in France does not begin, but sums up and closes the period. To Rabelais (whom he in a table strangely enough places after Montaigne) Mr. Owen just refers; we cannot find a word, nor apparently could the index-maker, about Bonaventure des Periers, whose 'Cymbalum Mundi' is the exemplification, the central document, of the scepticism of the French Renaissance. Again, if the term Renaissance was to be stretched in this odd fashion over the seventeenth century, and to include La Mothe le Vayer, and even Pascal, how strange is it to find nothing (save the merest allusion) about Gassendi and the Neo-Epicureans—nothing about the earlier philosophic school of libertine freethinkers with whom Tallemant and Saint-Evremond make us acquainted! It would seem, indeed, as if Mr. Owen's real object had rather been to collect certain scattered studies of French scepticism of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries who happened to attract him, and as if outside of these individuals his knowledge of the French literature and thought of the time were not exactly exhaustive. Still, his book is worth reading, especially by those who are amiably indisposed to insist on a very methodical scheme and execution; who can forgive the never good and now belated form of "Friends in Council" dialogue diversified by the reading of essays and papers; and who are either not knowing enough or not censorious enough to detect the gaps in Mr. Owen's knowledge and treatment of the special period. These are often strange enough. For instance, he tells us that Charron was "noticed by the famous Queen Marguerite, sister of Francis I., who made him her preacher in ordinary. Henry of Navarre is also said to have assisted at his sermons." It is wonderful that, even if Mr. Owen happens not to have the family history of the last Valois at his finger-ends, his own last statement did not put him on his guard against his first. As a matter of fact "the famous Queen Marguerite, sister of Francis I.," died when Charron was about eight years old, so that his preaching must have been, indeed, wisdom out of the mouths of babes and sucklings. Of course his real patroness was the second Marguerite of Navarre, Henry's wife, not his grandmother—Francis's granddaughter, not his sister. To say that "Montaigne's 'Essais' were the first really popular work in French literature" is wildly erroneous. If Mr. Owen means by "popular" populaire, Marot's 'Psalms,' to mention nothing else, anticipated and beat the 'Essais' hollow. If he means "widely spread," the popularity—not merely French, but European—of the 'Roman de la Rose' reduces that of the 'Essais' to nothing. When Mr. Owen says that "Descartes' 'Discourse on Method' is a model of French style, but it is surpassed by the 'Thoughts,'" he says a very strange thing. For thoughts Pascal's 'Pensées' is indeed one of the greatest books ever written, and in detached phrases its merely literary qualities are now and then supreme. But it is not—and, being a mere congeries of scattered jottings, it could not by any possibility be—"a model of style." We need not, however, pursue this criticism further, or dwell on the swarms of misprints in proper names which disfigure the book. Its value, which is considerable, lies in the fact that if Mr. Owen is a little deficient in knowledge of his subject in detail, he has brought to bear on it a probably unsurpassed familiarity with the history of scepticism in general.

A Short History of the English People. By J. R. Green. Illustrated Edition. Edited by Mrs. J. R. Green and Miss Kate Norgate. Vol. III. (Macmillan & Co.)—Good as were the first two volumes of the illustrated edition of Green's 'Short History of the English People,' the third volume seems to us to have attained a still higher level of excellence. Starting as it does in the last glorious years of the reign of Elizabeth, and extending as far as the dramatic and picturesque period of the Popish Plot, this volume covers nearly the whole of the history of Puritanism, and all but the very close of the great seventeenth century struggle of king and people. The only falling off is in the quality of the coloured illustrations, which were one of the features of the earlier volumes. We have nothing but praise for the folding frontispiece, a good reproduction of the New Shakespeare Society's well-known chromolithograph of the Pepysian drawing of Old

London Bridge at about the end of the reign of Elizabeth. Equally good is the picture of the 'Judges in their Robes, temp. Elizabeth,' from a MS. Add. in the British Museum. But the coloured portrait of Speaker Lenthall can hardly be called a success. In compensation we have a magnificent series of contemporary portraits of nearly all the chief seventeenth century worthies. It is a rather surprising omission, however, not to have figured one of the well-known portraits of Henrietta Maria; while Henrietta's husband, Charles I., hardly gets fair treatment when, apart from the beautiful miniature of him as Prince of Wales, we have nothing better than two very stiff and formal portraits, taken respectively from the illumination of a patent in the Public Record Office and from a French print of Charles sitting in state in the House of Lords. Neither has Oliver Cromwell fared very well, being represented only by the not very characteristic Hinchinbrooke picture and by a rather poor and commonplace contemporary Dutch print. We can specially commend some fine pictures of ships and sea-fights, some noble representations of seventeenth century architecture, the curious and interesting political playing cards, the communion tokens, the medals, seals, and arms, and the interesting reproductions of contemporary squibs, broadsides, and title-pages. The maps are not up to the mark, but we are glad to welcome for the first time some plans of battles. The editors' notes on the illustrations are, as usual, full and helpful, and their slips, though not quite absent, are less numerous than in the previous volumes. They omit to include the Emperor among the princes who were anointed with oil at their coronation, and, a much worse mistake, they confuse the Scottish National Covenant of 1638 with the famous treaty between England and Scotland in 1643, to which alone the name "Solemn League and Covenant" is properly applied.

REGARDED as the outcome of a manly endeavour to make the best of so heavy an affliction as blindness, there is much to admire in Mr. Fenn's two volumes, 'Twist the Lights (Drane), which indicate a sensitive appreciation of nature and of literature, and a resigned and not uncheerful spirit. In other respects there is not much that calls for remark in these reprints of magazine articles, essays, and tales. The last, which deal in every case with apparitions, supernatural warnings, and more or less ghostly phenomena, are not very portentous or thrilling, though one or two are well imagined and related. That of 'The Phantom Fares' strikes us as about the best. The mysterious company which the 'bus conductor escorted from the City to Brompton Cemetery on All Souls' night, and the impression made on a certain statesman by the sight of a martyred general, on a smart stockbroker by the apparition of a ruined citizen, on an ambitious schoolmaster by the wraith of a pupil whose brain he had fatally forced, on a sleek Lothario by that of the maiden he had wronged, are described with a certain force and dramatic incisiveness which are not conspicuous in the other stories. Of the essays, varying much in their merit, that on 'Sight and Memory in Relation to Art' is naturally the most interesting.

MRS. NEWTON CROSLAND has written a pleasant volume of reminiscences in Landmarks of a Literary Life (Saunders Low & Co.), put together with remarkable clearness for an old lady of eighty, who can dimly remember the Sunday of Waterloo. Her recollections are of many kinds. In the drama she can just say she saw Miss O'Neill on the stage; but when seventeen or eighteen she beheld from the third row of the pit (then the favourite place of middle-class playgoers) the Shylock and Othello of Edmund Kean. At the opera she heard Malibran. She was acquainted with Lady Blessington, and dined at Gore House with Louis Napoleon when he had escaped from Ham. Of authors she has known Leigh Hunt, Douglas Jerrold, the Brownings, Mrs. Loudon, the Howitts, Miss Mitford, and others. As Mrs. Crosland is a believer in spiritualism, she naturally enough encouraged Mrs. Browning's strong leanings to a like faith, which her husband as naturally opposed:—

"The last time I had seen the Brownings in England the conversation turned to the subject of the then recent spiritual manifestations which had been the talk of the town. Mrs. Browning was deeply interested in many things I had to tell her, her husband joining at first but little in the conversation between us. When, however, I offered to lend her a certain book on the subject, which she wished to see, he broke in, somewhat vehemently, begging I would do nothing of the kind, as he did not wish her mind to dwell on such things. I remember Mrs. Browning exclaiming rather warmly, 'Robert, my soul is my own, though, with wife-like obedience, she yielded. But in Florence, with a smile on his face, Robert Browning asked me if I chanced to have that book with me, as now he had no objection to his wife reading it! I did chance to have it with me, and promptly fetched it from an adjoining room, and in two minutes, without being at all examined, it was slipped into the borrower's deep coat-pocket.'

Mrs. Crosland has creditably tried to avoid being prejudiced by her strong beliefs in spiritual phenomena, but probably she would not have thought so well of S. C. Hall had he not been an adherent; and the following is a naive specimen of a lady's logic. She discoursed on the subject to Mr. Skinner, of Cambridge (who was never, as she thinks, Professor of Hebrew), and remarks: "He must have been a man accustomed to weigh evidence, for he listened attentively to all I said."

A VERY beautiful specimen of what skill and taste can effect is the tiny Bible sent us by Mr. Frowde, of the Oxford Warehouse, printed in a clear type on beautiful india paper and provided with a selection of maps. Nothing we have seen in the shape of a pocket Bible can compare with this charming little 48mo. We should hardly have thought its manufacture possible.

WE have on our table Recollections of Countess Theresa Brunswick, by M. Tonger, translated by G. Russell (Fisher Unwin).—Barabbas: a Dream of the World's Tragedy, by Marie Corelli, 3 vols. (Methuen).—Carlsbad, by J. Hardmeyer (Zurich, Füssli).—Tales from the Cyropædia of Xenophon, edited by C. H. Keene (Macmillan).—A First Book in Latin, by H. Tuell and H. N. Fowler (Boston, U.S., Leach & Co.).—Politics in Democracy, by D. G. Thompson (Longmans).—Bell's English Classics: Byron's Child Harold, edited by H. G. Keene; Lamb's Essays of Elia: a Selection, edited by K. Deighton; Shakespeare's Julius Caesar, edited by T. Duff Barnett (Bell).—Rambles in Books, by C. F. Blackburn (Low).—I; or, the Art of Living, by a Man (Digby & Long).—Essays in Idleness, by Agnes Repplier (Gay & Bird).—The Whole Art of an Easy Share, edited by J. Morton (Gill).—Philip's Anatomical Models, by Dr. Schmidt, edited by W. S. Furneaux (Philip).—Diamonds and Gold in South Africa, by T. Reunert (Stanford).—The Story of Howard and Oberlin (Chambers).—"Out of It," by A. F. Radcliffe (Fisher Unwin).—One Snowy Night, by Emily S. Holt (Shaw).—Sable and White, by Gordon Stables, M.D. (Jarrold).—The King's Light-Bearer, by M. S. Comrie (Shaw).—Loyal to his Trust, by M. H. M. Capos (S.S.U.).—A Book of Thoughts, by M. B. Curry (Fisher Unwin).—Adventures in Mashonaland, by Two Hospital Nurses (Macmillan).—Alexander Mackay (S.S.U.).—Peter Promises, by Emma Marshall (Shaw).—A Girl Governess, by A. E. Ward (S.S.U.).—"That Mrs. Grundy," by L. C. Skey (Arundel Printing and Publishing Co.).—Home Words, 1893 ('Home Words' Office).—The Autobiography of an Old Passport, by the Rev. A. C. Smith (Digby & Long).—Smiles and Tears, by

A. Hood (Record Press).—Macmillan's Recitation Books, Standards VI. and VII., Nos. 37 to 42 (Macmillan).—Songs of a Struggling Player, by R. G. Legge (Innes).—The World's Need, by R. I. Close (Digby & Long).—Original Hamoron. Pieces in Prose and Verse, by F. W. Moore (Dean).—Baldur, a Lyrical Drama, by H. O. Anderson (Fisher Unwin).—The Crucifixion of Man, by G. Barlow (Sonnenschein).—Poems and Idylls, by the Rev. J. Cullen, D.D. (Partridge).—Samiasa, by J. A. Cuthbert (Glasgow, Murray).—The Old Law and the New Age, by R. S. Fletcher (Bell).—Holy Scripture, Human, Progressive, Divine, by T. S. Berry, D.D. (S.P.C.K.).—A Child's Religion, by the author of 'Jesus, the Carpenter of Nazareth' (Kegan Paul).—The Mourner in his Chamber, by the Rev. F. Bourdillon (S.P.C.K.).—"How Hard it is to be Good," by E. Lewis (S.P.C.K.).—Die allgemeine Existenz-Versicherung, by G. Josephi, Vol. I. (Zurich, Schabelitz).—and Shakespeare and das Tagelied, by Dr. L. Fränkel (Hanover, Helwing). Among New Editions we have An Elementary Text-Book of Biology, by J. R. A. Davis, 2 vols. (Griffin).—Moral Philosophy and The Constitution of Man, by George Combe (Cassell).—The Blot upon the Brain, by W. W. Ireland (Edinburgh, Bell & Bradfute).—The Channel Islands, by the late D. T. Ansted and R. G. Latham, edited by E. T. Nicolle (W. H. Allen & Co.).—The History of the Rochdale Pioneers, by G. J. Holyoake (Sonnenschein).—The Copper, Tin, and Bronze Coinage and Patterns for Coins of England, by H. Montagu (Quaritch).—The Harlequin Opal, by F. Hume (W. H. Allen & Co.).—The Icelandic's Sword, by S. Baring-Gould (Methuen).—Dairen, by F. F. Moore (Hutchinson).—The True Grandeur of Nations, by C. Sumner (Boston, U.S., Lee & Shepard).—The Olive and the Pine, by M. P. Lowe (Boston, U.S., Lothrop).—and Battalion Drill made Easy, by W. Gordon (Gale & Polden).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Altar-Book, containing Order of Holy Communion, edited by a Committee of Priests, folio, 6s. net.
Body's (Rev. G.) The School of Calvary, cheap edition, 2/6.
Hiley's (H. W.) A Year's Sermons, Vol. 1, cr. 8vo, 6s. cl.
Hilbard's (Rev. A. E.) A Continuous Narrative of the Life of Christ, cr. 8vo, 2s. 6d.
Holmes's (Rev. B. M.) Handbook to the Psalms, 12mo, 5s. cl.
Hutton's (W. R.) Low Spirits, and other Sermons, cr. 8vo, 5s.
Malan's (Rev. S. C.) Original Notes on the Book of Proverbs, Vol. 3, 8vo, 12s. cl.
Newbolt's (Rev. W. C. M.) Speculum Sacerdotum, or the Divine Model of the Priestly Life, cr. 8vo, 7s. 6d. cl.
Sayce's (Rev. A. R.) The Higher Criticism and the Verdict of the Monuments, cr. 8vo, 7s. 6d. cl.
Telford's (Rev. J.) The Story of Moses and Joshua, 2/6 cl.

Law.

Bristowe's (L. S.) Legal Handbook for Use of Hospital Authorities, cr. 8vo, 3s. 6d. cl.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Acland (H. W.) and Ruskin's (J.) The Oxford Museum, cr. 8vo, 4s. net.
Brett's (E. J.) Pictorial and Descriptive Record of the Origin and Development of Arms and Armour, 10s. net.
Century Gallery (The), Selected Proofs from the 'Century Magazine' and 'St. Nicholas', in portfolio, 42s. net.
Conder's (J.) Landscape Gardening in Japan, folio, 52/6 net; Supplement, 3s. net.
Diller's (A.) The Little Passion, with an Introduction by A. Dobson, cr. 8vo, 6s. net.
Evans's (M. M.) Chapters on Greek Dress, 8vo, 5s. net.
Salway's (C. M.) Fans of Japan, with Introduction by W. Anderson, 10s. 3d. net.
Scenes from Out-of-Door Life in Japan, photographed by W. K. Burton, oblong folio, 15s. net.

Music.

Richardson's (M. I.) Elements of Music, 8vo, 5s. cl.

Bibliography.

Slater's (J. H.) Early Editions, Bibliographical Survey of the Works of some Popular Modern Authors, 8vo, 21s. net.

History and Biography.

Dale (Rev. T. Pelham), Life and Letters of, edited by his Daughter, H. P. Dale, 3 vols, cr. 8vo, 12s. 6d. cl.
Dutt's (M. C.) History of Civilization in Ancient India, based on Sanskrit Literature, 2 vols, 8vo, 21s. cl.
Fraser's (L. M.) History of Trinidad, Vol. 1, 8vo, 12s. net.
Hamilton (John), Memoirs of Sixty Years' Experience as an Irish Landlord, edited by Rev. H. O. White, cr. 8vo, 6s.
Higginson (T. W.) and Channing's (E.) English History for American Readers, cr. 8vo, 4s. cl.
Folk (Londondale), Bishop and General, by W. M. Folk, 2 vols, cr. 8vo, 18s. cl.

Geography and Travel.

Burton (W. K.) and Ogawa's (K.) Out-of-Door Life in Japan, roy. 8vo, 12s. net.

Bliss's (R. H.) Gold, Sport, and Coffee Planting in Mysore, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Oppert (G.) On the Original Inhabitants of Bharatavaram, or India, 8vo. 30/ cl.

Folk-lore.

Rand's (Rev. S. T.) Legends of the Micmacs, 8vo. 12/ cl.
Vaux's (Rev. J. H.) Church Folk-lore, 8vo. 10/6 cl.

Philology.

Homer's Iliad, Book 9, edited with Notes by J. H. Pratt and W. Leaf, 12mo. 2 cl.
Milton's Paradise Regained, with Introduction and Notes by E. Deighton, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Pope's Works, Selections from, with Introduction and Notes by K. Deighton, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Reeper (H. F.) and Herring's (H.) Primary Latin Exercises, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Science.

Bushong's (C. H.) Modern Gynecology, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Dobbs's (A. B.) Text-Book of Solid or Descriptive Geometry, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Glasbrook's (R. T.) Heat, an Elementary Text-Book, cr. 8vo. 3/ cl. (Cambridge Natural Science Manuals.)
Lockyer's (J. H.) The Dawn of Astronomy, royal 8vo. 21/ cl.
Poynting's (J. H.) The Mean Density of the Earth, an Essay, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Urbanity's (Dr. A. R. van) Electricity in the Service of Man, trans. by E. Wormell, cheap edition, royal 8vo. 10/6
Wrightson's (J.) Sheep, Breeds and Management, 8vo. 2/6 cl. (Live Stock Handbooks.)

General Literature.

Birrell's (A.) Essays about Men, Women, and Books, 8/ cl.
Boyle's (F.) The Prophet Jehu, a Romance, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Davidson's (J.) Baptist Lake, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Fothergill's (J.) From Moor-Idles, a Love Story, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Glanville's (E.) A Fair Colonel, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Holmes's (H.) The Price of a Pearl, a Novel, 3 vols. 31/6 cl.
James's (H.) Partial Portraits, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl. (Essex Series.)
Jameson's (W.) My Dead Self, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Jeffries's (H.) Tolders of the Field, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl. (Silver Library.)
Mathison's Provincial Highest and Lowest, 1894 issue, 2/6
Maude's (F. W.) A Merciful Divorce, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Molesworth's (Mrs.) The Third Miss Quentin, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Montague's (C.) Tales of a Nomad, or Sport and Strife, 6/ cl.
Mortimer's (Mrs.) Object Lesson Notes for Infants and the Lower Standards, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Parry's (Major D.) The Story of Dik, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Roper's (C.) Where the Birds Sing, a Selection of Rustic Sketches, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Sergeant's (A.) Sir Anthony, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Story (The) of my Dictatorship, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Weyman's (G. J.) A Gentleman of France, cheap ed., 4/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Luther's Works, kritische Gesamtausg., Vol. 9, 28m.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Kraus (P. X.) Die christlichen Inschriften der Rheinlande, Div. 2, Part 3, 30m.
Siebschneides Hallisches Winckelmannsprogramm, 8m.

Drama.

Laussus (L. A. de) Les grands Maitres mis en petites Comédies, 3fr. 50.

History and Biography.

Kannengießer (A.) Ketteler et l'Organisation sociale en Allemagne, 3fr. 50.
Mazade (Ch. de) Berryer, De Villèle, De Falloux, 3fr. 50.
Monumenta Germanie Historica: Diplomatum Regum et Imperatorum Germanie Tomi 2, Pars 2, 20m.
Soulaige-Bodis (A.) La Diplomatie de Louis XV. et le Pacte de Famille, 3fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

Pellet (M.) Naples contemporaine, 3fr. 50.

Philology.

Dissertationes Philologicæ Argentoratenses, Vol. 11, 7fr.
Herrmann (A.) Untersuchungen üb. das schottische Alexanderbuch, 1m. 90.
Leipziger Studien, Vol. 15, Part 1, 7m.

General Literature.

Bourget (F.) Un Saint, Illustrations de P. Chabas, 3fr.
Desjardins (A.) De la Liberté politique dans l'état moderne, 1fr. 50.
Gaulot (P.) Les Chemises rouges, 3fr. 50.
Gyp: Le Roman d'un Philosophe, 3fr. 50.
Havex (R.) Études de Payages, 3fr. 50.
Laborde (R. de) Le Marquis de Guines, 3fr. 50.
Maiseux (R.) En Folie, 3fr. 50.
Matthey (A.) Le Serment d'une Mère, 3fr. 50.
Méténier (O.) Barbe-bleue, 3fr. 50.
Mirbeau (O.) Contes de la Chaux-de-Rein, 3fr. 50.
Raffalli, 4fr.
Rameau (F.) La Rose de Grenade, 3fr. 50.
Zabiet (M.) Le Crime social, 3fr. 50.

THE BOOK SALES OF 1893.

129, Buchanan Street, Glasgow, Jan. 15, 1894.

In his article last week on 'Book Sales, 1893,' Mr. Slater is in error in saying that 'The Essays on Several Subjects written by Sir Thos. Pope Blount,' in the late Mr. Joseph Crowther's library, was not sold.

It was in the catalogue, and I bought it at the sale in the ordinary way.

DAVID BRYCE.

WESTMINSTER WRITS.

British Museum, Jan. 5, 1894.

SOME three and a half years ago the Dean of Westminster asked me to examine an old box, containing charred fragments of parchment, which had lain in a dark corner of the Chapter Library beyond the memory of the oldest member of the Chapter, there being no tradition as to when, whence, or how it had come thither. On his pointing it out to me, I pulled out some of the uppermost pieces, and found they were writs of the time of Edward IV. As the Dean thought they might only form a small parcel at the top of the box, I plunged my arm down to the bottom, and found it choked throughout. I obtained permission to bring the box to the Museum and examine it at leisure. On emptying the contents I found them to be so dirty from long neglect and so sticky from the action of fire that it was necessary to have them cleaned before handling them. This was admirably done by Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode's binders, who returned the number of separate documents at 18,000 odd. My colleague Mr. G. F. Warner no sooner saw them than he suggested they were relics of the fire which in October, 1834, destroyed the Houses of Parliament, and I quickly found he was perfectly right. The contents of the Office of the Exchequer of Pleas were hastily removed during the progress of the fire, and stowed temporarily in the Chapter Library, Westminster. There they had remained, forgotten in the confusion of the time, until the Dean routed them out. About six months after the discovery of the first box the Dean wrote to tell me they had found several other boxes in a cupboard in the same room, and begged me to examine them. I went down the next day, and brought away seven more boxes crammed to the top with writs, and among them were fragments of stones and mortar from the old palace, a number of old rusty locks and keys, and three or four skeletons of rats. The parchments in these boxes were cleaned, like the former ones, and the whole number was returned by the binders (including those of the first box) at no fewer than 105,000 separate documents. I occupied my evenings during the last three winters with sorting and arranging the writs into the various counties to the sheriffs of which they had been addressed. There were none for the counties of Chester, Durham, or Lancaster; but London had a set apart from Middlesex. About 5,000 of the whole number were so damaged by fire as to be practically useless; but quite 100,000 can be consulted. On my communicating these facts to the Dean and Chapter, they, at once recognizing the fact that they had never formed part of the Abbey muniments, presented the whole series to the Trustees of the British Museum, and the writs are now numbered Additional Charters 38,443-38,482, each county having a number to itself, and they fill 9½ presses and 197 boxes. The dates of the writs range from Edward III. to Henry VIII.; but the general mass belong to the reigns of Henry VI. and Edward IV. They are full of historical and topographical information, and the trade or profession of every person named therein is given in English. Many names of abbots, priors, and persons not mentioned elsewhere are found here.

EDWARD SCOTT.

THE WILY ADVENTURER.

The Leadenhall Press, E.C.

THERE must be readers of the Athenæum who wonder why they receive catalogues and book prospectuses bearing on the face a little printed label instead of their name and address in writing. They may not all know that there are persons who make a trade of hunting up the names of "booky" people, which are classed in groups, and the printed labels are sold at so much a hundred to any one who will buy. So far there is nothing to complain of and something to admire. But when one finds the system extended, and that it is sought to poster authors with literature pertaining to a drink described as a brain refresher and a cure for corns disguised as a nerve soother, addressed to the care of the bland and childlike publisher who is supposed to meekly readress and forward, one must protest in the only way likely to carry weight. Business letters will be passed on as heretofore, but so far as the Leadenhall Press is concerned, pot, pan, and pill puffery is now, and ever will be, tumbled into the waste-paper basket.

ANDREW W. TUCKER.

DICKENS IN YORKSHIRE.

LOCAL traditions, like facts, are stubborn things; they die hard, for any association with great events or great men adds a lustre to a town which its inhabitants cannot readily forego. It is, therefore, not surprising that several fictitious incidents connected with the early history of Dickens should be cherished in Barnard Castle, and from time to time crop up in books, newspapers, and elsewhere. It is stated, for instance, in Murray's 'Handbook for Yorkshire' that when Dickens was collecting material for 'Nicholas Nickleby,' he stayed some weeks at the King's Head Inn, Barnard Castle; and when a tourist visits the town itself he is informed that the number of weeks was six, that Dickens arrived in the depth of winter, and that what he most wanted was information about the class of schools of which he afterwards held up a sample to public indignation under the name of Dotheboys Hall. Tradition adds that he wrote a great part of the book at this inn, working hard all day at a table which he drew near one of the windows of an upstairs sitting-room, and descending to the bar-parlour at night to pick up every fragment of information and hint of local colour that occasion offered; but finding the supply insufficient, he pined to make his way in an unsuspected manner into some of the schools themselves.

One day—so runs the legend—when much perplexed by the want of fuller details, he raised his eyes more frequently than usual from the paper before him, and observed on the opposite side of the narrow market-place a shop which seemed to be the favourite resort of men with idle time on their hands. This was what he wanted. He, too, went to that shop—he needed a watch-key, he said. It was a watchmaker's shop, as (it is said) might be seen by a large clock being placed over the door, and it belonged to a man called Humphrey. "By grace of the third Form," as Mr. Ruskin used to say, Dickens had thus gone to the man best able to help him, for Humphrey was bound by contract to keep the clocks of many establishments in the neighbourhood in order, and, among others, those of some of the principal cheap schools at Bowes. After a little conversation, Dickens persuaded Humphrey to go at once to some of them and let him go with him.

How much of all this is true? It is true that at the end of January, 1838, Dickens, being bound to deliver to his publisher on the 15th of March following the first number of a story to be completed in twenty monthly parts, and having made up his mind to expose the iniquities of certain cheap schools in Yorkshire of which he had heard stories even when a boy at Rochester, went northwards to learn as much as he could about them. It is also true that when at Barnard Castle he strayed into the shop of a clockmaker named Humphrey, and was taken by him to schools at Bowes and elsewhere—to Mr. Shaw's among the number, to the said Mr. Shaw's ultimate ruin; but very little else is true.

It is not true that Dickens stayed six weeks in the town: he only stayed two nights, as shall be proved by two of his own letters,—one dated February 1st, and written on his way to Barnard Castle; the other February 3rd, when he was already on his way home.

It is not true that he wrote a large part of 'Nicholas Nickleby' at the King's Head Inn. He began it on the very day or night of his return to London, and then wrote four slips, as may be seen in Forster's 'Life.' It would have been impossible to write much during a residence which only lasted two days; besides, Dickens was too wise an author to travel so far to improve his knowledge, and then deprive himself of all chance of doing so by shutting himself up in a room to write. Probably the only writing he did was to scribble down notes with the same rapidity that his illustrator, Hablot K. Browne, who was the companion of his journey, made sketches of typical faces and telling profiles on his thumbnail.

Neither can it be true that, while seated at his table writing, Dickens's attention was drawn to Mr. Humphrey's shop by the large clock over the door, for in 1838 Humphrey did not live at the shop which now bears, or lately bore, his name, but in one lower down the street, on the slope of the hill, which, owing to its position and to the market cross screening it from view, could not be seen from the sitting-room of the King's Head Inn. In addition to this, there was at that time no clock above the door. In 1840 Mr. Humphrey moved to a shop higher up the hill, and then placed a clock above his door.

There is a good deal of confusion about this clock, principally because Mr. Humphrey and the rest of the townfolk considerably enlarged the Dickens legend. There are some who go so far as to say that this was done for the sake of profiting by the connexion, and that not fewer than two clocks have been sold for high prices, as the very clock which brought Dickens to the shop and furnished him with the title of the novel which followed 'Nicholas Nickleby'—'Master Humphrey's Clock.' Dickens is said to have written a kindly letter to Master Humphrey, of Barnard Castle, and to have sent him a copy of this book, and the writer in Murray's 'Handbook' speaks of these things as being in the clockmaker's possession; but somehow or other, though Humphrey always said that he had received them, neither the book nor the letter was ever forthcoming when asked for. Twice or thrice, with intervals of years between, I have asked Mr. Humphrey himself about them, but his answers were always ambiguous. He would show me an uncomfortable, high, hard shop-stool, on which, he said, "my old friend Dickens used always to sit when he came to see me. Oh, many a time he came, and he would sit and talk for hours together, would Dickens." But as for the book which Dickens was popularly supposed to have sent him, or the letter, Mr. Humphrey only looked ill at ease if they were named, and said he did not "know what had got them." After his death I had some conversation with his daughter-in-law on the subject, and asked if they had been found and I could see them. She shook her head doubtfully and doubtfully, and replied that she knew nothing about them—she had been told that such things existed, but never could get the poor old man to say much about them. "I don't know how it was," said she, "but he didn't like to be asked about that letter, or the book either. He was very fond of talking of Mr. Dickens coming here, and of their going to Mr. Shaw's school together; but he couldn't abide to have anything said to him about either the book or the letter." My experience was the same as hers. He once told me that he had let a gentleman from Leeds have them to look at, and had never been able to get them back; but the subject was manifestly distasteful, and unless strong evidence were brought, I should be inclined to regard these things as parts of the Dickens myth.

Mr. Humphrey also disliked to be questioned about the length of Dickens's visit to the town. To that inquiry he never gave a direct answer. "Well, he stayed here a canny time," was all that he would say. No doubt he was perfectly aware that Dickens was only forty-eight hours in the neighbourhood, and neither liked to tell a direct lie nor yet to speak the truth. The same reticence was shown by two of the best and most straightforward women possible—the landlady of the King's Head Inn and her sister. They informed me, with much pride, that Dickens had stayed there and had written a good deal of 'Nicholas Nickleby' in their house—that he was always writing, and that they would show me the very inkstand that he had used; but when I asked how long he stayed (I did not then know), each drew back—a chill came over them, and they said, "We cannot tell you the precise length of his stay." I had no idea then that its length had been so exaggerated, and only inquired because I had a letter which seemed to mark the end of it, and to be written on his way home. Not until many years afterwards, when Forster's 'Life' was published, did I learn how rapidly Dickens had mastered his details. Very few of his early letters have escaped destruction; but one which he wrote to his wife on his arrival at the inn at Greta Bridge (the George Inn, described afterwards as the place where Nicholas Nickleby met Mr. Squeers) is printed by Mr. Forster. It is dated February 1st, 1838, and describes a journey in what are called "the good old coaching days," the most enjoyable part of which was probably the arrival at the inn:—

"As we came farther North the mire became deeper. About eight o'clock it began to fall heavily [Qu. can "mire" be a misprint for snow?], and as we crossed the wild heaths hereabout, there was no vestige of a track. The mail kept on well, however, and at eleven we reached a bare place with a house standing alone in the midst of a dreary moor, which the guard informed me was Greta Bridge. I was in a perfect agony of apprehension, for it was fearfully cold, and there were no outward signs of any one being up in the house; but to our great joy we discovered a comfortable room, with drawn curtains, and a most blazing fire. In half an hour they gave us a smoking supper, and a bottle of mulled port, in which we drank your health, and then retired to a couple of capital bedrooms in each of which there was a rousing fire half-way up the chimney. We had for breakfast toast, cakes, a Yorkshire pie, a piece of beef about the size and much the shape of my portmanteau, tea, coffee, ham, eggs, and are now going to look about us. Having finished our discoveries, we start for Barnard Castle, which is only four miles off. All the schools are round about that place, and a dozen old abbeys besides, which we shall visit by some means or other to-morrow. We shall reach York on Saturday, I hope (Feb. 3rd), and God willing, I trust I shall be at home on Wednesday morning."

He was at home on Tuesday evening (February 6th), and in this exceeded his expectations; but if he found more abbeys than one—Egglesstone, and that not more than a step or so out of his way to Barnard Castle—he was by so many the gainer over all other travellers.

Not a word too much is said about the food or fires—North-Country innkeepers have large views on these subjects; but what mail-coach ever struggled onwards over wild heaths without a vestige of a track? In point of fact, the road was, and is, an excellent high road, with a Roman road for its ever-enduring basis; and bordered by hedgerows, fields, and villages, it cuts its way, according to the manner of Roman roads, straight to its mark. As for the inn at Greta Bridge, it stands not on a heath, but in the little village of the same name, by the side of the road, and the only drawback to it is that it is much overshadowed by the trees in Rokeby Park.

This letter, however, supplies the date of Dickens's arrival in Barnard Castle (February 1st). It does more, indeed, for it shows that it had never been his intention to spend more time in that town than he did spend. He arrived there during the morning of February 1st, and on February 3rd had not only reached Darlington on his homeward way, but had had time to take up the Durham Advertiser, and read a paragraph which concerned himself, and fire off an indignant letter to the editor, which I possess, and prize as a model of clear and emphatic contradiction of misstatements. This is the newspaper paragraph which roused his anger:—

"Brief Autobiography of Bos.—As part of the uncertainty of Literary Remuneration," says Dr. Mackenzie, the Liverpool correspondent of the New York Star, "I would instance the example of Bos. When he commenced the 'Pickwick Papers' he was living on five guineas per week as reporter on the Morning Chronicle. Chapman & Hall, having with some difficulty been persuaded to become the 'Pickwick' publishers, offered to give him ten pounds a month for each number, or 12*s.* for the whole work. After the second number, the sale became so immense as to induce the publishers to give him 7*l.* a month; and since No. 10 he has had one half of the profits, including those of the first numbers. By the 'Pickwick Papers' alone he will net between 2,000*l.* and 3,000*l.* Nor is this all; he was paid two guineas for 'Watkins Tottle,' and other sketches by Bos," which appeared in the Morning Chronicle. For a column of such sketches he would have ten guineas from any magazine. He has, of course, cut reporting, and instead of 300*l.* a year, which he made eighteen months ago, is in the receipt of at least 3,000*l.* To ensure him exclusively for himself, Mr. Bentley, the publisher, allows Mr. Dickens the sum of 1,000*l.* a year as Editor of Bentley's Miscellany, and twenty guineas a sheet also for whatever he writes in it. This is turning a popular name to good account."

A fortnight later the Durham Advertiser contained the following reply to Dr. Mackenzie's 'Brief Autobiography,' with this introduction by the editor of the newspaper:—

"Bos versus his Autobiographer, Dr. Mackenzie. —We have received from the great and glorious Bos himself—the highly talented Charles Dickens, the following contradictions to the 'Brief Autobiography' put forth by Dr. Mackenzie of Liverpool, and [sic] which was copied into our columns a fortnight ago.

Darlington, Saturday morning, Feb. 3, 1838.

SIR,—Waiting in this place for a York coach this morning, I chanced in the course of the few minutes here, to take up your paper of January 26th, in which I saw a brief autobiography of myself by Dr. Mackenzie. Dr. Mackenzie, whoever he may be, knows as much of me as of the meaning of the word autobiography, in proof of which, may I beg you to state, on my authority, that when I commenced the 'Pickwick Papers' I was not living on five guineas a week as a reporter on the Morning Chronicle; that Messrs Chapman & Hall were not persuaded with some difficulty to become the 'Pickwick' publishers, but, on the contrary, first became known to me by waiting on me to propose the work; that no such pecuniary arrangement as the paragraph describes ever existed between us; that by the 'Pickwick Papers' alone I have not netted between 2,000*l.* and 3,000*l.*; that the sketch called 'Watkins Tottle' never appeared in the Morning Chronicle; that I am not now in the receipt of 3,000*l.* a year; and that Mr. Bentley does not give me 1,000*l.* a year for editing the Miscellany, and twenty guineas a sheet for what I write in it?

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,
CHARLES DICKENS."

Many years afterwards (1870), Dickens then being dead, Dr. Mackenzie published a 'Life of Dickens' (Live and learn!—it was not an 'Autobiography' this time), in which it is curious to find that he has made copy of the sledge-hammer stroke which would have pulverized most people. The letter just quoted was, by the way, given to me more than forty years ago by a clergyman who was the son of the editor to whom it was addressed. Dr. Mackenzie introduces it thus ('Life of Charles Dickens,' p. 213):—

"The following letter from Mr. Dickens, written after the completion of 'Pickwick,' and when 'Oliver Twist' had appeared in monthly instalments, requires a short introduction. A friend of mine, who was going to the Bar as a nominal law student in the Inner Temple, London, qualified himself in the then usual manner, not by mastering Coke upon Littleton, or Blackstone's 'Commentaries,' but by eating three dinners 'in Hall' each term. He privately corresponded with the proprietor of the newspaper in his native town. While 'Pickwick' was in progress, there was considerable curiosity to learn who its author was, and at Christmas, 1837, the future barrister sent some of the gossip of the clubs on that subject, which my editorial friend was only too glad to print, thoughtlessly retaining the signature. The newspaper accidentally fell into Mr Dickens's hands. At that time, January, 1838, he was in Yorkshire collecting materials relative to the seminaries there, of which Dotheboys Hall became the representative in prose fiction. He wrote a note, short and sharp, dated Darlington, Saturday morning (the actual time was at the close of January, 1838), declaring that in no one particular did the published 'gossip' even approach correctness."

Then Dr. Mackenzie proceeds to quote the letter to the Durham Advertiser, the original of which I have; but he begins only at, "That Messrs. Chapman & Hall," &c., carefully omitting the part about himself and his 'Brief Autobiography of Charles Dickens.' He goes on to say:—

"This note was published in the peccant journal, and the gentleman who had figured as the 'London Correspondent' peradventure, after consulting some of his friends, frankly wrote to Mr. Dickens, mentioning how—without his authority or knowledge—part of one of his private letters had been printed, with his signature [N.B. No signature was printed in the newspaper], and how much he regretted that his careless gossip had annoyed a writer whom he so greatly admired. This brought the following reply, frank and courteous:—

48, Doughty Street, London, Friday, Feb. 18, 1838.

DEAR SIR,—I have to thank you very cordially for your letter of the twelfth, and to assure you that your explanation is quite satisfactory.

I saw the paragraph in question during a stay of a few minutes at Darlington, in Yorkshire, and wrote a hasty contradiction to the Editor of the newspaper in which it had appeared. It certainly contained nothing ill-natured or offensive, but I felt, for the moment, annoyed at my private affairs being dragged before the public, and stated incorrectly in every particular. Any impression of this kind is at once removed by your frank and manly letter, and I hasten to assure you that I care nothing for the paragraph, since it has been the means of calling forth so polite and ready a communication."

Dr. Mackenzie, of whose account of this incident the public shall be left to form its own opinion, says of this letter:—

"As we are 'nothing if not critical,' I may mention that Mr. Dickens was mistaken in locating Darlington 'in the county of Yorkshire,' for the simple reason that it is in the County Palatine (sic) of Durham. I may add that in fitness of time the gentleman to whom this gracious letter was addressed became a barrister at law, was introduced to Dickens by Serjeant Talfourd, became very intimate with him, has long been a Queen's Counsel in high practice, and is even in a fair way to a seat on the judicial bench. Mr. Dickens's autograph letter has remained in my possession, my friend not having cared to preserve it among his archives, while, as I had not only suggested, but written his letter of apology to 'Box,' I consider myself entitled to retain the reply."

Judging by the fact that, though Dr. Mackenzie expressly says that the signature of this barrister friend was thoughtlessly retained to the paragraph which offended "Box," it actually bore Dr. Mackenzie's own name, we quite feel that no one had a better right to this autograph letter than Dr. Mackenzie himself. M. H.

Literary Gossip.

THE second volume of Mr. Moncreu Conway's collected edition of Tom Paine's works, which will probably appear in the spring, will comprise most of Paine's writings in England between the time of his arrival, September 3rd, 1787, and his departure for France five years later. The 'Rights of Man' will be preceded by a document which has never appeared in English, but was translated from the manuscript by Condorcet for the Chronique du Mois (Paris) of May, June, and July, 1792. It was written a year before its translation in reply to questions addressed to Paine concerning some fundamental provisions of the constitution submitted by the National Assembly, and in it the writer states that he is engaged on a work relating to those subjects. This work was Part II. of 'Rights of Man' (published February 17th, 1792), several passages of which are anticipated in substance in the manuscript written nearly nine months before.

MRS. MACQUOID's new novel in two volumes, called 'In an Orchard,' will be published at the end of this month by Messrs. Bliss, Sands & Foster. It has been revised and enlarged since it appeared in a serial.

MR. COOKE-TAYLOR contributes a volume on 'The Factory System and the Factory Acts' to Messrs. Methuen's series "Social Questions of To-day." It will be published almost immediately.

WE are sorry to hear of the serious illness of Mr. George Redway, of the firm of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co.

MESSRS. WARD & DOWNEY are to publish a new story, 'Baptist Luke,' by Mr. John Davidson, author of 'Fleet Street Eclogues.' It is an account of a visit to London of a Scotch family who experience there remarkable adventures with décadents. The same publishers will issue early in February a novel entitled 'The Real Charlotte,' by Miss Somerville and Martin Ross, authors of 'The Irish Cousin' and 'Through Conemara in a Governess Cart.'

THE retirement of Mr. Oswald Crawford from the control of Black and White has caused much surprise. The paper has never been so attractive or so well edited as it has been during the last few weeks. It is said that the capital required for starting yet another illustrated paper has been subscribed.

MR. MARINDIN is editing for Mr. Murray a revised edition (in one volume) of Sir W. Smith's 'Dictionary of Ancient Biography, Mythology, and Geography.' The biographical portion certainly needed overhauling.

A NEW novel by Ada Cambridge, entitled 'A Marriage Ceremony,' will be issued by Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. on the 1st of February.

MISS DUFFUS HARDY writes:—

"In the review of my mother's novel, 'A Buried Sin,' in the last number of the Athenæum, the critic points out the desirability of its being made known, 'in the case of works published posthumously, whether the MSS. were left in a completed form or only in the shape of notes requiring completion by others,' &c. May I, therefore, ask if you could find space to mention in the forthcoming number (if I am not too late) that in this case the MS. was left complete and ready for publication? I should like to add that, during the time that has elapsed between the author's death and the appearance of the book in three-volume form, it ran for twelve months as a serial (in London Society)."

ANOTHER Lancashire writer has passed away in the person of Mr. John Whittaker, who came to the front during the great cotton famine in Lancashire by contributing to the press under the pseudonym of "A Lancashire Lad." His pathetic appeals on behalf of the starving operatives attracted considerable attention at the time.

By the death of Mr. George C. Foult towards the end of last year, at Miyanoehita in Japan, the Americans lose their best authority on Corea. He was in the United States navy, and being on the Japan station learned Japanese and Korean. He was then transferred to be Naval Attaché to the United States Korean Legation. In the outbreak of 1884 he had a narrow escape of losing his life in Corea. His observations on Corea are contained in a series of papers in the 'United States Foreign Relations for 1885.' Abandoning the navy, he married a Japanese wife and settled in Kioto, becoming Professor of Mathematics in the Doshisha University.

MESSRS. BROWNE & BROWNE, of New-castle-upon-Tyne, write:—

"A new edition of Gammage's 'History of the Chartist Movement,' which we are just passing through the press, will be illustrated with portraits of the early Chartists and views bearing on the movement. We shall be glad if any of your readers having such will lend them for reproduction. Every care, of course, will be taken of them."

THE deaths are announced of Mrs. W. M. Thackeray, the widow of the great novelist, and of Mrs. W. W. Story, wife of the well-known sculptor and author.

THE seventh volume of 'Book Prices Current,' giving the results of the book sales of 1893, will be issued by Mr. Elliot Stock. The usual copious index and review of the year's sales will accompany the volume.

MESSRS. SKEFFINGTON are going to publish an account of 'The Rise and Progress of Rossall School,' by Canon St. Vincent Beechey, the founder. They are also about to issue a translation of 'The Celestial and Ecclesiastical Hierarchy of Dionysius the Areopagite,' by the Rev. John Parker.

MR. BRACKSTONE BAKER was buried on Saturday last. Many years ago he was a well-known writer on Canadian and railway subjects.

AN announcement is made of the payment of an interim dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on the preference stock of Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Limited.

MESSRS. ASHER have become London agents for M. Calmann Lévy, and also for the new Revue de Paris.

IN 1892 upwards of one thousand publications more were issued in Germany than in 1891. The greatest increase was in the department of jurisprudence and political science.

THE Levant Herald brings a rarity from Constantinople—a long report of a lecture on Turkish literature at the British Institute by Mr. Th. Papazoglu. The English in Turkey are well known for their neglect of the language and studies of the country, which is the birthplace of many of them. The lecturer, who spoke English fluently, devoted himself chiefly to the modern literature, furnishing sketches of the authors. Among these he placed foremost the ulema Jevdet Pasha, the historian, as a founder of the later style. Zia Pasha he named as successful in poetry and prose; and Saadullah Pasha was mentioned as taking an active part in discountenancing the substitution of Persian for Turkish. The female school was represented by Fatima Aliah Hanum, a clever daughter of Jevdet Pasha, who sent a work on Turkish women to Chicago, which gained a prize. This lady does not favour her countrywomen who ape European manners, and who differ in no way from the women of Pera, and while particular as to their faces being covered, are careless as to what comes from their tongues, although, according to their religion, it is the hair and not the face that should be covered. Mr. Papazoglu devoted himself particularly to the late Kemal Bey, who lived much in London, and from whose works he quoted largely. To him was attributed the introduction of the historical and sociological novel into Turkey. Among contemporaries, Abdul Haqq Hamid Bey, of the Embassy here, and Ahmed Midhat were mentioned. There will be another lecture by Mr. J. W. Whit-tall, a well-known student of Turkish.

TAUFIK EL BEKRI, the head of the Bekrites in Egypt, is printing at Boulak a poetical chrestomathy entitled 'Fuhûl esh-shu'r,' the supervision of which has been entrusted to the well-known Arabic scholar Esh-Shin-giti. Abu Zeid's 'Jamharat el 'Arab' has just left the Boulak press.

An index of names of persons occurring in the Arabic catalogue of the Khedivial library is in course of preparation.

The decennial report on the moral and material progress of India is being written by Mr. J. A. Baines, C.S.I., of the Bombay Civil Service, and late Census Commissioner to the Indian Government. It is in a forward state, and will probably appear in March. Since Mr. Markham, the present President of the Royal Geographical Society, first initiated the plan of these decennial reports, two decades have passed. The last report appeared in 1885, and was written by Mr. Jas. S. Cotton.

The Parliamentary Papers this week include a List and Index to the Sessional Printed Papers (2s.); and a Calendar, History, and Summary of Regulations of the Science and Art Department, 1894 (2s. 3d.).

SCIENCE

MATHEMATICAL LITERATURE.

An Essay on Newton's Principia. By W. W. Rouse Ball. (Macmillan & Co.)—The author has chosen a somewhat misleading title for this volume, and one which, we are afraid, may interfere with its sale. 'An Essay on Newton's Principia' will suggest to many something solely mathematical, and therefore wholly uninteresting. No inference could be more erroneous. The book certainly deals largely in scientific technicalities which will interest experts only; but it also contains much historical information which might attract many who, from laziness or inability, would be very willing to take all its mathematics for granted. Mr. Ball carefully examines the evidence bearing on the development of Newton's great discovery, and supplies the reader with abundant quotations from contemporary authorities. Not the least interesting portion of the book is the appendix, or rather appendices, containing copies of the original documents (mostly letters) to which Mr. Ball refers in his historical criticisms. Several of these bear upon the irritating and unfounded claims of Hooke, with respect to whom the following quotation from one of Newton's letters to Halley does not seem at all too severe:—

"Since my writing this letter, I am told by one, who had it from another lately present at one of your meetings, how that Mr. Hooke should there make a great stir, pretending that I had all from him, and desiring they would see that he had justice done him. This carriage towards me is very strange and undeserved; so that I cannot forbear, in stating the point of justice, to tell you further, that he has published Borelli's hypothesis in his own name; and the asserting of this to himself, and completing it as his own, seems to me the ground of all the stir he makes. Borelli did something in it, and wrote modestly. He has done nothing, and yet written in such a way, as if he knew and had sufficiently hinted all but what remained to be determined by the drudgery of calculations and observations, excusing himself from that labour by reason of his other business, whereas he should rather have excused himself by reason of his inability. For 'tis plain, by his words, he knew not how to go about it. Now is not this very fine? Mathematicians, that find out, settle, and do all the business, must content themselves with being nothing but dry calculators and drudges; and another, that does nothing but pretend and grasp at all things, must carry away all the invention, as well of those that were to follow him, as of those that went before..... Should a man who thinks himself knowing, and loves to show it in correcting and instructing others, come to you, when you are busy, and notwithstanding your excuse press discourses upon you, and through his own mistakes correct you, and multiply discourses; and then make this use of it, to boast that he taught you all he spoke, and oblige you to acknowledge it, and cry out injury and injustice if you do not; I believe you would think him a man of strange unsociable temper."

"Hooke," says Mr. Ball,

"has been described as 'the universal claimant.' He attacked nearly every scientific question then discussed, and had he concentrated his efforts, his great ability would doubtless have led him to many valuable discoveries; but usually his conclusions were hasty and incomplete, while his assertions as to what he had proved were sometimes reckless, and are unconfirmed by his extant papers."

A Treatise on the Theory of Functions. By James Harkness, M.A., and Frank Morley, M.A. (Macmillan & Co.)—This is the joint production of two professors in American colleges, but of English training: the one being late scholar of Trinity, and the other of King's College, Cambridge. We recently reviewed Dr. Forsyth's excellent treatise on the same subject, and we can speak in equally favourable terms of this, which is nearly as extensive. Yet there is a marked difference in their aims and modes of treatment. The former goes more fully and thoroughly into the various points and theorems discussed, and is therefore, on the whole, more suited for the advanced mathematician. The latter, though by no means wanting in clearness and precision, is more superficial—we do not use the word in any derogatory sense—and is, for that very reason, perhaps more adapted for the needs of a person quite fresh to the subject. On many points the two works necessarily overlap, covering the same ground, and treating it pretty much in the same manner; but they also frequently supplement each other; so that the mathematician who has both is decidedly better equipped for the study of functions than the possessor of only one. We may add that the diagrams are all clear and well executed.

VESPUCCI IN INDIA.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Historical Society (December 21st, 1893) a paper was read by Mr. C. Raymond Beazley, M.A., on 'The Colonial Empire of the Portuguese to the Death of Albuquerque.' During the discussion which followed, one of the speakers, a well-known lecturer on India at Cambridge, ventured the remark that nothing new had been added to our knowledge of the subject, either in the paper or by subsequent speakers. By the courteous desire of the President, Sir M. E. Grant Duff, I ventured to raise the question as to how far our present knowledge enabled us to associate the name of Amerigo Vespucci with the establishment of the Portuguese empire in India. I then proceeded to draw attention to the recently discovered letter of Vespucci in Dutch, which was first announced in your columns of November 5th, 1892, p. 624. At this date it was mentioned that as the voyage was ostensibly from March 25th, 1500, to November 15th, 1501, as appears from the printed text, the writer of the announcement was unable to square it with any of the hitherto known letters of Vespucci, or with any of the early voyages to India of the Portuguese which cover this period. The reviewer's inability to square Vespucci's letter with the dates of 1500-1501 I explained as follows: A day or two before Mr. Beazley read his interesting paper, I had the good fortune, by means of a recent and more trustworthy translation of the letter, made for me by my friend Mrs. G. F. Barwick, to discover that the year of the voyage was either an error on the part of the printer of the letter, J. van Doesborch, of Antwerp, in 1506, or possibly an error contained in the original MS. letter, now lost. As I was able to point out to Mr. Beazley's appreciative audience, the whole of the transactions mentioned in Vespucci's letter referred to a later voyage, namely, that of March 25th, 1505/6, made by Dom Francisco de Almeida, the first Portuguese Viceroy of India.

Herewith I give three passages from the late Mr. R. H. Major's 'Life of Prince Henry of Portugal' (first edition), relating to Almeida's voyage, and also three from Vespucci's letter for comparison. These comparative extracts will, I believe, be as new to your readers as to Mr. Beazley's audience, as I was not prepared to produce them at the meeting referred to:—

Major's 'Prince Henry.'

"In his outward passage Almeida conquered Quilua (H. coast of Africa) and the King, who refused to pay the stipulated tribute, and who had shown himself an enemy to the Portuguese. He set a new king upon the throne, and himself crowned him with great solemnity."

"On his (Almeida's) arrival in India, he solemnly crowned the King of Cochim, to whom King Manoel sent a rich crown of gold."

"As a proof of his success Almeida sent back in the beginning of the following year (1500) eight ships loaded with spices to Portugal."—P. 415.

"On the thirtieth day (October, 1505) we cast anchor in front of Gutachin (Cochin). Thereupon the King of Gutachin came unto the captain of the ship, and he (the captain) gave him a golden crown which the King of Portugal had sent him."—P. 17.

"So we set sail on the 21st day of January with three ships from Canane bound for Portugal."—P. 18.

I may add that these extracts may be compared and verified with Bishop J. Osorio de Fonseca's 'History of the Portuguese during the Reign of Emmanuel' (Gibbs's translation), vol. i. book iv., 1752.

With these parallel passages before us, read in the light of the former announcement in the Athenæum, Nov. 5th, 1892, I venture to submit that we are here confronted with entirely new data respecting Vespucci, which will serve to fill a hiatus in his career simply as a ship's purveyor or merchant's agent during these eventful years of 1505-6, and which will also enable us to form a truer estimate of the claims set up for him as an original discoverer and as an unconscious rival of Columbus.

C. H. COOTE.

SOCIETIES.

GEOGRAPHICAL.—Jan. 18.—Sir J. Kirk, V.P., in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Hon. B. G. Lyttelton, Dr. H. Seymour, Messrs. W. L. Alexander, J. V. Burn-Murdoch, R. S. Clarke, I. Irvine, E. G. Lamb, W. J. May, C. W. P. Slade, B. Smith, and A. S. Woodward.—The paper read was 'An Expedition to the Glaciers of Mount Kenia,' by Dr. J. W. Gregory.

GEOLOGICAL.—Jan. 10.—Mr. W. H. Hudleston, President, in the chair.—Messrs. W. C. Edwards, T. W. Fowler, E. W. Janson, and T. E. Storey were elected Fellows.—The following Fellows, nominated by the Council, were elected auditors of the Society's accounts for the preceding year: Messrs. H. W. Moeckton and J. Hopkinson.—The following communications were read: 'On the Rhetoric and some Liassic Ostracoda of Britain,' by Prof. T. R. Jones; 'Leigh Creek Jurassic Coal-Measures of South Australia: their Origin, Composition, Physical and Chemical Characters; and Recent Subaerial

Metamorphism of Local Superficial Drift, and 'Physical and Chemical Geology of the Interior of Australia: Recent Subaerial Metamorphism of Eolian Sand at Ordinary Atmospheric Temperature into Quartz, Quartzite, and other Stones,' by Mr. J. Parkinson.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—Jan. 11.—Mr. A. W. Franke, President, in the chair.—At the commencement of the meeting the President referred to the great loss which the Society had sustained by the death of its valued friend and Director, Mr. Henry Salusbury Milman, which had occurred since the last meeting. The President moved the following resolution, which was seconded by Sir J. Evans, and carried unanimously: "That the Fellows of the Society desire to place on record their sense of the great loss they have experienced through the death of their Director, Mr. Milman, to whom they have been so much indebted for the last thirteen years. They deeply grieve at this loss, and desire to convey to the members of his family the assurance of their warmest sympathy under so great a bereavement."—This being an evening appointed for the election of Fellows, no papers were read.—A large collection of beautiful examples of British and foreign heraldic and other MSS. was exhibited by the President, Rev. E. S. Dewick, Dr. J. J. Howard, Mr. Burke, and Mr. Stephenson.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Rev. T. B. Cooper, Capt. Hutton, Messrs. A. F. Sieveking, A. Webb, R. H. Warren, Stallwood, D. G. Hogarth, and A. Darbishire; and as Honorary Fellows: Dr. F. Kenner, Major J. P. N. Delgado, and Prof. J. R. Rahn.

STATISTICAL.—Jan. 16.—A paper was read by Mr. R. H. Hooker, M.A. (assistant secretary to the Society), 'On Modes of Census-taking in the British Dominions.'

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—Jan. 17.—Annual Meeting.—Mr. F. Merrifield, V.P., in the chair.—An abstract of the treasurer's accounts having been read by one of the auditors, Mr. H. Goss read the Report of the Council. It was then announced that the following gentlemen had been elected as officers and Council for 1894: President, Capt. H. J. Elwes; Treasurer, Mr. R. McLachlan; Secretaries, Mr. H. Goss and Canon Fowler; Librarian, Mr. G. C. Champion; Other Members of the Council, Mr. W. F. H. Blandford, Mr. C. J. Gahan, Mr. F. Merrifield, Prof. E. B. Poulton, Col. C. Swinhoe, Mr. G. H. Verrall, Mr. J. J. Walker, and the Right Hon. Lord Walsingham.—Mr. Merrifield then read the President's address. After alluding to the principal events of the past year and the prosperous condition of the Society, he referred to the additions which had been made in 1893 to the literature of entomology, calling special attention to the 'Butterflies of China and Japan,' by Mr. J. H. Leach; the 'Moths of India,' by Mr. G. F. Hampson; the 'Butterflies of North America,' by Mr. W. H. Edwards; 'Lepidoptera Indica,' by Dr. F. Moore; and the continuation of the 'Biologia Centrali-Americana,' by Messrs. F. D. Godman and O. Salvin. He also commented on the recent publications of the Grand Duke Nicholas Mikhailovitch, M. G. Oberthur, and Dr. Staedinger on the Continent. The President concluded by referring to the losses by death during the year of several Fellows of the Society and other entomologists, special mention being made of Prof. H. A. Hagen, the Rev. L. Blomefield, Mr. A. C. Horner, Prof. J. Wood-Mason, the Rev. H. Burney, Mr. J. C. Bowring, the Rev. F. O. Morris, Mr. J. Batty, Mr. F. P. Facos, Herr E. Honrath, and Dr. A. Speyer.

MATHEMATICAL.—Jan. 11.—Mr. A. B. Kempe, President, in the chair.—Mr. A. E. Daniels was elected a Member, and Messrs. H. M. Macdonald and C. Morgan were admitted into the Society.—The President communicated the intelligence, which had just reached him, of the death on January 1st of Dr. H. R. Hertz, an Honorary Member of the Society.—The following communications were made: 'The Types of Wave-Motion in Canals,' by Mr. H. M. Macdonald; and 'On Green's Function for a System of Non-Intersecting Spheres,' by Prof. W. Burnside.

HUGUENOT.—Jan. 10.—Mr. A. G. Browning, V.P., in the chair.—Messrs. E. B. de la Chervie, W. K. Marriott, J. T. Saunders, and E. G. Younger were elected Fellows; also the New York State Library.—A paper was read by Mr. H. M. Bower 'On the Fourteen of Meaux,' giving an account of the earliest reformed Church within the limits of France proper, founded by Estienne Mangin and Pierre Le Clerc, who, with twelve others, suffered death by fire in 1546. The paper comprised a translation of the official judgment against the "Fourteen" and many other prisoners, from the original MS. preserved in the archives of Meaux, and a list of the Meldenses who were sentenced to death or other penalties for religion during the sixteenth century. Mr. Bower exhibited a number of photographs of views of the ancient city of Meaux, and of plans and drawings recently made by him on the spot.—The paper was followed by a discussion.

- MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.
- Mon.* London Institution, 8.—'The Roman Wall in Northumberland,' Dr. T. Hodgkin.
- Tue.* Royal Academy, 8.—'Painting,' Mr. J. R. Hodgson.
- Wed.* Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'Discussion on Trade Claims.'
- Thurs.* Aristotelian, 8.—'Renouveau'—'Classification des Sciences.'
- Fri.* Society of Arts, 8.—'The Detection and Measurement of Inflammation Gas and Vapor in the Air,' Lecture I, Mr. F. Clowes (Lecture Lecture).
- Sat.* Royal Institution, 3.—'Locomotion and Vision in Plants and Animals,' Prof. U. Stewart.
- Sun.* Civil Engineers, 8.—'The Tunnels of the Dore and Chisley Railway,' Mr. F. Richard.
- Mon.* Society of Arts, 8.—'Marsilio and its Races,' Capt. C. Holleston.
- Tues.* Geological, 8.—'The Tertiary Fluvial in the Valley of the Rhine, near Ighiteham,' Mr. W. J. L. Abbott.
- Wed.* Yorkshire Philosophical Society, 8.—'The Tertiary Fluvial near Ighiteham,' Mr. W. J. L. Abbott.
- Thurs.* Society of Arts, 8.—'Ancient Carriages,' Mr. O. M. Thrupp.
- Fri.* Royal Institution, 3.—'Swift,' Canon Alinger.
- Sat.* London Institution, 7.—'A Talk about the Orchestra,' Prof. Bridge.
- Sun.* Royal Academy, 8.—'Painting,' Mr. J. R. Hodgson.
- Mon.* Geographical, 8.—'The Relations of Geography to History,' Mr. H. J. Mackinder (Educational Lecture).
- Tues.* Electrical Engineers, 8.—'Notes of a Trip to the United States and in Chicago, 1893,' Mr. W. H. Preece.
- Wed.* Antiquaries, 8.—'An original General Plan granted to Sir John Moore in 1808,' Mr. W. P. Haden.
- Thurs.* Physical, 8.—'New Mode of making Magic Mirrors,' Mr. J. W. Keenan.
- Fri.* Royal Institution, 3.—'Observations in Diffraction,' Mr. W. R. Croft.
- Sat.* New Photometric Method and Photometer, Mr. J. W. Sparke.
- Sun.* Royal Institution, 9.—'Old Irish Song,' Mr. A. P. Graves.
- Mon.* Royal Institution, 3.—'English Schools of Musical Composition,' Prof. W. H. Cummings.
- Tues.* Botanic, 8.—'Election of Fellows.'

Science Gossip.

The eminent physicist Prof. Heinrich Hertz, whose death we announced last week, has left a work quite ready for the press, entitled 'Principien der Mechanik in neuem Zusammenhang dargestellt.'

The whole of the south-eastern shore of the Victoria Nyanza, as far as Kavirondo Bay, has recently been explored by Lieut. Meyer, who is travelling in the service of the German Anti-Slavery Committee. Lieut. Meyer, as is too frequently the case even with travellers employed by philanthropic societies, came into collision with the Wagaya or Southern Kavirondo, upon whom he inflicted a bloody defeat.

HEER L. HIRSCH has recently returned from a fairly successful journey through Hadramaut. Starting from Makalla in July last in a north-westerly direction, he crossed the arid plateau of Kor Saiban at an elevation of 6,500 ft., descended into the fertile valley of Doan, visited Shibam and Terim, the two most important towns of the country, and finally came back to his starting-point. In the course of this expedition, which could hardly have been undertaken without the cordial support of the British Resident at Aden, Herr Hirsch travelled far beyond the routes followed by Wrede fifty years ago. His reception on the part of the native chiefs was friendly as a rule, and this augurs well for the success of Mr. and Mrs. Bent, who are now exploring the same region.

FINE ARTS

The Sacred City of the Ethiopians: being a Record of Travel and Research in Abyssinia in 1893. By J. Theodore Bent, F.S.A. (Longmans & Co.)

MR. BENT, accompanied by his adventurous wife, who was furnished with a detective camera, after landing at Massowah, first made a stay of three weeks at Asmara, the headquarters of the Italian colony, lately acquired at the cost of great bloodshed, and now named by its new masters "Eritrea," from its position on the borders of the ancient Mare Erythreum. The travellers next proceeded south, across the Mareb, into Tigré, and were there hospitably entertained by the Italian resident at the capital of the province, Adoua, a most interesting Abyssinian town, with its circular cathedral and churches full of curiosities. Mr. Bent, however, was only able to secure here a discarded modern painting on silk, representing the Crucifixion, now in the British Museum, remarkable chiefly for its anachronisms. "The Roman soldiers," Mr. Bent says, "have all got their matchlock-rifles"; although how these matchlocks can be depicted so as to exhibit their rifling we are not informed.

Near Adoua, two nights were spent in camp at Yeha, a place identified by the author as Awa, the most ancient capital of Ethiopia Troglodytica, and mentioned in the well-known Adulitan inscription of the Ptolemaic period. Here stands a ruined tower nearly square, with faces of 50 ft. and 60 ft. in length; its walls were formerly some 50 ft. in height. An opening of 17 ft. formed the west entrance, with piers on either side 12 ft. square. At some little distance opposite are two small upright stones; at the foot of one lies another small flat stone fragment, with a ring in relief on it—as unlike an altar as can be imagined; yet Mr. Bent is "strongly in favour of this building having been a temple dedicated to the old Sabæan cult of sun and star worship. Like such buildings it has had no windows; the monolith and altar in front also point to the same thing."

At some distance from this tower, on the other side of the village, are a few stones "of colossal size, rivalling the colossal stones of any early Greek or Etruscan building." These remains seem far more likely to mark the site of a Sabæan temple than the comparatively insignificant structure before mentioned. Mr. Bent succeeded in obtaining squeezes of an important inscription in the possession of the priests at the modern church at Yeha, which has yielded valuable results in the hands of Dr. D. Heinrich Müller. At length our travellers reached the object of their journey, Aksum, the sacred city, where the kings were crowned, and even now regarded as a place of refuge by all Abyssinians. Aksum stands in a delightful valley, 7,000 ft. above the sea level, and thence a magnificent prospect is obtained of "the stupendous mountains of Semyen covered with snow." With regard to this important statement by Mr. Bent, it may be interesting to note that the geographer of Napier's expedition, Mr. Clements Markham, viewed the peaks of Semyen from a nearer point above Antalo, yet observed no snow on them during March, in 1868.

A mile from Aksum stands a monolith, 20 ft. high, with others lying near it, as well as a stone (stela) recording the dedication by King Aizanes, in the fourth century A.D., of certain statues, the pedestals of which yet lead in a line towards the sacred enclosure which surrounds the church. Within the outer ring of this enclosure are twelve gigantic blocks of stone, placed in a row, and the foundations of the church are also built of huge blocks of stone, towards which lines of monoliths lead from different directions, whilst mounds and rubbish heaps are also scattered about within the enclosure. Again, on the other side is a line of obelisks running up the valley, with others at a little distance off on the plain; in all, Mr. Bent calculates that about fifty are still standing around Aksum. The great row of obelisks up the valley is most remarkable. High up the valley they are all rough and unhewn, at all angles with the ground. One, 16 ft. in height, has a series of notches along one edge, probably the line of fracture in quarrying; and another of the same size is divided by bands and discs in relief. Here also are perfected flat obelisks; and one magnificent flat pillar, decorated in stories, somewhat like an Oriental minar, stands erect, 60 ft. high, with a smaller obelisk on either side. According to Mr. Bent, these monuments, from the rude unhewn pillars, "like the menhirs of Brittany, the monoliths of Zimbabwe in Mashonaland, and the Stonehenge of Wiltshire," up to the highly finished obelisks, form a consecutive series, in which we have the origin and development of the obelisk side by side. The Ionic ornamentation on some of these stones indicates the Græco-Egyptian influence at a not very early date, perhaps considerably later than the settlement at Adulis.

During a short stay of ten days at Aksum Mr. Bent was unable to plot out a ground plan of these remarkable monolithic avenues; indeed, he remarks, "there was no special system of alignment used in erecting these monoliths," although elsewhere he states they all lead up to the enclosure wherein is the church where the kings were crowned. "The religious purport of these monoliths is obvious," says our author. "We seem to have before us a highly perfected form of stone worship, associated with sacrifices to the sun."

At the bases of the obelisks are flat, decorated slabs, which Mr. Bent believes to have been altars, such as were common in Mithraic worship; but surely the altars found in the caves of Mithras were not flat! Compare, for example, that in the Spelsæum Mithræ at Spoleto, figured in the Archæologia (vol. xlvii. p. 206). A zealous and painstaking antiquary, Mr. Bent is too ready to see altars in every pedestal or slab; thus, in his former volume, he and Mr. Swan put down in their plan of the elliptical ruin at Zimbabwe an altar which has no existence, but which they "imagined," by comparison with neighbouring ruins, might have existed. The Aizanes inscription proves that thrones or statues were here set up to commemorate victories, and the numerous monumental stones and obelisks in like manner are, very possibly, memorial pillars and not objects of worship.

On leaving Aksum, under somewhat alarming circumstances, Mr. Bent and his wife visited the high plateau near Tekonda called Koheito, where Col. Merowether found ruins and columns in 1868; and they examined the great dam which blocks up a small stream and forms a fine reservoir, similar to the great dyke near the Sabæan capital of Mareb in Yemen. Indeed, the very early migration into Ethiopia of the Sabæans is everywhere manifest throughout Abyssinia, and strikingly illustrated by the Ethiopian and Sabæan inscriptions brought from Aksum and Yeha by Mr. Bent. No doubt Mr. Bent's present exploration in South Arabia, whither he and his brave wife have proceeded this season, will furnish more evidence in this direction whilst he is examining the Haram of Bilkis, Queen of Sheba, near Mareb, whose ruins are said to resemble those of Zimbabwe in Mashonaland.

Zimbabwe, we now learn, is frequented by diggers keenly anxious to secure gold ornaments for their intrinsic rather than for their archaeological value; whilst their wives and sweethearts drive thence comfortably, along the good road made by Sir John Willoughby, to the hotel established near, to play lawn tennis in the precincts of the Sabæan Almagah temple instead of practising the cult of Sopt. It remains to be seen whether the Italian colonists of Eritrea will follow the example of their Anglo-Saxon rivals so far as to make a roadway into Tigré, and instal a casino within the walled enceinte of Aksum, the so-called sacred city of the Ethiopians.

THE illustrations of The Year's Art, 1894 (Virtue & Co.), comprise not only photographs in miniature of pictures, but portraits of editors of serials connected with art—a force-looking and awe-inspiring company mostly, relieved by a few gracious and condescending faces. The letterpress of this most useful serial is much the same as recent years have made it, thanks to experience and inquiries. The notices of artistic institutions and local schools are, we think, more numerous than there is need for. This cannot be said of the section devoted to State aid to art, the national museums, sales, engravings published during 1893, charities, legal decisions, and, above all, the most valuable directory of artists. The section on what is called "Art-Teaching in the Secondary Schools" (a new term for Eton, Harrow, Rugby, King's College, Rosall, and St. Paul's) is, if not superfluous, very incomplete. The summaries of "students," i.e., lads learning drawing in provincial schools, are simply official and fallacious, because no one believes in their "hundreds and thousands" actually attending and at work.

MISS A. ZIMMERN deserves to be complimented on her excellent translation of Prof. Blümner's Home Life of the Ancient Greeks (Cassell & Co.). It is much easier reading than the original German. The illustrations of the German edition have been reproduced. They are numerous and useful, but not attractive.

WE wish we could afford the space to notice at proper length all the handsome volumes sent us at the new year by Messrs. Hachette. To two of the most important—the sixth volume (dealing with primitive Greece) of the Histoire de l'Art dans l'Antiquité of MM. Perrot et Chipiez, and the nineteenth volume of the Nouvelle Géographie Universelle of M. Reclus, which deals with the eastern side of South America—we hope to return. —Gloires et Souvenirs Militaires, by M. C. Bigot, is a volume drawn from the memoirs of Marmont, Marbot, Bugaud, Saint Arnaud, Ségur, Vigo-Roussillon, General de Sonis, and others, and going down from 1792 to 1871. It is illustrated with coloured illustrations such as cannot be produced, apparently, out of France.—Madame Marie Dronaart's Grandes Voyagères is, we presume, a reprint from the Tour du Monde, and is illustrated in the style of that well-known journal.—Altogether better are the cuts in a tale by Danièle d'Arthez, Les Tribulations de Nicolas Meuder.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—WINTER EXHIBITION.

(Second Notice.—British School.)

HAVING disposed of the Hogarth, the Cotes, the Reynoldses, and the Gainsboroughs, we propose to notice most of the remaining portraits and figure pictures of the British School, if it can be called a school when it lacks distinctive character so completely. Neither here nor elsewhere has Romney's Portrait of Miss Henrietta Shore (No. 20) been exhibited till now, although it is an admirable specimen of the artist at his best, a half-length, life-size, seated figure, wearing the white cap and the blue ash that Romney was fond of. On the whole, it is a charming likeness of a fresh English girl; the drawing is correct and firm, and the flesh is warmer in tone and colour than usual. Miss Pitt (26) is a less favourable example of Romney; but if it possesses less vivacity and clearness than usual, it shows the firmness of his touch. It does not remind us of the sister of the statesman whom Romney painted so admirably in 1783, and unless as 'A Portrait of a Lady' it has been unseen in public till now, nor has it been engraved. Why has it now been styled 'Miss Pitt'? Like No. 26, Lady Hamilton as "Sensibility" (45) belongs to Lord Burton, a devoted admirer of Romney. It is, of course, one of the numerous illustrations of the questionable relations which existed so closely and so long between that remarkable woman and the painter. It is the worst of them, at any rate the least studied—see the absurd drawing of the right arm, which is quite unworthy of so good a draughtsman; and he has failed, too, in the affected attitude and assumption of sentimentality in the expression. The red dress and blue shawl are less harmonious than usual with Romney, who seldom made a mistake in such a matter, and was an excellent colourist within the range of a very limited palette. The carnations, generally so bright and pure in portraits of "the divine lady," are not up to his mark; but we admit the picture looks dirty. It was painted in 1786. According to Mr. Graves's catalogue, and the life of the artist by Hayley, this picture belonged to the latter, and Romney spoke of it in a letter to him, March 15th, 1788, as not having been touched of late. Previously, Hayley had declared that his friend "never painted a female head with such exquisite expression," suggested enlarging the canvas (which the artist agreed to do), and added, "I will hasten to an eminent nurseryman at Hammersmith, and bring you the most beautiful plant I can find that may suit your purpose." Off he went, brought a mimosa to suit the subject, and Romney painted it, as we see here, growing in a large and sculptured vase of stone (part of the ornaments of his house in Cavendish Square, we fancy). In the end Hayley fell so deeply in love with 'Sensibility' that he bargained with a gentleman, who wanted to buy a farm from him, that part of the consideration should be this picture, to be purchased for a hundred guineas of the painter. This arrangement was concluded, and Boydell employed Earlom to engrave the well-known print. There was a quarrel between the publisher and the artist, which Hayley contrived to patch up; and he induced Romney to paint 'Sorrow' and 'Joy' "in chiaroscuro" as companions to 'Sensibility.' In A Harrow Gipsy (129), an unfinished life-size bust of a young lady in a gipsy hat of grey felt, the face is charming, full of the bright Englishness which no one understood or painted better than Romney. The richly laced fichu is in excellent keeping, and the colour at large is capital. This is its first appearance in public. The Portrait of Mrs. Van der Gucht (140) excels those we have mentioned in its freshness and reality, above all in the quality we have called Englishness—broad, luminous, beautifully drawn and modelled in a larger style than common with Romney. The fair and buxom matron in the prime of her youth, with rosy and brilliant complexion and fresh lips and eyes, is resting easily on her left elbow, and wears a large black hat and a white riding coat, colours which assort with the deep rich blue of the sky. It is very solid, and seems to be unusually highly finished, soft and warm in a tone unusually golden for the painter, but some of this may be due to the varnish. The picture was No. 139 here in 1872, lent by Mr. B. A. Willcox. The lady's husband, Benjamin Van der Gucht, was a noteworthy man in his day, the thirty-second child of Gerard Van der Gucht, an engraver, son of Michael, another engraver of Antwerp, who died in 1725, and is said to have had twenty sons. Benjamin, who was brought up as a painter, was a member of the Academy in St. Martin's Lane, and, in 1769, one of the first Students admitted in the Royal Academy; he painted portraits of Garrick and Woodward the comedian, and contributed to the Academy till 1787; turned picture dealer and restorer of pictures, in which latter capacity the collection at Chiswick House lately dispersed passed through his hands. It was while crossing the river from Lord Burlington's mansion to Barnes, near where he lived, that Benjamin was drowned, September 21st, 1794. He is memorable to us as having enlarged a gallery at 20, Lower Brook Street, Bond Street, which his father had built for the exhibition of pictures for sale. It was in that room the Society of Painters in Water Colours held its first two exhibitions, those of 1805 and 1806.

Stothard, who was born at the Black Horse tavern, Long Acre, nineteen years after Romney, is especially honoured by the allotment of the Water-Colour Room to a collection of his paintings, consisting of fifty-four pictures and forty-six drawings in various materials. Mr. Dicksee has chosen the works, and he might have filled the room three times over. Since 1841, when there was an especial exhibition of Stothards, nothing like the present gathering has been formed; and even it was far inferior to the collection before us. Stothard's facility in producing pictures, drawings, and designs of all sorts, from jewellery to coat-buttons and coach-lace, as well as large paintings on the walls of Buckingham Palace and Burleigh House, and the ceiling of the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh, was stupendous. He was the one artist in England who combined something of the style and grace of Raphael with the vivacity and sparkling elegance of Watteau. It would be a fit sequel to this delightful exhibition if some one marked with a tablet the front of the house—formerly No. 28, Newman Street, Oxford Street—in which from 1794 he lived, and where, forty years after, he died. There his diligent, pious, and patient life was passed; his earthly reward was so small that for lovely little drawings made for book engravings, such as Mr. Salting's Illustrations for 'The Novelist's Magazine' (41), he was paid a guinea apiece, and seldom more. He designed exquisite vignettes and borders for half-a-crown each, and, as a stable resource, he was glad to hold the Librarianship of the Royal Academy, and attend four hours a week for a salary of thirty pounds a year.

He painted in all sorts of ways, and, despite the mannerisms—always elegant and never weak—of his late designs, his invention was as spontaneous as it was inexhaustible. Mr. Falcke's Triumph of Charles V. (218) has something of Veronese in its colour, and likewise something of the inner glow of Titian, and as a processional piece excels in rendering the continuous onward motion proper to its theme. The Fête Champêtre (219), which belonged to Rogers, possesses that Watteau-like vivacity and sparkle to which we have alluded. This gallery is full of designs for the 'Decameron,' and various novels and tales. Groups of graceful and varied figures—belonging, apparently, to a sort of fairyland—impart a singular charm to these works. The Rescue of Sophia Western (221) is one of a number of designs for Fielding's novel, and is charmingly spirited in action, luminous and harmonious in colour. Calypso with her Nymphs caressing Cupid (222), a version of the National Gallery picture No. 319, although it has darkened since it was exhibited in 1815, glows with broad, simple, and rich colours, and the semi-diaphanous robes are designed in the taste of the Greek vases Stothard studied deeply. The expressions of the girls are sweet and naive, and yet there is not the least affectation about them. Diana Sleeping (225) deserves admiration for its coloration, which resembles that of a chastened Rubens, its rich, dark tints and limpid tones, while the morbidity of the goddess's fresh and polished flesh, as she reclines in shadow of the tent in twilight, merits considerable praise, and so do the glowing effects of the sky and landscape. That the shadows are comparatively cold may be due to time, although several Stothards of c. 1830, to which period we attribute this example, have the same defect. Is the 'Diana Sleeping' the same work as the 'Bower of Diana' which was at the Academy in 1830, and fetched 3*l.* 5*s.* at Stothard's sale in 1834? A picture bearing the title of 'Diana Sleeping' was at the British Institution in 1841. Venus Reclining on a Couch (226) is stronger in conception and larger in style than most Stothards, and shows him at his best, except in the composition, which is awkward, a rare thing with Stothard. Among the other pictures that nobody should omit to notice are Mr. Vaughan's Illustration for Ovid (230); Mr. Orrock's choice Illustration (232), which is adapted from No. 225; 'Tam o' Shanter' (234); Three Scenes from the 'Decameron' (235), most delicious pieces; Venus with Cupid (236), which is larger than usual; Gathering Flowers (249), one of the best and most famous of Stothards; and The Triumph of Britannia (251), exhibited at the Academy in 1817, and one of the most animated designs of its class, noteworthy for the wealth and beauty of its tones and the stately grace of most of the figures, although the composition, through resembling a 'set piece,' is less pleasing. It has been engraved in one of the most important of the more than four thousand prints after Stothard which a score of fine hands were employed upon. To these let us add Mr. Graves's ardent and gracefully animated Triumph of Thetis (259), a masterpiece of the first order; The Canterbury Pilgrims (264), which repeats with additional brilliancy the work associated with the unhappy squabble with Blake and Cromek (the larger version was bought ten years ago from Leigh Court, and is now No. 1163 in the National Gallery); Leaving Home (265); and Burns and Highland Mary (269), remarkable for the tender passion of the lovers seated in a wood.

Of the drawings in sepia or indian ink, such as Stothard got a guinea each for, and were engraved for books, we especially commend to the visitor's notice the beautiful Love Scene (1), Scenes from 'Clarissa Harlowe' (4), the same (17), scene from the same (21), Illustrations (26), and Scene from 'Clarissa Harlowe' (40), incomparably lovely in its way. They are remarkable for composition, graceful minor and simplicity of design, and delightful tenderness such as never fails. No. 25, Cradle Hymn, is exquisitely graceful and as finished as a Greek gem, while its prettiness is in the purest taste. A Tiger (24) is drawn with sculptural firmness and research; the exceeding beauty of the draughtsmanship of the beast's limbs is worthy of an antique bronze, while it renders to perfection the slow, sinuous motion of the creature. No. 27, Shooting for the Silver Gun, a great number of figures in the market-place at Dumfries, depicts with astonishing skill and delicacy a host of men and women, none of them more than half an inch high, yet each differing from the others in attitude, character, costume, and expression, while they all stand upon their feet as in life—a rare merit indeed. See the companion design, No. 39, of the same subject. No. 31, Scenes from 'The Rape of the Lock,' are all well known by the exquisite engravings. Three Drawings in a Frame (35), including a version of the celebrated 'Triumph of Thetis,' is lovely indeed, especially the 'Illustration for "The Rape of the Lock."' The piquant elegance of Cupid and Campaspe (36) is also charming. Four Illustrations for 'The Pleasures of the Imagination' (42) were among the treasures of Rogers, who delighted in the art of Stothard, to which his own poems owed not a little of their fame. Here are prettinesses of a noble sort, and style without a blemish. The influence of Stothard upon Calvert, whose lovely designs and pictures were here last year, is distinctly manifest in every element of the latter's art, and even Blake did not escape the charm of his contemporary's genius.

The Linnell family have lent twenty-one drawings by Blake, Stothard's junior by two years. They are a further selection from that large store of Blake's works which last year furnished the Black and White Room with a number of very unequal examples. Those now before us are much more on the same level of excellence, and belong to a replica set of illustrations to 'Job,' which were made in 1821 for John Linnell. They are not seriously inferior to the original set, of which, by the way, we believe Linnell's sons still issue, as publishers, the superb prints taken from the plates Blake himself engraved after those drawings. We can name only the most important and characteristic. To begin with, 'Thus did Job continually' (47) and 'When the Almighty was yet with me' (48), are, the latter especially, thoroughly representative of Blake's best qualities and highest powers. No. 50, 'And I only am escaped alone to tell thee,' is also important, while No. 53, 'And when they lifted up their eyes,' is a marvellous specimen of passionate design. No. 54, 'Let the day perish wherein I was born,' is all the more telling because of its extreme simplicity, which is like that of a Greek design. The overpowering energy and soaring aspiration of the 'Sons of God shouting for joy' (60), who appear as the chanting angels rapt in an ecstasy of adoration, have always seemed to us the culmination of the visionary's stupendous, but irregular and often halting genius. Here, at least, no incongruous elements break the flow of his ideas, and no technical incompetence nor whims offend us in his manner of expressing them. If any one asks why Blake, despite all his preposterous nonsense and crude commonplaces, such as only blind vanity allowed him to put forward, holds the place of an artist-post of the highest rank, we have only to point to this instance, in which a soaring genius and perfect sanity found unchallengeable expression.

To turn from Blake to Hoppner is like, let us say, passing from the cell of some half-mad and wildly devout recluse of the Thebaid to a drawing-room of the Regency, crowded with maids and matrons, beaux and cognoscenti, or a highly respectable middle-class gathering of the same epoch. That Blake and Hoppner should be born in the same twelve months, be members of the same profession, be known to each other, be on friendly terms enough, and live side by side in the same city, is a curious series of facts. Although there is much that is fresh and sincere, not to say homely, in Hoppner's whole-length Portrait of Master White (35), holding his bow and arrows, and wearing a white frill and a dark-blue jacket buttoned to his nankeen breeches, Master White was not a handsome boy, and it is evident that the painter possessed exceptional abilities who could make so good a picture as this out of the lad's harmless and simple self. A more interesting subject was The Right Hon. J. Hookham Frere (30), whom Hoppner painted with all his skill in modelling and firmest touches, and without indulging too far his taste for florid tints in the flesh. It is a good portrait, yet it owes most of its interest to the name of the sitter, for Hoppner sometimes painted much better than this. Shee, who was born in 1769, hardly demands mention now on account of his highly respectable Portrait of Miss Blake (32), who became the wife of Hookham Frere.

Although he was born so long ago as 1786, Hilton seems, compared with the figure painters we have lately noticed, to be quite a modern artist, so completely an eclectic and so highly educated was he, whereas, from Hogarth to Blake, every master we have treated of was a great deal more than merely an educated painter. The Dance in 'Census' (1), with its cultivated graces and academical, though pleasant coloration, its strong resemblance to a Bonington, proves itself to be a weak reflection, at second hand, of a Veronese. It is a favourable specimen of Hilton's work, and, in fact, illustrates at its best the eclecticism of the amiable Keeper of the Royal Academy. It is a study, or small version, of a large and ambitious picture. Etty was a year younger than Hilton, and he worked in the same schools side by side with him for many a day, but to what different results let the visitor say who compares any work of Hilton's with the splendid and powerful Sleeping Nymph and Satyr (100), a group of life-size figures thoroughly studied, which was presented to the Academy as a diploma picture in the days when a newly elected Academician was still ashamed to give a mere flimsy pot-boiler. The pure, rosy, and deep-toned carnations, the masculine style and modelling, the solid morbidity, and the vigour of the design of Etty's masterpiece are worthy of a sumptuous and learned period of art. Though not the most brilliant and effective of Etty's, the picture before us is, on the whole, an instance of his highest powers at their best. It was painted in 1828, but never exhibited—not even at the Society of Arts' gathering of Etty's works formed in 1849, the year of his death—until it appeared as No. 240 at Manchester in 1857, and as No. 263 in the International Exhibition, 1862; No. 1246 at Leeds in 1868, and here, as No. 30, in 1872. Technically speaking, it is freely founded on Titian's 'Ariadne in Naxos' and similar works. Etty worked so long and ardently on it that nothing less than the delight with which he regarded his election to succeed Flaxman as an Academician (Constable was defeated by thirteen votes to five) would have induced him, being still a poor man, to part with so successful and costly a specimen of his art. Pluto and Proserpine (14), begun in January and finished in April, 1839, was exhibited in Trafalgar Square ten years after Etty's election as 'Pluto carrying off Proserpine,' under which title it was engraved, when its resplendent, but rather too luxurious and ardent, flesh painting, its vigorous conception and rare luminosity, created a profound impression, which was intensified by the passionate design of the figure of the struggling virgin, whom a very bronze-like god (painted from the once renowned Mendoc, an Indian model, dear to Etty) holds aloft in his arms. These striking figures overcame the critics' disapproval of the disproportions which are manifest in every figure introduced, of the gaudiness of Pluto's gilded chariot, and of the foolishness of those half-naked young women, the companions of Proserpine, who fatuously crouch and pretend to be distressed by a catastrophe at which they are not in the least surprised. The rearing steeds, although it is plain they were borrowed from Axtley's Amphitheatre, are really fine in action and colour, and in their relation to the flesh and glittering draperies about them. Etty's practice of painting in copal ensured the original brilliance and perfect preservation of this picture, which remains as when Lord Northwick bought it from the easel for 350*l.* It was at the Adelphi in 1849, a loan from Mr. Gillott, who lent it, as No. 42, to the Academy in 1872, and at whose sale in the same year Mr. Albert Grant purchased it for 1,050*l.*; at his sale five years later it fetched only 745*l.*

NEW PRINTS.

Of the elaborate and brilliant etching (17½ in. by 29½ in.) which M. Kratke made for MM. Boussod, Valadon & Co. after Meissonier's 'Sulferino,' we have received an artist's proof on vellum, with the remarque, a field-piece and its ammunition carriage, a drum, and bust portrait. The picture is well known. Napoleon III. is riding on the edge of a plateau overlooking the battle-field, while behind him ride his staff, a numerous and varied cluster of figures. A soldier on a white horse is placed in the centre of the group, and, according to Meissonier's frequent practice, serves as a sort of focus for the tone and colour schemes of the design. The landscape is extensive, and above is a rather dull sky, loaded with soft grey clouds. The etcher has done his work with rare care, and accomplished, with exemplary skill, force, and breadth of style, one of the most difficult tasks such an artist could undertake. The drawing is almost worthy of the exquisite research and wonderful patience of Meissonier, and where the plate falls short of its original is in the local colours, as translated into black and white, not having been sufficiently differentiated, and in the engraver's touch being somewhat heavy. The printer may be partly responsible for the partial blackness of the impressions from the plate, which is, on the whole, an extremely valuable performance.

Messrs. P. & D. Colnaghi have forwarded an artist's proof of a plate (15 in. by 11½ in.) mezzotinted with great firmness, spirit, and sympathy by Mr. D. A. Wehrschmidt after Romney's portrait of Olive's third daughter and sixth child, Charlotte, who died unmarried October 20th, 1795—a picture which belongs to the Earl of Powis, and was lent by him to the Academy (No. 36) in 1802. The lady sat to Angelica Kauffmann for a miniature which is still in the possession of her family. The Romney is a seated, three-quarters-length, life-size figure. The lady's dark brown hair is a little too dark in the print, and the pale lemon colour of her gown and her blue sash are somewhat too light, thus producing an effect which is just a shade too slightly differentiated. Apart from these trifling shortcomings, the print is a great success, the face being charmingly pure and animated, while in every respect it does justice to the elegant and severe taste of Romney.

A little hard and flat, but bright, sound, and well drawn, is the spirited mezzotint (22 in. by 14½ in.) by Mr. H. S. Bridgwater after Mr. W. H. Margetson's picture in the Academy Exhibition of 1892, entitled:—

At the Angel Inn, in Manchester,
There lives the girl for me.

The print is published by Messrs. Mawson, Swan & Morgan, Grainger Street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, to whom we are obliged for an artist's proof of a pleasing plate which ought to be popular. Mr. Bridgwater's good prints of 'Phyllis' and 'Playfellows,' after Mr. Fildes's pictures, are well known, and so is his 'Miranda,' after Hoppner, which we have already commended to our readers. He should develop his taste for wealth of tone, and thus secure roundness for his manner of modelling. —Messrs. Frost & Reed, of Bristol, have published another of Mr. J. Finnie's original mezzotints of landscapes, and sent us an artist's proof of the same, which measures 22 in. by 16½ in. It is one of the best examples of his peculiar manner of treating, with great feeling and force, but some excess of darkness, not in keeping with the subject, the sunlit rapid of a little rocky Devonshire river, running swiftly between its leafy banks. The print is, nevertheless, in perfect harmony with itself, and, on the whole, a delightful reminder of nature. Framed 'close' in dull black it would, we think, look its best.

—According to the 'New Original Etching of Shakespeare's House and Garden, Stratford-upon-Avon,' by Mr. F. S. Walker (12½ in. by 25 in.), of which Mr. A. Lucas has sent us an artist's proof, it must now be a pleasant place. To have executed so large a plate crowded with details and so rich, deep-toned, and harmonious is a success of no small value. The effect chosen is that of the afterglow, when the sky is filled with light and the landscape shown by its reflected radiance. Stronger contrasts of the light and shadow than we find on the plate might have been difficult to secure, and demanded a peculiar and subtle treatment of a subject quite sufficiently embarrassing. This is another of those prints to develop the delicacy, brightness, and force of which nothing less than a return to the common sense practice of our forefathers, who framed all such works 'close up' to the engraved edge, is demanded. Either this or an equally close and very dark mount effects a magical improvement in Mr. Walker's work.

FINE-ART SOCIETY.

At a general assembly of Academicians and Associates, held on Tuesday evening, Mr. John M. Swan and Mr. Arthur Hacker, painters, were elected Associates.

THE FINE-ART SOCIETY has appointed to-day (Saturday) for a private view of water-colour drawings by Miss K. Greenaway, and examples in black and white by Mr. A. Parsons. This is the last week of the Institute of Painters in Oil Colours' Exhibition, Piccadilly. The British Artists' Gallery closes on Saturday next.

MR. LARKIN, 28, New Bond Street, exhibits a number of drawings by Mr. Tristram Ellis, collectively called 'A Summer in Norway'; and a complete collection of engravings after Mlle. R. Bonheur and Mr. Alma Tadema will after to-day be on view at Mr. McLean's in the Haymarket.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS sold on the 13th inst. the following pictures:—R. Wilson, An Italian Lake Scene, with figures in the foreground, 115*l.* Sir J. Reynolds, Miss Stuart, 168*l.* Van Dyck, Prince Rupert, whole length, 127*l.*

MR. FISHER UNWIN is about to publish a portfolio of engravings entitled 'The Century Gallery.' It will contain reproductions after Raphael, Rembrandt, and other masters, together with specimens of the work of American draughtsmen, such as Mr. Pennell, Mr. Gibson, Mr. Remington, &c. The only link between the subjects is the fact of their appearance to less advantage in the Century and St. Nicholas magazines.

MISS SARAH SETCHEL, whose drawing in water colours called 'The Momentous Question' was so well engraved by Mr. S. Bullin that it is known all over the world, died at Harrow on the 8th inst., aged eighty years. She appeared first at the Academy in 1831, with a little picture called 'Fanny,' and until 1840 (so brief was her active career) she contributed to that gallery and to Suffolk Street, sending portraits and unpretending pieces of genre to both exhibitions and to country galleries. In 1840 'The Momentous Question' was exhibited at the gallery of the British Artists as 'A Scene from Howitt's "Rural Life in England";' it was engraved and published with its present title in 1843.

RESEARCHES are still being made at Valle Crucis. Last year the cloister court was excavated under the direction of the Rev. H. T. Owen, and the foundation of the ancient walls of the monastery and also the wall of the arcade were brought to light; while the other day the ancient entrance gate, together with the foundation of the porch of the monastery, was discovered. The foundation and part of the pillar of the entrance gate are in excellent condition, and they are all Norman.

MR. JOHN CHERELL BUCKLER was born in Bermondsey—the son of John Buckler, an architect settled there as long ago, it is said, as 1793—and died near Oxford on the 10th inst. Trained by his father, and, we believe, at the Royal Academy, he exhibited at Somerset House in 1810, No. 359, 'S.W. View of Fountains Abbey, Yorkshire,' and was, it is needless to add, the last survivor of those who contributed to that Academy. He continued to exhibit till 1844, sending altogether, according to Mr. Graves's 'Dictionary of Artists,' thirty-nine works. In 1822 he published 'Views of the Cathedral Churches of England and Wales'; in 1823 'Observations on the Original Architecture of St. Mary's, Oxford, and on the Innovations Anciently or Recently Attempted There,' a monograph to which late discussions have imparted fresh interest; then came 'Views of Eaton Hall,' 1826; 'Views of Endowed Grammar Schools,' 1827; and in 1828 'An Account of Eltham Palace.' In 1847, with his brother, he issued 'A History of St. Alban's'; and in 1866, also with his brother, 'A Description of the Restoration of Lincoln Cathedral,' works with which he had much to do. In 1834 he obtained the second premium for a design for the New Houses of Parliament.

MR. WOODWARD writes:—

"I have no right or reason to complain of the criticisms which you pass in your last week's issue on my suggestions for improving Charing Cross; but you will, I feel sure, allow me to state that, on matters of fact, two slips occur in your notice: 1. My podium has not a 'sloping front,' which suggests a battered face. 2. I do not, in the slightest degree, touch the façade of the National Gallery."

If we had meant a battered face we should have said so. We are sorry to have misunderstood Mr. Woodward as to the National Gallery.

M. MUNKACSY is going to exhibit in the Rue de Séze the large canvas which figured at the Champs Élysées last summer. M. Munkacsy has, it is said, made great changes in the work.

An exhibition of old lace and works upon lace was opened at Brussels on Sunday last.

THAT noted Northern antiquary Prof. George Stephens, of Copenhagen, celebrated his diamond wedding on Monday last. We regret to learn from a correspondent that Mrs. Stephens is still suffering from the effects of a cold.

THE well-known and much respected French architect M. César Daly—writer on art, and quondam editor of La Semaine des Constructeurs, a strictly practical magazine which was the delight of the late Mr. G. Godwin, of the Builder—died in Paris the other day, aged eighty-six. The great gold medal called the Victoria Medal was a few years since awarded to him by the Institute of Architects.

AMONG the successes of recent inquiries instituted by the French Minister of the Fine Arts has been the finding in the Prussian royal collections of a considerable number of works by masters of the French School during the eighteenth century, such as Watteau and other painters of scènes galantes. These pictures, according to the report of M. A. Valabrégue, as quoted by the Chronique des Arts, were acquired by Frederick the Great, and they comprise not only the well-known repetition by Watteau himself of the 'Enbarquement pour Cythère,' but 'Les Comédiens Français,' 'La Leçon d'Amour,' by the same, and 'La Noce du Village,' 'L'Amour paisible,' and others less well authenticated, but undoubtedly excellent. Lancret is represented by twenty-six examples, including 'Le Jeu de Cache-cache,' 'Le Moniteur de Lanterne magique,' and 'Le Moulinet.' Pater appears in several fêtes galantes and military subjects, and with 'Le Bain rustique,' 'Le Bain à la Maison,' 'Le Sultan dans son Harem,' and fourteen incidents borrowed from the 'Roman Comique,' in all thirty-eight works. De Troy, Coypel, the sculptors Sigisbert Adam, Houdon, and others, besides the artists of numerous drawings which were till now inédited, are represented.

THE late M. Waddington deserves mention in these columns on account of his attainments as a numismatist and epigraphist. He made journeys in Asia Minor in 1850 and again in 1862. The first was described in two memoirs, 'Voyage en Asie Mineure au Point de Vue de Numismatique,' which were crowned by the Académie des Inscriptions. His famous dissertation on the edict of Diocletian appeared in 1864, and secured his election, in the place of Beugnot, in the following year at the Académie des Inscriptions. He continued the 'Voyage Archéologique en Grèce et en Asie Mineure' of Lebaa, publishing Greek and Latin inscriptions in it up to the time of the Berlin Congress. In fact, taking a special interest in the archaeology of Asia Minor, he devoted much time and money to it. In order to obtain for his Corpus the Greek inscriptions excavated from the temple of Diana at Ephesus by Mr. J. T. Wood, M. Waddington, it is said, contributed, through M. Renan, to the continuance of the excavations at a time when the British Museum authorities were restricted in funds.

THE death, at the age of ninety, of Prof. Ferchhammer of Kiel removes the last of the great school of German archaeologists to which K. O. Müller, Welcker, and Jahn belonged. His journeys in Greece, begun so long ago as 1830, led to the publication of various valuable monographs: his 'Topographie von Athen' (1841), 'Beschreibung der Ebene von Troja' (1850)—a subject on which he had contributed a paper to the Journal of the Royal Geographical Society some years before—'Topographia Thebarum Heptapylarum' (1854), &c. In his dissertation 'Über die Reinheit der Bauart' he sought to explain the origin of different styles of architecture from climatic conditions and the materials at the disposal of the builder. In later years he devoted himself largely to mythology. His theory resolved myths into attempts to give historical shape to natural phenomena. For instance, in a tractate 'Achill, the story of the Iliad is declared to be founded on the winter storms that rage Far on the ringing plains of windy Troy.

He applied this notion to the story of the Argonauts, the Gigantomachy, the wanderings of Io, &c.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—London Symphony Concerts. Popular Concerts.

MR. HENSCHEL had the satisfaction of seeing St. James's Hall well filled at the fourth of his Symphony Concerts on Thursday last week, although the programme contained no special attraction, unless Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony in B minor, of which amateurs never seem to tire, may be so termed. Of this an excellent rendering was afforded; and justice was also done to Herr H. Zumpfe's arrangement from Wagner's 'Das Rheingold,' which he entitles 'Procession of the Gods into Walhall,' and Herr G. Humperdinck's similar arrangement from 'Götterdämmerung,' consisting mainly of the orchestral movement representing Siegfried's journey to the Rhine. The Belgian violinist M. César Thomson was first announced to play Brahms's Concerto, but for this he substituted a Concerto in A minor by Goldmark, which, as a novelty, was, of course, in a measure more interesting, though it proved to be a singularly dry and uninspired work. The first movement is based on a theme resembling that in the corresponding section of Brahms's Double Concerto, and is further noteworthy for an episode resembling a Handelian fugato. The succeeding andante is somewhat singularly placed in the key of C, but is decidedly more pleasing. In the finale occurs a very lengthy cadenza of slight intrinsic interest. From his playing in this concerto, and subsequently in pieces by Max Bruch and Paganini, we cannot describe M. Thomson higher than a virtuoso of fairly brilliant calibre. His tone may have slightly improved since he appeared at the Crystal Palace in 1887, but it is still somewhat thin, and his intonation was at times painfully inaccurate.

The two concerted works which were presented at the Popular Concert last Saturday—namely, Mozart's Quartet in D, known as No. 7, and Brahms's Pianoforte Quintet in F minor, Op. 34—were in striking contrast, though each is a veritable masterpiece in its way. The performance of the quintet was superlatively fine. Mr. Leonard Borwick, the pianist of the afternoon, selected as his solo Grieg's Ballade in G minor, Op. 24, which he first introduced on November 16th, 1891. The title of this piece is rather a misnomer, for it is an air with fifteen variations, the theme being that of an old Norwegian folk-song. There is a great deal of cleverness in the variations, but the work is not particularly distinctive of the Norwegian composer. Mr. Norman Salmond was the vocalist, his selections including Handel's fine air "Pour forth no more," from 'Jephtha.'

On Monday the programme commenced with Saint-Saëns's Pianoforte Quartet in D flat, Op. 41, which had been revived recently at one of the Saturday concerts after an interval of fourteen years. The work shows the German leanings of the French composer very strikingly, much of the writing being positively Schumannesque, while a portion of the slow movement is suggestive of Bach, of course somewhat modernized. The rendering of the quartet, with Miss Fanny Davies at the pianoforte, was unexceptionable. Another admirable performance was that of Schumann's 'Humoresque,' Op. 20, by Miss Davies. This fantastic work, sometimes curtailed, was on this occasion played in its entirety. Haydn's Quartet in D, Op. 64, No. 1, completed the instrumental portion of the programme. In the absence of Miss Lucile Hill through illness, Madame Emily Squire gave much satisfaction as the vocalist.

NEW ORGAN MUSIC.

J. S. Bach's Organ Works, edited by W. T. Best, Vols. 10, 11, 12; Cecilia, pieces in diverse styles, edited by W. T. Best, Books 47 and 48. (Augener & Co.)—Although John Sebastian Bach has been dead nearly a hundred and fifty years, his organ music was scarcely familiar in this country until the present century had well advanced. What were at first known as the pedal works of course could not be played satisfactorily on our old English organs with a C or F pedal-board; but as soon as insular prejudices began to give way, and instruments were constructed on the best continental methods, the masterpieces of the Leipzig Cantor began to obtain recognition, and recently what may be termed the standard edition of Messrs. Breitkopf & Härtel has to some extent given way before newly-edited versions by English musicians, in which the manual parts are more clearly arranged than in the original. The volumes before us at present contain transcriptions of the 'Vivaldi' concertos, and twelve of the preludes based on German chorals, all printed in large type, with, we regret to say, the finger-numbering misnamed old English, in which the thumb is indicated by a cross. This silly insular practice notwithstanding, the edition may be recommended to the notice of organists. The first of the 'Cecilia' books contains four interesting compositions by J. L. Krebs, who was for nine years a pupil of J. S. Bach at Leipzig, and was regarded by the old master as his best pupil. The other consists of a Concerto in A, by Handel, with a Cadenza by Mr. Best.—The same publishers send No. 2 of arrangements by John E. West, containing a solemn if not very original Funeral March in F minor by Xaver Scharwenka, Op. 43, No. 5.

We have on our table Nos. 21 to 24 of The American Organ Journal, edited by J. M. Coward, and some numbers of a series of arrangements with pedal obligato (Metzler & Co.), the latter including Handel's air "The trumpet shall sound" and Chopin's 'Marche Funèbre.'

Musical Society.

It is now decided that the Philharmonic Concerts shall be given at the Queen's Hall during the ensuing season, the dates fixed being February 28th, March 14th, April 19th, May 2nd and 24th, and June 7th and 21st. Among the works to be performed for the first time are Dvorak's Symphony in E minor, No. 5; Mr. Edward German's Symphony in A minor; Tchaikowsky's latest Symphony, No. 6; Berlioz's Overture to 'King Lear'; a piece entitled 'Overture d'Ariosto,' by Vincenzo Ferroni; Dr. Hubert Parry's overture "on an unwritten tragedy"; Wagner's 'Faust' Overture; Dr. Mackenzie's 'Pibroch'; and M. Paderewski's 'Polish' Fantasia. The solo instrumentalists already engaged include Madame Sophie Menter, Miss Fanny Davies, Mlle. Frida Scotta, Mr. Leonard Borwick, M. Sapellnikoff, M. Sauret, and M. Paderewski. Dr. Mackenzie will again conduct the concerts.

MISS ETHEL SHARPE, whose name we have frequently mentioned in favourable terms when noticing concerts of the Royal College of Music, seems to have made an excellent impression at a recital in Vienna. The local critics, including Dr. Hanslick, who is not as a rule well disposed towards English music and musicians, speak with enthusiasm respecting Miss Sharpe's style, and also in pleasant language with regard to her technique.

THE Associated Board of the Royal Academy and Royal College of Music announce that the 31st inst. will be the last day on which candidates can enter their names for the forthcoming examinations. Attention is properly directed to the fact that the Board is not a speculative commercial enterprise; and that its operations are highly appreciated by musical students throughout the country is shown by statistics, the number of entries having increased from 904 in 1890 to 4,019 last year. It is further stated that the combined efforts of the two institutions have been carried through "on terms of perfect cordiality for upwards of four years."

MR. ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES will lecture on 'Old Irish Song' at the Royal Institution next Friday evening. The discourse will be vocally illustrated by Miss Liza Lehmann and Mlle. Marie Bréna.

THE programme books of Messrs. Paterson & Son's orchestral concerts at Edinburgh are noteworthy for the taste displayed in pictorial illustration. That of last Monday, for example, contained an excellent portrait of Rubinstein, and views of Haydn's birthplace at Rohrau and the Beethoven monument at Bonn, taken from Naumann's 'History of Music.'

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Mr. Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Tues. The Irish Choir; Fred. Danford's Mass in G, No. 630, Queen's Hall.
Thurs. Dumb Bidding Concert, 7 St. Albert Hall.
Fri. Mr. Sydney Harradough's Concert, 3, Prince of Wales's Club.
Sat. Hampstead Popular Concert, 8, Veary Hall, Haverstock Hill.
Sun. Popular Concert, 2, St. James's Hall.

DRAMA

Dramatic Society.

PERFORMANCES have been suspended at no fewer than three theatres. After a fairly successful run, at Toole's Theatre first and afterwards at the Vaudeville, 'Mrs. Othello' has been withdrawn, and the Vaudeville has been closed. 'Gudgeons,' which obtained at Terry's a run scarcely expected by the public or probably by the management, has disappeared, and the house will remain unoccupied until Easter. Miss Beatrice Lamb has been specially engaged to play the leading female part in the forthcoming new drama at Toole's Theatre.

No very conspicuous success has attended the triple bill, which was given for the last time on Tuesday, at the Court Theatre. That house will reopen, under the management of Miss Olga Nethercole, on the 27th inst.

'CASTE' has been put into rehearsal at the Garrick Theatre, from which, it may be supposed, 'An Old Jew' will soon disappear. The cast of the revival has not been announced, and some curiosity as to the Polly Eccles is felt. Mr. Gilbert Hare will be seen in his father's part of Sam Gerridge, Mr. Forbes Robertson will be George d'Alroy, Mr. Anson Eccles, and Miss Kate Rorke Esther.

'SHERIDAN,' by Mr. Robert Buchanan, is in rehearsal at the Comedy Theatre. Miss Emery is cast for the rôle of Eliza Linley, and Mr. H. B. Irving will play Sheridan. Other exponents include Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss V. Brown, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Brandon Thomas, Mr. Lewis Waller, and Mr. Sydney Brough.

MISS KATE SANTLEY will reappear this evening at her own theatre, the Royalty, in an afterpiece entitled 'Penelope,' which is, in fact, a musical rendering of 'The Area Belle.'

THE production at the Royalty of 'A Gauntlet' was at the last moment deferred from Tuesday until to-night.

'UNCLE'S GHOST,' produced on Wednesday at the Opéra Comique, displays some comic invention, and is capably played in many characters. Its third act is unluckily dull and uninspiring. Nothing short of the entire excision of some scenes of elderly courtship and subsequent quarrel can render the piece lastingly popular. Mr. Treashear, as the victim of ghostly visitations, displayed genuine comic capacity. Mr. F. Thorne was amusing as a portly and beneficent ghost, with a conceivable dread of draughts, an inclination for strong sherry, and a propensity to the smallest of practical jokes. Miss Carrie Coote, Miss Emily Thorne, Mr. Maltby, Mr. Wallace, and Mr. Lander took part in a fairly competent interpretation.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—F. & Co.—W. H. C.—J. T. D.—W. C.—V. E.—O. E. H.—W. L.—H. A. S.—J. E. H.—J. G.—J. L. T.—J. S. S.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months... 18 2

For Six Months... 10 6

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months... 18 6

For Six Months... 10 6

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S EDUCATIONAL PUBLICATIONS.

The STUDENT'S CHEMISTRY. By

R. L. TAYLOR, F.I.C., F.C.S., of the Central Higher Grade Board School, Manchester. Fully Illustrated. Crown 8vo. 360 pages, cloth, 6s.

"A valuable addition to chemical literature... Of special service to those engaged in teaching elementary inorganic chemistry, while it is also sufficiently simple to assist and not to puzzle such students as are compelled to content themselves with self-culture."—Manchester Courier.

CHEMICAL PROBLEMS with

SOLUTIONS: being a Key to the Problems in Taylor's 'Student's Chemistry,' and 'Chemistry for Beginners.' By R. L. TAYLOR, Teacher of Chemistry and Physics in the Central School and Head Master of the Central Evening School of Science and Art, Manchester; and S. PARRISH, A.R.C.S. Lond., Teacher of Chemistry in the Higher Grade School, Leeds. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

CHEMISTRY for BEGINNERS.

Adapted for the Elementary Stage of the Science and Art Department's Examinations in Inorganic Chemistry. With illustrations and over 300 Questions and Problems. By R. L. TAYLOR, F.I.C., F.C.S., Teacher of Chemistry and Physics in the School of Science and Art, Central Higher Grade Board School, Manchester. Fifth Edition, thoroughly revised and partly rewritten. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

"Covers the whole ground of the Elementary Stage of the Science and Art Department's Examinations, and forms generally an excellent introduction to the study of Chemistry, the explanations of chemical phenomena being unusually full."—School Science Review.

ALTERNATIVE ELEMENTARY

CHEMISTRY: being a Course of Lessons adapted to the requirements of the new Syllabus of Chemistry recently instituted by the Science and Art Department. By JOHN MILLS, of the Normal School, South Kensington. With a Preface by Professor THORPE, F.R.S. Illustrated by 65 Drawings. 104 pages. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

"It is a practical and business-like manual, clear in its descriptions, and illustrated by a number of serviceable diagrams."—Education.

ANSWERS to the QUESTIONS on ELEMENTARY CHEMISTRY. Theoretical and Practical (Ordinary Course). Set at the Examinations of the Science and Art Department, South Kensington, 1887 to 1891. By JOHN MILLS. Fully Illustrated. In Two crown 8vo. Volumes, 1s. each.

A SCHOOL COURSE IN HEAT.

Revised and Enlarged. By W. LARDNER, M.A., Assistant Master in the R.N.E. College, Devonport; late Science Scholar, Merton College, Oxford. Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

A Text-Book at Rugby, Clifton, Cheltenham, Bedford, Birmingham, Uppingham, and other eminent Schools and Colleges.

The SHORTHAND of ARITH-

METIC: a Companion to all Arithmetic. By JOHN JACKSON, F.R.S. For Teachers, Students, Middle and Upper Forms, and Candidates preparing for Examinations. With upwards of 1,700 Questions and two valuable Appendices on 'Incrementation' and 'How to Teach Arithmetic.' 1s. 6d.

An ENGLISH GRAMMAR with

ANALYSIS and PROSBODY. For the Use of Teachers and the Higher Classes in Schools. By S. K. STRONG, M.A. Q.U.I., Inspector of Schools, and A. R. HAGAR, M.A. T.C.D., First Senior Moderator, and sometime Professor of English Language at Alexandra College, Dublin. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s.

"The book is thoughtfully and carefully written; its explanations are clear, its views generally sound; and there is a refreshing absence of the numerous little slips so frequent in the definitions of even the best grammars."—Edinburgh Times.

ALGEBRA for the USE of SCHOOLS and COLLEGES. By WILLIAM THOMSON, M.A. B.Sc. F.R.S.E., Professor of Mathematics, Stellenbosch College, formerly Assistant Professor of Mathematics in the University of Edinburgh. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.; with the Answers in one, 10s.; the Answers separately, 1s. 6d.

"The sets of examples, and the working out of the examples, evince the skill of a practiced algebraist."—Edinburgh Review.

The THEORY and PRACTICE of HANDWRITING: a Practical Manual for the Guidance of Inspectors, School Boards, Teachers, and Students. With Diagrams and Illustrations. By JOHN JACKSON, F.R.S.E., Originator of the System of Upright Penmanship. Demy 8vo. cloth, 6s.

Every Teacher who wishes to be acquainted with the modern development of the important art of Handwriting, and with the researches of Continental and English Specialists in that Department, should at once procure this Manual.

"Should not only be issued in the library of every teacher, but on his desk for constant reference."—Edinburgh Courier.

"This highly instructive and extremely interesting manual... deserves, as it receives from us, the very highest commendation."—Schoolmaster.

Full Catalogues on application.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C.

CLARENDON PRESS LIST.

NEW AND RECENT BOOKS.

Recent Part (CONSIGNIFICANT—CROUCHING), 12s. 6d.

New Section (CROUCHMAS—CZOB), 4s.

A NEW ENGLISH DICTIONARY ON HISTORICAL PRINCIPLES.

Founded mainly on the Materials collected by the Philological Society. Edited by JAMES A. H. MURRAY, LL.D.

NOTICE.—The present position of the Work is as follows:—

Vol. I. A. and B. Edited by Dr. MURRAY. Imperial 4to. half-morocco, 2l. 12s. 6d. [Published.]
 Vol. II. C. Edited by Dr. MURRAY. Imperial 4to. half-morocco, 2l. 12s. 6d. [Published.]
 * The Parts comprised in Vols. I. and II. are still sold separately.

Vol. III. D and E. Edited by Dr. MURRAY. [In the press.]
 F. Edited by HENRY BRADLEY, M.A. [Published.]
 Vol. IV. F, G, and H. Edited by HENRY BRADLEY, M.A. [Published.]
 EVERYBODY—EZOD. [Published.]
 [Shortly.]

"The colossal nature of Dr. Murray's undertaking and the monumental thoroughness of his work are attested by the fact that this (the second) volume of no less than 1,306 pages is devoted to the letter C alone, and that the space this letter requires will even be surpassed by the letter S. On the other hand, nine of the smaller letters, X, Z, Y, Q, K, J, N, U, and V, will only require the same amount of space."—Times.

THE OXFORD ORIENTAL SERIES.

Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

A BURMESE READER: being an Easy Introduction to the Written Language, and Companion to Judson's Grammar. For the Use of Civil Service Students and others who wish to acquire the Language quickly and thoroughly. By R. F. ST. ANDREW ST. JOHN, Hon. M.A., Member of the Royal Asiatic Society, Teacher of Burmese in the University of Oxford and University College, London, and late Deputy-Commissioner in Burma.

Crown 8vo. 1s. 6d.

GRAMMAR of the BENGALI LANGUAGE, LITERARY and COLLOQUIAL. By JOHN BEAMES, Bengal Civil Service (Retired), Author of 'A Comparative Grammar of the Modern Aryan Language of India,' &c. [Shortly.]

RULERS OF INDIA.—New Volume.

Crown 8vo. with Map, 2s. 6d.

HAIDAR ALI and TIPU SULTAN, and the Struggle with the Muhammadan Powers of the South. By LEWIN BENTHAM BOWRING, C.S.I.

"Mr. Bowring's portraits are just, and his narrative of the continuous military operations of the period full and accurate."—Punch.

PARTS I., II., and III. A'ISHA. Imperial 4to. 21s. each.

A CONCORDANCE to the SEPTUAGINT and the other

GREEK VERSIONS of the OLD TESTAMENT (including the Apocryphal Books). By the late EDWIN HATCH, M.A. D.D., and HENRY A. REDPATH, M.A., assisted by other Scholars.

Until the publication of PART V., but not afterwards, subscriptions may be paid in advance at the price of 4l. 4s. for the Six Parts.

"The accuracy of the Hebrew words, as well as the figures for the quotations, is marvellous."—Guardian.
 "A work on which this generation may well congratulate itself."—Review.

Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.

PRIMER of ITALIAN LITERATURE. By F. J. Snell, M.A., Balliol College, Oxford.

"Will be valuable to any student who wishes to have a quick and general survey of the whole ground."—Athenaeum.

Demy 8vo. 10s. net.

LATIN HISTORICAL INSCRIPTIONS. Illustrating the History of the Early Empire. By G. MCN. RUSHFORTH, M.A., St. John's College, Oxford.

"It is the ideal book to place in the hands of students while they are attending a course of lectures about the period with which it deals."—Athenaeum.

Small 4to. 8s. 6d. net.

Only 250 Copies have been printed on Large Paper.

MILTON'S PROSODY. An Examination of the Rules of the Blank Verse in Milton's Later Poems, with an Account of the Verification of 'Samson Agonistes,' and General Notes. By ROBERT BRIDGES.

"A learned monograph by an author who has valid claims to be regarded as an authority on metrical rules."—Times.

HISTORY AND ENGLISH CLASSICS.

The STUDY of MEDIEVAL and MODERN HISTORY.

Lectures by WILLIAM STUBBS, D.D., Bishop of Oxford, late Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Of altogether exceptional value."—Times.

BOSWELL'S LIFE of SAMUEL JOHNSON. Including

Boswell's 'Journal of a Tour to the Hebrides,' and Johnson's 'Diary of a Journey into North Wales.' Edited by GEORGE BIRKBECK HILL, D.C.L., Pembroke College, Oxford. With Portraits and Facsimiles. In 6 vols. medium 8vo. half-roan, 3l. 3s.

"An edition which for splendour, accuracy, and completeness exceeds that of any other English classic."—Westminster Review.

UNIFORM WITH THE ABOVE.

LETTERS of SAMUEL JOHNSON, LL.D. Collected and Edited by GEORGE BIRKBECK HILL, D.C.L. With a Facsimile. In 2 vols. medium 8vo. half-roan, 2l. 2s.

"All lovers of Johnson will appreciate the scholarly manner in which Dr. Hill has discharged his editorial task. We cannot but congratulate him on his fresh addition to the already Johnsonian edition he has issued with so much skill and labour."—Punch.

"Excellent reading."—Standard.
 "Full of charm."—Daily Chronicle.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

QUINTI SEPTIMI FLORENTIS.

TERTULLIANI DE PRAESCRPTIONE HAERETI-

CORUM: AD MARTYRAS; AD SCAPULAM. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by T. HERBERT BINDLEY, B.D., Merton College, Oxford, Principal of Cuddington College, Barbadoes, and Examining Chaplain to the Lord Bishop.

"A scholarly edition of certain tracts of Tertullian, specially chosen to illustrate particular characteristics of his method and style."—Times.

By the SAME AUTHOR.

TERTULLIANI APOLOGETICUS ADVERSUS GENTES

PRO CHRISTIANIS. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by T. HERBERT BINDLEY, M.A. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"We welcome this scholarly edition with especial pleasure. The plan and execution are both good, the annotations being an advance upon anything of the kind we have seen in English."—Morning Leader.
 "A grand edition of one of the most interesting documents of the early Church. Mr. Bindley has read up his subject thoroughly, and gives the result of his studies in a compact and serviceable form. For examination purposes nothing more could be desired."—Saturday Review.

Just ready, Vol. XLII. Part III. BOOKS V., VI., and VII., demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

SACRED BOOKS of the EAST. Edited by F. Max

MÜLLER. The SATAPATHA-BRAHMANA, according to the Text of the Madhyandine School. Translated by JULIUS EGGELING.

Crown 8vo. with Map, 5s.

A SHORT ACCOUNT of the LAND REVENUE and its ADMINISTRATION in BRITISH INDIA. With a Sketch of the Land Tenures. By B. H. BADEN-POWELL, C.I.E. F.R.S.E. M.R.A.S., late of the Bengal Civil Service, and one of the Judges of the Chief Court of the Punjab.

"Mr. Baden-Powell is to be congratulated on the knowledge, skill, and care which has enabled him to bring within the compass of two hundred and fifty pages so clear and comprehensive a survey of land revenue administration in British India, and the forms of tenure on which it is based."—Speaker.

8vo. cloth, with Maps and Plans, 12s.

SELECTIONS from STRABO. With an Introduction on Strabo's Life and Works. By the Rev. H. F. TOZER, M.A. F.R.G.S., Honorary Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford.

"A very valuable and instructive series of passages from the writings of the Greek geographer, edited by a very competent scholar, who is also an experienced traveller in classic lands."—Times.

SECOND EDITION, crown 8vo. 6s.

VOYAGES of the ELIZABETHAN SEAMEN to AMERICA.

Select Narratives from the 'Principal Navigations' of HAKLUYT. Edited by EDWARD JOHN FAYNE, M.A., Fellow of University College, Oxford. First Series: HAWKINS, FROBISHER, DRAKE.

"A book in which every one who is proud of the name of Englishman will delight."—Penguin.

Extra fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

SCOTT.—LORD of the ISLES. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by THOMAS BAYNE.

"The historical, and especially the philological, notes are valuable, and a special word of praise is due to the apt illustration of the poem by parallel passages."—Glasgow Herald.

The STUDY of MEDIEVAL and MODERN HISTORY.

LETTERS of DAVID HUME to WILLIAM STRAHAN.

Now first Edited, with Autobiography, Notes, Index, &c., by G. BIRKBECK HILL, D.C.L. With a Facsimile. Demy 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.

"We have never seen a book better edited or better annotated."—Academy.

CHESTERFIELD.—LETTERS of PHILIP DORMER,

FOURTH EARL of CHESTERFIELD, to his GODSON and SUCCESSOR. Edited from the Originals, with a Memoir of Lord Chesterfield, by the late EARL of CAMBRIDGE. Second Edition, with Appendix and additional Correspondence. Royal 8vo. cloth extra, 3l.

The MELANESIANS. Studies in their Anthropology and Folk-lore. By R. H. CODRINGTON, D.D., late of the Melanesian Mission, sometime Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. 8vo. cloth, 10s.

"Probably an better book concerning the manners, customs, beliefs, and arts of a barbaric people has ever been written than Dr. Codrington's Melanesians."—Saturday Review.

The GOLDEN TREASURY of ANCIENT GREEK

POETRY. By R. S. WRIGHT, M.A., Honorary Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. Second Edition, Revised by EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D., Fellow and Tutor of Balliol College, Oxford. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

FULL CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

CORNWALL.—New ready.

THE AGE of the SAINTS: a Monograph of Early Christianity in Cornwall, with Legends of the Cornish Saints. By W. C. MULLAR, late Vice-President of the Society of Antiquaries. Illustrated, pages 257-258, 8vo. bound in cloth, 1s. net.

"It is safe to say that those in quest of information concerning the Saints (Irish, Welsh, Armorian) who lived and worked in Cornwall, will here find all that is discoverable."—National Observer.

Truro: Joseph Pollard. London: Gilling & Co. 18, Bury-street.

FRENCH DICTIONARIES REDUCED IN PRICE.

SURENNE'S PRONOUNCING FRENCH-ENGLISH and ENGLISH-FRENCH DICTIONARY With the Pronunciation shown by a Different Spelling. 974 pages, reduced from 7s. 6d. to 5s.

SURENNE'S SMALLER FRENCH-ENGLISH and ENGLISH-FRENCH DICTIONARY. 400 pages, reduced from 3s. 6d. to 1s. 6d.

Edinburgh: Oliver & Boyd. London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co. Limited.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth, 2s.

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Advertisement.—"These ballads are spirited and stirring, such are 'The Fall of Harold Godwinson,' 'Old Beowulf,' 'Margaret Mowbray,' and 'Corporal John,' the latter a theme for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Seeds of Wellington,' 'Isakermans,' and 'Pasha Jevs' are excellently well told and sung. As a book of ballads interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr. Bennett's contribution will be welcome. In Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

Chas. & Winks, Piccadilly.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER'S LIST.

Second Edition, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

ARBORICULTURE;

Or, a Practical Treatise on Raising and Managing Forest Trees, and on the Profitable Extension of the Forests of Great Britain.

By JOHN GRIGOR, The Bursar, Forres.

"A writer who can support his theories by facts, and can point to lands worth less than a shilling an acre when he found them now covered with ornamental plantations, and yielding through them a revenue equal to that of the finest corn-land in the country.....His book has interest both for the adept and the novice, for the large proprietor and him that has but a nook or corner to plant out."

Saturday Review.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE CHURCH AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

By A. SCOTT MATHESON.

Author of 'The Gospel and Modern Substitutes.'

"We have read few books of late years that so admirably fulfil their purpose as does this one of Mr. Scott Matheson's. It is a most judicious and comprehensive survey of the whole social field."—Daily Chronicle.

FIFTEENTH THOUSAND. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

BUNYAN CHARACTERS.

Lectures Delivered in Free St. George's Church, Edinburgh.

By Rev. ALEX. WHITE, D.D.

The British Weekly says: "We cannot too warmly welcome this very beautiful and amazingly cheap reprint of Dr. White's lectures. The book will take a permanent place in Bunyan literature."

* A Second Series of 'Bunyan Characters' is in the press.

Fool. 8vo. antique laid paper, 2s. 6d.

THE COVENANTERS OF THE MERSE:

Their History and Sufferings as Found in the Records of that Time.

By the Rev. J. WOOD BROWN, M.A., Gordon.

"Will receive a hearty welcome from all who appreciate painstaking and praiseworthy historical work concerning a period so eventful as that of the 'killing times' in Scotland."—Scotsman.

THE LAST SCOTTISH MARTYR.—Fool. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

LIFE AND LETTERS OF JAMES RENWICK.

By Rev. W. H. CARSLAW, M.A., Melroseburgh.

With Vignettes and Facsimile Letter.

"Mr. Carslaw has been fortunate in securing so many of the original autographs, and in making his work reliable beyond all its predecessors, both in point of completeness and accuracy. Renwick's story is one of which Evangelical Scotland may well be proud."—Freeman.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER,
London and Edinburgh.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

EARLSCOURT: a Novel of Provincial Life.

By ALEXANDER ALLARDYCE,

Author of 'The City of Sunshine,' 'Balmoral: a Romance of the Queen's Country,' &c.

3 vols. crown 8vo. 25s. 6d.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

THE

THE NEW "PSEUDONYM."

ROUSING OFMrs. POTTER.

By JANE NELSON.

Next week.]

Paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth, 2s.

[Next week.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

In an entirely new form, price Half-a-Crown Monthly.

THE PORTFOLIO.

Edited by P. G. HAMERTON.

The PORTFOLIO will in future be published in a smaller and more handy form, and will consist of about 80 pages. It will contain Four Plates and many minor Illustrations. Each number will be a Monograph on some Artistic subject.

The Subject for JANUARY is

THE ETCHINGS OF REMBRANDT.

By P. G. HAMERTON.

With Four Etchings and Thirty-four other Illustrations.

"This monograph should be in the possession of every one who admires Rembrandt's etchings—that is, every lover of noble art."—Guardian.

"Admirably got up and altogether artistic.....Of great value to lovers of Rembrandt."

Vanity Fair.

"We can only praise the literary style in which the monograph is written, the artistic character of the etched illustrations, and the excellence of the printing and paper."—Scotsman.

PROSPECTUS MAY BE HAD ON APPLICATION.

SEELEY & CO., LIMITED, Essex-street, Strand.

THIS DAY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

FANS of JAPAN. By C. M. SALWEY. With Introduction by WILLIAM ANDERSON, F.R.C.S., and with 10 Full-Page Coloured Plates and 39 Illustrations in Black and White. Large 4to. handsomely bound, 31s. 6d. net.

RECOLLECTIONS of FRED LESLIE. By W. T. VINCENT. With Introduction by CLEMENT SCOTT, and 180 Illustrations. 2 vols. 30s.

HISTORY of CIVILIZATION in ANCIENT INDIA, based on Sanscrit Literature. By ROMESH CHUNDER DUTT, C.I.E. Revised Edition, in 2 vols. with 2 Maps, 21s.

HENRY WILLIAM BURROWS. Memorials by E. WORDSWORTH. With Portrait and Introduction by the LORD BISHOP of SALISBURY. 6s.

The ENGLISH GIPSIES and THEIR LANGUAGE. By CHARLES LELAND. Fourth and Cheaper Edition. 8s. 6d.

FAUNA of the DEEP SEA. By SYDNEY J. HICKSON. With 23 Illustrations, 2s. 6d.

"'TIS SIXTY YEARS SINCE"; or, the Two Locksley Halls. By H. SCHÜTZ WILSON. 1s. 6d.

London: KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & Co. Limited.

REMINGTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS, BOOKSTALLS, AND LIBRARIES.

Ready this day.

MEMORIES of the MUTINY. By Francis Cornwallis Maude, V.C. C.B., late Colonel Royal Artillery, and formerly commanding the Artillery of Havelock's Column. With which is incorporated the Personal Narrative of JOHN WALTER SHERER, Esq., Companion of the Star of India, formerly Magistrate of Cawnpore, Author of 'Who is Mary?' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. handsomely bound, with Map and Illustrations, 30s. A few copies on special paper, 52s. 6d.

MEMORIES OF THE MUTINY.
MEMORIES OF THE MUTINY.
MEMORIES OF THE MUTINY.
MEMORIES OF THE MUTINY.
MEMORIES OF THE MUTINY.

FIFTH EDITION.

STEVE BROWN'S BUNYIP, and Other Stories. By John ARTHUR BARRY. With Introductory Verses by RUDYARD KIPLING. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

TIMES says:—"Gives a good notion of pastoral life and semi-savage manners at the Antipodes. They are honoured by introductory verses in ballad form by Rudyard Kipling."

ATHENÆUM says:—"The stories are themselves quite worthy of Mr. Kipling's introduction; they are tales of the Australian bush and tales of the sea written by a man who knows what he is talking about, and can express it."

STANDARD says:—"It will be safe to say that very few books published this season will afford so much real amusement as this collection of capital tales of Australian life. The volume can be heartily recommended."

DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"Mr. Barry's vivacious stories of adventure by sea and land have entered upon a fifth edition. We can cordially recommend the whole collection to our readers, young and old alike."

THIRD EDITION.

OUT BACK: a Romance of the Australian Bush. By Kenneth MACKAY, Author of 'Stirrup Jingles,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"A novel by the deservedly popular Australian writer Kenneth Mackay. Certain episodes of Australian life, such as a daring and desperate escort robbery and native 'corroboree,' are narrated with remarkable spirit and graphic verve. 'Out Back' forms a brilliant pendant to 'Stirrup Jingles'—an admirable work, which gave its author popularity."

Just ready,

GUNNER JINGO'S JUBILEE. By Major-General Tom Bland STRANGE (late R.A.). With 15 Full-Page Illustrations, Plans, Maps, and numerous Thumb-nail Sketches. Demy 8vo. handsomely bound in cloth, 10s. 6d.

SCOTSMAN says:—"Soldiers will enjoy its good spirits, its reminiscences of adventure, and the steadfast tenacity with which the author on every possible occasion urges his own views as to what is necessary—politically and morally—for the welfare of his country."

SECOND EDITION.

AMONG BOERS and BASUTOS. The Story of Our Life on the Frontier. By Mrs. BARKLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

ACADEMY says:—"The author of this interesting book paints for home readers a vivid picture of life among the Boers."

COURT JOURNAL says:—"It is written in a smart and pleasing style, and abounds with information which will be of great novelty to many, and cannot fail to interest all who peruse the book. Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to accept a copy."

JOYCE MARTINDALE. By Mrs. H. E. Russell, Author of 'Too Easily Jealous.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

BLACK and WHITE says:—"A fine story of heroic love and surrender."

The MAID of BRITTANY. An Italian Romance (from the leaves of a Diary). By COUNT ORSI, Author of 'Recollections of the last Half Century.' 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s. [Ready this day.]

THIS DEADLY BLOT. By William Langford, Author of 'Tifana's Revenge.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

NEW YORK HERALD says:—"The story is told in terse, vigorous English, a welcome contrast to the aliphed and enaculated style which disfigures most modern literature, and the interest is sustained from beginning to end. All the characters are skilfully drawn."

BIRMINGHAM GAZETTE says:—"The story is well told."

PEOPLE says:—"Mr. William Langford follows up the success he achieved with 'Tifana's Revenge' by publishing a still better book. His present work is strong throughout, catching and holding the reader's attention from first to last."

MY BLACK SPIRIT. By B. S. Knollys. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

ATHENÆUM says:—"Is good and well written.....The simple and unpretentious style in which the story is written is praiseworthy."

VANITY FAIR says:—"It shows cleverness and wit."

EIGHTH EDITION.

The MARK TWAIN BIRTHDAY BOOK. Cloth, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

REMINGTON & CO. (LIMITED), London: King-street, Covent-garden; and Sydney.

Just published, 8vo. 1s. 6d. net.

THE GREAT PESTILENCE (A.D. 1348-9), now commonly known as the Black Death. By FRANCIS AIDAN CASHE, F.R.S. 150 pp. 8vo.
 London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

Price 6s. 6d. cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, F.R.A.S.
 Edward Stanford, 36 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

New ready, price Fourpence.

BRIEF LENSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, F.R.A.S.
 G. Steadman, 71, Warwick-lane, E.C.

ENLARGED EDITION—Comprising 128,000.

BELL'S

STANDARD ELOCUTIONIST.

Principles and Exercises, with a Copious Selection of Extracts in Prose and Poetry, adapted for Reading and Recitation.

BY

D. C. BELL and ALEX. MELVILLE BELL, F.R.S.

With Frontispiece and Diagrams.

Roxburgh binding, 608 pages, price 3s. 6d.

* * * This Edition contains sixty-four additional pages, comprising a NEW SELECTION OF CLASSIFIED RECITATIONS.

"It is far the best of the many books of the kind—perhaps the only one that explains the principles of the subject with scientific precision."
British Museum.

London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

BIBLIOGRAPHY of BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 21st, JUNE 10th, 20th, and JULY 8th contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL OF BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEY to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONQUEST,' 'LUTHER,' and 'REVENGE.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 3d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE

RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 6d.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE

COMPANY INSURES AGAINST

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS,

PERSONAL ACCIDENTS,

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.

Capital, 1,000,000. Established 1865.

64, COHEN-LL, LONDON.

W. D. HANBY, } Secretaries.
 A. VIAN, }

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER

PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.

ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.

31, West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

EPPS'S COCOA, WITH BOILING MILK.

GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST and SUPPER.

EPPS'S COCOA, WITH BOILING WATER.

PREMIER

"VINOLIA" SOAP

FOR THE HOUSEHOLD COSTS

4d. a TABLET.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
 ACIDITY of the STOMACH,
 HEADACHE, and INDIGESTION, and other ailments for which
 Children, and Invalids.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

NEW VOLUME OF 'THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

FROM A RECENT NOTICE OF THE WORK IN THE 'WORLD.'

"The present instalment of this really great work is fully equal in every respect to its predecessors. Mr. Sidney Lee and his staff of contributors, indeed, have left nothing undone which the reader could wish or expect them to do, and the publishers may be congratulated on the approaching conclusion of an enterprise of which the success is as conspicuous as its merits, and in the department of literature to which it belongs unparalleled and unprecedented."

Now ready, price 15s. net, in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20s. net.

Volume XXXVII. (MASQUERIER—MILLYNG) of THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY. Edited by Sidney Lee.

Vol. I. was published on January 1, 1885, and a further Volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the work.

NOTE.—A Full Prospectus of 'The Dictionary of National Biography,' with Specimen Pages, may be had upon application.

From the TIMES.—"We have nothing to say of what we have on former occasions so often said concerning the merits of this admirable work, which has long ago taken its place among the books which must be regarded as essential to the equipment of every well-organized library."

From the LANCET.—"The usefulness, fulness, and general accuracy of this work become more and more apparent as its progress continues. It is a classic work of reference as such, WITHOUT ANY COMPETITOR IN THE ENGLISH OR PERHAPS ANY OTHER LANGUAGE."

NEW AND THOROUGHLY REVISED EDITION OF MUIR'S 'LIFE OF MAHOMET.'

Early in February. With several New Maps and Illustrations. 8vo.

The LIFE of MAHOMET. From Original Sources. By Sir WILLIAM MUIR, K.C.S.I. Third Edition.

A Short History of the Re-
MAINANCE in ITALY. Taken from the Work of JOHN ABBINGTON SYMONDS. By LIEUT. COL. ALFRED PEARSON. With a Steel Engraving of a recent Portrait of Mr. Symonds. Demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

Voltaire's Visit to England,
1728-1729. By ARCHIBALD BALLANTYNE. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

The Life and Letters of Robert
BROWNING. By Mrs. SUTHERLAND ORR. With Portrait and Steel Engraving of Mr. Browning's Study in the Yers Gardens. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.

A Selection from the Poetry of ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING. First and Second Series. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each.

A Selection from the Poetical
WORKS of ROBERT BROWNING. First and Second Series. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each.

Life of Frank Buckland. By his Brother in Law, GEORGE C. BOMPAS. Editor of 'Notes and Jottings from Animal Life' With a Portrait. Crown 8vo. 6s., gilt edges, 6s.

Notes and Jottings from ANIMAL LIFE. By the late FRANK BUCKLAND. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 3s., gilt edges, 4s.

The Gamekeeper at Home.
By RICHARD JEFFERIES. New Edition, with all the Illustrations of the former Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Wild Life in a Southern
COUNTY. By RICHARD JEFFERIES. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The Amateur Poacher. By RICHARD JEFFERIES. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Woodland, Moor, and Stream;
being the Notes of a Naturalist. Edited by J. A. OWEN. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s.

A NEW GUIDE TO EMPLOYMENTS FOR WOMEN.

Just published, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

WHAT OUR DAUGHTERS CAN DO FOR THEM-
SELVES: a Handbook of Women's Employments. By Mrs. H. COLEMAN DAVIDSON, Author of 'Dainties: English and Foreign,' 'Niggs, &c.'

The White Company. By A.
CONAN DOYLE. Author of 'Misch Martin,' &c. Tenth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The History of David Grieve.
By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD. Author of 'Robert Elsmere,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Dark: a Tale of the Down
Country. By Mrs. STEPHEN BAYTON.

Grania: the Story of an Island. By the Hon. EMILY LAWLESS. Author of 'Hervath,' &c.

Hours in a Library. By
LESLIE STEPHEN. New, Revised, Re-arranged, and Cheaper Edition, with additional Chapters. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 6s. each.

The Life of Goethe. By GEORGE HENRY LEWES. Fourth Edition. With Portrait. 8vo. 16s.

Literature and Dogma: an Essay towards a Better Apprehension of the Bible. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition, with a New Preface. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

God and the Bible: a Sequel to 'Literature and Dogma.' By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition, with a Preface. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

St. Paul and Protestantism; with other Essays. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition, with a New Preface. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Culture and Anarchy: an Essay in Political and Social Criticism. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

Irish Essays, and Others. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

On the Study of Celtic Litera-TURE. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

THE STANDARD EDITION. 26 vols. large 8vo. 10s. 6d. each.

This Edition contains some of Mr. Thackeray's Writings which had not previously been collected, with many additional Illustrations.

VANITY FAIR. Illustrated by the Author. 3 vols.

PENDENNIS. Illustrated by the Author. 2 vols.

The NEWCOMES. Illustrated by Richard Doyle. 3 vols.

ESMOND. Illustrated by George Du Maurier.

The VIRGINIANS. Illustrated by the Author. 2 vols.

The ADVENTURES of PHILIP. Illustrated by the Author and Frederick Walker. 3 vols.

The GREAT HOGGARTY DIAMOND;
A LITTLE DINNER at TIMMIN'S; CORNHILL to CAIRO. Illustrated by the Author.

CHRISTMAS BOOKS. Illustrated by the Author and Richard Doyle.

The BOOK of SNOBS; TRAVELS and SKETCHES. Illustrated by the Author.

BURLESQUES. Illustrated by the Author and George Cruikshank.

PARIS SKETCH-BOOK; LITTLE
TRAVELS; and ROADSIDE SKETCHES. Illustrated by the Author, T. R. Macquoid, and J. P. Atkinson.

The YELLOWPLUSH PAPERS; The FITZBOODLE PAPERS; COX'S DIARY; CHA-RACTER SKETCHES. Illustrated by the Author and George Cruikshank.

The IRISH SKETCH-BOOK; CRITI-
CAL REVIEWS. Illustrated by the Author, George Cruikshank, John Leech, and M. Fitzgerald.

The MEMOIRS of BARRY LYNDON;
The FATAL ROOTS. Illustrated by Sir J. B. Millais,
Bart. R.A., George Cruikshank, and W. Watson.

CATHERINE: a Story; MEN'S WIVES; The BRIDFORD ROW CONSPIRACY. Illustrated by the Author, L. Pidgeon, A.R.A., and R. B.
Wallace.

CONTRIBUTIONS to 'PUNCH.'
132 Illustrations by the Author.

BALLADS; The ROSE and the RING.
Illustrated by the Author, Lady Butler (Miss Elizabeth Thompson), George Du Maurier, John Collier, H.
Furness, G. G. Kilburne, M. Fitzgerald, and J. P.
Atkinson.

ROUNDABOUT PAPERS. To which is added, The SECOND FUNERAL of NAPOLEON.
Illustrated by the Author, Charles Keene, and M. Fitzgerald.

The FOUR GEORGES, and the ENGLISH HUMOURISTS of the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. Illustrated by the Author, Frank Dicksee, Linley Sambourne, Frederick Walker, F. Barnard, and
G. A. Sala.

LOVEL the WIDOWER; The WOLVES and the LAMB; DENIS DUVAL. Illustrated by the Author and Frederick Walker. To which is added an Essay on the Writings of W. M. Thackeray, by LESLIE STEPHEN.

MICELLANEOUS ESSAYS,
SKETCHES, and REVIEWS. With Illustrations by the Author.

OTHER EDITIONS OF MR. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

The LIBRARY EDITION. 24 vols. large crown 8vo.
Randomly bound in cloth, 9s.; or half-morocco, marbled edges, 13s. 13s. With Illustrations by the Author, Richard Doyle, and Frederick Walker.

* * The Volumes are sold separately, in cloth, 7s. 6d. each.

The CHEAPER ILLUSTRATED EDITION. In 26 volumes, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each; sets in cloth, 4s. 11s.; or handsomely bound in half-morocco, 8s. 1s. Containing nearly all the small Woodcut Illustrations of the former Editions, and many new Illustrations by Eminent Artists. This Edition contains altogether 1,733 Illustrations.

* * Messrs. SMITH, ELDER & CO. will be happy to forward a CATALOGUE of their PUBLICATIONS post free on application.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Brown's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Ambrose Press, Brown's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by the said JOHN C. FRANCIS at Brown's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Boddie and Mr. John Macdonald, Edinburgh.—Saturday, January 20, 1894.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3457.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 27, 1894.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.—The WINTER EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN till 6 P.M., and is lighted by Electricity at dusk and on dark days.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The WINTER EXHIBITION OF SKETCHES AND STUDIES WILL CLOSE ON SATURDAY, February 3, at 4 P.M. Mail Road, from 50 Hill St.—Admission 1s.; Catalogue 6d.

ELECTION OF ASSOCIATES.—The day appointed for receiving Works by Candidates is WEDNESDAY, February 7th, and the day of Election, FRIDAY, 9th. ALFRED D. FRIPP, R.W.A., Secretary.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF BRITISH ARTISTS.—The day appointed for receiving Works by Candidates is WEDNESDAY, February 7th, and the day of Election, FRIDAY, 9th. ADAM R. PROCTOR, Hon. Secretary.

FOUNTAINS ABBEY, by J. M. W. TURNER.—R.A. (Engraved in Whitaker's Craven, 1893).—Any information about the Original Drawing will greatly oblige W. W. Wain, 2, Church-street, Richmond, Surrey.

STRADIVARI.—For the Work they have in preparation upon Stradivari W. R. Hill, of 28, New Bond-street, London, WOULD LIKE TO SEE any VIOLIN or other INSTRUMENTS by STRADIVARI that may be unknown to them, and would therefore invite their possessors to communicate with them.

SOCIETY OF AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THOMAS, Secretary, 4, Portland-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

ANCIENT ART.—TALFOURD ELY, M.A.—F.R.S., will give, in the Lecture Theatre, South Kensington Museum, by permission of the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education, at 8 P.M., on SATURDAY, February 10, a PUBLIC LECTURE on "THE ARTS OF EGYPT AND ASSYRIA in their Relation to those of Greece." The Lecture will be illustrated by the Egyptian and Assyrian Museum. Mr. Ely will also give, at 2.45 P.M., on FRIDAY, 9th, and 22, Demonstrations on Antiquities in the British Museum, by permission of the Trustees. For details and for Tickets (price 1s.) Teachers and Scholars at half price, write to Mr. Ely, 72, Portico-street, Hampstead, N.W. The Public will be admitted to the introductory Lecture without payment or Ticket.

GRESHAM COLLEGE, BASINGHALL-STREET.—R.C. LECTURES on the GEOMETRY OF CHANCE, by KARL PEARSON, M.A. (Gresham Professor of Geometry). Tuesday, January 30, 10 O'CLOCK and OVENING. Wednesday, January 31, 10 O'CLOCK and OVENING. Thursday, February 1, 10 O'CLOCK and OVENING. Friday, February 2, 10 O'CLOCK and OVENING. The Lectures will be illustrated by Diagrams and Diagrams. They commence at 8 P.M., and are Free to the Public.

TO PUBLISHERS.—A Position as SUB-EDITOR or MANAGER of PUBLICATION DEPARTMENT desired by Advertiser. Fifteen years' experience in the Literary and Publication and Advertisement Department of a leading firm of Publishers. Thoroughly conversant with Printing. Highest references.—A. H., 5, Queen's-road, Chelsea.

TO PUBLISHERS.—GENTLEMAN, well educated, and thoroughly acquainted with the Printing Business in all its branches desires ENGAGEMENT in First-Class BOOK HOUSE References and guarantee given.—Regd. A. HARRISON, 18, Elz-place, Holborn.

TO PUBLISHERS.—A Gentleman, with twenty years' practical experience in high-class publishing at present manager of a (his) house, is open to SIMILAR ENGAGEMENT to commence business with capital, or to take London branch.—Address BARNES, Bay Tree Cottage, The Green, Southgate.

A PUBLISHER, of long, successful, and practical experience, with taste and a keen judgment, requires a PARTNER, with moderate capital. Advertiser is well known, has a connection, a nucleus of business, and many unique ideas for profitable trading.—Favorable reply may be sent to Mr. B. S. Advertising Agency, London.

A GENTLEMAN REQUIRED, with some literary taste, to take an interest in EDIT, and work in conjunction with a (his) Publisher, a unique MONTHLY MAGAZINE, 1894, required, 25s. for half share, balance to capital.—A. F., Box 1841, Bell's Advertising Agency, London.

BOROUGH OF WEST HARTLEPOOL.—The Corporation are prepared to appoint a LIBRARIAN for the proposed PUBLIC LIBRARY, January 1894, per annum. Previous experience in a Public Library essential. Applications, with not more than three recent testimonials, addressed to the Librarian, to be sent in to me, the undersigned, on or before the 25th day of February, 1894. Candidates to be a disqualification. By order, HIGSON BINFORD, Town Clerk.

CROYDON PUBLIC LIBRARIES.—The Committee are prepared to receive applications for the post of ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN. Some previous experience of Public Library work and a knowledge of Cataloguing essential. Salary 60 per annum.—Applications, in candidates' own handwriting, stating age and particulars of present and previous employment, together with copies of not more than three recent testimonials, should be delivered to the undersigned on or before February 15th, 1894. By order, C. M. KILBOURN, Town Clerk. Municipal Office, Croydon, January 27th, 1894.

DOVER COLLEGE.—Terms, 80s. per annum. No extra Junior School 75s. Twenty Exhibitions this Term for Sons of Officers and Clergy. Qualifying Examination. Head Master, Rev. W. C. COMPTON, M.A.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly reliable ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. ASKIN, GARRATT & THIRSK, who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Teachers in England and abroad, will furnish careful collections if supplied with detailed requirements.—30, Southville-street, W.

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to best University or Army Tutor, and Schools for Boys or Girls, at Home or Abroad, may be obtained, free of charge, by sending a statement of requirements to M. J. HENSON, M.A., 2, Lancaster-place, Strand.

BRUSSELS.—A LADY WISHES strongly to recommend a COMFORTABLE HOME, with thorough Educational Advantages, for ENGLISH GIRLS.—For all particulars apply P. J. E. TOWLE-GARDNER, Maynoir.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE.—Cooper's Hill, Malabar.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India and the Colonies. About 40 students will be admitted in September, 1894. The Secretary of Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments to Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION IN ELEMENTARY BIOLOGY, for Students who have Matriculated at London University in January, 1894, BEGINS ON FEBRUARY 14th. J. M. HOBAN, M.A., Secretary.

OWENS COLLEGE, MANCHESTER.—THE PROFESSORSHIP OF ZOOLOGY has become VACANT through the death of Professor Marshall. Candidates for the Chair are invited to forward applications, with reference only, addressed to the Council or via the Council, under cover to the Registrar, not later than April 1st, 1894. The Council of the College are to be entered upon the 1st of October next. A detailed statement of the duties and emoluments of the Professorship may be obtained on application to the Registrar. HENRY WM. HOLIER, M.A., Registrar.

BOROUGH OF SWANSEA.—TECHNICAL INSTRUCTION. The Committee appointed by the Swansea Town Council under the Technical Instruction Act, 1889, require the services of a SPECIALIST IN METALLURGY as PRINCIPAL of the TECHNICAL proposed to be established in that Borough under the provisions of the said Act. The person appointed will be required to devote the whole of his time to the duties of his office. The salary intended to be paid is 3000 per annum, together with the following additional pecuniary interest in the success of the school:—
(a) A stipendium fee of 2s. 6d. per head in respect of each full session of school.
(b) 15 per cent. of the fees of all other day scholars, and
(c) A stipendium fee of 1s. per head in respect of each night scholar who shall present himself for the science and Art Examination in May in each year.
The appointment may be determined at any time upon giving three months' notice.
Applications for the position to be forwarded to the undersigned, showing age and qualifications, with not more than six original testimonials, on or before the 25th day of February, 1894. Dated this 15th day of January, 1894. JNO. THOMAS, Town Clerk. Guildhall, Swansea.

THE FLEET-STREET TYPE-WRITERS, 114 Fleet-street, E.C. Lowest charges. Highest speed. Every kind of Type-writing Work done. Price List—114, Fleet-street, London.

TYPE-WRITING AND STENOGRAPHY in all its branches at moderate rates. MSS. carefully Copied. Terms (75 per cent. below the average) sent on application. Tuition in both systems. Open 9 a.m. till 8 p.m.—Barnard & Lutz, Moore, 41, Broad-street House, Old Broad-street.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' MSS., Plays, Reviews, Lectures, Legal, or other Articles, COPIED with accuracy and despatch. Terms moderate. Duplicate Copies.—Address Miss E. TROTT, 21, Mansfield Park-villa, Maresfield-hill, N.W. Established 1864.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, at 1d. per folio. Shortest Notice taken. References to Architects.—Miss GILBERT, 145, South Lambeth-road, S.W.

WINNER of 1st PRIZE in LANCASHIRE and CHESHIRE 1892.—TYPE-WRITING.—Authors' MSS., Reviews, Plays, &c., Copied with accuracy and despatch. 1 per 1,000 words. Duplicate Copies.—A. BAZAN, 105, Station-road, Wincford.

TYPE-WRITERS.—SECOND-HAND MACHINES, equal to new, FOR SALE, EXCHANGE, or LEASE on HIRE. Machines sold by instalments on terms to suit purchasers. Use of Machines taught free to HIRE or purchase. Hemmings, Yeats, Hammond, Chillingham, Park-locks, Fitch &c., from 60, 65, Copied with accuracy and despatch at lowest rates. Highest references. Illustrations. Copying from—M. TAYLOR, Manager, National Type-Writer Exchange, 14, Chancery-lane, London (Holborn and).

PUBLISHING AND LITERARY INVESTMENT AGENCY.—M. A. MONCRIEFF, late Managing Clerk to Messrs. PARTNERSHIP and LITERARY INVESTMENTS in bond and stock. Correspondence on application. Confidential investigations for purchasers. Valuations of Copyright for Transfer, Premium, and other purposes.—21, Paul's Chambers, 19, Leadenhall-hill, E.C.

TO AUTHORS.—Mr. PERCY RUSSELL, Author of the 'Authors' Manual,' 6th Edition, highly commended by the Nightingale, Mr. G. H. G. is now prepared to REVISE MSS. and ADVISE on PLOT, CONSTRUCTION, STYLE, &c. Testimonials from leading men. Terms moderate.—Address Trent House, Trent-road, Brixton-hill, S.W.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMBIENS, ANTWERP, BRUXELLES, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLE, MONTPELLIER, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, POISSY, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TOULOUSE.

And at the GALLIANT LIBRARY, 294, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY, Established 1879.—Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURTON, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Revisions, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Twenty-five years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURTON, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Private or Public Sale, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Care of Terms on application. 15 and 17, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHANCERY CROSS, E.C. Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

FOR SALE, as a going concern, the COPYRIGHT and GOODWILL of an old-established JUVENILE MAGAZINE. Capital required from 1,000 to 2,000.—For full particulars apply to S. C. MITCHELL & Co., 12, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street.

TO AUTHORS.—The PRINTING and PUBLISHING of MAGAZINES, Works of History, Fiction, Travel, Verse, &c., are undertaken at reasonable rates. Illustrations Free. All Accounts Certified by the ROYAL BANK, 2, Victoria-street, Westminster.

PICTURE REPAIRATION or CLEANING effected with every regard to safe and cautious treatment, by M. KAIN'S THOMPSON, Studio, 41, George-street, Portman-square, W.

AUTOTYPE.—AUTOTYPE BOOK ILLUSTRATIONS are printed direct on the paper with suitable margins, any size up to Demy, 22 inches by 17 inches. This process is noted for its excellence in

COPIES OF ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS, COPIES OF COINS, SEALS, MEDALLIONS; COPIES OF PEN-AND-INK SKETCHES; COPIES OF ALL SUBJECTS OF WHICH A PHOTOGRAPH CAN BE TAKEN; and is employed by the Trustees of the British Museum, the Palaeographical, Numismatic, Antiquarian, and other Learned Societies, and by the Leading Publishers.

The AUTOTYPE COMPANY, for the Decoration of the Home with permanent Photographs from the most celebrated Paintings, Sculptures, and Drawings of the GREAT MASTERS, Ancient and Modern. The AUTOTYPE PEN-AND-INK ART COPIES of 100 pages (New Edition), with illustrated supplement, containing nearly Seventy Miniature Photographs of notable Autotypes. Post free, 1s. New Pamphlet, 'Autotype as a Decorative and Educational Art,' free on application.

AUTOGRAPHURE.—The AUTOTYPE PROCESS adapted to Photographic Engraving on Copper. Copies of Paintings by Gainsborough, Hogarth, Hunt, Herbert, Schiavoni, &c. Portraits by Hott, R.A.; Oakes, R.A.; Pettie, R.A.; Prince, A.R.A.; of the Fresco in Gory's Hospital, 'Spring,' by Herbert Draper, &c.; Auto-Gravure Reproductions of Photographs from Art Objects and from Nature, can be seen at the Autotype Gallery. Estimates and particulars on application. The AUTOTYPE COMPANY, 74, New Oxford-street, W.C.

Catalogues.—FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms. CATALOGUES on application. DULAU & CO., 27, BOND-STREET.

ELLIS & ELVEY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books. NEW CATALOGUE (No. 76) of RECENT PURCHASES NOW READY, post free, Six Shillings. 20, New Bond-street, London, W.

BOOK COLLECTORS' CATALOGUES FREE.—POETRY and DRAMA, 22 pp.; THOUGHTFULNESS, 30 pp.; THOUGHTFULNESS, 30 pp.; 20th Books wanted, 10 to 20 each given. Bibliography and Price Catalogue of Old Manuscript Books, 130 pp., 1s. ROBERT BARR, 11 and 13, John Bright-street, Birmingham. The most expert Book-Knower extant. Please state wants.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION, with Frontispiece and Vignette by H. J. Ford. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE:

BRING THE MEMOIRS OF GASTON DE BONNE, SIEUR DE MARSAO.

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN,

Author of 'The House of the Wolf.'

"This is really a great book. The reader is always thinking that the adventures must have reached their climax, but they rise one above another, each like a new summit in a stretch of mountains ascending and extending as the wondering traveller proceeds. It is much more than a clever story of adventure. It is a very fine work of literary art. The style is good, and the characters are real men and women. De Marsao is a great creation, and the book ought to live."—Scotsman.

With 179 Illustrations and 2 large and 4 small Coloured Maps. 2 vols. 8vo. 45s.

DISCOVERY OF LAKES RUDOLF AND STEFANIE:

An Account of Count SAMUEL TELEKI'S Exploring and Hunting Expedition in Eastern Equatorial Africa in 1897 and 1898.

By his Companion, Lieutenant LUDWIG VON HÖHNEL.

Translated by NANCY BELL (L. D'ANVERS).

"A splendid book of travel.....The illustrations are themselves of the highest interest. No such series of pictures have we ever found in a book of travel; full of life and vigour they are, and without an apparent element of exaggeration, though many of them make the nervous thrill with a sense of almost personal danger. The sympathy thus excited is sustained by the text, and as we read on and on we feel that we are learning by the pleasant process possible in following the details of personal experience in a land for the most part wholly new to European eyes."—Daily Chronicle.

The ENGLISH CHURCH in the NINETEENTH CENTURY.

By the Rev. JOHN H. OVERTON, D.D., Canon of Lincoln, Rector of Epworth, Doncaster, and Rural Dean of the Isle of Axholme. 8vo. 14s.

SPECULUM SACERDOTUM; or, the Divine Model of the Priestly

Life. By the Rev. W. C. R. NEWBOLT, M.A., Canon and Chancellor of St. Paul's Cathedral, Select Preacher in the University of Oxford, and Examining Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Ely. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The ELEMENTS of ENGLISH CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY

from the EARLIEST TIME to the PRESENT DAY. By F. C. MONTAGU, M.A., Professor of History, University College, London, late Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

LEONIDAS POLK: Bishop and General. By WILLIAM M. POLK,

M.D. LL.D. With Maps and Illustrations. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

"After thirteen years' work as a Missionary Bishop of the American Episcopal Church, the subject of this memoir accepted an important command in the Confederate Army, and after three years' service was killed in action."

LEGENDS of the MICMACS. By the Rev. SILAS TERTIUS RAND,

D.D. D.C.L. LL.D. 8vo. 12s.

"These legends were collected by Dr. Rand during his forty years' work as a missionary among the Micmac Indians of Nova Scotia."

TALES of a NOMAD; or, Sport and Strife. By CHARLES MONTAGUE.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

Contents:—A Ride for Dear Life—My Five Buffaloes—My Three Sea Cows—Various—Flat Game and Small Game—The Storming of Secocoon's—The Siege of Marabastad—A Lucky Kill—My Big Tusker—A Tale of Three Elephants.

The ONE GOOD GUEST: a Story. By L. B. WALFORD. New

and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Mrs. Walford has never written a pleasanter novel."—Scotsman.

"A story so full of the best human nature that it is vastly pleasant to read, and equally grateful to remember."—National Observer.

WHAT NECESSITY KNOWS. By L. DOUGALL, Author of 'Beggars

All,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"One of the most thoughtful and impressive novels of the season. It is a book which grows upon the reader. Its descriptive passages, its curious glimpses of out-of-the-way life, its quiet but vigorous handling of character, all make it a story of no common order."—Yorkshire Post.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW, No. 367.

1. MEMOIRS of CHANCELLOR PASQUIER.
2. The ECONOMY of HIGH WAGES.
3. The POETRY of RURAL LIFE.
4. RECENT EDITIONS of YACITES.
5. POPULAR LITERATURE of MODERN ITALY.
6. The LAST CAMPAIGN of MONTROSE.

7. The RESULTS of the CRUSADES.
8. AMONG the HAIRY AINU.
9. ADDRESSES of the late EARL of DREBY.
10. The PROGRESS of ANGLING.
11. The SESSION of 1893.

Now ready, price 6s. per copy.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE—FEBRUARY.

The MATCHMAKER. By L. B. Walford. Chaps. 13-17.

"The GARDEN of ROSES" of SHAIKH SA'DI. By Sir

Edwin Arnold, K.C.I.B. C.S.I.

PHIL'S RACE. By May Kendall.

COLOUR. By J. G. McPherson.

MRS. McGLORY'S NISCH. By Mrs. A. W. Hunt.

DEAN STANLEY of WESTMINSTER. By A. K. H. B.

A RIDE FOR DEAR LIFE. By Charles Montague.

AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. New York: 15, East 16th-street.

NOW READY.

LABOUR AND THE POPULAR WELFARE.

BY

W. H. MALLOCK,

Author of 'Is Life Worth Living?' 'Social Equality,' &c.

Crown 8vo. price 6s.

Vol. I. demy 8vo. price 15s.

THE PRINCIPLES OF POLITICAL ECONOMY.

BY

J. SHIELD NICHOLSON,

Professor of Political Economy in the University of Edinburgh.

Crown 8vo. price 5s.

THE PROCESS OF ARGUMENT:

A Contribution to Logic.

BY

ALFRED SIDGWICK,

Author of 'Fallacies,' 'Distinction, and the Criticism of Beliefs,' &c.

Demy 8vo. price 21s.

A YEAR AMONGST THE PERSIANS.

BY

EDWARD G. BROWNE, M.A. M.B.,

Fellow of Pembroke College, and Lecturer in Persian to the University of Cambridge.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. price 25s.

THE REMAINS OF ANCIENT ROME.

BY

J. HENRY MIDDLETON,

Director of the South Kensington Museum.

Illustrated with 102 Wood Engravings and 4 Coloured Plans.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

WHERE TO GO ABROAD.

A Guide to the Watering-Places and Health Resorts of Europe, The Mediterranean, &c., and including a Trip through India.

Edited by A. R. HOPE-MONCRIEFF.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London, W.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW NOVELS.

Mrs. LYNN LINTON'S New Novel, 'The ONE TOO MANY,' will be ready immediately, in 3 vols., at every Library.

JOHN HILL'S New Novel, 'The COMMON ANCESTOR,' is now ready, in 3 vols., at every Library.

A SECOND EDITION of JUSTIN MCCARTHY'S New Novel, 'RED DIAMONDS,' is now ready, in 3 vols., at every Library.

"If Mr. McCarthy had never written another novel, 'Red Diamonds' would of itself have sufficed to gain for him a good reputation among writers of fiction. 'Red Diamonds' may be safely recommended, not only to those who like Mr. McCarthy's pleasant social and political stories but to all who can appreciate a really strong tale of crime and its detection."—Speaker.

Mrs. HUNGERFORD'S New Novel, 'The RED-HOUSE MYSTERY,' is now ready, in 3 vols., at all Libraries.

OTHER NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

OUTLAW and LAWMAKER. By Mrs. CAMPBELL FRANK, Author of 'The Mistress of a Nation.' 3 vols.

"A novel of high literary quality, remarkable power, and great interest."—Daily Telegraph.

VASHTI and ESTHER: a Story of Society To-day. 2 vols.

"Its bright vivacity, shrewd common sense, and real knowledge of life place it far above the average novel. It is decidedly a book to be read, enjoyed, and talked about."—Speaker.

The BURDEN of ISABEL. By J. MACLAREN CORNAN, Author of 'The Red Sultan.' 3 vols.

"Will merit all the success it will certainly achieve."—Daily Chronicle.

TO HIS OWN MASTER. By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity.' 3 vols.

"Unquestionably a readable and entertaining novel."—Athenæum.

TWO OFFENDERS. By OUIDA, Author of 'Under Two Flags.' 2 vols.

"Written in one of the author's most charming styles."—Daily Press.

MY DEAD SELF. By WILLIAM JAMISON. Post 8vo. Illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

"A novel commanding with a vigorous hand scene, and maintaining a strong interest throughout."—Evening News.

A FAIR COLONIST. By ERNEST GLAXVILLE, Author of 'The Last Heiress.' 2 vols. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

The CONSTABLE of ST. NICHOLAS.

By EDWIN LESTER ARNOLD, Author of 'Phra the Pharmacist.' With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"The story is extremely well told, equally dramatic in its construction and its moral as well. The interest is strongly maintained from the first page to the last."—Daily Telegraph.

The MAKING of a NOVELIST. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of 'Joseph's Cook.' With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"To talk of self and not be offensive, says Mr. Murray to the Preface to this pleasant little book, 'demands an art which is not always given to man.' Nothing could be truer, but it is almost equally true that Mr. Murray possesses the art in question."—Glasgow Herald.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

The SCALLYWAG. By GRANT ALLEN, Author of 'The Tents of Shem.' 2s.

"The Scallywag" is an extremely amusing book. —Guardian.

The DAYS of HIS VANITY: a

Portrait in the Life of a Young Man. By WYNDY CHURCH.

"We have not read such an amusing book as this for a long time." —Black and White.

The LUCK of GERARD RIDGELEY.

A Tale of the Salt Border. By BERTAM MITFORD, Author of 'The Gun Heavert.' 2s.

"A rattling tale of adventure. The wild life of the salt is brought before us with admirable skill by one who knows his Africa." —Athenæum.

"TO LET." By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' 2s.

"Well told stories. . . All interesting and brightly written." —World.

THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE.

ONE SHILLING MONTHLY.

Contents for FEBRUARY.

WAS HE A COWARD? Translated by Jessie Marchmont from the Russian of Yevgenyevich Gushine — THE PRINCE CONNORATH URI VIKHRY DASH By HEST W. WOLF — THE NEW EXAMINER By R. H. LACON WATSON — WILLIAM TELL and HILDEGARDE von WARTA By Karl A. A. Hagen — ON MURDER of the OLD ACTORS Part II. By Henry Planché, M.A. — GAB as a SANITARIAN By Lynn Cyril Irvine, B.A. — OLD HAWKSWOOD By the Rev. Herbert Cundy M.A. — ENGLISH ROYAL AUTOGRAPH SIGNATURES By Sylvanus Cress.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

8vo. 16s.

CORRESPONDENCE OF MR. JOSEPH JEKYLL

WITH HIS SISTER-IN-LAW, LADY GERTRUDE SLOANE STANLEY.

1816—1838.

Edited, with a Brief Memoir, by the Hon. ALGERNON BOURKE.

[Next week.]

Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE BURDENS OF BELIEF, and other Poems.

By the DUKE OF ARGYLL.

[Next week.]

NEW VOLUME OF UNIVERSITY EXTENSION MANUALS, EDITED BY PROFESSOR KNIGHT.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE JACOBÆAN POETS.

By EDMUND W. GOSSE.

[Next week.]

FERGUSON'S HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURE IN ALL COUNTRIES.

With 1,000 Illustrations, 2 vols. medium 8vo. 2s. 3s.

NEW EDITION, REVISED.

ANCIENT AND MEDIÆVAL ARCHITECTURE.

Edited by R. PHÉNÉ SPIERS, F.S.A.

[Just out.]

8vo. 16s.

THE PSALTER OF 1539. A Landmark of English Literature.

COMPRISING THE TEXT, IN BLACK-LETTER TYPE.

Edited, with Notes, by JOHN EARLE, M.A.,
Professor of Anglo-Saxon in the University of Oxford.

[Just out.]

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE CHRISTIAN ETHIC.

By WILLIAM KNIGHT, LL.D.,

Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of St. Andrews.

[Just out.]

With Portraits, 2 vols. 8vo. 33s.

SECOND EDITION of the LIFE and CORRESPONDENCE of ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY, late Dean of Westminster. By BOWLAND E. PROTHERO, M.A., Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford. With the Co-operation and Sanction of the Very Rev. G. G. BRADLEY, Dean of Westminster.

Crown 8vo. 2s.

SECOND EDITION of the MEMOIR of H.R.H. the late DUKE of CLARENCE. Written with the Sanction of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. By JAMES EDMUND VINCENT. With Portraits and Illustrations by Wm. Simpson and others.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 34s.

SECOND EDITION of the PAMIRS: being a Narrative of a

Year's Expedition on Horseback and on Foot through Kashmir, Western Tibet, Chinese Tartary, and Russian Central Asia. By the EARL of DUNMORE. With Maps and Illustrations taken by the Author on the spot.

With Portraits, crown 8vo. 6s.

SECOND EDITION of the LETTERS of LADY BURGHESH

(afterwards Countess of Westmorland), from Germany and France during the Campaign of 1813-14. Edited by her Daughter, Lady ROSE WHIGALL.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LIFE in PARLIAMENT: a Record of the Daily Experiences of a Member of the House of Commons. From 1893 to 1892 inclusive. By Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart., M.P., G.C.S.I., D.C.L., LL.D., &c.

"An interesting series of reminiscences of a striking epoch of parliamentary history, that cannot fail to be exceedingly attractive, not merely to those who were themselves in the thick of the fight, but equally to those outside the pale of parliamentary life."—St. James's Gazette.

Medium 8vo. 18s.

ALONE WITH the HAIRY AINU: 3,800 Miles on a Pack-

Saddle in Yezo and a Cruise to the Kurile Islands. By A. H. SAVAGE LANDOR. With Map, and numerous Illustrations by the Author.

"Mr. Landor is to be thanked for letting in light on this strange people, and for brushing away many fables circulated about them."—Times.

"No book of travel published during the present season has given us more pleasure than Mr. Savage Landor's account of his adventurous wanderings in Yezo and the Kuriles."—Land and Water.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S NEW BOOKS.

GREEK VASE PAINTINGS: a Selection of Examples, with Preface, Introduction, and Descriptions by J. E. HARRISON and D. S. MACCOLL. Size of the book, 18 by 14 inches, bound in strong cloth, 31s. 6d. [Just ready.]

JAPAN. By DAVID MURRAY, Ph.D. (The 37th Volume of "The Story of the Nations.") Maps, Illustrations, and Index. Large crown 8vo. fancy cloth, gold lettered, 5s.

The Daily Chronicle says of this series:—"Such a universal history as the series will present us with on its completion will be a possession such as no country can boast of."

CATHARINE FURZE: a Novel. By MARK RUTHERFORD. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 12s.

"A simple and touching story, told with rare skill and power."—Westminster Gazette.

RANDOM ROAMING, and other Papers. By Rev. AUGUSTUS JESSOPP, D.D., Author of 'Trials of a Country Parson,' &c. Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

"'Random Roaming' is assured of a hearty welcome.....Contact with Dr. Jessopp's mind is a wonderful stimulus to the love of the antiquities of our island, animate as well as inanimate."—Times.

The HEBREW TWINS: a Vindication of God's Ways with Jacob and Esau. By the late Rev. SAMUEL COX, D.D., Author of 'Expositions,' &c. With Prefatory Memoir by his Wife. Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"Characterized by the well-known simplicity and clearness of Dr. Cox's style."—Scotsman.

BAMFORD'S PASSAGES in the LIFE of a RADICAL. Edited, with an Introduction, by HENRY DUNCKLEY ("Verax"). The New Volumes of "The Reformer's Book-Shelf." 2 vols. cloth, 3s. 6d. each. [Ready.]

BRIGHT CELESTIALS: the Chinaman at Home and Abroad. By JOHN COMING CHINAMAN. Large crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The NEW SPIRIT of the NATION; or, Ballads and Songs of the Writers of the Nation. Containing Songs and Ballads published since 1845. Edited, with an Introduction, by MARTIN MACDERMOTT. (The Third Volume of "The New Spirit of the Nation.") Small crown 8vo. paper, 1s.; cloth, 2s. [Just ready.]

The HOUSE of LORDS: a Retrospect and a Forecast. By THOMAS ALFRED SPALDING, LL.B., Barrister-at-Law. Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

"A painstaking and powerful indictment."—Daily Telegraph.

The ROUSING of Mrs. POTTER, and other Stories. By JANE NELSON. (The New Volume of "The Pseudonym Library.") 24mo. paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth, 2s. [Ready.]

LADY PERFECTA. From the Spanish of PEREZ GALDOS, by MARY WHARTON, Translator of 'Marianela,' from the same Author. (New Volume of "The Independent Novel Series.") Demy 12mo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

TWO SPHERES. By T. E. S. T. Revised and Enlarged throughout. 512 pages, full size, demy 8vo. cloth, 5s.

INTRODUCTORY STUDIES in GREEK ART. Lectures delivered in the British Museum. By JANE E. HARRISON. Third Edition. Map and Illustrations. Cloth, 7s. 6d.

"The reader will constantly encounter serious and earnest thought, wide knowledge, and a vivid exposition."—Academy.

The CENTURY for FEBRUARY contains an illustrated Article on LAURENS ALMA-TADEMA,

By ELLEN GOSSE. Price 1s. 4d.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

BLISS, SANDS & FOSTER.

A WINTER
JAUNT
TO NORWAY.

With Accounts (from personal acquaintance) of Nansen, Ibsen, Björnson, Brandes, &c. By Mrs. ALICE TWEDDIE, Author of 'A Girl's Ride in Iceland,' and 'The Passion Play at Oberammergau.' Fully illustrated. Demy 8vo. 16s. [Just published.]

A NEW BOOK OF TRAVEL AT THE LIBRARIES.*THE STORY
OF MY DICTATOR-SHIP.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [Just published.]

THE LATEST BOOK ON THE LAND QUESTION.*JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

By F. H. UNDERWOOD, LL.D.,
U.S. Consul at Edinburgh.
Crown 8vo. buckram, gilt top. 4s. 6d.

"Interesting touches of reminiscence and appreciation of Lowell and of his contemporaries."
Times.

NEW NOVELS.VICTIMS.

BY
F. W. MAUDE.
Crown 8vo. 384 pp. 6s.
[Just published.]

A MERCIFUL DIVORCE.

BY
F. W. MAUDE.
New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s.

IN SCRUTABLE.

By ESMÉ STUART.
Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [Next week.]

THE MODERN LIBRARY.

"Autumnal leaf" tinted hand-made paper, 1s. 6d.

Punch says:—"Bravo Pantalaureate! Excellent Dickensian description."

World says:—"Very pleasant story."

Daily Telegraph:—"A veritable mine of brilliant bon-mots and rattling repartees."

Spectator:—"Keeps a reader amused through its whole course."

PREVIOUS VOLUMES.

1. A LATTER-DAY ROMANCE.
By Mrs. MURRAY HICKSON.

2. THE WORLD'S PLEASURES.
By CLARA SAVILE-CLARKE.

London: 15, CRAVEN-STREET, STRAND, W.C.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

FISHERS of MEN. Addressed to the Diocese of Canterbury in his Third Visitation. By EDWARD WHITE, Archbishop. Crown 8vo. 6s.
TIMES.—"Keen insight and sagacious counsel."

The RESURRECTION of OUR LORD. By William Milligan, D.D., late Professor of Divinity and Biblical Criticism in the University of Aberdeen. Sixth Thousand. Crown 8vo. 5s.

SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE. A Narrative of the Events of his Life. By JAMES DYKES CAMPBELL. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

TIMES.—"A reproduction, revised and expanded, of the original and masterly biographical memoir of the poet, prefixed by Mr. Campbell to his edition of his poetical works published last year."

CHAPTERS on GREEK DRESS. By Maria Millington Evans. With Illustrations. 8vo. 5s. net.

TIMES.—"Her pages are full of knowledge lucidly and attractively conveyed, and the illustrations are selected with fine taste and judgment."

LADY WILLIAM. By Mrs. Oliphant. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

SPEAKER.—"It has that touch of natural simplicity which is the hall-mark of Mrs. Oliphant's work."
GLASGOW HERALD.—"The most experienced reader will hardly guess the actual development of the mystery till he arrives at it. The greatest charm of the book lies in the restfully amusing little village society to which it introduces us."

MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

The STORY of DICK. By Major Gambier Parry, Author of 'Maynell Taylor, a Biography,' &c. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"A very wholesome story for the young. The descriptions show a close and loving observation of the country."
SPECTATOR.—"This is a pretty character-study of boy-nature, illustrated throughout with descriptions, worked, it is clear, with a very full and loving knowledge of rural life."

THE EVERSLY SERIES.—NEW VOLUMES.

PARTIAL PORTRAITS. By Henry James. Globe 8vo. 5s.

The COLLECTED WORKS of THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY,
F.R.S. In Monthly Volumes. Globe 8vo. 5s. each Volume.

Vol. I. METHOD and RESULTS.

Vol. II. DARWINIANA.

Vol. III. SCIENCE and EDUCATION.

Vol. IV. SCIENCE and HEBREW TRADITION.

Vol. V. SCIENCE and CHRISTIAN TRADITION.

The CAMBRIDGE SHAKESPEARE. Edited by William Aldis

WRIGHT. Édition de Luxe. 40 vols. Super-royal 8vo. 6s. per vol. net. (Now being issued at the rate of two volumes per month. Each volume contains a single Play. Orders received only for complete sets.)

Vol. IX. The MERCHANT of VENICE.

Vol. X. AS YOU LIKE IT.

A SHORT HISTORY of the ENGLISH PEOPLE. By J. R. GREEN, M.A. Illustrated Edition. Edited by Mrs. J. R. GREEN and Miss KATE NORGATE. Part XXIX. 1s. net.

ELECTRIC WAVES: being Researches on the Propagation of Electric Action with Finite Velocity through Space. By HEINRICH HERTZ, late Professor of Physics in the University of Bonn. Authorised Translation by D. E. JONES, B.Sc. With a Preface by Lord KELVIN, F.R.S. Illustrated. 8vo. 10s. net.

NATURE.—"The subject is of immense importance; the work described is of the highest order of experimental investigation; the results obtained have contributed more than any other recent results to revolutionize the view taken by the majority of scientific workers as to the nature of electromagnetic actions. The whole work is most interesting, and well deserves the best attention of all interested in the greatest scientific advance of the last quarter of the nineteenth century."

DICTIONARY of POLITICAL ECONOMY. Edited by B. H.

INGLIS FALGRAVE, F.R.S. Vol. I. A—E. Medium 8vo. 71s. net.

SPEAKER.—"The book promises to be, in its complete form, a permanent and authoritative addition to the front rank of works of reference."

NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.—"When complete will be unique as to range and plan in the English language."

MACMILLAN'S CLASSICAL SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

HOMER'S ILIAD.—Book IX. From 'The Story of Achilles.'

Edited, with Notes, by JOHN HENRY PRATT, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Assistant Master at Harrow School; and WALTER LEAF, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Fcap. 8vo. 2s.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 412, FEBRUARY, price 1s.

Contents.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 1. LORDS and COMMONS. | 5. The STORY of the INSCRIPTIONS. |
| 2. PERLYCROSS. By R. D. BLACKMORE.
Chaps. 27-29. | 6. An OXFORD IDYLL. |
| 3. The PORTRAIT of a MOONSHEE. By
J. W. SHERRIN, C.S.I. | 7. On MODERN TRAVELLING. By VER-
NON LEE. |
| 4. SOME THOUGHTS on ST. FRANCIS. | 8. The PARTRIDGE. By T. S. KEBBLE. |

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

SELECT LIST OF W. & R. CHAMBERS'S EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

ENGLISH.

SHAKESPEARE'S PLAYS.

With Introductions, Copious Notes, Examination Papers, and Plan of Preparation.

	Limp.	Cloth.
	s. d.	s. d.
CORIOLANUS ...	0 10	1 0
HAMLET ...	1 4	1 6
HENRY V. ...	0 10	1 0
HENRY VIII. ...	0 10	1 0
JULIUS CÆSAR ...	0 10	1 0
MACBETH ...	0 10	1 0
MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM ...	0 10	1 0
RICHARD II. ...	0 10	1 0

ENGLISH CLASSICS.

With Introductions and Copious Notes.

CHAUCER.—The CANTERBURY TALES, with Glossary and Examination Papers.
The PROLOGUE ...	1 6
The SQUIERES TALE ...	1 0
The CLERKES TALE ...	1 6
The MAN of LAWES TALE ...	1 6

MACAULAY.—ESSAY on CLIVE. 100 pp., cloth ... 1 0

ESSAY on MILTON. 72 pp., paper ... 0 4

ESSAY on MOORE'S LIFE of BYRON. 58 pp., paper ... 0 4

MILTON.—PARADISE LOST. Book I., 2d.; Book II., 3d.; Books III. and IV., 2d. each, paper.

COMUS. 48 pp., paper ... 0 4

SAMSON AGONISTES. 80 pp., paper ... 0 4

L'ALLEGRO, IL PENSEROSO, LYCIDAS. 32 pp., paper ... 0 2

SCOTT.—LADY of the LAKE. 192 pp., cloth ... 1 0

LAY of the LAST MINSTREL. 148 pp., cloth ... 1 0

MARMION. 256 pp., cloth ... 1 0

SPENSER.—FAERIE QUEEN. Book I. 118 pp., cloth ... 1 6

PRINCIPLES of ENGLISH GRAMMAR. With Analysis of Sentences, and numerous Exercises. By W. WALLACE DUNLOP, M.A. Cloth ... 1 4

ETYMOLOGICAL DICTIONARY of the ENGLISH LANGUAGE, for Schools and Colleges, containing Etymology, Pronunciation, and Meanings, also many obsolete and rare words. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 608 pp., cloth ... 3 6
Roan, 4s.; half-calf, 5s. 6d.; half-morocco, 6s.

MATHEMATICS.

STANDARD ALGEBRA. The

Simple Rules, Involution, Evolution, Fractions, Indices, Surds, Equations, &c., with Test Exercises, 160 pages, cloth ... 1 6

ELEMENTS of EUCLID. Books I. to VI., and parts of Books XI., XII. By J. S. MACKAY, M.A. LL.D. 412 pages, 392 Diagrams, cloth ... 3 6

KEY to EUCLID. By J. S. MACKAY, M.A. LL.D. Cloth ... 3 6

CHAMBERS'S JUNIOR MENSTRUATION. Numerous Examples, Exercises, and Diagrams. 128 pages, cloth ... 1 4

MENSURATION of LINES, SURFACES, and VOLUMES. By DAVID MUNN, F.R.S.E. 146 pages, 123 Diagrams, cloth ... 1 6

PRACTICAL MATHEMATICS. 544 pages, 330 Diagrams ... 3 6

MATHEMATICAL TABLES. By JAS. PRYDE, F.R.S. New Edition. 496 pages ... 4 6

BOOKKEEPING.

BOOKKEEPING by SINGLE and DOUBLE ENTRY. By W. INGLIS. 208 pages ... 1 6

BOOKKEEPING.—SET of RULED FOOLSCAP PAPER BOOKS. Single Entry, Two Books, sewed ... 1 3
Double Entry, Two Books, sewed ... 1 3

EXAMINATION BOOKKEEPING, THEORY and PRACTICE. With C.S. and other Exam. Papers fully solved. By JOHN BELL, LL.D. Cloth ... 2 0

LATIN.

FIRST YEAR'S COURSE, Grammar to end of Regular Verbs, Exercises, and Vocabulary. By W. WALLACE DUNLOP, M.A. 80 pages, limp cloth, 6d.; cloth ... 0 8

SECOND YEAR'S COURSE, Irregular Verbs, Syntax, Declension, and Translation of English into Latin. By T. T. McLAGAN, M.A. 80 pages, limp cloth, 6d.; cloth ... 0 8
Two Parts in 1 vol. 160 pages, cloth bds. ... 1 3

KEY to LATIN COURSE. First and Second Years (for Teachers only). Limp cloth ... 0 6

SECOND YEAR'S COURSE. Revised Edition, with New Exercises. Limp cloth ... 0 6

THIRD YEAR'S COURSE, Cæsar, Book I., and Sentences to be translated from English into Latin. Limp cloth ... 0 9

GRAMMAR of the LATIN LANGUAGE. 444 pages ... 4 0

LATIN DICTIONARY.—LATIN and ENGLISH, ENGLISH and LATIN VOCABULARIES. 818 pages, cloth, 4s.; roan ... 4 6

SCIENCE.

ELEMENTARY SCIENCE. A s. d. Teacher's Handbook of a Systematic Course of Object Lessons. By STEPHEN R. TODD, Science Demonstrator to the School Board for London. Standards I. and II. Each 1 0

ELECTRICITY and MAGNETISM. Elementary Course, adapted to the Syllabus of the South Kensington Science Department. By C. G. KNOTT, D.Sc. (Edin.) F.R.S.E., Lecturer on Applied Mathematics, University of Edinburgh; lately Professor of Physics, Imperial University, Japan. Cloth ... 2 6

AGRICULTURE. Elementary Course, adapted to the Syllabus of the South Kensington Science Department. By WILLIAM T. LAWRENCE, Teacher of the Principles of Agriculture, Hereford. 184 pages ... 2 0

CHEMISTRY, INORGANIC. By the late Prof. WILSON. Revised and Enlarged by H. G. MADAN, M.A., Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford. New Edition. 545 pp. 4 0

CHEMISTRY, ANALYTICAL. A Series of Laboratory Exercises, constituting an Elementary Course of Qualitative Chemical Analysis. By Prof. W. DITMAR, Glasgow. New Edition. 168 pages ... 2 6

GEOLOGY. By JAMES GEIKIE, LL.D., formerly of H.M. Geological Survey, Professor of Geology in the University of Edinburgh, Author of 'The Great Ice Age.' 96 pp. 1 0

NAVIGATION. By JOHN DOX, M.A. With Examples, Exercises, and Diagrams ... 2 0

PHYSIOGRAPHY, ELEMENTARY, adapted to the Syllabus of the South Kensington Science Department. By the late ANDREW FINDLATER, M.A. LL.D. New Edition by DAVID FORSYTH, M.A. D.Sc., Principal Higher Grade School, Leeds. 194 pages ... 2 0

PHYSIOGRAPHY, ADVANCED. Adapted to the Syllabus of the South Kensington Science Department. By A. FINDLATER, M.A. LL.D. New Edition by DAVID FORSYTH, D.Sc. With Illustrations. 228 pages ... 2 0

ANIMAL PHYSIOLOGY. By J. G. M'KENDRICK, M.D., Professor of Physiology, University of Glasgow. 168 pages 1 6

CHEMISTRY. By ALEX. CRUM BROWN, M.D. D.Sc., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Edinburgh. 130 pages ... 1 0

MECHANICS, ELEMENTARY, including Hydrostatics and Pneumatics. By OLIVER J. LODGE, D.Sc. Lond. Revised Edition. 208 pages ... 3 0

FRENCH.

FIRST YEAR'S COURSE. Grammar to the end of the Regular Verbs, and Exercises, with Vocabulary. 80 pages, limp, 6d.; cloth 0 8

SECOND YEAR'S COURSE. Irregular Verbs, Syntax, Translation of English into French, with Vocabulary. 112 pages, cloth ... 1 0

GERMAN.

FIRST GERMAN READING-BOOK. With Notes and Vocabulary. 198 pp. 1 6

SECOND GERMAN READING-BOOK. Selections of Prose and Poetry from the best Authors, with Copious Notes. 292 pages ... 2 6

GERMAN GRAMMAR, ELEMENTARY. By C. E. AUE, Ph.D. With additional Exercises. 186 pages ... 1 6

GERMAN GRAMMAR, ADVANCED. By C. E. AUE, Ph.D. 346 pages 3 0

GERMAN DICTIONARY. German and English, bound. 964 pp. cloth, 4s.; roan 4 6

CATALOGUES OF ALL MESSRS. CHAMBERS'S WORKS ON APPLICATION.

W. & R. CHAMBERS, LIMITED, 47, Paternoster-row, London; 339, High-street, Edinburgh.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NEW WORKS.

FREDERIC HILL: an Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform. Edited by his Daughter, CONSTANCE HILL. 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 16s.

"The pages teem with good stories and pieces of history, local and national, political and literary, all told with a charming simplicity and distinctness."
Birmingham Daily Gazette.

The PRIVATE LIFE of NAPOLEON. From the French of ARTHUR LEVY, by STEPHEN LOUIS SIMBON, Translator of 'The Youth of Frederick the Great,' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 28s.

The CONVERSATIONS of JAMES NORTHCOOT R.A. Recorded by WILLIAM HAZLITT. A New Edition. Edited, with an Essay on Hazlitt and a Note on Northcott, by EDMUND GOSSE. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

Ready this day,

THE GREATER GLORY.

By MAARTEN MAARTENS,

Author of 'An Old Maid's Love,' &c.

3 vols. crown 8vo.

DIANA TEMPEST.

By MARY CHOLMONDELEY,

Author of 'The Danvers Jewels,' 'Sir Charles Danvers,' &c.

Second Edition. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

The BARON DE BOOKWORMS in Punch says:—

"Those who love a really good novel, excellent both in story and in literary style, will be thankful to acquire, by purchase or loan, the goods—the extra good goods—which the Gods provide. There is neither page nor paragraph in these three volumes that can be skipped without loss to the skipper. Each character is carefully analyzed, in so incisive and epigrammatic a style, and with evidently so rare a knowledge of moral anatomy, as will occasionally remind the reader of Thackeray. The Baron wishes his friends no worse luck than a rainy afternoon for the perusal of 'Diana Tempest.'"

The VICAR of LANGTHWAITE.

By LILY WATSON. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NEW SIX-SHILLING BOOKS.

SPEEDWELL. By Lady Guendolen Ramsden. In 1 vol. crown 8vo.

MOLLY and her MAN-O'-WAR. By Dr. ANABELLA KENNELLY. Author of 'Dr. Janet of Harley Street.' In 1 vol. crown 8vo.

FROM MOOR ISLES. By Jessie Fothergill, Author of 'The First Violin,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY
Now ready, third Edition, 1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31s. 6d. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S SPEERAGE and BARONETAGE for 1894. Corrected by the NOBILITY.

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORRY JEFFRESON.

Now ready, in 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

A BOOK of RECOLLECTIONS. By JOHN CORRY JEFFRESON. Author of 'A Book about Lawyers,' 'A Book about Doctors,' &c.

"The book is readable enough, and full of pleasant gossip about men of letters and other celebrities, great and small, whom Mr. Jefferson has known."—Times

"Mr. Jefferson's volumes are a rich storehouse of anecdotes, to which the prudent reader will himself resort without a moment's delay."
"There are plenty of good stories in Mr. Jefferson's volumes, which are sure to have a large number of delighted readers."—Globe

NEW NOVELS.

The WHITE AIGRETTE. By Vincent. Author of 'Cathedral Bells,' 'Wrong on Both Sides,' &c. 3 vols.

The PRICE of a PEARL. By Eleanor Holmes. Author of 'Through another Man's Eyes,' &c. 3 vols.

GOOD DAME FORTUNE. By Maria A. Boyer. 3 vols.

BROKEN FORTUNES. By Henry Greenwood. Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wily Widow,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Greenwood's pages are interwoven in the strangest of tangles by a series of subtle contrivances, the severance of which never oversteps the limits of probability. 'Broken Fortunes' is entitled to a place of honour among the latest fictional works of the year."—Daily Telegraph.

IN an ALPINE VALLEY. By G. Manville Fern. Author of 'Makino Romances,' 'The Master of the Carmoules,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Fern knows how to amuse, and he carries his readers along with him to his triumphant finish."—Athenæum

AT SOCIETY'S EXPENSE. By ALGERNON GIBBING. Author of 'A Moorland Lay,' 'A Village Hamlet,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Gibbing is a clever writer, and his new story is smart, original, and pleasant."—Scotsman

SECOND EDITION OF

TO RIGHT the WRONG. By Edna Lyall. Author of 'Dorcas,' 'We Two,' &c. 8 vols.

"The writer has been bold enough to make her romantic hero a Parliamentarian, and while in no way subject to the Royalists drawn most of her good characters from the side which has hitherto supplied the villains. It is this fact which lends a special interest to the story before us, a story which we may say shows extraordinary industry and extraordinary conscientiousness."—Athenæum

NEW ADDITION TO HURST & BLACKETT'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SIR ANTHONY. By Adeline Ser Grant. Author of 'Casper Brock's Daughter,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DOVON: a Modern Englishman.

WE TWO. IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.

KNIGHT ERRANT. WON BY WAITING.

A HANDY NORSEMAN.

A SELECTION FROM

HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME. PRICE 8s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX'

JOHN HALIFAX, ORSTLYE. CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.

MAN. A NOBLE LIFE.

A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS. HANNAH.

ABOUT WOMEN. THE UNKIND WORD.

A LIFE for a LIFE. A BRAVE LADY.

NOTHING NEW. STORIES FROM LIFE.

MISTRESS and MAID. YOUNG MRS. JARDINE.

THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM. THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK'

NATURE AND HUMAN NATURE. THE OLD JUDGE; or, Life in a Colony.

WISE SAWS and MODERN INSTANCES. TRAITS of AMERICAN HUMOUR.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD. THE AMERICANS at HOME.

DAVID ELGINBROD. ALCO FORBER.

ROBERT FALCONER. SIR GIBBIE.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT. LIFE of IRVING.

ADAM GRAEME. A ROSE in JUNE.

LADY of NORLAW. PERSE, JUNIOR.

AGNES. IT WAS A LIVER and HIS LASS.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

WORKS BY JOHN OLIVER HOBBS IN THE PSEUDONYM LIBRARY.

Paper, 1s. 6d. each.
Cloth, 2s. each.

SECOND EDITION.

A BUNDLE OF LIFE.

DAILY NEWS.

It abounds in epigrams, and is full of sentiment and satire. The characters are drawn with a deft touch, the dialogue is swift and pointed, the setting is delicately artificial. The book is full of felicities of phrase, of shafts of wit.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.

The style will be found to exhibit the same polish and frigid glitter as before. It is the story which is so poor and disappointing. Nor is the character-drawing very felicitous, for although John Oliver Hobbes says very shrewd things about her personages, she seems hardly to have interpreted them to herself. If only this indubitably clever writer would forego the luxury of writing for a twelvemonth!

ATHENÆUM.

It is like entering a new world to suddenly come across a book by John Oliver Hobbes. There is hardly a page on which at least one epigram does not occur, or some admirably phrased description: the whole very cynical and pessimistic of course, but somehow all the more amusing for that. Though some of the women are hardly dealt with, at least one and possibly two are charming. This book must certainly be placed very high among the books which have given the Pseudonym Library its reputation.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.

John Oliver Hobbes must be careful. A Bundle of Life will not do. All her characters talk the talk that never was in drawing-room or smoking-room. The story is hardly interesting, and the passion will not bear analysis. Some of the descriptions are clever, however, and the rest have an air of being clever, and John Oliver Hobbes is an undeniably clever writer, but she must be careful.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.

A Bundle of Life is amazingly clever, and shows the faculty of beating out character by a few swift strokes of dialogue. It says much for John Oliver Hobbes that he can make the situations even plausible, and to do him justice he does much more than that. The scene between Wicke and Lady Mallinger is really most admirable. The doings of these astonishing people are full of entertainment.

NATIONAL OBSERVER.

If John Oliver Hobbes could but make up his (or her) mind to be less vastly clever than he (or she) is, or essays to be, it would be an excellent thing for her (or his) work. The little book reeks with unbridled smartness. It is nothing to you that some of the epigrams are good. Who shall thrive by sugar-plums alone?

T. P. in the WEEKLY SUN.

What a tremendous amount of ability. John Oliver Hobbes has packed into her latest book! Wonderful vivid, piquant, and brilliant.

NATIONAL REVIEW.

I should like to say something more than "Don't read it" about that one—A Bundle of Life—for it was an exasperating book.

ENGLISH EDITIONS.

Some Emotions and a Moral. (Pub. Sept. 24, 1891.)	21st Thousand.
The Sinner's Comedy. (Pub. May 10, 1892.)	11th Thousand.
A Study in Temptations. (Pub. Feb. 22, 1893.)	20th Thousand.
A Bundle of Life. (Pub. Dec. 4, 1893.)	15th Thousand.
	67 Thousand.

London

T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 27, 1894.

CONTENTS.

MR. FREDERIC HILL'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY...	105
GALE'S NEW POEMS	106
SKETCHES OF BURNISH LIFE AND CHARACTER ...	106
DAWSON'S GERMANY AND THE GERMANS ...	107
GREEK PAPYRI IN THE MUSEUM	108
NEW NOVELS (Index of Blairgowrie: Good Dame Fortune; A Life Awry; Ivanda; Platonics)	109-110
RURAL LIFE	110
SCHOOL-BOOKS	111
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS ...	112-113
IMITATION; THE HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION; NOTE ON COLERIDGE; DICKENS IN YORKSHIRE; AN UNKNOWN WORK OF FRANCIS BEAUMONT	113-115
LITERARY GOSSIP	115
SCIENCE—THE STORY OF THE SUN; ATLASES OF INDIA; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP ...	116-118
FINE ARTS—THE NEW GALLERY; MINOR EXHIBITIONS; THE NORTH WALL OF CHESTER; PROF. FLINDERS PETRIE AT COPTOS; GOSSIP ...	118-120
MUSIC—THE WEEK; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	121-122
DRAMA—THE WEEK; GOSSIP	122

LITERATURE

Frederic Hill: an Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform. Edited by his Daughter, Constance Hill. (Bentley & Son.)

WE have here not only an adequate record of a long and honourable life, but a most entertaining volume. Some of Mr. Hill's stories are very old friends—Lord Melbourne's paradoxical defence of slavery, for example—but their latest rendering will bear comparison with its predecessors, and much of Mr. Hill's recollections is delightfully fresh. From Sir Rowland Hill's 'Life' the world has already gained knowledge of the famous "league of brothers," Matthew Davenport, Rowland, Frederic, Edwin, and Arthur, and of their scarcely less remarkable parents. Miss Constance Hill, however, has set down some new and pleasant recollections of Edwin and Arthur, the least prominent of the five. Concerning Edwin, who was for thirty years Comptroller of the Stamp Department at Somerset House, she writes:—

"My uncle's bedroom was a museum of curiosities, affording much amusement to all who were allowed to inspect it. A network of cords stretched across the bed-head and ceiling. If at night the blankets pressed upon him too heavily, he could, as he lay, pull a string, with a sort of claw at the end, which grasped the bed-clothes and relieved him of their weight. Again, if he awoke early and wanted to know the time, he could pull a cord which opened the shutter to admit the light, and by pulling another he could shut it again, and so on."

Arthur Hill, whose vocation was apparently that of a schoolmaster,

"injured his eyesight, during the struggles of early life, by working at the acquisition of Greek, in addition to his long day's labour as a teacher. He thenceforward set himself to lay up in his memory a store of matter which he might turn to mental food when unable to use his eyes. His knowledge of Shakespeare was remarkable. He often had as many as five whole plays 'by rote' at the same time, any of which he could recite without reference to the text, though the well-used volume was drawn from his pocket and placed within his reach."

As for Mr. Frederic Hill, he passed his childhood at Birmingham until in 1819 the family removed to Edgbaston. At the mature age of thirteen he became a teacher in Hazelwood, of which school his brother Rowland was the guiding spirit. Among their visitors was Col. Nichol, who made a praiseworthy but premature attempt to colonize New Zealand.

"So much had he been struck with the advantages of the country, that he, together with some fellow-officers, determined, if possible, to make a settlement there. At the close of the great continental war in 1815, Colonel Nichol and his friends made an application to Government for a very moderate sum of ready money to enable them to carry out their project, undertaking at the same time, in lieu of this, to forfeit their claims to half-pay. But 'rest-tapism,' which even now has not ceased to exist, caused their offer to be curtly refused. Had it been accepted, it would have caused a material saving to the Government."

The brothers were, of course, keenly interested in the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, Catholic emancipation, and parliamentary reform. Their correspondence supplies a good deal of information as to the organization of the Birmingham Political Union, and it shows how thoroughly sane was the influence exercised by Mr. Attwood. That struggle over, Mr. Hill found an opportunity for separate utility in his appointment by Lord John Russell as Inspector of Scottish Prisons. Reorganization was certainly needed.

"The prisons, as buildings, were utterly unfit for the use to which they had been applied. Many were old houses out of repair, and were as insecure as they were unwholesome resorts for human beings. Some of the cells were actually vaults below ground, that during rainy weather were a foot deep in water. In these places criminals were herded together, young and old, good or bad, and were left to corrupt one another. No work was provided, and they passed their time in idleness, drunkenness, and gambling.....The prison-keepers were quite unequal to their difficult task. Their pay was so small that able well-educated men were not obtainable. In one of the smallest prisons, that of Crail, in Fife, the gaoler's yearly salary was only one pound. The gaolers, in many cases, did not live in the prisons, but merely visited them in the daytime. With but few exceptions there were no female officers, so that the women were entirely under the charge of men.....Communication was carried on, to a great extent, with the outer world, so that the prisoners had no difficulty in obtaining whisky, or even tools to enable them to escape. At Huntly Gaol it was found impossible to keep a prisoner in safe custody unless an officer on guard was constantly with him. At Kinross I found that the gaoler, who lived at a considerable distance, was indebted for the safe keeping of the criminal prisoners during the night to the vigilance of the debtors. Observing a bell-rope hanging near the entrance of their room, I inquired its use. 'Oh, sir,' replied the gaoler, 'that is for the debtors to ring the alarm-bell, when any prisoner is trying to get away.'"

At Tain Mr. Hill discovered a respectable-looking young fisherman undergoing sentence for a somewhat curious crime. He believed, as fishermen still sometimes believe, that his boat had been bewitched, and proceeded in the orthodox fashion to draw blood from the enchantress, though he "didna prick the auld wife mair than was just absolutely necessary."

Mr. Hill's chief recommendations to meet this state of affairs were the appointment of a common authority, the separation of prisoner from prisoner, the provision of a refuge for juvenile offenders and an asylum for criminal lunatics, and the introduction of profitable labour. He supplies instances of the moral improvement produced by the last device, supplemented by payment for overtime, together with a most characteristic criticism of Sir Charles Napier's:—

"He exclaimed, 'Why, this is a factory, not a prison!' 'It is both,' I replied; and I explained to him the system I had inaugurated of payment to the prisoners of work done beyond their allotted daily task—hence their energy and industry. 'Pay prisoners money!' exclaimed Sir Charles; 'I never heard of such a thing!' and he seemed to think they had a very good time of it. But as we proceeded, and the realities of prison-life forced themselves upon him, his face lengthened, and before we parted, his sympathy and compassion being fully aroused, he turned to me and said, 'How much do you say you pay the prisoners?' 'The value of their extra work.' Sir Charles burst out with a growl, 'I call that very shabby. The poor devils ought to have every penny they earn.'"

Mr. Hill considered that the Scottish Poor Law, by refusing relief to the able-bodied, was responsible for not a little crime and for a number of voluntary prisoners. From Lord Dunfermline he received the shrewd advice to make an oblique rather than a formal statement in his forthcoming report. For instance, he might say, "Thus the prisons of Scotland are, in fact, serving as Unions." "After a time," continued Lord Dunfermline,

"some member of Parliament, in looking over your report, will come upon this sentence, and, thinking he has made a great discovery, will hurry, full of self-importance, down to the House with the report in his hand, and will start upon the first opportunity, exclaiming, 'Here's a revelation! The prisons of Scotland are serving as Unions!' Upon this, Peel will probably send for the report, and make a speech of a quarter of an hour, upon that one fact. By this means you will not alarm Peel's pride by giving him instruction on the subject of the Poor Laws, and yet will gain your point."

Unfortunately, the plot, clever though it was, miscarried, as its immediate effect was an order from the Government to discontinue the practice of receiving voluntary prisoners, and to turn out those already admitted.

These pages contain some excellent anecdotes of Edinburgh notabilities—Jeffrey, the brothers Chambers, Lord Cockburn, and the rest; but the set has been so fully described by other hands that Mr. Hill can only add a minor touch or two. Writing in 1842, he put a distinctly sound value upon "Christopher North" as an ally:—

"I have been to-day to hear Prof. Wilson give a lecture at the college in favour of the principle of the English Poor Law. He was, in my opinion, more earnest and eloquent than logical, but it is good to have such a man on the right side, even if he may not give the best reasons for being there."

Among Hill's friends was Sheriff Watson, the founder of industrial schools, and Mrs. Hill (a sister of Prof. Cowper) wrote a pathetic account of a visit to one of those institutions:—

"(One child had been trusted to carry a parcel to a lady who had ordered some needlework, and who would give her eight shillings in payment, to be taken back to the schoolmistress. When the lady was counting out the money, after saying some kind words in praise of the work, she was surprised by the child's bursting into tears. On being asked the cause, the child could at first only sob and exclaim, 'I am only minding the differ'; and then she explained that but a year ago she had begged of that lady's servant to give her a 'bawbee.' The servant had found her, early one morning, at the stone stair-head, where she had been sleeping all night, and had driven her away with hard words, and now she was never cold or hungry, and the lady herself was trusting her with 'a' that siller."

In 1847 Mr. Hill was transferred to a district south of the Tweed, consisting of the whole of the north of England and North Wales, with the subsequent addition of part of the Eastern Counties, and he promptly began a fresh crusade against abuses:—

"I found that the chaplain of one of the Welsh prisons was addicted to drinking. On my laying the case before the magistrates, they assured me that they were aware of the fact, but that, being on social and friendly terms with him, none of them liked to tell him to resign. I offered to undertake the task, and my interview with the reverend gentleman ended in his placing his resignation in my hands. He thanked me for having as much as possible spared his feelings, and said he hoped that whenever I returned to that neighbourhood I would come and dine with him!"

We must pass over Mr. Hill's views on capital punishment, and the vexed question of fixed or "indeterminate" sentences; enough that, though obvious difficulties arise, the conclusions are forcibly and fairly put. Nor is it necessary to waste words upon his career at the Post Office, which began in 1852 under Sir Rowland, and continued until 1876, as the list of his improvements (pp. 310, 311) speaks for itself. Even since the close of his official life, Mr. Hill, his daughter tells us, has acted, among other things, as a member of various philanthropic societies, a guardian of the poor in Hampstead, a Church trustee, and a remodeller of the vestry. In his ninety-first year he enjoys a clear and retentive memory, and may he long continue to partake of the privileges that attach to venerable age!

Orchard Songs. By Norman Gale. (Mathews & Lane.)

NEARLY a year ago we had the pleasure of welcoming Mr. Norman Gale and his 'Country Muse,' for certain qualities of freshness, spontaneity, and frank delight in the joy of life, which are rarely enough found in contemporary verse. The note which he has re-introduced is certainly not an original one, but it had not been heard for so long that it came to one with much of the charm of novelty. Now that modernity seems in danger of being overdone, it is pleasant to read once more of a Delia who has the colours of a china shepherdess, naturally; of a Dora who pouts at being kissed, as rustic maidens, through some extraordinary poetic licence, once did in polite verse; in short, of milkmaids who have the potential virtues of the country instead of fair and frail town ladies, who might share in Quatilla's doubts as to ever having been virtuous at all. It is true that all this innocence and naturalness is at least as much a make-believe as the decadent vices of another school of rhymers; it is true that Mr. Gale puts on his natural colours with a hare's-foot; but is not nature, in the present age, with its complexity and its confusions, the least natural of artifices? It is a charming affectation, a dainty fashion of the past, brought out of an old wardrobe for a fancy-dress ball. And the sentiments—

*Cet enfer de vaines passions,
Ce paradis de belles fictions—* are they not daintily in keeping with the costumes? The sentiments, too, make their profession of simple honesty, of a frank love of love; and Mr. Gale might say, like Joachim du Bellay 'Contre les Pétrarquistes':—

*Mais, quant à moi, qui plus terrestre suis,
Je n'aime rien, que ce qu'aimeur je puis:
Le plus subtil qu'en amour je poursuis
S'appelle jouissance.*

In this new book of 'Orchard Songs' there is a quite unnecessary, as well as quite inconclusive, "Defence on being charged with undue frankness." Mr. Gale's sensuousness, such as it is, is quite healthy, indeed obviously so; it is merely the elementary feeling of every man for every woman; thus, for instance:—

*Come you, Mary, there's a dear!
Mind no more the plaguy dairy!
Milk can never match your white—
Come you, Mary!*

*All the music of my eclyse
Sang you in the heated meadow;
And I thought your shape behind
Ev'ry shadow!*

*Down with sleeves, and bring those lips
(Reckless in the happy dairy)
To the chestnut where we kiss—
Come you, Mary!*

Elsewhere it goes, in expression, a little further than this, but at no time does it enter into the subtleties of flesh and spirit, where passion becomes morbid with self-analysis, and sensation returns and refines upon itself. Mr. Gale's special charm, and his conspicuous limitation, consists in this absorption within a narrow range of sentiments and ideas. He renders certain aspects of the country life, certain phases of the game of love, with such a semblance of conviction that the reader is convinced himself, and not less delighted; but, so far, he has shown no power to go beyond these limits, and it must be admitted that the repetition of so few notes tends to become a little wearisome. Thus, in 'Orchard Songs,' there are many charming poems which we should have liked much better if we did not feel the sensation of having read them before, in one or the other series of 'A Country Muse.' And, like all repetitions, these new pieces are not really so good as the first attempts of the same kind. A certain tiresome domestic sentiment, too, about babies and bosoms, has crept in; and the choice of language, the touch or style, has become looser and more careless. There is a jog-trot in the metre, along with a commonplace, unrelieved by any sort of distinction, in the ideas expressed; oranges, for instance, being invoked as

*Ye thousand yellow worlds from Spain
Upon a barrow piled,
And bartered for the timid pence
Of some desirous child;*

a young wife, in convalescence, figuring thus:—

*Now wife and babe before my fire
In speechless comfort rest;
The milky comfort his desire,
And hers the bounteous breast.*

Here, again, is the milkmaid or domestic servant, about whom Mr. Gale has written so many pretty things: has she not become a trifle too facile and unimportant in her once pleasing trivialities?

*Plague upon the ribbon
And the bow beneath my chin!
Bells no longer call me,
And the service should begin.
Kate will walk with Colin,
Mary go with John—
Drat the band of cherry silk
That won't go on!*

*Plague upon the ribbon!
I must fix it with a pin!
Yet the bow looks pretty
As it cuddles at my chin!
Richard's in the garden
Looking at the pane—
Sunday next the cherry band
May sulk again!*

Certain poems, written in somewhat irregular metres, attempt a rather wider range, and they are full of charming passages, such as:—

*It was the vocal end of day,
And larks in giddy flight
So out of view made music ring
That clouds, not birds,
Appeared to sing.*

And there is one poem, "Hannibal, Sagunto capto, loquitur," which ventures upon blank verse, and endeavours to do justice to an heroic theme; not quite successfully. Even here there is a trace of the domesticity which Mr. Gale seems to be acquiring; and domesticity in Carthage is singularly out of place. It seems to us that Mr. Gale is trying to write too much, and, in pouring out so continuous a stream, is diluting a very genuine quality. There could not be a more fatal mistake. The less a man writes in any case, the better is his chance of being remembered; and it is to be hoped, for his own sake, and for the sake of the readers to whom his verse, at its best, gives so much pleasure, that Mr. Gale will not be in a hurry to publish another book, merely because he has written it, but will wait and ponder, and in due course give us only of his very best, remembering that

"the Invention be the Mother of Poetry, yet this Child is, like all others, born naked, and must be Nourished with Care, Cloathed with Exactness and Elegance, Educated with Industry, Instructed with Art, Improved by Application, and Accomplished with Labour and with time, before it Arrives at any great Perfection of Growth."

In the Shadow of the Pagoda: Sketches of Burmese Life and Character. By R. D. Cuming. (Allen & Co.)

MR. CUMING spent six years and a half in Burma, but modestly tells his readers, in a short preface, that he does not pretend to be an authority on matters relating to that country, and that all he seeks is to give Englishmen clearer ideas as to what the Burmese are like. For our part, we have read Mr. Cuming's pages with an interest that never flagged, and incline to consider his sketches exceedingly well adapted to the end in view.

The book may be divided into two sections: the first twelve chapters treat of native life and manners, more particularly of those aspects of them with which European residents, in the ordinary times of peace, are brought into contact; the remainder of the book has a real value, for it draws a picture of dacoity when war and the after effects of war have unsettled the country. In his stories of the doings of dacoits the author does not pretend that the incidents which he describes occurred exactly as they are put before the reader: Boh Hline may never have committed the crimes imputed to him, or may never have been captured by the bold daring of four Karen Christians; but the crimes are real crimes, the every-day doings of dacoits such as Boh Hline; and the capture—we feel no doubt—truthfully commemorates some exploit by which a handful of Karens showed that their superiority in forest-craft, and the rapidity with which they can move through the jungle, enabled them quickly to disperse a gang of dacoits whom our better organized and better armed police had for months been hunting in vain.

From Mr. Cuming's exciting, if somewhat gruesome stories, the reader is enabled to realize what difficulties, disappointments, and fatigues the European police officer has to encounter, and what courage, patience, and devotion to duty he commonly displays when it falls to his lot, at the head of a small company of Burmese and Ghoorka constables, to attempt the capture of some gang of dacoits. A case occurs to our recollection, though it was not one which happened in Burma, where the fruitless chase through the jungles in the rainy season of a notorious dacoit, who had shot a European, was not abandoned until fifty of the pursuers had died from exposure and fatigue. The dread with which the dacoits inspire the village communities is often so great that it is judged safer to give warnings which will be certain to save a gang from capture than to risk their vengeance by supplying information to the pursuers, who may after all have to withdraw unsuccessful. This is a point which is well brought out in Mr. Cuming's book.

Readers who are interested in stories about tiger-shooting and adventures with tigers will find two such in this volume, which—as the author justly observes—differ in the essential feature from the tiger stories usually published; in other words, in neither case was the tiger killed, and in neither did he kill or mangle any of the sportsmen who fell in his way. The first of these narratives tells how the hunters, journeying home at night, lost their way, and were followed close at heel by a tiger who had scented the blood of the deer which they had shot and were carrying away; in the second case we learn how the author, while waiting for deer by the river-side at night, incautiously opened the breech of his rifle in order that it might lie more comfortably across his knees, and when some short time afterwards a tiger, six feet distant, fixed his green eyes upon him, the breech of the rifle would not close, for what was subsequently discovered to be a fallen leaf had jammed it. But besides these heart-stirring accounts of adventures with tigers or dacoits, there is a great deal about the every-day life of the people calculated to amuse as well as instruct; the author possesses a crisp and sparkling style, and if he is at times a little jerky, he is never dull.

Here, for example, is a passage which gives an amusing account of how Poonosawmy Moodliar, a Madras coolie, behaved when a charge—to which he had pleaded “not guilty”—of having stolen an umbrella was conclusively proved against him:—

“Does Poonosawmy wish to ask this witness any questions? No; Poonosawmy is now weeping floods of penitent tears, and can only beg the Lord Sahib to forgive him; he is ‘poor man,’ and he thought the umbrella was his. Has he then any witnesses who could prove that he owned an umbrella like this? No, Poonosawmy has no witnesses, and he is poor man, Sah. Has he nothing else to say in his defence? Yes; he wishes to add that he is poor man; very poor man, Sah. If Poonosawmy had been charged with murder, high treason, and incendiarism, he would have pled poverty in extenuation. It is a way the native has; but naturally it does not count for much in an English Court of Justice. A brief summing up is followed by a briefer consultation, and a unanimous verdict of ‘Guilty.’ A previous conviction is proved against the prisoner; and Poonosawmy Moodliar, sentenced to six months’ imprisonment, is removed, dolefully howling at the top of his voice.”

On another page we light upon the following characteristic illustration of Burmese curiosity: the author is on a sporting tour, and stays for the night in a hut amid a company of natives. He says:—

“I was quite ready to retire; and sitting down on my kit-bag, took that most useful of jungle comforts, my air-pillow, and began to blow it up. The Burman nearest my corner, who had lain awake watching my preparations for bed with sleepy interest, sprang to life with a start as he saw the pillow increasing in bulk, and sat bolt upright on his mat. ‘Ahmay!’ exclaimed he, under his breath. ‘He, Moung Gyee! Oo Gyaw! Poh Gine! Hi! You fellows! look here, all of you; look at this!’ Slumberers were rapidly awakened by the noisy scrambling of the wakeful members of the party, and I was soon surrounded by a crowd of squatting figures, whose long dishevelled black hair and eager dark faces made a wild picture. Ku Chaik and his family, awakened by the scramble and loudly-murmured ‘Ahmay!’ as the pillow slowly swelled, glided in quickly by twos and threes, and by the time I had screwed up the nozzle the audience comprised the entire household and all the visitors. ‘What’s that thing for?’ asked Moung Gyee, a little wizened-up man like a dried monkey. ‘A pillow for the head,’ replied I. A Burman has little hesitation in finding a name for a strange article. ‘A wind head-bag,’ said Moung Daw promptly, and his remark elicited a universal murmur of ‘Houkbah, houkbah,’ which might be freely translated ‘Ah, yes, of course, of course.’ The pillow was now gently taken from my knees, and passed from hand to hand, patted and pinched, squeezed, smelt, tasted, and bumped on the floor. Eyes were applied to the nozzle, but they could make little of that; and, after passing round the entire room and receiving as much criticism as a new fossil in the hands of a learned Society, it was respectfully placed by Moung Daw at the top of the spread blankets, balanced on one end against the wall, where it continued to receive silent admiration. ‘Show how it is done’ was the next demand. I yawned widely, but unscrewed the tap and returned the curiosity to Moung Daw, who forced out the air in the faces of his friends, to their great satisfaction.”

Too often it has been our melancholy duty when noticing books of this class to draw attention to frequent errors due to hasty writing, imperfect proof-reading, or inaccurate decipherment of the records of travellers’ note-books; it is, therefore, a pleasure to testify to the absence of these disfigurements from Mr. Cuming's pages: one or two trifling misprints we certainly have detected, but they are trivial, and the reader may safely be left to exercise his discernment in discovering them himself. The fifteen illustrations which adorn the book are on the whole well selected, though here and there a trifle blurred. No one, we feel assured, knows better than Mr. Cuming himself that there are still many phases of life in Burma untouched by his pen; if his opportunities, therefore, should allow him to make a further collection of “Sketches,” it is to be hoped that he may do so.

Germany and the Germans. By William Harbutt Dawson. 2 vols. (Chapman & Hall.)

THERE was room for a book on the present conditions of life in Germany, and Mr. Dawson may be congratulated on having supplied, at least to some extent, what was wanted. His survey is not quite so comprehensive as it might have been, but within its limits it is generally good, displaying both knowledge and judgment. It is worthy of special note that he is in no instance content with the mere repetition of other people's ideas. He deals only with facts which he has personally studied, and he is perfectly entitled to claim—as he does claim—that his work shall be regarded as a record of his own impressions and conclusions.

Perhaps the chief defect of the book is that it does not present anything like an adequate account of the purely intellectual influences which are now at work among the German people. It does, indeed, include a series of chapters on German schools and universities; but Mr. Dawson has not thought it worth his while to deal systematically with contemporary movements in art, literature, and philosophy. The subject is so complicated that only a slight sketch of some aspects of it would have been possible; but even that, if it had been well done, would have been most welcome, for a good many Englishmen, who would be ashamed to make any essential mistake about intellectual progress in France, are not at all ashamed to talk at random about intellectual progress in Germany. They often speak, for instance, as if Gervinus represented the last word in German criticism; as if Hegel were still the ruling power in abstract thought; as if the ideals of German art had undergone no change since the days when Kaulbach was doing the work by which he is now most widely known. Mr. Dawson would have added greatly to the interest and to the permanent value of his book if he had shown how far these crude notions are from according with facts.

He has necessarily a good deal to say about political phenomena, and a word of cordial praise is due to him for his exposition, at once lucid and concise, of the constitutional systems of the Empire and of Prussia. There is also much that is praiseworthy in his account of the various parties in the Reichstag; but here, notwithstanding his desire to be just to all phases of opinion, he is somewhat misled by his dislike for the Freisinnige or Radical party. The members of this party are bold enough to think that it would be good for Germany if, both in the Imperial and in the State Parliaments, ministers were responsible, not to the Crown, but to the national representatives. For this view Mr. Dawson takes them severely to task, contending that Germany is not yet fit for constitutional methods of government. In reality, the consequences of the change demanded by the Radicals would probably be much less serious than Mr. Dawson supposes. The Emperor can now maintain in office ministers who are not supported by a majority; but even he is not strong enough to give effect to a thoroughly unpopular policy, as was shown clearly enough in the recent dispute about religious education in Prussia. If ministries were changed in accordance with the dominant sentiment of the people, the main result would be that it would become impossible for any one to regard the Emperor as merely the head of a particular party or group of parties. Under the new system the Crown might lose some of its direct power, but it would certainly lose no part either of its dignity or of its indirect influence.

If the Radicals gained their way in this respect it does not at all follow that they themselves would profit by their victory. With regard to questions of general policy they occupy much the same position as that of the doctrinaire Liberals of 1848; that is, they desire, like Mr. Herbert Spencer, to restrict the action of the State within the narrowest possible limits. In Germany, as in most other countries, the drift of popular opinion is in the opposite direction, and it may safely be asserted that the functions of a government responsible to Parliament would be at least as numerous and as varied as those of any government that has hitherto been, or that is likely to be, responsible to the Emperor.

In the inevitable chapters on Socialism Mr. Dawson imparts a little fresh interest to the subject by discussing it rather from the ethical than from the economic point of view. He has formed an extremely unfavourable conception of the moral condition and tendencies of German Socialists. They are, he thinks, a party of atheists, materialists, and pessimists; and their estimate of life is such that it "cripples morality, and may make it well-nigh an impossibility." He says:—

"The real danger lies in the moral teaching of Social Democracy, and its effect upon the minds, the characters, the lives of the people. Here is the plague-spot, here the source and fountain of corruption, demoralization, and death. When every high ideal has been taken away from the labouring classes, when every ennobling aspiration, every incentive to high thinking and unselfish doing, every belief in a life beyond, every trace of faith in God and disinterested love for man—when these things have been blotted from the labourer's code of life, his condition, and the condition of the society of which he forms part, will be dark and desperate indeed."

A little solid evidence would have been a good deal more impressive than this rhetorical outburst. Mr. Dawson himself records that during the recent cholera epidemic in Hamburg, when it was considered urgently necessary that a quarter of a million of precautionary handbills should be immediately placed in the hands of the working classes, it was to the Socialists that the municipal authorities went for help. The official sheets were not only printed in the office of the Social Democratic party, but were "distributed by some hundreds of Socialist volunteers within a few hours." Mr. Dawson also admits that indirectly Social Democracy has in some respects exercised a wholesome influence, and that "its growing power will compel the governments of the country to advance still further in social legislation and in the assertion of the collective principle in economic arrangements." All this does not look very like the decay of "every ennobling aspiration," the loss of "every incentive to high thinking and unselfish doing." Whatever may be the merits or the demerits of Socialism as a political movement, it is a serious error to suppose that it necessarily undermines the sentiment of duty. Mr. Dawson's studies in German philosophy ought to have made him familiar with the doctrine that high moral ideals are compatible with many different theories as to the true constitution of society and as to the ultimate significance of the universe.

The author is seen at his best, not in his treatment of questions of this kind, but in his lively and sympathetic sketches of the social life of Germany. Nothing could be better in its way than his account of the effects produced by military discipline on the mass of the population. He is fully conscious of the evils which must always be connected with a system of universal military service, but no one has shown more conclusively how many good reasons there are for the general popularity of the German army. He is equally effective in his description of the relation between ordinary citizens and the various classes of the civil service. An unpleasant impression is usually produced upon Englishmen by the constant interference of the German police with matters which seem to be beyond their proper sphere; and Mr. Dawson does not dispute that the growth of "public spirit" is discouraged by the patriarchal scheme of government. He succeeds, however, in making thoroughly intelligible the fact that "the average German has grown to like the policeman, and would be unhappy were he less regular in his attentions, less exacting in his demands." Another subject with regard to which Mr. Dawson offers several interesting facts and suggestions is the position of German women. Some of his readers will be surprised to learn that "in the higher girls' schools a splendid education is imparted," and that "these schools, beyond question, surpass all but the best of similar institutions in England." Mr. Dawson is even of opinion that, excluding what he rather oddly calls "the really studied classes," women in Germany "are better educated and read much more than men." The movement for the political and social equality of the sexes has at least been started, and Mr. Dawson does not doubt that its success depends wholly upon the women themselves. As yet only a few of them appear to have any desire for duties other than those which belong to them in domestic life.

Mr. Dawson is greatly interested in all questions relating to the practical aspects of religion, and as he has evidently had unusually good opportunities of studying what is being thought and done by the Protestant churches of Germany, everything he says on the subject is well worth reading. His remarks on the German universities possess also the freshness and vividness which come from direct and intimate knowledge. The descriptions he gives of the leading professors at the University of Berlin are in perfectly good taste, but occasionally there may be some difference of opinion as to the justice of his estimate of their intellectual importance. It is certainly not every one who will agree with him in thinking that the "charm" of Prof. von Treitschke's style is "irresistible."

Greek Papyri in the British Museum: Catalogue with Texts; Facsimiles. Edited by F. G. Kenyon. 2 vols. (Printed for the Trustees.)

THIS splendid brace of volumes contains the treasures of our great Museum in Greek papyri up to 1889, exclusive of the classical texts previously printed in three other volumes. Those latter, especially the treatise recently discovered and attributed to Aristotle, and the mimiambs of Herondas, have already made a sensation in the learned world. The same wide and keen interest cannot be excited by the present texts. They are important not as literature, but as evidences of private life and manners in Greek Egypt, still more as illustrating the business habits, the handwriting, the arithmetic, the legal formulas, of a very important Hellenistic society. As a lesson in palaeography these documents, ranging from the third century B.C. to the eighth of our era, and reproduced by the Autotype Company, are without any parallel. No other museum in Europe has published its texts in so splendid and perfect a form. The readings of faint and illegible passages are guaranteed not only by the well-known skill and accuracy of the editor, but by the fact that all his work has been verified officially by Mr. Warner and unofficially by Mr. Maunde Thompson. For it is no secret that this delicate and difficult task represents the wisdom of a committee of first-rate experts, working in admirable harmony for the same great objects.

But these scholars are better than accurate, they are expeditious. They have not waited to attain a quasi-infallibility, but are bold and sensible enough to record various changes of opinion and new combinations attained between the printing of their text and the completion of their facsimiles. Some of these modifications arose from the accretion of new evidence, especially from the Petrie Papyri; others from rearrangements of the fragments. Wherever foreign scholars have given transcriptions of isolated texts—notably Prof. Wilcken, of Breslau, and Dr. Wessely, of Vienna—these transcriptions have been utilized, those of Dr. Wessely perhaps too much; for that scholar seems to feel bound to set down something wherever traces remain, and so supplies adventurous readings, which do not always bear examination. Still, any future decipherer will find very little scope for his genius in correcting this conscientious and accurate work. The splendour of the outfit is somewhat marred by the absence on the plates, first, of the corresponding page in the companion volume; secondly, of marginal numbering of lines. If the student wants to find the reading of a word in the middle of a long document, he must first count for himself all the preceding lines of the document, and then recur to a table to find out in what part of the catalogue the text has been printed; for the order of the texts and of their plates does not correspond, for adequate reasons stated in the preface.

The other complaint which a decipherer will make is of modesty on the part of the editor in not giving more conjectures regarding difficult words, upon which the very doubts of experts would be valuable; still more for not telling us plainly in each case whether he understands an abbreviation or not. Thus, in transcribing the highly interesting account (pap. cxxxi.) on the back of which the famous Aristotelian text is written, does Mr. Kenyon consider several abbreviations not explained in the notes, or even given in the index of abbreviations, as too obvious for him to note? or are they unknown to him? One which he gives as uncertain, viz. κλη, is surely either κληρος or κληρούχος, words now familiar to us in the Petrie Papyri. This interpretation carries with it that of ιεροστυρ as ιεροστυράτον, a proper name. Line 624 makes this reading more than probable. The same sort of collocation, εν ηδύλ κλη, seems to explain the very puzzling ηδύλ in the same way as a proper name, "at the farm of Hedyll," though the name Hedylic or Hedylos (?) is not one that we know. A comparison of all the passages wherein the two above-named abbreviations occur, being consistent with our explanation, might, at least, have encouraged the editor to propound this conjecture, or his reasons against it. For he should remember that even trained scholars are at sea in this outlying and unfamiliar field. The machine mentioned in the same document, which was circular, or worked in a circle by a special mechanic, aided by the farm servants, would seem to be the irrigating machine (sakya)—now worked in Egypt by oxen—whose dry wooden joints can be heard snarling and screaming along the banks of the Nile all night. In the same account (l. 75) the puzzling ἀριθλ may be for ἀριθμολογούντι, auditing the accounts, a word not as yet known, but not improbable. The frequent χωφορ appears to be a word for the corvée of labour demanded for keeping the dykes in order. The strange γυν (l. 190, &c.) seems rather to be for γυν than for γυν, which the editor suggests. The whole of this highly curious text deserves to be edited with a commentary by such a scholar as Prof. Lumbroso of Rome. In explaining the various symbols for figures, the editor has not made it plain that the 6, 66, and κ'6, for 4, 44, and 44 respectively, are not new and mysterious symbols, but mere cursive forms of δ', 66', and κ'δ'. We can follow even in the Petrie Papyri the gradual degeneration of Δ into O, and in later papyri the degeneration of B into an oval made by two down strokes, and then into a circle.

These are but a very few of the points of interest suggested even by a single department, that of private accounts. The account which we have cited is most important, owing to its length, and the possibility of reading abbreviations by the light of parallel cases; the analogous fragments in the Petrie Papyri are unfortunately in no case so complete. But the comparison of these latter with the Museum documents tends to upset the prevailing belief of the learned, repeated by the present editor, that from the close of the third century onward the standard of money in Egypt, which had been silver, was changed to copper. Both standards seem to be used in the Petrie Papyri (as far back as 260 B.C.), and appear in the documents of the time of Vespasian.

Here is another point, of paleographical interest. This large collection of papers sustains the law of recto and verso established by Prof. Wilcken, viz., that the Egyptian preferred to write along the fibres of his page, and not across them. To this law distinct exceptions have been found by Mr. Mahaffy among the Petrie Papyri.

If we have thus delayed upon details, it is to prove that we have not based our criticism of this great work upon a mere cursory or general inspection. We have verified the readings of the editor page after page, and unless it be that he has seen more than can be made out on the autotype, we have nothing to say but to praise his patience and acuteness.

There is, indeed, one document which the knowledge of the Petrie Papyri, published after the printing of his text, moves him to alter in date, and refer not to the second, but the third century B.C. (cf. plate 35 and p. 60 of text). But are his readings, mostly suggested by Dr. Wessely, all correct? We cannot find the alleged date in l. 11; in l. 12 we read σ[τα]θμο[ν], and in ll. 25-7 προταξαι [... τοις ἐπιστάταις ἐπισκεψ[α]μενον; the lower bar of the Σ and the tail of the I are still visible in l. 27. Also in ll. 9, 10, we conjecture οὐδεν ἐμὸν ἐναι[τιονμενον] προς αὐτον, but this is little more than a guess.

We must turn to the general features of the publication before we conclude. As a work of art the reproductions of the Autotype Company are superior to anything of the kind as yet produced, with the exception of the Petrie Papyri, reproduced by the same firm. The difficulties of bringing out clearly yellow and wrinkled surfaces with often pale or effaced writing are familiar to every photographer. They are here, perhaps for the first time, perfectly overcome. As regards the substance of the fragments, much of it has already seen the light, not only in the older publication of Forshall, but in learned studies such as those of Bernardino Poyron (Transactions of the Turin Academy for 1841). The long disputes between the recluses Ptolemy and the authorities, both regarding his own affairs and his advocacy of the twin acolytes of the Serapeum, are already well known. An excellent résumé of this whole correspondence, now divided among various museums in Europe, is furnished in the introduction before us. So, also, the longest of the later documents, the last will and testament of the bishop Abraham of Hermonthis, has already been translated by no less a person than

Mr. C. W. Goodwin, whose version, however, in an old number of the Law Times (1859), is not easily accessible, and should have been reprinted with the corrections which Mr. Kenyon thinks it requires. Indeed, more translation would be most desirable throughout the catalogue—for this and other texts are obscure enough, and require help for understanding them. Who is so well qualified to furnish it as the decipherer and editor of the texts? But it may fairly be maintained that the accounts are our greatest gain; for until the researches of Wilcken and of Revillout within the last ten years, the symbols were but very partially understood, and these texts accordingly a sealed book. But now we are on the high road to finding out the prices of all the necessities of life, the amount and nature of taxation, the details of bank management, and many other things which will make Ptolemaic Egypt one of the clearest, instead of one of the obscurest, portions of the history of ancient civilization. As yet the study of these things is dry and somewhat repulsive, but with every increase of light comes an increase of interest.

The same may be said of the great mass of papyri on magic which appear in this volume. Dr. Wessely has printed another collection of them from the Paris Museum. Full of gibberish and superstition as they are, there are not wanting for the psychical societies of our day, still more for the student of folk-lore, many suggestions in this farrago of nonsense. But here again Mr. Kenyon, perhaps reasonably, abstains from furnishing any considerable help. No populace is richer in folk-lore than that of Egypt, from the days that produced the romance of Alexander the Great down to the days of the 'Arabian Nights.' The great mass of magical papyri now recovered and printed will add another chapter to this history, different in subject, though not in spirit, from its better-known and more facile aspects.

NEW NOVELS.

Innes of Blairavon. By Colin Middleton. 3 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

A GREAT deal of space and time is covered by Mr. Middleton's romance, which drags out its length from generation to generation, and shifts the scene with somewhat harassing frequency from the New World to the Old, and back again. The hero of the opening chapter, aged twenty-three, handsome, 'Varsity cricketer, and otherwise attractive, is displaced after seven or eight chapters by his son, who in more ways than one resembles his father. Innes junior captains the Oxford football team, and the author, who is most careful about his dates all through the thirty-five years covered by his story, is at pains to insert the following naïve footnote: "My friend Mr. A. G. G. A. must pardon me for making Allan captain of Oxford in a year rendered memorable by his own brilliant presidency." For the rest, father and son each contemplate suicide, and are each rescued—the former by the discovery of gold in the bush, the latter by the wail of a deserted child. 'Innes of Blairavon' abounds in incident and is thoroughly wholesome in tone; but the workmanship is clumsy, and the author has a genius for the irrelevant interpolation of circumstantial detail.

Good Dame Fortune. By Maria A. Hoyer. 3 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

'GOOD DAME FORTUNE' is probably a first novel. There are fairly clever pages and some excellent qualities in it, though the art of elimination is not amongst them. Nor do we discover anything that is strikingly vital or interesting, or much suggestion of deep and intimate knowledge of human nature at first hand. Probably the best thing about it is the writer's good-humour. The story may, or may not, be one to appeal to the youthful female mind, for whom we should fancy it is designed. Perhaps it is more the story girls used to like than the story they like now. There is a fair supply of hardship, strenuous endeavour, and facile success. Most of the troubles and well, as probation, in books, once had a way of doing before the demand for darkness and desolation influenced contemporary literature. At least four couples are made happy, and there is but one utterly blasted career in the whole three volumes. Are we to look upon them as a mild, a very mild, protest against the gospel of despair in fiction?

A Life Awry. By Percival Pickering. 3 vols. (Bliss, Sands & Foster.)

To the ever accumulating stock of clever, cheerless novels Mr. Percival Pickering is one of the latest contributors with 'A Life Awry.' There are few more painful subjects for a romance than the long-drawn anguish of a heart endowed with a boundless capacity for love and happiness, and wrecked in sight of port by an accident which transforms a beautiful girl into a wizened and deformed cripple. The story of Judy's love and her final sacrifice loses none of its poignancy in Mr. Pickering's telling; but it is at least open to question whether such a story is not one of those which are better left untold.

Ivanda; or, the Pilgrim's Quest. By Capt. Claude Bray. (Warne & Co.)

CAPT. BRAY has a lively method of storytelling, which atones for much that is improbable in his romance of incident. The Indian scene, in which the dying pilgrim introduces us to the magic emblem, afterwards so valuable in many emergencies, if a little suggestive of the master of that branch of the craft, at any rate raises our hopes of a readable story. These are not altogether dashed, though the rest of the book, except the interview with the Chinamen on the Tibetan frontier, which is well managed, contains nothing especially Oriental. The old shikarry, who does so much good service in rescuing young Borradaile and the fair Ivanda from the sinister "monastery" of the Sage with Seven Eyes, strikes us as the most original and lifelike character, and next we should place Brother Parabolus (or Enoch P. Sludge, as he is known in "the world"), whose humour is a strange exotic in the solemn East. But even American humourists do not spell their private letters dialectically. This is a curious slip. To confuse a life interest with a reversion is more venial, but "Hodson & Greathed of Bedford Row" should have known better.

Platonics: a Study. By Ethel M. Arnold. (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)

THIS little book is rather the prologue to a play than the play itself. The real interest of the story is just beginning where Miss Arnold leaves off. As this is certainly a novel of the class which is dignified by the title "psychological," we might reasonably ask that the centre of interest should fall within the actual situation, and not in the sequel. We want to know whether the course of true love is likely to run smooth in a marriage following upon the situation which is here described; and the death of "the other woman" is a conventional and unsuccessful device for smothering this inevitable question. Of the trio of actors the least satisfactory is the man. He is a very vague figure in the scene; and in spite of the "something rare and exquisite about him," his long, thin, nervous hands, his rippled grey hair and "perfect grooming," what there is of him reveals the prig, and in his behaviour to Susan he is certainly not a gentleman. Altogether it is difficult to understand what so lively and independent a young lady as Kit Drummond can find in him; unless we are to suppose that love always goes by contrasts which are absolute. Kit herself is interesting without being a sphinx, and when she attributes her unnatural movements to the action of fate, the explanation is entirely appropriate. As for Susan, who is well drawn, Miss Arnold tells us that the greater part of what she read she probably did not understand; and we can the more readily believe it when Susan talks of individualism as "the imprisoning of the soul within the Ego," and fancies that her sufferings are due to the fact that she has "separated her soul from the world-soul." The title in itself is inviting; but as the "Platonics" have been going on for some time before the story begins, and come to an end in the first chapter, it is appropriate only if the book is meant to illustrate the notion that "Platonics" lead to disappointment. The writing would be even more attractive than it is, if it had been pruned of a little slang of the fashionable kind (introduced not into the conversation, but into the narrative) and of a few meaningless words, like "peculiar" and "curious," which swell description without assisting it. Some pages must be read before we can recover from the mood induced by a barbarous adjective in the first sentence. But the tale is by no means ill told, and we look for good results from Miss Arnold's work in the future.

RURAL LIFE.

With the Woodlanders and by the Tide, by "A Son of the Marshes," edited by J. A. Owen (Blackwood & Sons), is yet another collection of articles on country folk and wild animals. Some chapters have already appeared in various magazines, while others are said to be original; and so they are, in a way; but again the dwellers in the Surrey hills, the Weald, and the marshes of North Kent are described with, at times, a tolerable amount of spirit. So long as the public likes this kind of thing there can be no objection to the appearance of these articles in monthly publications, but in book form we must confess we are a-weary of them. There is, however, one very good portion in this volume, namely, that in which the nesting of the nightjar and the gradual development of the young are described; but much of the rest is exceedingly thin, and shows signs of compilation. It is, therefore, rather grating to read:—

"To one rash individual who tried to interview me I gave valuable information, which, if published, would outdo Baron Munchausen. Brain suckers are in force just now, and our villages and rural population get too much written about."

The latter statement has our fullest approval; but a fellow feeling should have restrained the "Son" from hoaxing his interviewer, for no man knows to what extremes he may be reduced for "copy"! The author takes himself far too seriously, and at times he seems inclined to find grievances. We fully sympathize with his indignation against any encroachment by landowners on foreshores or rights of way, and would show no mercy to the appropriator "who steals the common from the goose"; but really we cannot divine the object of the following outburst, and the context does not help us:—

"Gentlemen with high-bred dogs, held securely in leash when walking on highroads—the public roads—object to being told by ignorant jacks-in-office not to let their dogs get in the covers. This sort of thing at one time would have been simply impossible. Numbers of boards are stuck up on the outskirts of paltry little coves stating that all dogs straying will run the risk of being shot. This is simply sickening. I have travelled for miles without seeing a dog, unless I have chanced to come upon a keeper with his retriever or a shepherd with his dog. If these matters were properly looked into I very much doubt if some of these notice-boards have any right to be there at all."

Now, we should be sorry to suppose the author means to mislead his readers, and induce the belief that dogs have been so severely shot down by game-preservers that only privileged animals are to be seen; for he must know that it has been expressly decided that a gamekeeper is not justified in killing a dog in pursuit of game on his master's manor (except in a warren or park, strictly so called), and it is doubtful if he may do so even to save the life of game from the pursuer. Assuming that in some cases a notorious poacher dare not take legal remedies, even so every keeper is aware that nothing produces such vendetta as the destruction of a dog, and revenge is so easy: a dark night for the man, or a lucifer judiciously placed in a covert for man and master too. We cannot see an infringement of any one's rights in placing a notice, on the proprietor's own land, that there is a risk for dogs in certain coverts; for, nowadays, even Mr. Jingle's famous pointer would treat such a warning with contempt. If the owner chooses to paint on a board "Πολυφλέσις βοῦς set here," who shall gainsay him, even though the effect on the rustic mind be as startling as it is on the rabbit-carrier depicted in the charming vignette at the end of the article "Pheasant" in Yarrell's classic work? There are several other indications of a carping tendency in the present volume, and the author will do well to refrain from such ebullitions in future.

All the Year with Nature, by P. Anderson Graham (Smith, Elder & Co.), is also a collection of essays, some of which have already seen the light in magazines; but it has much more stuff in it, for the author has not yet written himself out. In his work, too, there are some signs of compilation, and these are all the more evident because, in a laudable desire to appear original, he frequently "goes one better" than his "study," and thereby raises a smile. This tendency is rather marked in the chapters "Robbery from Nature," "The Stockdove," and "Philomel"; the author is, moreover, somewhat sententious, and more than a trifle inclined to "metaphysics." But most of his sketches relate to the "bonnie north country," on the Border and among the Cheviots, which is comparatively new ground; and although he has hardly made the best of his visit to the white wild cattle at Chillingham, yet it must be admitted that there is some very pretty writing in that and other articles. They are not at all too long; on the contrary, we wonder why some of them were broken off just when they were becoming interesting. The chapter on "Village Heathen" is capital, and the reply of the dying horse-coper to the Presbyterian minister, who told him that he must even pray for Jack Tod—"him as lamed my dog"—is full of character, though we dare not quote it; but surely it is a slip to speak of that minister as a "priest," although "presbyter is but old priest writ large." There is a great deal of truth in the remark of the farmer that the secret of Hodge's migration to towns lies in the fact that "no toil makes such trial of the muscles as the toil of agriculture, and that men who had been to school would not endure it"; but opinions vary as to what is the hardest labour. Milking a whole herd is bad enough; mowing all day has caused a strong amateur to feel thirstier than ever he did in his life before, and made his unaccustomed muscles ache for a week; but sheep-washing seems to bear the palm for giving sore bones:—

"There is no labour under the broad heavens more frightfully tiring than that of the man on the bank, with a big flock of obstinate old ewes to handle. It looks like sport; but to go on for hours, catching sheep after sheep and compelling them into the river, is to strain every muscle and sinew in the body."

Tossing hay and other occupations are also extremely wearisome, and the bucolic mind has somehow found this out. Even "knapping" flints, as practised on Brandon Heath, in Suffolk, in exceedingly hard work, though there the "knapper" labours for "his own hand," and not for daily wages. The chapter descriptive of this ancient industry is one of the best in the book, and will be new to many readers. After thirty years of breech-loaders, following on about forty of percussion guns, it may be surprising to read that millions of flints are still annually made and exported; yet such is the fact, and the reason is not far to seek. Civilized man will, of course, have the best weapon and the most trustworthy cartridges that money can buy; but in savage countries, where the old muzzle-loader is still in use, the ordinary "trade" percussion cap cannot be trusted, especially when the air is saturated with moisture and a misfire may mean death. Even under more favourable conditions we well remember that the veteran bear-hunter L. Lloyd, of Scandinavian fame, preferred to trust to the flint for close quarters long after caps had come into general use. And then, again, the flint is largely used for obtaining a light throughout the tropics, and, and to say, it even becomes a medium for gambling; "a dollar on the strike" being—or was, not so long ago—a favourite way of promoting the circulation of coin on steamers frequented by South Americans. But here we must leave Mr. Graham, with our congratulations upon having written a very good and varied series of articles.

We are glad that J. A. Owen has decided upon independent authorship, and the polished style of Forest, Field, and Fell (Lawrence & Bullen) shows how much 'Annals of a Fishing Village,' &c., were indebted to the collaborator for their literary merits and success. For some time it has been an open secret that J. A. Owen is a lady; but in the present volume all disguise is discarded, and the reader will have no difficulty in seeing that she is also a Scotswoman, for the characteristic chapters "About Stirling" and "Stirling Folk" could only have been written by one who was to the manner born. Her correct version of the "Historical Clock" of Dannockburn has already appeared in a periodical, but the story of the ingenuous mother who knitted and sent three pairs of long stockings (with a wonderful letter) to the Czar Alexander I., as a ransom for her captured sailor son, deserves a more permanent abode than the pages of a magazine. That the stockings reached their destination was largely due to the fact that the young doctor at St. Petersburg—afterwards Sir James Wyllie—was a Kincardineshire man, and came down "to have a crack" with his townsman, the skipper who brought the bribe. Wyllie already stood high in favour at Court. The son was released, with a remittance of 100l. to his mother, and out of this 10l. were expended upon a grand clock, with pictures of the Czar, the knitter, &c., surmounted by the inscription:—

Who would he's thought it,
Stockings would he's bought it?

Then there are some very pretty bits of word-painting in "Seeking Health in Skye." The great bat guano caves of San Antonio, Texas, may have been commercially a failure, but the chapter about them is not so; and very graphic is the description of the people and scenery in the volcanic district of the Upper Eifel, a region little known to tourists, though possessing greater natural beauties than any the Rhine can boast. Excellent, too, are the sketches of animal life in the New Forest and around Christchurch Bay, and although these hang so well together that it is difficult to detach a passage for quotation, we take the following as a specimen:—

"From the water, with a wide reed-bed in the immediate foreground, out of which young herons rise in startled flight at the approach of our punt, the ancient grey pile of Christchurch is a beautiful object. In front of it is the Priory, an old red building, most picturesque when tenderly touched by the young green of early spring. Behind us is Hengistbury Head, where the Danes first landed, wearing the same appearance now that it did of old. There the birds nest and sing, and rare insects disport themselves, unmolested as they have ever been. On its shore, towards the end of April and early in May, I have watched the newly arrived migrants actively flitting to and fro among the brilliantly flowering gorse and the budding honeysuckle and trailing brambles. Some of the blithe little creatures were already breeding there; the nest of the grey-brown linnet we found snugly placed in the centre of a great furze-bush, with its dainty bluish-white speckled eggs; also that of the brightly marked wheatear, but this was cunningly built so far down in an old rabbit-hole that we could not get at the eggs to note their exquisite colouring. The chiffchaff, or least willow-wren, was fluttering about, butterfly-like, hither and thither; his relative, the wood-wren, was there too, but not so much to the fore. He would move on very soon to the forest in which he delights; there, on some wooded slope, he builds his domed-shaped nest of dried grass and moss. From the shape of this, and the materials used, come the local names, such as oven-birds, or hay-birds, which have been given to the birds of this family."

Without any qualification, we congratulate the author upon this little volume, written with all the tenderness of her sex, and absolutely free from the intrusion of a single jarring note.

SCHOOL-BOOKS.

Aristophanes: The Wasps. With Introduction and Notes by W. W. Merry, D.D. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—The only fault to be found with this excellent work is that Dr. Merry does not always descend to the level of the average student of Aristophanes. For instance, the nature of the genitive is not explained in v. 1002:—

ἄκων γὰρ αὐτ' ἔδρασα κού τοῦμοῦ τρόπον.

The proposition of καταδουροδοκῆσαι, v. 1035, is ignored; a note is wanted on δῆ, v. 1064, σχεῖν, 1067, and ἀπ' ἧν, v. 1299. In the index we note the printer's error ἑσσαλείς and the omission of ἐστράς, v. 1034 (note).

Ciceronis Laelius sive De Amicitia. With Introduction and Notes by St. George Stock. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—This edition is a manifest case of over-production which cannot be justified by devoting more space and attention than usual to collateral information. In §4 "eius qui.....fuisset" does not give a "generic sense," but obviously means "his, since he had been." In §6 a terrible mess is made of the distinction between sapiens and prudens. We are told that "'Prudentia' involves only 'multarum rerum usus'; 'sapientia' demands also 'studium et doctrina'"—and this though Cicero says, §6, that Acilius was sapiens because he was prudens, while Cato was sapiens because he had multarum rerum usus. We do not ask our readers to generalize harshly from these two instances, but they suggest that the lightness of his task has failed to call forth Mr. Stock's full powers.

Herodotus VIII., Urania. With Introduction and Notes by E. S. Shuckburgh, M.A. (Cambridge, University Press.)—Mr. Shuckburgh has, as usual, put plenty of conscientious work into his commentary, with generally satisfactory results, but the fifty pages of historical and geographical index are superfluous, seeing that students must rely on a "classical" dictionary until all editors agree to supply its place. There should be notes on the imperfect ἐγίγερσθαι, "began to break," chap. cviii., on μὲν τὰντα in the second sentence, and on μὲν... δὲ and ἐνταῦθα ("set eyes on") in the third sentence; and also on καὶ—"and so" or "accordingly," chap. cix. line 24. There is a serviceable introduction leading up to, and giving a summary of, the history of which the book treats, and an appendix on the Ionic dialect.

Advanced Manual of Latin Prose Composition. By B. D. Turner, M.A. (Rivington, Percival & Co.)—Mr. Turner has made an admirable collection of three hundred and fifty English prose extracts, most of them good specimens of the style of standard English authors, and all well adapted to test and develop the student's capacity for translating into Latin. They are introduced by some useful syntax, and about eighty pages of scholarly notes on style.

Latin Verse Composition for the Use of Middle and Upper Forms of Schools. By the Rev. F. D. Morice, M.A. (Rivington, Percival & Co.)—Here we have a hundred poetical extracts, each containing sixteen verses. It is a pity that the names of the authors or even full references should not be given. We recognise several old friends in the double capacity of English "repetition" and Latin verse-exercise. The extracts have been selected and adapted for Mr. Morice's own use in teaching.

Cicero: Orations Caesarianae; Pro Marcello, Pro Ligario, Pro Rege Deiotaro. With Introduction and Notes by the Rev. W. Y. Fausset, M.A. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—In this penultimate set of political speeches by Cicero we behold the eloquent opportunist in the last stage but one of his manifold tergiversations. Even in oratory he does not appear at his best as the flatterer of Caesar; but the Caesarian speeches are interesting and of convenient brevity. Mr. Fausset judiciously defends the authenticity of the so-called 'Pro Marcello,' and in his notes shows a business-like appreciation of the requirements of upper-form boys.

Latin Stories. Edited by A. D. Godley. (Blackie & Son.)—Mr. Godley has written a useful little note on the proper way of translating Latin into English, and the exercises he has appended to his extracts are helpful; but as to the extracts themselves, we doubt whether boys capable of construing them would not be better employed on some continuous work—a book of Caesar's Commentaries or of Livy, omitting the speeches, of course.

A Primer of Historical English Grammar. By Henry Sweet. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—It is obviously impossible to produce a satisfactory primer of historical English grammar, including phonetics, within the narrow limits assigned to Mr. Sweet's attempt, namely, 112 small pages. The phonetic definitions are bewildering. On p. 13 we are told that "a hissing or a buzzing sound" is a consonant, while sonants which are not vowels are called "vowel-like" consonants. On p. 12 it is stated, "In the formation of all sounds which are not nasal, such as the (b) in amber, the nose-passage is closed." Now the nose-passage is open in the formation of some vowels which are not nasal vowels. In § 40 we are told that h is a consonant; in § 42 h is excluded from the definition of consonant. On p. 36 we read of "long consonants," which appear to mean consonants preceded by a lengthened sonant glide. A syllable "is a vowel, either alone or in combination with consonants, uttered with a single impulse of stress" (p. 37), stress being equivalent to loudness. What does this impulse mean? One thoracic impulse furnishes breath enough for several syllables as ordinarily understood; while, again, a syllable like stakes contains two moments in which sound, and therefore loudness, is entirely stopped, so that there are three fresh impulses of audible articulation. The late Mr. H. D. Darbishire might well allude to the unsatisfactory progress of the science of phonetics. It is very little use to write on adverbs and particles without discussing "if," "though," "when," and others, for which Mr. Sweet has not found room. The su in "suspect" (p. 99) does not mean "under."

Massinger's A New Way to Pay Old Debts. With Introduction and Notes by K. Deighton. (Bell & Sons.)—This is a volume of "Bell's English Classics." Mr. Deighton may be congratulated on introducing boys to a play of Massinger's, instead of adding yet another to the many editions of Shakespeare's principal comedies; but his notes are too numerous, and half of them might have been omitted with advantage. In the remainder sundry inaccuracies should be corrected. For instance, Mr. Deighton explains "Greek wine" to be "wine from the Ionian Islands, such as Candy, Muscodel," "Edwardi quinto" as meaning "according to the fifth statute of the reign of Edward," and "battalia" as "lines drawn up in battle array." It is hardly exact either to say "the pike or halbert was the great weapon of English infantry in early days."

Maroussia. Par P. J. Stahl. Adapted for Use in Schools by James Boielle. (Arnold.)—"Maroussia," as adapted by M. Boielle, makes an interesting bit of school-reading. The notes are a little too much bits of translation, not always quite correct. "On ne marchande pas" hardly means "no mincing matters"; the other explanation M. Boielle gives of it is the correct one. In translating "Toujours est-il que ce fut alors," to substitute "be it as it may," for "be that as it may," is a venial mistake for a foreigner, but should hardly be permitted in a volume for schoolboys, who while they are learning French should not be untaught their own language.

Faust. Part I. By Goethe. With Introduction and Notes by Jane Lee. Second Edition. (Macmillan & Co.)—The new issue of this useful edition of 'Faust' is marked by considerable changes in the commentary, a large number of the notes being rewritten. Having compared with care the two editions, we may say that Miss Lee's labours of revision have been well spent, and the errors and oversights of the first edition corrected.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. ARCHIBALD BALLANTYNE'S Voltaire's Visit to England (Smith, Elder & Co.) is a book which, to use the vernacular, "grows on one." The subject—an excellent one for an essay—did not, we confess, when we first took up the book, seem to us very well suited for a volume. The author's style, though not incorrect, is scarcely engaging; and in the sketch of Voltaire's previous history which he has thought it desirable to prefix to the treatment of his proper subject, he has adopted rather lightly certain commonplaces of Voltaire's which, given as his own opinions, might a little disable his judgment. For instance, the excuse for his hero's disgust with the law—"But the arbitrary and pedantic methods of legal study insisted on dwelling among the dim procedures and obsolete intricacies of the Middle Ages; and from all this Voltaire recoiled with contempt and disdain,"—is a little silly. Voltaire was ill suited for a lawyer; and the world may be very glad that he took to something else. But intellects quite as great as his have submitted to the study of law, whether English or French, whether Scotch or Roman; and a young man's capricious idleness is not to be visited on a vast and rich domain of history and thought. Even elsewhere Mr. Ballantyne is apt to speak a little unadvisedly of matters which do not touch his own immediate interests. Neither Churchill nor Nat. Lee is quite "forgotten"; and there is very recent warrant for it that "Vathek" is something more than a "once celebrated romance." When, however, the faithful reader and critic gets at the heart of Mr. Ballantyne's book he will, we think, be mollified. It is quite different from the usual piece of modern bookmaking. It does not talk "about it and about it"; indeed, it hardly attempts anything like a connected narrative of Voltaire's stay amongst us. What Mr. Ballantyne does is to go very patiently and carefully through the scanty records of the sojourn, to criticize each piece of history or gossip, to print (in not a few cases from hitherto unprinted sources) the letters and other work in English which Voltaire wrote as a proof of his familiarity with England, and lastly, to set in order the various accounts of his foregatherings with Englishmen to the very end of his life. Incidentally, too, and a little unnecessarily, he endeavours to account and apologize for the famous pot-pourri of Voltaire's deliverances on Shakespeare. On the whole, 'Voltaire and England' would be a better title than 'Voltaire's Visit to England,' and though more ambitious it would be a title very fairly filled. Such a monograph was worth doing, even independently of the sometimes rare texts (such as great part of the uncommon English first draft of part of the 'Lettres sur les Anglais') which the book contains; for it is one of those comparatively humble, but very useful things which have a certain value as soon as they are done and are not likely soon to be superseded. We do not always agree with Mr. Ballantyne's judgment. For instance, though he has no doubt picked many holes in Ruffhead's story of Voltaire's gross language before Mrs. Pope at her son's table, we are not quite so sure as he is that he has utterly disproved the fact. For it must be remembered that Ruffhead's book appeared nearly ten years before the death of Voltaire, who had more literary enemies, a wider literary correspondence, and a thinner skin than any man in Europe, while he took a particular pride in his acquaintance with Pope, whom (whether with a private reservation of himself or not) he used to vaunt as the greatest European poet of the century. It is odd, therefore, both that he should not have heard the story, and that if it was untrue he should not have taken some pains to prove the untruth. However, we rarely quarrel with a biographer for fighting his hero's battles to the death; and we never quarrel with such a useful and thorough literary monograph as this is.

TOPSY-TURVYNESS was always the main feature in every story of Mr. Lewis Carroll's, and so it is in Sylvie and Bruno Concluded (Macmillan & Co.). Where is the wit; where the "flashes of merriment"? The story—if story "it can be called which shape has none"—has, however, been constructed on a theory, and is "an attempt to show what might possibly happen supposing that fairies really existed." The various psychical states, with varying degrees of consciousness, of "human beings" are carefully set forth and differentiated, and the various psychical states of fairies have had the same service performed for them. That done, the passages in which abnormal states occur in vols. i. and ii. of 'Sylvie and Bruno' are tabulated, and an account of the "origination" of some of the ideas embodied in these two books is given in a long preface. Surely this is taking a child's book very seriously! Query, Is 'Sylvie and Bruno' intended as a child's book? If so, will any child ever read the long preface or require the index? There are many good things in the book, of course, but it is much too long. That was, perhaps, inevitable when so many questions of the day are discussed in it, even though the author had the power, and has sometimes used it, of cutting discussion short by a sudden irruption from fairyland. Among the amusing features of the story is a learned foreign professor, who explains how in his country, by means of artificial selection practised for centuries, not only has a race of men been obtained who, being lighter than water, can never be drowned, but also

"We have gone on selecting cotton-wool till we have got some lighter than air! You've no idea what a useful material it is! We call it 'Imponderal.'"

"What do you use it for?"

"Well, chiefly for packing articles, to go by Parcel-Post. It makes them weigh less than nothing, you know."

"And how do the Post-Office people know what you have to pay?"

"That's the beauty of the new system!" Mein Herr cried, exultingly. "They pay us: we don't pay them! I've often got as much as five shillings for sending a parcel!"

"But doesn't your Government object?"

"Well, they do object, a little. They say it comes so expensive, in the long run. But the thing's as clear as daylight, by their own rules. If I send a parcel that weighs a pound more than nothing, I pay threepence; so, of course, if it weighs a pound less than nothing, I ought to receive threepence."

The next extract is less satisfactory:—

"'Don't-care' came to a bad end," Sylvie whispered to Bruno. "I'm not sure, but I believe he was hanged."

"The Professor overheard her. 'That result,' he blandly remarked, 'was merely a case of mistaken identity.'"

"Both children looked puzzled."

"Permit me to explain. 'Don't-care' and 'Care' were twin-brothers. 'Care,' you know, killed the Cat. And they caught 'Don't-care' by mistake, and hanged him instead. And so 'Care' is alive still. But he's very unhappy without his brother. That's why they say 'Begone, dull Care!'"

MR. FISHER UNWIN publishes The House of Lords: a Retrospect and a Forecast, by Mr. Spalding. The retrospect contained in this volume is, on the whole, well sketched. But it is to the forecast that readers are likely to turn, and we cannot profess to think that Mr. Spalding has solved the problem of devising a good Upper House. He very naturally suggests a limitation of numbers and a raising of the quorum. His suggestion that the rejection of a Bill should be supported by a two-thirds majority has not in itself much importance. The difficulty in the way of the House of Lords, caused by its being out of touch with one of the two parties in the State, would not in the present or the future be removed, or even, we think, lessened, by the adoption of this proposal. There is more to be said for the suggestion that the Lords should be bound to draw up their reasons for the rejection of every measure. Our author follows the precedents of South Australia and of the Home Rule Bill in suggesting that the Upper House should be limited in the repetition of rejections. His scheme is that the House should be allowed to reject a Bill twice, and not oftener, and only once if the rejection is followed by a dissolution. Mr. Spalding has a further scheme for bringing the House of Lords ultimately, but by slow steps, to the condition of a senate of life peers, by gradually eliminating the hereditary element — one new hereditary delegate being chosen by the peers for every three vacancies in the body. There is, of course, a good deal to be said for his suggestion, which is far from new, that peers should be allowed to sign declarations resigning their privileges as peers for themselves, but not for their successors, and thus abandoning their right to be elected to the House of Lords and to vote for members of that House, but becoming free to stand for election to the House of Commons. With regard to a further scheme for creating categories of persons to be made honorary members of the Privy Council, with a view to ultimate succession to seats in the Senate, we fear that its practical effect would be to give us a very old House of Lords. A general objection to the whole of the scheme is that the disadvantages of the Lords, arising from their being interested in the Church, in the land, and in property, rather than all that is outside the Church and in labour, and thus being inclined by their constitution in many cases to a partial view, would in no sense disappear under Mr. Spalding's scheme. There would be as much difficulty in securing its adoption by the House of Lords as there would be in bringing about, if the country desired it, a more revolutionary change. Mr. Spalding does not interest in his scheme those who desire change. Take, for example, the question of the Church. He leaves the archbishops and some bishops in his Senate, but he makes no provision for the representation of any form of Dissent, and he goes so far as to say that "Dissenters possess no such direct interest in legislation as the Established Church of England possesses" (which may be true); and "if we read aright the signs of the times, the tendency of Dissenting bodies is more and more to coalesce with the forces of the Church"—which is, we think, untrue, unless he is looking forward to a misty future in which Establishment should have disappeared; but then his ground for the earlier of the assertions which we have quoted is the existence of Establishment. Generally speaking, our author thinks that his proposals are natural forms of constitutional development. Surely not! The natural form of constitutional development, according to British precedent, would be not so much a paper constitution for a Senate as the gradual dropping into disuse of the veto of the hereditary House.

Messrs. SONNENSCHNEN & Co. publish a practical little book, under the title of The Dwellings of the Poor, by Mr. Worthington, the conclusions of which are that legislation can do something to distribute town population in the neighbourhood of towns and ensure cheap trains and tramways; and that, without direct State or municipal aid, capital can cause the erection of types of houses for the working class which are both excellent and capable of affording fair interest, without the exaction of excessive rent.

THAT valuable book of reference, Hart's Army List, has been forwarded to us by Mr. Murray. This standard work maintains its reputation as the most complete and authoritative volume of its class.—Messrs. Kelly & Co. have sent us the Clergy List, which has greatly improved of late years. The value of benefices is more accurately stated in the present than in former issues.—That laborious and useful compilation, The Mining Manual, has been issued by Mr. Skinner, who, except as regards the Transvaal, has not much news of a cheerful character to lay before his readers.—The Rochester Diocesan Directory has reached us from Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co.—We have received from Messrs. Sonnenschein & Co. their handy Public Schools Year-Book; from Mr. Ledger his interesting and useful Era Almanack.

We have received the annual volume of the Journal of Education (Rice), a thoughtful periodical which we have before now had occasion to praise.

We have on our table The Story of an African Chief, being the Life of Khama, by Mrs. W. Knight-Bruce (Kegan Paul).—The Gallic War of C. Julius Caesar, Book II., with Introduction and Notes by J. Brown (Blackie).—Digest XLVII. 2, De Partis, translated with Notes by C. H. Munro (Cambridge, University Press).—A Modern French Reader, edited by J. J. Benzemaker (Blackie).—The "Junior Local" Arithmetic (Simpkin).—Massachusetts: its History and its History, by C. F. Adams (Boston, U.S., Houghton).—Ophthalmic Nursing, by S. Stephenson (Scientific Press).—Literary Industries, a Memoir, by H. H. Bancroft (New York, Harper).—G. Leopardi, Twelve Dialogues, translated by J. Thompson (Simpkin).—Personal Reminiscences in Book-making, by R. M. Ballantyne (Nisbet).—Three Brace of Lovers, by H. Vallings (Bristol, Arrowsmith).—The Wooing of Master Fox, by Edward, Lord Lytton (Routledge).—Courtship and Marriage, by Annie S. Swan (Hutchinson).—The Waif from the Wasse, by W. J. Knox Little (Chapman & Hall).—A Song for the Season, by G. Lane (Sonnenschein).—The Trial of Sir John Falstaff, by A. M. F. Randolph (Putnam).—Gleanings from Thoughtland, by Fernleaf (Digby & Long).—Early and Late Poems, by C. J. Riethmüller (Bell).—The Pleasant Comedie of Patient Grissill, by H. Chettle, T. Dekker, and W. Houghton, edited by G. Hübsch (Kriegen, Junge).—The Way, the Truth, the Life, by F. J. A. Hort, D.D. (Macmillan).—Nature as a Book of Symbols, by W. Marshall (Hodder & Stoughton).—The Son of Man among the Sons of Men, by the Rev. W. Boyd Carpenter, D.D. (Isbister). Among New Editions we have Text-Book of Geology, by Sir Archibald Geikie, F.R.S. (Macmillan).—A System of Figure-Skating, by T. M. Witham (Cox).—A Treatise on Money, and Essays on Monetary Problems, by J. S. Nicholson (A. & C. Black).—A Manual of our Mother Tongue, by H. M. Hewitt and G. Beach (W. H. Allen & Co.).—Out Back, by K. Mackay (Remington).—and Jacob Treloar, by J. H. Pearce (Methuen).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Benson's (Archbishop) Flowers of Men, addressed to the Diocese of Canterbury in his Third Visitation, cr. 8vo. 6s.
Carter's (Rev. T. T.) Parish Teachings, the Apostles' Creed and Sacraments, cr. 8vo. 4s. 6d.
Freckleton and others' Religion and Modern Thought, and other Essays, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Parker's (Rev. J.) Celestial and Ecclesiastical Hierarchy of Dionysius the Areopagite, first trans. into English, 2s.
Scott's (A.) Sacrifice, its Prophecy and Fulfilment, 1s. 6d.
Stephen's (W.) History of the Scottish Church, Vol. 1, 12s.
World's (The) Parliament of Religions, edited by Rev. J. H. Barrows, 2 vols. 8vo. 20s. net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Habershon's (M. H.) Chapelton Researches, Archaeological and Historical, 8vo. 7s. 6d.
Harrison's (J. E.) Greek Vase Paintings, a Selection of Examples, folio, 31s. 6d. net.
Saron, 1893, by Goupil & Co., with Text in English, translated by H. Bacon, imp. 8vo. 52s. 6d.

Poetry and the Drama.

- James's (G.) Francis Bacon the Author of Shakespeare, 2s.
Japp's (A. H.) Dramatic Pictures, cr. 8vo. 5s. 6d.
Lassing's (G. E.) Nathan the Wise, trans. by W. Jacks, 5s. net.

Political Economy.

- Buloh's (M. G.) Public Assistance of the Poor in France, 2s.
Brentano's (L.) Hours and Wages in Relation to Production, translated by Mrs. W. Arnold, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Dictionary of Political Economy, edited by H. H. I. Palgrave, Vol. 1, 8vo. 21s. net.

History and Biography.

- Burns (Isobel) (Mrs. Begg), a Memoir, by her Grandson, 12mo. 3s. 6d.
Hill (Frederic), Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform, edited by his Daughter, C. Hill, 8vo. 16s. 6d.
Holmes (O. W.), by W. Jerrold, 12mo. 2s. 6d.
Maude's (P. C.) Memories of the Motley, 2 vols. 8vo. 30s. 6d.
Montague's (P. C.) Elements of English Constitutional History, cr. 8vo. 3s. 6d.
Napoleon (Private Life of), by A. Levy, from the French by S. L. Simon, 3 vols. 8vo. 28s. 6d.
Ranking's (D. F.) The Student's Special History, 1689-1832, revised by J. Gilson, cr. 8vo. 3s. 6d.
Rosall School (The Rise and Progress of), a Jubilee Sketch, by the Founder, 8vo. 2s. 6d. net.
Smith (Armand), an Autobiography, abridged by Rev. C. G. Moore, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

Geography and Travel.

- Ellis's (A. B.) The Yoruba-Speaking Peoples of the Slave Coast of West Africa, 8vo. 10s. 6d.
Hart's (P.) Western Australia in 1893, 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Scott's (L.) Echoes of Old Florence, her Palaces and Those who have Lived in Them, cr. 8vo. 5s. 6d.
Tweedie's (Mrs. A.) A Winter Jaunt to Norway, 8vo. 16s. 6d.

Bibliography.

- Hildebrand's (Prof. A. M.) Heraldic Book-plates, Vol. 2, 4s.
Otto's (G.) A Score of Book-plates, 4to. 4s. 6d.

Philology.

- Dante (The) Daily Text-Book in Four Languages, 5s. 6d.
Durnford's (W.) Passages for Translation from French Authors, 12mo. 3s. 6d.
Erman's (A.) Egyptian Grammar, with Table of Signs, trans. by J. H. Breasted, cr. 8vo. 16s. 6d.
Lallemant (H.) and Ludwig's (A.) A New English and French Vocabulary, 32mo. 2s. 6d.

Science.

- Bateman's (W.) Materials for the Study of Variation, 51/ net.
Goodall's (M.) The Microscopical Examination of the Human Brain, cr. 8vo. 5s. 6d.
Huxley's (T. H.) Science and Christian Tradition, Essays, cr. 8vo. 5s. 6d. (Hversley Edition.)
Skinner's (W. H.) The Mining Manual for 1894, 10s. 6d. net.

General Literature.

- Adams's (Mrs. L.) Bonnie Kate, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Croker's (B. M.) To Let, &c., cr. 8vo. 3s. 6d.
Fane's (Violet) The Story of Helen Davenport, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Gleichen's (M.) The Storm Dragon, and other Tragic Romances, cr. 8vo. 6s. 6d.
Hill's (J.) The Common Ancestor, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 21s. 6d.
Joceline's (B.) The Mother's Legacy to her Unborn Child, Introduction by the Bishop of Rochester, 12mo. 4s. 6d.
Longman's Advanced Book-keeping, by A. Nelson, 8s. 6d.
Love, Marriage and Happiness, by Isidore, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Maude's (P. W.) Victims, cr. 8vo. 4s. 6d.
Murphy's (G. E.) Beyond the Ice, a Story of the newly-discovered Region round the North Pole, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Nisbet's (H.) A Bush Girl's Romance, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Orsi's (Count) The Maid of Brittany, an Italian Romance, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 21s. 6d.
Rose's (J. D.) Highland Mary, 10mo. 2s. 6d.
Russell's (W. C.) The Tragedy of Ida Noble, Popular Edition, cr. 8vo. 3s. 6d.
Scott's (Sir W.) St. Ronan's Well, Border Edition, 2 vols. 12s.
Walker's (Mrs. L.) Varied Occupations for Infants, 2s. 6d.
Winter's (John Strange) Only Human, a Novel, 2s. 6d.
Younger Sister (A.) by Author of 'Atelier du Lys', cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

- Kaufmann (H.) Rachiel, die Anwendung des Buches Klob in der rabbinischen Agadah, Part 1, 1m. 20.

Fine Art.

- Verestchaguine (V. P.) Album des Souverains russes, 20fr.

History and Biography.

- Arduin-Dumanoir Une Armée dans les Neiges, 6fr.
Margerie (A. de) H. Taine, 6fr.
Schubert (R.) Geschichte des Pyrrhus, 1m.
Sibie (Le) de Louis XIV., de Voltaire, annoté par Rébellian et Marion, 4fr.
Strada (T.) La Loi de l'Histoire, 6fr.

Geography and Travel.

- Cavaglio 364 Jours autour du Monde, 4fr.

Philology.

- Commentarii Notarii Tironianorum, ed. W. Schmitz, 60m.
Strassmaier (J. N.) Babylonische Texte, Part 11, 12m.
Virgile, les Bucoliques, Texte latin, annoté par A. Walis, 1fr. 50.

Science.

- Schiff (M.) Recueil des Mémoires physiologiques, Vol. 1, 30fr.

General Literature.

- Leinhardt (A.) De l'Éducation de l'Enfant dans la Famille, 6fr.
Œuvres complètes de Pierre Loti, Vol. 1, 1fr. 50.
Rind (E.) La seconde Vie de Michel Teissier, 2fr. 50.

IMITATION.

Bedford Street, Strand, Jan. 17, 1894.

IMITATION is said to be the sincerest form of flattery. When the imitator's object appears to be to get his goods sold as ours, we feel we could dispense with the compliment.

Eighteen months ago we planned a series of children's books. The shape was entirely novel and the binding designed with exceptional care. The series became popular, and now we observe in the shops, even in the windows of the most eminently respectable booksellers, a new volume, issued by another firm, which is so flagrant an imitation that one of us actually took up a copy under the impression that it was one of our series, and was undeceived by reading the name of the book.

We enclose you a copy of a volume of our series and a copy of the imitation. To comment on the action of the other publisher is superfluous. But we would ask whether it is not in the power of the leading booksellers actively to discountenance such productions, or at least to abstain from showing them in their windows and placing them on their counters side by side with the series so deliberately imitated. We have no legal redress; but surely we may appeal to the honour of the trade in this matter.

A. D. INNES & Co.

THE HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.

LIKE the Fleming MSS., the collection of the Earl of Lonsdale which is calendared in the latest appendix to the Thirteenth Report of the Commission relates chiefly to the county history of Westmoreland. There is, however, this important difference between the two collections, that whereas the chief value of the former lies in the abundant material which it affords for the study of social history and local antiquities, the interest of the latter is almost wholly political. This circumstance can, perhaps, be sufficiently explained by the remarkable connexion of the family of Lowther with the parliamentary representation of Westmoreland during just six centuries—since the reign of Edward I., in fact, when, as Mr. Cartwright tells us, Hugh de Louthre, knight, sat in Parliament for this county. To begin with, there are two journals or private reports of the proceedings of the second and third Parliaments of Charles I., one of which must be regarded as a document of the very highest historical value. This is the note-book relating to the debates during the third Parliament on the Tonnage and Poundage Bill and other vexed questions. The technical arguments and the precedents cited during this debate may be profitably compared with those of the judges of the Crown and the great common lawyers in the case of the Impositions under James I., for the purpose of proving how willfully reckless in their misstatement of constitutional facts each of the contending parties had become under the demoralizing influence of the new régime. The editor has clearly proved that these note-books were made by or for a Mr. Lowther who sat in the eventful Parliaments of 1626 and 1628-9; and that the note-book under review is the fair copy of an original which is not preserved at Lowther Castle. But if the member for Westmoreland was indeed the actual compiler of this original, we must suppose that he was possessed of no mean legal attainments. The whole work bears the impress of a trained hand, and resembles a report such as we should have expected to find in the Hargrave collection rather than in the library of a plain "parliament man." In fact, the fair copy is defaced by several curious blunders which prove that the copyist did not always understand the crabbed law-French of his exemplar; but at the same time this theory would tend to increase the constitutional value of the note-book in question. Of scarcely inferior interest to these parliamentary reports is the journal of a visit to Scotland undertaken by the Rev. Christopher Lowther with two companions in the year 1649. In this journal, which is unfortunately all too short, a passage occurs at p. 85 which, as the editor points out, makes no sense as it stands. Perhaps in the process of fair copying a line has been transposed and the words "that they dry them in their chimneys like red herrings" should follow the sentence ending "and swans many," supra. Dried or "amoked" wild fowl was an article of diet much appreciated by our ancestors and not yet altogether disused.

The most characteristic feature of the collection is seen in the remarkable correspondence between Sir James Lowther and several of the leading statesmen of the reigns of George II. and George III. Here we have letters of Newcastle, Henry Fox, Butts, the two Pitts, and many more, together with a notable device by John Robinson for the "entertainment" of the free and independent electors of Whitehaven in the year 1757. In the early part of the year 1806 we meet with many interesting reminiscences of William Pitt, and much evidence in support of the view that "the defence of the principles and the protection of the memory" of the Great Commoner constituted "a bond of union" amongst his immediate followers. In short, it will be easily gathered from this brief notice of Mr. Cartwright's admirable Calendar that few more valuable contributions have been made to the long series of Reports of the Historical Manuscripts Commission.

NOTE ON COLERIDGE.

IN the notes to his new edition of Coleridge's 'Poems' Mr. Dykes Campbell tells us that the prose portion of 'The Wanderings of Cain' was "first printed (without the verses and the Prefatory Note) in the 'Bijou' of 1828, and that the prose and poetry with the Prefatory Note were first published in the P.W. of 1828."

The Prefatory Note is worth examining. It is, of course, of the nature of an apology. Coleridge seems to have fancied that there was an impropriety, almost an indelicacy, in presenting to an enlightened public the divine imaginings of his earlier muse, except under some pretext of biographical or psychological interest. Accordingly he explains at some length that 'The Wanderings of Cain' was written "in 1798, near Nether Stowey"; that the work was to have been "written in concert with another whose name is too venerable to be unnecessarily brought into connection with such a trifle"; that he had himself drawn out a scheme and contents of three books or cantos; and that "my partner was to write the first canto, I the second, and whoever had first finished was to set about a third." He goes on to say that this scheme of joint authorship proved impracticable; that his partner's mind was too original "to compose another man's thoughts and fancies"; and that his "taste so austere and simple" would have shrunk from imitating Gesner's 'Death of Abel.' The whole scheme "broke up in laughter, and 'The Ancient Mariner' was written instead."

Prefatory notes and apologetic prefaces need not be taken too seriously, but it is worth pointing out that the note in question was composed in the same year, 1828, in which, on the occasion of the tour on the Rhine, Coleridge renewed his intimacy with Wordsworth, and that, doubtless, old memories had been stirred and quickened in the minds of both. It may, therefore, be concluded that on more than one occasion there was an attempt at joint authorship. We know that 'The Ancient Mariner' was to have been written in concert with Wordsworth, and that the partnership was speedily dissolved. In one respect, however, Coleridge's memory failed him. If, as he says, 'The Wanderings of Cain' belongs to 1798, it could not have preceded 'The Ancient Mariner,' which was begun in November, 1797. Nor, again, if Wordsworth had succeeded in filling his "almost blank sheet of paper," was there any degrading necessity imposed on his pure and simple taste of imitating the 'Death of Abel.' Coleridge, at any rate, contrived to restrict his obligations to Gesner to the narrowest limits, and he might have given Wordsworth credit for a like originality.

Among various fragments in Coleridge's handwriting, published and unpublished, the disjecta membra not, alas! of the poet, but of the metaphysician and the divine, I have recently examined a rough draft of a book or canto of 'The Wanderings of Cain.' It is written on a folio sheet, torn and creased, in careless sprawling characters, as if this portion at least had been composed by the author, not in "one night," but "in the act of tying one of his shoes." A single sentence helps to bear out Coleridge's statement as to the date. Cain and the evil shape disguised as Abel come "to an immense gulph filled with water, whither they descend, followed by alligators." Now Coleridge derived this imagery from William Bartram's

'Travels in Florida and Carolina,' and there is much to show that his close study of that work was not begun till 1798. E. H. C.

The Wanderings of Cain.

S. T. Coleridge.

He falls down in a trance—when he awakes he sees a luminous body coming before him. It stands before him an orb of fire. It goes on, he moves not. It returns to him again, again retires as if wishing him to follow it. It then goes on and he follows: they are led to near the bottom of the wild (?) woods, brooks (?), fruits, etc., etc. The Fire (?) gradually shapes itself, retaining its luminous appearance, or (?) to the lineaments of a man. A dialogue between the fiery shape and Cain, in which the being presses upon him the enormity of his guilt and that he must make some expiation to the true deity, who is a severe God, and persuades him to burn out his eyes. Cain opposes this idea, and says that God himself, who had inflicted this punishment upon him, had done it because he neglected to make a proper use of his senses, etc. The evil spirit answers him that God is indeed a God of mercy, and that an example must be given to mankind, that this end will be answered by his terrible appearance, at the same time he will be gratified by the most delicious sights and feelings. Cain, overpersuaded, consents to do it, but wishes to go to the top of the rocks to take a farewell of the earth. His farewell speech concluding with an abrupt address to the promised redeemer, and he abandons the idea of which the being had accompanied (?) him, and turning round to declare this to the being, he sees him dancing from rock to rock in form (?) shape down those interminable precipices.

Cain.

Child, af-fear'd by his father's ravings, goes out to pluck the fruits in the moonlight wilderness. Cain's soliloquy. Child returns with a pitcher of water and a cake. Cain wonders what kind of beings dwell in that place—whether any created since man or whether this world had any beings rescued from the chaos, wandering like shipwrecked beings rescued from a former world.

Midnight on the Euphrates. Cedars, palms, pines. Cain discovered sitting on the upper part of the ragged rock, where is cavern overlooking the Euphrates, the moon rising on the horizon. His soliloquy. The Beasts are out on the ramp—he hears the scream of a woman and children. Cain, surrounded by tigers, makes a soliloquy debating whether he shall save the woman. Cain advances, wishing death, and the tigers rush off. It proves to be Cain's wife with her two children, determined to follow her husband. She prevails upon him at last to tell his story. Cain's wife tells him that her son Enoch was placed suddenly by her side. Cain addresses all the elements to come for a while to persecute him, while he tells his story. He begins by telling her that he had first after his leaving her found out a dwelling in the desert under a juniper tree, etc., etc., how he meets in the desert a young man whom upon a nearer approach he perceives to be Abel, on whose countenance appear marks of the greatest misery—of another being who had power after this life, greater than Jehovah. He is going to offer sacrifices to this being, and persuades Cain to follow him—he came to an immense gulph filled with water, whither they descend, followed by alligators, etc. They come to an immense meadow so surrounded as to be inaccessible, and from its depth so vast that you could not see it from above. Abel offers sacrifice from the blood of his arm. A gleam of light illumines the meadow—the countenance of Abel becomes more beautiful and his arms glistening—he then persuades Cain to offer sacrifice for himself and his son Enoch by cutting his child's arm and letting the blood fall from it. Cain is about to do it when Abel himself in his angelic appearance, attended by Michael, are seen in the heavens, whence they sail slowly down. Abel addresses Cain with terror, warning him not to offer up his innocent child. The evil spirit throws off the countenance of Abel, assumes his own shape, flies off, pursuing a flying battle with Michael. Abel carries off the child.

DICKENS IN YORKSHIRE.

IN the autumn of 1888 I noticed that the name on the watchmaker's shop opposite the King's Head at Barnard's Castle was Humphreys, not Humphrey. This may have been altered since, to conform more nearly to the title of Dickens's book, or can the difference have escaped the observation of your correspondent M. H. of last week? J. POWELL HICKS.

AN UNKNOWN WORK OF FRANCIS BEAUMONT.

British Museum, Jan. 23, 1894.

IN Ayscough's 'Catalogue of Sloane MSS.,' vol. ii. p. 707, under the heading of grammar, occurs the entry "MS. 1708 [9]. 5. Sir Francis Beaumont. Grammar lecture." In revising the slips of a new index to the Sloane MSS. the other day, I came across this entry, and wishing to know something more of this Sir Francis Beaumont, I sent for Sloane MS. 1708, and found that it contained two lectures: 1, on Arithmetic, by Heneage Finch; 2, on Grammar, by Francis (not Sir Francis) Beaumont. The lecture occupies eighteen pages, numbered ff. 13-22 of the MS., and a very slight perusal of the contents serves to show that it was delivered in the hall of the Inner Temple, during the Saturnalia of Christmas, to the whole body of students by Francis Beaumont, Fletcher's friend. In Dr. Gouart's admirable sketch of Beaumont's life in the new 'Dictionary of National Biography,' he tells us that "Beaumont was entered a member of the Inner Temple, November 3rd, 1600, but no evidence remains that he pursued his legal studies." This lecture on Grammar certainly goes far to prove that he was intimate with every class of student, and fully versed in all their studies as well as in all their ingenious methods and tricks of avoiding their studies. He was evidently a marked character among his fellows, for he begins by saying, "I am commanded by the sovereign power of his highness our famous Prince of Templaria to frame this my lecture to the instruction of all his obedient subjects," whom he divides into three sorts, "young Students, Revelers, and plodders." He adds there is a fourth class of subjects, viz., the "Ancients," but "yt hath pleased our sovereign prince out of his majestically fauourableness to banish for a space those members of his politike government." This, which might give a clue to the date of the lecture, seems to point to some split in the Temple as to the conduct of the revels, or to the choice of the Master of the Revels not being unanimous. He instructs the Reveller not to "make daynty to runn twenty or thirty pounds in a merchants booke if yt be but to learne the right writings of Calimanco or some other new stuffe lately come over." According to Murray's 'New Dictionary,' "Calimanco or calimanco is a woollen stuff of Flanders, glossy on the surface, and woven with a satin twill and chequered in the warp, so that the checks are seen on one side only." The date of Murray's earliest quotation is 1592.

It is evident that fogs were as well known then and as unhealthy as they are nowadays, for Beaumont tells the student "yt shall not be amisse for him to complayne of the changeableness and foggyness of the city ayre at his first comeing, whereby he was driven to take phisicke." He further advises the young student "to imploy.....his first quarter in the inritchng of his eye with playes, notions, and other strange sights, and yt wilbe a great help to the nymblines of his galliard to visit often the pagan puppett playes, and to behold their fitchant anticks."

He bids the plodder purchase "that capacious cap wherein Ployden [Edmund Plowden], the King of Plodders, was wont to suppe potage, or some other pritty reliques of some other plodder since or before of famous memory."

He rails at the young student's "pronunciation of vile speeches in vile plots for want of experience in the first Christmas of his Studentship, as might be most playnly perceived in this ill-instructed hall the last Christmas in the most plodderly plotted shew of Lady Amity." This allusion, if it could be traced, would give the exact year of Beaumont's lecture. There are several other most interesting allusions to the social life of the time, such as plays at the Bankside Theatre, which are too long to note here, but which render it most desirable that this unknown work of an early dramatist should be published in its entirety.

EDWARD SCOTT.

Literary Gossip.

MESSRS. BLACKWOOD have just concluded an arrangement for the publication of a volume on 'English Literature under the Georges,' which the late Prof. Minto had prepared shortly before his death. The volume is being revised by Prof. Knight, of St. Andrews, and will shortly be published.

A NEW NOVEL, 'The Rich Miss Riddell,' by Dorothea Gerard, the joint author of 'Renta' and author of 'Lady Baby' and other novels, will be begun in the February Blackwood. Among other contributions to the same number will be a further study in ghost-lore by Mr. Andrew Lang, the subject this time being 'Ghosts before the Law,' dealing with instances in which evidences from supernatural sources have come before courts of justice; a paper on 'Salmon Flies,' by Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart.; and a further instalment of Sir Edward Braddon's sporting experiences in India, 'Thirty Years of Shikar.' General Sir Archibald Alison will deal with 'The Sea Power of Armed Europe.'

WHEN the decease of Prof. Tyndall was announced no fewer than six editors of magazines telegraphed to Prof. Huxley for an article. Mr. Knowles was slightly quicker than the rest, and secured the prize.

THE fourth volume of the Calendar of hitherto unpublished Records of Dublin, edited by Dr. J. T. Gilbert, is expected to appear early in February. The contents relate to the closing period of the Cromwellian government in Ireland and the years immediately subsequent to the restoration of Charles II. A Cromwellian census of Dublin is included in this volume, which also contains documents relating to the arrangements for the first Lord Mayor of that city, the formation of St. Stephen's Green, the establishment of an hospital and free school, and numerous other matters which came under the control of the civic authorities.

THE list of subscribers to the Mommsen fund, which was presented to him on his jubilee, November 8th, 1893, has recently been issued; and the apparently unequal distribution of the English subscribers is quite remarkable. Oxford is represented by twenty-five names, Cambridge by Prof. Seeley alone. Is Cambridge so devoid of interest in German scholarship that only one of its scholars has put himself to the trouble of sending a contribution across to Berlin, or is it so intent on internal matters that it was wholly ignorant of the movement? The British Museum is represented by four names, the four Scottish universities by three (viz., Edinburgh two and Aberdeen one), and London by Sir Julian Goldsmid. The net result of the subscription, after all expenses were paid, was 26,545 marks; of which Prof. Mommsen has devoted 25,000 to the publication of the long-projected catalogue of all known Greek coins, while 1,545 remain for his disposal otherwise. The total number of subscribers was close on eight hundred.

THE death is announced of Mr. F. A. Leyland, of Halifax. He was a contributor to Yorkshire literature, and was the author of a book on the Brontë family. He was at one period curator of the Literary and Philosophical Society's museum at Halifax. Mr. Leyland died on Saturday last in the eighty-first year of his age.

THE Edinburgh Pen and Pencil Club propose to place memorial tablets on the houses in Edinburgh which have been the residences of distinguished Scotchmen. In carrying out the project they are aided by a contribution of 100*l.* from an anonymous donor.

DR. BUDGE has edited for the Royal Society of Literature the Syriac text of the 'Discourses upon the Christian Life and Character,' composed by Philoxenus, Bishop of Mabbogh, probably in the early years of the sixth century. Few of the works of this remarkable man have been printed. He was born at Tahal in Bêth Garmal about A.D. 460, and he was ordained Bishop of Mabbogh in 485. In 519 he was banished to Philippopolis in Thrace by Justin, and afterwards to Paphlagonia, where he seems to have been suffocated about 523. He was a zealous monophysite, a man of great learning, and his writings bear upon them the stamp of culture and eloquence. He was considered by Jacob of Edessa to be one of the best and purest writers of the Syriac language. He is best known as the author of the Philoxenian version of the New Testament, which was readily accepted and was very widely used in the Syrian Church. In a second volume Dr. Budge supplies an English translation of the discourses, and intends to print extracts from other unpublished letters and documents of Philoxenus which have reference to the chief events of the troubled life of their author. Messrs. Asher are to bring out the book.

THE author of 'Mark Tillotson' has been commissioned to write a volume on Bohemia for the "Pen and Pencil Series" of illustrated volumes issued by the Religious Tract Society. He will make a tour (his seventh) in Bohemia in the spring, to study certain parts yet unvisited. The Society will also shortly issue a work by the same author upon 'A Great Forgotten Englishman,' being a development of some articles published in 1890.

THE late Mr. John Wilkinson, of the firm of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, has just died at the ripe age of ninety-one. He was born in Yorkshire, the second son of the Rev. J. Wilkinson, of Huggate, and, coming to London in 1821, he was eventually taken into the house of Sotheby & Co. as chief accountant, and in 1842 he was made a partner. During the next forty years he continued to wield the hammer, and in 1849 he sold the Stowe library and collection of engravings. His active career as an auctioneer may be said to have concluded about the time of the famous Beckford and Hamilton sales in 1882-4, the selling of which he shared with his partner Mr. Hodge, increasing age compelling him gradually to give up selling. He died at his residence in Harley Gardens, Kensington, and was buried on Saturday last at the Brompton Cemetery. Mr. Wilkinson having practically retired from business for some years, his death will not affect the conduct of the business in Wellington Street. Dying at so great an age, he had outlived all his contemporaries, but his funeral was largely attended. He always had a great liking for the theatre. He had known Edmund Kean personally, and he was naturally sceptical regarding modern acting. He was elected a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries in 1856, and he also belonged to the Numismatic Society. In antiquarian research and also in literature he took a keen interest.

THE next volume of the "Camden Library," which will be issued shortly, will be 'West Irish Folk-Tales and Romances,' edited by Mr. William Larminie. The tales have been collected orally by the editor, who gives the name of the narrator in each case. Several of the tales are also printed in phonetic Gaelic for the use of students.

THE fourth edition of the late Dr. Scrivener's 'Plain Introduction to the Criticism of the New Testament,' which will be published shortly by Messrs. Bell, will contain much material left by the author. The Rev. Edward Miller is the editor. The enlargement of the work necessitates its division into two volumes.

THE popular Norwegian novelist Hr. Jonas Lie has now settled down again in his old quarters in Paris after a lengthened visit to his native country. Before leaving Christiania a banquet was given in his honour, attended by leading citizens of every shade of political opinion, and he was taken back to his house with a torch-light procession of students. Jonas Lie's new novel 'Niobe' is now being translated into English by Mr. H. L. Brækstad, and will form a volume of Mr. Heinemann's "International Library."

ABDURRAHMAN PASHA RUSHDI, who formerly held some high appointments in the Egyptian Cabinet, is engaged on translating into French the well-known Turkish manual of ethics, 'Akhlâk-i-âlî.' It is expected that the translation will be a great success.

A SOCIÉTÉ DES HUMANISTES FRANÇAIS has been founded at Paris for the study of French, Latin, and Greek authors, and of literary history in general. A meeting will be held once a month for each of these four subjects. The first meeting is to be held next Sunday at the house of M. Gaston Boissier.

FROM the United States comes the news of the death of Miss E. Peabody, a sister-in-law of Hawthorne and author of 'Reminiscences of Dr. Channing' and other works, many of them educational. She introduced Kindergarten into the Great Republic.

THE Parliamentary Papers of the week include West Africa, Lagos Interior Expedition (1s.); and Historical MSS. Commission, Thirteenth Report, Appendix, Part 7, MSS. of the Earl of Lonsdale (1s. 3d.).

SCIENCE

The Story of the Sun. By Sir Robert S. Ball. (Cassell & Co.)

THERE is no body in the material universe of anything like the interest and importance to us that the sun is; not even our own dwelling-place, which assuredly would not and could not be the abode of life without the vivifying influence of the solar rays, "the ultimate source," as Sir John Herschel remarks, "of almost every motion which takes place on the surface of the earth." But how greatly is our knowledge of the nature of the sun's action due to the discoveries made in recent years, and to the happy alliance which has been formed between chemistry and astronomy by methods of which no one had the slightest conception less than forty years ago! "The ancients," says Prof. Newcomb, "had a vague idea that it [the sun] was a globe of fire, and in this they were more nearly right than some of the moderns; but there was so entire an absence of all real foundation for their opinions that the latter are of little interest to any one but the historian of philosophy." The allusion here is, of course, to the idea, held even by great astronomers at the beginning of the present century, that the stores of light and heat by which the sun vivifies our world were evolved in its outer luminous region or photosphere, and that the interior, protected by the interposition of a heavy cloud-canopy, was a cool, dark, solid globe, its surface diversified with mountains and valleys, clothed, perhaps, with vegetation, and stored with inhabitants whose heads need not be below their shoulders, but placed like our own. It is true they could have no knowledge of astronomy, for even the spots could not have extended down to the surface of this hypothetical cool globe; but in other respects the idea seems to have been that they might have resembled terrestrial intelligences. "We smile," as Miss Clerke justly remarks, "at conclusions which our present knowledge condemns as extravagant and impossible"; the crude notions of some of the ancient philosophers "approached more nearly to what we now know of the sun than the complicated structure devised for the happiness of a nobler race of beings than our own by the benevolence of eighteenth-century astronomers." There is no body then respecting which ideas have been so revolutionized by the patient study of the last thirty or forty years (assisted, or rather made possible, by means of investigation of which Herschel had no more idea than Hipparchus or Copernicus had of the revelations of the telescope) as the great central luminary of our system.

Excepting as regards the spots and their motions, proving a slow rotation of the sun on his own axis, the only little modicum of knowledge really possessed until less than half a century ago respecting the sun's surroundings was derived from a study of total solar eclipses, which never last more than a few seconds; and until the eclipses of 1842 and 1851 it was quite an open question whether the so-called rose-coloured protuberances, now known to be mighty uprushes of highly vapourized matter from certain parts of the envelope to which the name "chromosphere" has been given, appertained to the sun or the moon.

No words of ours are needed to commend to the attention of all interested in astronomy an account by Sir Robert Ball of modern investigations of solar phenomena and action. In the work before us these are brought before the student in a way which cannot fail to be deeply interesting and instructive to him, whilst the number and excellence of the illustrations leave nothing to be desired in a method of teaching which is practically indispensable in a subject of this kind. Of course the author has not neglected to include and bring well up to date other knowledge of the sun pertaining to the "old astronomy," respecting his distance, size, &c., and the probable nature and direction of his motion through space, carrying with him his family of revolving globes, of which our dwelling-place is one of the smaller members. "Quo me, Bacche, rapis?" asked Horace; and we are now, with more hope of an approximately correct answer, putting the same query to the sun. The question, too, of the amount and distribution of its heat, and the way in which this is maintained, as well as its probable duration, has occupied much attention in recent years. Satan, whilst admiring the surpassing glory of the sun's radiance, hated, we are told, his beams, but it is our part rather to love them; and their study, as set forth in the work before us, cannot fail to be of the highest interest.

ATLAS OF INDIA.

It is tolerably safe to predict that no sensible traveller will go to India in future without providing himself with Constable's Hand Atlas of India: a New Series of Sixty Maps and Plans, prepared from Ordnance and other surveys under direction of J. G. Bartholomew, F.R.G.S. (Constable & Co.). It is really a hand atlas—a comfortable octavo which will go into a greatcoat pocket; each map is mounted so as to open flat across the double page, and there are sixty of them. After a general plan of routes to India, and charts of ocean currents during the monsoons, &c., we come to an admirable series of "physical geography" maps, showing the land-surface elevation, general features (forests, deserts, cultivated lands, &c.), geology, the temperature during (a) the hot and (b) the cold season, and rainfall during the dry season and "the rains." A very instructive population map follows, which tells at a glance the density in the different provinces, and this is succeeded by no less interesting maps of races and languages. Another feature which will recommend the atlas to a special class is the map of Christian mission stations, which are distinguished as Catholic, Anglican, American, &c., and cover the country like a violent rash of scarlet fever interspersed with the blue tattooing of the Roman missions. Nothing could be better done than the three maps of animal, vegetable, and mineral products, a study of which is worth more than a week of geographical treatises or encyclopædic articles. After all this we arrive at the ordinary or political maps, twenty-two in number, which begin with a general map of the political divisions; a capital military map, showing the districts and headquarters and forts of the presidential armies; and four useful railway maps, in which the names of stations are spelt according to the time-tables, and not according to the Hunterian reformed orthography; a very necessary distinction when it comes to taking tickets. The political map of India is shown in fourteen sections, and except perhaps in the very dense parts, such as Lower Bengal, the names and divisions are both full and clear. Indeed, it is marvellous how many names of towns have been got into so small a compass with the least possible sacrifice of clearness. Especially valuable just now, and "up to date," are the maps of the Pamir and Afghan frontiers, where people who are somewhat hazy about Hunza, and Gilgit, and Pishin may clear up their doubts in a moment; and the same may be said for the useful maps of Lower Burma and Further India (including Siam). The atlas ends with a score of plans of cities, including not merely the great presidential capitals, but Lahore, Delhi, Agra, Allahabad; the hill resorts of Simla and Naini Tal; Mussoorie, Murree, Darjeeling, Ootacamund, and even outlying Srinagar, Rangoon, and Singapore. A full index of 170 columns completes this invaluable and most convenient work, upon which Mr. Bartholomew and Messrs. Constable are to be sincerely congratulated. Nothing half so useful has been done for many years to help both the traveller in India and the student at home. 'Constable's Hand Atlas' is a pleasure to hold and to turn over.

Sir William Hunter's Atlas of India, containing sixteen maps and complete index, with an introduction (W. & A. K. Johnston), is a much more commonplace affair. It contains only the usual political maps, and plans of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Aden, and cannot, therefore, at all compete with 'Constable's Hand Atlas' for variety or novelty of arrangement and information. Its merits are great clearness and beauty in the drawing of its few maps, and very good printing and paper; but although on a larger scale than Constable's, there are fewer names of towns; on the other hand, the boundaries and rivers (in blue), and mountains (brown), are certainly more prominent and conspicuous. This atlas is of the orthodox folio form, which is inconvenient both for bookshelves and portmanteaus. Sir William Hunter has prefixed general introductions to the plates, the worst of which is that in an atlas nobody reads them, though they are well enough in their proper place. We presume "our only Gazetteer" is not responsible for the prospectus which informs us that "This Atlas has been prepared to meet the requirements of the Student, Tourist, Soldier, Educationalist, Man of Business, and the Missionary. The Government Survey 'Indian Atlas' has formed the basis of the Maps, the last editions only been [sic] used," &c. The soldier, however, will find no military map, the educationalist no map of races or languages, the man of business no charts of products, and the missionary no missions map. However, within less ambitious limits, these well-drawn, handsomely printed maps will be found serviceable by those who are not acquainted with the more comprehensive atlas already noticed.

SOCIETIES.

ROYAL.—Jan. 18.—Lord Kelvin, President, followed by the Treasurer, in the chair.—The Right Hon. James Bryce was admitted into the Society.—The following papers were read: 'The Homogeneous Partition of Space,' by Lord Kelvin; 'An Attempt to Measure Statistically the Number of Legitimate Births, compiled from Observations made at Budapest,' by Mr. J. Kürsei; 'Results from Kürsei's Natality Tables derived by the Method of Contours or Isogons,' by Mr. F. Galton; 'Appendix to a Communication termed "The Mechanical Equivalent of Heat" (Phil. Trans., vol. 184, 1893),' by Mr. E. H. Griffiths; 'On the Transformation of Optical Wave-surfaces by Homogeneous Strain,' by Mr. O. Heaviside; and 'On the Reflection and Refraction of Light,' by Mr. G. A. Schott.

BRITISH ARCHAEOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—Jan. 17.—Mr. C. H. Compton, V.P., in the chair.—Miss Swann described a remarkable stone object which has been found in digging the site for the new city buildings at Oxford. It is in the form of a small font, with four shafts at the corners and a central one. It is only eleven inches high, and of early Norman style. It is supposed to be a christomatory. The Jews' quarter was formerly in the part of Oxford where the find has been made.—Mr. Bodger sent for exhibition a series of Roman objects found at Peterborough, among which was a Roman colonial coin with a Greek inscription.—Mr. Oliver described some beautiful lamps of Roman date, mostly found in Syria.—Mr. Earle Way produced a great many objects, mostly of Roman date, which have been discovered on the site of the tennis court of the Old Marshalsea Prison, Southwark, which is now being covered with new buildings. Traces of piling indicated the position of an ancient water-course; and a boat-hook was found embedded in black mud. Many leaden spoons of sixteenth century date were also met with.—Mr. J. T. Irvine sent sketches of an interesting example of Norman ironwork at Leathley Church.—A Roman horseshoe of broad, flat form, found at Colchester, was described by Mr. Wood.—A paper on the parishes of Leeds and Broomfield, Kent, was read by the Rev. J. Cave-Browne. The various ancient buildings in the parishes, Battle Hall, the site of the Priory, and the mansion afterwards erected on part of it were described.—Another paper was then read on recent discoveries at Carnarvon, prepared by Mr. Sheraton. It was illustrated by photographs of the walls of the ancient Roman station, and of the recently opened timber roof of the church.—Mr. Cann Hughes described various antiquarian discoveries at Chester.

NUMISMATIC.—Jan. 18.—Sir J. Evans, President, in the chair.—Messrs. H. Goodacre, J. Ward, and M. P. C. Stroehlin were elected Members.—The President exhibited a specimen, thickly gilt, of the magnificent French medal cast at Lyons in honour of Louis XII. and his wife Anne de Bretagne. Though no examples in gold of the original issue of this medal are preserved, the present specimen is an early and finely executed cast in copper. Its only defect is that a small portion of it has been broken off, which, however, has been replaced by a reproduction of the corresponding part from the specimen in the British Museum.—Dr. F. P. Weber exhibited some small agates, cut so as to show the eye or eyes upon them, and commonly known as Indian "eye stones." These Dr. Weber was inclined to identify with the stones which are referred to by Nicolo Conti in his account of "Travel in India," in the fifteenth century, as "cats' eyes," and which he says were used as money in some parts of India. The stones now known as "cats' eyes" are quite different. If the so-called "eye stones" are in reality identical with the stones mentioned by Conti, they are, next to the "cowries," the commonest specimens now extant of an old non-metallic currency.—Mr. Hoblyn exhibited a penny of Edward the Confessor, struck at Hastings by the Moneyer Theodred; also a testoon and a shilling of Edward VI., countermarked with the portuculla.—Mr. Prevost exhibited specimens of Swiss jetons d'ecompte representing values of 5, 10, 20, and 50 centimes.—Sir J. Evans read a paper on a small hoard of Anglo-Saxon sceattas, found near Cambridge, both inscribed and uninscribed. The writer was of opinion that some of them might belong to East Anglia rather than to Mercia. The uninscribed specimens bore much resemblance to certain coins of Eadberht and Alchred of Northumbria, and might probably be attributed for the most part to the earlier half of the eighth century, a much later date than that which has hitherto been usually assigned to them.

ZOOLOGICAL.—Jan. 16.—Sir W. H. Flower, President, in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during last December.—Mr. Slater exhibited and made remarks on a drawing of the head of a monkey (Cercopithecus erythrogaster) in the Paris Museum, forwarded to him by M. Pouargues.—Mr. Lydekker exhibited a painting of the head of a wild goat (Capra agagrus) of unusual size.—On behalf of Mr. J. J. Weir, a specimen of the tsetse fly (Glossina morsitans) from the Transvaal was exhibited.—Mr. Tegetmeier exhibited a curiously barred variety of the common peacock.—Papers and letters were read: from Mr. C. B. Mitford, describing an invasion of locusts observed at Free Town, Sierra Leone; Mr. C. O. Waterhouse had referred the specimens sent home to Pachytelus migratoroides; and a further extract from the same letter gave an account of the occurrence of the elephant in the district of Sierra Leone.—By Mr. R. Lydekker, on some of the principal objects observed during his recent visit to the La Plata Museum, calling special attention to the splendid series of remains of dinosaurian reptiles, of cetaceans, and of ungulates of three different suborders; and on some of the specimens of Edentates and of the gigantic birds of the genus Brontornis,—from Prof. W. N. Parker, on some points in the structure of the young of the Australian echidna, —from Mr. R. Trimen, on a collection of butterflies made in Malacca, Tropical South-East Africa, by Mr. F. C. Selous in the year 1892; of 166 species represented in the series, forty-four were stated to be of general distribution, and of the remainder (amongst which were nine apparently new to science) twenty-six were peculiar to the south-tropical area of Africa,—from Dr. A. B. Meyer, on a rare African monkey (Cercopithecus welschii), accompanied by a coloured drawing,—and by Dr. A. Günther, on a collection of reptiles and fishes made by Dr. J. W. Gregory during his expedition to Mount Kenya. The collection contained examples of thirty-seven species of reptiles, nine of batrachians, and thirteen of fishes. Several species of reptiles were new to science, amongst which were two new lizards—Buconemus modesta, g. et sp. n., of the family Geckonidae, with imbricate scales and large scattered conical tubercles on the hinder part of the hind limbs; and Agama gregori, allied to A. cyanogaster, but with lateral, not tubular nostrils. Six new fishes were also characterized and named: Chromis niger, Chromis spilurus, Alectra affinis, Labeo gregori, Barbus tancensis, and Barbus taitensis.

PHILOLOGICAL.—Jan. 12.—Dictionary Evening.—Mr. B. Dawson, Treasurer, in the chair.—Mr. A. MacInnes was elected a Member.—Mr. H. Bradley made his yearly report on the progress of letters E and F, which he is editing for the Society's 'New English Dictionary,' and which were intended to form vol. III., but now D and E are to be vol. III., and F, G, H, vol. IV. Mr. Bradley had long finished E; of F, proof to "Female" had been sent out by the Clarendon Press, and copy to "Feral" sent in. Mr. Bradley thanked all his helpers; he said that the dictionary was a great co-operative undertaking, and, to his regret, its editors got all the credit of the work done for them by hundreds of collectors and sub-editors. He then dealt with the following words: "Flaunting Fabian," used by Nash and Florio, was an Englishing of L. licens Fabius at the Lupercalia. "Fake" seldom means "to steal." Vaux gives its many senses in his 'Slang Dictionary' of 1812. There is an older "foak, feague," Germ. fegen, to furbish up, to sweep, to plunder, to ill-treat. Rowlands has "a feague of roges"; the later dramatists use "feague [sweep] it away." "Fall," vb., has twenty and a half columns, and one hundred numbered senses; "fall," sb., five columns; it is not connected with σπάλλω or fallere. "Falter" is not connected with "fault," whose l is late. "Family" occurs first in English with its Latin sense, a household of servants. In India it was used for a governor's staff of officers. "Fan," O.E. fana, L. fanus, was first a shovel or basket for throwing the corn up in the air to winnow it; the blowing notion did not come in till 1666. "Fancy" was first the perceptive power of the mind: 1722, "We know matters of fact by the help of impressions made on the Fancy." From this to the prize-ring was a great change. "Far" was used in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries with negatives: "far unfit," "far impatient." "Farce," a comic performance, was the Fr. farce, stuffing, applied to words put between Kyrie and Eleison in religious services (L. farciare, to stuff out, interlard); then the interpolated comic words, or gag, put by actors into religious plays; next, a buffoon performance. "Faro" has passed from the strong conjugation to the weak, O.E. faran having lost its past tense and participle, and the weak feran having supplied them and lost its own present. "Farm," F. ferme, L. firma, a fixed payment (used by Chaucer in this sense), also a signature (whence our "firm" in business). From rent, "farm" passed to "lease," and then to a tract of land held on lease, to be cultivated. "Fast": my horse can stand as fast as yours can run; hold "fast," unflinchingly; run so, that is, quickly. "Fat," a vessel, vat: the Parker Society's edition of Grindal speaks of "fat images," which it defines as ones in relief. But the original has "stockes, or fete, images," &c. "Fated": "his fated armour," Dryden, is Ariosto's armi fatati, enchanted arma. "Father," O.E. fader: the d lasts to the sixteenth century, though fā is used in two MSS. of the 'Cursor Mundi'; but the scribes knew the fā was a voiced sound, and so left d to avoid the sharp fā of "path." "Fathom" is the space of the outstretched arms: Dekker says, "thy Bride; shee that is now thy Fadome," Curry "favel," now "favour"; O.Fr. farvel, a fallow-coloured horse, which was taken as an emblem of dishonesty: in the Fr. 'Roman du Fauvel,' Fauvel is another Reynard the Fox. "Fear," vb., in O.E. meant to terrify; later, 1, to frighten; 2, to frighten oneself of something; 3, to be afraid; 4, to be afraid of a thing. "Feck" (Scotch), shortened from "effect," the amount, bulk, whole: Chaucer has "My purchas is th' effecte of al my rent." "Fee": O.E. feow, cattle, property, money, is obsolete; the doctor's "fee" is the fee simple, fief, feud, L. feodum, which meant a stipend.

METEOROLOGICAL.—Jan. 17.—Annual Meeting.—Dr. C. T. Williams, President, in the chair.—The Council, in their report, stated that the Society had made steady and uninterrupted progress during the year, there being an increase in the number of Fellows, and the balance of income over expenditure being greater than in 1892. They also reported that Dr. C. T. Williams, previous to vacating the office of President, had expressed a desire for the formation of a fund for carrying out experiments and observations in meteorology, and that he had generously presented to the Society the sum of £100, to form the nucleus of a research fund.—The President in his valedictory address gave an account of the climate of Southern California. Dr. Williams visited this region in the autumn of 1892, chiefly with a view of investigating its present and future resources and its suitability for invalids.—Mr. R. Inwards was elected President for the ensuing year.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—Jan. 23.—Mr. A. Gilles, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'Tunnels on the Dore and Chisley Railway,' by the late Mr. P. Rickard.

HISTORICAL.—Jan. 18.—Sir M. E. Grant Duff, President, in the chair.—Mr. J. Tempest-Blanch was elected a Fellow.—A paper was read by Major M. A. R. Hume 'On Antonio Peres in Exile,' in which the career of this mysterious adventurer was minutely traced from contemporary State Papers in English and Spanish archives. Major Hume has several new theories with regard to such questions as Don Antonio's complicity in the political murder which compelled him to quit the service of Philip II., his relations with Raex, and the importance attached to his services by the French Court. The conclusions at which Major Hume has arrived in each case are supported by the evidence of original State Papers which he has recently discovered.—The paper was very favourably received by the meeting.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL.—Jan. 15.—Annual Meeting.—Dr. A. W. Copinger in the chair.—The Honorary Secretary, Mr. A. W. Pollard, in his report announced that the number of members had risen to 185; and it was decided that after 210 members had joined there should be no further increase in the numbers of the Society.—It was announced that for the future, instead of the usual postcard supplying notice of meeting, a small news-sheet would be issued to members, containing notes and queries, report of last meeting, &c.—The Council and officers were re-elected, with the addition of Mr. F. Jenkinson, the Cambridge University Librarian.

ASSOCIATION FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF GEOMETRICAL TEACHING.—Jan. 13.—Dr. R. Wormell, President, in the chair.—The report of the Council and the financial report having been read and adopted, the following resolution was passed unanimously: "That a terminal journal of elementary mathematics be published by the Association; that it be entitled 'The Mathematical Gazette,' a terminal journal for students and teachers"; that it be edited by Mr. E. M. Langley.—The following officers and Council were elected for the current year: President, Dr. R. Wormell; Vice-Presidents, B. R. Hayward, R. Levett, Prof. G. M. Minchin, and R. Tucker; Treasurer, Prof. A. Lodge; Hon. Secretaries, B. Holmes and C. Pundelbury; Other Members of Council, Mrs. Bryant, C. V. Coates, H. D. Ellis, W. J. Greenstreet, G. Heppel, Prof. W. H. H. Hudson, E. M. Langley, and Rev. J. J. Milne; Auditor, Prof. McLeod.—The following new Members were elected: Prof. B. Carrara, Messrs. H. Carr, H. H. Frost, R. Holmes, R. G. McKinlay, G. D. Tripp, and C. H. H. Walker.—A note by Mr. W. J. Greenstreet, 'On Herbart's View of the Place of Mathematics in Education,' was read in his absence by Prof. A. Lodge.—A paper 'On the Eccentric Circle of Boacovich' was read by Mr. E. M. Langley.—Mr. T. Wilson read a paper 'On a School Course of Mathematics,' suggesting an early introduction of students to spherical geometry, on account of its bearings on navigation and astronomy.

MARTINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- Mon. London Institution, 1.—Religious, Mosques, Tombs, and Temples of India, Mr. B. W. Frazer.
- Institute of Acton, 7.—The Tabulation of Facts for the Purpose of Investigating the Mortality Experience of Assurance Companies, Mr. Sprague and Mr. J. Meikle.
- Institute of British Architects, 3.
- Royal Academy, 3.—Architecture, Mr. O. Althaus.
- Society of Arts, 6.—The Direction and Measurement of In-Sensible Gas and Vapour in the Air, Lecture II, Prof. V. Gosses (Continued Lecture).
- Geographical, 5.—A Journey through Iceland, Dr. R. Greenman.
- Tue. Royal Institution, 8.—Locomotion and Fixation in Plants and Animals, Prof. C. Sargent.
- Society of Arts, 8.—The Adam Architecture in London, Mr. P. Fitzgerald.
- Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Tunnels on the Dore and Chisley Railway.'
- Anthropological Institute, 14.—The People of Morocco, Mr. J. R. H. Wank.
- Wed. Society of Arts, 8.—California Wines, Mr. C. F. Oldham.
- Thurs. Royal Institution, 8.—South, Canon Alcock.
- London Institution, 6.—Some Optical Phenomena, Mr. A. H. H. Wank.
- Royal Academy, 8.—Architecture, Mr. O. Althaus.
- Geographical, 8.—The Relations of Geography to History, Mr. H. J. Mackinder (Continued Lecture).
- Chemical, 8.—Liberation of Chlorine by the Interaction of Potassium Chlorate and Manganese Dioxide, Prof. McLeod.
- An Examination of some Recent Floating Point Determinations, Mr. A. I. Fowler, 'Note of Polyphosphoric Acid,' Dr. Colby and Mr. H. R. Le Beau, 'New Method of preparing Carbon Tetrachloride,' Dr. Colby.

- Thurs. Linnean, 8.—Morphology of the Podipalpi, Mr. M. Laurie.
- President's Address of the West India, Mr. W. West.
- Antiquaries, 14.
- Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts.—Literary Art of Walter Savage Landor, Mr. W. E. Chubb.
- Fri. Valued Service Institution, 3.—Some Aspects of Coast Defence, Lieut. Col. J. R. J. J. J.
- Geologists Association, 15.—Annual Meeting, President's Address on 'Geology in the Field and in the Study.'
- Architectural Association, 15.—Party Walla, Mr. F. Woodthorpe.
- Civil Engineers, 15.—Survey of the Valley of the Varadar and the Falls of Aardaria in Macedonia, Mr. R. W. B. Campbell (Students Meeting).
- Philological, 8.—The Evolution of Gaelic Grammar, Dr. J. R. C. Gillies.
- Royal Institution, 9.—Reckoning Its Processes and Ideal, Mr. T. J. Colson (Students Meeting).
- Royal Institution, 2.—English Schools of Musical Composition, Prof. W. H. Cummings.

Science Gossip.

The planet Mercury will be at greatest eastern elongation from the sun on the morning of the 26th prox., and will about that time be conspicuous in the evening in the constellation Pisces. Venus ceases to be an evening star early in February, will be in inferior conjunction with the sun on the 16th, and reappear as a morning star towards the end of the month. Mars is at great southern declination in the constellation Scorpio, and will soon pass into Sagittarius; throughout February he will not rise until between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning, and never attain any great elevation in the heavens. Jupiter (after the loss of Venus) will be the principal object in the evening sky, being now due south soon after 6 o'clock in the evening, and even by the end of next month not setting until midnight; he will be in conjunction with the moon on the morning of the 13th. Saturn continues in the eastern part of Virgo, and rises about 11 o'clock in the evening, earlier each night; he will be in conjunction with the moon on the morning of the 24th prox.

THREE small planets have been discovered by M. Charlois at Nice in the present month: two on the 8th and one (probably No. 382) on the 10th inst.

THE forty-seventh annual general meeting of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers will be held on the evenings of Thursday and Friday next at 26, Great George Street, Westminster. The annual report of the Council will be presented on Thursday, and the annual election of the President, Vice-Presidents, and members of Council, and the ordinary election of new members, will take place on the same evening. The President, Dr. W. Anderson, will retire, and will be succeeded by the President elect, Prof. Alexander B. W. Kennedy. On Thursday a paper on the 'Research Committee on Marine-Engine Trials,' by Prof. T. Hudson Beare, will be read and discussed, as far as time permits; and a 'Description of the Grafton High-Speed Steam-Engine,' by Mr. Edward W. Anderson, of Erith, on Friday.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. are going to publish a treatise on the 'Theory of Heat,' by Mr. Thomas Preston, Professor of Natural Philosophy in University College, Dublin. In this work, which is uniform with the same author's 'Theory of Light,' the science of heat is treated both in its experimental and its theoretical aspects. The whole subject has been kept in view rather than the requirements of any particular examination, and in his method of exposition Mr. Preston has endeavoured to interest the general reader as well as the specialist.

FINE ARTS

THE NEW GALLERY.

(Second Notice.)

To Matteo da Siena (1435-95) is ascribed Mr. C. Butler's Virgin and Child (No. 49), a charming illustration of the sweetest mood of Matteo. There is much that is characteristic of him in the dreamy languor of the face of the mother of Christ, on which the artist, who flourished late in his century, and might have known the boy Raphael, expended the best of his powers and sympathies, leaving little of them for the smiling and somewhat inane Child, who is supported on his mother's left arm. In her right hand she holds the model of a church, as if she had most to do with that institution. The features of the Virgin represent a fresh and original type, due to the painter's preference for a certain model, or an ideal which was new, and not a convention, such as was adopted by other artists of the time. It is instructive to turn back from this picture to Benozzo Gozzoli's Virgin and Child (43), which, although a cabinet panel, contains as much of his art and ideals as a huge altarpiece in fresco might exhibit. It is quite different from the Siennese rendering of the same subject, where a sort of archaism is affected by the painter and the figures are set in a flat gold ground. In all the faces in No. 43 are to be observed the highly individualized types of the painter, his noble expressions and new motives; and gay and harmonious colours pervade the piece. Two Scenes from the Life of Christ (42), ascribed to Duccio di Buoninsegna, the 'Call of St. Andrew and Peter' and the 'Raising of Lazarus,' are distinguished by their dignified style. The conceptions and treatment of the subjects are quite as masculine as Masaccio's, and in many ways they illustrate the austere ideas and types of the earlier Siennese masters. Duccio was a younger contemporary of Cimabue, and yet we do not find in these panels the refined Greekish manner and taste of that painter nor Giotto's large sense of style. The art of the early Siennese is markedly distinct from that of the anonymous Florentine painter of the Virgin and Child (44) lent by Mr. Bryon, which, apart from its intrinsic merits, is especially interesting because it shows how readily the members of a school adopted the use of types of form, character, and thought, which became fashionable, so to say, in the ateliers they frequented. Conventions which exercised an irresistible influence were thus established, and this picture pointedly illustrates the tendency of the second-rate painters of Florence to run in grooves and to affect ideas and allusions which everybody understood. For instance, we find, even in this early production, the cardellino and the bitten pomegranate as emblems, as well as the more ancient manner of incising the Virgin's aureole with radiating rays, in order to suggest its lustrous tremulousness. The treatment of nimbi and aureoles in early Italian pictures has occupied some careful antiquaries, who have likewise given attention to the goldsmithery of the crowns and coronets of sacred personages, but the subject has never been worked out. A great deal of good material for studies of this kind is to be found in the pictures before us, but we are not at liberty to do more than call attention to it. Crowns and aureoles of this sort were highly popular among the artists of Pisa. The taste for them they shared with the Siennese, but the spirit was different.

The Virgin and Pope Leo IX. (53) is a most curious and not unbeautiful illustration of Florentine taste, and would be more so if time had not ill-treated it. In 'The Temptation,' the second portion of Two Scenes from the Life of Christ (56), lent by Mr. Benson, there is a great deal of spirit in the gaunt, black silhouette of the Evil One, very shaky in his legs, and much abashed by the majesty of the Saviour, who, in a peremptory way, bids him begone. The glimpses of the spires and fortified palaces of the Italian medieval city at the foot of the group are most curious. Hardly good, or crisply touched, enough for Perellino is the panel called The Story of Joseph (59). The Battle Scene (60) furnishes materials for the study of arms and armour. Christ bearing the Cross (70), by Berna da Siena, is a welcome contribution by Sir F. Leighton. The attitude of the kneeling Dominican in the foreground is true to the life, and the colour of this little gem of a picture by a rare master is most choice. Folio Santo di Luca (71) is a large and fine work, inspired by the grandest motives. The noble figure of the royally draped Christ will remind the connoisseur of the mediæval, quasi-Byzantine Crucifixions in certain Flemish and Lower Rhenish churches, the origin of which traditionally refers to Constantinople and the Crusaders.

Before leaving the South Gallery, we may call attention to Mr. H. Buttery's Virgin and Child (73), by Benvenuto da Siena; No. 77, Pesellino's Story of Joseph (see No. 59); and the amazingly quaint and spirited Saints of the Desert (78), by A. Lorenzetti. It depicts, in a series of detached groups, a number of recluses of the Thebaid, each in his tent, cave, or rude shed or coracle. One of them has harnessed a lion to his wicker cart, and now sits in the vehicle comfortably reading, while his strange steed jogs onwards; another fat old monk is borne along in a palanquin by four stout and perspiring brethren. To one anchorite in a sort of barn a pious rustic gives a loaf; another queer-looking solitary is ensconced on an island of the river; there is a daring monk who rides a crocodile down the rapids; and, lastly, from behind Satan falls upon a negro saint under the palm trees, in the most cowardly manner, with a club. In this painting—one can hardly call it a picture—there are valuable materials for those who desire to study the ways and manners of those anchorites whose holds are still to be found in the towers of certain churches. Several Thebaida, as such paintings as this were called, are still in existence (see No. 79); this is the best of them. A contrast with this strange piece is furnished by Lord Lothian's Coronation of the Virgin (80), an excellent example of Filippo Lippi, and a still greater contrast is Dello Delli's Triumph of Lore (81), which is about as pretty a piece of paganism as one could wish to see. It gives an excellent idea of those costly and ornate processions, or "triumphs," in which the Italians of the middle of the fifteenth century took even more delight than the Germans of the next age did in their imperial processions, such as the 'Triumph of Maximilian,' by Burgkmair, with its 135 prints, illustrated for all time. Of the same class are a number of pictures, formerly the fronts of cassoni, and now in this exhibition, most of which will amply reward attention.

That Lorenzo di Credi painted the portrait of Politian (83), in the West Gallery, is not rashly to be questioned, but as to its representing the famous poet that is quite another matter. Perhaps the bay-leaves and birds of the background suggested the name. It is admirably painted, and in a style more masculine and less smooth than Di Credi usually adopted; it is worth while to compare it in this respect with the 'Virgin and Child,' No. 593 in the National Gallery, a good cabinet example, and the over hard and defined 'Madonna' in the Louvre, No. 117. It seems to have been a matter of course that all painters who were goldsmiths as well worked in a smooth and sculpture-like manner, polishing the surfaces and modelling exhaustively all the forms they depicted; but in this portrait we miss the Leonardesque character Vasari commended in Lorenzo di Credi, who brought the honoured remains of his great master from Venice to S. Ambrogio's in Florence, where they now lie. Vasari's remarks on Di Credi's technique are decidedly curious, but his biographical data are not authoritative. Lorenzo worked in the Medici garden, and might, of course, have painted the portrait of the tutor, who was wont to walk there with a boy Medici leaning on each arm. Ghirlandaio painted "Messer Angelo Poliziano" among other scholars in the Ricci Chapel.

Quite after Mr. Burne-Jones's own heart—indeed, the very prototype of many of his pictures, but, of course, less developed, brilliant, luminous, and well studied—is the large picture in low tints of Hylas and the Naiads (84), which with good reason bears the name of Pietro di Cosimo. There is humour in the design of the nymphs. One of them offers Hylas a little dog, which is surely a quaint conceit; and the curious drawing of the girls confirms what Vasari said of Pietro di Cosimo. A certain rawness and harshness of surface and colouring are observable in this picture as they are in the 'Death of Procris,' No. 638 in the National Gallery, a good specimen of Pietro's manner and cast of mind; but the clumsy joints and some awkwardness in the attitudes, which ought to be elegant and graceful, are especially conspicuous in No. 84. The Story of Cupid and Psyche (85), as told in many scenes delineated on the front of a cassone, may well bear the name of Filippo Lippi, it is so full of beautiful fancy and incidents ingeniously thought out. Few parts of it are more charming than the boy of fair maidens in the handsome car which belongs to a procession, a frequent feature in cassone fronts, because the artists who painted them saw the advantage of filling the lengthy panels with long-drawn lines of figures, and because they could in this way illustrate the processions and masques which celebrated the wedding with which the cassone was connected. The landscape is exceedingly quaint.

A capital example of decorative painting is the Marriage Feast of Perithous and Hippodamia (91). The centaurs attending the guests and the musicians on our left are extremely well delineated. No. 97, the Fight between the Centaurs and the Lapithæ, is the sequel to this design. Both these examples came from the Barker Collection, and were lent by Mr. Austen to the Academy in 1880. It is more than doubtful if Signorelli had anything to do with them, and, good as they are, we fail to see in them that master's masculine style. The Assumption of the Virgin (94), full of romantic and emotional incidents, is attributed to Lorenzo di Bicci. The introduction (as part of the scene imagined by the artist) of a primitive picture of the Crucifixion with a gold ground, and the striking design of flying angels painted within the predella of the larger work, are noteworthy features. The execution is, now at least, a little heavy, but was not so originally, we dare say. Vasari says Lorenzo painted the subject and the incidents usually associated with it, such as the "Cintola," or reception of the girdle by St. Francis, on the façade of the convent of Sta. Croce at Florence. That before us may be an old copy of this mural painting, or the handiwork of Lorenzo's son, Bicci di Lorenzo, an inferior artist, who was quite capable of complications in design such as the introduction of the primitive 'Crucifixion' before us. Although in distemper on a panel, this curious picture has qualities which suggest that its original was painted out of doors and on a larger scale. It is, withal, the work of a mechanic of no great skill.

Lord Battersay's No. 96, ascribed to Filippo Lippi, is another picture of the class represented by No. 44, and it is open to the same remarks. It is a pretty piece, with which No. 102, Virgin and Child, lent by Mr. C. Ionides, may, for critical purposes, be grouped. The last is anonymous here, but it is commonly, we think, ascribed to Lippi; at one time it was attributed to Botticelli. They may all three be by the same hand, and, undoubtedly, they all alike illustrate the tendency of the Florentine School, when it had reached a transitional stage, to fall into grooves and to adopt conventional methods. By the time No. 44 was painted the cardellino and bitten pomegranate had become mere symbols, while the engraved and punctured aureoles before us had become mere patterns of varied device, not less uninspired than the faces of the Virgins, fair as they never fail to be in all the pictures. They owe little to the religious enthusiasm of the painters, and their naturalism, sweet as it is, has no life in it. They were doubtless done to order by very capable hands. Such works are so variously ascribed that we have a print of one (with a background of flowers like that of No. 102) which bears the name of the Aretime Spinello, c. 1316-1408; No. 44 is more safely awarded to the "Florentine School." At Liverpool is a 'Virgin and Child,' curiously like it, which bears, or bore, the name of Botticelli. The Portrait of a Young Man (99), no doubt the work of Pollaiuolo, whose name is attached to it here, depicts a smooth, girl-like face set in a frame of elaborately crimped golden hair, and most exquisitely drawn, with ivory-like carnations, and surface modelling which is marvellous for its finish and skill. In some respects its execution, which is more exhaustive and smooth than that of Pollaiuolo, reminds us of Antonello, who, born a decade and a half later than Pollaiuolo, developed in Italy his laborious training in the Low Countries, and cultivated the brilliance and deep clear tones of John Van Eyck. It has not, however, his sumptuous keenness in character reading. Cosimo Roselli has the credit of having painted the somewhat weak Virgin and Child, with SS. Christina and Catherine (101), but neither in spirit nor skill is it good enough for him. The Virgin and Child (100) is called after Ghirlandaio, but it is rather feeble, and does not affect his types.

The Portraits of Count F. Sassetti and his Son (105), from the Graham Collection, is by Domenico Ghirlandaio, and strongly reminds us of the striking group of portraits of an old man (with a very big nose) and his grandson, No. 1322 in the Louvre. There is the same indifference to beauty for its own sake, a slight taste for exaggeration, not to say caricature, identical handling and flesh painting, and an equal degree of finish in both these highly interesting groups.

MINOR EXHIBITIONS.

No fewer than eight exhibitions have been opened within the last fortnight, and in consequence it is impossible for us to notice any of them except in the briefest terms, although at another season the collection in the Grafton Gallery alone would deserve a greater share of space than we can afford for the whole of them. No doubt a large proportion of the pictures hung in Grafton Street are experiments in representation, more or less unsuccessful, of light and tone, and are deficient in form, solidity, drawing, and refinement. When their authors are wise, they aim at harmonies by means of low keys of tone and colour. But besides Mr. Albert Moore's pictures, there are several of considerable merit. The distinguished Belgian, M. A. Stevens, contributes A Lady (No. 13); a rather uncouth extravaganza, a Little Girl with Doll (82); and also a very superior work, Lady Reading (114). The Tea Rose (29), a damsel in a green jacket, and Fin d'Octobre (58) are characteristic specimens of M. Ducs's painting in its most refined phase, yet they remain parts of pictures only. There is vivacity of expression in Mrs. J. Morley (36), by Mr. T. B. Wirgman; and his Miss E. Walker (38), although slight, is very good in flesh-painting and tone. The Honesty (40) of M. Blanche, a child seated near silvery flowers upon the floor, adequately represents an able tone painter and pastellist. Delightful as ever are the flowers, such as Geraniums (41), of M. Fantin-Latour. In a coarse and effective, but paint-laden way, sunlight on a rippling stream is given in the Bel-Pots (45) of M. E. Claus. See likewise his Sunlight (71), a better instance. Mr. Whistler's Dark Blue and Silver (49), though rather heavier and rougher than usual with him, embodies much of his sympathy for nature, and his rare sense of homogeneous colours and tones in perfect harmony. His Violet and Silver (56), a sea piece, is vigorous and harmonious. The Portrait of T. Simpson, Esq. (50), by M. T. Roussel, will command the attention of artists, and not a little of their regretful admiration. The Model Reclining (52) of M. F. Fehr, a comely girl in a white dress with red sprigs, is most excellent as a piece of light and tone painting in a fresh, harmonious, and bright manner. A dog asleep in sunlight, called The Sentinel (60), by Prof. H. Zügel, of Munich, is more like a rough mosaic than an ordinary picture, still it is decidedly artistic and studious. Two pencil portraits of the Duke of Rutland (67) and Miss V. Tree (69), by the Marchioness of Granby, are finely and tastefully drawn. M. Aublet's Judy (102), a woman bathing in sunlight, will extend his reputation on this side of the Channel. M. L. Frederic's Aurora (132) is an ungraceful design; yet the idea is quaint, and the drawing is amazingly careful and laborious. It is as hard as metal.

A hundred drawings and pictures by Mr. Albert Moore confirm our sense of his rare merits, and his mannerisms seem less aggressive than we feared would be the case. His best things are in the Grafton Gallery, and the visitor cannot but be delighted with the greater number of them. They are so well known that we shall content ourselves with naming the leading works. These are Cartoon in Brown Paper (136), Blossoms (137), which was at the Academy in 1881, both of them fresh, graceful, and good; Seagulls (153), a maiden on a breezy shore; Topaz (154), two girls in white; A Summer Night (155), four draped girls; Shells (157), another shore scene, and the quasi-classic figure of a damsel; A Dressing-Room (168), a maiden binding her hair, charming in all respects; Pomegranates (169), painted in 1865, girls at a cupboard; A Sofa (178), and Apples (179). Elijah's Sacrifice (181), the Israelites bowing before the burning offering, was Albert Moore's first success, and excited the interest of artists in his future, although the Academicians hung it on high in the old North Room at Trafalgar Square. Dancing Girl Resting (184), 1864-5, is what Moore succeeded best in; The Quartette (188) is a famous piece he never surpassed. In the centre of the Sculpture Room is Mr. T. N. Maclean's opus in marble, called Spring Festival (356), after a picture of Mr. Alma Tadema's, which has been admired elsewhere; and in the Octagon Room the same sculptor's very sweet and graceful Iona (349), seated and reading a book.

At the Fine Art Society there are no fewer than three exhibitions, the most important of which consists of water-colour drawings by Miss Kate Greenaway, one hundred and twenty examples such as half Europe and America have delighted in. They are, of course, charming, but as they do not differ from what Miss Greenaway has done before, there is no occasion for us to do more than name the best examples which completely represent the artist. They are the quaint and dainty Little Girl in a Red Coat and Tippet (6); Ball (14), charming groups of children at play; Head of a Boy, which has the sincerity and freshness of life (17a); February, 1894, Almanack (24), a maid leading a child by the hand; By Apple Trees (28), a delicious procession of little children and buxom girls; A Baby (34); A Girl's Head (47), the counterpart of 17a; I took it, part of an Apple-pie Alphabet (58); Drawing for 'Under the Window' (75); Boy with a Basket of Apples (92); and the never-to-be-forgotten Jack and Jill (106). A host of lovely English children prove that Miss Greenaway has lost none of her charm and taste. The manifest disproportions of some of her landscapes containing houses and figures indicate the present limits of her powers. Some of her cottages are rather too much in Mrs. Allingham's vein.—M. A. Parsons's "Drawings in Black and White," which are in the same rooms, are the originals of many clever, fresh, and sympathetic cuts published in magazines and books. They are at once pretty, competent, and interesting.—The Water-Colour Drawings of the Earl of Dunmore, made during his recent expedition in Central Asia, have more topographical than artistic interest. Indeed, the carl does not pretend to be an artist. Nevertheless his sketches give impressive ideas of the immeasurable solitudes which he visited, many of which have never been delineated till now.

In the Egyptian Hall, Dudley Gallery, Piccadilly, Mr. H. Quilter has gathered a considerable number of drawings, pictures, and what he calls studies of landscapes and figures, which show that he has delivered himself into the hands of his enemies, yet, among a number of crudities—some of which are as ugly as anything the New English Art Club has brought to this gallery—there are a few things that deserve welcome, such as The Crest of a Hill (64), The Vale of Lanherne (113), and Evening at Polperro (87). These exhibit an unusual sense of colour, harmony, and wealth of light, while a few others, less sympathetically painted, deserve praise for their composition. On the other hand, the huge canvas, modestly described as "unfinished," at the end of the room (for which Mr. Quilter has gone to the expense of a ponderous black frame, good enough for a Da Vinci), is simply a chaos of queer draughtsmanship, with not a feature or face in harmony with itself. The brushwork is grotesque, and pigments are in direful and dirty confusion. It is supposed to illustrate Rossetti's 'Rose Mary.'

At Mr. Graves's Mr. D. Adams's "Sporting and other Pictures" have been arranged in two handsome rooms. Although some of them are rather roughly and heavily painted, and the purity of many of their tints is not what it might be, the whole exhibit a true feeling for landscape on a large scale, a genuine love of the country, and an uncommon success in seeing strongly the general aspect of his subjects. This collection is sure to reward the visits of sportsmen of all sorts, and the pictures are singularly faithful to the scenes they represent.—At the Japanese Gallery, Mr. T. Ellis has formed a collection of clever water-colour drawings, illustrating "A Summer in Norway," bright, deft, and various, and, on the whole, good enough to mark a considerable advance on the artist's part.—Messrs. Virtue & Co. invite inspection of black and white and other drawings in Fenchurch Street, open to the public from the 29th inst.—At the Goupil Galleries, 5, Regent Street, Pall Mall, a collection of Japanese prints, by native draughtsmen of renown, will be on view next week.

THE NORTH WALL OF CHESTER.

ONE more tombstone has to be added to the long list of Roman inscriptions found along the North City Wall of Chester. The new discovery was made in the course of repairs needed for "Pemberton's Parlour," a tower towards the western end of the North Wall. The stone was found, not, like the majority of earlier finds, in the wall, but in the embankment of earth below its outer face. It is an oblong fragment, 12 in. by 32 in. in size, with three lines of 3-in. letters. It is perfect at the two ends, and probably at the top; but the lower part of the third line is fractured, and there may have been more below. For a sight of the stone and for a squeeze I am indebted to the City Surveyor, Mr. I. Matthews Jones.

Q DOMITIVS
Q P. CLA. OPTAT
VS VIRVNO

Q. Domitius, Q. f(ilius), (Tu(nda) tribu), Optatus, Virvno.....

The reading is certain: in line 1 the final s is worn; in line 2 r is apparently curvive. The man was presumably a member of the Chester garrison, and his birthplace may, perhaps, suggest his legion.

The fact of this inscription being found near the wall at the place where it was found is, perhaps, noteworthy. The North Wall of Roman Chester, so far as it has been traced, does not extend westward beyond Morgan's Mount, the tower next to Pemberton's Parlour on the east side. Indeed, it has been usually thought that the Roman wall here turned south. It is possible that the new find throws this view over. On the other hand, the stone was not found in the wall, and a hole made in the adjacent wall during the repairs revealed no sign of Roman masonry. We may, perhaps, remain in the belief that the west wall of Roman Chester began near Morgan's Mount.

F. HAVENFIELD.

PROF. FLINDERS PETRIE AT COPTOS.

1.

Batnash, Upper Egypt, Jan. 13, 1904.

IN selecting Coptos for the field of his winter's campaign, Prof. Flinders Petrie gives another proof of his strategic talent as a general among the disciplined band of scientific excavators. Tradition points to Coptos as the spot where the Egyptian race first entered the Nile valley. The probabilities are certainly strong that an adventurous tribe from Asia, having reached the western side of the Red Sea, would strike inland from the shore east of Coptos, along the comparatively easy route that would have been known to the primitive inhabitants of the region. Arrived in the fertile land, watered by the great river, a quick-witted and industrious race would at once recognize its splendid capabilities, and thus the ancient civilization of Egypt would be started under conditions most favourable for its future development. Egyptian historians named Hierapolis to be the most ancient city of the empire, but this need not invalidate the claim of Coptos to be the earliest settlement of the first invaders. Hierapolis from its position would naturally become one of the most important centres of the rising civilization; this was shown by its being the seat of the college of priests, and as the historians were members of that body, they would be inclined to exalt the city to which they were attached by the closest of interests.

Besides the possibility of its being the cradle of the earliest known civilization, Coptos has claims to the attention of the student of Egyptian history from its being the point from which the caravans departed that were to bring the precious stones, the spices, the choice woods, the strange animals, and perhaps the images of strange gods, or the knowledge of divine mysteries, from the land of the East. Delicately sculptured bas-reliefs on the Temple of Hathor, now being uncovered by Mr. Naville, place the wonders of this mysterious land vividly before our eyes. Possibly Prof. Petrie may show us some tangible remains of the actual objects or records of the men who conducted the caravans of the illustrious eighteenth dynasty Pharaohs. Coptos appears to have maintained its commercial importance during the periods of the Ptolemies and the Romans. It is the remains of these later times that Prof. Petrie is now laying bare, and they may perhaps occupy the whole of his time during the present season.

H. W.

Five-31 Cossy.

THE press view of the thirty-third annual exhibition of the Glasgow Institute of the Fine Arts is fixed for next Thursday. The evening conversations will be held on the 5th of February.

IT is our duty to record the death last week of Mr. Samuel Bellin, an able engraver, whose best-known plate is the very fortunate transcript from Miss S. Setchel's 'The Momentous Question' we mentioned in our last issue. As he was considerably more than eighty years of age at the time of his death, Mr. Bellin's labours had practically ceased quite a decade ago, when he quitted Camden Town, long a resort of engravers, where he had lived nearly half his life. His plates are exceedingly numerous, and whatever the merits of many of their originals, no doubt most of them were improved by him, as Miss Setchel's masterpiece was. They include 'The Meeting of the Council of the Anti-Corn Law League'; 'Christ and the Woman of Samaria,' after Mr. J. R. Herbert; 'Christ blessing Little Children,' after Mr. M. Claxton; 'The Prince Consort,' after F. Winterhalter; 'The Council of War,' after A. L. Egg; 'Cromwell at Hampton Court,' after C. Lucas; 'Cymon and Iphigenia,' after William Hunt; 'The Discovery,' after Girardet; 'The Gentle Warning,' after F. Stone; 'The Journey to Emmaus,' after Mr. F. Sant; 'Milton composing "Samson Agonistes,"' after Mr. J. C. Horsley; and 'The Salutation of the Aged Friars.' Besides these subjects, and others less noteworthy, Bellin engraved portraits of Sir W. (now Lord) Armstrong, Phillpotts, Bishop of Exeter, Sir C. Fitzroy, and others.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR has been for some time engaged on a book to be called 'The Life of Christ in Art,' or by some similar title, which Messrs. A. & C. Black hope to publish this year. The object of the book, which will be abundantly illustrated, will not be to write a chapter in the history of art, or to enter into technical criticism on the works of the great masters, but to illustrate the manner in which art reflects and expresses the ever changing phases of Christian opinion on religious subjects. The author's intention will, in fact, be to show how great paintings illustrate both the character of the painter and the religious sentiments of the age in which he lived.

MR. W. HOLYOAKE, an artist who twice filled in a highly creditable manner the curatorship of one of the schools of the Royal Academy, died at Hampstead on the 17th inst., aged sixty years, and was buried in Highgate Cemetery. He was a student in the Academy, and since 1858 continued to exhibit there and elsewhere. Among his subjects were 'The Sanctuary' and 'Richard Savage.'

To return to the "Gainsborough," 'Portrait of Queen Charlotte,' No. 99 at Burlington House, let us say that the signature, "Thomas Gainsborough, 1794," is manifestly not an autograph of the artist's, and that he died six years before the date. As we remarked three weeks ago, the 'Portrait of the Hon. Mrs. Thicknesse,' No. 101, represents, we think, not P. Thicknesse's first wife, born Touchet, as the Catalogue says, but his second, Miss Ann Ford, well known in musical circles, who, it is certain, sat to Gainsborough before she married, while there is no record that the Hon. Mary Touchet sat to Gainsborough at all. Let us add that it goes in favour of our suggestion that the portrait shows no wedding ring.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Popular Concerts.
QUEEN'S HALL.—'Pagliacci' and 'Cavalleria Rusticana.'
Bach Choir.

THE present winter musical season is not remarkable for the number of performances, but musicians have so far been fairly well cared for, our record for this week including three or four concerts of more than average interest. There is already abundant evidence to prove that the new Queen's Hall supplies a distinct want in the matter of concert-rooms—the idea generally prevalent at first that the building was not central, and would therefore be inconvenient for amateurs, being erroneous. The interest taken in the performance in concert-room fashion of Leoncavallo's 'Pagliacci' and Mascagni's 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' on Saturday afternoon last week, was remarkable, even taking into regard the curious people who will not enter a theatre, but are eager to hear operatic music without scenic accessories. It is open to question whether a popular oratorio with a strong cast would have drawn such an immense concourse; and the event, therefore, affords further evidence of the correctness of our judgment expressed on previous occasions, namely, that modern operatic works may prove acceptable in the concert-room, because the scenic decoration for which they call is not always supplied satisfactorily in the theatre, and may, therefore, sometimes be advantageously left to the imagination. The executive force on Saturday was strong in all departments, Miss Ella Russell, Miss Grace Damian, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Arthur Oswald, and Mr. Eugene Oudin are artists of high calibre, and the orchestra and chorus were large and efficient. Signor Armando Seppilli proved himself a competent conductor. The performance is to be repeated at an early date.

On the same afternoon, at the Popular Concert, Schubert's Octet was performed for the second time this season, with the same artists as on the previous occasion; and Mendelssohn's Sonata in D for pianoforte and violoncello, Op. 58, was played by Mlle. Ilona Eibenschütz and Signor Piatti. The vocalist, Miss Gwladys Wood, displayed expressiveness and even dramatic force in Handel's air "If guiltless blood," from 'Susannah,' and in Lieder by Schumann and Brahms.—Monday's programme was of a more interesting nature, commencing with Schumann's Quartet in F, Op. 41, No. 2, a work much neglected in consequence of the more attractive qualities of its companion in A minor from the same set, though the Quartet in F has sufficient beauty and originality to commend it to the notice of efficient performers on stringed instruments. The most important feature of the concert, however, was the first performance of a selection of five numbers of Brahms's newly issued Clavierstücke, Ops. 118 and 119. The first set contain four Intermezzi, a Ballade, and a Romanze; and the second, three Intermezzi and a Rhapsodie. On the present occasion the pieces played were the last two named from the first series, and two of the Intermezzi and the Rhapsodie from the second. Though it is a subject for regret that Brahms does not seem inclined to employ his genius any further on works of magnitude, it must be gladly admitted that in genre pianoforte pieces he is still a master. All those heard for the first time on Monday are full of poetic feeling, and one section of the Intermezzo in E minor is exquisitely beautiful. Brahms ranks not far in the rear of Schumann as regards this form of composition. Mlle. Eibenschütz had been asked by the master to interpret his latest utterances, and there can be little question that the excellent young pianist rendered them ample justice. Miss Liza Lehmann sang vocal pieces by "A. L." and Thomé with much charm; and the performance ended with Beethoven's Septet, which was given for the last time this season.

The Bach Choir has ever shown a healthy spirit of eclecticism in its work, and the fact that the great master whose name it bears was not represented at the first concert of the present season, which took place on Tuesday evening, should not entail censure, for at the next performance, on March 15th, his 'St. Matthew' Passion music will be given for the first time in London with the original German text, and the part of the Evangelist will be sustained by Herr Robert Kaufmann, who has acquired a high reputation in his own country in this particular rôle. The concert of Tuesday, however, consisted of a Mass in G by the conductor, Prof. Villiers Stanford, and the Grail scene from Wagner's 'Parsifal.' The first-named work was composed in 1891 and 1892 for the Brompton Oratory, and is dedicated, December, 1892, to Thomas Wingham, who died only three months later. It was first heard at the Oratory on May 26th last year, the feast day of S. Filippo Neri. The Mass, being primarily intended for the church rather than the concert-room, is not laid out on a large scale, each of the several movements being concise, though musicianship of a high class marks every phrase or section. There are some striking key-transitions in the "Kyrie"; some clever and effective fugal passages, without any lengthily developed fugue, in the "Gloria" and the "Credo," in accordance with the procedure of the older masters; and the principal theme of the "Benedictus" is instinct with melodic beauty. These are the most noteworthy points in connexion with the Mass. It was, on the whole, fairly well interpreted by the choir, orchestra, and principal vocalists, the last named being Miss Esther Palliser, Miss Marie Brema, Mr. W. Shakespeare, and Mr. Norman Salmond, the applause being as cordial as could be anticipated, taking into consideration the devotional character of the work. The lengthy excerpt from 'Parsifal' was rendered with impressive effect, Prof. Stanford adopting appropriately slow and judicious tempi, the choir and orchestra showing familiarity with their rather peculiar duties, and Mr. David Bispham, in the part of the guilty knight Amfortas—the only important solo character in this section of Wagner's final music drama—affording ample evidence of his fitness for this class of work. The intimation in the programme that the audience should not leave their seats before the conclusion of the performance was obeyed with strictness. A Bay-reuth assemblage could not have shown closer attention.

Musical Gossip.

THE list of the principal vocalists engaged for the Handel Festival in June next came to hand just too late for mention last week. Although some time-honoured names are conspicuous by their absence, the engagements may be regarded as judicious. The sopranos and contraltos are Mesdames Albani, Anna Williams, Emma Juch, Clara Samuel, Melba, Marian McKenzie, and Clara Butt; and the tenors and basses Messrs. Edward Lloyd, Ben Davies, Norman Salmond, Andrew Black, and Santley.

THE performance of 'The Golden Legend' by the Royal Choral Society at the Albert Hall on Thursday last week was entirely successful, though the list of principal artists might at the first glance have been considered rather weak.

Miss Eather Palliser sang the part of Elsie with girlish charm and artistic refinement; Miss Marian McKenzie, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Andrew Black were all satisfactory, respectively as Ursula, Prince Henry, and Lucifer; and Sir Joseph Barnby's choir once more proved its unapproached excellence in London.

THERE is every likelihood, according to present appearances, that the musical performances at the Imperial Institute will grow in importance. On Wednesday evening this week the pupils of the Royal College of Music gave an orchestral concert in the temporary large hall of the building, and in every sense the entertainment was successful. Under the admirable direction of Prof. Villiers Stanford very meritorious performances were given of Dvorák's fresh and genial Symphony in c, No. 4, Op. 88, Schubert's 'Rosamunde' Overture, and Liszt's 'Rhapsodie Hongroise' in D, No. 2. Mr. Charles Draper evinced much proficiency in Spohr's Clarinet Concerto in c minor, Op. 26, a work of little intrinsic musical interest, though well calculated to display to advantage a student's growing ability. Some measure of promise was also shown by Miss Jessie Scott, soprano, and Mr. Albert Archdeacon, bass, in airs by Gounod.

THE attention of amateurs resident in the southern suburbs of the metropolis may be drawn to the series of concerts arranged by Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch to be given at his residence, "Dowland," Rosendale Road, Dulwich, on Tuesday evenings January 30th, February 13th and 27th, March 6th, April 10th and 24th, May 8th and 22nd, the programmes of which will consist of chamber music by composers of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries.

AN erroneous report was current on Thursday that Madame Marie Rozs was dead. We are happy to be able to state that the gifted artist is in good health, and is at present fulfilling an engagement in the north of the United Kingdom. The statement made in some papers last week that the once admired basso profundo, Herr Rokitanaky, had also paid the debt of nature is equally incorrect, as he is alive and well.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Mon. Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Tues. Mr. Richard Gumpert's Chamber Concert, 8.15, Princess' Hall.
Wed. Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch's Concert, 8.45, Dowland, West Dulwich.
Thurs. London United Concert, 8.30, St. James's Hall.
Fri. Cadogan of the Royal Academy of Music, 8, Imperial Institute.
Sat. Royal Amateur Orchestral Society's Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall.
Sunday. Subscription Concert, 8.30, Princess' Hall.
Day. Popular Concert, 2, St. James's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

HAYMARKET.—'The Charlatan,' a Play of Modern Life in Four Acts. By Robert Buchanan.

ROYALTY.—'A Gauntlet,' in Three Acts. From the Norwegian of Björnsterne Björnson. By Osman Edwards.

HYPOCRITISM cannot be said to play a part in our daily lives sufficiently active to justify us in looking upon Mr. Buchanan's new drama as in any sense an actuality. That men cannot by force of will lure high-born maidens from their warm beds at dead of night to wander in their night-clothes through corridors and along ramparts, and finally to take refuge in the arms of their lovers or tormentors, is, it may be held, a subject for congratulation. Mr. Buchanan's hero has, like the second murderer in 'The Babes in the Wood,' a soft spot somewhere in his heart, and does not carry out in their entirety the designs he has formed. Another gentleman under similar conditions might not be subject to the same scruples, so, on the whole, frequent repetition of the experiment is hardly to be recommended. Philip

Woodville, a gentleman of mixed English and Parsee birth, has met in India Isabel Arlington, niece to a peer and daughter of a colonel, an ardent explorer of Central Asia. After exercising over her some mesmeric influence, he follows her to England, and succeeds in forcing his way into her uncle's house. Here, with the aid of a confederate of the common adventures type, he contrives to play upon the heroine and Lord Wanborough some hanky-panky tricks of so-called spiritualism by which they are greatly impressed. Though on the point of marriage with a young nobleman of Cabinet rank, Isabel cannot resist the too captivating Eurasian, who on the eve of his departure bids her come to his room. Sleeping and unconscious, she does his bidding, and in her night-dress enters with stealthy step his room. He locks the door behind her and gloats in imagination over his approaching triumph, while

She sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
 Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

The guardians of innocence watch over her. In answer to his queries, she avows her love for him with a sincerity and outspokenness that conquer his nature. A better self, undreamed of until now, arises and asserts itself, converting the wolf into a watch dog. Not only does he dismiss her, he finds for her means of escape when the door through which she entered is beleaguered. Going further still, he makes open avowal of his infamy and promises to pass away from her mind. Not wholly to the taste of Isabel is this scheme. Her objections to his methods of wooing are less serious than his, and she is inclined to regard his views as a trifle squeamish. Philip is inexorable, however. He will not marry her unless he is worthy of her, and she reluctantly allows him to go, hoping that he will not be too long in the discharge of his self-imposed and somewhat superfluous task. This is but an outline of his plot, in the filling up of which Mr. Buchanan is seen to more advantage than might be expected from its tenuity. The change of purpose on the part of the hero inspires no very active faith, and the future of a girl ready to link herself with a man such as he has shown himself is none of the brightest. The subordinate characters are, however, brightly sketched, some scenes of comic wooing are particularly telling, and the pictures of ecclesiastics and scientists are excellent. Much of Mr. Buchanan's dialogue is clever. Thus, though the piece is neither very sympathetic nor very healthy, it is likely to be a success. Mrs. Tree has not been seen to greater advantage than as the hypnotized heroine, and Mr. Tree gives a superb presentation of Woodville. Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Nutcombe Gould, Mr. F. Kerr, Mr. C. Allan, Mr. Holman Clark, Miss Lily Hanbury, and Miss Gertrude Kingston contribute to the acceptance of the piece. Some of the characters are equally humorous and lifelike.

In its English dress Björnson's play seems unworthy of the reputation which preceded its arrival. It is more uncomfortable in subject than any work of Ibsen with which we are acquainted, and exaggerates, almost to the point of caricature, the provincialism with which Ibsen is rebuked. It is in many respects inadequate, and in all respects inconclusive. With the exception of the heroine, with the pretty name of Svava, Björnson's characters are all unpleasant and unacceptable. We scarcely know which is most so: Ries, a brigand without humour or distinction; Mrs. Ries, an elderly Niobe with a touch of Xantippe; or the Christensens, father and son, with their vulgar pharisaism and cynicism. Our Norwegian dramatists display, indeed, a most "plentiful lack of wit" and of humour, dwelling upon trivialities, and furnishing an absolute apotheosis of the commonplace. Miss Annie Rose's Svava was the best "creation" that lady has given us. Mr. George Hawtrey and Mr. W. A. Elliot were seen to advantage. The piece proved a failure, and the theatre has subsequently closed.

Dramatic Gossip.

IN addition to the particulars supplied last week as to the forthcoming revival at the Garrick of 'Casto,' we may say that Miss May Harvey will play Polly Eccles, Miss Rose Leclercq the Marquise, and Mr. Abingdon, Capt. Hawtree. The cast, it is thus seen, will be wholly different from any previously assigned the play.

MR. TOOLE is, we regret to say, once more disabled by his old enemy gout.

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS is now recovered from the serious attack of illness which all but disabled him during the production of the Drury Lane pantomime.

THE Cambridge Review says that, although no definite decision has been come to, it seems pretty certain that a Greek play will be performed in the University next Michaelmas term.

MR. JEROME K. JEROME's 'Sunset,' which has previously been seen in London, constitutes an attractive lever de rideau at the Opéra Comique. It is tender and touching, and furnishes room for some pretty acting. Miss Mary Kingsley, Miss May Nolon, and Mr. Lionel Wallace take part in a satisfactory performance.

'PENELOPE,' a musical rendering of the old Adelphi farce 'The Area Belle,' created some amusement as an afterpiece at the Royalty. Miss Kate Santley played the heroine with vivacity, and was well supported by Mr. George Hawtrey and Mr. Little.

IN the course of a short speech at the close of the first performance of 'The Charlatan' Mr. Tree stated that his next novelty would consist of 'The Talisman,' an adaptation of a dramatic fairy tale in four acts, by Ludvig Fulda.

MR. HADDON CHAMBERS is engaged upon a new comedy, to be given at the Criterion by Mr. Charles Wyndham.

A DRAMA by Mr. Sutton Vane, which will probably be entitled 'A Cotton Lord,' will, it is understood, be the next novelty at the Adelphi.

IT is stated that the memorial statue in Glasnevin Cemetery, Dublin, in honour of Mr. Barry Sullivan will be unveiled by Mr. Henry Irving when he returns from his American tour.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—R. F. K. S. J.—M. J. & Co.—A. J. C.—A. P. S.—C. A. & Co. J. D. D.—J. G.—T. R.—A. B.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST. To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	15	6
For Six Months...	7	8
For all Countries within the Postal Union.
For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months...	9	0

STANDARD WORKS FOR THE LIBRARY.

PUBLISHED BY RICHARD BENTLEY & SON.

Prof. MOMMSEN'S HISTORY of ROME to the TIME of AUGUSTUS. Translated by Dr. DICKSON. The Popular Edition. In 4 vols. crown 8vo. 46s. 6d.

* Also sold separately as follows:—Vols. I. and II., 21s.; Vol. III., 10s. 6d.; Vol. IV., 15s.

The ROMAN PROVINCES. Being the History of Rome from Cæsar to Diocletian. By Prof. MOMMSEN. Translated by Rev. P. W. DICKSON. 2 vols. 8vo. with Maps, 36s.

The HISTORY of ROMAN CLASSICAL LITERATURE. By R. W. BROWNE, M.A. Ph.D., late Prebendary of St. Paul's and Professor of Classical Literature in King's College, London. A New Edition. 1 vol. demy 8vo. 9s.

The HISTORY of ANTIQUITY. From the German of Prof. MAX DUNCKER. By EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D., of Balliol College, Oxford. In 6 vols. demy 8vo. Each Volume can be obtained separately, 21s.

The HISTORY of the RISE and PROGRESS of the ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. By Sir EDWARD CREASY, late Chief Justice of Ceylon. A Popular Account of the Primary Principles and Formation and Development of the English Constitution, avoiding all Party Politics. Fourteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

DEAN HOOK: his Life and Letters. Edited by the Rev. W. R. W. STEPHENS, Vicar of Woolbeding, Author of 'Life of St. John Chrysostom,' &c. The Popular Edition. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Index and Portraits, 6s.

BISHOP THIRLWALL'S LETTERS to a FRIEND. Edited by the late Dean STANLEY. A much Enlarged Edition. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with a Portrait, 6s.

The LIVES of the ARCHBISHOPS of CANTERBURY. By WALTER FARQUHAR HOOK, late Dean of Chichester. ST. AUGUSTINE to JUXON. 12 vols. demy 8vo. 9l. Each separately (with the exception of III., IV., VI., and VII.), 15s. The New Series begins with Vol. VI. Vol. XII. is the Index.

The HEAVENS. By AMÉDÉE GUILLEMIN. In demy 8vo. with over 200 Illustrations, 12s.

The LIFE of MARY, QUEEN of SCOTS. From the French of M. MIGNET. By ANDREW SCOBLE. With 2 Portraits. 6s.

The LIFE of OLIVER CROMWELL. From the French of M. GUIZOT. By ANDREW SCOBLE. Crown 8vo. with 4 Portraits, 6s.

The HISTORY of the THIRTY YEARS' WAR. From the German of ANTON GINDELY. By Professor TEN BROOK. In 2 vols. large crown 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations, 24s.

The LETTERS of HORACE WALPOLE, Fourth Earl of Orford. Edited by PETER CUNNINGHAM, F.S.A. In 9 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 5l. 5s.

The HISTORY of the GREAT FRENCH REVOLUTION. From the French of M. THIERS. By FREDERICK SHOBERL. With 41 Fine Engravings and Portraits of the most Celebrated Personages referred to in the Work, engraved on Steel by William Greatbach. In 5 vols. demy 8vo. 36s.

The FIFTEEN DECISIVE BATTLES of the WORLD. By Professor CREASY. Library Edition, in demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.; also a Cheap Edition, for Use in Schools, in crown 8vo. canvas cloth, 1s.

MEMOIRS of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. By FAUVELET DE BOURRIENNE, Private Secretary to the Emperor. Edited by Colonel PHIPPS. 4 vols. demy 8vo. 36s.

The NAVAL HISTORY of GREAT BRITAIN. By WILLIAM JAMES. In 6 vols. crown 8vo. with numerous Portraits on Steel, 42s.

The PRIVATE LIFE of MARIE ANTOINETTE. With Sketches and Anecdotes of the Courts of Louis XIV., XV., and XVI. By JEANNE LOUISE HENRIETTE CAMPAN, First Lady-in-Waiting to the Queen. A New and Annotated Edition. In crown 8vo. 4s., with a Portrait.

The LIFE of LORD PALMERSTON. By the Hon. EVELYN ASHLEY, M.P. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece to each Volume, 12s.

The FRENCH HUMOURISTS, from the Twelfth to the Nineteenth Century. By WALTER BESANT, M.A., Christ's Coll. Camb., Author of 'Studies in Early French Poetry,' &c. 8vo. 15s.

A MEMOIR of the Rev. JOHN RUSSELL, of Tordown, North Devon. By the Author of 'Dartmoor Days,' 'Wolf hunting in Brittany,' &c. In crown 8vo. with a Portrait, 6s.

RECOLLECTIONS of a LITERARY LIFE. By MARY RUSSELL MITFORD. In crown 8vo. with Portrait, 6s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON'S LIST.

A SEVENTH and CHEAPER EDITION of Mr. FRANKFORT MOORE'S New Novel,

A GRAY EYE OR SO,
in crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s., will be ready immediately.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

By "IOTA."

A YELLOW ASTER. In 3 vols. (Next week.

By HELEN PROTHERO-LEWIS.

HOOKS OF STEEL. In 3 vols. By the Author of 'A Lady of my Own,' 'Her Heart's Desire,' &c. (Ready.

By ADA CAMBRIDGE.

A MARRIAGE CEREMONY. In 2 vols. By the Author of 'A Little Minx,' 'Not All in Vain,' &c. (Next week.

By the Hon. Mrs. HENNIKER.

OUTLINES. By the Author of 'Foiled,' 'Sir George,' &c. Printed on antique laid paper, with Title-Page designed by J. Reffitt Oldfield, and a Photogravure Portrait of the Author. Dedicated to Thomas Hardy. In crown 8vo. gilt, 6s.

HUTCHINSON'S SELECT NOVELS.

In crown 8vo. handsome cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

The TRAGEDY of IDA NOBLE. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. With 41 Illustrations by Everard Hopkins. (This week.

The Times says:—"Mr. Clark Russell has never written a better novel than 'The Tragedy of Ida Noble.'"

The STORY of an AFRICAN FARM. By OLIVE SCHREINER. (Seventy-third Thousand.

The CUCKOO in the NEST. By Mrs. OLIPHANT. With Illustrations by G. H. Edwards. (Sixth Edition this day.

The Athenæum says:—"Mrs. Oliphant's most successful novel."

SIXTH EDITION.

I FORBID the BANNS. By the Author of 'A Gray Eye or So.' In cloth gilt, 6s.

The Athenæum says:—"So racy and brilliant a novel."

SECOND EDITION.

DAIREEN. A South African Novel. By the Author of 'A Gray Eye or So.' In cloth gilt, 6s.

The Morning Post says:—"Daireen" is indeed a fine story, remarkably original and well constructed."

London: HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster-row.

NEW BOOK by the AUTHOR of 'OBITER Dicta.'

The FIRST EDITION has been exhausted within a few days of Publication, and a SECOND EDITION will be issued immediately.

In foolscap 8vo. tastefully printed, and bound in olive cloth, uniform with 'Obiter Dicta,' price 5s.

50 Large-Paper Copies only, price 21s. net, of which only Two or Three are left.

ESSAYS ABOUT MEN, WOMEN, AND BOOKS.

By AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Q.C. M.P.

Contents.

SWIFT.	JOHN GAY.
BOLINGBROKE.	BOOKS: OLD and NEW.
STERNE.	BOOKBINDING.
JOHNSON.	POETS-LAUREATE.
RICHARD CUMBERLAND.	PARLIAMENTARY CANDIDATES.
ALEXANDER KNOX and THOMAS DE QUINCY.	THE BONA-FIDE TRAVELLER.
HANNAH MORE.	HOURS in a LIBRARY.
MARIE BASHKERTSEFF.	FREE QUOTATIONS.
SIR JOHN VANBRUGH.	AUTHORS and CRITICS.
ROGER NORTH'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

Some Opinions of the Press.

"Mr. Augustine Birrell is always good company. Unlike some living writers who might be named, he is always himself, and the self is so sure, so aircrew, so vivacious, that this fidelity to it suffices to make his books delightful." Daily Chronicle.

"Very sprightly and facile are all the various judgments which he passes on the men and women included in this volume."—Daily Telegraph.

"These essays have a charming individuality of manner, not self-conscious and affected, but spontaneous, or if artificial, artificial with the art which conceals art. It is when discoursing of bookish matters that Mr. Birrell is at his best. He has the faculty of enjoying greatly and yet of tolerating the enjoyment of others."—Globe.

"A bright, amusing, scholarly, wise, and genial little book."—Echo.

"Cruel to no one, Mr. Birrell yet finds a wide field of useful, humorous, and entertaining research open to him in these brief studies. He shares with the Great Lexicographer of Fleet-street the spring of boundless anecdote and allusion that bubbles up spontaneously to fertile speech and make thought fresher and greener. His essays are a liberal education in the way to read books. No man can be long in his company without feeling a sense of an increased horizon." Morning Leader.

"These essays show all Mr. Birrell's best qualities of judgment and of style. He is always interesting, always informing, and his pages are lit up with a pleasant glow of good-natured humour. Will delight all lovers of literature." North British Daily Mail.

"The well-known style, lightness of touch, the pretty humour, and the occasional saying of 'good things' one after the other until you wonder where they will stop, are all here."—Nottingham Daily Mail.

"These delightful essays are not less fresh than the 'Obiter Dicta,' and perhaps that is the best thing that can be said of them; for how few authors whose prime gift is humour can maintain the impression of the first book that brought them acquainted with the great public."—Spectator.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London.

J. M. DENT & CO.'S LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

Published this day.

LANDOR'S LONGER PROSE WORKS. Edited by T. G. CHURCH. Vol. II. with index to the complete Works by T. G. CHURCH.

THE ABOVE VOLUME COMPLETES

The WORKS of WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR. Edited by T. G. CHURCH. With Photogravure Frontispiece to each Volume. 10 vols. large crown 8vo 36s. net, or separately, as follows:—

IMAGINARY CONVERSATIONS. 6 vols. 21s. net.

POEMS. 2 vols. 7s. net.

LONGER PROSE WORKS. 2 vols. 7s. net.

"The edition of Walter Savage Landor's 'Imaginary Conversations' which Mr. Charles Dumas is now issuing through the press is all the fastidious reader and readers of Landor are apt to be fastidious—on demand."—Speaker.

"This edition will bear a distinct resemblance to the form in which one of the greatest writers of the Victorian age ought abidingly to appear."—St. James's Gazette.

"Messrs. Dent & Co.'s delightful edition."—Athenæum.

"A model of its kind."—Daily Graphic.

"Complete editions of this classical work are rare in the market, and there is none with such an editorial equipment as a reader of to-day needs. Mr. Church's edition thus takes a place of its own."—Spectator.

"A very few large Paper Copies on Hand-made Paper have been reserved for sale in complete sets, the price of which may be obtained from the booksellers."

LYRICS and BALLADS of SIR WALTER

SCOTT. Edited with an Essay by ANDREW LANG, with Three Etchings by Harry G. Webb. Fcap 8vo 5s. net.

"Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. have sent out a daintily printed edition of 'The Lyrics and Ballads of Sir Walter Scott.' The poems are admirably edited by Mr. Andrew Lang, with hand-notes like those in his 'Ballads of Burns,' and with an introduction which gives a temperate estimate of the value of Scott's poetry in general. The book is well printed and has a few good illustrations."—Edinburgh.

"There are little large Paper Copies on Hand-made Paper, price of which may be obtained from the booksellers."

Just ready.

WINDFALLS of OBSERVATION for the EDIFICATION of the YOUNG and the SOLACE of OTHERS. By EDWARD SANDFORD MARTIN. Crown 8vo 3s. 6d. net.

Just ready.

XENOPHON'S ART of HORSEMANSHIP. Translated, with Chapters on the Greek Riding-horn and with Notes, by MORRIS R. MORRIS. With 16 reproductions of illustrations of the Horse in Classic Art. Crown 8vo 2s. 6d. net.

J. M. DENT & Co. Aldine House, Great Eastern-street, London, E.C.

In an entirely New Form, price Half-a-Crown Monthly.

THE PORTFOLIO.

Edited by P. G. HAMERTON.

The PORTFOLIO will in future be published in a smaller and more handy form, and will consist of about 80 pages. It will contain 4 Plates and many minor Illustrations. Each number will be a Monograph on some Artistic subject.

The Subject for FEBRUARY is MALTA and the KNIGHTS HOSPITALERS.

By Rev. W. K. R. BEDFORD.

With 4 Copper-Plates and many minor Illustrations.

Of the January Number, The ETCHINGS of REMBRANDT, by Mr. Hamerton, the Spectator says:—"It is difficult to say enough in praise of this excellent piece of work."

Prospectus may be had on application.

SHIRLEY & Co., Limited, Essex-street, Strand.

ROUTLEDGE'S HEARTH AND HOME LIBRARY.

Messrs. GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS beg to announce that under the above title they are issuing

AN ENTIRELY NEW SERIES OF COPYRIGHT AND NON-COPYRIGHT NOVELS,

Well printed on good paper, and strongly bound in cloth, bevelled boards, with gilt tops.

THE FOLLOWING ARE NOW READY:—

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. The PICKWICK PAPERS. Charles Dickens. | 6. The INGOLDSBY LEGENDS. Rev. R. H. Barham. |
| 2. VANITY FAIR. W. M. Thackeray. | 7. The LAST of the MOHICANS. J. F. Cooper. |
| 3. ALTON LOCKE. Charles Kingsley. | 8. CHARLES O'MALLEY. Charles Lever. |
| 4. HARRY LORREQUER. Charles Lever. | 9. SKETCHES BY BOZ. Charles Dickens. |
| 5. The THREE MUSKETEERS. Alexandre Dumas. | 10. SHIRLEY. Charlotte Brontë. |
| | 11. CHRISTMAS BOOKS. Charles Dickens. |
| | 12. GUY LIVINGSTONE. G. Lawrence. |
| 13. STEPPING HEAVENWARD. E. Prentiss. | 19. BARREN HONOUR. G. Lawrence. |
| 14. AUNT JANE'S HERO. E. Prentiss. | 20. KISSING the ROD. Edmund Yates. |
| 15. MELBOURNE HOUSE. E. Wetherell. | 21. HOME INFLUENCE. Grace Aguilar. |
| 16. The WIDE, WIDE WORLD. E. Wetherell. | 22. MACAULAY'S MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS. |
| 17. QUEECHY. E. Wetherell. | 23. BUNYAN'S PILGRIM'S PROGRESS. |
| 18. Derval HAMPTON. James Grant. | 24. DAVID COPPERFIELD. Charles Dickens. |
| 25. WUTHERING HEIGHTS and AGNES GREY. E. and A. Brontë. | 30. STORIES FROM SCOTLAND YARD. |
| 26. JOY. M. Crommelin. | 31. BREAKING a BUTTERFLY. G. Lawrence. |
| 27. The FORSAKEN INN. A. K. Green. | 32. BROKEN to HARNESS. Edmund Yates. |
| 28. A DIPLOMAT'S DIARY. Julien Gordon. | 33. OLIVER TWIST. Charles Dickens. |
| 29. The LETTER BAG of the GREAT WESTERN. Sam Slick. | 34. TWO BY TRICKS. Edmund Yates. |
| | 35. SANS MERCI. G. Lawrence. |
| | 36. BEHIND CLOSED DOORS. A. K. Green. |

Trade Terms will be sent on application to the Publishers,

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, LIMITED, London, Manchester, and New York.

Now ready, 6 vols. half bound, 30s. 3d.
A DICTIONARY OF ECONOMIC PRODUCTS of INDIA. By GEORGE WATT, M.B. CM. C.I.R. F.R.S., &c.
 Reporter on Economic Products with the Government of India.
 (Published under Authority of the Government of India.)
 London: W. H. Allen & Co., Limited, 13, Waterloo-place, Publishers to the India Office.

Just out, with 4 Full-Page Photo-cuts, price 3s. 6d.

THE MONASTERY OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE (GRENOBLE, FRANCE).

By a CARTHUSIAN MONK.

English Edition. Abridged from the French.

Gives the History of the Grande Chartreuse, the cradle of that great Religious Order the Carthusians, founded in 1084 by St. Bruno of Cologne, Canon of Rheims, and describes the mode of life led by the Monks.

London: Burns & Oates, Limited, 38, Orchard-street, W.; and 33, Paternoster-row, E.C.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.' A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies. The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion. We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."

Liverpool Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis. As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A fascinating page of literary history."

Illustrated London News.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."

Manchester Examiner.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified. The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."

Bookseller.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
 New Burlington-street, W.,
 Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

"LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'"—Edinburgh Review.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or Newsagent in England, price 4d.; or free by post to the Continent, 4½d.

Subscription, 10s. 3d. for Six Months; 20s. 6d. for Twelve Months, including postage.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN AND GENERAL READERS.

The Sixth Series of NOTES AND QUERIES, complete in 12 vols. price 10s. 6d. each Volume, contains, in addition to a great variety of similar Notes and Replies, Articles of Interest on the following Subjects:—

English, Irish, and Scottish History.

The Plagues of 1605 and 1635—Wolves in England—Prices in the Middle Ages—Executions of 1745—The "Moor" Plot—Episcopacy in Scotland—English Roman Catholic Martyrs—Hereward the Wake—Hiding-Places of Charles II.—Where did Edward II. die?—Battle between Armies of Gustavus and Boadicea—William III. at the Battle of the Boyne—The Green Bag—Confidential Letters to James II. about Ireland—Anne Boleyn's Heart—Hubert de Burgh—Henry Martin the Begliote—Lord Munsy and the Lincolnshire Rebellion.

Biography.

Louis de Cambronne—Thomas Bell—Cromwell—William Penn—W. G. W. Gwynne—Coleridge—Curll the Bookseller—Sir John Choke—Gibson, Bishop of London—Thorpe the Architect—Sir Richard Whittington—Charles Wolfe.

Bibliography and Literary History.

Shakespeareans—Chap-Book Notes—"Adverse Fictiles"—"The Land of the Lost"—John Gilpin—Raynard the Fox—"Lead, kindly Light"—Rabelais—London Publishers of 18th Century—The Welsh Testament—The Libraries of Balliol, All Souls, Brasenose, and Queen's Colleges, Oxford—Key to "Endymion"—Early Roman Catholic Magazines—Stuart Literature—The Libraries of Eton, and Trinity College, Cambridge—"Dame Europe"—Bibliography—Unpublished Letters of Dr. Johnson—"Book of Ages"—Eikon Basilike Deutera—William of Tyre—Bibliography of Skating—"The Book"—Notes on the "Religio Medici"—Authorship of the "Imitatio"—Tristram Shandy—Critical Notes of Charles Lamb.

Popular Antiquities and Folk-lore.

Slavonic Mythology—Folk-lore of Leprosy—Lyons-thrope—North Italian Folk-lore—Friday unlucky for Marriage—West Indian Superstitions—"Milky Way"—Folk-lore of Birds—Feather Superstition—Medical and Funeral Folk-lore.

Poetry, Ballads, and Drama.

The Drama in Ireland—"Tom Jones" on the French Stage—"Auld Robin Gray"—"Harpings of Lena"—MR. of Gray's "Elegy"—The "Mystery" of S. Pantheon—Roger's "Pleasures of Memory"—"Blue bonnets over the Border"—Swift's Verse on his own Death—Tennyson's "Palace of Art"—Ballad of "William and Margaret"—The Australian Drama—Poem by J. M. Keble—Shelley's "Ode to Most Blanc"—Hymns by Chas. Wesley—"Cross Purposes"—Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women"—"Logie" of Buchan.

Popular and Proverbial Sayings.

"To rule the roost"—"Licked into shape"—"Bosh"—"Joining the majority—Up to snuff"—"To the bitter and"—"Conspicuous by his absence—Play old Gooseberry"—"The grey mare is the better horse"—"Bred and born—Drunk as David's sow—Cut off with a shilling—Tin—money—Getting into a scrape."

Philology.

Tennis—Puzzle—Rickets—American Spelling—Smob—Jolly—Boycotting—Argosy—Jennet—Bedford—Maiden in Place—names—Deck of Cards—Masher—Balfry—Brag—Bulrush—Tram—Hearse—Whitting—Boat-order—Boom—At bay.

Genealogy and Heraldry.

The Arms of the Popes—Courtesy Titles—Rolls of Arms—Book-plates—Earldom of Mar—Arms of the Sea of York—Fitzhardinges of Berkeley—Heraldic Differences—Barony of Valentines—Colonial Arms—Earldom of Ormonde—The Violet in Heraldry—Arms of Vasco da Gama—Seal of the Temple—Earldom of Suffolk.

Fine Arts.

Hogarth's only Landscape—The "Hours" of Raphael—Rubens's "Daniel and the Lions"—Early Oil-paints—Retouching—Portraits of Byron—Voltaire and his Works—Taddei's Medallions—Copley's "Attack on Jersey."

Ecclesiastical Matters.

The Revised Version—Pulpits—The Episcopal Wig—Vestments—Temporal Power of Bishops—Master Sepulchres—Canonisation—The Basilican Rite—The Scottish Office—Fulcan Bishop—Seventeenth Century "Indulgence"—The "Month's Mind"—Clergy hunting in Scotland—The Irish Hierarchy—Libraries in Churches—Lambeth Degrees—Fifteenth Century Book-covers—Franciscans in Scotland—Bishops of Dunkeld—Prayer-Book Rule for Easter—Par Tippets—The Church in the Channel Isles—Metrical Psalms—Order of Administration.

Classical Subjects.

"Perit Salsus"—Roman Arithmetic—The Alaster of Augustus—"Acorus Mercard"—"Vesuvius" in Georgics, Bk. 178—Oppian—Juvenal's Satire II.—Transliteration of Bk. I.—Aristophanes' "Bans"—Simplicius on Epicurus—Tablet of Cebes—Imitative Verse—"Pelle quem facient," &c.

Topography.

Grub-street—Porta del Popolo—"Turk's Head" Signio—The Old Corner of St. Paul's Cathedral—Thames Embankments—Statue in Brasenose Quadrangle—Middle Temple Lane—Ormond-street Chapel—Roman Villa at Sandown—Ashburnham House—Carew Castle—Rushon Hall, Woottonbassett—Walton House.

Miscellaneous.

Christian Names—Election Colours—Buried Alive—O. K.—"Ladies' Club"—Eodones—Berkeley-square Mystery—Wife Sailing—The Telephone—Scrutin de Liste—Crocodile's Tears—Jingo—The Gipsies—Hell-Fire Club—Tarot—Tobacco in England—Sea Stokness unknown to the Ancients—Names of American States—Curcates—Female Soldiers and Sailors—Mistletoe—Giants—Jewesses and Wigs—Memories of Trafalgar—Green Eyes—Beaumont-tages—Secret Chambers in Ancient Houses—The Bonaparte-Falstove Marriage—Ace of Spades—Wig Curiers—Female Churchwardens—The Opal—House of Keys—Church Registers—Arm-in-arm—E. O.—Napoleon—Legacy to Cantillon.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

Now ready (Hampden), New Series, No. 128.
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for FEBRUARY, containing MATTHEW AUSTIN By W. E. Morris Chaps 5-9
 —WINTER ARMY—HIND PURSING—AN EPISCOPAL SCANDAL
 —A MALAGASY FOLK—WITH EMBROIDERED TROUSERS—
 London: Smith, Elder & Co. 15, Waterloo-place.

Now ready, No. 9, JANUARY.
THE ESSEX REVIEW: an Illustrated Quarterly.
 Edited by E. A. FITCH, C.C. F.L.S. This Number, which commences a new Volume, contains:—Memorials (with Portraits) of Edward Charlesworth, F.G.S., and H. W. King, of Leeds.
 Price 1s. 6d. net, or 1s. 9d. per copy, 5s. yearly.
 "A very conducted and interesting."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1904
 Chelmsford: Edmund Durrant & Co. London: T. Fisher Unwin

SHALL OUR BONS EMIGRATE? By ARNOLD WHITE.
 His
CASSELL'S MAGAZINE for FEBRUARY,
 price 5s. 6d. net.
 Amongst the principal contents are—
 The PARLIAMENTS of the WORLD By Alfred F. Robbins. Illustrated.
 ROYAL ALTHORNS and THEIR BOOKS. By E. Maynard Leonard.
 With Illustrations.
 A NIGHT on a LIGHTSHIP. By Herbert Russell. Illustrated.
 SHALL OUR BONS EMIGRATE?—YES. By Arnold White NO. By "A Day-at-Sea."
 SERIAL STORIES
 THE SLEEVES of CARR. By C. E. C. Wainwright. Illustrated.
 MARGARET'S WAY. By Annie E. Widdham. Illustrated.
 THE GATHERER. Latest Records of Discovery and Invention.
 WHAT to WEAR. Chat-Chat on Dress. By A. L. G. et al. Illustrated.
 SHORT STORIES
 By J. Hall Richardson, Edith E. Caswell, &c.

CASSELL'S MAGAZINE, says the Times, contains—
 "CHRIST REHABILITATED."
 "CAPITAL ILLUSTRATIONS."
 "EXCELLENT SHORT STORIES."
 "LATEST RECORDS OF INVENTION."
 "PICTURESQUE SOCIAL SKETCHES."
 "PAPERS on ATHLETICS."
 "STRIKINGLY VARIED CONTENTS."
 "USEFUL INFORMATION."
 "VALUABLE ARTICLES on HEALTH."
 NEW VOLUME JUST COMMENCED. Monthly, 1s.
 Cassell & Company, Limited, and all Booksellers.

THE HUMANITARIAN.
 Edited by VICTORIA WOODHULL MARTIN.
 Now ready, FEBRUARY. Price 5s. 6d. net.
 HEREDITY and PRE-NATAL INFLUENCES. An Interview with Dr.
 Alfred Russel Wallace. With Portrait.
 THE EVOLUTION of GOVERNMENT. The Editor.
 THE ANTI-OPIMUM LEAGUE. Surgeon-General Sir William Moore,
 K.C.B.
 THE STORY of the WOMEN'S TRADES UNION LEAGUE. The Rev.
 Stephen Brooks, M.A.
 THE SCHOOL SYSTEM of the FUTURE. The Rev. J. Rice Pryor, M.A.
 THE CASE of the NIKOTIN. Miss Edith Maryn.
 PARALLELISM (Short Story). Frank Theobald.
 NOTES and COMMENTS. W. H. Wilson.
 REVIEW. ("Woman, Church, and State.")
 CORRESPONDENCE and OPEN COLUMN.
 Swan Sonnenschein & Co. Paternoster-square, E.C.

2s. 6d. post free,
ON FISTULA; and its Radical Cure by Medicine. By J. COMPTON BURNETT, M.D.
 London: James Epps & Co. Limited, 48, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

BIBLIOGRAPHY of BENJAMIN DISRAELI,
 EARL of BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, and JUNE 10th, 19th, and JULY 6th contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEITH to "VIVIAN GREY," "CONINGBY," "LOTHAIR," and "ENDYMION."
 Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 6d.
 John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Broad's-buildings, Chancery-
 lane, E.C.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

EARLSCOURT: a Novel of Provincial Life.

By ALEXANDER ALLARDYCE,
 Author of 'The City of Sunshine,' 'Balmoral: a Romance of the Queen's Country,' &c.
 3 vols. crown 8vo. 25s. 6d.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

THE "BORDER" WAVERLEY.

Ready February 1st.

ST. RONAN'S WELL. 2 vols.

Ten Etchings by and after Sir GEORGE REID, P.R.S.A., W. HOLE, R.S.A., A. FORESTIER, and R. W. MACBETH, A.R.A.

Introduction and Notes by ANDREW LANG.

London: JOHN C. NIMMO, 40, King William-street, Strand.

Price 5s. 6d. net, cloth.
REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Parts in the History of Cosmography
 By W. T. LYNN, M.A. F.R.A.S.
 Edward Stanford, 10 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

Now ready, price 4s. 6d. net.
BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY.
 By W. T. LYNN, M.A. F.R.A.S.
 G. Groombridge, 21, Warwick-lane, E.C.

ON NEURASTHENIA (Brain and Nerve Exhaustion, Weakness and Failure), and the NEURASTHENIC of INFELICITY. By T. STRETCH BAKER, M.D. 2s. 6d.
 Baillière, Tynard & Cox, King William-street, Strand.

BIBLIOGRAPHY of THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.
NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1893, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1894, contains a BIBLIO-GRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.
 Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 6d.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.
 John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Broad's-buildings, Chancery-
 lane, E.C.

PALL MALL MAGAZINE.

Edited by Lord FREDERIC HAMILTON, M.P., and Sir DOUGLAS STRAIGHT.

FEBRUARY, 1904, No. 10.

NOW READY.

Price ONE SHILLING.

CONTAINS:

SERIALS by

GEORGE MEREDITH.
 FRANK R. STOCKTON.

STORIES by GEORGE BOUTTON, A.R.A.

 JOHN REID.
 LOUIE TRACY.
 BRAM STOKER.

POEMS by

"Q."
 "VIOLET FANE."
 RUDYARD KIPLING.
 HENRI DE FONBLANQUE.
 EMILY LEITH.

ARTICLES by

R. F. BENSON.
 H. D. TRAILL.
 ALBERT VANDAM.
 Hon. GEO. M. CURZON, M.P.

Illustrations by A. Alston, J. Gulick, A. Jule
 Goodman, W. H. Margeson, Raymond Potter, A.
 Lazard, A. E. Frost, "Rab," and G. H. Boughton,
 A.R.A.

VEKED QUESTIONS.

IS ANONYMITY in JOURNALISM DESIRABLE?

REINHOLD I. MARTIN.
 Sir LEPEL GRIFFIN, K.G.S.I.

"WITHOUT PREJUDICE." By I. ZANOWILL.

Editorial Office—18, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C.

Copies on sale at all Booksellers, Newsagents, and Railway Bookstalls in Great Britain and Ireland. Publishing Office—London: George Routledge & Sons, Limited, Strand, Ludgate-hill, E.C.; Manchester:
 George Routledge & Sons, Limited, 18, Jackson's-row. New York: The International News Company; Toronto: The Toronto News Company; Montreal: The Montreal News Company.

THE KNIFE WATER-CURR.
 Just published.
"THUS SHALT THOU LIVE." Hints and Advice for the Healthy and the Sick on a Simple and Rational
 Mode of Living and a Natural Method of Cure. By SEBASTIAN
 KNIFE, Parish Priest of Worshoven. 8vo cloth, price 6s.
 London: H. Greville & Co.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER'S LIST.

Second Edition, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

ARBORICULTURE;

Or, a Practical Treatise on Raising and Managing Forest Trees, and on the Profitable Extension of the Forests of Great Britain.

By JOHN GRIGOR, The Nurseries, Forres.

"His book has interest both for the adept and the novice, for the large proprietor and him that has but a nook or corner to plant out."—Saturday Review.

FIFTEENTH THOUSAND. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

BUNYAN CHARACTERS.

Lectures Delivered in Free St. George's
 Church, Edinburgh.

By Rev. ALEX. WHITE, D.D.

The British Weekly says: "We cannot too warmly welcome this very beautiful and amazingly cheap reprint of Dr.
 Whyte's lectures. The book will take a permanent place in Bunyan literature."

"A Second Series of 'Bunyan Characters' is in the press."

OLIPHANT'S POCKET NOVELS.

Paper cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Sons of the Croft. By P. HAY HUNTER.

Aldersyde. By ANNIE S. SWAN.

A Bachelor in Search of a Wife. By ANNIE S. SWAN.

Wyhola. By EVELYN EVERETT-GREEN.

Eleanor's Discipline. By JANET BROWN.

John Gentleman, Tramp. By JESSIE A.
 NORQUAY FORBES.

Sydney's Inheritance. By MARY S. HAN-COCK.

Euphie Lyn; or, the Fishers of Old Inverurie.
 By Mrs. J. K. LAWSON.

Fishin' Jimmy, and other Stories. By A. T.
 SLOSSON and IMOGEN CLARK.

Mr. Mackenzie's Wedding. A Short
 Chronicle of Colston. By J. H. JAMIESON.

Lucky Lines. By JESSIE M. E. SAXBY.

The Kidnappers. By GEORGE G. GREEN.

ANNIE S. SWAN'S NOVELS.

List of Works by this Popular Authoress post free on application. Suitable for Presents and Libraries.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER,
 London and Edinburgh.

PREMIER

"VINO LIA" SOAP

FOR THE HOUSEHOLD COSTS

4d. a TABLET.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPF'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.
 In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of speaking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPF'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPF'S
 GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in this form by Chemists, labelled "James Epps & Co. Limited, Manx-gothic Chambers, 159, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
 ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN,
 HEADACHE, COLIC,
 AND INDIGESTION,
 And Suffer a secret for Peptic Constipation,
 Chills, and Indigestion.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY'S NEW BOOKS

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

RUSSIA'S MARCH TOWARDS INDIA. By an Indian Officer. With Map of Central Asia, showing the disputed Territory. 3 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

"A lucid historical survey... of the gradual development of Russian military power in Central Asia."—Times.

CHINESE CENTRAL ASIA: a Ride to Little Tibet. With Fauna and Bibliographical Appendices. By HENRY LANSDALE, D.D., M.R.A.S. F.R.G.S., Author of 'Through Siberia,' 'Russian Central Asia,' &c. With Maps and nearly 100 Illustrations. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, 35s.

"Dr. Lansdale's fame as a traveller in Central Asia has long been established. His two new volumes are the record of his latest and, in some respects, his most adventurous journey."—Times.

PICTURESQUE CEYLON: Colombo and the Kelani Valley. By Henry W. CAYE. Demy 4to. numerous Full-Page Illustrations in Woodburygravure, gilt edges, Roxburghe binding, ONE GUINEA net.

MY DARK COMPANIONS and their STRANGE STORIES. By Henry M. STANLEY, D.C.L., &c. With over 60 Illustrations by Walter W. Buckley. 1 vol. small demy 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

"Mr. Stanley has constructed a fascinating edifice of folk-lore... A collection of mythological stories which are both interesting and instructive."—Daily Telegraph.

MEN, MINES, and ANIMALS in SOUTH AFRICA. By Lord Randolph CHURCHILL. With special Portrait, numerous Illustrations, and Route Map. Third and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"Unusually interesting; so sincere in tone and so studded with practically suggestive matter touching recently acquired African territory as a field for either agricultural or commercial enterprise."—Athenæum.

TEN YEARS' CAPTIVITY in the MAHDI'S CAMP, 1882-1892. From the Original Manuscripts of Father Joseph Obrwaldner, late Priest of the Austrian Mission Station at Dolen, in Kordofan. By Major F. H. WINGATE, R.A. Fully illustrated, Revised and Condensed. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

"A book unique of its kind, and well worthy of the permanent place it has attained in contemporary literature."—See 20-page criticism in the Dublin Review.

HOW I SHOT MY BEARS; or, Two Years' Tent-Life in Kullu and Lahoul. By Mrs. R. H. TYACKER. With Maps and numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

"Something really new and original in the literature of sport... Mrs. Tyacker's tone is always lively, her style is pleasant, graphic, and accurate, and her book is charming."—World.

ON THE INDIAN HILLS; or, Coffee-Planting in Southern India. By EDWIN LESTER ARNOLD, Author of 'The Wonderful Adventures of Phra the Piousman.' Revised and partly rewritten. With a Preface by Sir EDWIN ARNOLD. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

"Fresher matter or more interesting reading of the kind has not been given to the public."—Scotsman.

TWO ROVING ENGLISHWOMEN in GREECE. By Isabel J. Armstrong. With Portraits and numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"A lively narrative of an adventurous tour in classic lands, full of high spirits and good humour."—Times.

The LAND of POCO TIEMPO: the Great American Mystery. By Charles F. LUMMIS, Author of 'A Tramp across the Continent,' &c. Numerous Illustrations from Photographs and Sketches by the Author. Demy 8vo. cloth extra, 10s. 6d.

SECOND EDITIONS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THE HANDSOME HUMES.

By WILLIAM BLACK. In 3 vols.

"Told with all the grace and charm of Mr. William Black's familiar narrative style... A refreshing wholesomeness of thought and tone pervades Mr. Black's excellent work."—Daily Telegraph.

THE EMIGRANT SHIP.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL. In 3 vols.

"Movement and incident crowd in every chapter, and the prettiest little love-story flows as an under-current among these billows of adventure."—Full Mail Gazette.

NEW NOVELS AND STORIES.

A PRISONER OF WAR. By F. A. INDERWICK, Q.C., Author of 'Side-lights on the Boer War,' &c. Illustrated after Drawings by William Faggett. Small post 8vo. 6s.

"A graceful product of a busy man's leisure hours, and well deserves the small expenditure of time it takes to read. The illustrations are very pretty."—Westminster Gazette.

CLAUDEA'S ISLAND. By Esme STUART, Author of 'Virginie's Husband,' 'Joan Volcott,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"The story is finely conceived, most excellently told; while the book is further commended to the reader's approval by the superior style in which it is produced."—Manchester Courier.

WOE to the CONQUERED, B.C. 53. By ALFRED CLARK, Author of 'A Dark Place of the Earth,' 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

"The story is eminently readable."—Scotsman.

A WITCH'S LEGACY. By Heaketh J. BELL, Author of 'Obeah: Witchcraft in the West Indies,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 21s.

The TRIUMPH of THERESA: a Novel. By JEFFREY ARDEN. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 21s.

"A book to be read... There are some cleverly drawn characters, and some interesting situations."—Daily Telegraph.

TWO REMARKABLE COLLECTIONS OF SHORT STORIES.—See Faces.

THE WAY THEY LOVED AT GRIMPAT.

By E. BENTOUËL ESLEK.

1 vol. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Should score one of the most solid literary successes of the season."—Daily Telegraph.

"A book of peculiar charm."—Speaker.

TALES OF THE YORKSHIRE WOLDS.

By J. KEIGHLEY SNOWDEN.

8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The tales are full of interest, and give evidence of no inconsiderable literary powers."—Manchester Guardian.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'BY THE WESTERN SEA.' "Books to read, and re-read with unflagging interest."

MARK TILLOTSON. 548 pp., 6s.

"Clever novel."—Athenæum.

"Endued with vitality and individuality."—Times.

"Vigorous writing on every page."—Full Mail Gazette.

JOHN WESTACOTT. Popular Edition. 413 pp., 3s. 6d.

"Exquisite literary work."—Scotsman.

"Entrancing novel."—Liverpool Post.

OUR FOREIGN COMPETITORS. 1s.

"May be studied with great advantage at the present crisis."—Times.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

FEBRUARY NUMBER.

Contents.

EDWARD BURNES-JONES. Cosmo Monkshead. Illustrated. JOHN MARCH. SOUTHERNER. Chaps. 8-15. George W. Cable. The SCHOOLMASTER. James Baldwin. Illustrated. Mr. LOWELL on ART-PRINCIPLES. Ferris Lockwood. ORCHIDS. W. A. Miles. Illustrated. ON PIRATE SHIPS: a Merchant's Voyages to the West Indies in 1805. Peter A. Grotjan. The SEA ISLAND HUMMANNESSES: the Devastation. Joel Chandler Harris. Illustrated. &c. &c.

GLIMPSES of the FRENCH REVOLUTION. By J. G. Alger, Author of 'An Englishman in the French Revolution,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

DR. NOAH PORTER, PRESIDENT of YALE: a Memorial by his Friends.

Edited by GEORGE S. MERRIMAN. With Portraits. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

"This memoir was admirably conceived and has been admirably executed... The book is full of information, unfamiliar to English readers, on Church life and College life in New England."—Dr. Dalk in the British Weekly.

A MEMOIR of EDWARD CALVERT, ARTIST. By his Third Son, SAMUEL CALVERT. With 30 Inset Plates and other Illustrations in Facsimile from the Artist's Designs.

Strictly LIMITED EDITION of 300 copies, Imperial 4to. with large margins, each copy numbered and signed, THREE GUINEAS net.

THE LAST EARLS of BARRYMORE, 1760-1824. By J. R. Robinson, Author of 'The Princely Chandos,' &c. Illustrated. Demy 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

"This lively volume."—Truth.

"An excellent biography."—Daily Telegraph.

"A very readable book."—Field.

"Full of anecdote and reminiscences."—St. James's Budget.

LANDMARKS of a LITERARY LIFE, 1820-1892. By Mrs. Newton

CROSLAND (Camilla Toulmin), Author of 'Mrs. Blake,' &c. With Photogravure Portraits. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

"Seldom has it been given to an author to chronicle the accession and jubilee of a Sovereign. More rarely, if possible, to have known personally the eminent men and women of a period extending to seven decades."—Yorkshire Herald.

CHARLES KEENE'S LIFE and LETTERS. By George Somes Layard,

D.A. With 3 Portraits, 30 Full-Page and 44 smaller Illustrations, including 13 Photogravures. Cheap Edition. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

"Mr. Layard's book is worthy of his subject, and excellent reading from first to last."—Saturday Review.

WILLIAM HOGARTH, Mr. AUSTIN DOBSON'S CRITICAL BIOGRAPHY of.

Cheap Edition. 8vo. cloth, 15s. 6d.

"An authoritative monograph on Hogarth and his works... Executed in a manner eminently worthy of Mr. Dobson's high reputation for literary skill and critical acumen."—Times.

MEMORABLE PARIS HOUSES: a Handy Guide, with Illustrative, Critical, and Anecdotal Notices. By WILMOT HARRISON, Author of 'Memorable London Houses.' With over 60 Original Illustrations of Celebrities and their Houses. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

DOD'S PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, and KNIGHTAGE for 1894. Crown

8vo. over 1,000 pages, handsomely bound, cloth extra gilt, gilt edges, 10s. 6d.

"Aims at giving a great deal of information in a small space, and signally succeeds in doing so. For purposes of rapid reference it has no competitor."—Athenæum.

The ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER'S DIARY for 1894. Arranged by RALPH HINDLE BAKKE. Demy 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

TALES of the CHILDREN'S WARD. By Honnor Morten, Author of 'Sketches of Hospital Life,' and H. F. GETHEN. With Illustrations. 4to. cloth, 2s. 6d.

"A series of little sketches, which are capitally told and very interesting."—Daily Telegraph.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bryanston-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Printed by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bryanston-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C., and Published by the said JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bryanston-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Boddams and Mr. John Macdonald, Edinburgh.—Saturday, January 27, 1894.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3458.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1894.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN,

Albmarle-street, Piccadilly, W.
THURSDAY NEXT (February 8), at 3 o'clock, W. MARTIN CONWAY, Esq. MA F.R.S. F.R.I.C.—First of Three Lectures on 'The Past and Future of Mountain Exploration.' Half-a-Guinea the Course.

SATURDAY (February 10), at 3 o'clock, the Right Hon. LORD RAYLEIGH, M.A. D.C.L. LL.D. F.R.S. Professor of Natural Philosophy, B.I.—First of Six Lectures on 'Light, with Special Reference to the Optical Discoveries of Newton.' One Guinea the Course. Subscriptions to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

BRITISH ARCHAEOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.

THE FIFTH MEETING OF THE SESSION will be held on WEDNESDAY NEXT, FEBRUARY 7th, at 32, RACKVILLE-STREET, PICCADILLY, W. Chair to be taken at 5 p.m. Antiquities will be exhibited, and the following papers read:

1. 'Notes on an Antiquarian Hoax in Suffolk,' by T. CANN HUGHES, Esq.
 2. 'Notes on Roman Antiquities,' with Illustrations, by ANDREW OLIVER, Esq.
 3. 'A Salford Foundry,' by A. C. FRYER, Esq. F.R.S. M.A. F.O.S. F.R.S.
- W. DE ARMS REICH, F.R.S. (Honorary)
R. F. LOFTUS REICH, F.R.S. (Secretary)

VICTORIA INSTITUTE.—Meeting, MONDAY,

February 5, at 8 o'clock. 'Rifted Animals in Relation to Living Types,' by Rev. H. M. HUTCHINSON, M.A. F.O.S.—4, Adelphi-terrace, Strand, W.C.

STRADIVARI.—For the Work they have in preparation upon Stradivari, W. E. HILL & SONS, of 38, New Bond-street, London, would like to see any VIOLIN or other INSTRUMENTS by STRADIVARI that may be unknown to them, and would therefore invite their possessors to communicate with them.

SOCIETY OF AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.

The Public is hereby warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS. without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THOMAS, Secretary, 4, Portland-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

ROYAL INSTITUTION, MANCHESTER.

February 5th, 10th, and 13th, Mr. WHITWORTH WALLIS, F.R.S., will give his Art Series, 'Illustrated by Linnet's Views from Photographs taken by the Lecturer.' EDWIN MARSHALL, Secretary.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURES.

A COURSE OF TEN LECTURES on 'The Homeric Age' will be given by Mr. J. CHURTON COLLINS, M.A., commencing THURSDAY, February 1st, at 8.30 p.m., at Bedford College, 8, York-place, Baker-street, W. The Course for the Study of Greek will be formed in connection with these Lectures. Subscription Tickets for the Course.—Numbered and Reserved Seats, 25s. 6d.; Unreserved Seats, 1s. Single Lectures, 2s. may be had on application to the Hon. Sec., Miss HARRIS, 44, Piccadilly, W.C., or at the doors. Tickets, 1s. 6d., may be supplied to Artisan or Elementary School Teachers.

TO PUBLISHERS.—A Position as SUB-EDITOR

OR MANAGER OF PUBLICATION DEPARTMENT desired by Advertiser. Fifteen years' experience in the Literary and Publishing and Advertisement Departments of a leading firm of Publishers. Thoroughly conversant with Printing. Highest references.—A. R. & Co., Queen's-road, Chelsea.

A JOURNALIST IN PARIS is at liberty to SUPPLY SOCIETY NOTES and Smart Copy generally to an ENGLISH PAPER. Exclusive News at Syndicate prices.—A. VICTORIA, 5, Hilling, W.C., Piccadilly, W.

TO NEWSPAPER PROPRIETORS.—London

Correspondent and Representative of Daily Paper Graduate of a Royal Society, glad to WRITE LEADERS or LONDON LETTERS for good Provincial Weekly; liberal, take entire London charge, or edit if not too far from London. Highest references.—Apply L. O., care of Mr. Fitch, 44, Fleet-street.

NEXT SESSION.—An experienced Journalist wishes to WRITE a PARLIAMENTARY LETTER or SUMMARY. Weekly, for a Country Paper.—Address M. J. J., Notion's Library, West Kensington-terrace, W.

PARTNER WANTED with about 5,000l. in well-established Publishing Business. Technical knowledge not absolutely necessary, but preference would be given to a Gentleman having a connection among Authors. An excellent opening for a young and energetic man. Full investigation permitted.—R. A. MONTAGNY, Publishers' Agent and Valuer, 19, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

LADY requires ENGAGEMENT as SECRETARY, or AMBASSADRESS, or COMPANION. No objection to a young, married, age thirty-two. Satisfaction references.—Write P. Y., Willing's Advertising Office, 105, Piccadilly, W.

MRS. NISBETT BROWNE, 120, Inverness-terrace, Hyde Park, W. wishes to RECOMMEND a LADY as SECRETARY, HOUSEKEEPER, or any position where high educational attainments and good abilities would be valued. High references. Good salary essential.

CHURCH of ENGLAND NEWSPAPER, published weekly. Established for many years. COPYRIGHT to be SOLD.—Apply M. A., care of Mr. Davidson, 7, Lilliput-lane, Noble-street, E.C.

TYPE-WRITERS.—SECOND-HAND

MACHINES, equal to new, FOR SALE, EXCHANGE or LENT on HIRE. Machines sold by instalments on terms to suit purchasers. Use of Machine taught free to buyers or purchasers. Remingtons, Yokes, Hammonds, Chas. & Co. Parke's, Price & Co. from 8s. 6d. Copy with accuracy and despatch at lowest rates. Highest references. Illustrated Catalogue free.—M. TAYLOR, Manager, National Type-Writer Exchange, 14, Cannon-street, London (Holborn end).

THE FLEET-STREET TYPE-WRITERS,

111, Fleet-street, E.C.
Lowest charges. Highest speed. Every kind of Type-writing Work done. Price List.—111, Fleet-street, London.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, at 1d. per folio.

Sheffield House taken. References to Authors.—Miss GARDNER, 34, South Lambeth-road, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING by a CLERGYMAN'S

DAUGHTER, Author of MSS., Sermons, Plays, &c. Copied promptly. Author's references given. 1s. per 1,000 words, reduction long MSS.—Miss STAN, 12, Welverton-gardens, Hammer-smith.

TYPE-WRITING.—Manuscripts Copied, Home

Work. Terms, 1d. per folio (72 words), or 100 words and over, 1s. per thousand.—Miss MONTAGNY, The Avenue, St. George's, Harlow.

TYPE-WRITING AND STENOGRAPHY.—Lowest

Prices in the City. All branches. MSS. carefully Copied. Tutorials in both subjects. Open 9 a.m. till 8 p.m.—HARDING & LANE, Room 41, Broad-street House, Old Broad-street, E.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly reliable ADVICE can be obtained free of charge from Messrs. ASKIN, GARRATT & CO., who, by their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—30, Backville-street, W.

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to best University or Army Tutor, and Schools for Boys or Girls, at Home or Abroad, may be obtained free of charge by sending a statement of requirements to H. J. BARNES, M.A., 4, Lancaster-place, Strand.

GOVERNESSES FOR PRIVATE FAMILIES.—

Miss LOUISE BROUGH can RECOMMEND several highly-qualified English and Foreign GOVERNESSES for Resident and Daily Boarding. Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Cranley-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

"BLACK AND WHITE."

MR. HENRY BLACKBURN'S STUDIO.

INSTRUCTION in DRAWING for the PRIMA with Technical Assistants. Students join at any time. Advice and instruction by Correspondence.—123, Victoria-street, Westminster (near Army and Navy Stores).

GOUGH'S SERIES METHOD.—Central School of Foreign Tongues. Directors, HOWARD SWAN and VICTOR BEVIN. New Classes now forming.—Address SECRETARY, Howard House, Arundel-street, Strand, London.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

Cooper's Hill, Strathmore.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1894. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the Secretariat, at the College.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.

THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION IN ELEMENTARY BIOLOGY, for Students who have Matriculated at London University in January, 1894, BEGINS ON FEBRUARY 14th.

J. M. MORSEBURN, M.A., Secretary.

BOROUGH of SWANSEA.

TECHNICAL INSTRUCTION.

The Committee appointed by the Swansea Town Council, under the Technical Instruction Act, 1889, regarding the erection of a REFRIGERATOR in METALLURGY as PRINCIPAL of the SCHOOLS proposed to be established in that Borough under the provisions of the said Act. The person appointed will be required to devote the whole of his time to the duties of his office. The salary intended to be paid is 500 per annum, together with the following additional pecuniary interest in the success of the School: viz.—

- (1) A gratification fee of 2s. 6d. per head in respect of each full session day scholar;
- (2) 15 per cent. of the fees of all other day scholars; and
- (3) A gratification fee of 5s. per head in respect of each night scholar who shall present himself for the Science and Art Examination in May in each year.

The appointment may be determined at any time upon giving three months' notice. Applications for the position to be forwarded to the undersigned, stating age and qualifications, with not more than six original testimonials, on or before the 25th day of February, 1894. Dated this 15th day of January, 1894.

JOHN THOMAS, Town Clerk.

UNIVERSITY of EDINBURGH.

LECTURESHIP in (a) FRENCH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE and ROMANCE PHILOLOGY; and (b) GERMAN LANGUAGE and LITERATURE and ROMANCE PHILOLOGY.

The UNIVERSITY EXAMINER will, on APRIL 1st next, or some subsequent day, APPOINT A LECTURER in each of the above two subjects.

The Lecturers must be qualified to instruct students with a view to Honours as well as the ordinary Degree in Arts, and must possess an historical acquaintance with both the literature and the Philosophy of France and Germany respectively from the Past to the Present. They should also possess a thorough colloquial command of the Language.

They will be required to teach during both the Winter and the Summer Session, and to enter on their duties at the beginning of the Winter Session 1894-5.

The appointment, which may be renewed, will be for five years, at an annual salary of 600l. in each Lectureship.

It is a condition of their appointment that the Lecturers shall not teach in schools, or in any institution other than the University. Each applicant should lodge with the undersigned, not later than Monday, March 26th next, sixteen copies of his application and curriculum of any testimonials he may desire to exhibit. One copy of the application should reach the applicant's signature.

M. C. TAYLOR, Secretary University Court.

University of Edinburgh, January 2nd, 1894.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMBIENS, ANTWERP, BRACHLY-SUB-MER, BRABAY, BOB-DEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUB-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUN-KEIR, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLE, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.

And at the CALIGNANI LIBRARY, 23, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

THE UNIVERSITY of ST. ANDREWS grants the

DIPLOMA and TITLE of L.L.A. to WOMEN.

The Subjects of Examination may be selected from any seven out of twenty-nine different subjects, the standard being the same as that for the M.A. Degree. The Centre of Examination are St. Andrews, Aberdeen, Belfast, Belfast, Birmingham, Bristol, Cardiff, Exeter, Glasgow, Dublin, Dundee, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Inverness, Leeds, Leicester, Liverpool, London, Loughborough, Manchester, and Newcastle-on-Tyne. For Prospectus, see apply to the Secretariat, L.L.A. Scheme, the University, St. Andrews, N.B.

PUBLISHING and LITERARY INVESTMENT

AGENCY.—In a MONSIEUR, late Managing Clerk to Messrs. Hingston, will be happy to furnish particulars of PUBLISHING PARTNERSHIPS and LITERARY INVESTMENTS to send Ade Correspondence on application. Confidential investigations for purchases. Valuations of Copyrights for Transfer, Probate, and other purposes.—R. Paul's Chamber, 10, Leadenhall E.C.

TO AUTHORS.—Mr. PERCY RUSSELL, Author of the 'Authors' Manual,' Sixth Edition, highly commended by the Right Hon. W. Gladstone, M.P., is now prepared to REVISE MSS. and ADVISE on PLOT, CORRELATION, STYLE, &c. Testimonials from leading men. Terms moderate.—Address Trust House, Trust-road, Britton-hill, S.W.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879.

Proprietor, Mr. A. M. HUGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors rapidly represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Twenty-five years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. HUGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

AUTHORS' BUREAU ASSISTS AUTHORS to and PUBLISHERS for their MSS., Magistrates Copyrights, and Ample Authors generally. Circular post free.—A. L. DIXON, 31, Newington Turnpike, London, N.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents,

14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARIING CROSS, S.W.
Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Legislators, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and

Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Insurance, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Care of Terms on Application.

13 and 12, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

PICTURE REPAIRATION or CLEANING collected with every regard to safe and cautious treatment, by M. RAINE THOMPSON.

Studio, 41, George-street, Portman-square, W.

THE AUTHORITY FINE-ART GALLERY,

14, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON.
is remarkable for the Display of Copies of Celebrated Works of THE GREAT MASTERS.

Representations of the most important Paintings in the following Collections:—

NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON.	LOUVRE, PARIS.
SUCKINGHAM PALACE.	LUXEMBOURG, PARIS.
WINDSOR CASTLE.	ROYAL GALLERY, DRESDEN.
OFFICE, FLORENCE.	HERMITAGE, ST. PETERSBURG.
PITTI, FLORENCE.	PRADO, MADRID.
ACADEMY OF FINE ARTS, FLORENCE.	VATICAN, ROME.
AMSTERDAM.	HARLEM.
THE HAGUE.	FRANKFORT.

THE PARIS SALONS.

PAINTINGS and DRAWINGS by MILLET, COROT, ROUSSEAU, DAUBIGNY, HARTMAN LEPAPE, and MERDIO.

Albums of Reference to the various Galleries are provided, are easily looked over, and are of great interest to Lovers of Art.

A LARGE COLLECTION of EXAMPLES of MODERN FRENCH and ENGLISH ART in SELECTED FRAMES, suitable for HALL, LIBRARY, DRAWING ROOM, Boudoir, &c.

The AUTOTYPE FINE-ART CATALOGUE of 104 pages, with Illustrated Supplement, containing nearly twenty Miniature Photographs of Notable Autotype, post free, One Shilling.

New pamphlet, 'Autotype as Decorative and Educational Art,' free on application.

The AUTOTYPE COMPANY, London.

Catalogue.

ELLIS & ELVEY,

Dealers in Old and Rare Books.

NEW CATALOGUE (No. 70) of RECENT PURCHASES NOW READY, post free, 10s. 6d. Stamp.

30 New Bond-street, London, W.

OLD MAP COLLECTIONS.—The World, 60l.—Europe, 54l.—Egypt, 50l.—London and Environs, 53l.—Scotland, 57l. 10s.—Ireland, 54l.—North America, 55l.—England and Wales, 74l.—S. A. PARKER, Antiquarian, 12 Hockley road, London, W.

STOTHARD.—WANTED TO PURCHASE, any ORIGINAL DRAWINGS by STOTHARD, especially those made to illustrate HOOKER.—Address K, care of Henry Young & Sons, 12, South Castle-street, Liverpool.

WHAT D'YE LACK?

Ask Miss MILLARD, of Tredington, Middlesex, for any Book ever issued since the advent of printing (however rare or plentiful: up to the very last work published; also for any card or object of interest under the canopy of heaven, for she prides herself on being omnibul, nine times out of ten, to supply those wants. She has the largest assortment of Miscellaneous Manuscripts in the world, and is always a ready, willing, and liberal buyer for prompt cash.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.
 —————
 MURPHY'S SELECT LIBRARY.

Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.
SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per ANNUM.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS FROM TWO GUINEAS PER ANNUM.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.
All the best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in this collection.

Catalogues of English or Foreign Books, 1s. 6d. each.
 Free postages and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MURRAY'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,
50 to 54, New Oxford-street, London.
Branch Offices:
211, Drompton-road; and 41, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

AUTHORS ADVISED AS TO THE PRODUCTION of WORKS in any Department of Literature and Nationalism for Printing and Publishing sent free. Special attention devoted to the various Printed and Subscription Works.—(U.S. C. 1111) Publishers of the Illustrated Archaeologist, and to several Learned Societies, 4, Lincoln Inn-Fields, W.C.

TO PUBLISHERS.—A Provincial Firm, with extensive modern Printing Plant, is prepared to undertake BOOK WORK and other Publishers' Printing on favourable terms.—
W. F. Haddon's Advertising Agency, Salisbury-square, W.C.

TO LET, HOUSE, ten minutes from District
Station, close to tram, thirty-three minutes from Charles Cross Four or Five Bed-rooms, Three sitting-rooms, Bath-room, good, well-lighted and dry Office, south aspect, garden on bank of river, perfect quiet, fine view of open country, facilities for keeping boat, swimming tub and gas throughout; blinds. Rent, for a term, ask—Apply G. W.
Hammerton-Thames-road, W.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—APARTMENTS in a comfortably furnished house, in a central and sheltered position, three minutes' walk from S.E.R. station, fifteen minutes from L.B. & S.C. R. O. Boxwell, Guildford-road, Grove Hill-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction

Messrs. Hodgson will sell by Auction at their Rooms, 11A, Chancery-lane, W.C., on TUESDAY February 6, at 1 o'clock. SEVERAL THOUSAND VOLUMES OF HODGSON PUBLICATIONS, comprising 800 Old American Titles, New (1st and 6d) - 300 Harveys' Lunar Eclipses and Moon Lore - 70 Natural

To be viewed, and Chingcheen had.

MESSERS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 114, Chancery Lane, W.C., on FRIDAY, February 9, at 1 o'clock, valuable Law Books, including the New Law Reports for 1902, the early Reporter, 1802 to 1880; The Jurist, complete, in 55 vols.—Law Times and Reports 70 vols.—Registries and Periodic Cases in the House of Lords—Privy Council Cases and King's Bench Reports—King's Bench and Bull Court Cases—Chancery Reports—by HENRY BREWSTER JOHNSON, Westminster and Milton, author of "Mistakes and Practices," "New Articles of China," "Gentleman's Dressing Case," "Every Chromium," &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Property, by order of the Trustees,
MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL

FRIDAY, February 8, at ten minutes past one o'clock precisely.
COLLECTION OF MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY, by order of the Trustees of O. M. HOLDICH. Esq. removed from the Institution, including Antique Cabinets and Furniture, 23 valuable Old English Long-Case and other Clocks, (China-Glass-Miniatures, &c.
Catalogues on request of two shillings.

[illegible]

Catalogues may be had, if by post, on receipt of two stamps.

The Collection of War Medals and Decorations, the Property of J. J. MAHONY, Esq., of Cork.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL, by AUCTION, at their Rooms, No. 12, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, February 8, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION OF ENGLISH AND FOREIGN WAR MEDALS AND DECORATIONS, Commemorative Medals, &c., the Property of J. J. MAHONY, Esq. M.R.S.A. Cork. Consisting of—Newell Dealer Medal—Lancaster Medal, small size—G.N.R. Nassau, 2nd March, 1800—G.N.R. Redoubt, with President—G.N.R. Galea, 30th July, 1815—G.N.R. Peninsula 12-bar Medal—G.N.R. 10-bar Medal—G.N.R. Fort Detroit—Army of India, 2 bars, Gwalior, Agra, &c.—2nd Jellaband Medal, with Flying Victory—U.S. Navy, 1878-80—rare Groups of Medals, including one containing the V.C. of Sergeant Wm. McWhorrey 4th Regiment, with particulars and War Office certificate—rare Regimental Medals of the 18th Regt. Inf. 18th, 18th, and 18th Tyroon Regiments—Colonial Medal—Volunteer Medals, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, if by post, on receipt of four stamps.

The Valuable and Extensive Stock of Books of Mr. J. TOOVEY.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL, by AUCTION, at their Rooms, No. 12, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, February 8, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION OF BOOKS OF MR. J. TOOVEY, comprising valuable County Histories on Large Paper—Privately Printed Club Books—Rare Manuscripts—Choice and Historic Bindings—Best Editions of the French and Italian Classics—Americana—Old English Literature—Works of the English, French, and Italian Dramatists and Poets—Bibliography—One Illustrated Book—Works on Heraldry and English Antiquities—Voyages and Travels—Historical Works—Early Books in Black Letter—and Works in most Classes of Literature.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, if by post, on receipt of eight stamps.

A Collection of Books on Sports and Pastimes, the Property of Mr. J. TOOVEY.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL, by AUCTION, at their Rooms, No. 12, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 8, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION OF BOOKS ON SPORTS AND PASTIMES, and a few Pictures, the Property of Mr. J. TOOVEY.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, if by post, on receipt of four stamps.

MONDAY NEXT, February 6.
Grand Quarterly Sporting Sale.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, February 6, at half past 12 o'clock precisely, six VOLUMES OF OLD SPORTING BOOKS—old hand-coloured Sporting Prints—expensive Gilt and Silver Bound—The "Christiana"—an Original Painting by Woodcut of the Merry Shrovetide Arden—Fishing Tackle—Cricket Balls and Nets—Tennis Balls, Nets, and Rackets—Hockey, and Golf Accessories, &c.—Japanese Armour, Ancient Cross, Daggers, and other Weapons, &c.

On view the Saturday prior 1 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

Without reserve.—Remainder of Salvage Stock at 45, Farringdon-road.—On TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, and THURSDAY next.

MR. J. C. STEVENS has received instructions from Messrs. THEOBALD & CO. to SELL by AUCTION, on the Premises, as above, on TUESDAY NEXT and Two Following Days, February 6, 7, and 8, at 12 o'clock precisely each day, the REMAINING STOCK saved from the Fire, consisting of 20,000 Lantern Slides—50 full-sized Lanterns—Photographic Apparatus—Watchers—Tacks—Air Guns—Musical Instruments—Medals—Microscopes—Opera Glasses, &c.

On view Monday prior only, and Catalogues had on the Premises; and of the Auctioneers, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden.

FRIDAY NEXT.

Photographic and Scientific Instruments, Fancy Goods, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, February 6, at half past 12 o'clock precisely, real DOULTON and other POTTERY—Ivory and other Objects—Pines—Jardinieres—Silver Keyes—Watches—and a large quantity of Fancy Articles, also including valuable Jewellery—Diamonds and Locket—Watches, Buttons, Pins, and other Photographic Apparatus—expensive Lanterns and Slides—several good Field Glasses—Electrical Bells and Batteries and Sundries and Miscellaneous Property.

On view the day prior 1 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, February 5, and Two Following Days, the COLLECTION OF OBJECTS OF ART OF E. SHEPARD KENNEDY, Esq.

On THURSDAY, February 8, OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE, the Property of E. SHEPARD KENNEDY, Esq., and from other Private Sources.

On SATURDAY, February 10, the COLLECTION OF PICTURES the Property of the late GEORGE STURTEY, Esq.—important MODERN PICTURES, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, and from Private sources, and the COLLECTION OF SCULPTURE of the late JOHN CARRERTY EVANS, Esq., and other fine SCULPTURE by Henry, Spence, Swinerton, and Marshall Wood.

On MONDAY, February 12, a COLLECTION OF ENGRAVINGS after O. Moreland, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On TUESDAY, February 13, and Following Days, a COLLECTION OF ENGRAVINGS, ENIGMAS, and DRAWINGS, by and after Old and Modern Masters, the Property of HOWELL WILLS, Esq., of Florence.

On THURSDAY, February 15, and Following Days, the COLLECTION OF ANTIQUITIES and OBJECTS OF ART OF HOWELL WILLS, Esq., of Florence.

On SATURDAY, February 17, the COLLECTION OF PICTURES OF HOWELL WILLS, Esq., of Florence.

On TUESDAY, February 20, and Following Days, the FIRST EDITION OF THE STOCK OF WORKS OF ART and DECORATIVE PROPERTY of the late MR. GEORGE SINCLAIR.

On THURSDAY, February 22, the EGLINTON FAMILY JEWELS, and other magnificent Jewels.

On FRIDAY, February 23, and Following Days, and on MONDAY, February 26, MODERN PICTURES and WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS from the COLLECTION of MARIANO DE MURILLO, Esq.

On TUESDAY, February 27, and Three Following Days, without reserve, the REMAINDER of the COLLECTION OF OBJECTS OF ART OF Mr. E. JONES, deceased.

On TUESDAY, March 6, and Following Days, the COLLECTION OF WORKS OF ART AND DECORATION and PLATE, and the CELLARS OF WINES, of the late JAMES BUNN, Esq.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

"A STORY OF TWO PASSIONS."
GEORGE MANVILLE FENN'S
New Novel, 'THE TIGER LILY,' is now ready, in 2 vols., at every Library.

Mrs. LYNN LINTON'S New Novel, 'THE ONE TOO MANY,' will be ready immediately, in 3 vols., at all Libraries.

OTHER NEW LIBRARY NOVELS.

THE RED-HOUSE MYSTERY. By

Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Maize,' &c. 3 vols.
"The book is workmanlike and readable throughout."—Standard.

THE COMMON ANCESTOR. By

JOHN HILL, Author of 'Treason-Felony,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

THE BURDEN OF ISABEL. By J.

MACLAREN COBBAN, Author of 'The Red Sultan,' &c. 3 vols.

"The Burden of Isabel" is a clever story, of a kind which is not attractive in all novel readers, but has peculiar charms for those who are for something beyond the frivolous combinations of the 'society' novel and the far from delicate distillations of the very most modern love tale."—World.

TO HIS OWN MASTER. By ALAN

ST. AUBYN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"It is refreshing to turn to 'To His Own Master,' because it is a story of real human nature, and we follow the lives of the individuals with sustained interest."—National Review.

OUTLAW and LAWMAKER. By

Mrs. CAMPBELL BRAD, Author of 'The Romance of a Station,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A novel of high literary quality, remarkable power, and grand interest. There is really nothing to be said about the story that is not cordially and unreservedly laudatory. If its popularity prove proportionate to its merits, it should be one of the most widely read books of its year."—Daily Telegraph.

TWO OFFENDERS. By OUIDA,

Author of 'Under Two Flags,' &c. Small 6th. cloth extra, 6s.

"Ouida is at her best in 'Two Offenders.' The stories are swiftly and vigorously told, and both of them will possess their reader's sympathy."—Standard.

MY DEAD SELF. By WILLIAM

JAMBOUR, Post 8vo. Illustrated boards, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

"A pathetic story... A good piece of literary workmanship, and so well constructed, that any one who takes it up will read it to the end."—Standard.

THE CLOISTER and the HEARTH.

By CHARLES READE. A New Edition, handsomely printed in medium 8vo. 6d.; cloth, 1s.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

THE SCALLYWAG. By GRANT ALLEN, Author of 'The Tent of Shilo,' &c.

"Mr. Grant Allen is always interesting and always readable. The colours on his palette are mixed with brains, and a plot even more impossible than that of 'The Scallywag' is carried off triumphantly by his unshaking ingenuity and admirable good temper. Clear character-sketching, bright dialogue, and a hundred clever bits at topics of the day will make the time spent in its perusal pass pleasantly enough."—Speaker.

THE DAYS OF HIS VANITY: a Passage in the Life of a Young Man. By SYDNEY GRUNDY.

"We have not read such an amusing book as this for a long time. The novel is a series of side-lights and flash-sketches, which constitute almost a revelation of certain phases of artistic and Bohemian existence. Who should write witty, brilliant, pointed dialogue but one of the most successful playwrights of the day?"—Stitch and Whisk.

THE LUCK OF GERARD RIDGELEY: a Tale of the Zulu Border. By HENRY MITFORD. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"Mr. Mitford is a very well-known South African writer, and it need hardly be said his books never contain a dull page. In this tale of Zululand he fully maintains his reputation. Treating of the wild justice of revenge, his romance is at once entertaining and exciting, and it has the advantage that some of the characters can be locally recognised."—South African Review.

THE CONSTABLE OF ST. NICHOLAS. By

EDWIN LISTER ARNOLD, Author of 'Phra the Phœnician,' &c.

With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"Mr. Arnold wields the magic wand of the romancer.... He holds you fast to the final chapter."—Morning Leader.

A PAIR COLONIST. By E. GLANVILLE,

Author of 'The Lost Heiress,' &c. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"Mr. Glanville knows how to write an interesting story, and he does it.... 'The Pair Colonist' is good reading."—Universal Herald.

THE MAKING of a NOVELIST: an Experiment in Autobiography. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of 'Joseph's Coat,' &c. With a Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

"Every reader of this delightful booklet will wish there was more of it. It is delightful in its simplicity, frankness, humour, and good humour, in its point and picturesqueness."—World.

WALFORD'S SHILLING PEERAGE (1894).

WALFORD'S SHILLING BARONETAGE (1894).

WALFORD'S SHILLING HOUSE OF COMMONS (1894).

WALFORD'S SHILLING KNIGHTAGE (1894).

WALFORD'S COMPLETE PEERAGE,

BARONETAGE, KNIGHTAGE, and HOUSE OF COMMONS (1894). Royal 8mo. cloth extra, gilt edges, 5s.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

Demy 8vo. price 15s.

THE LIFE AND LETTERS

OF

MADAME DE KRUDENER.

By CLARENCE FORD.

Illustrated with Portraits of Madame de Krudener and the Emperor Alexander I.

Demy 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

EDINBURGH SKETCHES AND MEMORIES.

By DAVID MASSON,

Professor of English Literature in the University of Edinburgh.

Crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

OUR LIFE IN THE SWISS HIGHLANDS.

By JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS and his Daughter MARGARET.

Illustrated.

Demy 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

SKETCHES FROM EASTERN HISTORY.

By THEODOR NOLDEKE,

Professor of Oriental Languages in the University of Strasbourg.

Translated by JOHN SUTHERLAND BLACK, M.A. LL.D.

Crown 8vo. price 6s.

PAGANISM AND CHRISTIANITY.

By J. A. FARRER.

Fcap. 8vo. price 2s. 6d.

BIOGRAPHIES OF ATTERBURY, BUNYAN, GOLDSMITH, JOHN-SON, AND PITT.

By LORD MACAULAY.

Twenty-sixth Edition.

Demy 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

EARLY GREEK PHILOSOPHY.

By JOHN BURNET, M.A.,

Professor of Greek in the University of St. Andrews.

Crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d.

T O T E M I S M.

By J. G. FRAZER, M.A.,

Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Fcap. 8vo. price 3s. 6d.

H Y M N S.

Their History and Development in the Greek and Latin Churches, Germany and Great Britain.

By ROUNDELL, EARL of SELBORNE.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, W.

WALTER SCOTT'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK BY COUNT TOLSTOÏ.

READY IMMEDIATELY, crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

(AUTHORIZED TRANSLATION.)

THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN YOU;

Or, Christianity not as a Mystical Doctrine, but as a new Life Conception.
With a Preface for this Edition by Count LEO TOLSTOÏ. Translated from the Original Russian MS. by A. DELANO.

Just ready, crown 8vo. half antique, paper boards, 2s. 6d.

THE THEATRICAL 'WORLD' FOR 1893.

By WILLIAM ARCHER.

"This year has been a peculiarly interesting theatrical season, with several Ibsen productions, the visits of Signora Duse and the Comédie Française, and, above all, the production of 'The Second Mrs. Tanqueray.' It will, therefore, be good news to students of the theatre that Mr. William Archer is about to publish, through Mr. Walter Scott, an almost complete reprint of the well-known criticisms that have appeared weekly during the year over his initials in the World."

London Daily Chronicle.

SCOTT LIBRARY.

Crown 8vo. cloth elegant, price 1s. 6d. per Vol.

RECENT VOLUMES.

ESSAYS, DIALOGUES, and
THOUGHTS. By LEOPARDI. Translated, with an Introduction, by Major-General PATRICK MAXWELL.

The INSPECTOR-GENERAL. A Russian Comedy. By NIKOLAI V. GOGOL. Translated from the Original, with Introduction and Notes, by ARTHUR A. SYKES.

LATEST VOLUME.

ESSAYS AND APOTHEGMS OF LORD BACON.

Edited, with an Introduction, by JOHN BUCHAN.

A NEW ISSUE OF THE WORKS OF NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

In 12 vols. crown 8vo. antique paper, with Frontispieces in Photogravure, the Cover designed by Walter Crane, price 2s. 6d. per Volume.

ALREADY ISSUED.

The SCARLET LETTER. With Front-ispiece by T. Byre Macklin.

The HOUSE of the SEVEN GABLES.
With Frontispiece by T. Byre Macklin.

LATEST VOLUME.

THE BLITHEDALE ROMANCE.

With Frontispiece by T. Byre Macklin.

London: WALTER SCOTT, Limited,
24, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

NEW NOVEL BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION, with Frontispiece and Vignette by H. J. Ford. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE:

BEING THE MEMOIRS OF GASTON DE BOWNE, SIEUR DE MARSAC.

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN,

Author of 'The House of the Wolf.'

SCOTSMAN.—"This is really a great book. It is much more than a clever story of adventure. It is a very fine work of literary art."

Mr. WALTER BESANT in the QUEEN.—"I venture to offer my humble congratulations to Mr. Stanley Weyman.....Let everybody who loves adventure read this very fine work."

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"This is, in fact, quite the best historical romance that has appeared for some years. It is full of sensation, and the adventures hang very naturally upon the hero. Never since D'Artagnan was there a better swordman."

ATHENÆUM.—"The book is not only good literature, it is a 'rattling good story,' instinct with the spirit of true adventure and stirring emotion. Of love and peril, intrigue and fighting, there is plenty, and many scenes could not have been bettered."

With 179 Illustrations and 2 large and 4 small Coloured Maps. 2 vols. 8vo. 42s.

DISCOVERY OF LAKES RUDOLF AND STEFANIE:

An Account of Count SAMUEL TELEKI'S Exploring and Hunting Expedition in Eastern Equatorial
Africa in 1887 and 1888.

By his Companion, Lieutenant LUDWIG VON HÖHNEL.

Translated by NANCY BELL (L. D'ANVERS).

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"A splendid book of travel.....The illustrations are themselves of the highest interest. No such series of pictures have we ever found in a book of travel; full of life and vigour they are, and without an apparent element of exaggeration, though many of them make the nerves thrill with a sense of almost personal danger.....
From all points of view—general interest, scientific value, exciting adventure, and perfect illustration—Lieutenant von Höhnel's work is not far from the best that have been produced out of the Dark Continent."

NEW VOLUME OF BISHOP CREIGHTON'S 'HISTORY OF THE PAPACY.'

HISTORY of the PAPACY during the REFORMATION. By

MANDELL CREIGHTON, D.D. LL.D., Bishop of Peterborough. Vol. V. (1617-37). The GERMAN REVOLT.
8vo. 15s.

*. Vols. I. and II., 1878-1884, 32s. Vols. III. and IV., 1884-1890, 34s.

THE ELEMENTS of ENGLISH CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY from the EARLIEST TIME to the PRESENT DAY. By F. C. MONTAGUE, M.A., Professor of History, Univer- sity College, London, late Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

TALES of a NOMAD; or, Sport and Strife. By CHARLES MONTAGUE.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

"These stories of 'sport and strife' are brief, vivid, and exciting. South Africa is the scene of Mr. Montague's stirring experiences, and he has seen much hard fighting, pursued game of very various kinds, and now tells the story of his adventurous wanderings with much spirit and skill."—Times.

AUSTRALIA AS IT IS; or, Facts and Features, Sketches and Inci- dents of Australia and Australian Life. With Notices of New Zealand. By a CLERGYMAN, Thirteen Years Resi- dent in the Interior of New South Wales. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s.

POLITICS in a DEMOCRACY: an Essay. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON, Author of 'A System of Psychology,' &c. Crown 8vo. 5s.

*. In this book the Author gives some account of the methods of Government in a Democracy as exemplified by that of the United States.

The ONE GOOD GUEST: a Story. By L. B. WALFORD. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Mrs. Walford has never written a pleasanter novel."—Scotsman.

"A story so full of the best human nature that it is vastly pleasant to read, and equally grateful to remember."—National Observer.

WHAT NECESSITY KNOWS. By L. DOUGALL, Author of 'Beggars All,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"One of the most thoughtful and impressive novels of the season. It is a book which grows upon the reader. Its descriptive passages, its curious glimpses of out-of-the-way life, its quiet but vigorous handling of character, all make it a story of no common order."—Yorkshire Post.

THE SILVER LIBRARY.—NEW VOLUMES.

CARTHAGE and the CARTHAGINIANS.
By R. BOSWORTH SMITH, M.A., Assistant Master in Harrow School. With Maps, Plans, &c. Crown 8vo.
3s. 6d.

The TOILERS of the FIELD. By RICHARD
JEFFERIES. With Portrait from the Dust in Salisbury
Cathedral. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The ORBS AROUND US: Essays on the
Moon and Planets, Meteors and Comets, the Sun and Coloured Pairs of Stars. By R. A. PROCTOR. Crown
8vo. 3s. 6d.

The EXPANSE of HEAVEN: Essays on the Wonders of the Firmament. By R. A. PROCTOR.
Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Now ready, price Sixpence.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE—FEBRUARY.

The MATCHMAKER. By L. B. Walford. Chaps. 13-17.

"The GARDEN of ROSES" of SHAIKH SA'DI. By Sir
Edwin Arnold. K.C.I.B. C.S.I.

PHIL'S RACE. By May Kendall.

COLOUR. By J. G. McPherson.

MRS. McGLOTH'S NINE. By Mrs. A. W. Hunt.

DEAN STANLEY of WESTMINSTER. By A. K. H. E.

A HIDE FOR DEAR LIFE. By Charles Montague.

AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. New York: 15, East 16th-street.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THE EAST AND WEST ENDS.

WORTHINGTON JUNIOR: a Story of Contrasts. By Edith Sichel. 3 vols.

The Spectator says:—"One of the most satisfactory novels we have read for some time."
The Standard says:—"A clever and thoughtful book. We are not sure that the first two chapters do not go very near to being masterpieces in their way. The book as a whole is interesting, well written, and worth the attention of those who have time to think as well as read."

The World says:—"All the characters are clearly seen and carefully handled. There is a great deal more than a story of incident and character in the book."

The Cassellian says:—"It is a real pleasure to read a story told with so much point and vigour."

The SOUTH-SEA ISLANDERS: Voyages and Experiences in the Western Pacific, 1875 to 1891. By WILLIAM WAWN, Master-Mariner.

With numerous illustrations and Maps. Royal 8vo. 12s. "A work of peculiar interest. It affords a vivid insight into labour recruiting in the Pacific."—Standard. "Abounds with valuable information."—Chronicle. "Graphic and amusing accounts of little-known places and peoples told in a sailorly straightforward manner."—Telegraph.

The BUCCANEERS of AMERICA: a True Account of the Most Remarkable Assaults committed of late Years upon the Coast of the West Indies by the Buccaneers of Jamaica and Tortuga (both English and French). By JOHN HESQUIMELING, one of the Buccaneers who was present at those Tragedies (1684-88). Edited by HENRY POWELL. With Maps, Sieges, and Portraits (includes the very scarce Fourth Part.) Royal 8vo. 12s. "A handsome edition, with excellent facsimiles of the fine engravings."—Bookman.

COMPLETION OF MR. RUSSELL GARNIER'S IMPORTANT WORK.
HISTORY of the ENGLISH LANDED INTERESTS:

its Customs, Laws, and Agriculture. MODERN PERIOD. 8vo. 10s. 6d. Vol. 1., EARLY PERIOD, also sells at 10s. 6d.

The SKEPTICS of the FRENCH RENAISSANCE. By

Rev. JOHN OWEN. 8vo. 10s. 6d. Montaigne, Rabelais, Charron, Sanchez, Le Veyr, Pascal. The previous work, SKEPTICS of the ITALIAN RENAISSANCE, of which a SECOND EDITION is now ready, also sells at 10s. 6d.

SOCIAL PEACE. By Professor Schulze-Gaevernitz.

Translated by C. M. WICKSTED, and Edited by GRAHAM WALLAS, M.A. Oxon. 3s. 6d. "A study by a competent observer of the industrial movement in England and the later developments of trade unionism."—Times. "A valuable contribution."—St. James's Gazette.

MR. WILLIAM MORRIS'S NEW BOOK.

SOCIALISM: its Growth and its Outcome. By William

MORRIS and E. BELFORT BAX. Price 6s. Large-Paper Edition, 12s. net. "Unexceptionable in form and temperate in expression."—Times.

SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES.—New Vols., each 2s. 6d.

71. The RISE of MODERN DEMOCRACY in OLD and NEW ENGLAND. By CHARLES BORGEAUD. With an Introduction by C. H. FIRTH, M.A.

70. HOURS and WAGES of LABOUR in RELATION to PRODUCTION. By L. VON BRENTANO.

69. DWELLINGS of the POOR. By Locke Worthington, A.R.I.B.A. Plates. "An effective and valuable contribution."—Daily Chronicle.

68. RIGHTS of WOMEN. By M. Ostrogorski. "Advocates and opponents will find it an admirable storehouse of precedents, collected from authentic sources, carefully brought up to date, supported by exact references, and conveniently arranged."—Daily Chronicle.

67. HISTORY of the ROCHDALE PIONEERS, 1844-1893. By G. J. HOLYOAKE. "The first complete edition, brought down from 1844 to the Rochdale Congress of 1893."—Co-operative News.

66. THEORY and POLICY of LABOUR PROTECTION. By Dr. A. SCHAFFLE. "Remarkable as an attempt to systematise a conservative programme of reform."—Manchester Examiner.

65. ENGLAND'S FOREIGN TRADE in the XIX. CENTURY. By A. L. BOWLEY, B.A. "Full of valuable information, carefully compiled and skilfully marshalled."—Times.

NEW SOLUTION OF A HISTORICAL MYSTERY.

The STORY of LOUIS XVII. of FRANCE. By E. E. Evans. With 5 Engraved Portraits. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

THE AMERICAN MINISTER at St. PETERSBURG (Mr. Andrew D. White) writes:—"It is a beautiful and interesting book, and must take the leading place in the literature of the subject.....It makes out a strong case."

NEW VOLUMES OF THE DILETTANTE LIBRARY.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. By Walter Jerrold.

Portrait. 2s. 6d. The Man—The Poet—The Novelist—The Autocrat and Teacher—The Doctor—Bibliography.

RICHARD JEFFERIES: a Study. By H. S. Salt, Author of 'Life of Thoreau,' &c. Portrait. 2s. 6d. Large-Paper Edition, with 4 Full-Page Plates of 'Jefferies Land,' specially painted by Bertha Newcombe, 10s. 6d. net.

THE ETHICAL LIBRARY. VOLS. I.-II. Each 4s. 6d.

1. The CIVILIZATION of CHRISTENDOM. By BERNARD BOSANQUET, M.A. (Oxon.) LL.D. (Glasgow), late Fellow of University College, Oxford. "We feel that we are in the presence of a acute reasoner."—Times.

2. STUDIES in CHARACTER. By SOPHIE DRYANT, D.Sc. "Fresh and vigorous. No less well thought out than her former books."—Glasgow Herald.

Other Volumes to follow by Professor A. SIDGWICK, Mr. LESLIE STEPHEN, J. H. MUIRHEAD, M.A. (Oxon.), Mr. DAVID G. RITCHIE, M.A. (Oxon.), and others.

A FULL BIOGRAPHY OF REV. W. STANTON MOSES.

MODERN MYSTICS and MODERN MAGIC, containing a Full Biography of the Rev. W. Stanton Moses, together with Sketches of Swedenborg, Boehme, Madame Guyon, the Illuminati, the Kabalists, the Theosophists, the French Spiritists, the Society of Psychical Research, &c. By ARTHUR LILLIE. 6s. "Extremely interesting."—Two Worlds.

SUICIDE and INSANITY. By J. A. K. Strahan, M.D.

5s. "Deals exhaustively with the psychological, historical, and ethical aspects of the question. A weighty contribution."—Times.

REFORMED LOGIC. A System Based on Berkeley's

Philosophy, with an entirely New Method of Dialectics. By D. B. MACLAUGHLAN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s. "The strictly logical chapters are written with great clearness and undoubted ability. Many a good point is made, especially in the criticism of the syllogism."—Educational Times.

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVELS.

A NEW DOG STORY: and another.

1. BLIZZARD and ANOTHER FANTASY. By THOS. PINKERTON. Author of 'John Newbold's Ordeal.' 2s. 6d. "We have known Mr. Pinkerton as the spirited romancer and satirist, and have found him original and incisive in touch. There is some genuine fun in the idea, and it is comically worked."—Athenaeum.

2. TWIST SHADOW and SHINE. By Marcus Clarke, Author of 'For the Term of his Natural Life.' 2s. 6d. "Will compel appreciation."—Notts. Guardian.

3. A MODERN XANTHIPPE. By Walter T. Arnold. 3s. 6d. "A little comedy of marital infidelity and misadventure."—Literary World.

4. The BEAUTY of BOSCASTLE. By T. Mullett Ellis. 5s. "Not a dull page in the story."—Scotsman.

BOOKS BY THE NEW DEAN OF ELY.

1. CHRIST and DEMOCRACY: on the Relations of Christianity to Social Questions of the Day. By the Rev. CHAS. W. STUBBS. THIRD EDITION. 2s. 6d.

2. The LAND and the LABOURERS: Facts and Experiments in Cottage Farming and Co-operative Agriculture. THIRD EDITION. 2s. 6d. [Social Science Series.]

3. The CONSCIENCE, and other POEMS. Fcap. 8vo. vellum, 2s. 6d. "Tender little lyrics of the heart and its affections."—Scotsman.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO. Paternoster-square, London.

JOHN C. NIMMO'S NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS.

In 1 vol. demy 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 21s. net.
With 7 Etchings and 3 Photo-Etchings printed on Japanese Paper. Also a few Large-Paper Copies, in super-royal 8vo. cloth, uncut edges, with Etchings printed as Proofs before Letters. Each numbered.

JOAN OF ARC. By LORD RONALD GOWER, F.S.A., a Trustee of the National Portrait Gallery.

"Charmingly printed, prettily illustrated by views of places connected with the heroine, becomingly dedicated, and written so that it can be read with pleasure, this book is probably the best popular account of Joan of Arc in our tongue."

Manchester Guardian.

A NEW WORK ON COACHING.

In 1 vol. royal 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 21s. net, with 20 Illustrations by J. and G. Temple.

BRIGHTON and its COACHES.

A History of the London and Brighton Road, with some Account of the Provincial Coaches that have run from Brighton. By WILLIAM C. A. BLEW, M.A., Editor of Vyner's 'Notitia Venetica' and Radcliffe's 'Noble Science of Fox-Hunting.' With 20 Illustrations by J. and G. Temple.

"One of the most delightful and thoroughly artistic of illustrated volumes."—Guardian.

"A history whence the leisurely reader can extract abundance of entertainment."—Athenæum.

"No more exhaustive work on local coaching has appeared for many years, if ever."

Saturday Review.

BY THE LATE JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

Second and Cheaper Edition. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with 50 Illustrations, bound in cloth, gilt top, price 21s. net.

The LIFE of MICHELANGELO

BUONARROTI. Based on Studies in the Archives of the Buonarroti Family at Florence. With Portrait and 50 Reproductions of the Works of the Master.

"It is not, perhaps, too much to say that this biography supersedes, for many purposes, any work in the English language."—Times.

"Mr. Symonds's admirable biography, in point of interest, of laborious execution, and merit of all kinds, may be said to rank first among the many valuable works on Italian art and literature which the author has previously given us."

Saturday Review.

THE BORDER EDITION OF THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

With Introductory Essays and Notes by ANDREW LANG.

Illustrated by 250 New and Original Etchings by Celebrated Artists, all printed on Japanese Paper.

In large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 6s. per vol.

"Of all the many collections of the Waverley Novels, Mr. Nimmo's 'Border' Edition is incomparably the most handsome and the most desirable. Type, paper, illustrations are altogether admirable."—Saturday Review.

"I cannot believe that any more superb avatar of Scott can ever appear than this 'Border' Edition, with its perfect print and exquisite etchings."

Truth.

NOW READY, ST. RONAN'S WELL.

2 vols.

With 10 Etchings by and after R. W. Macbeth, A.R.A.; W. Hole, R.S.A.; A. Forestier; and Sir George Reid, P.R.S.A.

Introduction and Notes by ANDREW LANG.

London:

JOHN C. NIMMO, 14, King William-street, Strand.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

8vo. 16s.

CORRESPONDENCE OF MR. JOSEPH JEKYLL WITH HIS SISTER-IN-LAW, LADY GERTRUDE SLOANE STANLEY.

1816—1838.

Edited, with a Brief Memoir, by the Hon. ALGERNON BOURKE.

[Just out.]

Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE BURDENS OF BELIEF, and other Poems.

By the DUKE OF ARGYLL.

[Just out.]

NEW VOLUME OF UNIVERSITY EXTENSION MANUALS, EDITED BY PROFESSOR KNIGHT.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE JACOBÆAN POETS.

By EDMUND W. GOSSE.

[Just out.]

FERGUSON'S HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURE IN ALL COUNTRIES.

With 1,000 Illustrations, 3 vols. medium 8vo. 3l. 3s.

NEW EDITION, REVISED.

ANCIENT AND MEDIÆVAL ARCHITECTURE.

Edited by R. PHÉNÉ SPIERS, F.S.A.

[Just out.]

8vo. 16s.

THE PSALTER OF 1539. A Landmark of English Literature.

COMPRISING THE TEXT, IN BLACK-LETTER TYPE.

Edited, with Notes, by JOHN EARLE, M.A.,
Professor of Anglo-Saxon in the University of Oxford.

[Just out.]

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE CHRISTIAN ETHIC.

By WILLIAM KNIGHT, LL.D.,

Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of St. Andrews.

[Just out.]

DEAN STANLEY'S LIFE AND WORKS.

With Portraits, 3 vols. 8vo. 32s.

SECOND EDITION of the LIFE and CORRESPONDENCE of

ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY, late Dean of Westminster. By HOWLAND E. PROTHERO, M.A., Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford. With the Co-operation and Sanction of the Very Rev. G. G. BRADLEY, Dean of Westminster.

SINAI and PALESTINE, in connection with their History. With Maps. 12s.

The BIBLE in the HOLY LAND: being Extracts from the above Work, for Young Persons. 3s. 6d.

LECTURES on the HISTORY of the JEWISH CHURCH, from Abraham to the Christian Era. With Portrait. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

LECTURES on the HISTORY of the EASTERN CHURCH. Crown 8vo. 6s.

SERMONS and ADDRESSES to CHILDREN, including the Beatitudes—the Faithful Nurse. Post 8vo. 3s. 6d.

HISTORICAL MEMORIALS of CANTERBURY. 6s.

LIFE and CORRESPONDENCE of DR. ARNOLD. With Portrait. 3 vols. 12s.

MEMOIR of EDWARD, CATHERINE, and MARY STANLEY. 9s.

HISTORICAL MEMORIALS of WESTMINSTER ABBEY, from its Foundation down to the Year 1874. 16s.

HISTORY of the CHURCH of SCOTLAND. 1s. 6d.

The EPISTLES of ST. PAUL to the CORINTHIANS. 12s.

SERMONS PREACHED at WESTMINSTER on SPECIAL OCCASIONS. 12s.

CHRISTIAN INSTITUTIONS: Essays on Ecclesiastical Subjects. 6s.

ESSAYS on CHURCH and STATE. Crown 8vo. 6s.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NOVELS AND STORIES.

SECOND EDITION.

LIKE a SISTER. By MADELINE CRICHTON. In 3 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The PEOPLE says:—"We predict for her a prosperous career. She writes good English, and works out her plot with considerable skill."

THE NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'GOOD DAME FORTUNE.'
WHAT HAPPENED at MORWYN. By MARIA A. HOYER. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"It is refreshing to take up so bright and wholesome a story as 'What Happened at Morwyn,' and one written in a style so fresh and natural. Its heroine realises as nearly as may be Wordsworth's famous description of woman as she should be..... Cordially recommending it to our readers."

NEW MILITARY NOVEL.

DEFERRED PAY; or, a Major's Dilemma. By Lieut.-Colonel W. H. M'CAUSLAND. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The WHITEHALL REVIEW says:—"Will well repay perusal, and will be found of extreme interest to all Service readers."

THE NEW SOCIETY NOVEL.

FIRST LARGE EDITION EXHAUSTED, SECOND NOW READY.

UPPER BOHEMIANS: a Romance. By F. G. WALPOLE, Author of 'Lord Floysham.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MORNING POST says:—"An entertaining book, by a clever man of the world. Bright sketches of men and things here and abroad. The author's pictures of Roman society are excellent."

FIRST EDITION SOLD, SECOND THIS DAY.

WEST CLIFF: a Romance of Portland Isle. By RASTON KING. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MANCHESTER EXAMINER says:—"It is an intensely interesting and very well-written book, which we can heartily recommend."

EDWIN ELLIOTT'S SUCCESSFUL NOVEL.

NETTA. By EDWIN ELLIOTT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The ACADEMY says:—"Mr. Elliott is to be welcomed..... A quite excellent story. Style..... so good..... Not only is the interest permanently sustained, but passages of dramatic vividness detain the reader."

FIFTH EDITION NEARLY EXHAUSTED, SIXTH IN PREPARATION.

DR. JANET of HARLEY STREET. By Dr. ARABELLA KENNELLY, Author of 'Molly and her Man-o'-War.' Crown 8vo. cloth 6s.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'IN A MOMENT OF PASSION.'

BABETTE VIVIAN: a Novel. By CHRISTEL. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MANCHESTER EXAMINER says:—"A good plot and some pleasant characters..... It is certainly a good novel, likely to be enjoyed by all who read it."

"ZORG": a Story of British Guiana. By VERNON KIRKE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The WESTMINSTER REVIEW says:—"There is originality about the character of Sarnia..... Described with force and pathos."

HER ANGEL FRIEND. By MONICA TREGARTHEN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Just out.]

MARIA, COUNTESS of SALETTO. From the Italian of E. ARBIB, by SYDNEY KING. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Just out.]
An animated, interesting, and vivid picture of Modern Italian Society.

MARIANELA. From the Spanish of B. PEREZ GALDOS. By MARY WHARTON, Translator of 'Lady Perfecta,' from the same Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MANCHESTER GUARDIAN says:—"Modern Spanish fiction is not well known to English readers, and there is a consequent freshness in 'Marianela.' Incidentally to the story questions of more than passing importance are discussed with originality and sympathy."
The GLASGOW HERALD says:—"One of the ablest novelists that Spain has produced."

BJÖRNSON AND TURGENIEFF.

The BRIDAL MARCH. From the Norwegian of BJÖRNSON; and The WATCH. From the Russian of IVAN TURGENIEFF. Translated by JOHN EVAN WILLIAMS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The LITERARY WORLD says:—"The Bridal March,' with its vivid descriptions, will be read with interest..... Charming told, the characters are skillfully drawn, and stand out in strong relief. 'The Watch' is replete with vigorous touches and wholly original. It exhibits the writer's peculiar gift of character drawing, supplemented by effective descriptive power."

The HERO of the "PELICAN": an Ocean Drama. By PERCY DW LIGER. Crown 8vo. pictorial cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just out.]

The GIRL MUSICIAN. By MIRIAM YOUNG. With Full-Page Illustrations by Matthew Stretch. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The LIVERPOOL MERCURY says:—"This is a very pleasing story. The book is quite delightful."

The PURSUIT of a CHIMERA: being a Mid-winter's Day Dream. By C. ELVEY COPE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"Much of the drama is singularly dream like, and the mingling of fancy and oddity shows an excellent stimulation of genuine dreaming..... The story is presented with considerable power."

The VENETIAN SECRET; or, the Art of the Past. By CHARLES LUTYENS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"His characters are agreeably drawn, and are neatly differentiated without any traces of exaggeration."

The OLD HOUSE of RAYNER, &c. By GRIMLEY HILL. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"Eminently readable..... Written to entertain..... Fulfil their object very adequately."

CLENCHED ANTAGONISMS. By LEWIS IRAM. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"A powerful and ghastly narrative of the triumph of force over virtue."

VANITY FAIR says:—"Lewis Iram is original, unconventional, powerful, and interesting."

SOCIETY says:—"An exceedingly able and enthralling story."

DR. WEEDON'S WAIF. By KATE SOMERS. Illustrated with Full-Page Drawings by MATTHEW STRETCH. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

VANITY FAIR says:—"One of the prettiest and most touching stories we have read for a long time."

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"Vividly and pathetically told."

BUT: a Domestic Sketch. By BACHELOR ABBOTSFORD. Illustrated throughout with numerous Drawings. Crown 8vo. picture cover, 1s.

The SCOTSMAN says:—"It draws its fun from the adventures of a bachelor among children. It is brightly written and illustrated."

The STRANGE ADVENTURES of a YOUNG LADY of QUALITY, 1705. By DOBOTHRA TOWNSHEND. Crown 8vo. paper cover, 1s.

The Bristol Mercury says:—"It is genuine, true, and natural from the first page to the last, and the style of the period is admirably imitated."

NEW WORKS.

SIXTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE as an IRISH LANDLORD. Memoirs of JOHN HAMILTON, D.L. of St. Brann's, Donegal. Edited, with Introduction, by Rev. H. C. WHITE, late Chaplain, Paris. With Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Just out.]

THE STANDARD WORK ON AUTHORSHIP.

The AUTHOR'S MANUAL. By PERCY RUSSELL. With Prefatory Remarks by Mr. GLADSTONE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. Sixth Edition. With Portrait.

The WESTMINSTER REVIEW says:—"A very complete manual and guide for journalist and author..... It is not merely a practical work—it is literary and appreciative of literature in its best sense..... We have little else but praise for the volume."

A CENTENARY MONOGRAPH.

CHARLOTTE CORDAY; or, a Hundred Years After. By MARY JEFFERSON, Author of 'Roman Cameos,' 'Through all the Varying Year,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just out.]

NEW POETRY.

SOME TRANSLATIONS from CHARLES BAUDELAIRE, POET and SYMBOLIST. By H. C. With Portrait. Fopp. 8vo. elegant parchment, 2s. 6d.

The TIMES says:—"Are executed with no little metrical skill and command of poetic diction."

BRUCE'S HEART, and other Poems. By EDWARD TOOHEY WELLS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just out.]

OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO.'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

THIS DAY,
NEW NOVEL by EDEN PHILLPOTTS,

At all Libraries.

SOME EVERY-DAY FOLKS.
SOME EVERY-DAY FOLKS.
SOME EVERY-DAY FOLKS.

Author of 'Folly and Fresh Air.'
3 vols. crown 8vo.

Dedicated by special permission to
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

MASTERS OF FRENCH MUSIC. By
ARTHUR HERVEY. With Portraits. Crown 8vo.
cloth extra, 3s. [Immediately.]

MASTERS OF ENGLISH MUSIC:

Sir Arthur Sullivan, Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, F. H. Cowen, Dr. C. H. H. Parry, and Dr. C. V. Stanford. By CHARLES WILLBY. With Portraits of the Composers at different periods of their lives. Autograph Facsimiles of Music, &c. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s.
These Volumes form the two issues of the Series "MAS-TERS OF CONTEMPORARY MUSIC." The Third Volume,
"MASTERS OF GERMAN MUSIC," by J. A. FULLER
MAYLAND, uniform with the above, is in the press.

POPULAR SERIES OF SHORT STORIES BY BRITISH AUTHORS.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.
IN A NORTH COUNTRY VILLAGE.

By M. E. FRANCIS, Author of 'Whither?'

ATHENÆUM.—"The whole book is so good that it ought to be read from cover to cover."

ACADEMY.—"Charmingly written."

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Drawn with such skill and sympathy as recall the art of Crabbe himself."

FALL MAIL GAZETTE.—"A book for laughter and for tears, a book worthy to stand side by side with 'Cranford'."

CATHOLIC TIMES.—"If there is likeness between Miss Mitford and Mrs. Francis's productions, there is greater difference, and the difference is in favour of the modern writer."

CHRISTIAN WORLD.—"The author has given us a North Country 'Thurms'."

CATHOLIC NEWS.—"The fragrance of new-mown hay and the meadow sweet linger round its pages."

STAR.—"A series of delicate genre pictures as fresh and as picturesque as the life they depict so truly and so admirably."

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"The stories never drag, but are told with spirit and 'go.'"

SCOTSMAN.—"The sketches of local celebrities, characters, and traditions are really charming."

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

SIX COMMON THINGS.

By E. F. BENSON, Author of 'Dodo.'

MORNING POST.—"The cynicism of 'Dodo' hardly furnished the possession of the gift of pathos which is prominent in Mr. E. F. Benson's sketches quaintly named
'Six Common Things.'"

SCOTSMAN.—"The literary quality of the work is so good that the sketches are never dreary."

HOSPITAL.—"Mr. Benson has taught us in this little book to look at life from the standpoint of its pathos."

YORKSHIRE POST.—"They demand no serious exercise of the intelligence, and they are entertaining."

PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR.—"A very clever piece of work."

GLOBE.—"A very tender sympathy with poor humanity, and a quick eye for the pathos of humble lives."

MANCHESTER COURIER.—"We can cordially recommend this elegantly written and beautifully printed book."

GLASGOW HERALD.—"Full of contrasts, but it is all extremely vivacious."

BLACK AND WHITE.—"Some of these stories have depth and meaning, and show a marked advance on the 'Dodo' style."

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

THE THIRD VOLUME.
THE LITTLE WIDOW.

By WILLIAM TIREBUCK, Author of 'Dorrie,' &c.
[Immediately.]

London: OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO.
45, Abchurch-lane, W.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO.'S LIST of NEW and STANDARD BOOKS.

SUPPLIED BY THEIR SPECIAL AGENTS,

GAY & BIRD.

The Dollar is charged at Four Shillings net.

COLLEGE TOM THOMAS HAZARD, SON of ROBERT, called A Steady of Life in Marriage in the Eighteenth Century. By his Grandson's Granddaughter, Caroline Hazard. 8vo. cloth, gilt top, Illustrated, 6s. net.

CERAM (Great Capitales Series). By Theodore A. Dodge. 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 100 Maps, Charts, and Woodcuts of Armour, &c., 25s. net.

HANDBOOK. Uniform with above. 50s. net.

ALEXANDER. Uniform with the above. 25s. net.

AMERICAN MARINE. The DRIPPING QUESTION IN HISTORY and POLITICS. By William W. Bates. 8vo. cloth, 15s. net.

GREEK LITERATURE and other Architectural Remains. By Henry Van
Ness. Crown 8vo. cloth, Plates and Col., 6s. net.

DANTON. The DIVINE COMEDY. Translated into English Verse by Thomas William Parsons. With a Preface by Charles Elliot Norton.
Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

FORMS. By Thomas William Parsons. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.
net.

RALLIAC (MAYHEW M.).—THE STORY OF MALTA. Crown 8vo.
cloth, 6s. net.

—MONTAÑA AMERICA. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

—DUE NORTH. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

—DUE SOUTH. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

—DUE WEST. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

—THE NEW ROMANEO. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

—UNDER THE MOUNTAIN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

ITALIAN INDEPENDENCE. THE BAWN of. By William H. Russell.
Thayer. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 2 Maps, cloth gilt, 15s. net.

FRENCH REVOLUTION. THE EVE of the. By Howard J. Lovell.
Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

GOETHE OF FAUL. The. By Charles Carroll Everett. Crown 8vo.
cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

EXPRESSION. THE SYNTHESIS OF PHILOSOPHY of. By M. T. Brown.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

WHITE MEMORIES (Phillips Brooks, Whitmore, Lucy Larcom). By Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney. 8vo. 2 beautiful Portraits, white cloth gilt, 6s. net.

RELIGION OF GOD AS UNITY and TRINITY. The. By F. H. Stoddard.
D.D. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

JAPAN. THE AMERICAN MISADVENTURE. In. By Rev. M. L. Gordon.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN DOORS and OUT. A Book for Amateurs. By Alexander Mack. Crown 8vo. Plates and Col., cloth, 6s. net.

ALABAMA CLAIMS. MR. FISK and Mr. A. Chapter of Diplomatic History. By J. C. Macmillan. 8vo. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

TWENTY YEARS at SEA. By Frederic Stanhope Hill (C.M.B.).
Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

BOOKS and THEIR USE. By Joseph Henry Thayer, D.D. Crown 8vo.
cloth, 6s. net.

MYTHS and MYTHMAKERS. By John Fiske. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

IDEA of GOD. By John Fiske. 12mo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

COMMON SENSE in RELIGION. By James Freeman Clarke. Crown 8vo.
cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

EVERY-DAY RELIGION. By James Freeman Clarke. Crown 8vo.
cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

THE NEW WORLD:

A QUARTERLY REVIEW OF RELIGION, ETHICS,
AND THEOLOGY.

Annual Subscription, 12s. post free; each Number, 3s.;
postage, 6d.

CONTENTS OF VOL. II., 1893.

BABYLONIAN EXILE. The. J. W. Williams.

BOSTON PULPIT. The. C. A. Bartol.

RELIGIOUS HERESY TRIAL. The. C. K. Ogden.

CHINESE PEOPLE, THE RELIGION of. The. C. de Harlez.

CONGREGATIONAL PULPIT. The. J. M. Croker.

COSMOPOLITAN RELIGION. C. A. Bartol.

CRISIS, THE ETHICS of. A. Momerie.

DEMON. THE ROLE of the, in the ANCIENT ORIENTAL RELIGION.
E. Amelinckx.

ETHICS, THE TRIPLE STANDARD in. O. Michener.

EVOLUTION. A Re-examination. C. Lloyd Morgan.

FOLK-SONG OF ISRAEL in the MOUTH of the PROPHETS. The.
Karl Hilde.

FOURTH GOSPEL, THE PLACE of the, in the NEW TESTAMENT
LITERATURE. Orelli Cene.

FRENCH PROTESTANTISM, THE SOCIAL MOVEMENT in. R. Bos.
HERESY in ATRERNS in the TIME of PLATO. F. H. Tarbell.

IDEALISM, THE ETHICAL and RELIGIOUS IMPORT of. May Rindler.

INSPIRATION, THE PERSONAL FACTOR in. R. H. H. Hall.

ISRAEL in EGYPT. C. H. Toy.

JESUS' SELF-DESIGNATION in the SYNOPTIC GOSPELS. Orelli Cene.

JOHN'S THEOLOGY, THE PECULIARITIES of. G. R. Stevens.

PARLIAMENT of RELIGIONS. The. C. H. Toy.

PEABODY, ANDREW FRESTON. P. M. Mason.

PLATO'S CONCEPTION of the GOOD LIFE. R. H. H. Hall.

PLATON. THE DEVELOPMENT of the. J. F. F. F.

RELIGION and MODERNITY. THE RELATIONS of. W. H. H. Hall.

RELIGION, MODERN EXPLANATIONS of. H. Schult.

REMAN, BENNET. James Harrison.

SOCIALISM, THE PROPHETS, THE ALLEGED. A. W. H. Hall.

SOCIALISM, THE NEW, and ECONOMIC. W. H. H. Hall.

TENNYSON and PROSE as SPIRITUAL FORCES. C. C. Everett.

THOROUGHNESS in THEOLOGY. R. A. Armstrong.

TRINITARIAN CONTROVERSY, A WAY out of the. J. M. Whiston.

UNITARIANISM, THE NEW. R. H. H. Hall.

WHITFIELD'S SPIRITUAL CAREER. J. W. Chastwick.

BOOK REVIEWS.

London: GAY & BIRD, 5, Chandos-street, Strand.
Boston, U.S.A.: HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

I.
Florence Warden's MY CHILD and I: a
Woman's Story. By the Author of 'A Young Wife's Trial,' 'A Wild Wooing,' 'A Witch of the Mills,' &c.
3 vols.

II.
A. Perrin's INTO TEMPTATION. 2 vols.
Audience—"The story which the writer of 'Into Temptation' puts into the mouth of the young and spirited heroine is at once interesting and painful. Her own peculiarities of character are amusingly depicted. The novel is very readable in the sense that it is written in a bright and sprightly style."

III.
The late Lady Duffus Hardy's A BURIED
SIN. By the Author of 'Beryl Porteus,' 'Paul Wynter's Sacrifice,' 'A Dangerous Retirement,' &c. 3 vols.

Daily Telegraph—"This charming story displays all the grace of style, lightness of touch, and sprightliness of humour, which characterised Lady Hardy's earlier works of fiction. The plot is well constructed, and affords abundant opportunity for the development of clever and striking characterisations. Imagery and descriptive matter shines with a good thing."
Pall Mall Gazette—"The author has been skilful enough to work up a story of considerable attraction. A very making story, that will please many and most certainly offend none."
Edinburgh—"The human elements of the story are cleverly and tenderly dealt with."
Daily Chronicle—"It is an unusually witty story."
Pall Mall Gazette—"The late Lady Duffus Hardy has told in a pleasant fashion a story of love and tragedy and, without exception, it is a novel in the reading of which a good deal of amusement may be found."

IV.
Mrs. Lovett Cameron's A TRAGIC
MURDER. By the Author of 'In a Grass Country,'
'Jack's Secret,' 'A Master's Sin,' &c. 2 vols.

Punch—"Our compliments to Mrs. Lovett Cameron on 'A Tragic Murder.'" Country Gentleman—"Mrs. Cameron's well-wrought story... is brilliant and pleasantly told."
Edinburgh—"In all that Mrs. Lovett Cameron writes there is a charm of gracefulness and wistful feeling, with an undertone of power and intellectuality that places her novel as a rule far above the average, and insures her a popularity, which so far has not failed in the book before us. These characteristics are not wanting. There are the same tender touches, the same good taste and feeling. The book bears the impress of her true art."
Edinburgh—"The story is agreeably written, and there are some amusing passages in it."

V.
B. M. Croker's A THIRD PERSON. By the Author of 'Interference,' 'Two Masters,' 'Prophet
Fido,' &c. 2 vols.

Athenæum—"A 'Third Person' is a bright, clever, and amusing story—carrying the reader along through a natural narrative of love." Edinburgh—"There is a great deal of 'go' in 'A Third Person.' The story is told with confidence and vivacity. The go forward carries you through the two volumes in a very short time."
Morning Post—"Any one with a fit of the blues, or who, from some reason or another, requires to be brought back to a more hopeful view of things in general, can be recommended to read the author's entertaining and witty novel. The love tale is sympathetically told.
Altogether the book is full of bright character sketches and genuine humour."
Daily Telegraph—"A 'Third Person' is at once a highly entertaining novel. There is not a dull page in the whole book. Mrs. Croker's delightful story is told with a great vivacity and engaging spontaneity.
The book positively comes with convincing character studies, delineated with exquisite delicacy of touch and careful observance of artistic unities."
Family Fair—"Most of the characters are well drawn. Indeed, this is in every respect a capital novel—no amusing a novel."

VI.
"Rita's" THE ENDING of MY DAY: the Story of a Stormy Life. By the Author of 'Shadows,'
'The Cottage Farmhouse,' 'The Man in Fustian,' &c.
3 vols.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND BOOKSTALLS.

John Strange Winter's ONLY HUMAN.
Fourth Edition. In picture boards, 3s.

Hume Nisbet's A BUSH GIRL'S ROMANCE.
With Illustrations by the Author. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

Mrs. Lovett Cameron's WEAK WOMAN.
Third Edition. In picture boards, 3s. [Immediately.]

AND John Strange Winter's AUNT JOHNNIE.
Second Edition. Cloth, 3s. 6d. [Immediately.]

A New Serial Tale by Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Dawn,' entitled 'PETER'S WIFE,' and another entitled 'THE DAUGHTERS of JON,' by Darley Dale, Author of 'The Village Blacksmith,' commenced in the

JANUARY NUMBER of BELGRAVIA. 1s.

A New Serial Tale, entitled 'A BAD LOT,' by Mrs. Lovett Cameron, and another entitled 'A GILBY FOLLY,' by Annie Thomas (Mrs.
Frieder Culp), commenced in the JANUARY NUMBER of LONDON SOCIETY.

One Shilling

F. V. WHITE & CO.
14, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

The INCARNATION and COMMON LIFE. By Brooke Foss WESTCOTT, D.D. D.C.L., Bishop of Durham. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The MOTHER'S LEGACY to HER UNBORN CHILD. By ELIZABETH JOCKELINE, Anno 1622. Reprinted from the Sixth Impression. With an Introduction by the Lord BISHOP of ROCHESTER. Crown 16mo. 4s. 6d.

FISHERS of MEN. Addressed to the Diocese of Canterbury in his Third Visitation. By EDWARD WHITE, Archbishop. Crown 8vo. 6s.

TIMES.—"With keen insight and sagacious counsel the Archbishop surveys the condition and prospects of the Church."

The RESURRECTION of OUR LORD. By William Milligan, D.D., late Professor of Divinity and Biblical Criticism in the University of Aberdeen. Sixth Thousand. Crown 8vo. 5s.

SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE. A Narrative of the Events of his Life. By JAMES DYKES CAMPBELL. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

TIMES.—"A reproduction, revised and expanded, of the original and masterly biographical memoir of the poet, prefixed by Mr. Campbell to his edition of his poetical works published last year."

DAILY CHRON.—"We spoke in high praise of Mr. Campbell's biography on its first appearance as an introduction to his edition of the poems. The present release is virtually the same as its adieu princeps; but it has one great advantage in being printed in a separate volume, with large, open type, upon a generous page."

GUARDIAN.—"Nothing so good exists on the subject."

GLASGOW HERALD.—"In this form the narrative will undoubtedly supersede all our previous authorities on the poet's life. One of the most excellent of modern biographies."

PAIN, PLEASURE, and ÆSTHETICS. An Essay concerning the Psychology of Pain and Pleasure, with Special Reference to Æsthetics. By HENRY BUTCHES MARSHALL, M.A. 8vo. 6s. 6d. net.

CHAPTERS on GREEK DRESS. By Maria Millington Evans. With Illustrations. 8vo. 5s. net.

TIMES.—"Her work is done in a manner which is at once thoroughly scholarly and thoroughly practical."

DICTIONARY of POLITICAL ECONOMY. Edited by R. H. INGLIS PALGRAVE, F.R.S. Vol. I. A—E. Medium 8vo. 21s. net.

DAILY CHRONicle.—"A most useful work, wherein conciseness is blended with accurate information in a quite unusual degree."

SPEAKER.—"The book promises to be in its complete form a permanent and authoritative addition to the front ranks of works of reference."

LADY WILLIAM. By Mrs. Oliphant. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"Mrs. Oliphant has proved once again, if proof were necessary, that when she chooses she is, among English story-tellers, easily first. To read it is to feel that thrill of admiration for the genuine artist which is so rare."

BOOKMAN.—"Mrs. Oliphant has written no novel for a long time of keener interest and better workmanship."

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"It is as restful, and soothing, and healthy as are certain sane-minded, even-tempered people met with all too seldom in every-day life."

SPEAKER.—"It has that touch of natural simplicity which is the hall-mark of Mrs. Oliphant's work."

DAGONET the JESTER. By Malcolm Kingsley Macmillan. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

*. This story was published anonymously in 1896, but is now (1894) reissued under the author's name.

ACADEMY.—"This book seems to us to be one of the most excellently conceived tales we are acquainted with. The story is very simple—just the love tale of a poor jester who has been expelled from his lord's castle, a blacksmith's son who becomes a scholar, and two simple good English maidens."

GUARDIAN.—"A strange dreamy fancy seems to have devised the history of 'Dagonet the Jester.'.....Narrated in a quaint, musing fashion, as if by a man recalling events long past."

MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

The STORY of DICK. By Major Gambier Parry, Author of 'Reynell Taylor, a Biography.' 4s. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

DAILY CHRONicle.—"A very wholesome story for the young. The descriptions show a close and loving observation of the country."

SPECTATOR.—"This is a pretty character-study of boy-nature, illustrated throughout with descriptions, worked, it is clear, with a very full and loving knowledge of rural life."

THE EVANSLEY SERIES.—NEW VOLUMES.

PARTIAL PORTRAITS. By Henry James. Globe 8vo. 5s.

The COLLECTED WORKS of THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY, F.R.S. In Monthly Volumes. Globe 8vo. 5s. each Volume.

Vol. V. SCIENCE and CHRISTIAN TRADITION.

NATURAL SCIENCE. A Monthly Review of Scientific Progress.

Vol. IV., No. 34, FEBRUARY, 1894, price One Shilling net.

Contents.

NOTES and COMMENTS.

1. NEUTER INSECTS and LAMARCKISM. W. PLATT BALL.

2. NATURAL SCIENCE in JAPAN. II. PRESENT. F. A. BATES, M.A. F.G.S.

3. THE INFLUENCE of VOLCANIC DYKES UPON LITTORAL LIFE and SCENERY. JAMES HORNELL.

4. The LA PLATA MUSHUM. R. LYDERKER, B.A. F.Z.S.

5. PLANT DISEASES and BACTERIA. GEORGE MURRAY, F.L.S.

6. THE CAUSES of VARIATION in the COMPOSITION of IGNEOUS ROCKS. Professor H. J. JOHNSTON-LAVIS, M.D. F.G.S.

SOME NEW BOOKS.—OBITUARY.—NEWS of UNIVERSITIES, MUSEUMS, and SOCIETIES.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

PUBLISHED THIS DAY,

COUNT TOLSTOY'S NEW WORK.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. price 10s.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN YOU.

By COUNT LEO TOLSTOY.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Portrait, 10s. 6d.

VILLIERS DE L'ISLE ADAM: HIS LIFE AND WORKS.

From the French of VICOMTE ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HUSSEY.

By LADY MARY LOYD.

In 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. net.

A COMMENTARY ON THE WORKS OF HENRIK IBSEN.

By HJALMAR HJORTH BOYSEN, Author of 'Goethe and Schiller,' 'Essays on German Literature,' &c.

THE ROMANCE OF AN EMPRESS. CATHERINE II. OF RUSSIA.

From the French of R. WALISENWSKI.

In 2 vols. 8vo. with Portrait, 28s.

[At all Libraries.]

TIMES.—"This book is based in a great measure on the confessions of the Empress herself; it gives striking pictures of the condition of the contemporary Russia which she did so much to mould as well as to expand. Few stories in history are more romantic than that of Catherine II. of Russia, with its mysterious incidents and thrilling episodes; few characters present more curious problems."

A FRIEND OF THE QUEEN.

MARIE ANTOINETTE—COUNT FERSEN.

From the French of PAUL GAULOT.

By Mrs. CASHEL HOEY.

3 vols. 8vo. with Portraits, 34s.

[At all Libraries.]

TIMES.—"M. Gaulot's work tells with new and authentic details the romantic story of Count Fersen's devotion to Marie Antoinette, of his share in the celebrated Flight to Varennes, and in many other well-known episodes of the unhappy Queen's life."

NEW NOVELS.

A SUPERFLUOUS WOMAN.

IN THREE VOLUMES.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"A novel upon which has been expended an infinity of thought, and the pages of which betray a capacity for the analysis of human feelings and emotions rarely to be met with."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"There is much strong and some pathetic writing in 'A Superfluous Woman,' and we dare say it will be proclaimed a remarkable book. It shows power and imagination in no small degree."

A COMEDY OF MASKS. By Ernest DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE. In 3 vols.

[At all Libraries.]

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A fascinating book. The concluding scene is very powerful."

London:

WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NEW WORKS.

FREDERIC HILL: an Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform. Being the Recollections of a Retired Civil Servant. By his Daughter, CONSTANCE HILL. 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 10s.

"A most entertaining book, teeming with anecdotes and reminiscences of notabilities, and also of incidents that carry us back to days which now seem far distant."—Manchester Examiner.

"A most entertaining volume. Much of Mr. Hill's recollections is delightfully fresh."—Athenæum.

"Unexpected but welcome light on the political and social movements of the century, together with much pleasant gossip of a personal kind, is to be found in these pages."—Lancet.

"A volume which in interest reads almost like a romance, and by those who take any interest in social reform it will be read with special profit and avidity. It has been admirably edited by Miss Hill."—Dundee Courier.

"The pages teem with good stories and pieces of history, local and national, political and literary, all told with charming simplicity and distinctness."—Birmingham Daily Gazette.

The CONVERSATIONS of JAMES NORTHCOTE, R.A. Recorded by WILLIAM HAZLITT. A New Edition. Edited, with an Essay on Hazlitt and a Note on Northcote, by EDMUND GOSSE. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Will be welcomed by a considerable section of the public—not only by those who are interested in matters of pictorial art, but by all who are attracted to bright and lively gossip of the miscellaneous sort. The Conversations are eminently readable."—Globe.

WOMEN of LETTERS, including Memoirs of Lady Morgan, the Misses Barry, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, Lady Ann Bernard, Sarah Countess Cowper, Mrs. Opie, and Lady Duff Gordon. By GERTRUDE TOWNSHEND MAYER. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s. [Just ready.]

NEW NOVELS AT THE LIBRARIES.

Now ready,
BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE SIN OF JOOST AVELINGH.'

THE GREATER GLORY.

By MAARTEN MAARTENS,
Author of 'An Old Maid's Love,' &c.
3 vols. crown 8vo.

THE SECOND EDITION OF DIANA TEMPEST.

By MARY CHOLMONDELEY,
Author of 'The Danvers Jewels,' 'Sir Charles Danvers,' &c.
3 vols. crown 8vo.

The BARON DE BOOKWORMS in French says:—

"Those who love a really good novel, excellent both in story and in literary style, will be thankful to acquire, by purchase or loan, the goods—the extra good goods—which the Gods provide. There is neither page nor paragraph in these three volumes that can be skipped without loss to the skipper. Each character is carefully analyzed, in so incisive and epigrammatic a style, and with evidently so rare a knowledge of moral anatomy, as will occasionally remind the reader of Thackeray. The Baron wishes his friends no worse luck than a rainy afternoon for the perusal of 'Diana Tempest.'"

"Of Miss Cholmondeley's clever novels, 'Diana Tempest' is quite the cleverest."—Times.

The VICAR of LANGTHWAITE.
By LILY WATSON. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

BRITOMART. By Mrs. Herbert Martin. Author of 'Bonnie Lesley,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

SPEEDWELL. By Lady Guendolen Ramsden. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.
Now ready, 6th Edition, 1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 12s. 6d. bound, gilt edges.
LODGE'S PEERAGE and BARONET-AGE for 1894. Corrected by the NOBILITY

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORDY JAFFRESON.
Now ready, 12 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

A BOOK of RECOLLECTIONS. By JOHN CORDY JAFFRESON, Author of 'A Book about Lawyers,' 'A Book about Doctors,' &c.

"The book is readable enough, and full of pleasant gossip about men of letters and other celebrities, great and small, whom Mr. Jaffreson has known."—Times.

"Mr. Jaffreson's volumes are a rich storehouse of anecdotes, to which the prudent reader will himself resort without a moment's delay."—Daily Telegraph.

"There are plenty of good stories in Mr. Jaffreson's volumes, which are sure to have a large number of delighted readers."—Globe.

NEW NOVELS.

THE WHITE AIGRETTE. By Vincent. Author of 'Cathedral Bells,' 'Wrong on Both Sides,' &c. 3 vols.

THE PRICE of a PEARL. By Eleanor Holmes. Author of 'Through another Man's Eyes,' &c. 3 vols.

"The story is very pleasantly told, for the author has the knack of presenting even the most trivial details of her scheme in language that is always refined and telling."—Daily Telegraph.

GOOD DAME FORTUNE. By Maria A. Hoyle. 3 vols.

"No one who desires to read a novel easily with the hope of being interested can fail to enjoy this book, and it is an excellent specimen of a kind of novel always in demand."—Manchester Examiner.

BROKEN FORTUNES. By Henry Cresswell. Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wily Widow,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Cresswell's pages are interwoven in the strongest of images by a series of subtle contrivances, the cleverness of which never oversteps the limits of probability. 'Broken Fortunes' is entitled to a place of honour among the ablest fictional works of the year."—Daily Telegraph.

IN AN ALPINE VALLEY. By G. Manville Fick. Author of 'Makno House,' 'The Master of the Carmichael,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Fick knows how to express, and he carries his reader along with him to his triumphant finish."—Athenæum.

AT SOCIETY'S EXPENSE. By Algernon Goring. Author of 'A Mocked Lady,' 'A Village Hampden,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Goring is a clever writer, and his new story is smart, original, and pleasant."—Illustration.

SECOND EDITION OF
TO RIGHT the WRONG. By Edna Lyall. Author of 'Domina,' 'We Two,' &c. 2 vols.

NEW ADDITION TO HURST & BLACKETT'S
THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.
In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SIR ANTHONY. By Adeline Ser-Grant. Author of 'Chaper Brookes's Daughter,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 4s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.
DONOVAN: a Modern Englishman.

WE TWO. | IN the GOLDEN DAYS.
KNIGHT ERRANT. | WON BY WAITING.
A HANDY HOUSEMAN.

A SELECTION FROM
HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME, PRICES 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.'
JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN. CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.

MAN. A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS ABOUT WOMEN.

A LIFE for a LIFE. NOTHING NEW.

MISTRESS and MAID. THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK.'
NATURE AND HUMAN NATURE. THE OLD JUDGE; or, Life in a Colony.

WISDOM AND MODERN INSTANCES. TRAITS OF AMERICAN HUMOUR.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.
DAVID RIGHTEOUS. | ALBO FORBES.
ROBERT FALCONER. | SIR GIBBIE.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.
ADAM GRAEME. | LIFE of INVING.
LAIRD of SORLAW. | A BOSS in JUNE.
AGNES. | THREE JUNIOR.

IT WAS A LOVER and HIS LASS.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

The FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

FEBRUARY, 1894.

1. THE LATE PROFESSOR TYNDALL. By Herbert Spencer.
2. OXFORD REVISITED. By Prof. Goldwin Smith.
3. FABIAN ECONOMICS. By W. H. Mallock.
4. SCIENCE and MONTE CARLO. By Prof. Karl Pearson.
5. ANTARCTICA: a Vanished Austral Land. By Henry O. Fiebert.
6. A LONDON HOUSE of SHELTER. By Harold Boulton.
7. THE ITALY of TO-DAY. By an Observer.
8. THE LIFE and WORKS of RHM BRANDT. By Walter Armstrong.
9. THE EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY BILL. By Vaughan Nash.
10. THE RELIGION of the PIANOFORTE. By G. Bernard Shaw.
11. THE REVOLT of the DAUGHTERS. By Lady Jem.

HERBERT SPENCER.

APHORISMS from the WRITINGS of HERBERT SPENCER. Selected by JULIA RAYMOND GINGELL. With Portrait of Herbert Spencer. Crown 8vo. [Shortly.]

Colonel ELLIS, 1st West India Regiment.
The YORUBA-SPEAKING PEOPLES of the SLAVE COAST of WEST AFRICA: their Religion, Manners, Customs, Laws, Language, &c. By Colonel A. B. ELLIS, 1st West India Regiment, Author of 'History of the Gold Coast of West Africa.' With an Appendix and a Map. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The Hon. Mrs. GREVILLE-NUGENT.
A LAND of MOSQUES and MARABOUTS. By the Hon. Mrs. GREVILLE-NUGENT. Illustrated. Demy 8vo. 14s.

"Mrs. Greville-Nugent has a very agreeable pen, pointed with a very pretty wit.... A brighter volume of its sort we have not seen for a long time.... The unstrained gaiety and zest of her pages will commend them to hundreds who do not care a sham sequin about ordinary books of travel."—Daily Chronicle.

PRINCE HENRI D'ORLÉANS.
AROUND TONKIN and SIAM. By PRINCE HENRI D'ORLÉANS. Translated by C. B. PITMAN. With 28 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 14s.

"The book is valuable as containing many facts; it is interesting as conveying the impressions of an observer assuredly not disinterested, but fairly desirous to see things as they are. Its literary claims we very readily acknowledge."—World.

FREDERICK BOYLE.
The PROPHET JOHN: a Romance. By FREDERICK BOYLE. Crown 8vo. 5s.

"The Prophet John, by Frederick Boyle, sells me!" quoth the Baron, cheerily.... A capital sensational story in one natty, easily-handled, easily-read volume.... Having once taken it up, having once put your hand to it, and your eyes on it, the Baron ventures to think that you will not part with it in a hurry."—Week.

"Original and stimulating.... Told in a narrative which is concise, straightforward, and never dull. Here is a pleasant, healthy story, with no analytics or psychology."—Westminster Gazette.

CANON KNOX LITTLE.
The WAIF from the WAVES. A Story of Three Lives, touching this World and Another. By CANON KNOX LITTLE. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

FREDERICK BOYLE.
ABOUT ORCHIDS. A Chat. By FREDERICK BOYLE. With 8 Coloured Illustrations, reduced from the superb Drawings by Mr. Moon. Large crown 8vo. 8s.

"Mr. Boyle has done for orchids what Dean Hole did for rooks.... Mr. Boyle's fascinating book, thanks to the author's skillful style, is full of interest, and makes a book that no intelligent person will lay down till finished."—Academy.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1894.

CONTENTS.

THE POETS' PRAISE	139
THE DIALOGUE OF ORATORS	140
LOUIS XVII.	141
THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS	142
MR. F. THOMPSON'S POEMS	143
LETTERS TO MARCO	144
NEW NOVELS (A Superfluous Woman; Britomart; The Red-House Mystery; Theories; A Naughty Girl)	144-145
THE LITERATURE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT	145
SHORT STORIES—RECENT BIOGRAPHY	146
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	146-147
DICKENS IN YORKSHIRE; BACON AND BARTHOLOMEW ANGLICUS; THE OVERSEERS OF WESTMINSTER POOR IN 1561; DR. WALLER	146-149
LITERARY GOSSIP	149
SCIENCE—RECENT BIOGRAPHY; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	150-152
FINE ARTS—ELEMENTARY MANUALS; THE ROYAL ACADEMY; THE PORTRAIT OF MRS. TIGHE; PROF. FLINDERS PETRIE AT COPTOS; GOSSIP	152-154
MUSIC—GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	155-156
DRAMA—THE WEEK; GOSSIP	156

LITERATURE

The Poets' Praise from Homer to Swinburne.
Collected and arranged with Notes by Estelle Davenport Adams. (Stock.)

Though no one has ever been bold enough to affirm that painters are bad critics of painting, that sculptors are bad critics of sculpture, or that musicians are bad critics of music, the assertion that poets are bad critics of poetry seems to be accepted without challenge and without inquiry. The idea seems to be that in poetry the artistic egoism, by means of which all the genial forces of the poet are focussed upon his own artistic expression, is apt to disturb that judicial temper of the mind which confronts fairly all the various forms taken by poetic art. But if this is so in regard to poetry, must not the same be said of the arts one and all? No one has touched upon this interesting question with more sagacity than Baudelaire:—

"Tous les grands poètes deviennent naturellement, fatalement, critiques. Je plains les poètes que guide le seul instinct; je les crois incomplets. Dans la vie spirituelle des premiers, une crise se fait infailliblement, où ils veulent raisonner leur art, découvrir les lois obscures en vertu desquelles ils ont produit, et tirer de cette étude une série de préceptes dont le but divin est l'infaillibilité dans la production poétique."

No doubt the vagaries of the poets' criticisms of each other's work are often striking enough, but still, after making due allowance for them all, it could easily be shown that from Corinna (who said of Pindar that, instead of "sowing with the hand," he "sowed with the whole sack") down to Mr. Swinburne the best things that have been said about poets and poetry have been said by the poets themselves.

In this matter, however, the poets might, perhaps, be divided into two groups: those whose critical power moves so independently of their own creative impulse that the light they are enabled to shed upon the work of others is the white light of intelligence untinged by any subjective colour; and those who, when reading the poetry of their fellows, must needs draw upon the poetic riches of their own minds—must needs read into the poetry which happens to appeal to them qualities that do not really exist—and who in consequence, like the changeling elf-child in the story, turn the shards and pebbles by the roadside into opals and rubies by simply gazing upon them. Of the latter class no better example could be given than Walter Scott. When Scott characterizes the first stanza of 'Cumnor Hall' as the most musical stanza in the language, or when he calls upon Joanna Bailie to Restore the ancient tragic line,

And emulate the notes that rung
From the wild harp, which silent hung
By silver Avon's holy shore,
Till twice an hundred years roll'd o'er, he does not surprise us in the least, for we know how he was blinded by the generous breadth of his sympathies—we know how his power of endowing others with riches that were all his own could disturb his judgment when writing about his contemporaries.

In the former class of poets, those who maintain an independent judicial insight, Goethe and Coleridge are of course the most noticeable, though even these are not always able to resist the impulse to shed over the work of their fellows a corona of beauty which is all the while a halo from a glowing sun within. Goethe could use words of praise about the insincere and often jejune work of Byron which, had they been used about the work of Æschylus, might have been in place. Coleridge could compare the influence of Bowles over his own mind to that of the great Spirit who

— erst with plastic sweep

Moved on the darkness of the uniform'd deep.

Still, no better criticisms of poetry have ever been uttered than those which have fallen at times from Goethe and Coleridge. Milton, we have every reason to believe, possessed the judicial temper in a high degree. His words about Shakespeare, uttered as they were in times so different from Shakespeare's and from ours, are alone sufficient to show this. The same may be said of Ben Jonson, the same may be said of Dryden, when either of them talks about Shakespeare. But what about Shakespeare himself? Have we any means of knowing where to place the master poet of the world in regard to the division of poets above described? Here we approach a subject upon which a volume might be written. All we know is that whenever he touches upon poetic art he is a great critic—nay, that he soars far above all other critics. Those lines in 'Timon of Athens' describing the marvellous and mysterious way in which poetry comes to the poet, he himself knowing not whence, save that it comes as the result of the impact of the external world upon his own soul, are enough to set Shakespeare at the top of all poetical critics:—

Our poetry is as a gum, which oozes
From whence 'tis nourished: the fire i' the flint
Shows not till it be struck; our gentle flame
Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies
Each bound it chafes.

Of criticism of the work of his fellows, however, Shakespeare has but a single example, though this, to be sure, is one of the loveliest tributes in literature:—

Dead shepherd! now I find thy saw of might;
"Who ever lov'd that lov'd not at first sight?"

in which allusion is made to the well-known couplet in Marlowe's 'Hero and Leander':—

Where both deliberate the love is slight:
Who ever lov'd that lov'd not at first sight?

Although the editor of the compilation before us says that "purely dramatic poetry has been excluded from the scope of this volume," it would have been interesting had she, in this one case, seen her way to depart from her scheme in order to enrich her pages with Shakespeare's praise of Marlowe in 'As You Like It.' Who has not pondered over these lines, lost in a dream of great times when the literary arena glittered with the great and generous sword-play of great men? For among the many mysteries connected with the personality of Shakespeare none is more inscrutable, none is more teasing to the student's imagination than this, that at a time when commendatory verses were so much the fashion, this beautiful allusion to Marlowe was the solitary occasion when Shakespeare remembered in verse any one of his contemporaries. Was it because he could find no time to indulge in such exercises that he wrote no commendatory verses? No. Prodigious as was the work he achieved in his short life, both as dramatist and as joint manager of a theatre, he could still find time to write a great body of sonnets full of the laudation of some aristocratic youth unknown, but not a word about the great poets among whom he moved. Precious as are those beautiful sonnets of his, had a few of them been commendatory verses upon Marlowe, Dekker, Ben Jonson, would they not have been a thousand times more precious still? How many of the eulogies of the physical beauty of the traitorous youth who played him false could we not have spared for even one sonnet about Marlowe, showing that in the genial play of friendship and mutual commendation with which he was surrounded Shakespeare could take his part with the rest! If it were not for the fact that those contemporaries of Shakespeare who have written about him have always been inclined to praise his sweetness of disposition more even than his genius, the thought might sometimes come to us that the heart of the great poet was not so great as his genius. And a most unpleasant thought it would be, for though to write 'Hamlet' and 'Othello' is great, it is greater still to have the noble soul and the loving heart which, and which alone, give man the right to hope. Fortunately, however, it is not merely that Shakespeare's social charm seems to have struck his contemporaries more than his poetical genius; it is not merely this, but the terms of affection in which they all (except Greene) speak of him show that this social charm must have been the natural glow emanating from a nature of peculiar sweetness. What are we to suppose then? Was there, after all, a certain aloofness of disposition, making him a stranger to that "delight in praising" the work of his fellows which Lander says most truly is the sweetest of all delights? Why did he leave London, in the midst of his triumphs and his power, to go and study nature in the Forest of Arden, and unsophisticated man among the yokels of the Avon? Are there some poets who, notwithstanding all their love of poetic art, are so deeply impressed by the wonderfulness of Nature and the wonderfulness of man's life that literary aspiration and literary glory impress them in only a moderate degree? And if there are such poets as these, was Shakespeare one?

If, however, Shakespeare has left us no praise of other poets, the other poets' praise of him is fortunately abundant. Mrs. Adams devotes twenty-three pages to it. She inserts Matthew Arnold's fine sonnet, and several of Mr. Swinburne's still finer tributes to Shakespeare—notably that magnificent one 'An Autumn Vision,' where Shakespeare's all-comprehensive genius is likened to a rainbow with one foot on land and one on sea. Mr. Bailey Aldrich's stanzas are printed in full, and so is Browning's sonnet. Only a portion is given of Dr. Hake's daring sonnet in which he prophesies that, although in "the world's colossal poet"

The science of the past was justified, the time will come when even he will be no longer adequate to man's widening horizon.

The scheme of a collection of this kind is, of course, admirable; but the task of compiling it is no easy one. There were open to the editor two methods of treating the subject, by adopting either of which she might fairly hope to produce an interesting and a useful volume: the collection might have taken the form of an elaborate work of poetical reference, a concordance to "poetry in praise of poets," or it might have taken the form of an anthology comprising entire poems, or at least entire sequences inspired by the same subject. Mrs. Adams has endeavoured to combine the two methods, and if her success is only partial, this will account for it. In a book on such a plan it is, of course, absolutely necessary that poetical sequences should often be truncated, owing to the exigencies of space; but if this is carried too far, there may sometimes be a positive perversion of the sense of the passage. For instance, under Homer she gives us from Mr. Swinburne's 'Athens,' the starry

Song of Homer.

Now, when the reader turns to the poem, he finds that the entire passage gives a very different idea from the one embodied in the extract; he sees that the image in the poet's mind was not so much the star as the water upon which the star shines.

Again, in selections of this kind the editor has to be guided in his choice either by the inherent beauty and truth of the thing said or by the acknowledged eminence of the poet who says it. Hence great knowledge of English poetry and great critical acumen would be required before an ideal selection could be made. In this respect, though the collection is on the whole good, and extremely accurate and careful, it still leaves much to be desired. We should have expected that the weakness of such a book would arise from the fact that, in order to make the selection as complete as possible, the editor would take the name of each illustrious poet and ransack English literature to find something said upon him by some other poet, and if nothing of value could be found, then to give something of no value rather than nothing at all. Mrs. Adams has not disappointed our expectation in this regard.

Her anthology needs weeding. We need only refer to the case of a poet who in virtue of a few fragments of immortal verse is often placed by critics—and, as we think, rightly placed—at the very head of all lyric poets; we need only refer, we say, to her who in one quality is first among the poets of the world—first, without a second—in that rare verbal economy which is the very accent of passion when at white heat—Sappho.

Now, if there was any need to give something about Sappho, however inadequate (which there certainly was not), the editor could, at least, have extracted a few lines from Kingsley's well-known poem 'Sappho,' which first appeared in 1847, in 'Yeast,'—lines such as these, for instance:—

She lay among the myrtles on the cliff;
And sighed for sleep, for sleep that would not hear,
But left her tossing still; for night and day
A mighty hunger yearned within her heart,
Till all her veins ran fever; and her cheek,
Her long thin hands, and ivory-channelled feet,
Were wasted with the wasting of her soul.
Then peevishly she flung her on her face,
And hid her eyeballs from the blinding glare,
And fingered at the grass, and tried to cool
Her crisp hot lips against the crisp hot sward.

These five verses are, of course, descriptive rather than eulogistic. But to write of such a poet as Sappho with any approach to adequacy would tax the best efforts of the best poets. The editor of the volume before us, besides half a dozen feeble lines by L. E. L., Dr. Croly, and Mrs. Hemans, gives us the following quotation from Smollett:—

When Sappho struck the quivering wire,
The throbbing breast was all on fire:
And when she rais'd the vocal lay,
The captive soul was charm'd away!

The selection of verses upon Pindar is another case in point. Cowley, by his own 'Pindaric Odes,' has taken admirable pains to show that if there has been in England one man with less insight than all others into Pindar's methods, it is himself. Bad as are the verses of Pope upon Pindar—bad as are those of Prior, Young, Akenside, and the others given by Mrs. Adams—they are good beside Cowley's. But that is not saying that they should appear here. The entire section allotted to Pindar should be cut down to Mrs. Browning's fine lines in 'A Vision of Poets':—

— bold
Electric Pindar, quick as fear,
With race-dust on his cheeks, and clear
Slant startled eyes that seem to hear
The chariot rounding the last goal,
To hurtle past it in his soul.

"Electric," though almost too modern a word for poetry, entirely denotes the specially Pindaric charm.

In the case of Sophocles the editor has been more fortunate. She prints Matthew Arnold's well-known lines, and a portion of Mr. Gosse's sonnet 'The Tomb of Sophocles,' a sonnet which would be among the finest of recent times if the poet had avoided the word "weird," a word which, thanks to the novelists, has ceased to be available in poetry.

We have no space to say a word about the nineteenth century poets. The modern masters of poetic eulogy among English poets seem to be Landor and Mr. Swinburne. But even their enthusiasm for the work of their brother poets is not more eloquent than Victor Hugo's. The anthology is confined to English poetry, otherwise we should have suggested in the next edition the inclusion of Hugo's lines on parting from Alexandre Dumas:—

Tu rentras dans ton œuvre éclatante, inencombrable,
Multiple, aboulimante, heureuse, où le jour luit;
Et, moi, dans l'unité sinistre de la nuit.

In such a collection it seems strange to have to look in vain for Mr. Lang's striking sonnets upon Homer, but of course no anthology has ever existed against which charges of omission could not be made.

Cornelii Taciti Dialogus de Oratoribus. Edited by W. Peterson, M.A., LL.D. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

MANY who are interested in advanced Latin scholarship must have opened this volume with a feeling of regret that Prof. Peterson should have turned aside from his study of Quintilian without handling at least the more important portions of the first nine books of the 'Institutio Oratoria.' In particular, an edition of the first and sixth books from his hand would be acceptable. But the present work is so admirable in itself that, on a perusal of it, regret is modified, if not entirely removed. At the same time the subject-matter of the 'Dialogus' is so closely akin to that of the 'Institutio' that a short step will lead the editor back to his first love—a step which we hope he will not be long in taking.

Although the 'Dialogus de Oratoribus' has excited great interest on the Continent ever since its recovery from oblivion in the middle of the fifteenth century, Prof. Peterson is the first scholar who in this country has studied it with thoroughness. The unfortunately large number of English students (or should we say British students, in deference to the Scottish domicile of the editor?) who cannot make free use of German commentaries have had little inducement to read the treatise. Until recently, no better aids to its study were accessible to them than the old editions with Latin commentaries, which the progress of scholarship has rendered antiquated, at all events for all who are not scholars by profession. In 1887 M. Goelzer published a recension with French notes. The book, though it contained little that was original, was excellent in its way. It is, however, far surpassed by the edition before us, which should induce undergraduates to make acquaintance with a tractate which offers many points of interest. Its subject-matter deserves attention for its own sake, as presenting much that illustrates the condition of education and culture in the time of the first Flavian emperor. If the work is by Quintilian, it serves as an important prelude to the 'Institutio'; if by Tacitus, the comparison of it with his other works affords a fascinating field for inquiry.

Prof. Peterson's introductory essays are elaborate and interesting, whether they relate the history of previous endeavours to solve the problems raised by the treatise, or present the results of the editor's own independent inquiries. The question of authorship, which has attracted many scholars during the last four centuries, is amply discussed, and the balance is held to incline in favour of Tacitus. After examining the general structure of the dialogue, the professor deals at some length with its style and language. German scholars have treated this subject with great minuteness, and their results are lucidly expounded by the new editor, with some additions from his own stores. But there is more freshness in the essay which is devoted to the extant manuscripts of the work. After setting forth very fully the critical history of the text, Prof. Peterson has much that is of interest to tell about a MS. in the Harleian collection, which was not unknown to preceding editors, but was not fully examined by them. It proves to have formed a part of the literary treasures which were gathered together by John Tiptoft, Earl of Worcester, the friend of Caxton, and one of the most eminent scholars of his age. He resided in Italy, and even taught at Padua, and his Latin style was so perfect that Æneas Sylvius wept over it tears of joy. Tiptoft was in Italy about the very time when Enoch of Ascoli is supposed to have brought from Germany the MS. from which all existing MSS. are derived, and it is not improbable that the Harleian codex was copied from it and brought to England by Tiptoft in 1460. Prof. Peterson's account of this Harleian MS. in any case proves its importance for the textual criticism of the dialogue. In constituting his own text he has displayed the ability and judiciousness that were to be expected from the editor of the Tenth Book of Quintilian. The manifold corruptions which all extant MSS. of the 'Dialogus' contain leave of necessity a wide field for conjecture, and will probably always prevent anything like a "textus receptus" from being constructed. Glosses and omissions are common, and words are so distorted that it is often impossible to emend at all without casting all consideration of the "ductus litterarum" to the winds. As a specimen of the difficulty of supplying omitted words, a passage in c. 32 may be taken, where "rhetorum officinis" is quoted from Cicero, but the MSS. have dropped the word officinis. If the parallel passage of Cicero had not been preserved, no critic would have lighted on officinis to fill the gap. In the present edition the text has been most carefully studied. The proposals of preceding editors have been weighed in a just balance, and where the professor puts forward suggestions of his own they are always scholarly, generally plausible, and sometimes really brilliant, as, e.g., the proposal to read collicent for velint in c. 37, and in c. 21 alii omnes for alios. Where the state of the text makes it possible, weight is given to the probability of readings from a palaeographical point of view.

Attention may be called to one or two small matters. Tacitus cannot have written Tiberis, Gaii, Claudii, Vitellii, as the words are written in this text, all within the space of a couple of lines (c. 17). And surely se before a vowel is an impossibility (c. 12). Perhaps we may be permitted to offer a few suggestions for the further amendment of this corrupt text. In chap. 35 difficulty is caused by the occurrence of sed where an adversative particle is out of place. Probably scilicet is the true word; when written by abbreviation it was often mistaken for sed; see, for example, Cic. 'Att.' xiii. 33, § 4. At c. 19 we have "At hercule puvul-gatis iam omnibus, cum uix in cortina quisquam adeistat quin elementis studiorum imbutus sit." It is hardly possible that cortina can be right. The application of the word by Ennius to the vault of the sky, and that by the author of 'Ætius' to the circle of the theatre, supply the nearest parallels, but they are quite insufficient. It is possible that Tacitus here imitated Cic. 'Fam.' ix. 15, § 3: "Sedebamus enim in puppi et clavom tenebamus; nunc autem vix est in sentina locus." The phrase resembles one used by Lucian in the 'Jupiter Tragedy,' c. 10: ἐν τοῖς τρυφῶν καὶ θύμῳ. There is an exceedingly difficult passage in c. 7: "habere quod, si non in alio oritur, nec codicillis datur nec cum gratia venit" (so the MSS.). Here in has most likely arisen from a repetition of the final n of non, and alio is a deprivation of ultra. Maternus speaks in c. 29 of the dialogue concerning the mischief which young children receive from the society of the Greek nurses to whom they are abandoned. In the MSS. we find: "horum fabulis et erroribus teneri statim et rudes animi imbuuntur." The word fabulis seems to point to terroribus as the right lection; the allusion is to the horrors of Greek mythology. The last passage which we need mention is in c. 31. Messalla is pointing out that while some knowledge of philosophy is useful to the future orator, he need not be a profound thinker: "Neque enim sapientem informamus nec Stoicorum comitem." So Prof. Peterson, with most editors, but some of the MSS. give citem for comitem, some arte, and some civitate. The original reading may have been Stoicum Catonem. The mention of Cato gains in point from the reference at the outset of the dialogue to a poem written by Maternus which had Cato for its hero.

In Prof. Peterson's explanatory notes there is evidence of wide reading and special research, and the judgment shown in the interpretation of the text and in the criticism of divergent views is firm and sound. Omissions are rare, and statements open to doubt are rarer still, and not often of much importance. We shall first draw attention to a few points in notes on subject-matter. A note on c. 15 states (as had been stated in former commentaries) that the applause which was given in the theatre by the audience rising to their feet and cheering was regarded by the emperors as their own especial privilege. Reference is made to Suetonius and Pliny, but neither passage bears out the allegation, which possesses no inherent probability. Suetonius represents Augustus as angry when this kind of applause was accorded to his grandsons, not because his own privilege was invaded, but because the boys were young and had done nothing to merit an ovation. The assertion in a note on c. 24 that the practice called eis ἐκτέρεα ἐκχείρησις (arguing on both sides of a theme) was characteristic of the Stoic and Academic schools is questionable. To the Stoics the practice would be naturally abhorrent, and, so far as we remember, is not attributed to them by any ancient authority. There is a passage in Cicero where the exercitation is said to have been adopted by the Peripatetics, but even that is improbable. It was peculiar to the New Academics; hence in c. 31 Messalla says the Academics will teach the orator pug-nacity. Again, at c. 17 it is alleged that the tribunicia potestas (the note has tribunitia) "had to be renewed to the emperor every year." This is surely erroneous. The tribunician power was granted once for all, and there is no evidence of any renewal, even as a matter of form. The fact that on imperial coins and in imperial inscriptions "trib. pot." constantly occurs, followed by a number indicating how many years had elapsed since the bestowal of the authority, proves not that the authority was annually renewed, but that the emperors chose to date the years of their reign by reference to the time at which they received the gift of supreme control over civil affairs.

The notes on language are full and careful. The nature of the 'Dialogus' makes it especially important that its language should be thoroughly compared with that of Cicero, Quintilian, and Tacitus (in his later works). This task has been excellently carried through. Naturally, however, there are gleanings still left to be gathered. At a good many points we miss Ciceronian parallels, particularly in the list of phrases given in the Introduction, pp. li sq. The correspondence of sicut with ita (c. 11) is certainly Ciceronian; so is cotidianus sermo (c. 32) and also non...quidem (c. 8); and phrases like initium ortum est (c. 11). For te apparet in c. 21 might be quoted te para from Cic. 'Fam.' i. 7, and 9, 20. The dictum of Baehrens concerning unus et alter and unus aut alter, to which reference is made in a note to c. 21, may easily be shown not to hold for Cicero, nor indeed for other writers. The word beatus is not solely used by Cicero of persons (c. 19). The phrase audire aliquem for de aliquo is not entirely poetical (c. 7). Where in Plautus is the causal use of quatenus to be found? Lucetius should have been quoted for it. (Draeger, 'Hist. Synt.' vol. ii. p. 680, strangely says that its first employment is in Horace.) A reader of the note on the substitution of quominus for quin in c. 34 would hardly guess from it that the confusion of the two particles is extremely common in Tacitus. The current derivation of incitare from in and cita is repeated in a note on c. 20, and the verb evitare is quoted in support. The derivation may or may not be right, but it is not strengthened by an appeal to evitare, which (in the sense "to take the life out of") was manufactured by Ennius for the sake of a jingle in one of his best-known lines. Notes might have been given on the construction of in locum teli repertus (c. 12); on aera et imagines (c. 11); non excitet (c. 13); and favor (c. 29). There are some other places at which readers will feel inclined to seek for aid elsewhere.

In conclusion, we wish to state our opinion very clearly that this is a book to be heartily praised and warmly commended to the notice both of advanced scholars and of students.

The Story of Louis XVII. of France. By Elizabeth E. Evans. (Sonnenschein & Co.)

In 1884, under the pseudonym of Édouard Burton, Ed. Le Normant des Varennes published a work to demonstrate the identity of Baron de Richemont with the son of Louis XVI., and to expose as impostors not only Naundorff, but also Hervagault and Mathurin Bruneau. Six years later, we remember, he produced another book, strengthening the cause of his claimant by the argument that Richemont was identical with Hervagault and Bruneau—in fact, that the last Dauphin of France was, like Cerberus, three gentlemen at once.

Although apparently ignorant of M. des Varennes's labours, Mrs. Evans seems to have studied logic in the same school. She devotes two-thirds of an exceptionally tedious and ill-written compilation to her condemnation of the four pretenders already named; in the rest of the volume she argues that as not one of those men was the Dauphin, the "Lost Prince" could have been none other than Eleazar Williams, the son (or, as she will have it, the adopted son) of a half-breed Indian chief to whose family she herself belongs. Mrs. Evans is discreetly silent as to the manner in which the child was conveyed from the Temple to the United States. She simply presents to us an imbecile lad called Louis, who in 1795 was staying at Albany, New York, with a Madame de Jardin or Jourdain, a lady who said she had been maid of honour to Marie Antoinette, and who convinced her American friends of her royalist sentiments by her partiality for singing the "Marseillaise."

Whilst no link is given to connect the Dauphin with the Jardin boy, Mrs. Evans allows that "there is no positive proof that the" latter "was the same boy left with Thomas Williams," the half-breed Indian at Ticonderoga. Her "strong circumstantial evidence" amounts to the assertion that both the Albany and the Ticonderoga lads were imbeciles. Moreover, though she discusses at length the birth-marks and inoculation scars exhibited by her hero and his rivals, such imprints are not protected from piracy by any law of copyright. Hence it is well to know that in 1786 Capt. Coffin brought to Nantucket for his little daughter a large wax doll, a life-size model made, as he declared, "from a cast of the Dauphin taken when he was six months old," an experiment which ought, we think, to have ended the infant's troubles then and there. "As no duplicates have ever been heard of, the Captain's account is probably correct." Such reasoning is unassailable. The hair of the doll is straight, "the eyes dark, and the colour of the face like that of a mulatto." "It certainly resembles the portraits of Eleazar Williams." As the Dauphin's hair, eyes, and complexion were exactly the reverse of those of the doll, what stronger proof of the identity of Louis XVII. with E. Williams can possibly be required?

Though ten years old at the time of his abduction from the Temple, Williams had no recollection of that event, nor of his life in France, nor of his native tongue. The injuries inflicted on him by the cruel Simon had obscured his faculties. Those were partially restored by a still severer injury to his head sustained when hunting with the Indians. Even after that fortunate accident the sight of an illuminated missal sufficed to render him temporarily insane. Eventually he became a missionary to and a trader with the Indians, and lived for upwards of forty years in happy ignorance of his illustrious birth. But King Louis Philippe had closely followed his relative's career, and dreaded lest Williams should learn his claim to the crown. So the astute monarch in 1841 sent the Prince de Joinville to America to give the missionary trader proof of his royal pedigree on condition that he would never use the knowledge. The Prince landed at New York; Williams was at Hogsburg in the same state. Each by a different route travelled far westward to meet at Green Bay, where were some Indian settlements. At first the missionary was as unable to credit the revelation made to him as he was unwilling to surrender the dignity to which he did not believe he had any claim. With many a canting ejaculation of bastard piety Williams writes in his journal:—

"To be informed that I had rights in Europe and one of these was to be the first over a mighty kingdom; and this right is demanded of me to surrender, for an ample and splendid establishment. The intelligence was so unexpected, my mind was paralysed for a moment.....A splendid parchment was spread before me for signature, to be affixed with the stamp and seal of Louis XVI. After consideration.....it was respectfully refused."

The missionary utilized the occasion to observe "that as the Prince had placed him in the position of a superior, he must assume that position"; thereupon he held forth on the iniquities of the Orleans family, its participation in the death of Louis XVI., its attempts to defraud the poor missionary. "The Prince stood meanwhile in respectful silence." They parted with "affectionate adieus." Subsequently a letter from the royal secretary assured Williams "that if he should ever visit France he would be received by the Prince with pleasure." Our interest is excited. Is Louis Philippe, conscience-stricken, about to abdicate in favour of the half-breed Indian, or is the latter to be invited to a Borgian feast? "It was," says Mrs. Evans, merely "an intimation that if he should change his mind respecting the Prince's offer, an opportunity for the negotiation would be granted."

After this episode Williams for a time either forgot the mystery of his parentage, or else refrained from imparting it to others. The political troubles of '48 aroused him. In the autumn of that year "he called on Mr. Leavitt and informed him he was the Dauphin....he appeared distressed and terrified in view of the possible consequences of the revelation." Why then did he make it? Soon the newspapers took up the tale. In 1853 Mr. Hanson, an American, made it the subject of a magazine article. A copy thereof was sent to the Prince de Joinville. With a falsity that must be apparent to all Mrs. Evans's readers, the Prince's secretary replied that the communications with Williams referred solely to the history of the French settlements in North America, and that the asserted revelation regarding the missionary's birth was purely imaginary.

But forty years have passed since then. It is quite time that the story should be again turned to account. Moreover the welfare of a friendly state is involved therein, for we all know how "the suspicion that the [French] nation had been deceived in the cruel abduction of the lawful king has undermined and overthrown every subsequent attempt to establish an enduring monarchical government in France." But it is never too late to mend, and when next France wants a ruler, she has only to apply to Louis XVI.'s great-grandson, i.e., Eleazar Williams's grandson, whose address is Oshkosh, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

Great Public Schools. By Various Authors. (Arnold.)

At first sight this volume is chiefly remarkable for its want of proportion. For one thing, when Cheltenham, Clifton, Marlborough, and Haileybury are each made the subject of one or more chapters, it may very well be asked why nothing is said of Christ's Hospital, Shrewsbury, Wellington, or Uppingham, to mention a few of the omitted schools. In the second place, the space devoted to the different schools seems rather arbitrarily apportioned; it is only right, of course, that Eton should alone have four chapters, but why should Winchester be relegated to only one chapter at the end of the book, while Cheltenham occupies two and Harrow three?

The fact, of course, has been often observed, but it comes before the reader of this volume with special emphasis, that it is difficult to exaggerate the influence of the Rugby of Arnold over the public-school system of the last half century. All the four schools here noticed which have been founded since 1840—Cheltenham, Marlborough, Clifton, and Haileybury—have had Rugby head masters, and of the last three it may be almost said that they were colonies from Rugby, for besides Dr. Cotton and Dr. Bradley at Marlborough, Dr. Percival at Clifton, and Mr. Butler and Dr. Bradby at Haileybury, some of the ablest assistant masters at all three came from the Warwickshire school for schoolmasters, as it might almost be called. The main characteristic of this system, or at least the most important in its effects, has undoubtedly been the increased influence given to the boys themselves in the formation of their own standards and ideals and in the regulation of their own discipline. The extension and official recognition by Arnold of the prefectorial system, and that of captains of dormitories, &c., were, as he intended, the origin of this increased influence. It is common to assume, almost as a matter of course, that Arnold's system was right, and to forget to notice its attendant disadvantages. It is noticeable that every public school evinces a tendency to stereotype into one groove the characters of the boys who pass through it, so that at the university, for example, it is not generally difficult to distinguish a Rugby boy, say, from a Harrow boy, or a Marlburian from a Carthusian. Of course this result of esprit de corps is an excellent thing in its way; but where there are no other counteracting influences, such as the marked distinction between College and Commoners at Winchester or Scholars and Oppidians at Eton, there is a danger of the general tone of a school degenerating into a tyranny that crushes originality. This danger is rather intensified under the Rugby system, for there is nothing so inelastic as a uniform schoolboy code pervading the school, and though the ideal is generally a manly one, and so far excellent, it is likewise exceedingly narrow. In this connexion Mr. Lyttelton, who writes one of the articles on Eton, seems to us to put very happily the chief reason why his school has been, and still is, the first and greatest of public schools. He admits "that there is something to be said against any public school in favour of home education aided by day schools, and completed by university life. All public schools, even the greatest, have a tendency to exact from their members too much uniformity";

but, he continues,

"within a year or two of his arrival at Eton a boy learns to rely on himself in all matters not connected with work. Even in his work far greater liberty is accorded to him than in most other schools, and after two years he may do a considerable portion of it very much in his own way. If he prefers assistance the best teaching in the world is at his service, if he wishes solitude he can remain unmolested, provided that the results of it are satisfactory."

This paper of Mr. Lyttelton's on "Eton as a School" seems to us the best in the book, and altogether that and the other three on Eton—by Mr. Maxwell Lyte, the Rev. Sydney James, and Mr. Mowbray Morris—form far the most interesting series. There is, however, a strange slip in the last-mentioned article, which contains the following sentence: "Only one of living hands could really do it justice; only the hand which has drawn the beauty of Oxford, 'spreading her gardens to the moonlight and whispering from her towers the last enchantment of the Middle Age,' could do justice to the playing-fields of Eton." The slip is unaccountable because it is especially stated that all the papers were submitted to the authors for correction.

The most unsatisfactory article is the comparatively short notice of Winchester. In the first place, it is unfortunate that the gentleman chosen to write it, Mr. Frederick Gale, should have been there as long ago as from 1835 to 1841; for he, of course, belongs to a generation that knew not the Bishop of Southwell, and to-day it seems almost absurd to think of Winchester without connecting Dr. Ridding's name with it. For a different reason it is to be regretted that the article on Harrow, 1829-1889, should have been assigned to the Master of Trinity, as he is naturally too modest to say anything of his own success as ruler there during a large portion of that period. The Rugby of Arnold is adequately treated by Judge Hughes; and Mr. Lees Knowles dwells at considerable, though not undue length on Rugby games. The other articles are of varying interest, the least interesting being that on Haileybury, which is little more than a catalogue of events or a list of institutions. In the article on Marlborough we have detected one misprint: "Mr. Bell, the Head of the Modern School," should be "Mr. Bull"; and on the cover of the book, which is decorated with the arms of the different schools, the arms of New College are unaccountably substituted for those of Winchester. A word must be said in praise of the illustrations by various artists and from photographs; they add considerably to the interest of a distinctly meritorious production.

Poems. By Francis Thompson. (Mathews & Lane.)

IF Crashaw, Shelley, Donne, Marvell, Mr. Patmore, and some other poets had not existed, Mr. Francis Thompson would be a poet of remarkable novelty. Not that originality, in the strictest sense, is always essential to the making of a poet. There have been poets who have so absolutely lived in another age, whose whole soul has been so completely absorbed by a fashion of writing, perhaps a single writer, belonging to an earlier century, that their work has been an actual reincarnation of this particular time or writer. Chatterton, for instance, remains one of the finest of English poets, entirely on account of poems which were so deliberately imitative as to have been passed off as transcripts from old manuscripts. Again, it is possible to be deftly and legitimately eclectic, as was Milton, for example. Milton had, in an extraordinary degree, the gift of assimilating all that he found, all that he borrowed. Often, indeed, he improved his borrowed goods; but always he worked them into the pattern of his own stuff, he made them part of himself; and wisdom is justified of her children. Now Mr. Thompson, though he affects certain periods, is not so absorbed in any one as to have found his soul by losing it; nor is he a dainty borrower from all, taking his good things wheresoever he finds them. Rather, he has been impressed by certain styles, in themselves incompatible, indeed implying the negation of one another—that of Crashaw, for instance, and that of Mr. Patmore—and he has deliberately mixed them, against the very nature of things. Thus his work, with all its splendours, has the impress of no individuality; it is a splendour of rage and patches, a very masque of anarchy. A new poet announces himself by his new way of seeing things, his new way of feeling things; Mr. Thompson comes to us a cloudy visionary, a rapturous sentimentalist, in whom emotion means coloured words, and sight the opportunity for a bedazzlement.

The opening section of the book, 'Love in Dian's Lap,' is an experiment in Platonic love. The experiment is in itself interesting, though here perhaps a little too deliberate; in its bloodless ecstasy it recalls 'Epi-psychidion,' which is certainly one of the several models on which it has been formed; it has, too, a finely extravagant courtliness, which belongs to an older school of verse, as here:—

Yet I have felt what terrors may consort
In women's cheeks, the Graces' soft resort;
My hand hath shook at gentle hands' access,
And trembled at the waving of a tress;
My blood known panic fear, and fled dismayed,
Where ladies' eyes have set their ambushade.
The rustle of a robe hath been to me
The very rattle of love's musketry;
Although my heart hath beat the loud advance,
I have recoiled before a challenging glance,
Proved gay alarms where warlike ribbons dance.
And from it all, this knowledge have I got,—
The whole, that others have, is less than they have not;
All which makes other women noted fair,
Unnoted would remain and overshine in her.

Finer, in yet a different style, is the poem 'To a Poet breaking Silence,' of which we may quote the opening lines:—

Too wearily had we and song
Been left to look and left to long,
Yea, song and we to long and look,
Since thine acquainted feet forsook
The mountain where the Muses hymn
For Sinai and the Seraphim.
Now in both the mountains' shine
Dress thy countenance, twice divine!
From Moses and the Muses draw
The Tables of thy double Law!
His red-born fount and Castaly
Let the one rock bring forth for thee,
Renewing so from either spring
The songs that both thy countries sing:
Or we shall fear lest, heavened thus long,
Thou shouldst forget thy native song,
And mar thy mortal melodies
With broken stammer of the skies.

Next after these poems of spiritual love come certain odes and lyrical pieces: one, 'To the Dead Cardinal of Westminster,' modelled, as to form, on Marvell's great ode; 'A Judgment in Heaven,' in which we are permitted to see the angels "as they pelted each other with handfuls of stars"—the most clotted and inchoate poem in the volume; together with 'A Corymbus for Autumn' and 'The Hound of Heaven,' which are the finest things Mr. Thompson has done. Here, with all his extravagance, which passes from the sublime to the ridiculous with all the composure of a madman, Mr. Thompson has grappled with splendid subjects splendidly. He can, it is true, say:—

Against the red throb of the sunset-heart
I laid my own to beat;

but he can also say (with a solemn imagery which has its precise meaning as well as its large utterance):—

I dimly guess what Time in mists confounds;
Yet ever and anon a trumpet sounds
From the hid battlements of Eternity,
Those shaken mists a space unsettle, then Round the half-glimped turrets slowly wash again;

But not ere him who summoneth

I first have seen, enwound

With glooming robes purpureal, cypress-crowned;
His name I know, and what his trumpet saith.

Here, as ever, Mr. Thompson indulges in his passion for polysyllables—"the splendid might of thy conflagrate fancies," for example; but forced words are less out of place in poems which, in the best sense of the word, are rhapsodies, than in poems such as those on children, which fill the last section of the book, and in which one may read of "a silvern sequestration, globed complete," of "doreliet tinkets of the darling young," and so forth. The last piece of all, 'To Monica thought Dying,' is written in downright imitation of Mr. Patmore; but how far is it, in its straining after fine effects of sound, its straining after fine effects of pathos, from the perfect justice of expression which Mr. Patmore has found, in such poems as 'The Toys' and 'Poor Child!' for an equally perfect sentiment of the pathetic! That a writer who at his best is so fiery and exuberant should ever take Mr. Patmore for a model, should really try to catch even his tricks of expression, is very curious, and shows, as much as any other single characteristic, the somewhat external quality of Mr. Thompson's inspiration. A poet with an individuality to express, seeking for an individual form of expression, could scarcely, one fancies, have been drawn by any natural affinity so far away from himself and his main habitudes. Crashaw and Mr. Patmore—we come back to the old antagonism—can a man serve two such masters? Imagine Mr. Patmore rewriting, according to his own standard of composition, 'The Flaming Heart,' or Crashaw troating in his own way the theme of 'Delicia Sapiencie de Amore'! Here and there, too, in Mr. Thompson's work, are reminiscences of Rossetti; as here:—

Yea, in that ultimate heart's occult abode
To lie as in an oubliette of God.

And the influence of Shelley is felt from the first line to the last. Yet, in spite of all this, Mr. Thompson has something, unquestionably, of "fine frenzy," not always quite under his own control; he amazes by his audacity, and delights by the violence with which he would fain storm Parnassus. His verse has generally fervour, a certain lyric glow, a certain magnificence; it has abundant fancy, and its measure of swift imagination. But the feast he spreads for us is a very Trimalchio's feast—the heaped profusion, the vaunting prodigality, which brings a surfeit; and, unlike Trimalchio, it could not be said of him, "omnia domi nascuntur."

Letters to Marco. By George D. Leslie, R.A. (Macmillan & Co.)

THESE letters, as we are told in the preface, are genuine communications—written at the dates they bear—to a brother Academician, Mr. H. Stacy Marks. They relate chiefly to the common objects of the southern counties, and even the numerous illustrations are, for the most part, only corrected reproductions of the pen-and-ink "scribbles" occasionally inserted in those letters; but there are some charming exceptions, such as the finished frontispiece of the author's old-fashioned residence at Riverside, Wellingford, and the two full-page views of the boathouse, as well as the one of the landing-stage; while some of the plants and flowers have evidently been drawn with considerable care. The portrait of a toad "from life" is creditable alike to the artist and the sitter—or rather squatter; and the cut of the two young swallows in the nest (p. 69) shows a strong power for seizing the characteristic attitudes of birds. In this respect, however, we think that the best proof of Mr. Leslie's observant nature is in his rough sketch of "Swallow tails and wing-tips" (p. 130), for, as he correctly points out, "the representation of the forked tail, without regard to what the bird is intended to be doing, has become, through long custom, a conventionality" with artists. Even Bewick erred, seeing that his bird is perched, for "a swallow uses his tail to check his flight, expanding it entirely in stopping, and partially in order to slack or turn, but at full speed it is as straight as an arrow. The tail acts both as a rudder and a brake; at rest it is never forked out." We are also impressed with the accuracy of the author's remarks about the flight of the kingfisher, which has been compared to a meteor, "but plenty of time is afforded to mark well both the shape and varied colour of the bird." In corroboration of this we may observe that we once saw a kingfisher flying for some distance parallel to a South-Eastern train which was proceeding at the highest speed attained on the Reading branch, and there is nothing meteoric about that.

Sometimes Mr. Leslie takes his reader to the Kennett valley, or higher up the Thames, even to the watershed by Fairford, famed for its stained glass; and he describes with a few happy touches the quaint old inn at Lochlade, and, at greater length, the Elizabethan manor-house at Kelmscott, in which Rossetti formerly lived, and now the country abode of Mr. W. Morris. Bits of quaint folk-lore abound, such as:—

"An Oxford friend of mine tells me of a curious name for woodlice current in Oxfordshire, namely 'God Almighty's pigs.' T. Tims, the 'Varsity bargeman, informed my friend that his mother cured him of whooping cough by giving him fried woodlice ground to powder, and he called them by the above extraordinary name."

Mr. Leslie also tells us that most of the large walnut trees so abundant in the Berkshire villages were planted about the time of the battle of Waterloo, to supply the deficiencies caused by the previous demand for the wood for gunstocks; but we think he is mistaken in estimating that few walnut trees live much over a hundred years. One of the most estimable features of this book is the true love of nature and the kindness of heart that pervade it. Mr. Leslie noticed that in his boathouse, during a return of cold weather, numbers of swallows and martins huddled together in a row on a long bar near the roof; but the bar was of iron, and every morning he used to pick up three or four birds which had perished during the night, so, judging that the cold metal might be conducive to this mortality, he put up a wooden bar, "and the swallows much prefer it." And alluding to the damage caused to buds by the bullfinches, and the fact that a "brother-brush" in Surrey used to have these birds shot, he makes the following pertinent remarks, with which we must conclude our notice of this brightly written volume:—

"The fact is, the general balance of power is well kept if Nature is not interfered with; but if once you begin shooting bullfinches you scare away the robins and tits, thereby allowing the larkies, and ermine-moths an undue advantage. I confess I do not like to hear of a brother artist who prefers a pint or two more of gooseberries or plums in his inside, or the threepence the fruit would produce in his pocket, to the sweet companionship of the birds in his garden."

To this let us add that the man who "sows" charges of small shot among the branches of his fruit trees does more harm to them at every discharge than a bullfinch would do in a week.

NEW NOVELS.

A Superfluous Woman. 3 vols. (Heinemann.)

A NOVELIST whose most obvious purpose in writing a story is to proclaim to a corrupt generation his (or her) convictions about things in general is probably very young, and certainly very inexperienced, both with regard to society as it is and to novel-writing as it ought to be. Most people have at one time or other been possessed with a desire to preach a sermon. Many have found reason on reaching mature years to be grateful that no opportunity was afforded them of giving public utterance to a series of platitudes, or of generalizations which experience often proves to have been founded on rare instances. The author of 'A Superfluous Woman' has preached her sermon—it is too feminine a discourse to suggest the male pronoun. Her text is the law of heredity, which is in itself not a new one. Her theme is the wickedness of a girl selling herself in marriage to a vicious and effete aristocrat, the product of a race "outworn" physically and morally. The subject also is familiar; so is the conventional hero, who is, fortunately for our generation, more often met with in fiction or in melodrama than in real life. So depraved a creature as Lord Heriot is at any rate hardly to be taken as the type of an English aristocrat of to-day, and all the expressions used about him have a fine old-world flavour. Jessamine Halliday's restlessness and vague enthusiasm are far more usual in modern life than the exceptionally undesirable marriage which she finally elected to make. A turbulent and hysterical young woman who runs away from the hollowness of her surroundings to lead a higher life in a station to which neither God nor man called her, is not likely to profit very much by the experiment. Jessamine in fact did not, but had sufficient saving grace to stop short of tying an honest yeoman farmer to herself and her whimsies for life. The last volume is full of lurid lights and coal-black shadows in which realities have little to do. Jessamine faintly recalls Miss Schreiner's immortal Lyndall at times, but she has neither the strength nor the poetry of that extravagant little spirit. The author shows some aptitude for writing, and would probably do much better with less indulgence in theory and more observation of life. A word of hearty praise must be bestowed on the charming binding with which the publisher has clothed the book. Its exterior is, at any rate, thoroughly artistic if the contents are not.

Britomart. By Mrs. Herbert Martin. 3 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

IT is pretty clear that Mrs. Herbert Martin is no believer in the doctrine of heredity, otherwise she would hardly have ventured to endow her heroine with so many admirable qualities of which no counterpart may be found in either of her parents. Penrose Trevenna, however, is in herself a consistently drawn and interesting figure, and the history of her relations with her cousin illustrates with considerable skill how, in Steele's phrase, love may be a liberal education. The materials of the story are unpromising, and the situation out of which it springs is difficult and even painful. But Mrs. Martin has shown taste as well as skill in handling the successive developments of the plot, though the incidents themselves are artificially and even clumsily contrived. 'Britomart' is essentially a book that improves on acquaintance. The opening chapters are dreary and tedious, but the reader may be encouraged to persevere.

The Red-House Mystery. By Mrs. Hungerford. 2 vols. (Chatto & Windus.)

Mrs. HUNGERFORD may be congratulated on one point in her new tale: it is not written throughout in the present tense. Like her former novels, 'The Red-House Mystery' has a good deal of "love's young dream" (new style), but the supply of criminal interest is also large. It is not certain that many readers care about crime for crime's sake, as it were, unless of a very convincing sort. And they will not find this picture of it very effective or exciting in spite of the piling up of horror on horror. The hearth and home shared by the sinister Dr. Darkham and his "detestable" wife and "terrible" idiot son is a gruesome spot, yet neither it nor the murders and hauntings are sufficiently well considered and presented to be appalling. To properly shock the feelings a certain degree of belief is essential in the reader, and so much "bold advertisement" of the ugliness of human nature leads him to question the advantage of the procedure. Yet here and there are grim and vivid touches. The light relief is, however, the best thing about the story, and some of the secondary people are, in their way, amusing and cleverly drawn. We know of old Mrs. Hungerford's high-spirited and flippant young people, with their eye for the comic as well as the sentimental side of life—and these specimens of the genus are not very unlike their predecessors. When the dark, but not altogether mysterious criminal has been disposed of by the hand of retributive justice (in the person of the powerful seventeen-year-old idiot), the rest of the company are, for the most part, made happy with the right person.

Theories. By A. N. T. A. P. "Independent Novel Series." (Fisher Unwin.)

THIS is a clever book about a fairly trite subject. A woman full of raw enthusiasms and undigested crazes is mated to a good ordinary gentleman of a practical turn of mind, who is most patient in humouring her varying moods as long as he can, but is finally obliged to speak out, with what proves in the end to be the happiest result. It is not quite clear that the author would suggest the same moral as we have ventured to hint at in this short account of the story, but we are inclined to think that the husband is treated rather unfairly throughout; sufficient allowance is not made for the extremely trying circumstances of his case in having to deal with such a firebrand as his wife. But though it is rarely possible to approve of her actions, the sweetness and limpidity of her character, to which the encomium bestowed on Nathanael might be applied, are dwelt on with loving skill. As a foil to the heroine, Miss Hawth, who acts as chorus, is terribly effective; in fact, her dreary narrowness is, if anything, overdone. It might be said that Herbert Gower's position requires a little more explanation; but the Colonel, of whom there is hardly enough, is a delightful relief to the seriousness of the book: his History of Food is really a most brilliant idea worked out with considerable humour.

A Naughty Girl. By J. Ashby Sterry. "The Modern Library." (Bliss, Sands & Foster.)

THERE is enough incident in this story to make it amusing in a mild way, and rather too much coincidence to make it probable. But it is very slight, and the end is dragged out too long by unnecessary and uninteresting misunderstandings. Still the book is worth reading to while away a vacant half hour. For this reason Mr. Ashby Sterry may be asked another time not to indulge so much in what looks almost like log-rolling; in more than one instance sentences like the following occur: "While waiting she took up . . . by . . . [a recent novel is named], and found it a story of extraordinary interest. She was so absorbed in it," &c. Unless the books named be classics or recent books of overwhelming and incontestable excellence, which these are not, such sentences are in distinctly bad taste.

THE LITERATURE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

Biblical Essays. By the late J. B. Lightfoot, D.D. (Macmillan & Co.)—The most valuable of these essays are those that have been already published. The essay on St. John's Gospel puts the internal evidence for its genuineness as fully and clearly as it can well be put. The essays on the Epistle to the Romans are also an exceedingly able contribution to New Testament literature, and the second one demolishes the arguments of Hort in a masterly way. The essays that appear in this volume for the first time all belong to an early period of Dr. Lightfoot's career, and are taken from lecture-notes written between 1862 and 1872. We doubt if Dr. Lightfoot himself would have allowed their publication in their present form. Some of them, such as the one on the external evidence for the genuineness of St. John's Gospel, have been superseded by the investigations published in his 'Essays on Supernatural Religion' and in his 'Apostolic Fathers.' Others are fragmentary. But all bear marks of the thorough scholar and patient inquirer. They, however, require to be read with caution. Thus the martyrdom of Polycarp is set down in one place at 155 A.D., in another at 165, and no reference is made to the quite recent examination of the subject in the Rheinisches Museum. Similar inconsistencies and deficiencies are to be met with not infrequently.

The New Testament and its Writers: being an Introduction to the Books of the New Testament. By the Rev. J. A. M'Clymont, B.D. (Black.)—Mr. M'Clymont states in regard to the canon of the New Testament that its "extent was formally settled by the collective wisdom of the Church expressed through her Councils, first at Laodicea in 364 (if the genuineness of the decree on the subject be admitted) and at the third Council of Carthage in 397, when the very same books as are contained in our New Testament were declared to be canonical and the only ones that should be read in church." Mr. M'Clymont accepts the decision of the Council of Carthage, and throughout his book expounds, as if they were irrefutable, the reasons which have induced men of past times to regard each book of the New Testament as written by an apostle or under the direction of one. The reader would scarcely know that a contrary opinion in regard to any one of the books could now be entertained. When the author mentions an argument against the genuineness of any of them, it is to dismiss it as if there were no force in it. The book is thus one-sided from beginning to end, and the writer does not exhibit capacity to see the position of his opponents or to carry on original research. On the other hand, Mr. M'Clymont's work shows that he has read most of the books in the original languages which could be of use to him, and he evidently has spent much labour on the compilation of his treatise. He exhibits competent scholarship, and presents his opinions with great clearness. The book will prove most serviceable for those who wish to know only one side of the subject, but it is essential for their comfort that they do not read books of a contrary kind.

The Greek Testament. Edited by the Rev. E. Miller.—The Gospel according to St. Luke. Edited by H. R. Heatley. (Rivington, Percival & Co.)—This is a handy text-book. The Greek is beautifully printed; the notes really elucidate the text, and have the merit of conciseness; and the vocabulary is accurate, the misprints being few. There are two editors, a particular and a general, and there is no attempt to distinguish the work of each. The introduction bears no indication that the writer knows anything of the higher criticism. The notes show a curious admixture of High Church and Broad Church opinions. Thus the differences between the Gospels are pointed out. An apocryphal narrative of a demoniac miracle is quoted to illustrate a demoniac miracle in St. Luke as if they were both on parallel lines. And Christ's words "Thy sins are forgiven thee" are illustrated by the "Jewish maxim that no sick man is healed of his disease until all his sins have been forgiven." But in the note on our Lord's brothers three opinions are mentioned, and the first is summarily dismissed as wrong by the remark, "The first opinion contradicts a decision of the sixth General Council."

Canonical and Uncanonical Gospels, with a Translation of the Recently Discovered Fragment of the Gospel of Peter. By W. E. Barnes. (Longmans & Co.)—The object of this book is twofold: first, "to disprove the notion that the Gospels first became authorities in the fourth century A.C." (sic); and second, to show that "the narrative cannot be shaken, even if the usual authorities for it be proved to be more recent than we believe." Mr. Barnes has made a thorough study of his subject; he is competent to deal with it, and his book is interesting as containing notices of the recent contributions that have been made to the history of the Gospels. But he has striven to be concise, and the result is that he is often inaccurate. Thus, in his account of the 'Apology of Aristides,' he does not mention that it is known to us in three different forms, and that none of these can be proved to be the original. He quotes it as if his text were the original and there was no dispute about it, and he is particularly unfortunate in the passage which he has selected; for the texts of the Greek, Armenian, and Syriac forms differ widely from each other as regards the most important of the expressions contained in it, and probably all are widely divergent from the original. In almost every chapter there is something similar to this. Mr. Barnes acknowledges that he is not a dispassionate inquirer, and in harmony with this confession we find that his omissions and inaccuracies are in favour of his own opinions. Thus, in his account of the uncanonical gospels, he does not show to what extent the Gospel according to the Hebrews was used as Scripture. His remark is, "It is easy to overrate its importance." Again, he lays considerable stress on the evidence of Justin Martyr, and to bring out its value he adds, "Justin Martyr not only wrote before the year 180 A.D., but, according to some authorities, may have even died before 150 A.D." Mr. Barnes should not have made such an assertion as to the date of Justin's death without mentioning his authorities—for in all probability they are not authorities at all. But it is also a defect of the book that the reader must believe in Mr. Barnes, if he is to accept his reasonings, for a large number of the most important statements bearing on his arguments are given on his own authority. The faults of the book arise to a large extent from the form in which Mr. Barnes has embodied his materials. It is evident that, if he liked, he could produce a book on the subject that would not be open to some of the objections which we have brought against his present production.

SHORT STORIES.

As we recently took occasion to observe, the past year was less remarkable for the production of good novels than for an extension of the licence accorded to the modern novelist in treating of subjects which it was the custom until recently to let alone. Mr. Hubert Crackanthorpe's 'Wreckage' was in this respect a sign of the times, and now we have a lady, who calls herself "George Egerton," following as closely as she dares in his footsteps with Keynotes (Mathews & Lane). It is in some measure the latest pose of literary affectation, this strange desire to make Mrs. Grundy's flesh creep with questionable stories written in dubious English; and there is nothing to cause even a temporary flutter in the doves of the discreet, for, in fact, these young persons, whether it be in prose or verse that they go about to shock the "big middle class," take themselves much too seriously. 'Keynotes' has a certain violence which does duty for strength, and a kind of tawdriness which masquerades as style. At the same time, despite much uncalled-for bitterness, it contains, here and there, the promise of better things. There are passages in 'A Cross Line' and 'Under Northern Skies' which reveal the true lover of nature, who can describe vividly what she sees hanging around her on the walls of that fascinating picture-gallery we call the world. But, for the most part, the reader is repelled by the peculiar tone of the writer's mind, and this feeling of repulsion at times deepens into sheer disgust, as when she speaks of a man who has had "a varied experience of the female animal," or of a woman "who was one bump of philoprogenitiveness." If that sort of thing does not leave a bad taste in the mouth, we should be glad to know what does; and 'Keynotes' is full of it, from cover to cover. The femme incompréhensible, when she goes on the war-path, is apt, we fear, to leave her good manners behind; she listens at key-holes, she treads on the reader's corns, she asserts her claim to the full enjoyment of the literary franchise, in an altogether too aggressive and noisy fashion.

In his preface to John Ingerfield, and other Stories (McClure & Co.), Mr. J. K. Jerome relates his distress when, on a former occasion, a serious story that he had written was mistaken for a bad attempt at humour, and so, to avoid a similar error, this time he is good enough to point out to us which of these stories are serious and which are not. It is unfortunate that a man of Mr. Jerome's ability should thus think it necessary to act as signpost to his own works, especially as in two of the cases this confession of weakness is quite misplaced. 'John Ingerfield' is a charming little story of indifference turned into love from devotion to a common cause of mercy, and to judge from the slender material of fact which the author seems to have had to go upon, he has been very skilful in the turning of his incidents and in breathing life into his characters. 'The Woman of the Sester' is a rather gruesome study of the growth of madness exhibited in letters from the madman. It certainly does not seem probable that a newly married man should have been afflicted in this particular way; still, granting that he was, the story is cleverly told. As for the other "serious" story, its serious meaning is so profound that we have been unable to plumb it. 'Variety Patter' contains a very funny story about a well-known lady of the music-hall, but in the 'Lease of the Cross Keys' more, one would think, could have been made out of the humour of the situation, which in itself, however, is not great.

RECENT BIOGRAPHY.

Annie Besant, an Autobiography (Fisher Unwin), is a book which does not call for lengthy notice in these columns, though it has a certain importance as a "human document," and is likely to be regarded by some as a sort of new gospel. Mrs. Besant admits that there is "a savour of vanity" in the task she has undertaken, and the vanity is conspicuous on every page, from the first, in which she is careful to inform us that her "baby eyes opened to the light" at 5.30 P.M. on October 1st, 1847, down to the last, in which we are assured that, as one of "those on whose heads the touch of the Master has rested in blessing," she "can never again look upon the world save through eyes made luminous with the radiance of the Eternal Peace." To members of the Blavatsky Lodge of the Theosophical Society, the leadership of which has devolved on her since Madame Blavatsky's death, it is, of course, satisfactory to know that even in infancy Mrs. Besant was "mystical and imaginative, religious to the very finger-tips, and with a certain faculty for seeing visions and dreaming dreams," and that every step in her life, through the forty years and more which passed before she was herself aware of her reincarnation, was a predestined movement towards the happy day in which her eyes were to be made luminous and radiant, and by a "flash of illumination" she was to know "that the weary search was over and the very Truth was found." It was to Mr. W. T. Stead that she owed this flash. One day he handed her Madame Blavatsky's volumes on 'The Secret Doctrine.' "Can you review these?" he asked. "My young men all fight shy of them, but you are quite mad enough on these subjects to make something of them." It is true that a fortnight before, as she says, "I heard a Voice that was to become to me the holiest sound on earth." But the Voice was unintelligible until 'The Secret Doctrine' had been read. That done, Mrs. Besant straightway became a Theosophist, and, sitting for about two years at Madame Blavatsky's feet as a disciple, was able to succeed to her apostleship. She now sees that she was a Theosophist in spite of herself and her ignorance all through her dreamy childhood and girlish aspirations to become a nun, her marriage, her association with Mr. Bradlaugh in the preaching of Atheism, and her association with the Fabian Society in the preaching of Socialism; and in furnishing a minute account of so much of her life as she thinks the world needs to know she endeavours to make it plain that all her past experiences and occupations were preparatory to the final stage of mental and moral development which she has at length reached, and on which she stands as on a rock. But as she is still only forty-six years old, with the addition of a few months, days, and minutes, and may, therefore, hope to live for another quarter of a century or so, affording material for at least one other volume of autobiography, and time for several other religious changes, she is, perhaps, rather rash in speaking so positively of her latest enthusiasm.

In Some Memories of Books, Authors, and Events (Constable & Co.) Mr. James Bertram, who died two years ago, put together a good deal of interesting gossip about his early experiences and acquaintances in Edinburgh. He was only thirteen when, in 1837, he was apprenticed to the proprietor of Tait's Magazine, and he rose to be managing clerk and cashier before he was twenty-one. He unwisely abandoned that safe employment to become a strolling player. But he soon returned to Edinburgh, and there he found occupation, first as a bookseller, and afterwards as a journalist and writer of books, his best-known and most important work being 'The Harvest of the Sea,' which is still an authority on European fisheries. Part of the information given in the present volume is rather trivial, but it tells us a good deal about William Tait and the bookselling and publishing arrangements of Edinburgh half a century ago, and something about De Quincey and other contributors to Tait, as well as about Blackwood, the Chamberses, and other friendly rivals of the enterprising and large-hearted tradesman in Princes Street. To De Quincey Mr. Bertram was often sent on errands as a lad, and the kindly treatment he received was characteristic of the amiable and unbusiness-like "opium smoker." Scott was before our author's day, but Mr. Bertram knew shopmen and printers who had had to do with the great novelist, and such chit-chat as he heard is here detailed.

MR. EDWARD VERRALL LUCAS begins his preface to Bernard Barton and his Friends (Hicks) by a reference to 'Selections from the Poems and Letters of Bernard Barton,' with the memoir by Edward FitzGerald. That memoir, he observes, "for delicacy of style, justice of appreciation, and rightness of proportion is a model of what such memoirs should be; and to tamper with it is almost sacrilege." We thoroughly agree with Mr. Lucas; nay, we more than agree with him, for we would omit his "almost." The memoir is not very scarce, for it was largely subscribed for, and is priced pretty cheaply still in second-hand booksellers' catalogues; anyhow, if it is scarce, it might have been easily reprinted. We have noticed here many omissions, e.g., the second letter to Mrs. Shawe and the first one to Miss Charlesworth, the exquisite passage at the bottom of p. 32 of the memoir, and the foot-note on p. 34. There is an interesting letter by Mrs. FitzGerald (the Quaker poet's daughter, who was born in 1808, and is living still) describing a call made by her and her father on Charles Lamb; and a pleasant fragment of a letter from Bernard Barton to a schoolgirl at Bury St. Edmunds. Otherwise the additions are of little value. To write about Major Moor (1769-1848), and not mention his 'Hindoo Pantheon,' is ridiculous; George Borrow here becomes "that indescribable man—humanist, novelist, linguist, pugilist, patriot, traveller, philosopher, and gipsy: in short one of Nature's focusses!"

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Days spent on a Doge's Farm (Fisher Unwin) shows that Miss M. Symonds possesses much of her lamented father's ability as a writer. Like him she has a distinct turn for description, and if there be an occasional touch of exaggeration, it may fairly be said that Mr. Symonds's sketches had the same defect. The subject of the volume is the management of an estate in the Basso Padovano, which came into the possession of a branch of the Pisani family in the fifteenth century. In 1735 the then owner of the estate, Alvise Pisani, was elected Doge, and consequently Miss Symonds styles it the Doge's Farm; but the reader must not on that account expect anything of historical interest in the book, which deals entirely with life on an Italian estate which has only been drained and brought under cultivation in the present century, although, to be sure, space is found for lively descriptions of excursions to Arquà and Padua and other places in the neighbourhood. Miss Symonds has a quick eye for everything picturesque, and she shows a genuine sympathy with the Italian character, with its strong points and its weak points; indeed, her volume gives promise of her attaining a considerable position as a popular author. The pity of it is that she has been tempted by buoyant spirits into forgetting the reserve a guest should practise, and has described at length, and in a tone that to some may seem cynical, the inmates of the Doge's villa and the management of the estate by her hostess, who, as the widow of the last Pisani, has faced with success the task, difficult for a foreigner, of improving and ordering a large estate. A young lady, even when inexperienced, should be careful to avoid the personalities of the new journalism, and we are sure reflection will show Miss Symonds that she has gone too far in the direction of making private life public property.

We have seldom come across a book which reveals more simple-minded enthusiasm in its writer than does The Little Sisters of the Poor, by Mrs. Abel Ram, published by Messrs. Longman & Co. It forms a history of the well-known order, which may be commended as a study of the Christian life even to those fierce Protestants who will not believe that any good thing can come out of the Church of Rome. Although not so modern as its rival the Salvation Army, the community of the Little Sisters is only fifty years of age, its founder is still living, and the nominal foundress, the first Mother-General, died only late in September last. That two seamstresses in a decayed town, a shepherdess from an oyster-catching village, and a little priest, whose income was 16l. a year, should have started a work which was to grow in half a century, without endowment, into a community possessing nearly three hundred separate religious houses, with a training school in which six hundred young women, called together only by their wish to practise obedience and charity in fortitude and humility, are learning to be working nuns, is what many would call a miracle. Let us at least concede that the system devised by the Abbé Le Pailleur was one which was needed by the Roman Catholic, if not by the whole Christian world. Mrs. Ram believes in the theory of miracle, and thinks that, by a series of direct interpositions of Almighty God and His saints, the poor have been fed with scraps suddenly created for that purpose, and twenty-franc pieces placed in the begging bags by angels in the shape of lovely boys whose footmarks were not to be found on the soft snow. There are, too, a good many prepared miracles in her book. A cow is wanted; a notice to that effect is tied round the neck of the statue of St. Joseph, and presently the cow walks in. But it is a kind friend in the town who drives it in; and even Mrs. Ram will admit that he may have heard that a cow was needed. Childlike, also, is the account of the punishments inflicted on the image of the patron saint when prayers to him have remained too long without an answer. But here again a little of the wisdom of the serpent on the part of the mother of the house in question peeps out, for it seems that the local benefactors of the community were allowed to know that the saint was in trouble, and why, and thus to receive a hint of what was expected, either of the saint or of them. This kind of half-jocular, half-mystic treatment of sacred themes is characteristic of the women of religious orders; but it must not blind Protestant readers to the beauty of the life they lead, nor to the charm of a book like that before us, which lets the public into its inner secret. It is painful to read of the persecution endured by the sisterhood at Edinburgh, where bills on the walls described the sisters as Antichrist, and they were frequently pelted by the mob, so that one died of her injuries and another was badly hurt. Are we, after all, much better than the Chinese? The book, which ought to meet with a success, is in sad need of revision. There are many errors, such as "warmed" for "warned" in a religious service, and so forth. A story is told of Lord Aberdeen in Ireland, in which either the date or the name is wrong.

EXTREMELY pretty reprints of Paul and Virginia and of The Gold Bug of Poe have reached us from Messrs. Routledge. We presume the illustrations are produced by M. Guillaumein Paris. A pretty volume, containing a selection from Hazlitt's Spirit of the Age, has been added by Messrs. Putnam's Sons to their "Knickerbocker Nuggets." Mr. Brimley Johnson contributes a sensible introduction.

MESSRS. SAMPTON LOW & Co. have added to their reprint of Mr. Clark Russell's novels Jack's Courtship.—Messrs. Macmillan have reprinted in a convenient shape Major Gambier Parry's venture in fiction The Story of Dick and Mr. James's excellent volume of essays Partial Portraits.—Messrs. Jarrold & Sons have issued handy reprints of Once! by Curtis Yorke, and Bonnie Kate, by Mrs. Leith Adams.

THE English-German Conversation Dictionary, compiled by Mr. Jäschke and published by Mr. Nutt, is a useful little volume for the tourist.

THE following London booksellers have forwarded their catalogues: Mr. Auvache, Messrs. Cross & Co., Messrs. Dulau & Co. (geology), Mr. Edwards (fair), Mr. Ellington, Mr. Glaisher, Messrs. Gowers & Son, Mr. Higham (theology, two catalogues), Mr. Irvine, Mr. Jeffery, Messrs. Luzac & Co., Mr. Maggs (good), Mr. May (fair), Messrs. Myers & Co., Messrs. Nutt & Co. (theology, part ii.), Messrs. Pickering & Chatto (elaborate and valuable catalogue), Messrs. Suckling & Galloway, Mrs. Tregaskin (handsome illustrated quarto catalogue), and Messrs. Wesley & Son (valuable library relating to Paracelsus and alchemy). The following country booksellers have sent us their catalogues: Mr. Pickering of Bath; Mr. Baker (five catalogues: one of poetry, one theological, one on topographical, and one relating to railroads), Mr. Downing, Mr. Lowe, and Mr. Thistlewood of Birmingham; Messrs. Matthews & Brooke of Bradford (two catalogues, one of Mr. Briggs's library); Mr. Smith of Brighton; Messrs. W. George's Sons (good) of Bristol; Mr. Johnson of Cambridge; Mr. Murray of Derby (two catalogues); Mr. Barendine, Mr. Brown (good), Mr. Cameron (good), and Mr. Clay (two catalogues, one of them classical) of Edinburgh; Messrs. Kerr & Richardson (fair) of Glasgow; Mr. Howell (good), Mr. Jaggard, and Mr. Potter of Liverpool; and Miss Millard of Teddington.

We have on our table A Narrative of Further Excavations at Zimbabwe, Mashonaland, by Major Sir John C. Willoughby (Philip).—The Siege of Plataea from Thucydides, Books II. and III., edited by J. M. Sing (Rivingtons).—Julius Caesar, with Introduction and Notes by W. Dent (Blackie).—The Industries of Russia, Siberia, and the Great Siberian Railway, and Manufactures and Trades, by J. M. Crawford, Vols. I., II., and V. (King & Son).—A New Chapter in the History of Labour, by J. Keith, C.E. (Unwin Brothers).—A Few Words about Drawing for Beginners, by J. B. (Edinburgh, Douglas).—Round the Works of our Great Railways, by Various Authors (Arnold).—Leif's House in Vineland, by E. N. Horsford, and Graves of the Northmen, by C. Horsford (Boston, U.S., Darrall & Upham).—Cartoons, Social and Political, by Cynicus (59, Drury Lane).—Short Studies in Character, by S. Bryant (Sonnen-schein).—Antique Lamps, by W. Gudworth (C. J. Clark).—The Sunny Days of Youth, by the Author of 'How to be Happy though Married' (Fisher Unwin).—The Notions of a Nobody, by T. T. Dahle (The Leadenhall Press).—Clear the Track! by E. Werner, translated by M. S. Smith (The International News Company).—The Lifting of the Shadow, by K. M. Eady (S.S.U.).—Up among the Ice-Floes, by J. M. Oxley (Nelson).—The Browning Boys, by Pansy (S.S.U.).—Lucia's Trust, by C. Shaw (Shaw).—The Girls of Cliff School, by G. Toplis (S.S.U.).—Scarlet Town, by H. M. Poynter (S.P.C.K.).—As We Sweep through the Deep, by Dr. Gordon Stables, R.N. (Nelson).—

Vulcan's Revenge, by the Author of 'Choosing her Way' (S.S.U.).—Paul and his Troubles, by F. S. Potter (S.P.C.K.).—The Child's Own Magazine, Volume for 1893 (S.S.U.).—A Storm and a Teapot, by F. H. Wood (S.P.C.K.).—The Church Monthly, Volume for 1893 ('Church Monthly' Office).—Dick's Water-Lilies, by C. Temple (S.P.C.K.).—The Silver Link, Vol. II. (S.S.U.).—All about a Five-Pound Note, by H. Carlyon (S.P.C.K.).—Various Verses, by W. F. Harvey and Others (Hayman & Co.).—Gold, the God, and other Poems, by E. L. T. Harris-Bickford (Camborne, Harris-Bickford).—Switzerland, Poetical and Pictorial, compiled by H. Eberli (Zurich, Füssli).—Recitations and Dialogues, edited by M. T. Yates, LL.D.: Book I., Junior; Book II., Senior (Arnold).—The World's Parliament of Religions, edited by the Rev. J. H. Barrows, D.D., 2 vols. ('Review of Reviews' Office).—The Truth of the Christian Religion, by J. Kaftan, D.D., translated by G. Forries, 2 vols. (T. & T. Clark).—Symbolism; or, Exposition of the Doctrinal Differences between Catholics and Protestants, by J. A. Moehler, D.D., translated by J. B. Robertson (Gibbings & Co.).—The Christian Ethic, by W. Knight, LL.D. (Murray).—The Greatest Thing in the World, and other Addresses, by H. Drummond (Hodder & Stoughton).—The Gospel and its Earliest Interpretations, by O. Cono, D.D. (Putnam).—Fragments in Baskets, by Mrs. W. Boyd Carpenter (Isbister).—Die Medicin der Naturvölker, by Dr. Max Bartels (Leipzig, Fernan).—Versuch einer Reconstitution des Deborahides, by O. Niebuhr (Berlin, Ruhe).—and Reproductions of the Woodcuts in the 'Dream of Poliphilus' ('Hypnerotomachia Poliphili'), printed at Venice by Aldus in 1499 (W. Griggs). Among New Editions we have Hours with the Mystics, by R. A. Vaughan (Gibbings & Co.).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Blake's (Rev. B.) How to Read the Prophets: Part 4, Ezekiel, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Bonwick's (J.) Irish Druids and Old Irish Religions, 6/6 cl.
Brooks's (P.) Addresses, with Introduction by Rev. J. H. Ward, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Denny's (E.) Anglican Orders and Jurisdiction, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Geikie's (C.) The Gospels, a Companion to the Life of our Lord, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Keen-Little's (Rev. W. J.) The Mystery of the Passion of our Most Holy Redeemer, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Molinari's (G. De) Religion, trans. by W. K. Firminger, 2/6 cl.
Moss's (R. W.) From Malachi to Matthew, 12mo. 3/6 cl. (Books for Bible Students.)
Moule's (H. C. G.) Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans, 8vo. 7/6 cl. (Expositor's Bible.)
Shedd's (W. G. T.) Orthodoxy and Heterodoxy, a Miscellany, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Welschacker's (Carl von) Apostolic Age of the Christian Church, trans. by Millar, Vol. I, 8vo. 10/6 cl.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Ashdown's (O. H.) St. Albans, Historical and Picturesque, illustrated, 42/
Layard's (G. S.) Tennysen and his Pre-Raphaelite Illustrators, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Men and Women of the Day, ed. by C. Eglington, Vol. 6, 42/
Modern Wall Decorations, 4 parts, 21/ net.

Poetry.

- Argyll's (Duke of) The Burdens of Belief, and other Poems, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Gosse's (B.) The Jacobean Poets, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl. (University Extension Manuals.)

Bibliography.

- Heron-Allen's (E.) De Fideicula Bibliographia, being an Attempt at a Bibliography of the Violin, 3 vols. 42/ net.

Philosophy.

- Hume's Enquiry concerning the Human Understanding, from Edition of 1777, edited by Bigge, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Marshall's (H. R.) Pain, Pleasure, and Aesthetics, an Essay, 8vo. 2/6 net.

History and Biography.

- Owington's (M.) History of the Papacy, Vol. 3, 8vo. 15/6 cl.
Footman's (J.) History of the Parish Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Chipping Lambourn, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Hazlitt's (W.) Conversations of James Northcote, edited by E. Gosse, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Jebb's (Mr. Joseph) Correspondence with Lady G. S. Stanley, 1818-38, edited by Bourke, 8vo. 15/6 cl.
Lucas's (B. V.) Bernard Barton and his Friends, a Record of Quiet Lives, 8vo. 5/ net.
Murray's (D.) Japan, cr. 8vo. 8/6 cl. (The Story of the Nations.)

Geography and Travel.

- Lucas's (G. F.) Historical Geography of the British Colonies, Vol. 2, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Philology.

Beame's (J.) Grammar of the Bengali Language, cr. 8vo. 6/6.
 Madan's (A. C.) English-Swathi Dictionary, 12mo. 7/6 net.
 Virgil's Æneid, Books 1-3, interlinearly trans. into English by J. Gibson, cr. 8vo. 2/6 swd.

Science.

Fries (D.) and others' History of Scandinavian Fleets, with Coloured Plates by W. von Wright, 2 parts, fo. 302/6 swd.
 Hall (H. S.) and Stevens (P. H.) *Text-Book of Euclid's
 Elements*, Books 1 and 2, 12mo. 2/6.
 Jauffroy's (G. S.) Notes on Rural In Eye Diseases, 2/6 cl.
 Kempe's (H. R.) *Kingdon's Year-Book of Formulas, Rules,
 Tables*, 8vo. 8/ leather.
 Morris (W. F.) and Oliver's (C. A.) Text-Book of Ophthalmology, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Rider's Technical Series: Modern Shafting and Gearing, by
 M. F. Bale, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.; Tree Pruning, by A. Don Carr, trans. by C. S. Sargent, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.; Practical Forestry, by A. D. Webster, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Tur's (R. S.) Economic Geology of United States, 16/ net.
 Vince's (S. H.) A Student's Text-Book of Botany (first half), 8vo. 7/6 swd.

General Literature.

Allen's (G.) The Smullywag, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Arbib's (E.) Maris, Countess of Salsetio, trans. from the Italian by S. King, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
 Black's (W.) Donald Ross of Helmsra, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
 Borgaud's (C.) *The Rise of Modern Democracy in Old and
 New England*, trans. by Mrs. B. Hill, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Fenn's (G. M.) The Tiger Lily, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Ingelow's (Jean) Very Young and Quite Another Story, 2/6
 Morris's (W. R.) Misadventure, cr. 8vo. 2/6 bds.
 Prior's (Rev. A. C.) Nature Teachings for the Young,
 Flowers and Bible Tracts, 16mo. 2/6 cl.
 Savage's (H. H.) For Life and Love, a Story of the Rio Grande, cr. 8vo. 2/6 bds.
 Vincent's (V.) The White Algetta, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 West Irish Folk-Tales and Romances, collected and translated by W. Larmaline, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Bouss's (C.) *Acta Capitulum Provincialis Ordinis
 Fratrum Predicatorum*, 16fr.
 Renan's (E.) Histoire du Peuple d'Israël, Vol. 5, 7fr. 80.

Law.

Makower (F.) Die Verfassung der Kirche v. England, 20m.
History and Biography.

Baumgarten (H.) *Historische u. politische Aufsätze u.
 Reden*, 10m.

Bouillon (E. de) Les Reclus de Toulouse sous la Terreur, 3fr.

Daniel (A.) L'Année politique, 1893, 3fr. 50.

Heinemann (L. v.) Geschichte der Normannen in Unter-Italien u. Sicilien, Vol. 1, 6m. 50.

Geography and Travel.

Ponsard (G.) Madagascar, 3fr. 50.

Schneider (F.) Atlas de Géographie historique, Part 4,
 1fr. 50.

Yung (E.) Sous le Ciel breton, Mr.

Bibliography.

Dufalaco (G.) Beiträge zur Theorie u. Praxis des Bibliothek-wesen, Part 1, 6m.

Hildebrandt (A. M.) Heraldische Bücherzeichen, Part 2, 4m.

Otto (G.) 20 Bücherzeichen, 4m.

Science.

Baumgarten (F.) Jahresbericht üb. die Fortschritte in der Lehre v. den pathogenen Mikroorganismen für 1893,
 Part 1, 8m.

Callou (L.) Electricité pratique, 5fr.

Camus (G.) Monographie des Orchidées de France, 40fr.

Joubin (L.) Les Némertéens, 15fr.

Villon (A. M.) Dictionnaire de Chimie industrielle, Part 8, 3fr.

General Literature.

Bazin (R.) Les Italiens d'aujourd'hui, 3fr. 50.

Gjerts (M.) L'Enthousiasme, 3fr.

Laporte (A.) Emile Zola, 3fr. 50.

L'Heureux (M.) Les Malfaisants, 3fr. 50.

Nion (F. de) L'Ober, 3fr. 50.

Routier (L.) Guillaume II. à Londres et l'Union francorusse, 3fr. 50.

Blivestre (A.) Vieilles jolies, 3fr. 50.

DICKENS IN YORKSHIRE.

YOUR correspondent on the above subject proves pretty conclusively that Dickens only spent a day or two at Barnard Castle when in search of local colour for 'Nicholas Nickleby.' But he seems to accept the statement that Dickens owed his introduction to the Bowes school to Humphrey, the local clockmaker. This, however, was not the case. Dickens called at several local schools (there were at least three in the village of Bowes alone) and asked to look through them. Such institutions would hardly welcome the inquiries of a stranger, and in only one case was he admitted. This was the school which he afterwards made famous as "Dothoboy's Hall." Although it left much to be desired, it was far above the class of schools which Dickens did so much to abolish.

The description of the buildings in 'Nicholas Nickleby' pointed too plainly to this particular school, and the appearance of the proprietor was painfully suggested in the personality of

Mr. Squeers. This schoolmaster was deservedly respected by his neighbours, and to gather the fearful stories which were too true of other schools and locate them in this place was cruel in the extreme. I know that Dickens received a good Yorkshire welcome and was not allowed to leave the house without having some refreshment, and in return for this he wrote his story in such a way as to at once ruin and break the heart of a worthy, but too confiding Yorkshireman.

C. B.

South Shields, Jan. 26, 1904.

WITH reference to the letter 'Dickens in Yorkshire' in the Athenæum of the 20th inst. (p. 83) I think a few facts may interest your readers. It is, I think, stated in the preface to 'Nicholas Nickleby' that Dickens first became aware of the existence of the Yorkshire schools during his walks with a boy who had been at one of the schools, whose name he had forgotten, but who had a very sore nose which he got when at the school. I may say that this boy, now a man of more than eighty years of age, is living at the present time in Newcastle. He is a native of either Chatham or Rochester, and when a lad was sent by his parents to one of the Bowes schools. After being there for some time he returned to Chatham, where he used to meet Dickens, and "chummed" with him. In the course of their frequent walks my friend gave a full description of his life and all the hardships the boys had to undergo at the school. Whenever anything particularly struck Dickens he used to slap his thigh. The friend in question—Mr. J. C. Brooks—had at the time of his companionship with Dickens a sore nose, but the novelist was mistaken in ascribing it to his treatment at the Bowes school.

A few years ago Mr. Brooks contributed two interesting articles to the columns of the Newcastle Weekly Courant on the proceedings at the Bowes school in his young days.

ROBT. BLAIR.

A LETTER appearing in the Athenæum under the initials M. H., in reference to the late Charles Dickens, has been brought to my notice; and if accuracy is one of the objects aimed at, perhaps you will allow me to supply further particulars, if only for the information of your correspondent. When Charles Dickens first visited Barnard Castle it is quite true he stayed only two days, but he returned later, and stayed six weeks at the King's Head Hotel; and the waitress who attended upon him during the whole of the time, and was rewarded by Dickens for finding a gold pencil-case which he had lost, died only two years ago. Many trustworthy persons now living can testify that this person frequently referred to this fact, and her statement that Charles Dickens stayed six weeks. Nothing can be more insulting to the descendants of the ladies who jointly had the King's Head Hotel at that time than the statement that, when asked the length of Mr. Dickens's stay, they gave an equivocal reply, or that they lied when they said Dickens wrote part of 'Nicholas Nickleby' in their house; neither of them would have condescended to such conduct. It is thirty-one years since one of the two ladies died, and twenty-eight years since the survivor resigned the hotel to the daughter of one—the present landlady. Possibly your correspondent's memory is a little rusty with age. In conclusion, I should like to know how your correspondent reconciles the statement that Dickens observed a shop on the opposite side of the market-place, which seemed a favourite resort of men for idle gossip, with the subsequent assertion that the same shop could not be seen from the market cross. In point of fact, Charles Dickens met Humphrey in the smoking-room in the hotel.

A. S.

BACON AND BARTHOLOMEW ANGLICUS.

January 28, 1904.

IF my notes (December 30th, 1893) do not go far in an identification, they ought to dispose of several. It could not be said of Thomas Aquinas that he did not know Greek, or that his writings were characterized by "vanitas puerilis"; he had received a certain training before he entered the order; he did not write on philosophy at large, as Bacon's unknown had written (I have read his expositio on Aristotle's 'De Caelo' &c.); he was not the first "magister de philosophia" in his order; and lastly, Bacon was not a fool, and would not make patent insinuations to the Pope against his favourite, and one of the most powerful men in Europe.

I would venture to remind Prof. Poole that "philosophia" was not identical with "theologia" in any mediæval university, and to assure him that I had made myself acquainted with the more obvious writers on the time before I wrote to the Athenæum.

Prof. Brewer was certainly aware of the existence of Thomas Aquinas, yet he does not suggest him, probably because he knew his author; and if Prof. Poole will excuse my altering his words, "it shows a certain want of familiarity with mediæval" ways of thought to suggest that a book bought by the University of Paris to lend to poor students—a mere compilation—would not be quoted as equal to Aristotle or Avicenna. Prof. Poole will find in another part of Bacon a complaint that a different compilation was treated in the same way.

My reason for writing was that the dating of Bartholomew Anglicus took place long after Brewer's edition was published, and seems to be overlooked. Even a book just published on the University of Paris omits his name, I believe entirely, from the list of Franciscan teachers. But if Prof. Poole will turn to the 'Fioretti' or the 'Speculum,' he will find that Bartholomew's book fulfils St. Francis's ideal of science: "O brother Leo, dear sheep of the Lord, if the Friar Minor could speak the tongue of the angels; if he knew the course of the stars, and the virtues of plants; if all the treasures of the earth were revealed to him, and he knew the virtues of birds, fishes, and all animals, those of men, of trees, of stones, of roots, and of waters; write thou that perfect happiness is not there."

ROBERT STEELE.

THE OVERSEERS OF WESTMINSTER POOR IN 1561.

IT is not generally realized that the office of overseer of the poor dates so far back as the beginning of Elizabeth's reign, or that any of the books have been preserved.* But among the archives of Westminster is still treasured

The Overseers Books, Parish St. Margaret's.

Jesus be our speede.

Here followeth the accompte of John Wheler, William Stanton, and Roger Roseley, collectors for the use of the poor, within the parish of St. Margaret's of Westminster, begynning at the feast of the Birthe of our Saviour Jesus Christ, 1561, and ending at the feast of the Annunciation of our Lady St. Mary, for one quarter.....

Of Cope Elmer vi^dPaul Neale vi^dRobert Arden als Barber vi^d &c.

The collectors appear to have been past churchwardens, and the collections to have been made from street to street, including "The Palace," "The Outer Palace," "The Sanctuary," "The Almonry." The subscriptions do not seem to have been of the nature of rates and taxes, however, and the donations were as voluntary as the love of approbation and praise ever allows such to be. Very few names are entered from the outlying districts of Hyde Park, Kensington, and Knightsbridge, then of the parish, pointing to a sparse population there.

The queen's courtiers and visitors seem to have been invited to give. Sometimes we come

* The statute 43 Eliz. c. 2 is cited by law books as the first institution of the office.

on interesting names, sometimes on interesting proportions between the gifts of well-known men. For instance, in 1566 there is entered

Benevolence, The Earle Sussex, xⁱ iii^d
Earl Northumberland, v^o
The Lord Straunge, ij^d
The Lord Dudleye, xli^d
The Lorde Graye, xli^d
The Bishop of Carlile, ij^d
The Bishop of Chichester, ij^d
The Bishop of Duresme, ij^d
The Bishop of Coventry, ij^d iii^d
The Bishop of Chester, ij^d
The Lorde of Loughborowe, v^o
The Lorde of Hunsden, v^o
M^r Comptroller of the Queen's House, vj^d
M^r Cofferer of the Queen's House, xvij^d

Next quarter is entered "The Bishop of Ely, xⁱ." The word "benevolence" seems here used as our "donation," a voluntary and unnecessary gift. The other sums seem to be collected from year to year, though upon what basis they are entered is not clear.

In 1567-8 again appears:—

The Lord Graye, xij^d
The Comptroller of the Queen's House, xⁱ
In the Pallas, William Stanton, xij^d viij^d
In the Great Sanctuary, John Bendebow, ij^d
Petty France, John Stepps, ij^d
Benevolence, Mr. Anthony Newdigate, Esquire, for the poor people of Westminster, xxxij^d iiiij^d

As in other years, in September, 1570, the "Amery Receipts" mention several as giving "nichel" (nihil); among others, Mr. Fulham, Mr. Hunya, and "Mr. White, Master of ye children"; while "Mr. Braye, ye Queenes porter," gives twopence, and "Mr. Bendebowe of the great Sanctuary twopence." The use to which the money is put is also thereafter recorded. Hence one may glean interesting particulars of the expenses and habits of the time.

CHARLOTTE CARMICHAEL STOPES.

DR. WALLER.

DR. JOHN FRANCIS WALLER, of the stock of the great English song-writer, died on the 19th of January. He was a well-known figure in Dublin literary and musical society a generation back. His verse was so graceful and melodious and his thought was so clear that his lyrics lent themselves readily to music, and indeed have been linked to many a charming melody by the leading Dublin composers. His pseudonym as a brilliant author of political and social pasquinades and jeux d'esprit was "Jonathan Froke Slingsby." He wrote a decidedly ingenious "telescope ode" on the occasion of the installation of the Earl of Rosse—the father of the present peer—as Chancellor of the University of Dublin; and, indeed, was generally extremely happy in dealing with such occasional subjects of verse. One at least of his lyrics, 'Kitty Neil,' will live. It contains the delightful conceit:—

Dance light; for my heart it lies under your feet, love!

Dr. Waller was at one time closely connected with the Dublin University Magazine, succeeding Lever as editor. In recent years he resided in London, and undertook not a little literary work for Cassell & Co., with which firm his son-in-law, Dr. Teignmouth Shore, has been much identified.

His lines on St. Patrick Day are sung from year to year at St. James's Hall to the Irish national air by Madame Antoinette Sterling, who never fails to bring down the house with the closing lines:—

I ask not your creed,
If you'll stand in my need
To the land of your birth in the hour of her doleours,
The foe of her foes, let them be who they may;
Then "Fusion of hearts, and confusion of colours!"
Be the Irishman's toast on St. Patrick's Day.

Dr. Waller was a native of Limerick, where he was born in 1809. Among his works are 'Poems,' 1864, second ed. 1863; 'The Slingsby Papers,' 1862; 'The Revelations of Peter Brown, Poet and Peripatetic,' 1872; 'Occasional Odes,' 1864, &c. He was also the editor of several works, notably the massive 'Imperial Dictionary of Universal Biography,' 3 vols., 1867-63. A lengthy article on Dr. Waller and his writings, which appeared in the Dublin University Magazine, 1874, and was written by Dr. T. E. Webb, was afterwards republished as a pamphlet.

Literary Gossip.

MR. McCULLAGH TORRENS, the biographer of Sheil and of Lord Melbourne, has been for several years past engaged in researches, among original documents not hitherto given to the public, into the story of the growth and development of government by Cabinet. Two volumes, containing some of the results of his labours, may be expected during the present season. Mr. Torrens has dwelt more especially, we believe, on the personal side of the history of Cabinets. Messrs. Allen are his publishers.

A GAMEKEEPER is said to be one of the most carefully drawn characters in Mrs. Humphry Ward's new novel, and there is a realistic account of a poaching affray, and much is urged in favour of a revision of the Game Laws.

THERE are, we believe, a very large number of candidates for the professorships now vacant at Auckland University College, viz., those of Classics and English Literature (which were held conjointly by the late Prof. Ponds) and that of Mathematics, from which Prof. W. S. Aldis was ousted by a party in the Council, whose proceedings have been made public by Dr. Abbott, and are generally condemned among men of science here—so strongly, indeed, that the filling of the vacancies has been retarded by more than one refusal to assist in the election to this chair. We are sorry to hear that Prof. Aldis will remain in New Zealand, his wife being an invalid, and will probably make farming his occupation.

ALMOST five hundred years after Chaucer ceased to write we are promised the first complete edition of his works in prose and verse. Prof. Skeat has devoted to it the labour of several years, and his first volume, containing a life of Chaucer, a list of his works, the 'Romaunt of the Rose,' and the 'Minor Poems,' with full introductions and notes, will appear before long. The work will be completed in six volumes. The 'Oxford Chaucer' will be published by the Clarendon Press, and will match the standard edition of 'Piers the Plowman,' by the same editor.

MR. WILLIAM HEINEMANN is going to bring out two volumes of short stories, one by the author of 'The Heavenly Twins,' the other by Mr. Zangwill. The former is to bear the title 'Our Manifold Lives,' the latter 'The King of Schnorrers: Grotesques and Fantasies.'

THE full title of Mr. Thomas Hardy's new collection of Wessex tales is 'Life's Little Ironies: a Set of Tales, with some Colloquial Sketches entitled "A Few Crusted Characters."' It will be issued by Messrs. Osgood, McIlvaine & Co. on the 16th inst.

It may probably be regarded as unique for a publisher to have a representative for nearly fifty years uninterruptedly, yet an instance of this kind occurs in the case of Mr. G. D. Young, who had represented in the north of England, for the period named,

Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Sons. Mr. Young has just retired, and is on his way to Cyprus, where he proposes to spend the remainder of his life. He takes farewell of his old trade friends in a few graceful lines addressed to them.

THE annual meeting of the News-vendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution will be held at Anderton's Hotel on Tuesday next, the 6th inst. Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall, jun., will take the chair, and three pensioners will be elected to the Royal Victoria Pension Fund.

THE Jokai celebration has led Mrs. Hegan Kennard to reissue, through Messrs. Blackwood, in one volume, her translation of 'Timar's Two Worlds.' The edition in three volumes appeared a few years ago.

MR. SIMMS expects to issue in April his 'Bibliotheca Staffordiensis,' which is intended to contain a bibliographical account of books and other printed matter relating to—printed or published in—or written by a native, resident, or person deriving a title from any portion of—the county of Stafford, and to give collation and biographical notices of authors and printers, and also a list of prints, engravings, etchings, &c., of any part thereof; and portraits of any person connected with the shire.

MISS BETHAM-EDWARDS writes:—

"It is a pity that Mr. Du Maurier has named his new novel after a French classic; I allude, of course, to the charming fairy tale of Charles Nodier. Unfamiliar, perhaps, to the English public generally, Nodier's place in French literature is, of course, known to readers of the Athenæum. 'Ciseleur de la phrase,' he is not only a stylist, but a creator, 'Tribly' heading the list of his weird and graceful stories."

THE annual meeting of the Harleian Society was held on Friday, the 26th ult. Mr. Granville Leveson-Gower presided. The annual report and balance-sheet were adopted. A discussion took place on the subject of the future custody and preservation of parish registers, and it was unanimously resolved: "That in the opinion of the Harleian Society it is most desirable that transcripts be made of all the parish registers in the country, and that the District or Parish Councils be required to make the same under rules and regulations to be approved by the Government."

AMONG the new volumes of verse which Mr. Elliot Stock will shortly publish may be mentioned 'Sonnets of the Wingless Hours,' by Mr. Eugene Lee Hamilton, author of 'The New Medusa'; and 'Lyra Sacra,' by Mary E. Kendrew.

PROF. SKERLEY writes:—

"I am much astonished by your announcement that in the list of subscribers to the Momm sen Fund Cambridge is represented by me alone. Still more astonishing is your suggestion that 'Cambridge was so intent on internal matters that it was wholly ignorant of the movement.' And yet I am told that several men who would gladly have subscribed were, in fact, wholly ignorant of the movement. As a matter of fact copies of the Aufbruch were sent to me, and by me were laid on the table of the Historical Board, so that at least my colleagues in that department might not remain ignorant of it. If I had supposed that the Aufbruch had been sent to me alone, and that the responsibility of making the movement known in the university lay with me exclusively, I should probably have taken pains to make it widely known; but I assumed, naturally as I think, that at least Prof. Mayor and Jebb would receive the Auftrag as well as myself. The oversight that has been made is indeed regrettable; but for it, I think it probable that Cambridge would have made at least as good a figure in the list of subscribers as Oxford."

THE deaths are announced of Madame Blazo de Bury, the widow of M. A. H. Blazo, and herself a contributor to the Revue de Paris and the Revue des Deux Mondes, and the writer of a volume of travels in Germany and Austria during the revolutionary troubles of 1818-9; and of Miss C. Fenimore Woolson, an American lady well known as a writer in the United States.

M. LOGNON, of the Institut, discovered the other day in the manuscripts of the Bibliothèque Nationale, rebound and classed under the erroneous title 'Roman de Camel et de Hermondine,' the lengthy romance of 'Meliador,' probably the last romance of the Round Table, written by Froissart in 1383, and containing, besides some thirty thousand lines of Froissart's muse, all the lyrics of Wenceslas de Brabant:—

Dodans ce roman sont encloues
Toutes les chansons que jadis
(Dont l'âme soit en paradis)
Que fist le bon Duc de Brabant,
Wenceslas, dont on parla tant.

Froissart, 'Le Dit dou Florin.'

M. Lognon most generously communicated the manuscript to Madame James Darmesteter, who is about to introduce this once famous romance to the French public. The complete text of 'Meliador' will be printed by the Société des anciens Textes Français, some two years hence, under the supervision of M. Lognon.

A VARIEDLY busy and useful life has passed away in the person of Herr Max Moltke, who was active as a writer in prose and poetry, philologist, translator, compiler, editor, and bookseller. His translations were from English (including Shakespeare's dramas), French, Italian, Spanish, Hebrew, and Hungarian. He was born at Cüstrin in 1819, and died at Leipzig on the 19th ult.

THE "Deutsche Neuphilologen-Tag" is to be held this year at Carlsruhe about Whitsuntide; and a congress of Polish littérateurs and journalists will meet in the course of this year at Lemberg during the Polish exhibition at that place.

MR. PASSMORE EDWARDS's handsome offer to the Oulton Convalescent Home is another of his good works, and one especially deserving of the gratitude of printers.

SCIENCE

RECENT BIOGRAPHY.

Some Lectures by the late Sir George E. Paget, K.C.B. Edited from MSS., with a Memoir, by Charles E. Paget. (Cambridge, Macmillan & Bowes.)—Sir George Edward Paget was for many years a prominent figure at Cambridge, where his upright character, high position in his profession, and long residence caused all that he said to be received with respect. In the world of medicine outside the University he was considered one of the best physicians of his time, while he was felt to be a personal friend by every one who took the degree of Doctor of Physic during his professorship. He was the sixteenth holder of the Regius Professorship of Physic since its foundation in the reign of Henry VIII. Of these sixteen professors, Dr. Gostlin, of Caius, Dr. Collins, Sir Isaac Pennington, and Dr. Haviland, of St. John's, were remarkable for their munificence; Dr. Brady, of Caius, for his historical learning; Dr. Winterton, of King's, for his classical attainments; Dr. Bond, of Corpus, for his universal kindness; Dr. Plumtre for his long tenure of the office; while Dr. Francis Glisson, of Caius, professor from 1636 to 1677, and the most illustrious of the series, alone outshines Paget as a physician. This volume, edited by Sir George's son, is the more welcome because his arduous labours as professor prevented him from publishing many medical papers. The two lectures on 'Alcohol as a Cause of Disease' are models of the way in which great experience may be used to make clear all the parts of an intricate subject of the highest practical importance. The lectures on 'The Etiology of Typhoid Fever' and on 'Mental Causes of Bodily Disease,' while somewhat less profound, are excellent examples of how medical subjects should be thought out. It is to be regretted that his interesting 'Notice of an Unpublished Manuscript of Harvey,' published in 1850, and his edition of Harvey's letter to Ward, of Sidney Sussex College, both long out of print, were not added to the collection. The editor's memoir is a simple statement of the facts of his life, moderate in what it claims for him and accurate in detail. He was born at Great Yarmouth, in Norfolk, in 1809, and was sent to the Charterhouse in 1824. In 1827 he entered at Caius, in 1831 graduated as eighth wrangler, and in 1832 was elected a Fellow of his college. He had begun his education on one side of Smithfield, and now continued it on another at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, till he graduated M.B. in 1833. In 1838 he took his M.D. degree and became a Fellow of the College of Physicians. The remainder of his life was spent in active medical work at Cambridge, in practice and in teaching. He introduced clinical examinations for medical degrees at Cambridge in 1842, an example which has since been followed by all medical examining bodies. When this was mentioned he used to point out that Cambridge had always taken the first place in the organization of examinations, and was the originator in her mathematical tripos of the written examinations for degrees. No one could be more opposed to hasty preparation for examination than he, nor any one less inclined to estimate men solely by their places in an honours list; but when at dinner a somewhat aggressive speaker denounced university examinations, the Professor of Physic said that in the abolition of all personal favour examinations had been of use, and had given a healthier tone to university life than existed before them, and related how in his own college the son of a college servant and a very popular gentleman were candidates for a fellowship. Every one knew and liked the gentleman, no one cared for the other competitor, but the son of the servant had done best in the tripos, and when the election came he was unanimously elected. "Examinations," said Paget, "deserve some respect for having established such a feeling of justice, and so brought home to every man that the advantages of the university are absolutely open to him." In university affairs his sound common sense and great knowledge of the history of academical proceedings often solved a complicated problem and concluded a long discussion. He was universally trusted, and the improvement of the medical faculty at Cambridge in recent times was largely due to his enlightened action and forcible speech. In 1872 he became Regius Professor of Physic, and it is not too much to say that five times as much improvement took place in the condition of medical study at Cambridge in the twenty years during which he held the office as in the fifty-two years of Prof. Plumtre, or in the forty-one years each of Glisson and Greene. He was physician to Addenbrooke's Hospital for forty-five years, taught throughout that long period at the bedside, and thus was able constantly to improve in his profession. It is a melancholy circumstance that since his death a separation has taken place between the hospital and the professorship, so that the Regius Professor of Physic is now in the position of a chemist without a laboratory, an astronomer without a telescope, or a botanist without plants. For the credit of a great university, it is to be hoped that no local difficulties will long be allowed to keep up a condition so injurious to the advancement of medicine. Sir George Paget died on January 16th, 1892, of cold caught on the journey to London to assist in the inauguration of the present Duke of Devonshire as Chancellor of the University. An excellent portrait of him is prefixed to this volume. His brother, Sir James Paget, at a public dinner once proposed his health in eulogistic terms. When Sir George Paget replied, he said that that day he had been to the Royal Academy, and that while looking at the portraits he had wondered whether they were like the originals, and had decided that at any rate most of the originals would wish to be as good-looking as their pictures. "That," he said, "is my feeling about my brother's account of me." Such, also, would have been his feeling about his son's memoir. The speech and the memoir have, however, done him nothing more than justice when they represent him as one of the most upright, kindest, and most learned of the many illustrious physicians who have passed through the Caius gates of Humility, Wisdom and Virtue, and Honour.

The Narrative of a Busy Life: an Autobiography. By Arthur Hill Hassall, M.D. Lond. (Longmans & Co.)—Dr. Hassall is best known to the public as an analyst of food, and in that department of investigation his particular merit was that he made careful microscopic examinations of all kinds of food, and thus demonstrated the fact of adulteration in many cases where a chemical analysis alone would have failed. His work from 1854 to 1857, the chief results of which were published in the Lancet, did much to check the practice of many methods of adulteration. He was born in 1817, and has in this autobiography given an account of his life and work, in which he does not claim for himself more credit than he deserves, but which will probably be more interesting to his own family than to the general public. His father was a surgeon who served in that capacity with the Durham Fencibles in the Irish rebellion of 1798, and was wounded at the battle of Arklow. Dr. Hassall, after preliminary education at several imperfect schools, studied medicine in Dublin under Stokes, Graves, Crampton, and Marsh, all distinguished men of whose methods of giving instruction he unhappily tells nothing. In 1839, after an examination in which Sir Astley Cooper treated him with some severity, he became a member of the College of Surgeons of England, and afterwards in the midst of hard daily work found time to obtain two medical degrees in the University of London. After the narration of these events, the book goes on to tell of his work as a chemist and his connexion with various hospitals, and concludes with an interesting essay on the processes by which green leaves attain brilliant autumnal colour. Dr. Hassall seems to have had some serious illnesses, and after describing one of these he relates a story illustrating a gloomy form of medical mirth:—
"Soon after my recovery, I attended a Conversation at the Royal College of Physicians. Sir George Burrows, who it will be remembered attended me throughout my illness, was President of the college and he and the Censors were receiving the guests as they arrived. On my presenting myself, Sir George exclaimed: 'Why, Hassall, what business have you here? you know you ought to have been buried long ago; why were you not?'"

It is doubtful whether the autobiography will give any reader nearly as much pleasure as it has obviously given to the writer, but as a record of much work achieved in spite of defective training and of prolonged and useful occupation it deserves some consideration.

Personal Recollections of Werner von Siemens. Translated by W. C. Coupland. (Asher & Co.)—A distinguished man of science like Dr. Werner von Siemens, who has led a life full of varied experiences, might be expected to produce an interesting volume of personal recollections, and this he no doubt would have done had he possessed a little literary skill. To him, as to most of his countrymen, the art of presenting facts in a readable manner has been denied; yet from his adventures during the Sleswick-Holstein war of 1848-9, and the obstacles he overcame when constructing lines of telegraph in Russia, a most interesting book might have been constructed—not to speak of his experience in laying submarine cables, in which he displayed, as usual, singular energy and inventiveness. The translation is too literal to be agreeable to the reader, and the publishers have put the volume before the public without an index, or even a table of contents!

SOCIETIES.

ROYAL.—Jan. 25.—Sir J. Evans, Treas. and V.P., in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'On Intra-cranial Pressure, Preliminary Note,' by Dr. L. Hill; 'Experimental Researches into the Functions of the Cerebellum,' by Dr. R. Russell; 'The Effect produced upon Respiration by Paradoxical Excitation of the Cerebrum in the Monkey, Dog, Cat, and Rabbit,' by Dr. W. G. Spencer; and 'The Pathology of the Edema which accompanies Passive Congestion,' by Dr. W. S. Lazarus-Barlow.

GEOGRAPHICAL.—Jan. 29.—Capt. W. J. L. Whar-ton, V.P., in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Col. Lord Belhaven, Capt. A. Burgess, Capt. J. FitzGerald Ruthven, Lieut. A. Hargreave, Lieut. C. P. Powney, Right Rev. W. P. Swaby, Rev. T. Pearson, Dr. S. J. Scott, Messrs. W. Davis, H. N. Dickson, A. C. W. Harnsworth, H. Van Joel, W. Nelson, E. F. Biddell, E. B. Savile, J. O. Tyrrell, W. Wickham, and H. W. Wickins.—The paper read was 'A Journey through Iceland,' by Dr. K. Grossmann.

GEOLOGICAL.—Jan. 24.—Mr. W. H. Hudleston, President, in the chair.—Messrs. H. Kynaston, J. F. Markes, H. Preston, and G. T. Prior were elected Fellows.—The following communications were read: 'The Ooliferous Fissures in the Valley of the Rhine, near Ightham, Kent,' by Mr. W. J. L. Abbott; and 'The Vertebrate Fauna collected by Mr. L. Abbott from the Fissure near Ightham, Kent,' by Mr. E. T. Newton.

ASIATIC.—Jan. 16.—Lord Roay, President, in the chair.—Miss C. A. Foley, M.A., read a paper 'On the Psychological Basis of Buddhist Ethics in the Sixth Century B.C. as illustrated by the Cāla-Vedalla Sutta.' This, the "Little Miscellaneous Discourse," is contained in the 'Majjhima Nikāya,' one of the books in the second Piṭaka of the Buddhist canon, and consists of a dialogue between Visākha, treasurer to King Bimbisāra, and Dhammapiṇḍa, his wife, from whom he had separated himself when converted by Gotama, although he remained a lay disciple. She, emulating her husband's example, but going further, had joined the Buddhist order, and attained Arāhantship. Visākha, anxious to learn the state of her mind on her return (for missionary purposes) to his neighbourhood, interviews her by putting a number of questions on more or less knotty points of Buddhist psychology, ethics, and metaphysics. She, answering with ready discernment, finally refers him to Gotama, who sanctions all she has said as equivalent to his own teaching, and proclaimed her first among the teachers in his train. Such is the version given in the 'Apādāna,' in Dhammapāḍi's commentary on the 'Therīgāthā,' and in Buddhaghosha's commentaries on the 'Anguttara Nikāya' and on the 'Majjhima Nikāya.' The thirty-three questions put to Dhammapiṇḍa may be grouped thus: seven on individuality or personality in its relation to desire, together with current theories on the location of the principle of individuality or soul; four on the "eightfold path" of virtuous conduct; three on the sankhāras; five on the psychology of religious hypnotics; seven on the modes of feeling, their interrelations and connexion with immoral bias; seven on mental dispositions as correlated, and Nirvāṇa as unrelated. The psychological groundwork of character was by the Buddhist conceived as an aggregate of five factors: visible form, feeling, sense-perception, the sankhāras, and conception or thought. Will does not appear as a prime factor, but as desire or craving is by Dhammapiṇḍa viewed as a resultant of those five factors or sankhāras, tending to the persistence of the organic aggregate or individuality and thus to rebirth. The theories of soul "in" body, body in soul, and the like, characterising Western thought, are all anticipated in the views combated by Gotama, who while opposing, in his first sermon, the localization of soul or ego in any one of the five sankhāras on grounds which seem to identify the ego with will, does not there or elsewhere admit the existence of a noumenal principle at all. Still less is the question of free will admitted in Buddhist ethics, or that of a distinct moral faculty or conscience. Nor are the springs of action viewed from the modern standpoint. The psychology of motive is treated of under analysis of feeling into pleasurable, painful, and neutral ("feeling which is neither pleasurable nor painful"). The complex presentation of these and the intellectual import of the last, as discussed by Visākha and Dhammapiṇḍa, show some parallelism with modern analysis of the same subject by such experts as Profs. Bain, Sully, Höfding, and James.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—Jan. 18.—Viscount Dillon, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. B. Fox-Rogers, through the Secretary, exhibited a rudely designed bronze steelyard weight, in form of a bust, of late Roman date, found at Horton, Northants.—Mr. G. Leveson-Gower exhibited and described a quantity of British, Roman, and other pottery found near Limsfield. Some of the later vessels, urns of large size, seem to have been baked round a kind of core of clay, which was afterwards broken to pieces and removed.—Mr. Laver exhibited and described some unusual forms of Roman lamps lately found at Colchester. Mr. Laver also communicated a report upon the important Joslin collection of local Roman antiquities lately acquired by purchase by the Colchester Museum.

Jan. 25.—Sir J. Evans, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. Baildon exhibited an original general pardon, with its leather case, granted to Sir John Moore, Knt., in 1688.—Mr. W. H. St. John Hope, by permission of the Mayor and Corporation of Hull, exhibited three impressions of a hitherto unknown Statute Merchant seal for Kingston-upon-Hull. This seal forms one of a remarkable series, made in accordance with the provisions of the statute De Mercatoribus of Acton Burnell of 1283 and the Statutum Mercatorum of 1285, for sealing recognizances of debts. The usual type is that of the king's bust between two castles, with a lion of England in base. Some of the later examples show variations of this, and the Hull seal, obtained in accordance with Edward III.'s charter of 1331, has a half-effigy of the king between two ships. Mr. Hope also communicated some remarks on the probable dates of the several Statute Merchant seals.—The Rev. E. S. Dewick read an analytical description of a magnificent fourteenth century Pontifical belonging to Mr. Thomas Brooks. This splendid MS., which was also exhibited, Mr. Dewick showed to have belonged to Reinald von Bar, Bishop of Metz from 1302 to 1316. Besides being most beautifully written, it is enriched with numerous pictures and initial letters, as well as various grotesques in the borders. The pictures practically form a series of pictorial rubrics, so minutely do they illustrate the different scenes in the consecration of a church, the blessing of abbots and abbesses, the consecration of a bishop, and other episcopal offices contained in the book. The MS. is apparently of North French work, of the beginning of the fourteenth century, and is one of the most beautiful books known of that date.

LINNEAN.—Jan. 18.—Mr. W. Carruthers, V.P., in the chair.—Messrs. T. B. Cato, W. Elborne, and R. E. Leach were admitted, and the following were elected Fellows: Sir H. Low, Messrs. G. B. Kothera and T. Sim.—The Chairman, before proceeding to the business of the evening, referred to the loss which the Society had sustained by the recent death of Mr. R. Spruce, who had travelled and collected much in South America, and who was the recognized authority on Hepaticæ. It was much to be regretted that having but lately presented to the Society a valuable paper on this subject, containing descriptions of a great number of new species, and illustrated with careful and beautiful drawings, he had not lived to see the published result of his labours. The Chairman also feelingly referred to the death of Mr. A. Peckover, of Wisbech, who had been a Fellow since 1827, and who by his will had bequeathed to the Society a legacy of 100*l.*—Mr. E. M. Holmes exhibited a flowering specimen of a new species of Cascarilla (C. thomsoni) and the bark of the tree from New Granada; also two new foreign seaweeds, Gelidium beckeri from South Africa, and Leptocladia binghamii from California; and three new British marine algae, viz., Entophysalis granulosus and Symploca atlantica from Swanage, collected by himself, and Vaucheria coronata from Arbroath, collected by Mr. J. Jack.—Mr. T. Christy exhibited and made observations upon some remarkably long tendrils of Landolphia kirilii, which served as an illustration to a paper subsequently read by Mr. Henslow.—Mr. J. K. Harting exhibited and made some remarks upon the plant débris ejected in the form of "pellets" or "castings" by rooks, and stated that a number of these pellets which had been examined were composed of the cuticles of the succulent roots of the couch grass, Triticum repens, commonly called "scutch," "squitch," and "twitch" grass, a most troublesome weed to the farmer. Mr. Harting also exhibited a rare Australasian duck, Stictonetta narosa, Gould, which had been obtained at Gippsland Lakes, Victoria, and of which very few examples were to be found in collections.—A paper was then read by the Rev. G. Henslow, M.A., on the origin of the structural peculiarities of climbing stems by self-adaptation in response to external mechanical forces. The purport of this paper was to prove, by an appeal to facts and experiments, the existence of the power in living protoplasm of responding to external and purely mechanical forces by enveloping supportive tissues, by means of which the plant is enabled to resist the effects of gravity, tensions, pressures, &c. In the case of climbers not only is this principle illustrated wherever a force is felt; but whenever a stem is relieved of a force, atrophy or arrest of mechanical tissues takes place, supplemented, however, by an increase in the number and size of vessels. The conclusion arrived at was that while on the one hand the peculiar structures of climbers are all the outcome of a response to the external mechanical forces acting directly upon the stems, such structures are precisely those which are most admirably suited to the requirements of the stems themselves. The variations of structure characteristic of species, genera, and orders of climbing plants have been thus acquired in a definite direction, viz., of direct adaptability, this being effected, according to Mr. Darwin's statement, "without the aid of natural selection."—The paper was criticised by Dr. D. H. Scott, Prof. H. Green, and Mr. G. Murray, who, while testifying to the number of interesting facts brought forward by Mr. Henslow to support his views, were yet unable to agree with him in some of his conclusions.—The paper was illustrated by a great variety of specimens and drawings, and was listened to with considerable interest by a very full meeting.

MICROSCOPICAL.—Jan. 17.—Annual Meeting.—Mr. A. D. Michael, President, in the chair.—After the Report of the Council for the past year and the Treasurer's accounts had been read and adopted, the President announced that the following were elected as officers and Council for the ensuing year: President, A. D. Michael; Vice-Presidents, Prof. L. S. Beale, Dr. B. Braithwaite, F. Crisp, and T. H. Powell; Treasurer, W. T. Suffolk; Secretaries, Prof. F. Jeffrey Bell and Rev. Dr. W. H. Dallinger; Ordinary Members of Council, A. W. Bennett, Rev. E. Carr, E. Dadsell, C. H. Gill, Dr. H. G. Hebb, G. C. Karop, E. M. Nelson, Prof. U. Pritchard, C. F. Rousselet, Prof. C. Stewart, J. J. Vesey, and T. C. White.—The President then delivered the annual address, taking for his subject the growth and present state of our knowledge of the Acari. The name "Acarus" was probably first used by Aristotle; it means uncuttable, but Aristotle did not anticipate Cambridge rocking microtomes, and the President exhibited a set of over 120 serial sections cut from a far smaller Acarus than Aristotle could ever have seen. The President then described what an Acarus really is, and in what respects it differs from other Arachnida, a distinction which is erroneously stated in almost all text-books of zoology. The classification of the group practically began with Linnaeus; it was shown how difficult it is to identify a Linnean species; and the progress of classification was shortly traced from the single Linnean genus to the 212 genera admitted by Trouessart, one of the latest writers on the subject. The President then referred to the fact that many of the predatory Acari had not any special organs of vision, and yet that they were most active creatures, and would catch such agile insects as Thysanurids (spring-tails) without constructing any web or trap, and did not seem to suffer in the least from their eyesless condition; he had seen small and weak Acari quietly waiting until larger ones had finished feeding before they ventured to attack the leavings, although both were blind. The various forms of acarine parasitism and commensalism were then described including one where a parasite lives in the fur of the rabbit, feeding not on the host, but on other parasites which really do so, and the number of these which it will destroy is amazing. The President then illustrated the principal families of Acari by selecting one or two instances of each, which were specially interesting from their habits, their anatomy, or otherwise. The Sarcopitidae, or bird-parasites, were represented by a parasite of the cormorant, discovered by the President, in which the male has one leg much larger than the other, and the skeleton of the body is greatly modified to support it; but the enlarged leg and modified skeleton are on the right side of the body in some specimens and on the left in others. The so-called cheese-mites were referred to in order to describe the hypopus-stage in the life-history of many of them, when the creature, which is originally soft and easily killed by heat or exposure, suddenly becomes hard and able to endure almost all vicissitudes and also to live for a long period without eating; it is then provided with special organs for adhering to insects, and thus the species are widely distributed, under circumstances where they would otherwise perish. The President then spoke of his recent researches into the associations between many Acari (gamasids) and certain ants in whose nests they live, and of a still stranger and hitherto unrecorded case even more lately observed by him, in which a species of Acarus (Bdella) lives habitually in a spider's web in harmony with the otherwise most ferocious occupant. The speaker then shortly described his recent discovery of the extraordinary way in which female gamasids are fertilised, a spermatid capsule being conveyed to its destination by the mandible of the male. Finally, the descent of the Acari was discussed.—The discourse was illustrated by the lantern.

ARISTOTELIAN.—Jan. 22.—Mr. S. H. Hodgson, President, in the chair.—Mr. A. Boutwood read a paper 'On the Ethical Interpretation of Life and Nature.' The aim of the writer was to show that it is impossible for philosophy to give such an interpretation of life and nature as shall satisfy the facts of the moral consciousness and justify the effort after the moral ideal, unless it passes beyond the domain of pure ethics, and becomes distinctly religious. This does not imply that philosophy is to be controlled by theological dogmas, arbitrarily introduced from a source of which philosophy cannot take cognisance, but that the appeal to experience, which all philosophy is bound to make, ought to be widened so as to make it include that particular form of experience which is the ground of religion. The main outlines of such a philosophy were sketched in some detail, and the paper concluded with a reference to St. Thomas Aquinas, as the philosopher who had most nearly realized the ideal.—A discussion followed.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- Mon. London Institution, 8.—'Art about Us,' Mr. L. P. Day.
— Royal Institution, 8.—General Monthly.
— Aristotelian, 8.—Green and his Critics, Mr. W. R. Fairbairn.
— Royal Academy, 8.—Architecture, Mr. G. Allen.
— Surrey Institution, 8.—London Streets and Buildings Bill, 1884, Mr. H. Macdonald.
— Society of Arts, 8.—The Detection and Measurement of In-Soluble Oils and Vapours in the Air, Lecture III, Prof. F. C. Grove, (Lecture Lectures).
— Victoria Institute, 8.—Lecture by Rev. H. H. Mitchellson.
— Royal Institution, 8.—Lectures on the Formation of Plants and Animals, Prof. C. H. Newell.
— British Archaeology, 8.—Ancient Monies from Tell-el-Hesi, &c., Dr. J. H. Gardner, 'An Important Point of Egyptian Theology,' Mr. P. F. Hensley.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—Ballot for Members. 'The Transport of Petroleum in Bulk,' Mr. B. McDowd.
— Zoological, 8.—Symposium and Curvature of the Spine in Fishes, Prof. Hensley, 'Points in the Development of the Tadpole of Xenopus,' Mr. F. R. Hensley, 'Remains of Egypt in the British Museum,' Mr. C. W. Andrews.
Wed. Archaeological Institute, 8.—Stamped Leather Not of the Fifteenth Century, Mr. H. W. Taylor, 'Monumental Brass from Aberlone,' Mr. C. T. Davis, 'Monumental Brasses from Surrey,' Mr. M. Nicholson.
— Balmological, 8.—The Physiology of the Placenta, as Illustrated by their Wing-membranes and Geographical Distribution, Dr. F. A. Diney, 'The Life History of Brachyptera rubella, and Observations on Larvæ,' Dr. T. A. Chapman, 'Description of a Variety of Osmobrya (Pneumonia) from Russia,' Mr. R. H. E. Mynors, 'Description of the Fossils of Hydrozoa and Hydra,' Mr. H. H. Diney.
— Geological, 8.—Some Cases of the Conversion of Compact Gneiss into Schists, Prof. F. G. Hensley, 'The Walden-Gneiss, and their Place in the Crystalline Sequence,' Mr. J. W. Gregory.
— Society of Arts, 8.—Automatic Balance of Reciprocating Machinery, and the Prevention of Vibration, Mr. W. W. Bennett.
— British Archaeological Association, 8.—An Antiquarian Ramble in Huddersfield, Mr. T. Chas. Hensley, 'Hedderdale Antiquities, with Illustrations,' Mr. A. Oliver, 'A Heilly Fossils,' Dr. A. C. Hensley.
Tues. Royal Institution, 8.—The Past and Future of Mountain Exploration, Mr. W. M. Conway.
— Society of Arts, 8.—Telegraphic Communication between England and India, Mr. R. G. Walker.
— London Institution, 8.—The Life-History of a Mountain Range, Mr. J. H. Trail.
— Royal Academy, 8.—Architecture, Mr. G. Allen.
— Geographical, 8.—The Relations of Geography to History, Mr. H. J. Mackinder, (Educational Lecture).
— Mathematical, 8.—Education and Instruction of Lord Kelvin's Models of his 'Tetrahedron,' Mr. L. S. Walker.
— Electrical Engineers, 8.—Notes on the Electric Lighting of the City of London, Major-General C. B. Webster.
— Antiquaries, 8.—First Implements found at Looe-on-the-Solent, Mr. J. C. Robinson, 'Inscribed Green Bell from Thoresby,' Mr. A. S. Murray, 'Discovery of the Roman Walls of Rochester,' Mr. Payne.
Fri. Aristotelian, 8.—Annual Meeting.
— United Service Institution, 8.

- Fri. Physical, 8.—Annual Meeting. 'The Viscosity of Liquids,' Mr. O. G. Jones.
— Royal Institution, 8.—'Fortunate Variation in Animals,' Prof. W. F. R. Weldon.
Sat. Royal Institution, 8.—Light, with special reference to the Optical Discoveries of Newton, Lord Rayleigh.
— Botanic, 8.—Election of Fellows.

Science Gossip.

Dr. D. H. Scott has just written, mainly for schools, an elementary guide to the study of the structure of plants, which will be published during the spring by Messrs. A. & C. Black, under the title of 'An Introduction to Structural Botany (Flowering Plants).' The book forms a crown octavo volume of about 300 pages, and is illustrated by 113 figures, many of them original. The method pursued is to take in succession a series of types, representing the most important groups of plants, to examine as fully as space permits both the structure and function of each, and to compare them together. The wallflower is taken as the chief type of dicotyledons, while the monocotyledons are represented by the white lily, and the gymnosperms by the spruce fir. When necessary these types are supplemented by details taken from other plants. The volume also contains a chapter on the general physiology of nutrition. It is hoped to complete the work later on by a monograph dealing in a similar manner with representatives of the chief cryptogamic divisions.

MR. BARTHOLOMEW proposes to issue an English edition, brought up to date and containing some twenty new maps, of Berghaus's 'Physical Atlas.'

FROM Berlin comes the news of the decease of Prof. Hirsch, the distinguished pathologist.

PINE ARTS

ELEMENTARY MANUALS.

Cements, Pastes, Glues, and Gums. Compiled by H. C. Standage. (Crosby Lockwood & Son.)—The author's books on pigment and varnish making have already been warmly recommended to our readers, and we have pleasure in speaking favourably of his new compilation, which comprises about nine hundred recipes and formulae. In his preface he points out amusingly the folly of those manufacturers of this country who, largely using certain substances, import them, although nothing could be easier than to make them at home. Some of the details appertaining to particular industries are "trade" (so-called) secrets, although all about them has been published over and over again. Mr. Standage adds that, as we all know, many of the recipes printed in trade journals are totally untrustworthy; this is often due, according to Mr. Standage, to "the editorial acumen exercised in 'lifting,' after his kind, a recipe from a rival journal" without inquiry as to its merits, or even understanding anything whatever about the matter. The author is a little severe upon impudence of this nature, upon typographers' ignorance and carelessness in spelling and printing names of substances used in making cements, and in quoting from books already printed. Mr. Standage instructs us in other matters than the above named; for instance, how to soften hard putty, to cast in plaster of Paris (but he does not tell how to make a piece-mould), to harden plasters of various kinds, to make casein, glue to entrap insects, and putty for cracks in floors. So far as we have had experience, which is not inconsiderable, this manual is trustworthy; a good index makes it accessible.

Elements of Handicraft and Design. By W. A. S. Benson. Illustrated. (Macmillan & Co.)—This is a clearly written handy book, with simple and exact diagrams. Mr. Benson is of the sound opinion that an intelligent education should not neglect the hand and eye. He is a measure disapproves of ajôid, because of its narrowness, and he would add to the curriculum of the schools what he calls "design," but we, for many reasons, should prefer to call construction, in the humbler sense of that term, which means the knack of putting things together in the best and handiest fashion. Though disdaining to be a treatise on mere carpentry, the book is largely based on the practices of wood cutting and its artistic relation to beauty. Protesting our conviction that from no book can a craft, any more than an art, be learnt, we may admit that, so far as a book can be so, this is a teaching book.

WHEN Mr. J. A. Walker became what is quaintly called an "Art Master" it followed, as a matter of course, that he should write, or rather put together, the treatise before us entitled Theory and Practice of Perspective, Part I., which is all right so far as it goes, and that is a very great deal further than any one not an artist or architect, or a draughtsman, engineer, or surveyor, should be called upon to follow. If, as the innumerable text-books of "art masters" force us to infer is the case, the Science and Art Department supposes all its pupils require to be instructed according to the standard of one of these professions, it is wasting the time and energies of most of its pupils, and had much better relegate them to the bench, forge, and shop without further delay and greater cost. Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co. publish this volume.

Studies from the Museums: Wood Carving. Folio V. Edited by E. Rowe.—A portfolio (apparently one of a series) has reached us from Messrs. R. Sutton & Co., and it comprises, besides a few notes signed by Miss Eleanor Rowe, a number of Messrs. Sutton's glass-prints, which are sufficiently clear and crisp for representing wood carvings from examples at South Kensington, and chosen by the lady named. We do not agree with her in admiring the highly florid and super-ornate taste which is illustrated by most of the specimens she has selected. A much purer, more reserved and refined style is desirable than that of the Flemish frame (for a mirror?) which is attributed to Van der Meulen, of Malines; in the elaborate, but rather uncouth and disproportioned, French console table, with griffin supports; in the panel with a bas-relief of the Cardinal Virtues, being French according to the types of the school of Fontainebleau—a bad composition, pseudo-pictorial in treatment, and most unfit for a "book of studies," unless, indeed, it is intended to show what ought to be avoided. So too, although it is ineffective and clever, the Italian standing mirror frame of the seventeenth century is fitter for a museum than to serve as a pattern of pure taste. A French statuette of a nude female holding a heart comes under the head of sculpture, not carving in the true sense, and is really a beautiful illustration in plastic art of the mood and manner of Maitre Roux. Far better are the highly elegant Italian sixteenth century oblong picture frame in the best Renaissance style; the circular frame of the same country, time, and type; the French version of an Italian chair of state, except the back panel, which is unsuitable; and the Spanish crucifix, which Miss Rowe describes as "in the style of Alonso Cano," although it is purer and severer. But this, like the female nudity, belongs to sculpture rather than to decorative carving.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY, WINTER EXHIBITION.

(Third Notice.—British School.)

THOMAS PHILLIPS is chiefly commendable because he painted some good and sincere, although conventional portraits of eminent persons; he was an excellent workaday artist, and to him we are indebted for a prosaic Portrait of Thomas Campbell (No. 29), out of whom a better and more sympathetic painter, gifted with even a modicum of insight, could surely have made something better than this portrait, or even than the somewhat superior Portrait of the Rev. George Crabbe (40). The author of 'Tales of the Hall' unquestionably had a great deal more in him than Phillips's picture of a bald old worthy indicates. Both Nos. 29 and 40 have been engraved.

The Early Career of Murillo (11) illustrates John Phillip's sympathy with Spanish art, although, as a picture, it is not nearly equal to the far more dramatic and animated 'La Gloria,' from which T. O. Barlow made one of his finest plates. Technically speaking, No. 11 is depressing, if not displeasing, owing to the excessive blackness of its shadows, while the design, usually a strong point with Phillip, is commonplace. By much the finest things in the work are the masterly heads of the priests and the comely mulatto woman who look at the boy-painter's pot-boilers made for selling in the market square. Nothing could be better than these heads, and they redeem a picture which is injured by the piles of rough pottery and rather garish vegetables and fruit with which Phillip overloaded his canvas, in order to be in keeping with the taste of the Spanish school after it had felt the influence of Rubens, as well as to show his own splendid brush-power. The Plough (8), which is the masterpiece among F. Walker's larger oil pictures, is nearly equally dependent upon the figures and the landscape, but we prefer to notice it with the former. Especially remarkable are the horses and their stalwart driver, who hasten to finish their task, while the widening shadow of twilight creeps up the ruddy cliff behind them, the sky grows redder, and the air of the valley becomes more chilly. At motives of this sort Walker often aimed in his later days, when he felt the hand of death upon him. Although he was not given to wearing his heart upon his sleeve, he chose as a motto for this picture "Man goeth forth to his work and to his labour until the evening," yet it does not suit the picture, which depicts the going home, and not the going forth, of the man who labours. He knew that, for him, "the time cometh when no man can work" was the true motto, and but for his natural reticence, he would have applied it to his picture. The quasi-classic air of the young man driving, and the grand figures of the horses straining ardently at their task, are signs how deeply he had studied antique sculpture. There is abundance of charm in the tone, deep and limpid in its darkness, and in the fiery glories of the sunset, as well as the attenuated line of saplings ranging along the topmost ridge of the quarry, nor is there any shortcoming in the colour of the foreground, a darkling meadow and swift brook fringed with ragged herbage and dashed with white and azure lights. Beside this grand piece may be placed—but only on technical considerations—Mason's Young Anglers (47). Nothing could be truer than the beautiful colour of the landscape—a sloping hillside, sumptuously verdant and glowing in clear light—and the sky. The "fine Italian hand" of Mason is distinct in the Stothard-like perfectly fresh and comely figures, who, graceful as they are, are really rustics, and not in the least artificial.

A painter so essentially modern as the late Mr. Pettie, to whom his fellow Academicians have awarded the honours of a separate room, is at a marked disadvantage in such a gathering as this, because his motives in art have become familiar within the memory of most of us, while the taste of the hour, which no painter of our time illustrated with more spirit, is apt to pall upon visitors to the Winter Exhibition in exact proportion to its success during the summer shows. Besides, it is not altogether a piece of good fortune for the deceased painter that his works are gathered where Leslie, Landseer, Flaxman, and, above all, Rossetti, have been similarly honoured. Between the works of genius which these men produced and the brilliant chic and melodrama of the late Academician there is a great gap, though we must not on that account forget the real merits and rare attractions of the works now in Gallery V., which has not been filled in the winter since the masterpieces of Rossetti adorned its walls.

The present selection may be deemed fortunate, because no other could put Pettie's powers in anything like so favourable a light. It is, too, just that we should remember how few artists of his stamp could furnish thirty-three specimens so uniformly good. There is really wonderfully little inequality in them. The date of No. 185, The Gauger and the Smuggler, where the humour which informs the design is as grim as it is rare, goes to show that Pettie was nearly at his best in 1868. It is displayed in the coolness and resolution of the gauger; his steady, somewhat stiff movements and hardly discomposed face contrasting with the wrath and wild contortions of the younger man. The painting proper is a trifle leathery, and there is little to be said for the colour of a picture which, besides, is markedly deficient in chiaroscuro, a quality Pettie, soon after 1868, developed by such rapid steps in 'The Disgrace of Cardinal Wolsey' (198), painted in 1869, and 'To the Death' (201) of 1877. The small three-quarters-length figure of a damsel in a light-blue dress, called A Lady of the Seventeenth Century (188), is very bright and pretty, although, as in Nos. 200, 204, 216, and other "drees-pieces" of Pettie, she is simply a modern maid in masquerade. The Step (190) possesses rare breadth and vigour of effect. This picture is remarkable for the extreme cleverness of its general treatment, its telling coloration and chiaroscuro, as well as for the appropriate attitude and expression of the child. If any one work be the best in Gallery V. it is this one. Otherwise it is, technically speaking, simply a large sketch possessed of extraordinary spirit, brilliance, and freshness, where it would be easy to be flashy and commonplace. Such qualities characterize all Pettie's better work, and they appear at their best in the head of the old man who, in Jacobites (193), reads the proclamation. More often than not Pettie descended to melodrama, of which there is none in No. 190 nor No. 185, while it is painfully conspicuous in The Chieftain's Candlesticks (194).

The humour which distinguishes his conception of the sturdy old gauger in No. 185 is distinctly and even tenderly marked in the young lover who walks neglected at the side of his mistress in Two Springs to her Bow (196). There are some admirable touches in this fair lad's nervous way worthy of Wilkie himself, who painted 'Duncan Gray' with such sardonic zest; the diffident, mortified air and the deprecating look, even the hesitating gait and attire of the rural beau, are spontaneous and genuine. This is, however, the only first-rate part of an otherwise commonplace work. Despite the spontaneity and compactness of the design, The Disgrace of Cardinal Wolsey (198) is stagey, and is derived, we fancy, from "the boards" themselves. As theatrical supers the nobles who watch or mock the fallen minister are first-rate, but they do not belong to any high range of art. The painting proper of these figures is among the best of Pettie's efforts. There is melodrama of the most energetic sort in the famous 'Sword and Dagger Fight,' which is here renamed To the Death (201). The tale is told with such verve that no one wonders that the picture is the most popular of the painter's achievements. The treatment of the background is extremely clever, and although the sharpness of the contrasts between the intense blackness of the one fighter's dress and the equally intense whiteness of his rival's clothing is a piece of artistic claptrap of the truest sort, there is no denying the chic of the thing. Apart from this, the figures are painted with unusual care and admirable dexterity. Terms to the Besieged (203), with all its defects, is, in the same line, almost equal to 'The Disgrace of Cardinal Wolsey,' while The Sally (207) is remarkable for the suitability of its design and the simultaneous movement of the figures. But nothing more successfully illustrates the exceeding cleverness of Pettie in putting appropriate incidents on canvas than the way in which the bearer of the cartel in Challenged (208) swaggers up the stage, the chape of his rapier protruding under his cloak and clashing against the jamb of the door as he does so. The thing could not be better done at the Adelphi. On the other leading works in this collection we need not dwell, because they contain nothing which the above remarks do not apply to with, perhaps, equal justice. The best of them are The Flag of Truce (211) and The Drum-Head Court-Martial (212), while Pettie seldom designed or painted anything better than the face of the older of the commanders sitting in judgment.

THE PORTRAIT OF MRS. THICKNESE.

3, Edwards Place, Kensington, W.

REFERRING to your issue of January 6th and 27th as to the portrait of Mrs. Thicknesse by Gainsborough, allow me to say that it is not a matter of speculation, but of fact, that the portrait is that of Miss Ann Ford, and not of Lady Elizabeth Touchet. This portrait remained in the possession of Ann Ford's son, Capt. Thicknesse, R.N., and her granddaughter Mrs. Richards, connexions of mine, till 1869, when it was sold at Christie's. That the portrait now in the exhibition is the same there are many living witnesses to prove.

Ann Ford was the daughter of Mr. Ford, Clerk of the Arraignment, and was born February 22nd, 1737, in a house near the Temple, afterwards occupied by Mr. Justice Willes. She was the friend of Lady Elizabeth (not the Hon. Mrs.) Thicknesse, who was the second wife of Capt. Philip Thicknesse, and after her death became his third wife. Lord Chesterfield wrote a poem on the grace of Mrs. Thicknesse's dancing. She wrote several books, and was, as you say, a musician, but not, I think, a professional one. She married Philip Thicknesse, September 7th, 1762, and there were more than 300 people of fashion at the wedding, as he is characteristically careful to record. He died in 1792, and she in 1824 in her eighty-eighth year (see Gentleman's Magazine, July of that year). I am not a descendant of hers, nor of her husband, but as I represent the elder branch of the family and can speak to the identity of the portrait, perhaps you may care to publish this letter.

RALPH THICKNESSE.

* * We spoke of the Hon. Mary Touchet because Thicknesse, writing in 1790, when the earldom of Castlehaven was extinct, himself did so; this seems to have been one of his whims. The Lady Elizabeth (born Arundel of Wardour) was her mother, ob. 1743 (see Collins's 'Peers,' 1812, vi. 556). The journals of the period constantly describe Miss Ann Ford as a professional musician. It is possible that Thicknesse, who was spiteful enough for anything, aimed at his wife's unhappy ancestor Mervin, Lord Audley and second Earl of Castlehaven, beheaded May 14th, 1641, by refusing to her the honours of her father's Irish earldom and falling back upon his English barony, which survived.

PROF. FLINDERS PETRIE AT COPTOS.

II.

Coptos as a city no longer exists; the present village of Koft is a small collection of mud-brick hovels lying immediately behind the raised bank of the Nile. The cultivated land scarcely extends back from the river more than three miles. On the north, at a distance of five miles, a range of mountains runs east towards the desert; on the south another range, at about twelve miles distance, lies in a similar direction.

The strip of cultivated land, dotted with villages and containing the small town of Kooa, has a rich, fat soil, growing corn and doura, beans and lentils in luxuriant crops. Behind the village of Koft a raised causeway at right angles to the river leads, at a distance of half a mile, to the ruins of Coptos, such of them as remain, for the ancient city was probably larger than the area contained within the present Roman walls, 20 ft. thick, of unbaked brick. Within these walls the suns of centuries have blazed on the remains of ancient mud-brick houses and heaps of the same material in a state of pulverization relieved only by a few fragments of stone edifices. Of late years the surface of the waste has been grubbed by the sebbach diggers, who have found occasional inscribed stones and small objects when sifting the dust that yields the fertilizing manure. As I remember the enclosure seven years ago, it was truly a scene of desolation; without were the emerald-green cornfields, and the air was full of the perfume of the bean blossoms, but within was the heat of a fiery furnace, with the blinding sunshine scintillating on the spurts of dust raised by the diggers. Beyond the ruins stands a fringe of palms; and on the west side of the Nile, at a distance of a couple of miles, the steep wall of cliffs of the Libyan mountains, rosy and golden in their lights, and pale sapphire in their shadows, stood like a line of Cyclopean fortification. The general aspect is the same to-day, but long lines of trenches are being driven across the surface, and deep holes are being dug down to the primal soil, often reaching water. The dust is no longer in intermittent clouddlets, but sweeps along in great volumes, covering with a fine grey patina the brawny chocolate muscles, developed by steady exercise at the shadowf, of the diggers, naked but for the usual loin-cloth. And the diggers themselves are pleasant to see; far different from the stolid sebbach grubbers. They fall to with the cheery goodwill of men who take a delight in their work. Prof. Petrie is a born captain of labour. As he passes along the trenches, measuring rod in hand, carefully scanning the cutting and issuing his directions, or bestowing kindly words of commendation, one sees that master and men are completely in touch with each other. The bright-faced, lithe-limbed boys who carry to the surface in baskets the earth filled by the short-handled hoes of the diggers, feel the friendly hand on the shoulder or catch the quiet jest, and their white teeth sparkle in the sunshine. Needless to say the shirker is nowhere to be found in the professor's preserves. He might shriek for his "living wage" till his throat was as sun-dried clay, but not a half piastre would he extract from the just but inexorable paymaster. Gangs of labourers in Egypt, whether working for archaeologists or contractors for public works, are generally overlooked by reis, men who have small inclination for honest work, but are cunning enough to wriggle in between the workmen and employers. Prof. Petrie dispenses with these middlemen, and, with his assistant Mr. Quibell, overlooks himself the excavations, and finds his account therein. All organizations, however, whether living or of labour, are liable to the attacks of parasites. The particular form which seeks to fatten on the Coptos excavations is the jackal of the Luxor antiquity dealer, who prowls about the diggings, tempting the men to sell any small objects they may find. At first he was troublesome and pertinacious, but now he is beginning to realize that English vigilance and its short and ready procedure are more than a match for Oriental cunning and patience; so that there is a fair prospect of the professor being left in perfect peace, not even disturbed by the "personally conducted," who are rushed through the more notorious of the already opened-up tombs and temples of Ancient Egypt. Prof. Petrie's friends will be glad to hear that the return to the land to which he has devoted his life's labour has had the best effect on his health, and that he appears to be his old self again. Work begins at sunrise and continues to mid-day, when the men rest for an hour, to finish at sundown. As the removal of the earth is paid for by the metre, there is constant measuring up to be performed, besides plans to be taken, squeezes and photographs to be made, and notes of the architectural remains as they are uncovered to be recorded. The smaller objects are brought by the men to the mud-brick hut of Prof. Petrie every evening, when each is estimated and paid for. Then, after the evening meal, there is further writing up to be done before the repose of the hardest of mattresses can be sought.

The plan of operations is by trenches to discover the walls of the building, in the present case a temple, then to open a trench along the whole length of the wall down to the original pavement, and then below to former pavements. If statues, stèle, or other objects are found they are hoisted out and the trench filled up with the earth of a parallel one dug in advance. Thus the whole surface is explored and covered over again to prevent the destruction of what is not removed. Prof. Petrie began operations on the 9th of December last, and soon discovered the site of the temple on the south-eastern portion of the enclosure. The temple and pylons appear to cover a large space of ground, and stand within a temenos of corresponding proportions. Among the statues already unearthed are a colossal red granite triad of Ramses II. between two goddesses, a black granite kneeling figure, and the legs of a colossal statue in white limestone. The last is probably very early work, and bears cut into the right thigh representations of animals, as an elephant, hyena, fishes, &c., similar to ancient rock carving. However, until the block is hoisted out of the trench it is impossible to speak with precision respecting the period or intention of the art. A red granite stèle bears the date of the twenty-ninth year of Ramses III.; another is inscribed with the name of a daughter of Ramses VI. Before Prof. Petrie's hut stand, among other objects, a colossal head of Caracalla in red granite, Greek and Latin inscribed stones, a Latin dedication of a bridge, another bearing the name of the little-known Emperor Quietus, and a table of the tolls paid on goods and by individuals entering Coptos. I must not omit to mention among small objects a portion of a figure on an inlaid tile similar to those found at Tel-el-Yahoudi, and now in the British Museum. An entire figure of a prisoner of the same style in the Ghizeh Museum was found, half at Coptos by M. Bouriant, and the other half purchased of a dealer. There is, of course, a reasonable expectation that the latter part of an excavation will yield more than the preliminary researches of the first month, and that Prof. Petrie will enrich science with treasures equalling in historic value those of his previous campaigns.

On the edge of the desert behind Coptos lies the Mussulman cemetery, with its few trees shading a sheikh's tomb and some subordinate domes. There, standing on the crisp desert soil and in the sharp, pure desert air, the eye wanders over the expanse of pale gold sand and the faintly flushed ranges of mountains stretching eastwards on either hand, and seeks to penetrate the mysteries of that now untrudged route. To call up pictures of the stalwart drivers, guards, and attendants attached to the caravan, of the Pharaonic, Ptolemaic, or Roman periods is a facile task for the imagination; for have we not the fashion of their dresses, their arms and utensils, and their living portraits on the carved and painted sculpture of the monuments? And to verify the correct observation of the artists, do we not see men of the same physique, broad-shouldered, narrow-hipped, and having the same facial types, in the tillers of the fields or the merchants of the bazaar of the Egypt of to-day? But of that first pioneer swarm from the East the picture is, indeed, blurred and misty. Whether the adventurers came naked and empty-handed, or with tools and weapons of curious workmanship, who shall decide? And their gods, were they then united in triads or triplets of triads? Were the image of the grotesque and joyous Bes and the rigid lines of the energetic Chem amongst them? To elaborate the details of this picture, to give it life and movement and reality, we must wait the indefatigable delving of Prof. Petrie's trusty spade. H. W.

St. Sri Sany.

THE Winter Exhibition of the Society of Painters in Water Colours will be closed to-day (Saturday).

In a few days F. Madox Brown's picture 'Christ washing Peter's Feet' will be hung in a place specially selected for it in the National Gallery. We have already said that it was purchased for the nation by a committee of subscribers. Among the personal friends of Brown who sat to him for the picture were D. G. and W. M. Rossetti, another P.R.B., and Mr. W. Bell Scott. It now appears that, contrary to our first impression, Miss Christina Rossetti did not sit for the head of St. John, who is placed on our extreme right of the row of disciples. Christ wears a pale grayish blue robe, St. Peter's is a very deep-toned rich purple; the vessel in which his feet are being washed is of bright copper, and forms a very telling element in the chromatic scheme of the whole, which is so powerful that the picture would be quite capable of holding its own in any gallery of Venetian masterpieces. The face and figure of Christ cannot be praised too highly as regards their design, solidity, vigour, colour and drawing. The figures are nearly life size, and the picture is almost square. Having been lined and glazed by the authorities in Trafalgar Square, it now looks stronger, more brilliant, and fuller of tone than ever. Painted in 1851-2, it was at the Academy in the latter year; it was subsequently worked over, and, in certain respects, altered in 1858, in which year the 50*l.* prize of the Liverpool Academy was awarded to it, in preference to the same painter's 'Last of England,' which is now in the public gallery at Birmingham, as his semi-political 'Work' is in the gallery at Manchester. In 1857 'Christ and Peter' was one of the Manchester Art Treasures. In 1865 Mr. J. Wyllie, from whom it was lately purchased, lent it to Madox Brown's exhibition of his own works which was held in Piccadilly.

SHORTLY will be hung in the National Gallery an interesting addition to the Dutch pictures by a painter who has not yet been identified, although it has been supposed that Jan Luiken (1649-1712), better known as an engraver than as a painter, has the best claim to the authorship. It represents, at about half life-size, an old woman seated in a simply furnished room, with her feet on a stool; in her lap lies a pillow, and pinned to the pillow is a piece of linen, the edge of which she is diligently hemming. She wears a white coif and pinner, a black gown, and a blue apron; a basket stands at her side; on a table before her lie a pair of scissors, a knife, a half-peeled lemon, and a silver cup. The coloration of the picture is rather sober, and is composed of brownish and grey tints; the illumination is soft and broad, the touch somewhat heavy, and the pigments incline to opacity, yet, on the whole, it is a specimen of good and accomplished art. This welcome example is the gift of Mr. Fyngt.

At the instance of the authorities of the Manchester Art Gallery Mr. W. Wallis, of the Birmingham Gallery, will this year deliver at the former place a series of lectures on 'Sicily and its Art Remains,' which will be illustrated by limelight views from photographs specially taken by the lecturer.

Among the papers to be read before the Society of Architects during the next month or so may be mentioned Canon G. F. Browne's on 'Early Christian Art in England,' and those on 'Freemasonry in Architecture' by Dr. Fearon Ranking, and 'Iron-Work: Medieval and Modern,' by Mr. Starkie Gardner.

The Royal Scottish Water-Colour Society has decided on admitting women to the same privileges as are afforded to men, and henceforth lady members will be deemed qualified to hold office and be members of the Council.

THE death is announced of Mr. Gourlay Steel, R.S.A., at the age of seventy-four. He was chiefly known as an animal painter.

THE exhibition of the Champ de Mars will this year be opened earlier than hitherto, that is on April 25th next. The Salon will, as usual, be opened to the public on May 1st. Some time in March, says the Journal des Arts, there will be opened in Paris a special exhibition of objects associated with Marie Antoinette and her times. The promoters of this gathering are doubtless aware that a considerable proportion of the relics of the unfortunate queen are in England. A bust of Delacroix has, says the last-named authority, been commissioned by the French Direction des Beaux-Arts from M. Desruelles to be placed at Versailles.

M. CAVELIER, the veteran sculptor, died last week in his native Paris in his ninetieth year. He was the son of a designer for jewellers, and his teachers were David d'Angers and Paul Delaroche. At twenty-two he gained the second prize in the competition for the Prix de Rome, and the first six years afterwards. His first notable success was his 'Pénélope endormie,' which the Duc de Luynes bought for 400*fr.* He gained a Third Class Medal in 1842, a First Class Medal and a Medal of Honour in 1849, and a Third Class Medal at the Exhibition of 1855. His 'Vérité,' shown at the Salon of 1853, is in the Luxembourg. In 1861 he obtained the Legion of Honour, in 1861 he was made an officer; and in 1865 he was elected at the Institut. His later years were mainly devoted to teaching at the École des Beaux-Arts.

THE inscription of Gortyna, found in 1884, is exposed not only to the stress of weather and to the destructive action of the water of a canal which passes over it, but even to the more serious danger of being destroyed by an ignorant or malicious hand. To save this inscription by transporting it to a safe place, the Greek Syllagos of Candia invites the aid of scholars. To buy and transport it will cost about 10,000 fr. The Syllagos will invite to Crete a capable workman to make a cast of the inscription, and to each museum which contributes 25*fr.* a cast of the entire wall which contains the inscription will be delivered, free of expense, at Brindisi, Trieste, Genoa, or Marseilles.

At Benevento, according to a recent communication made to the Royal Academy of the Lincei, the fragment of an Egyptian statue in granite with hieroglyphics, and a piece of granite obelisk also inscribed with hieroglyphics, have been disinterred. The statue, according to the examination made by Prof. E. Schiaparelli, of Florence, must be referred to the end of the reign of Rameses II., about 1340 B.C., and may have been brought from Egypt to adorn the temple of Isis at Beneventum—a temple which is mentioned in the inscriptions of the obelisks, and which, like the temple of Isis in the Campus Martius at Rome, was adorned with Egyptian statues of various dates. The fragment of obelisk fortunately fills up a gap in one of the known obelisks of Benevento, and enables us plausibly to supply other gaps on the same obelisk. From these inscriptions it would appear that both these obelisks were transported from Egypt; but they are of late workmanship, having been made for the temple of Isis at Beneventum, which was built by Lucilius Rufus by order of Domitian.

We have received a letter from Mr. Statham complaining that we did not do justice to the merits of the late M. Daly in our brief notice a fortnight ago. By an accident the notice was left incomplete, and hence gave an imperfect idea of M. Daly's labours.

MUSIC

Musical Society.

We understand that it is not the intention of Sir Augustus Harris to give any performances of opera in German this year, and the admirers of Wagner will not greatly grieve at this decision after the dismal experiences of last season. Unless arrangements can be made for the visit of an entire well-trained company from Germany, it is well to leave this branch of the lyric drama alone.

THE orchestra at the Wagner concert to be conducted by Herr Felix Mottl in the Queen's Hall on April 17th will consist of about one hundred performers, selected, as far as possible, from the ranks of the best London professional players. But there will be a few exceptions, the part for bass trumpet, for example, which is here usually assigned to a trombone, being now to be heard as Wagner intended it, though it will necessitate the engagement of an executant from Brussels. The support forthcoming is so plentiful that the expenses of the enterprise are already covered.

THE Wagner Society (London branch) has issued its annual report, from which it appears that there are now two hundred and two subscribing members. The meetings for the present session will include several lectures, and one or more conversations as the funds will permit. The issue of the Meister and of Mr. Ashton Ellis's translation of Wagner's prose works continues to be supplied gratuitously to members, who are reminded that application for free tickets for the next series of performances at Bayreuth in July and August must be made to Mr. W. H. Edwards, 160, New Bond Street, before March 1st.

THE concerts within the past few days have been few and unimportant. At the Popular Concert last Saturday afternoon, Brahms's Second Sextet in c for strings, Op. 36 (a much finer work than the more popular Sextet in a flat, Op. 18), the two movements from Mendelssohn's 'Unfinished' Quartet, and Beethoven's Sonata in a flat, Op. 81, were in the programme, the last-named work being rendered by Mr. Leonard Borwick with noteworthy intelligence and brilliant though not absolutely faultless execution. Miss Kate Cove made a very favourable impression as the vocalist, displaying a light but pleasing and well-cultivated voice in Handel's air 'Lusinghe più caro,' and Mr. Henschel's charming 'Spinning-Wheel Song.'

On Monday the first item was Brahms's concise but masterly Quintet in c for strings, Op. 111, the only other concerted work being Beethoven's somewhat rarely heard Sonata in a for piano and violin, Op. 12, No. 2. Dr. A. C. Mackenzie has arranged his 'Highland Ballad' (originally scored for small orchestra, including harp) for violin and pianoforte only, and in this form it was presented on Monday, Lady Halle interpreting the solo part with exquisite expression. The Scottish composer was further represented by three settings of Shakespeare's sonnets, Nos. 18, 29, and 92. They are written with much freedom of style—that is to say, not in ordinary song form—and they were artistically rendered by Mr. Arthur Oswald. Mr. Leonard Borwick again proved himself an unsurpassable exponent of Schumann's pianoforte music in the composer's Fantasietücke, Op. 12, of which he gave the whole with perfect technique and refined expression.

MR. RICHARD GOMPERTZ gave the first of two concerts of chamber music on Tuesday evening at the Princes' Hall, and succeeded in securing excellent performances of Schubert's splendid, but too rarely played Quartet in c, Op. 161, and Beethoven's in e, Op. 135, with the assistance of Messrs. Inwards, Kreuz, and Charles Ould. An Adagio for violin solo, with either orchestral or pianoforte accompaniment, by Mr. Emanuel Moór, not yet published, proved to be a remarkably expressive, and even original piece, and should forthwith be placed at the disposal of violinists. Miss Fillunger rendered full justice to two songs with German words, 'Morgensünde' and 'An die Lerche,' by Mr. Algernon Ashton, musically, but rather laboured.

THE first of Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch's new series of concerts of antiquarian music at his residence, Dowland, West Dulwich, was given on Tuesday evening. The programme consisted entirely of music by English writers of the sixteenth century, and included pieces for the virginals by Byrd and Morley, cleverly played by Mr. J. A. Fuller Maitland, and various items by King Henry VIII., Sherryngham, and anonymous composers. The concert-giver, Miss Hélène Dolmetsch, Miss Adelaide Milne, Mr. J. A. Milne, and Mr. W. A. Boxall played the viola, and Miss Ethel Davis the organ, the vocal selections being supplied by Miss Davis, Mr. Laurence Fryer, Mr. Walter Shiner, and Mr. Albert Fairbairn.

At a meeting last week at Chester of the Festival Committee, it was decided that the Triennial Musical Festival should be held this year on July 25th, 26th, and 27th.

It was a happy thought of Sir Charles Halle to perform Schumann's beautiful cantata 'Paradise and the Peri,' and precede the work by Sterndale Bennett's overture with the same title, at his Manchester concert on Thursday last week. The principal vocalists in the cantata were Mesdames Esther Palliser, Medora Henson, Conway, Marian McKenzie, and Bertonshaw, and Messrs. Iver McKay and Andrew Black.

ACCORDING to a French paper Sir Augustus Harris intends to produce for the first time in London during his next opera season at Covent Garden Verdi's 'Falstaff,' Bruneau's 'L'Attaque du Moulin,' Berlioz's 'Faust,' Smetana's 'Die Verkaufte Braut,' Puccini's 'Manon,' Massenet's 'Werther' and 'La Navarraise,' Gounod's 'Sapho,' Cowen's 'Signa,' and five other operas by Mascagni, Leoncavallo, and Ildadore de Lara. How fourteen novelties could possibly be rehearsed and presented during a season lasting between two and three months our contemporary does not explain.

THE deficit at the Vienna Imperial Opera amounted last year to the sum of 40,000*fl.*, that is to say including the subvention of 300,000 florins. Evidently lyric drama is not flourishing in the Austrian capital.

DISQUIETING rumours have been heard from time to time recently with reference to Kroll's Theatre in the Thiergarten at Berlin, and now it is said authoritatively that the place will no longer be known as an opera-house, owing to lack of support.

THE American tour of Madame Adelina Patti is, according to general report, an astonishing success. She is said to be in wonderful voice, and although the last concert was to have been given at Chicago on the 24th ult., the tour has been prolonged until March 22nd.

IN May Beethoven's nine symphonies are to be performed at Bonn, under the direction of Herr Wullner, the Principal of the Cologne Conservatorium, the proceeds to be devoted to the museum now being formed in the master's birthplace.

LAST December we announced that a great festival was to be held next November at Nuremberg, in commemoration of the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Hans Sachs, but German newspapers say that the town council of that place has refused the grant of 12,000 marks required for the purpose.

At the approaching tercentenary commemoration of the death of Palestrina at Rome his 'Stabat Mater' for two choirs, dedicated to Pope Gregory XIV., is to be revived. It is a fine but little-known example of the master's genius.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Mus. Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
— Highbury Philharmonic Society, Dvorak's 'Specter's Bride,' &c., 8, Highbury Avenue.
Wch. London Sacred Choral Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
— Royal Choral Society: 'The Redemption,' 8, Albert Hall.
Tues. Royal College of Music Concert, 7.30, Alexandra House.
— London Symphony Concert (Wagner Commemorative), 8, St. James's Hall.
— Concert in Aid of the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage, 8, Queen's Hall.
Fri. Ringwood Popul. Concert, 8, Vestry Hall, Shaverston Hill.
Sat. Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

COURT.—'The Transgressor,' a Play in Four Acts. By A. W. Gattie.

'THE TRANSGRESSOR' of Mr. Gattie is less a play than a controversial treatise. As such even it is illogical and inconclusive. So complete acceptance has in late years been won by the theory that a play is the proper vehicle for the ventilation of any view, ethical, social, ethnological, or political, that it is useless to reopen the question of the fitness of the means to the end. It may, however, be pointed out to Mr. Gattie that such triumph as he obtains is won in despite of his theories, and not by their aid. In fact,

All his magic structures reared so high
Are crumbled into heaps.

The arguments are without value, the polemic is without interest. The informing soul is, so to speak, independent of the shapeless and rudimentary body. It is known to folklorists that the soul may, in the opinion of the savage, quit the body for a while without causing death. It is seen at times slipping out of the mouth, in the shape, probably, of a weasel, and disporting by itself until it finds occasion to return. Some such soul, in the shape of a short throb of genuine passion, animates 'The Transgressor.'

In none of Mr. Gattie's abstract propositions, treated as these are, is it possible to feel the slightest interest. His hero has married a woman who through an accident has become incurably insane. His position, tied to a creature who is practically dead, is pitiable, and his growl against the injustice of the law that dooms him to "perpetual widowhood" is pardonable. Should he, for the sake of the domesticity for which he pines, make other and unconventional arrangements, "runaways' eyes may wink," and the most precise will all but make an allowance. One thing only he may not do. He may not break the law he condemns, and in so doing deceive, betray, and defile the innocent woman who trusts him. This, to the shame of manhood, Eric Langley does, contracting a sham marriage with a young girl whose heart he has won as a reputed widower. Quite contemptible are the sophistries by which he palliates what cannot be defended, and not less dishonouring as a piece of stupidity is the manner in which he betrays the secret of his life, confiding it to a friend under conditions which allow of its being overheard by the person of all others from whom it should be kept. So completely does he divest himself of sympathy by these proceedings that the play runs a risk of being manqué.

Fortunately, the soul comes into the body at the close of the third act. Sylvia learns from a second lover—whom Mr. Gattie, perhaps with some vague notion of dramatic balance, makes more repellent than the first—that she has been betrayed and ruined. Declining to accept such charges at second hand, she extorts the avowal from the bigamist's trembling lips. Overmastered at first by the social penalties she has incurred, she casts about for a refuge. Her love is, however, sincere, and overcomes her dismay. Refusing the rehabilitation of marriage offered her by an old lover—a clergyman, an eavesdropper, and a sneak—and deaf to the menaces of her uncle and guardian, she throws herself into the arms of her lover. Not very convincing is his argument that she is his wife in the sight of Heaven. In cases of this class, Heaven preserves a discreet and judicial silence. He is, none the less, her man of all in the world, the one she has chosen for her own. Had he given her the option, she would not have committed the crime in which he has involved her, nor incurred consciously the social ostracism he has thrust upon her. "Things must be as they may," however, and now, as the thing is done, she would not have it otherwise. She loves him the more—as what woman, she asks, would not?—because for her sake, and for her possession, he has broken with everything around him, peace, honour, respect, and now goes gladly to pay the penalty which the injured law exacts. This choice of hers, so wholly opposite to that which conventional moralists counsel and approve, reads the audience and establishes the fortunes of a crude play. Wrong it may be, but it is at least human. The effect would have been less but for the beauty, almost magical, of Miss Nethercole's performance. Every aspect of the character is shown with admirable skill; the whole is charged in an equal degree with imagination, beauty, and passion, and stamps Miss Nethercole as an actress of high, perhaps highest mark. Miss Bessie Hatton plays agreeably a small part. The other characters receive a fairly competent interpretation, but are intrinsically uninteresting.

Dramatic Gossip.

No printed version of 'The School for Scandal' was prepared for publication by Sheridan. He always alleged that he could not supply one with which he was perfectly satisfied. Yet he made the attempt, and Mr. Fraser Rae has discovered the copy containing his final corrections of passages in many scenes, which Moore must have overlooked, the documents at his disposal having recently been put into Mr. Fraser Rae's hands by Sheridan's descendants for the purpose of writing a complete biography of the great dramatist and orator. The manuscript is imperfect, yet enough is extant to show how effectively Sheridan could add a fresh charm to his polished phrases.

Messrs. Dent & Co. are going to publish an edition of Shakspeare's works in which each play will be issued by itself for a shilling. Mr. Crane is designing for each title-page a vignette that will indicate the play, and each volume will have a frontispiece. The text will be that of the "Globe" edition. M. Gollancz will contribute a preface to each play, short notes, and a glossary.

The Vaudeville is now to be assigned to comic opera, and will shortly witness the production, under the direction of Mr. Richard Temple, of 'Wapping Old Stairs,' a novelty by two gentlemen combining many historic names, Stuart Robertson and Howard Talbot.

'UNDER THE CLOCK,' the whimsicality of Mr. Brookfield and Mr. Seymour Hicks, retains its position in the bill at the Court. Both the authors, Mr. Nainby, and Miss Lottie Venne take part in the representation. New jokes and allusions are introduced, and the piece is generally "revised up to date."

TERRY'S THEATRE will reopen shortly, under the management of Mr. Weedon Grossmith, with a farcical comedy by Mr. Arthur Law. The company at present engaged includes Miss Gladys Holfrey, Miss Edna Beringer, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, and Mr. John Beauchamp. Mr. Terry's reappearance at his own theatre can scarcely take place before Easter.

In consequence of the illness of Mr. Toole, Toole's Theatre closed on Saturday last. It will not reopen until the new comedy of Mr. Ralph Lumley is ready for presentation. The rehearsals of this are necessarily suspended.

UNDIMAYED by failure, Miss Annie Ross promises another novelty at the Royalty Theatre. The name and nature of this are as yet unrevealed.

It is stated that this year's Shakspearean performance at the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, will be the 'Second Part of King Henry IV.,' Mr. F. R. Benson and his company being the actors.

ON Saturday last Miss Rosina Vokes (Mrs. Cecil Clay) died at Babbicombe, Torquay. She was the youngest and sprightliest of the once well-known Vokes family, during many successive years a mainstay of pantomime at Drury Lane. An excellent singer and dancer, and endowed with an infectious vitality, Miss Vokes was the life of most of the pieces in which she appeared. After her marriage with Mr. Clay, a son of the well-known member for Hull, and a brother of Frederick Clay, the composer, she retired temporarily from the stage. During recent years she has been playing in America with a burlesque company, of which she was the manager and chief support. Mrs. Clay is stated to have been in her thirty-seventh year. She had been seen in many London and country theatres, and had played at the Châtelet in Paris.

For the 27th inst. is promised a performance in London, at one or other of the unoccupied theatres, of 'As You Like It,' played entirely by women. Experiments of this kind date back to early in last century. They are, however, among the things one would "willingly let die."

An account in the New Review of the Théâtre Libre in Paris supplies curious and interesting particulars concerning M. Antoine, by whom the Théâtre Libre was founded, with the opinions of some leading French critics and writers as to the value and significance of the experiment.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—T. H. B.—A. M. B.—G. S.—H. S.—H. T. B.—W. W.—T. O. G.—received.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	15	0
For Six Months...	7	6
For all Countries within the Postal Union.
For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months...	9	0

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Ready shortly, in 2 vols. price 24s.

OUR RAILWAYS: their Development, Enterprise, Incident, and Romance.

By JOHN PENDLETON, Author of 'A History of Derbyshire' and 'Newspaper Reporting in Olden Time and To-Day.' With nearly 300 Illustrations.

NEW VOLUMES.

NOTICE.—In a few days will be published, STATESMEN, PAST and PRESENT, price 10s. 6d.These character sketches attracted great attention at the time of their appearance in the Daily News. They are by a writer whose peculiar position fits him pre-eminently for the task he has undertaken.

Just published, price 21s.

The DAWN of ASTRONOMY. A Study of the Temple Worship and Mythology of the Ancient Egyptians. By J. NORMAN LOCKYER, C.B. F.R.S., &c. Illustrated.

NEW AND REVISED EDITION.

The LIFE of CHRIST. By the Ven. Archdeacon FARRAR, D.D. F.R.S., Chaplain-in-Ordinary to the Queen. Cloth, 7s. 6d.

Ready shortly.

The STANDISHS of HIGH ACRE. A Novel. By GILBERT SHELDON. 2 vols. 21s.

All who have read 'The Mill on the Floss' should see

'LISBETH. By LESLIE KEITH, with which this New Novel has been frequently compared by the Press. At all Libraries. 3 vols. 31s. 6d."Almost as well done as George Eliot's presentation of the Dodson family in 'The Mill on the Floss.'.....It is well and pleasantly written, reminding us in some ways of Mrs. Oliphant at her best." Pall Mall Gazette.

SECOND EDITION, now ready, 6s.

The DELECTABLE DUCHY. Stories and Sketches. By Q.The MAN in BLACK. By STANLEY WEYMAN, Author of 'A Gentleman of France,' &c. With 12 Full-Page Illustrations by Wal Paget. 3s. 6d. [Ready shortly.]LOST on DU CORRIG; or, 'Twixt Earth and Ocean. By STANDISH O'GRADY, Author of 'Pinn and his Companions,' &c. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations. 5s. [Ready shortly.]

POPULAR EDITIONS.

TINY LUTTRELL. By E. W. HORNUNG, Author of 'A Bride from the Bush.' 6s.The ADMIRABLE LADY BIDDY FANE. By FRANK BARRETT. With 12 Full-Page Illustrations. 6s.LIST, YE LANDSMEN! A Romance of Incident. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. 6s.The STORY of FRANCIS CLUDDE. By STANLEY J. WEYMAN. 6s.

SECOND SERIES.

The DIPLOMATIC REMINISCENCES of LORD AUGUSTUS LOFTUS, P.C. G.C.B., 1862 to 1879. Demy 8vo. 2 vols. 32s. [Ready shortly.]

The Second Series of these Reminiscences covers the period of Lord Loftus's residence at the Courts of Bavaria, Berlin, and St. Petersburg.

N.B.—A Third Edition of the First Series of these Reminiscences is now on Sale, 2 vols. (covering the period from 1837 to 1862), 32s.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, London, Paris, and Melbourne.

Now ready, price 15s.

SOCIAL ENGLAND. A Record of the Progress of the People in Religion, Law, Learning, Arts, Science, Literature, Industry, Commerce, and Manners, from the Earliest Times to the Present Day. Edited by H. D. TRAILL, D.C.L., sometime Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford.

Vol. I. FROM the EARLIEST TIMES to the ACCESSION of EDWARD the FIRST.

The Contributors to this Volume include

F. W. MAITLAND, M.A., Downing Professor of Law in the University of Cambridge.

F. YORK POWELL, M.A., Student and Tutor of Christ Church, Oxford.

R. L. POOLE, M.A., Balliol College, Oxford.

A. L. SMITH, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Balliol College, Oxford.

C. OMAN, M.A., Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford.

F. T. RICHARDS, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Oxford.

O. M. EDWARDS, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of Lincoln College, Oxford.

G. CREIGHTON, M.D., Author of 'A History of Epidemics in the Middle Ages.'

W. LAIRD CLOWES, Fellow of King's College, London.

Colonel COOPER KING; and

HUBERT HALL, M.A., Public Record Office.

* Vol. II. is in active preparation, price 15s.

NEW AND REVISED EDITION.

ELECTRICITY in the SERVICE of MAN. A Popular and Practical Treatise on the Applications of Electricity in Modern Life. With upwards of 950 Illustrations. Revised by R. MULLINEUX WALMSLEY, D.Sc. (Lond.), F.R.S.E. Cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOLUME VI. of

CASSELL'S STOREHOUSE of GENERAL INFORMATION. Fully illustrated with High-Class Wood Engravings, and with Maps and Coloured Plates. Cloth, 5s.ITALIAN LESSONS, with Exercises (CASSELL'S). Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

ANCIENT ARMS and ARMOUR.

A Pictorial and Descriptive Record of the Origin and Development of Arms and Armour. To which are appended 133 Plates, specially drawn from the Author's Collection. By EDWIN J. BENTLEY. Imperial 4to. 650 pp., with 1,300 Original Engravings, half bound in leather. FIVE GUINEAS net.

"Mr. Bentley's magnificent work."—Daily Telegraph. "We know of no authority more thorough and up-to-date."—Daily Chronicle. "A masterpiece of its kind."—Mr. Bentley's work is as interesting as it is valuable.—Black and White.

JUST READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

GLIMPSES of the FRENCH REVOLUTION. By J. G. ALGER. Author of 'Englishmen in the French Revolution,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

BEYOND the ICE: being a Story of the Newly-Discovered Region round the North Pole. Edited from Dr. FRANK PARLEIGH'S DIARY by G. RHAD MURPHY, Inventor of the Victoria Torpedo. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

TWO REMARKABLE COLLECTIONS OF SHORT STORIES.—Vide Press.

The WAY THEY LOVED at GRIMPAT. By H. BENTON. 1 vol. 8vo. 3s. 6d. "Should score one of the most solid literary successes of the season."—Daily Telegraph.

TALES of the YORKSHIRE WOLDS.

By J. KEIGHLEY SNOWDEN. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. "There is decidedly good stuff in Mr. Snowden's 'Tales of the Yorkshire Wolds.'... like Slowly's 'Quarrel' shows the author to great advantage.... We hope to meet Mr. Snowden's work again."—St. James's Gazette.

PREACHERS of the AGE SERIES.—NEW VOLUME. The "GOOD CHEER" of JESUS CHRIST. By the Rev. CHARLES MOINNET, M.A., Kensington. With Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. "One of the best volumes in a remarkably good series."—Glasgow Herald.

CHEAP EDITIONS at all Booksellers'. Uniform crown 8vo. Volumes, bound in cloth, price Half-a-Crown per Volume.

DONALD ROSS of HEIMRA. By WILLIAM BLACK.

CRIPPS, the CARRIER. By R. D. BLACKMORE.

JACK'S COURTSHIP. By W. Clark RUSSELL.

By THE AUTHOR OF 'BY THE WESTERN SEA.' "Books to read, and re-read with unflagging interest."

MARK TILLOTSON. 548 pp., 6s.

"Clever novel."—Athenæum. "Redundant with vitality and individuality."—Times. "Vigorous writing on every page."—Full Mail Gazette.

JOHN WESTACOTT. Popular Edition. 418 pp., 3s. 6d.

"Exquisite literary work."—Scotsman. "Entrancing novel."—Liverpool Post.

OUR FOREIGN COMPETITORS. 1s. "May be studied with great advantage at the present crisis."—Times.

DOD'S PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, and KNIGHTAGE for 1894. Crown 8vo. over 1,000 pages, handsomely bound, cloth extra gilt, gilt edges, 10s. 6d.

"Aims at giving a great deal of information in a small space, and signally succeeds in doing so. For purposes of rapid reference it has no competitor."—Athenæum.

The ORGANIST and CHOIR-MASTER'S DIARY for 1894. Arranged by RALPH HINDLE BAKER. Demy 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

"Mr. Baker has provided all that is necessary to an organist or choir-master for keeping a record of everything appertaining to his church and choir, in the handiest possible form."—Daily Telegraph.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

FEBRUARY NUMBER.

Contents.

EDWARD BURNS-JONES. Cosmo Monkhouse. Illustrated.—JOHN MARCH, SOUTHERNER. Chaps. 8-15. George W. Cable.—The SCHOOLMASTER. James Baldwin. Illustrated.—MR. LOWELL on ART-PRINCIPLES. Ferris Lockwood.—ORCHIDS. W. A. Stillé. Illustrated.—ON PIRATICAL SEAS: a Merchant's Voyage to the West Indies in 1865. Peter A. Grotjan.—The SEA ISLAND HURRICANES: the Devastation. Joel Chandler Harris. Illustrated. &c. &c.

FEBRUARY Number now ready, price One Shilling.

FASHIONS of TO-DAY

in Dress, Fancy Work, Art, Music, Literature, Women's Work, &c. With Coloured Plate, Pattern Sheet, and numerous Illustrations.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 562. FEBRUARY, 1894. 2s. 6d.

Contents.

THE RICH MISS RIDDLE. By Dorothea Gerard.
DEAN STANLEY.
GHOSTA BRUFOR: the LAW. By Andrew Lang.
SALMON FLIES. By Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart., M.P.
THE KIDNEY of MARGHERITA: being a Fictitious History of a Fictitious Family. Chaps. 10-12.
THE GOVERNMENT and SCOTCH AFFAIRS.
A SONG of OLIVY DUN—CURRYMELLA. By Maura O'Neill.
AYEHA—A WIFE of the PROPHET MAHAMMAD. By Walter B. Harris.
THIRTY YEARS of SHIKAR. III. By Sir Edward Dunder.
The Right Hon. EDWARD STANHOPE.
THE END.
ARMED EUROPE—SEA POWER. By General Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., G.C.B.
William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Contents for FEBRUARY.

BOULSTEADES and BUDISM. By Dr. R. J. DUBOIS.
THE YOUNG MEN. By "A. Popen.".
THE NIGHT-NOON DAY and FOREIGN COMPETITION. By John Rae.
DOROTHEA CARASTON and GEORGE ELIOT. By Madame Rulieu.
THE PHILOSOPHY of CRIME. By W. S. LILLY.
THE AGE of ATHLETIC FRIESEN. By Walter Paley.
AUSTRALIA and BRITISH MONEY. By Norwood Young.
RELIGIOUS TEACHING in the BOARD SCHOOL. By Brooke Merford, D.D.
THE PLAINT of the OLD. By Mrs. Cranke-Smith.
LIMITS of DIVORCE. By C. G. GERRARD.
THE BITTER CRY of the LONDON RATEPAYER. By R. F. C. COSTELLO.
Lohmeyer & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

FEBRUARY, 1894.

THE KURDISH and LORD CHOMER. By Wilfrid Lawson Hunt.
THE POSITION of the LIBERAL PARTY. By the Rev. J. G. GERRARD.
THE POLITICAL FUTURE of "LAND." By T. B. THORNTON (Secretary to the Labour National Association).
ELEPHANTIA. By Dudley C. Buxby.
NOTICABLE BOOKS. By Professor Goldwin Smith, R. M. Hutton, R. D. Trail, W. A. Luff, Theodore Watts, Hamilton White, & C. Frothingham.
THE QUEEN and her SECOND PRIME MINISTER. By the Hon. Richard B. Hurd.
OLD WHINLOCK and his FOLK-LORE. By Lady Catherine Mordaunt.
NEW ZEALAND UNDER FEMALE FRANCHISE. By R. H. BAKER.
FRENCH-MINDED CHILDREN. By Sir Douglas Galloway, K.C.B.
BORES. By Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart., M.P.
MOHAMMEDANISM and CHRISTIANITY. By Professor Max Müller.
MOTHERS and DAUGHTERS. By Mrs. Frederic Harrison.
A LETTER to the OPTIM COMMISSION. By Sir William Dawson.
G. C. M. G. (late Governor of Hong Kong).
ITALIAN ART at the NEW GALLERY. By Charles Whistler.
THE GLACIAL THEORY. By His Grace the Duke of Argyll.
PROGRESS of FREE TRADE in the UNITED STATES. By Chauncey M. Depue.
London: Sampson Low, Marston & Company, Ltd.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.

Contents. FEBRUARY. Price 2s. 6d.

EPISODES of the MONTH.
AN APPEAL to the LORDS. By Mr. Lee Stansbury.
THE LIFE of ARTHUR STANLEY. By Sir Mountbatten R. Grant.
AN ENGLISH MASTER. By V.
FURTHER REFLECTIONS on INDIA. By H. R. M. James.
THE LIVING WAGON. By Hugh Bell.
ROMAN SOCIETY a CENTURY AGO. By Charles Edwards.
THE IMPERIAL FEDERATION LEAGUE. By Robert Davidson.
MR. RUSKIN in RELATION to MODERN PROBLEMS. By E. T. COOK.
THE UNIVERSITY for WALTER. By J. Ellis Montagu.
EDWARD STANHOPE. By the Hon. W. St. John Brodrick, M.P.
THE SERVICE of a VILLAGE KNIGHT. By Miss Maria Row.
London: W. H. Allen & Co., Limited, 12, Waterloo-place, S.W.

Now ready, price 1s. 6d.

THE MAGAZINE of ART

for FEBRUARY.

The Three Special Plates in this Part are—

"LA BELLE DAME SANS MERCI" By J. W. Waterhouse, A.R.A. (Enchased by H. Macbeth Macbeth).
"PHRYNIA'S BAKING WITH BRITONS." By Sir Frederic Leighton, Bart., P.R.A.
"THE ENCAMPMENT in the DESERT." By J. F. Lewis, R.A.

THE "OLD MASTERS" at the ROYAL ACADEMY. By Lionel Cust. With 4 Illustrations.

SOME RISING ARTISTS. By Mrs. E. L. Pootlethwaite. With 9 Illustrations.

FROM DAWN to DUSK. Poem by Arthur L. Salmon. Illustration by H. J. Stock, M.L.

THE COLLECTION of Mr. GILBERT MOSE, LIVERPOOL. By Alfred T. Mori. With 1 Illustration.

THE GOLD MEDALS of the ROYAL ACADEMY SCHOOLS. By R. J. Pope-Jones. With 4 Illustrations.

SOME RECENT ILLUSTRATED VOLUMES. With 5 Illustrations.

H. H. RICHARDSON, ARCHITECT. By Horace Townsend. With 1 Illustration.

ILLUSTRATIONS in ART. By T. J. Gault.

OUR ILLUSTRATED NOTE-BOOK. With 9 Illustrations.

CHRONICLE of ART: ART in FEBRUARY.
Cassell & Company, Limited, Ludgate-hill, London, and all Booksellers.

Now ready, price 2s.; post free, 2s. 2d.

LA REVUE DE PARIS.

No. I. FEBRUARY 1894.

Contents.

H. de BALZAC. Lettres à l'Étrangère.
PIERRE LOTI. Au Covert de Loya.
ERNEST RENAN. Pétition d'Alexandre.
GYP. Le Mariage de Chiffon.
FRANÇOIS MAONARD. La Reconquête d'une Légende.
D'ANNUNZIO. Spéculo et Cie.
ÉMILE FAGUET. Ferdinand Romatier.
J. JUBERAND. Le Roman d'un Roi d'Écosse.
GABRIEL SÉAILLER. La Peinture de Portraits.

Published bi-monthly. Annual Subscription, post free, 6s. Six Months, 3s.; Three Months, 1s. 6d.

General Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.

Adair & Co., 12, Bedford-square, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE BOOKMAN. An Illustrated Monthly

Journal for Bookreaders, Bookbuyers, and Booklovers.

Contents of FEBRUARY NUMBER. Price 6d.

NEWS NOTES.

MONTHLY REPORT on the WHOLESALE BOOK TRADE.
THE GRANDMOTHER. By E. J. Ellis.
NEW WRITERS—MR. PERCY WHITE.
MR. LANG on ST. ANDREW. By D. Ray Fleming.
PORTRAIT of Mr. FRANCIS THOMPSON.
FAMILIAR LETTERS of Mr. WALTER SCOTT. By Francis Hinton Groom.
BOOKSELLING in the EAST-END.
NEW BOOKS—NOVEL NOTES—THE BOOKMAN'S TABLE—THE YOUNG AUTHOR'S PAGE—THE BOOKSELLER.
London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

Price 1s. Monthly.

THE EXPOSITOR.

Contents for FEBRUARY.

ST. PAUL'S CONCEPTION of CHRISTIANITY.
IS THE HOLY SPIRIT? By Rev. Professor A. B. Bruce, D.D.
AGRAPHA: Sayings of Our Lord not Recorded in the Gospels. By Rev. W. Lock, M.A.
THE RIBLE and SCIENCE. 1. The Book of Genesis. By Sir J. W. Dawson, C.M.G., F.R.S.
"HE CALLED" or "SHE CALLED"? By Professor Herbert North, D.D.
THE PREMIER IDEAS of JESUS. 2. Agnostic Life. By Rev. John Watson, M.A.
A REPLY to Mr. CHAIR. By Professor W. M. Ramsay, M.A.
SURVEY of RECENT BIBLICAL LITERATURE. By Rev. Professor Marcus Dods, D.D.
London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

THE JOURNAL of EDUCATION.

"Again justifies its position as the leading monthly journal of the educational world."—Birmingham Observer, January 27, 1894.

FEBRUARY Contents.

OCCASIONAL NOTES.—Royal Commission on University Education.—Christ's Hospital.—Prof. Michajlova and the "Science of Education."—Statistics of Ancient Masters.—Classical Head Masters, &c.
THE STUDY and TEACHING of FRENCH. (Continued.) Prof. Spence.
"BLENDED" are the STRINGS, for they shall PERFORM on the WEAK. Part II. Roman and Romanism. By the Hon. Lionel A. Tollemache.
TEACHERS' REGISTRATION. By Charles Y. D. Ashend.
THE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTE of SCOTLAND and Dr. J. G. FITCH.
AMERICAN CURRICULA of SECONDARY EDUCATION.
CORRESPONDENCE.—Public Schools Time-tables (T. Field)—Scripture at the Local Examinations (Edith Tyles)—Defects in English Public Schools (F. Haverfield)—Girls' Education in America (K. Gray)—The Modern Language Association (W. Stuart Kingsley)—Secondary Education (J. O. Berman).

NOTES on ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.—TECHNICAL EDUCATION.
ASSOCIATION of ASSISTANT MISTERS.
THE TEACHERS' GUILD—OFFICIAL REPORT.

NOTES and QUERIES.

CALENDAR of EDUCATIONAL EVENTS, &c.

REVIEWS and MINOR NOTICES.

SCHOOLS and UNIVERSITIES.

TRANSLATION PRIZES.

HANDWRITING PRIZE RESULT. (Illustrated.)

Price 6d.; per post, 6d.

Office: 25, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

NOTICE.—The Trade supplied at 7, Chancery-lane, W.C.

(Principal Office.)

THE EDUCATIONAL REVIEW.

Contents for FEBRUARY, 1894.

1. THE RETIREMENT of DR. FITCH. With Full-Page Portrait.
2. ENGLISH GRAMMAR: a Plan for Greater Uniformity. By T. Hornsfield, M.A., Head Master of Newham Market Grammar School.
3. THE LANTERN in the SCHOOL. By the Rev. W. H. Fletcher, D.C.L., Head Master of the Claret Memorial School, Chichester.
4. JOHN BULL, JUNIOR, and his VARIOUS INSTRUCTORS. By the Rev. J. D. Burns, M.A., President of the Private Schools Association.
5. THE UNIVERSITY of WALE.
6. ANOTHER GOOD YEARS' WORK: the Report of the Head-Masters' Association.
7. PNEUMATIC NOTES. By Miss Laura Bowman.
8. THE MONTH. Oxford, Cambridge, Women, and General Notes.
9. MODERN OXFORD. Illustrated.
10. NEW BOOKS and NEW EDITIONS.

Price 6d.; per post, 6d.

London: 27, Chancery-lane, W.C.

Now and Cheaper Edition, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Eighth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A., F.R.A.S.

Second Edition, price 8d. per copy, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Parts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A., F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 20 and 22, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

HOW TO CORRECT PRINTERS' PROOFS.
By the late WILLIAM BLADEN, AUTHORITY and OTHERS, with this brochure by their side, will be able to technically mark a proof with all the business of a man whose whole life has been devoted to printing.

Price sixpence post free.

Madeo, Hunt & Madoc, 23, Abchurch-lane, London, E.C.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER'S LIST.

SECOND EDITION, demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

ARBORICULTURE;

Or, a Practical Treatise on Raising and Managing
Forest Trees, and on the Profitable Extension of the Forests of Great Britain.

By JOHN GRIGOR, The Nurseries, Forres.

"A work with just claims to attention, and even authority, among students and growers of trees."—Athenæum.

"Mr. Grigor stood at the top of his profession in Scotland for the best part of half a century, and during that time planted many of the most considerable forests in the Highlands."—Westminster Courier.

"Every branch of the subject is exhaustively and lucidly treated."—Scotsman.

"His book has interest both for the adept and the novice, for the large proprietor and him that has but a nook or corner to plant out."—Saturday Review.

Crown 8vo, 1s.

THE CHURCH AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

By A. SCOTT MATHESON.

Author of 'The Gospel and Modern Substitutes.'

"We have read few books of late years that so admirably fulfil their purpose as does this one of Mr. Scott Matheson's.
It is a most judicious and comprehensive survey of the whole social field."—Daily Chronicle.

FIFTEENTH THOUSAND. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

BUNYAN CHARACTERS.

Lectures Delivered in Free St. George's
Church, Edinburgh.

By Rev. ALEX. WHYTE, D.D.

The British Weekly says: "We cannot too warmly welcome this very beautiful and amazingly cheap reprint of Dr.
Whyte's lectures. The book will take a permanent place in Bunyan literature."

"A Second Series of 'Bunyan Characters' is in the press."

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER,
London and Edinburgh.

NOW READY, price 31s. 6d. net.

FANS OF JAPAN.

By CHARLOTTE M. SALWEY.

With Introduction by WILLIAM ANDERSON, F.R.C.S., late of H.M. Legation, Japan.

AND WITH TEN FULL-PAGE COLOURED PLATES AND THIRTY-NINE ILLUSTRATIONS IN BLACK AND WHITE.

Large 4to, handsomely bound in cloth and gold.

London: KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & Co., Limited.

NOW READY, THIRD EDITION, 8vo, 14s.

CIVILISATION AND PROGRESS.

By JOHN BEATTIE CROZIER.

Revised and Enlarged, and with New Preface.

The SPECTATOR says:—

"The book of a very able man....The testimony which we are compelled to give to the high ability of this ambitious work is completely impartial....Full of original criticism....Great literary faculty....A book far less superficial than Mr. Buckle's."

JOURNAL des ÉCONOMISTES (Paris) says:—

"C'est un ouvrage remarquable, plein d'idées originales et ingénieuses, souvent incontestables, et qui, même alors qu'elles soulèvent des objections, charment en provoquant la pensée....M. Crozier a incontestablement dit beaucoup de choses vraies, et même neuves; mais en ne tenant pas compte, dans leurs réflexions, du chiffre de la population des pays les plus civilisés, en ne faisant pas entrer la densité de la population dans son argumentation, il n'a pu aboutir qu'à des vues utopiques. Mais rendons-lui cette justice, personne ne les a aussi bien soutenues que lui."

The Rev. H. B. HAWES, M.A., says:—

"This is the most remarkable and important work of the last twenty years. It is not too much to say that Mr.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & Co.

Second Edition now ready, much enlarged, 8s. 6d.
OUR MORALITY AND THE MORAL QUESTION.
By Prof. LIONEL REALE, M.P. F.R.S.
London: J. & A. Churchill.

Price 1s. post free.

DEAFNESS: its Treatment by Massage
(Hornum's Method), Bache, and Remedial Agents. With Cases of Nervous Deafness. By R. T. CROOKER, M.A. M.D.
London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 170, Fleet-street, and 45, Threadneedle-street.

New ready, also 12 by 8 1/2 inches, full bound cloth, price 7s. 6d.;
handsomely half bound maroon, price 14s.

AN ATLAS of INDIA. Containing 16 Coloured Plates of Maps and Plans of Cities. Size 14 by 17 inches. With Historical and Statistical Letterpress by Sir W. W. HUNTER, K.C.B., and a Complete Index of Names.

"It is scarcely too much to say that the forty pages of letterpress display such an exceptional mastery of the latest facts that they are alone worth the modest sum at which this remarkable atlas is published, and the fact that the maps have passed under the critical scrutiny of so great an expert is in itself a proof that this 'Atlas of India' is one upon which students, travellers, soldiers, missionaries, and men of affairs can place at all events broadly speaking, implicit reliance."—Standard.
W. & A. K. Johnston, Edin. Works, Raster-road, Edinburgh;
3, White Hart-street, Warwick-lane, London, E.C.

Just published, crown 8vo cloth, 2s. 6d.

PASSAGES for TRANSLATION from FRENCH
AUTHORS Selected by WALTER DEAN FLEMING, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, Assistant Master at Eton College.
London: Edward Stanford, 25 and 27, Cockspur-street, S.W.

This day is published, crown 8vo, 6s.

A GREY ROMANCE. By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD; and Stories by Frank Stockton, Gilbert Parker, Frederick Greenwood, H. D. Trail, and others.
London: W. H. Allen & Co. Limited, 13, Waterloo-place, S.W.

On February 14,

CHEAP EDITION OF

MISS BRADDON'S LATEST NOVEL,

ALL ALONG THE RIVER.

Cloth (Autograph Edition), 2s. 6d.

Boards, 2s.

"'All Along the River' is one of the most pathetic stories Miss Braddon has written."—Athenæum.

London: Simpkin & Co., Limited.

THIRD THOUSAND.—SIR WILLIAM FRASER'S REMINISCENCES
"HIC ET UBIQUE." Anecdotes of Thackeray,
Lytton, Disraeli, Lord, Elton, House of Commons, Waterloo, Wellington, W. H. Smith, Marshall, and others. By the Author of "Words on Wellington," "Marcell and his Day." Cloth gilt, pp. 317 7s. 6d.
Samson, Low, Marston & Co., Limited, 51, Dutton's House, Peter-
lane, E.C.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE
COMPANY INSURES AGAINST RAILWAY ACCIDENTS,
PERSONAL ACCIDENTS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.

Capital, 1,000,000. Established 1849.

44, CORNHILL, LONDON

W. D. HART, } Secretary.

A. VIAN, }

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER
PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.

ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.

87, West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

93, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON, E.C.

95A, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

SIRS.—We guarantee that "OUR SWAN FOUN-
TAIN PEN IS ABSOLUTELY THE BEST
FOUNTAIN PEN IN THE WORLD," which Statement we indefinitely confirm.

We claim for our "Swan Fountain" Pen that no other similar pen is manufactured with material equal to ours. They are made of GOLD, the Point is finished with IRIIDIUM, thereby giving to each Pen an EVERLASTING WEAR, and securing regularity of Penmanship.

The Reservoir containing ink is rubber finished, thereby avoiding many unpleasantnesses of escaping ink which is characteristic of cheaper pens.

We manufacture the Pen to suit any hand and style of writing; the constant use will improve the handwriting and obviate writers' cramp.

In point of value one SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN will OUTLAST 13,000 STEEL PENS costing 11s., thereby saving Ten Guineas.

The use of our Pen dispenses with the need of Inkstands, will write INCESSANTLY FOR THIRTY HOURS, and are always ready for use.
Once used they prove themselves on their own merit an indispensable time-saving requisite of every writer.

In ordering, send us along one of your steel pens
as a guide.

Yours obediently,

MABIE, TODD & BARD.

N.B. The price is ONLY 10s. 6d. Send for Illustrated Catalogue.

A PENNY A DROP.

THE PURE OTTO of ROSE
TOILET "VINOLIA" SOAP

"VINOLIA" TOILET POWDER

NOW COSTS NEARLY A PENNY A DROP.

BLONDEAU ET CIE, Ryland-road, London, N.W.

EPPE'S COCOA, WITH BOILING MILK.
GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.

EPPE'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST and SUPPER.

EPPE'S COCOA, WITH BOILING WATER.

NOURISHING—STRENGTHENING—RESTORATIVE.

HARVEST'S LENTIL FOOD.

Absolutely the best of all Foods for Invalids.

See Lancet, April 24, 1893.

A CERTAIN CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA.

INVALUABLE IN CASES OF INFLUENZA.

Sold in Ls., 8s., 4s., and 6s. Tins by Grocers and Chemists; or sent carriage paid by the Makers, W. & D. HARVEST, Douglas Dock, London.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACTIVITY OF THE STOMACH,
HEADACHE,
and INDIGESTION,
And Safest Agent for Delicate Constitutions,
Children, and Invalids.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

MESSRS. WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS' PUBLICATIONS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES,

CAPTAIN LUGARD'S WORK ON EAST AFRICA.

THE RISE OF OUR EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE. EARLY EFFORTS IN NYASALAND AND UGANDA.

By Captain F. D. LUGARD, D.S.O.,

Hon. F.R.G.S.; Diplom. F.R.S.G.S.

With 130 Illustrations and 14 Maps. 2 vols. large demy 8vo. 42s.

HISTORICAL PHILOSOPHY IN FRANCE

And FRENCH BELGIUM and SWITZERLAND. By ROBERT FLINT, Corresponding Member of the Institute of France, Hon. Member of the Royal Society of Palermo, Professor in the University of Edinburgh, &c. 8vo. 21s.

SCOTTISH LAND-NAMES: their Origin and Meaning. By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., Author of 'Life and Times of the Right Hon. W. H. Smith, M.P.' 'Passages in the Life of Sir Lucius Elphinstone,' 'Meridiana.' Cr. 8vo. [Immediately,

ON SOME OF
SHAKESPEARE'S FEMALE CHARACTERS. By HELENA FAUCIT, LADY MARTIN. Dedicated by Permission to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. Fifth Edition. With Portrait by Lehmann. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

A JOURNEY THROUGH THE YEMEN,

And some General Remarks upon that Country. By WALTER B. HARRIS, F.R.G.S., Author of 'The Land of an African Sultan: Travels in Morocco,' &c. With 3 Maps and numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 16s.

STRAY SPORT. By J. Moray BROWN, Author of 'Shikar Sketches,' 'Powder, Spur, and Spear,' 'The Days when we went Hog-Hunting,' &c. 2 vols. post 8vo. with 50 Illustrations, 21s.

POEMS AND BALLADS OF HEINRICH HEINE.

Done into English Verse by Sir THEODORE MARTIN, K.C.B. Third Edition. Small crown 8vo. 5s.

MADONNA PIA: a Tragedy; and Three other Dramas. Written and Translated by Sir THEODORE MARTIN, K.C.B. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

WITH the WOODLANDERS and BY the TIDE. By "A SON of the MARSHES," Author of 'Forest Tithes,' 'On Surrey Hills,' 'Within an Hour of London Town,' 'Annals of a Fishing Village.' Edited by J. A. OWEN. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

MARCHMONT AND THE HUMES OF POLWARTH.

With 9 Portraits and numerous other Illustrations. Crown 4to. 21s. net.

GEORGE ELIOT'S NOVELS.

Cheap Edition. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo.

ADAM BEDDE, 2s. 6d.—The MILL on the FLOSS, 3s. 6d.—FELIX HOLT, 3s. 6d.—SCENES of CLERICAL LIFE, 3s.—SILAS MARNER, 2s. 6d.—ROMOLA, 2s. 6d.—DANIEL DERONDA, 7s. 6d.—MIDDLEMARCH, 7s. 6d. GEORGE ELIOT'S LIFE, 7s. 6d.

GEORGE ELIOT'S LIFE and WORKS. Cabinet Edition. Printed from a New and Legible Type. Complete in 24 vols. price 6l. Each Volume, price 5s., may be had separately.

The INVASION of the CRIMEA: its Origin, and an Account of its Progress down to the Death of Lord Raglan. By A. W. KINGLAKE, Author of 'Editha.' Cabinet Edition. With Maps and Plans. 9 vols. crown 8vo. 6s. each.

The HISTORY of SCOTLAND. From Agricola's Invasion to the Extinction of the last Jacobite Insurrection. By JOHN HILL BURTON, D.C.L., Author of 'The Book-Hunter,' 'The Boot Abroad.' 8 vols. and Index. Crown 8vo. 51s. 3s.

STEPHENS' BOOK OF THE FARM.

Fourth Edition, Revised, and in great part Rewritten, by JAMES MACDONALD, Secretary Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland. With over 700 Illustrations and 40 Animal Portraits. In 3 vols. with leather back and gilt top, 31s. 3s.

Also in 6 divisional vols. bound in cloth, 10s. 6d. each.

STORMONTH'S DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Etymological and Pronouncing. The Pronunciation revised by Rev. P. H. PHELPS, M.A. Library Edition. Royal 8vo. half bound, 81s. 6d. School Edition. Crown 8vo. 79s. pp. 7s. 6d.

AT ALL LIBRARIES

EARLSCOURT: a Novel of Provincial Life. By ALEXANDER ALLARDYCE, Author of 'The City of Sunshine,' 'Balmoral: a Romance of the Queen's Country,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 25s. 6d.

ROUND

THE BLACK MAN'S GARDEN.

By ZÉLIE COLVILLE, F.R.G.S. With 2 Maps and 52 Illustrations from Drawings by the Author and from Photographs. Demy 8vo. 16s.

THE HISTORY AND POETRY OF THE SCOTTISH BORDER:

Their Main Features and Relations. By JOHN VEITCH, LL.D., Professor of Logic and Rhetoric in the University of Glasgow, Author of 'The Feeling for Nature in Scottish Poetry,' &c. New and Enlarged Edition. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 16s.

The TRUMPETER: a Romance of the Rhine. By JOSEPH VICTOR VON SCHEFFEL. Translated from the Two Hundredth German Edition by JESSIE BECK and LOUISE LORIMER. With an Introduction by Sir THEODORE MARTIN, K.C.B. Long 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The FORESTER: a Practical Treatise on the Planting and Tending of Forest Trees and the General Management of Woodlands. By JAMES BROWN, LL.D. New Edition, Thoroughly Revised, Emended, and Amplified by JOHN NISBET, D.Occ., Author of 'British Forest Trees,' &c. [Ready shortly.]

AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION.

JOHNSON'S ELEMENTS of AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY. From the Edition by Sir CHAS. A. CAMERON, M.D. F.R.C.S.I. Revised and brought down to date by C. M. AIKMAN, M.A. B.Sc., &c. Seventeenth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

MANURES and the PRINCIPLES of MANURING. By C. M. AIKMAN, M.A. B.Sc., Professor of Chemistry, Glasgow Veterinary College, Examiner in Chemistry, University of Glasgow, &c., Author of 'Farmyard Manure.' Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION.

TEXT-BOOK of ZOOLOGY. For Junior Students. By HENRY ALLEYNE NICHOLSON, M.D. D.Sc., &c., Regius Professor of Natural History in the University of Aberdeen. Fifth Edition, Rewritten and Enlarged, with numerous Engravings. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

THIRD THOUSAND.

LIFE AND TIMES OF The Rt. Hon. WILLIAM HENRY SMITH, M.P.

By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P.

With 3 Portraits, and numerous Illustrations from Drawings by Herbert Ralton, G. L. Seymour, and others.

2 vols. demy 8vo. 25s.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Brown's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN C. FALCON, Atholman Press, Brown's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.; and Published by the said JOHN C. FALCON at Brown's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.
Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Balfour and Mr. John Macmillan, Edinburgh—Saturday, February 3, 1894.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

Estimates and particulars on application.
THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY, 14, New Oxford-street, W.C.

Will be published next week.
THE NEWSPAPER PRESS DIRECTORY, 1894.
Forty-ninth Annual Issue. 2s. 12; or post free 2s. 6d.
Publishers: C. Mitchell & Co. 12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

New ready, 12mo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
DEVIL'S PRONOUN (The), and other Tales. By Miss F. FORBES ROBERTSON. Illustrated with plates from Designs of R. F. K.
Reeves & Turner, 3, Wellington-street, Strand.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK BY DEAN HOLB.
ADDRESSES TO WORKING MEN FROM PULPIT AND PLATFORM.
By the Very Rev. S. REYNOLDS HOLB, Dean of Rochester.
1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s. [Just ready.]

RIDING RECOLLECTIONS and TURF STORIES. By HENRY OUSTANCER. With numerous illustrations. Demy 8vo. 15s. Second Edition.

SEVENTY YEARS OF IRISH LIFE. By W. R. LE FANU. Demy 8vo. 10s. Third Thousand.

STEPHEN REMARK: a Story of Society and Religion. By the Hon. and Rev. JAMES ADDERLEY. Small 8vo. paper, 1s.; elegantly bound, 3s. 6d. Tenth Thousand.

FIFTY BREAKFASTS. Containing a Great Variety of New and Simple Recipes for Breakfast Dishes. By Col. KENNY HERBERT ("Wynnon"). Author of "Culinary Jottings," &c. Small 8vo. 2s. 6d. [Just ready.]

The CHESS POCKET MANUAL. By G. H. D. GOSSIP. Author of "The Theory of Chess Openings," &c. Small 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just ready.]

PLEASURABLE POULTRY-KEEPING. By EDWARD BROWN, Lecturer to the County Councils of Northumberland, Cumberland, Hampshire, Kent, &c. Author of "Industrial Poultry-Keeping," &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just ready.]

NEW VOLUME IN "THE INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION SERIES."

The INFANT MIND; or, Mental Development in the Child. Translated from the German of W. PREYER, Professor of Physiology in Jena. Crown 8vo. cloth, 4s.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD,
37, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.
Publisher to the India Office.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SON'S NEW BOOKS.

READY NEXT WEEK.
THE WRITINGS OF THOMAS PAINE:
POLITICAL, SOCIOLOGICAL, RELIGIOUS, AND LITERARY.

Edited by MONCURE D. CONWAY, Author of "Life of Thomas Paine," &c.

Vol. I. 1774-1779. 8vo. cloth, gilt tops, 12s. 6d.

To be complete in Four Volumes.

NEW VOLUME IN "HEROES OF THE NATIONS" SERIES.
HENRY OF NAVARRE, and THE HUGUENOTS IN FRANCE.

By P. F. WILLERT, M.A., Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.; Roxburgh, 6s.

THE SOCIAL CONTRACT;
OR, THE PRINCIPLES OF POLITICAL RIGHTS.

By JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU.

Translated by ROSE M. HARRINGTON. With Introduction and Notes by EDWARD L. WALTER.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

AUTHORS AND THEIR PUBLIC IN ANCIENT TIMES.

A Sketch of Literary Conditions, &c., from the Earliest Times to the Invention of Printing in 1450.

By GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM.

Post 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

24, BEDFORD-STREET, STRAND; and NEW YORK.

Fourth Edition, pp. 320, 2s.
PROTOPLASM: Physical Life and Law. By Prof. LIONEL ROBERTS. Facts and Arguments against Mechanical Views of Life as accepted by Huxley, Herbert Spencer, Strauss, Tyndall, and many others.
Harrison & Sons, 50, Pall Mall.

Cloth, price 2s. 6d. post free.
RHEUMATISM and SCIATICA: their Nature, Causes, and Treatment. By JOHN H. CLARKE, M.D.
London: James Hippis & Co., Limited, 170, Piccadilly, and 44, Threadneedle-street.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER'S LIST.

SECOND EDITION, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.
ARBORICULTURE;
Or, a Practical Treatise on Raising and Managing Forest Trees, and on the Profitable Extension of the Forests of Great Britain.

By JOHN GRIGOR, The Nurseries, Forres.
"A work with just claims to attention, and even authority, among students and growers of trees."—Athenæum.
"Mr. Grigor stood at the top of his profession in Scotland for the best part of half a century, and during that time planted many of the most considerable forests in the Highlands."—Illustrated Courier.
"Every branch of the subject is exhaustively and lucidly treated."—Outlook.
"His book has interest both for the adept and the novice, for the large proprietor and him that has but a nook or corner to plant out."—Saturday Review.

Crown 8vo. 5s.
THE CHURCH AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

By A. SCOTT MATHESSON.
Author of "The Gospel and Modern Substitutes."
"We have read few books of late years that so admirably fulfil their purpose as does this one of Mr. Scott Matheson's. It is a most judicious and comprehensive survey of the whole social field."—Daily Chronicle.

FIFTEENTH THOUSAND. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.
BUNYAN CHARACTERS.
Lectures Delivered in Free St. George's Church, Edinburgh.

By Rev. ALEX. WHITE, D.D.
The British Weekly says: "We cannot too warmly welcome this very beautiful and amazingly cheap reprint of Dr. Whyte's lectures. The book will take a permanent place in Bunyan literature."
 A Second Series of "Bunyan Characters" is in the press.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER,
London and Edinburgh.

Now ready, in demy 8vo. cloth, illustrated with 12 Lithograph Plates, price 18s. net.

INVESTIGATIONS ON MICROSCOPIC FOAMS AND ON PROTOPLASM.

By Prof. O. BÜTSCHLI.

Translated from the German by E. A. MINCHIN, B.A. Oxon., Fellow of Merton College, Oxford.

In demy 8vo. cloth, 450 pages, and illustrated with 263 Figures, price 18s. net.
ZOOLOGY OF THE INVERTEBRATA:
A TEXT-BOOK FOR STUDENTS.

By ARTHUR E. SHIPLEY, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Christ's College, and Demonstrator of Comparative Anatomy in the University of Cambridge.

In Medium 8vo. boards, leather back.
A DICTIONARY OF BIRDS.

By ALFRED NEWTON, assisted by HANS GADOW. With Contributions from RICHARD LYDEKKER, B.A. F.G.S., CHARLES S. RICE, M.A. F.R.S., and ROBERT W. SHUFELDT, M.D., late United States Army.

To be Completed in Four Parts. Parts 1 and 2 now ready.
Price 7s. 6d. net each.

In 4to. cloth, price 12s. 6d.
ZOOLOGICAL ARTICLES
Contributed to the "Encyclopædia Britannica."

By H. RAY LANKESTER, M.A. LL.D. F.R.S., Linacre Professor in the University of Oxford.
To which are added kindred Articles by other Naturalists.

In demy 8vo. cloth, 763 pages, and illustrated with 337 Wood Engravings, price 12s. 6d.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF MAMMALS, LIVING AND EXTINCT.

By Sir WILLIAM HENNY FLOWER, F.R.S., Director of the Natural History Departments, British Museum; and RICHARD LYDEKKER, B.A. F.G.S. F.R.S.
Cheaper Edition.

In demy 8vo. cloth, 730 pages, and illustrated with 320 Wood Engravings, price 12s. 6d.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF FISHES.

By ALBERT C. L. G. GUNTHER, M.A. M.D. Ph.D. F.R.S., Keeper of the Zoological Department in the British Museum.
Cheaper Edition.

In crown 8vo. cloth, illustrated, price 2s. 6d.
LIFE IN MOTION;
Or, Muscle and Nerve.

By JOHN GRAY M'KENDRICK, M.D. LL.D. F.R.S. F.R.C.P.E., Professor of Physiology in the University of Glasgow.
Cheaper Edition.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, W.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

3 vols. demy 8vo. 21s. 6d. net.

BURTON'S ANATOMY OF MELANCHOLY.

Edited by the Rev. A. R. SHILLETO, M.A. With an Introduction by A. H. BULLEN. Portraits and full Index. Bound in Irish linen, with design by Gleeson White.

Also a LARGE-PAPER EDITION of 110 Copies, on Hand-Made Paper. 41s. 3s. 6d. net.

"In this Edition for the first time the Quotations have been verified throughout, and References given where wanting, and the Text and Notes have been carefully revised."

"Admirers of Burton's 'Anatomy' can hardly hope for a better edition."—Morning Post.

"This is a long way in advance, from the critical point of view, of any edition of the 'Anatomy' yet published; while it has an equal advantage of all its predecessors in beauty. The print and paper are extremely good; and the binding, designed by Mr. Gleeson White, deserves the good and misused word 'elegant.'—Mr. GEORGE SAINTSBURY, in the St. James's Gazette.

"As we look through its quaint and delightful pages, we scarcely know whose reading and erudition inspire us with the greater astonishment and awe, that of Democritus, junior, or that of Mr. Shilleto. Mr. Bullen has supplied an excellent introduction, which not only contains a biographical sketch, but also gives a masterly summary of the whole work, as well as a thoughtful and well-balanced estimate of it as a literary production. The binding is neat and substantial, the paper excellent, and the print, though not large, beautifully clear. In short, everything that could be expected to have been done to make this in every respect the best edition yet given to the public of the 'Anatomy of Melancholy.'—Glasgow Herald.

Small crown 8vo. 4s. 6d. net.

TWO LIVES: a Poem. By Reginald FANSHAW.

Printed at the Chiswick Press, with binding designed by Gleeson White.

"No reader of this small volume, whether he be perplexed or delighted, can lay it down without a feeling of profound respect for the writer; no critic can read it without seeing that Mr. Fanshawe, so far from being the 'idle singer of an idle lay,' has endeavoured, through a record of his own experience of suffering, to teach in song a lesson worthy of the poet."—Spectator.

"Two Lives: a Poem,' by Reginald Fanshawe, is a book which arrests attention. One cannot read it without recognising its genuine poetic quality. The whole is pervaded by a lofty spirit of tenderness and strength. We shall look forward to another volume from the pen of this writer."—Scottish Leader.

"In conception, form, and expression this is an original poem. Mr. Fanshawe owns no master in the poetic art, and, though amply acknowledging the fascination of Tennyson's muse, he claims, like Swift, that what he writes is all his own. A singularly bold and stimulating poem."—Journal of Education.

NEW VOLUME OF THE "EX-LIBRIS" SERIES.

Imperial 16mo. Printed at the Chiswick Press.

ALBERT DÜRER'S LITTLE

PASSION. Printed from Stereotypes taken from the Original Woodblocks. With Introduction by AUSTIN DOBSON, and Photogravure Portrait of Dürer, 6s. net.

Also 18 Copies on Large Paper, 15s. net.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

A TREATISE ON WINES: their

Origin, Nature, and Varieties, with Practical Directions for Viticulture and Vinification. By J. L. W. THUDICHUM, M.D. F.R.C.P. (Lond.). Illustrated.

"The book, popular and readable though it is, is written with a care, learning, and fulness such as one seldom meets with in books of this kind written in any other language than the German, and any one interested in the subject may be recommended to read the work, as certain to find in it much interesting and instructive matter on all manners of Wines."—Scottsman.

NEW VOLUME OF THE CAMBRIDGE MATHEMATICAL SERIES.

THE ELEMENTS OF APPLIED

MATHEMATICS. Including Kinetics, Statics, and Hydrostatics. By C. M. JESSOP, M.A., late Fellow of Clare College, Cambridge, Lecturer in Mathematics in the Durham College of Science, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Although there are several well-written elementary text-books on this important subject, the present will hold a high place among them. It is well calculated to impart a thoroughly sound knowledge of mechanical principles to any student who conscientiously works through it."—Academy.

"Mr. Jessop is greatly to be congratulated on his very successful treatment of dynamics, statics, and hydrostatics, in this single volume of three hundred and forty-four pages. This book has been most carefully written, and is a great improvement on the average 'crash-books' on elementary mechanics."—Educational Times.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York-street, Covent-garden.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

Corelli.—BARABBAS: a Dream of the World's Tragedy. By MARIE

CORELLI, Author of 'A Romance of Two Worlds,' 'Vendetta,' &c. Third Edition. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 51s. 6d.

Miss Corelli's new romance has been received with much disapprobation by the secular papers, and with warm welcome by the religious papers. By the former she has been accused of blasphemy and bad taste; by the latter "the dignity of the conception" and the "elevating and devout character" of the book has been praised.

THIRTEENTH EDITION OF 'DODO.'

E. F. Benson.—DODO: a Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. Thirteenth

Edition. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

Few novels of late years have been so successful as 'Dodo.' In its two-volume form it passed through ten editions, and has attracted by its brilliance universal attention. The best critics have been cordial in their praise. The Guardian spoke of 'Dodo' as "unusually clever and interesting"; the Spectator called it "a delightfully witty sketch of society"; the Speaker said the dialogue was "a perpetual feast of epigram and paradox"; the Athenæum spoke of the author as "a writer of quite exceptional ability"; the Academy praised his "amazing cleverness"; the World said the book was "brilliantly written"; and half a dozen papers have declared that there was "not a dull page in the two volumes."

Gilchrist.—The STONE DRAGON. By MURRAY GILCHRIST. Crown 8vo.

buckram, 6s.

A volume of stories of power so weird and original as to ensure them a ready welcome.

Clark Russell.—A MARRIAGE at SEA. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Oscar Browning.—GUELPHS and Ghibellines: a Short History of Medieval Italy, A.D. 1250-1450. By OSCAR BROWNING, Fellow and Tutor of King's Coll., Cambridge. Cr. 8vo. 8s.

"A very able little book."—Westminster Gazette.

"We cannot speak too highly of this admirable work."—Westminster Review.

"A vivid picture of medieval Italy."—Standard.

MR. RUSKIN'S LIFE.

Collingwood.—JOHN RUSKIN: his Life and Work. By W. G. COLLINGWOOD,

M.A. With numerous Portraits and Sketches by Mr. Ruskin. Second Edition. 3 vols. 8vo. 33s.

"No more magnificent volumes have been published for a long time."—Times.

"This most lovingly written and most profoundly interesting book."—Daily News.

Dixon.—ENGLISH POETRY from BLAKE to BROWNING. By W. M.

DIXON, M.A. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Scholarly in conception, and full of sound and suggestive criticism."—Times.

"The book is remarkable for freshness of thought expressed in graceful language."—Manchester Examiner.

"Written in a sound philosophic spirit, and in a graceful, flowing style."—Irish Times.

"Subtle thought and a vigorous and graceful pen."—Dublin Express.

O'Grady.—The STORY of IRELAND. By STANDISH O'GRADY, Author of 'Finn and his Companions.' Small crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Novel and very fascinating history. Wonderfully alluring."—York Examiner.

"Most delightful, most stimulating. Its rare humour, its original imaginings, its perfectly unique history, make it one of the freshest, breeziest volumes."—Manchester Times.

"A most sane and vigorous attempt to give a truthful and really unbiased view of Irish history."—Manchester Guardian.

"A survey as once graphic, acute, and quietly written."—Times.

Scott.—THE MAGIC HOUSE, and other Verses. By DUNCAN C. SCOTT.

Extra post 8vo. bound in buckram, 5s.

"They evince a great command of really splendid and picturesque poetic phrase."—Guardian.

Ibsen.—BRAND. A Drama by HENRIK IBSEN. Translated by WILLIAM WILSON.

Second and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"The greatest world-poem of the nineteenth century next to 'Faust.' 'Brand' will have an astonishing interest for Englishmen. It is in the same set with 'Agamemnon,' with 'Lear,' with the literature that we now instinctively regard as high and holy."—Daily Chronicle.

Jenks.—WALPOLE. A Study in Politics. By EDWARD JENKS, M.A. Crown 8vo.

boards, 1s.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION SERIES.—New Volumes.

A MANUAL of ELECTRICAL SCIENCE. By GEORGE J. BURCH, M.A. With numerous Illustrations. 3s. A Practical, Popular, and Full Handbook.

"Solid, sound, and free from technicality."—Scottsman.

"There are few, if any, books in which so much information is imparted in a more popular manner."—Nature.

A TEXT-BOOK of AGRICULTURAL BOTANY. By M. C. POTTER, M.A.

F.L.S. Illustrated. 3s. 6d.

"Professor Potter is endowed with the art of lucid expression."—Speaker.

"One of the best text-books that has come under our notice. It is admirably illustrated."—Newcastle Chronicle.

The CHEMISTRY of FIRE. By M. M. PATTISON MUIR, M.A. Illustrated. 2s. 6d.

An Exposition of the Elementary Principles of Chemistry.

"A charming book, with thoroughness in exposition and closeness in scientific reasoning."—Bristol Mercury.

"The book will yield more instruction than a hundred others of the same size."—Manchester Guardian.

The VAULT of HEAVEN. A Popular Introduction to Astronomy. By R. A.

GREGORY. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"One of the most useful guides to astronomy which has come under our notice. Simply written, and of remarkable accuracy."—Birmingham Gazette.

"A model of a book."—Glasgow Herald.

"An admirable introduction to modern physical astronomy."—Nature.

METEOROLOGY. The Elements of Weather and Climate. By H. N. DICKSON, F.R.S.E. F.R.Met.Soc. Illustrated. 3s. 6d.

"A useful, compact, and dependable treatise."—Scottsman.

"An admirable text-book and a sufficient introduction to the science of weather."—Daily Telegraph.

METHUEN'S COMMERCIAL SERIES.

A MANUAL of FRENCH COMMERCIAL CORRESPONDENCE. By S. E.

BALLY, Modern Language Master at the Manchester Grammar School. Crown 8vo. 2s.

"The best arranged and most compact and comprehensive manual we know."—Guardian.

COMMERCIAL GEOGRAPHY, with Special Reference to Trade Routes,

New Markets, and Manufacturing Districts. By L. D. LYDE, M.A., of The Academy, Glasgow. 2s.

"A thoroughly commendable handbook on a subject of immense importance."—Freeman's Journal.

"Readable, up to date, and in some respects original."—Guardian.

"One of the best geographicals with which we are acquainted."—Birmingham Post.

METHUEN & CO. 18, Bury-street, W.C.

GEORGE ALLEN'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

WILL BE PUBLISHED IN APRIL.

A NEW WORK BY JOHN RUSKIN.

VERONA, and OTHER LECTURES. Delivered principally at the Royal and London Institutions between 1870 and 1893. Illustrated with Frontispiece in colour and about 11 Photogravure Plates from Drawings by the Author. Medium 8vo. 15s. cloth.

This volume consists of five chapters, four of which were prepared by the Author to be delivered as Lectures during his tenure of the Blado Professorship at Oxford, and one has been written since his resignation.

There will be 250 Large-Paper Copies on Arnold's Unbleached Hand-made Paper, with India Proofs of Plates, large post 4to. 30s.

JUST OUT.

The LIFE and LETTERS of THOMAS PELHAM DALE

(sometime Rector of St. Vedast, Foster-lane, City, London). Edited by his Daughter, HELEN PELHAM DALE. With 4 Photogravure Portraits, 6 Plates in Colour from Mr. Dale's own Sketches, Facsimiles of Letters from John Wesley, and other Illustrations.

The Volumes contain, in addition to the Notes on his Father, the late Dean Dale:—

A Complete History of the Ritual Prosecution in all its phases, and the consequent Imprisonment of Mr. Dale—A Description of his Hebrew Studies—An Account of his Scientific Studies, by Dr. J. H. Gladstone—Also Letters from the late Bishop Forbes, Canons Pusey and Liddon, &c.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.; about 650 pages.

There is a limited Edition of 250 Copies on Large Paper, with India Proofs of Plates, crown 4to. 20s. net.

By AUGUSTUS J. C. HARE,

Author of 'Memorials of a Quiet Life,' 'Walks in Rome,' &c.

The STORY of TWO NOBLE LIVES: CHARLOTTE, COUNTESS

CANNING, and LOUISA, MARCHIONESS of WATERFORD. In 3 vols. of about 450 pages each. Crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

The Illustrations consist of 2 Portraits engraved on Steel, 9 Portraits in Photogravure, 21 Plates in Photogravure from Lady Waterford's Drawings, 8 Full-Page Wood Engravings, and 24 Woodcuts from Sketches by the Author, &c.

The Special Large-Paper Edition consists of 300 Copies, with India Proofs of the Plates. Crown 4to. £3 3s. net.

The Embassy at Paris in the Time of Louis XVIII. and Louis Philippe—Life of Lord and Lady Waterford in Ireland—The Famine and Rebellion, &c.—The Story of the Indian Mutiny, as told in Lady Canning's Letters and Journals, &c.—Lady Waterford's Art-Work—Recollections of her Conversations—Visits from and to the Royal Family, &c.

By Sir HENRY ACLAND.

The OXFORD MUSEUM. With Letters from JOHN RUSKIN. A

Reissue, with New Preface by Sir HENRY ACLAND, and a Message from Mr. RUSKIN. With New Photogravure Portrait of Mr. Ruskin taken in August, 1893, an Engraving of one of the Museum Capitals, and a New Plan. Crown 8vo. cloth, 4s. net.

There are 150 Large-Paper Copies on Hand-made Paper, half-parchment. Crown 4to. 10s. 6d. net.

A NEW COMPLETE EDITION OF

HANS ANDERSEN'S STORIES and FAIRY TALES. With an entirely New Translation by H. OSKAR SOMMER, Ph.D. Illustrated with over 100 Pictures and newly designed Initial Letters by Arthur J. Gaskin, Master at the Birmingham School of Art. In 2 vols. of 410 and 440 pages. Large crown 8vo. 6s. each. Sold separately.

A few of the Large-Paper Copies on a Special Make of Arnold's Unbleached Hand-made Paper still remain. Crown 4to. 43s. net. The two vols. not sold separately.

"Much the most luxuriously equipped translation of Andersen's delightful stories that has yet appeared. The paper is pleasant to touch, the print pleasant to read, and the illustrations are excellent. The translation is eminently readable, and the book so delightfully set forth that it is a joy to have it in the hand."—Athenæum.

"The pictures by Mr. Gaskin are quite unlike those of any other edition. They are woodcuts such as we see in early printed books, with the strong lines and compact composition which descended from illuminations."—Guardian.

SELECTIONS from the WRITINGS of JOHN RUSKIN. In 2 vols. small post 8vo. (sold separately), cloth, 6s. each; roan, gilt edges, 8s. 6d. each.

A few of the Large-Paper Copies, on Arnold's Unbleached Hand-made Paper, with Portraits on India Paper, still remain, 30s. the two vols., not sold separately.

The First Series (from Works written between 1843 and 1860), with Engraved Portrait after George Richmond's Picture, and an Index, 640 pages, deals with Scenes of Travel, Characteristics of Nature, Painting and Poetry, Painters and Pictures, Architecture and Sculpture, Ethical and Didactic Subjects.

The Second Series (from Works written between 1860 and 1888), with Photogravure Portrait from a recent Photograph, and an Index, 500 pages, treats on Art, Education, Ethics, Economy, Religion.

BY JOHN RUSKIN.

Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. each; roan, gilt edges, 10s. each.

Complete with all the Plates.

The SEVEN LAMPS of ARCHITECTURE. The 14 Plates for this Edition have been specially prepared from the larger work. Fourth Edition.

ARATRA PENTELICI: Seven

Lectures on the Elements of Sculpture. With 1 Engraving on Steel and 20 Autotype Plates.

VAL D'ARNO: Ten Lectures on Art of the Thirteenth Century in Pisa and Florence. With 1 Steel Engraving and 13 Autotype Plates.

ARIADNE FLORENTINA: Six

Lectures on Wood and Metal Engraving, and Appendix. With 4 Full-Page Facsimiles from Holbein's 'Dance of Death,' and 12 Autotype Plates.

LECTURES on ARCHITECTURE and PAINTING. Delivered at Edinburgh in November, 1863. With 15 Full-Page Illustrations drawn by the Author.

MODERN PAINTERS. In 5 vols.

with all the Woodcuts, 1 Lithograph, and the 66 Full-Page Steel Engravings, besides 3 hitherto unpublished. The Text is that of the 1873 Edition, with all the Author's subsequent Notes, and a New Epilogue. Cloth, 6s. 6d. the 5 vols. imperial 8vo.

The STONES of VENICE. Complete

Edition. (Imperial 8vo.) 3 vols. with the 53 Plates and the Text as originally issued, and Index. Cloth, 4l. 4s. the 3 vols.

EXAMPLES of the ARCHITECTURE of VENICE. With the Text and the 16 Plates as originally published. Cloth cover (unbound), atlas folio (about 25 in. by 17 in.), 2l. 2s.

The STONES of VENICE: Selections for the Use of Travellers. 2 vols. cloth, 8s. each. Fifth Edition.

The POETRY of ARCHITECTURE;

or, the Architecture of the Nations of Europe considered in its Association with Natural Scenery and National Character.

A Prose Work in One Volume of 280 pages, with Chromo-lithograph Frontispiece, 14 Plates in Photogravure from unpublished Drawings by the Author, and 9 Full-Page and other new Woodcuts. 4to. cloth, 21s.

SESAME and LILIES. A Small

Complete Edition, containing the Three Lectures, 'King's Treasures,' 'Queen's Gardens,' and 'The Mystery of Life,' with long Preface and New Index. Crown 8vo. cloth, 8s.; roan, gilt edges, 7s. 6d.

ST. MARK'S REST. The History of Venice, written for the help of the few Travellers who still care for her Monuments. 12mo. complete in cloth, 8s.

GUIDE to PICTURES in the ACADEMY of FINE ARTS, VENICE. New Complete Edition, Revised and Corrected. In One Part. 8vo. 1s.

MORNINGS in FLORENCE. Being

Simple Studies of Christian Art, for English Travellers. Third Edition, 12mo. cloth 4s.

THE BIBLE of AMIENS. A Guide to Amiens Cathedral. Being a Pocket Edition of Chapter IV. from the larger Work. Second Edition. Red leatherette, 12mo. 10d.

RUSKIN HOUSE, 156, CHARING CROSS-ROAD (Oxford-street End), LONDON; and at ORPINGTON.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW LIST.

NEW VOLUME OF THE CAMDEN LIBRARY.

On fine paper, with rough edges, at 6s. per vol. On fine paper, bound in Roxburghe, with gilt top, 7s. 6d. net. Large-Paper Copies (fifty only), on Hand-made Paper and bound in Roxburghe, with gilt top, 21s. net.

WEST IRISH FOLK TALES AND ROMANCES.

With Specimens of the Gaelic Originals in Three Dialects Phonetically Spelt. Collected and Translated by W.M. LAMHINE. Being the Third Volume of the CAMDEN LIBRARY.

The former Volumes in the Camden Library are:—

Vol. II. SCULPTURED and STORIED SIGNS and INSCRIPTIONS of HISTORIC LONDON.

By PHILIP NORMAN.

Vol. I. The ANTIQUITIES and CURIOSITIES of the EXCHEQUER.

By HUBERT HALL, F.S.A., of H.M.'s Public Record Office. With Illustrations by Ralph Nevill, F.S.A., and an Introduction by Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS ON THE CAMDEN LIBRARY.

"The facts and anecdotes which are woven into the pages are curious, and no doubt will be perfectly new to many readers."—Public Opinion.

"Immensely superior to the ordinary kind of serial handbooks....Full of valuable information which cannot easily be found elsewhere."—St. James's Gazette.

"This book, which is printed on delightful paper and in most enjoyable type, affords a rich feast for the antiquarian. It is not only full of information, but is lively, and abounds in quaint stories."—Cambridge Independent Press.

"Where everything is so valuable and entertaining, there is no necessity for special selection or indication....The series will be a godsend to lovers of antiquarian lore."—Glasgow Herald.

"Contains great wealth of information, every item of which belongs to the category of 'things not generally known.' It does great credit to the persevering industry, discrimination, and literary skill of its author....The book is admirably produced and indexed, and is readable throughout."—London Telegraph.

"The illustrations, which are always well chosen, have been very carefully reproduced. 'The Camden Library' ought to be popular alike with scholars and with the wider general public."—Scottish Leader.

In tasteful demy 8vo. printed on fine paper and appropriately bound, 7s. 6d.; Large-Paper Copies, 21s. net.

TENNYSON AND HIS PRE-RAPHAELITE ILLUSTRATORS:

A Book about a Book. With several hitherto unpublished illustrations. By GEORGE SOMES LAYARD, Author of 'Life and Letters of Charles Keene, of France,' &c.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ODITER DICTA.' SECOND EDITION. In fcap. 8vo. tastefully printed and bound in olive cloth, uniform with 'Oditer Dicta,' 6s. Also 50 Large-Paper Copies, 21s. net. Only Two or Three Copies left.

ESSAYS ABOUT MEN, WOMEN, AND BOOKS.

By AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Q.C. M.P.

"Mr. Birrell's light and easy style well befits his generally kindly judgments. A very entertaining and handy little book for leisurely reading."—Times.

"Very sprightly and facile are all the various judgments which he passes on the men and women included in this volume."—Daily Telegraph.

"These essays have a charming individuality of manner not self-conscious and affected, but spontaneous, or if artificial, artificial with the art which conceals art. It is when discussing of bookish matters that Mr. Birrell is at his best. He has the faculty of enjoying greatly and yet of interesting the enjoyment of others."—Globe.

In tasteful crown 8vo. appropriately bound, 6s.
MEDIEVAL MUSIC.

An Historical Sketch with Musical Illustrations by ROBERT CHAS. HOPE, F.S.A. F.R.S.L., Author of 'English Holy Wells.'

Contents:—The Early Music of Greece—The Musical Systems of Egypt—The Later Musical System of Greece—The Christian Era—St. Gregory, his Influence on the Music of the Church—Introduction of the Organ into the West—Medieval System of Music—Uses of Milan and Rome—System of Huicard—Account of Descant, Notation Chords—Guido Arezzo—Measured Music—Birth of Modern Music.

London: ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row.

OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

TO BE PUBLISHED NEXT WEEK.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

LIFE'S LITTLE IRONIES,

A SET OF TALES;

WITH

SOME COLLOQUIAL SKETCHES,

ENTITLED

A FEW CRUSTED CHARACTERS.

By THOMAS HARDY.

MRS. ALEXANDER'S NEW NOVEL.

A WARD IN CHANCERY.

2 vols. crown 8vo.

[Ready at the Libraries in a few days.]

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES,

SOME EVERY-DAY FOLKS.

By EDEN PHILLPOTTS, Author of 'Folly and Fresh Air.'

3 vols. crown 8vo.

Dedicated by special permission to
H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.
MASTERS OF FRENCH MUSIC. By

ARTHUR HERVEY. With Portraits. Crown 8vo.
cloth extra, 5s.

These Volumes form the Two Issues of the Series "MASTERS OF CONTEMPORARY MUSIC." The Third Volume, 'MASTERS OF GERMAN MUSIC,' by J. A. FULLER MAITLAND, uniform with the above, is in the press.

MASTERS OF ENGLISH MUSIC.

By CHARLES WILLBY.

With Portraits.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 5s.

The LIFE of MARIE ANTOINETTE. By Maxime de la Rocheterie. With 27 Portraits. 3 vols. cloth extra, 21s.

"We observe that the original of this book has been commended by the French Academy, and it would be hard to find in modern French literature a work that is better worth translating than this is. The translation is a careful and good one. No life of Marie Antoinette that has yet been published is as good as that of M. de la Rocheterie."—Spectator.

TWINING'S INDIA. Being Notes and Reminiscences by Thomas Twining, a Civil Servant of the Honourable East India Company. Edited by the Rev. WILLIAM H. G. TWINING, Vicar of St. Stephen's, Westminster. With Portrait and Map. Demy 8vo. 16s.

The Saturday Review says:—"One of the most interesting and instructive of narratives, illustrative of native decline and fall and early English civilisation, which it has ever been our good fortune to read."

"I can most strongly recommend the book to you as giving a singularly vivid and impartial picture of India a century ago."—Truth.

ALTHEA; being Dialogues on Aspirations and Duties. By Vernon Lee.
Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The Times says:—"The dialogues are full of charm, alike for their grace of style, their masculine reach of thought, their intellectual sobriety and serenity, and their lofty ethical tone."

NOW WORK BY THE BISHOP OF DERRY.

EVIDENCES of CHRISTIANITY. Primary Convictions. Being Lectures on the Evidences of Christianity. By WILLIAM ALEXANDER, D.D., Hon. D.C.L. Oxon., Hon. LL.D. Dublin, Lord Bishop of Derry and Raphoe. Large 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

"This volume is a boon to his admirers. Here is the Bishop of Derry enshrined with his ability and his eloquence."—Spectator.

MIVART'S ELEMENTS OF SCIENCE. An Introduction to the Elements of Science. By ST. GEORGE MIVART, F.R.S. Handsomely illustrated. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s. Uniform with 'Types of Animal Life.'

POPULAR SERIES OF SHORT STORIES BY BRITISH AUTHORS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

1. IN A NORTH COUNTRY VILLAGE.

2. SIX COMMON THINGS. By E. F. Benson, Author of 'Dodo.' Third Edition.

NOW READY.

3. The LITTLE WIDOW. By William Tirebuck, Author of 'Dorrie,' &c.

London: OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO, 45, Albemarle-street.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NOVELS AND STORIES.

SECOND EDITION.

LIKE a SISTER. By MADELINE CRICHTON. In 3 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The PEOPLE says:—"We predict for her a prosperous career. She writes good English, and works out her plot with considerable skill."

THE NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'GOOD DAMN FORTUNE.'
WHAT HAPPENED at MORWYN. By MARIA A. HOYER. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"It is refreshing to take up so bright and wholesome a story as 'What Happened at Morwyn,' and one written in a style so fresh and natural. Its heroine realises as nearly as may be Wordsworth's famous description of woman as she should be..... cordially recommending it to our readers."

NEW MILITARY NOVEL.

DEFERRED PAY; or, a Major's Dilemma. By Lieut. Colonel W. H. M'CAUSLAND. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The WHITEHALL REVIEW says:—"Will well repay perusal, and will be found of extreme interest to all Service readers."

THE NEW SOCIETY NOVEL.

FIRST LARGEST EDITION EXHAUSTED, SECOND NOW READY.

UPPER BOHEMIANS: a Romance. By F. G. WALPOLE, Author of 'Lord Flogsham.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MORNING POST says:—"An entertaining book, by a clever man of the world. Bright sketches of men and things here and abroad. The author's pictures of Roman society are excellent."

FIRST EDITION SOLD, SECOND NOW READY.

WEST CLIFF: a Romance of Portland Isle. By EASTON KING. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MANCHESTER EXAMINER says:—"It is an intensely interesting and very well-written book, which we can heartily recommend."

EDWIN ELLIOTT'S SUCCESSFUL NOVEL.

NETTA. By EDWIN ELLIOTT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The ACADEMY says:—"Mr. Elliott is to be welcomed..... A quite excellent story. Style..... so good..... Not only is the interest permanently sustained, but passages of dramatic vividness detain the reader."

FIFTH EDITION NEARLY EXHAUSTED, SIXTH IN PREPARATION.

DR. JANET of HARLEY STREET. By Dr. ARABELLA KENNELLY, Author of 'Molly and her Man-o'-War.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'IN A MOMENT OF PASSION.'

BABETTE VIVIAN: a Novel. By CHRISTEL. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MANCHESTER EXAMINER says:—"A good plot and some pleasant characters..... It is certainly a good novel, likely to be enjoyed by all who read it."

"ZORG": a Story of British Guiana. By VERNON KIRKE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

PUBLIC OPINION says:—"After starting to read 'Zorg' one will not put it down until the book is finished. The novel is a promising one. The character of Sernia Gordon is cleverly drawn; indeed, all the characters are depicted in a natural and lifelike manner."

HER ANGEL FRIEND. By MONICA TREGARTHEN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Just out.]

MARIA, COUNTESS of SALETTO. From the Italian of R. ARSIB, by SYDNEY KING. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Just out.]

An animated, interesting, and vivid picture of Modern Italian Society.

MARIANELA. From the Spanish of B. PEREZ GALDOS. By MARY WHARTON, Translator of 'Lady Perfecta,' from the same Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MANCHESTER GUARDIAN says:—"Modern Spanish fiction is not well known to English readers, and there is a consequent freshness in 'Marianela.' Incidentally to the story questions of more than passing importance are discussed with originality and sympathy."

BJÖRNSON AND TURGENIEFF.

The BRIDAL MARCH. From the Norwegian of BJÖRNSON; and The WATCH. From the Russian of IVAN TURGENIEFF. Translated by JOHN EVAN WILLIAMS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The LITERARY WORLD says:—"The Bridal March,' with its vivid descriptions, will be read with interest..... Charmingly told, the characters are skillfully drawn, and stand out in strong relief. 'The Watch' is replete with vigorous touches and wholly original. It exhibits the writer's peculiar gift of character drawing, supplemented by effective descriptive power."

The HERO of the "PELICAN": an Ocean Drama. By PERCY DE LISLE. Crown 8vo. pictorial cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just out.]

The GIRL MUSICIAN. By MIRIAM YOUNG. With Full-Page Illustrations by Matthew Stetch. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
The LIVERPOOL MERCURY says:—"This is a very pleasing story. The book is quite delightful."

The PURSUIT of a CHIMERA: being a Mid-winter's Day Dream. By C. ELVY COPE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"Much of the drama is singularly dream-like, and the mingling of fancy and oddity shows an excellent simulation of genuine dreaming..... The story is presented with considerable power."

The VENETIAN SECRET; or, the Art of the Past. By CHARLES LUTYENS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"His characters are agreeably drawn, and are neatly differentiated without any traces of exaggeration."

The OLD HOUSE of RAYNER, &c. By GRINLEY HILL. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"Eminently readable..... Written to entertain..... Fulfil their object very adequately."

CLENCHED ANTAGONISMS. By LEWIS IRAM. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"A powerful and ghastly narrative of the triumph of force over virtue."
The FANITY FAIR says:—"Lewis Iram is original, unconventional, powerful, and interesting."
The SOCIETY says:—"An exceedingly able and enthralling story."

DR. WEEDON'S WAIF. By KATE SOMERS. Illustrated with Full-Page Drawings by MATTHEW STETCH. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
The FANITY FAIR says:—"One of the prettiest and most touching stories we have read for a long time."

BUT: a Domestic Sketch. By BACHELOR ABBOTSFORD. Illustrated throughout with numerous Drawings. Crown 8vo. picture cover, 1s.
The SCOTSMAN says:—"It draws its fun from the adventures of a bachelor among children. It is lightly written and illustrated."

The STRANGE ADVENTURES of a YOUNG LADY of QUALITY, 1765. By DOROTHEA TOWNSHEND. Crown 8vo. paper cover, 1s.
The GUARDIAN says:—"The story is pleasantly written, the spirit and manners—wild and occasionally stately—of the time are well without being overdrawn, and the language is fresh and plucky."

NEW WORKS.

SIXTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE AS AN IRISH LANDLORD.

Memoirs of JOHN HAMILTON, D.L., of St. Brann's, Donegal.

Edited, with Introduction, by Rev. H. O. WHITE, late Chaplain, Paris.

With Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The TIMES says:—"Much valuable light on the real history of Ireland and of the Irish agrarian question in the present century is thrown by a very interesting volume, entitled..... This very instructive volume."

THE STANDARD WORK ON AUTHORSHIP.

The AUTHOR'S MANUAL. By PERCY RUSSELL. With Prefatory Remarks by Mr. GLADSTONE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s. Sixth Edition. With Portrait.

The WESTMINSTER REVIEW says:—"A very complete manual and guide for journalist and author..... It is not merely a practical work—it is literary and as appreciative of literature in its best sense..... We have little else but praise for the volume."

NEW POETRY.

SOME TRANSLATIONS from CHARLES BAUDELAIRE, POET and SYMBOLIST. By H. C. With Portrait. Fcap. 8vo. elegant parchment, 2s. 6d.

The TIMES says:—"Are executed with no little metrical skill and command of poetic diction."

BRUCE'S HEART, and other Poems. By EDWARD TOOVEY WELLS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just out.]

DIGBY, LONG & CO., Publishers, 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

J. & A. CHURCHILL'S LIST.

A TREATISE on HYGIENE and PUBLIC HEALTH. Edited by THOMAS STEVENSON, M.D., and SHIRLEY P. MURPHY. In 3 vols. royal 8vo. fully illustrated. Vols. I. and II. now ready, 28s. and 22s.

The writers of the various articles of this work are leading authorities on their respective subjects.

PARKES' MANUAL of PRACTICAL HYGIENE. Edited by J. LANE NOTTER, M.D., Professor of Military Hygiene in the Army Medical School, Netley. Eighth Edition, with 10 Plates and 103 Wood Engravings. 8vo. 12s.

HANDBOOK of HYGIENE and SANITARY SCIENCE. By GEORGE WILSON, M.D. D.P.H. F.R.S.E. Seventh Edition, greatly enlarged, and for the most part rewritten. Crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION. By F. TREVEY, F.R.S. Contents:—Exercise, Fatigue, Training, Walking, Running, Jumping, Skating, Riding, Swimming, Fencing, Boxing, Boating, Cycling, Gymnastics, Games. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

CHEMICAL TECHNOLOGY; or, Chemistry in its Applications to Arts and Manufactures. Edited by CHAS. HD. GROVES, F.R.S., and WM. THORP, B.Sc. Vol. I. FURL. By E. J. MILLS, D.Sc. F.R.S., and P. J. KOWAN, C.E. With more than 600 illustrations, royal 8vo. 34s.

WAGNER'S MANUAL of CHEMICAL TECHNOLOGY. Second English Edition. Translated and Edited by WM. CROOKES, F.R.S., from the Thirteenth Enlarged German Edition as Remodelled by Dr. FERDINAND FISCHER. With 592 Engravings, royal 8vo. 32s.

PRACTICAL CHEMISTRY and QUALITATIVE ANALYSIS. Specially adapted for Colleges and Schools. By FRANK CLOWES, D.Sc., Professor of Chemistry in University College, Nottingham. Fifth Edition. With 57 Engravings, post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

QUANTITATIVE CHEMICAL ANALYSIS. Adapted for the Laboratories of Colleges and Schools. By FRANK CLOWES, D.Sc. Lond., and J. BERNARD COLEMAN. Second Edition, much enlarged. With 94 Engravings, 8vo. 6s.

VALENTIN'S QUALITATIVE CHEMICAL ANALYSIS. Edited by W. R. HODGKINSON, Ph.D. F.R.S.E., Professor of Chemistry and Physics in the Royal Military Academy and Artillery College, Woolwich. Eighth Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 8vo. 6s. 6d. (The Tables separately, 2s. 6d.)

BLOXAM'S LABORATORY TEACHING; or, Progressive Exercises in Practical Chemistry. Edited by A. G. BLOXAM, the Goldsmiths' Institute, New Cross. Sixth Edition, Revised and much enlarged. With 90 Woodcuts, 8vo. 6d.

COOLEY'S CYCLOPEDIA of PRACTICAL RECEIPTS, and Collateral Information in the Arts, Manufactures, Professions, and Trades, including Medicine, Pharmacy, Domestic Economy, and Hygiene, designed as a Comprehensive Supplement to the Pharmacopœia, and General Book of Reference for the Manufacturer, Tradesman, and Head of a Family. Edited by W. NORTH, M.A. F.R.S., assisted by several Scientific Contributors. With 370 Illustrations, 2 vols. royal 8vo. 42s.

The MICROSCOPE and its REVELATIONS. By the late W. B. CARPENTER, M.D. F.R.S. Edited by the Rev. W. H. DALLINGHAM, LL.D. F.R.S. Seventh Edition. With 800 Engravings in the Text and 21 Plates, of which several are Coloured, 8vo. cloth, 24s.; half-cloth, 30s.

A MANUAL for HOSPITAL NURSES and OTHERS ENGAGED in ATTENDING on the SICK. By EDWARD J. DOMVILLE, Surgeon to the Devon and Exeter Hospital. Seventh Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

A MANUAL of NURSING, MEDICAL and SURGICAL. By CHARLES J. CULLINGWORTH, M.D. F.R.C.P., Obstetric Physician to St. Thomas's Hospital. Third Edition. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

AMBULANCE LECTURES, to which is added a Nursing Lecture, given under the auspices of the St. John Ambulance Association. By JOHN M. H. MARTIN, M.D., Honorary Surgeon, Blackburn and East Lancashire Infirmary. Third Edition. With 60 Engravings, crown 8vo. 2s.

CHAVASSE'S ADVICE to a MOTHER on the MANAGEMENT of her CHILDREN, and on the Treatment on the moment of their more pressing Illnesses and Accidents. Fourteenth Edition (200th Thousand). 3s. 6d.

CHAVASSE'S ADVICE to a WIFE on the MANAGEMENT of her own HEALTH, and on the Treatment of some of the Complaints incidental to Pregnancy, Labour, and Suckling. With an Introductory Chapter specially addressed to a Young Wife. Twelfth Edition (250th Thousand). 2s. 6d.

A SHORT DICTIONARY of MEDICAL TERMS. 2s. 6d.

London: J. & A. CHURCHILL,
11, New Burlington-street.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

NEW VOLUME OF BISHOP CREIGHTON'S 'HISTORY OF THE PAPACY: HISTORY OF THE PAPACY DURING THE REFORMATION.

By MANDELL CREIGHTON, D.D.

Bishop of Peterborough.

Vol. V. (1517-1537). The GERMAN REVOLT. 8vo. 15s.

* Vols. I. and II., 1370-1404, 32s. Vols. III. and IV., 1404-1515, 24s.

NEW NOVEL BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE:

BRING THE MEMOIRS OF GASTON DE BONNE, SIEUR DE MARSAC.

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN,

Author of 'The House of the Wolf.'

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION, with Frontispiece and Vignette by H. J. Ford. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"This is, in fact, quite the best historical romance that has appeared for some years. It is full of sensation, and the adventures hang very naturally upon the hero. Never since D'Artagnan was there a better swordsman." Fall Melt Gazette.

"One of the best novels of adventure which has appeared for years possessing a power to seize the imagination and to stir the heart which is full of brilliant augury for the future." Manchester Guardian.

DISCOVERY of LAKES RUDOLF and STEFANIE: an Account of Count SAMUEL TELINKI'S Exploring and Hunting Expedition in Eastern Equatorial Africa in 1887 and 1888. By his Companion, Lieutenant LUDWIG VON HOHNEL. Translated by NANCY BELL (L. D'ANVERS). With 170 Illustrations and 2 large and 4 small Coloured Maps. 3 vols. 8vo. 42s.

"Sport, discovery, and science contribute in this narrative to form a book of surpassing interest The result is that a book which is full of exciting adventures with wild beasts and wild men in a strange country yields also in every chapter matter which the geographer, the naturalist, and the anthropologist will account of solid and peculiar value." Westman.

ST. ANDREWS. By ANDREW LANG. With 8 Plates and 24 Illustrations in the Text by T. Hodge. 8vo. 15s. net.

"Considering how small a place St. Andrews is, it is wonderful how much has of late been written about it. The latest volume is Mr. Andrew Lang's. It had to be bright and charming, coming from that pen; but not every one will quite take in how much vital, weighty, and important truth is given there in the liveliest fashion, in pages which sparkle and effervesce." A. K. H. B. in Longman's Magazine.

The ELEMENTS of ENGLISH CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY

from the EARLIEST TIME to the PRESENT DAY. By P. C. MONTAGUE, M.A., Professor of History, University College, London, late Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

TALES of a NOMAD; or, Sport and Strife. By CHARLES MONTAGUE.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

"These stories of 'sport and strife' are brief, vivid, and exciting. South Africa is the scene of Mr. Montague's stirring experiences, and he has seen much hard fighting, pursued game of very various kinds, and now tells the story of his adventurous wanderings with much spirit and skill." Times.

AUSTRALIA AS IT IS; or, Facts and Features, Sketches and Incidents of Australia and Australian Life. With Notices of New Zealand. By a CLEGGYMAN, Thirteen Years Resident in the Interior of New South Wales. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s.

POLITICS in a DEMOCRACY: an Essay. By DANIEL GREENLEAF

THOMPSON, Author of 'A System of Psychology,' &c. Crown 8vo. 5s.

* In this book the Author gives some account of the methods of Government in a Democracy as exemplified by that of the United States.

LEONIDAS POLK: Bishop and General. By WILLIAM M. POLK,

M.D. LL.D. With Maps and Illustrations. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

* After thirteen years' work as a Missionary Bishop of the American Episcopal Church, the subject of this memoir accepted an important command in the Confederate Army, and after three years' service was killed in action.

PICTURES in PROSE of NATURE, WILD SPORT, and HUMBLE

LIFE. By AUBYN Trevor BATTER, B.A. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Contents.—With Cart of the Hill—Three Fish—Memories—A Child of the People—Canvey Island—In the Land of the Great Spirit—In Norfolk by the Sea—The Witch in Kent—Oxford: The Upper River—Upon a Day—The Procession of Spring—Vesper.

FARADAY as a DISCOVERER. By JOHN TYNDALL. Fifth Edition.

With 2 Portraits. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

* This Edition contains a new Preface written by Prof. Tyndall shortly before his death.

The ONE GOOD GUEST: a Story. By L. B. WALFORD. New

and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Mrs. Walford has never written a pleasanter novel." Spectator.

"A story so full of the best human nature that it is vastly pleasant to read, and equally grateful to remember." National Observer.

WHAT NECESSITY KNOWS. By L. DOUGALL, Author of 'Beggars

All,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"One of the most thoughtful and impressive novels of the season. It is a book which grows upon the reader. Its descriptive passages, its curious glimpses of out-of-the-way life, its quiet but vigorous handling of character, all make it a story of no common order." Yorkshire Post.

EPOCHS of INDIAN HISTORY.—NEW VOLUME.

Edited by JOHN ADAM, M.A., Principal of Pachalyappa's College, and Fellow of the University, Madras.

The MUHAMMADANS; or, the History of Hindustan (including Bengal) to the time of Warren Hastings and the Regulating Act (1773). By J. D. REES, C.I.B., of the Madras Civil Service. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. New York: 15, East 16th-street.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

LADY WILLIAM. By Mrs. Oliphant. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"Mrs. Oliphant's last book, 'Lady William,' is mainly a study of a charming woman, and in this respect is equal to, if not better than, anything she has written. It is pleasant reading from start to finish."
FALL MALL GAZETTE.—"It is as restful, and soothing, and healthy as are certain sane-minded, even-tempered people met with all too seldom in every-day life."

RICHARD ESCOTT. By Edward H. Cooper, Author of 'Geoffrey

HAMILTON. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

STANDARD.—"A book that will not easily be put down till it is finished."

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"There is not an ill-written page in it."

ATHENÆUM.—"The weakness and pain and the dreadful spiritual isolation and loneliness in one who had been at least strong in evil-doing are well divined and interpreted."

DAGONET the JESTER. By Malcolm Kingsley Macmillan.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

*. This story was published anonymously in 1836, but is now (1894) reissued under the author's name.

ACADEMY.—"One of the most excellently conceived tales we are acquainted with."

LITERARY CHURCHMAN.—"A fresh and pleasant tale."

SYLVIE and BRUNO CONCLUDED. By Lewis Carroll. With

Illustrations by Harry Furness. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

GUARDIAN.—"As for the fairy tale itself, it is delightful.....There are many passages in which the author's inimitable topsy-turvydom is at its best."

SCOTSMAN.—"The book is likely to be as great a favourite with children as any of its author's former productions. For readers who are grown up—be must be a misanthropical, bilious, and abandoned wretch whom its whims, fancies, and follies will not heartily amuse."

CHAPTERS on GREEK DRESS. By Maria Millington Evans.

With Illustrations. 8vo. 3s. net.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"For its narrow space Lady Evans's book is a most useful account of her subject."

TIMES.—"Her work is done in a manner which is at once thoroughly scholarly and thoroughly practical."

EURIPIDES in ENGLISH VERSE. By Arthur S. Way, M.A.,

Author of 'The Iliad of Homer Done into English Verse,' and 'The Odyssey of Homer Done into English Verse.'
ALCESTIS; HECUBA; MEDEA. Crown 8vo. sewed, 1s. 6d. each.

TALES of the CIVIL WAR from CÆSAR'S COMMENTARIES.

Adapted for the use of Beginners. With Vocabulary, Notes, and Exercises. By C. H. KENNEDY, M.A. Post 8vo. 1s. 6d.

[Macmillan's Elementary Classics.]

TENNYSON'S "IN MEMORIAM": its Purpose and Structure:

a Study. By JOHN F. GUNUNG. Crown 8vo. 5s.

The MOTHER'S LEGACY to HER UNBORN CHILD. By

ELIZABETH JOCELINE, Anno 1622. Reprinted from the Sixth Impression. With an Introduction by the Lord Bishop of Rochester. Crown 16mo. 6s. 6d.

TIMES.—"A charming reproduction of a charming morsel of Jacobean English."

FISHERS of MEN. Addressed to the Diocese of Canterbury

in his Third Visitation. By EDWARD WHITE, Archbishop. Crown 8vo. 6s.

TIMES.—"With keen insight and sagacious counsel the Archbishop surveys the condition and prospects of the Church."

SCOTSMAN.—"No capable reader will rise from the perusal of these fresh and vigorous pages without finding that he has got not only much food for reflection, but a strong impulse in the direction of the higher life."

The INCARNATION and COMMON LIFE. By Brooke Foss

WESTCOTT, D.D. D.O.L., Bishop of Durham. Crown 8vo. 9s.

The BOOK of REVELATION. A Course of Sermons. By Rev.

FREDERICK SHAW, M.A., late Vicar of Fen Drayton, St. Ives, Hunts. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d. net.

The THEORY of HEAT. By Thomas Preston, M.A. (Dub.),

Fellow of the Royal University of Ireland, and Professor of Natural Philosophy, University College, Dublin. 8vo. 17s. net.

ECONOMIC GEOLOGY of the UNITED STATES. With Briefer

Mention of Foreign Mineral Products. By RALPH S. TARR, B.S. F.G.S.A., Assistant Professor of Geology at Cornell University. 8vo. 14s. net.

MATERIALS for the STUDY of VARIATION. Treated with Special Regard to Discontinuity in the Origin of Species. By WILLIAM BATESON, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 8vo. 21s. net.

DICTIONARY of POLITICAL ECONOMY. Edited by R. H.

INGLIS PALGRAVE, F.R.S. Vol. I. A—E. Medium 8vo. 21s. net.

GUARDIAN.—"A most useful book of reference, wherein will be found information on nearly all points which a student of the subject will require."

NEW YORK INDEPENDENT.—"When complete will be unique as to range and plan in the English language."

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

BOOKS ON AGRICULTURE.

Edited by JAMES MACDONALD, Secretary,
 Highland and Agricultural Society.

STEPHENS' BOOK OF THE FARM.

Fourth Edition, Revised, and in great part Rewritten. With over 700 Illustrations and 40 Animal Portraits. 3 vols. with leather back and gilt top, 3s. 3s. Also in Six Divisional Volumes, strongly bound in cloth, 10s. 6d. each.

MANURES ANDTHE PRINCIPLES OF MANURING.

By C. M. AIKMAN, M.A. B.Sc. F.R.S.E. F.I.C. F.C.S.,
 Professor of Chemistry, Glasgow Veterinary College,
 Examiner in Chemistry, University of Glasgow, &c.
 Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

FARMYARD MANURE:

Its Nature, Composition, and Treatment. By the SAME AUTHOR. Crown 8vo. 1s. 6d.

AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION.

JOHNSTON'S ELEMENTS
OF AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY.

From the Edition by Sir C. A. CAMERON, M.D.
 F.R.C.S.I. Revised and Rewritten by C. M. AIKMAN,
 M.A. B.Sc., &c. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION.

JOHNSTON'S CATECHISM
OF AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY.

From the Edition by Sir CHARLES A. CAMERON,
 M.D. F.R.C.S.I. Revised and Enlarged by C. M.
 AIKMAN, M.A. B.Sc., &c. With numerous Illustrations.
 Crown 8vo. 1s.

THIRD AND CHEAPER EDITION.

PRINGLE'SLIVE STOCK OF THE FARM.

Revised and Edited by JAMES MACDONALD, Editor of 'The Book of the Farm.' Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

M'COMBIE'SCATTLE AND CATTLE-BREEDERS.

Enlarged, and with Memoir of the Author by JAMES MACDONALD, Editor of 'The Book of the Farm.'
 New Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

BOOKS ON GARDENING.

HANDY BOOKOF THE FLOWER-GARDEN.

With Engraved Plans. By DAVID THOMSON, Gardener to His Grace the Duke of Buccleuch, K.G., at Drumlaugh. Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

HANDY BOOK OFFRUIT-CULTURE UNDER GLASS.

By the SAME AUTHOR. New Edition, Revised and Enlarged. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo.
 7s. 6d.

The HORTICULTURAL EXHI-

BITION'S HANDBOOK. A Treatise on Cultivating,
 Exhibiting, and Judging Plants, Flowers, Fruits, and Vegetables. By W. WILLIAMSON, Gardener; Revised by MALCOLM DUNN, Gardener to His Grace the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry, Dalkeith Park.
 Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the CULTIVATION of the GRAPE VINE. By WILLIAM
 THOMSON, Tweed Vineyard. Tenth Edition, Revised.
 8vo. 2s.CULTIVATED PLANTS: their Propagation and Improvement. By F. W. BURDIGN,
 Author of 'The Narcissus: its History and Culture,' &c.
 With 121 Engravings, and Index. Crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.DOMESTIC FLORICULTURE, WINDOW-GARDENING, and FLORAL DECORA-TIONS. By the SAME AUTHOR. Crown 8vo. with upwards of 200 Illustrations. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 7s. 6d.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
 Edinburgh and London.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NEW WORKS.

FREDERIC HILL: an Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform. Being the Recollections of a Retired Civil Servant. By his Daughter, CONSTANCE HILL. 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 16s.

"A most entertaining book, teeming with anecdotes and reminiscences of notabilities, and also of incidents that carry us back to days which now seem far distant."—Manchester Examiner.

"Unexpected but welcome light on the political and social movements of the century, together with much pleasant gossip of a personal kind, is to be found in these pages."—The Mercury.

"A volume which in interest reads almost like a romance, and by those who take any interest in social reform it will be read with special profit and avidity. It has been admirably edited by Miss Hill."—Dundee Courier.

"The pages teem with good stories and pieces of history, local and national, political and literary, all told with charming simplicity and distinctness."—Birmingham Daily Gazette.

The CONVERSATIONS of JAMES

NORTHCOTE, R.A. Recorded by WILLIAM HAZLITT. A New Edition. Edited, with an Essay on Hazlitt and a Note on Northcote, by EDMUND GOSS. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Will be welcomed by a considerable section of the public—not only by those who are interested in matters of pictorial art, but by all who are attracted to bright and lively gossip of the miscellaneous sort. The Conversations are eminently readable."—Globe.

Just ready.

WOMEN of LETTERS, including

Memoirs of Lady Morgan, the Misses Barry, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, Lady Ann Barnard, Sarah Countess Cowper, Mrs. Ogle, and Lady Duff Gordon. By GERTRUDE TOWNSHEND MAYER. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

NEW NOVELS AT THE LIBRARIES.

Now ready.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE SIX OF JOOST AVELINGH.' THE GREATER GLORY. By MAARTEN MAARTENS, Author of 'An Old Maid's Love,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A serious and striking production."—Scotsman.

Immediately.

The ROMANCE of SHERE MOTE.

By PERCY HURLBURD, Author of 'In Black and White.' In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

THE SECOND EDITION OF

DIANA TEMPEST. By Mary Cholmondeley, Author of 'The Danvers Jewels,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

The BARON DE BOOKWORMS in French says:—

"Those who love a really good novel, excellent both in story and in literary style, will be thankful to acquire, by purchase or loan, the goods—the extra good goods—which the Gods provide. There is neither page nor paragraph in these three volumes that can be skipped without loss to the skipper. Each character is carefully analyzed, in so incisive and epigrammatic a style, and with evidently so rare a knowledge of moral anatomy, as will occasionally remind the reader of Thackeray. The Baron wishes his friends no worse luck than a rainy afternoon for the perusal of 'Dianna Tempest.'"—Of Miss Cholmondeley's clever novels, 'Dianna Tempest' is quite the cleverest."—Times.

The VICAR of LANGTHWAITE.

By LILY WATSON. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A bright and pleasant novel."—Full Mail Gazette.

BRITOMART. By Mrs. Herbert Mar-

TIN. Author of 'Bonnie Lesley,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A noble novel, and the heroine of the touching, realistic, and deeply thought-out story is a rarely beautiful and winning example of womanhood in its fairest and most worshipful aspects. The story is as charming as it is good."—World.

SPEEDWELL. By Lady Guendolen

RAMSDEN. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 1s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.

Each in Single Volume.

Price SIX SHILLINGS.

EDNA LYALL'S NOVELS.

DONOVAN:

A MODERN ENGLISHMAN.

"This is a very admirable work. The reader is from the first carried away by the gallant unconventionality of its author. 'Donovan' is a very excellent novel; but it is something more and better. It should do as much good as the best sermon ever written or delivered extempore. The story is told with a grand simplicity, an unconscious poetry of eloquence which stirs the very depths of the heart. One of the main excellencies of this novel is the delicacy of touch with which the author shows her most delightful characters to be after all human beings, and not angels before their time."—Standard.

WE TWO.

"There is artistic realism both in the conception and the delineation of the personages; the action and interest are unflaggingly sustained from first to last, and the book is pervaded by an atmosphere of elevated, earnest thought."—Scotsman.

"A work of deep thought and much power. Serious as it is, it is now and then brightened by rays of genuine humour. Altogether this story is more and better than a novel."—Morning Post.

IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.

"Miss Lyall has given us a vigorous study of such life and character as are really worth reading about. The central figure of her story is Algernon Sydney; and this figure she invests with a singular dignity and power. He always appears with effect, but no liberties are taken with the facts of his life. The plot is adapted with great felicity to them. His part in it, absolutely consistent as it is with historical truth, gives it reality as well as dignity. Some of the scenes are remarkably vivid. The escape is an admirable narrative, which almost makes one hold one's breath as one reads."—Spectator.

KNIGHT-ERRANT.

"This novel is distinctly helpful and inspiring from its high tone, its intense human feeling, and its elevated morality. It forms an additional proof, if such were needed, that Miss Lyall has a mandate to write."—Academy.

"The plot, and, indeed, the whole story, is gracefully fresh and very charming; there is a wide humanity in the book that cannot fail to accomplish its author's purpose."—Literary World.

WON BY WAITING.

"The dean's daughters are perfectly real characters—the learned Cornelia especially; the little impulsive French heroine, who endures their cold hospitality and at last wins their affection, is thoroughly charming; while throughout the book there runs a golden thread of pure brotherly and sisterly love, which pleasantly reminds us that the making and marring of marriage is not, after all, the sum total of real life."—Academy.

A HARDY NORSEMAN.

"All the quiet humour we praised in 'Donovan' is to be found in the new story. And the humour, though never demonstrative, has a charm of its own. It is not Edna Lyall's plan to give her readers much elaborate description, but when she does describe scenery her picture is always alive with vividness and grace."—Athenæum.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

The BURDENS of BELIEF,

and other Poems. By the DUKE of ARGYLL.

(Just out.)

NEW VOLUME OF UNIVERSITY EXTENSION
MANUALS, EDITED BY PROFESSOR KNIGHT.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The JACOBAN POETS. By

EDMUND GOSS.

(Just out.)

8vo. 16s.

CORRESPONDENCE of Mr.

JOSEPH JENKILL with his SISTER-IN-LAW, LADY GERTRUDE SLOANE STANLEY. 15th-18th. Edited, with a Brief Memoir, by the Hon. ALGERNON BOURKE.

"The editor of these cheery letters of a confirmed dinner-out and society man of much experience has done his work with unexceptionable skill and taste. We part from this genial old gossip with regret."—Daily Chronicle.

FERGUSON'S HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURE IN ALL COUNTRIES.

With 1,000 Illustrations. 2 vols. medium 8vo. 2l. 3s.

NEW EDITION, REVISED.

ANCIENT and MEDIAEVAL

ARCHITECTURE. Edited by R. PHÉNÉ SPIERS, F.S.A.

"A considerably improved, but still perfectly recognizable issue of what is certainly, as far as we know, the most remarkable attempt at a continuous history of the whole of architecture which has ever been produced, and which is a lasting honour to English architectural literature."—Builder.

8vo. 10s.

The PSALTER of 1539. A

Landmark of English Literature. Comprising the Text, in Black-Letter Type. Edited, with Notes, by JOHN EARLE, M.A., Professor of Anglo-Saxon in the University of Oxford.

"Alike in the introduction and in the notes, students of the Psalter, whether theological, philological, literary, or devotional, will derive abundant guidance, instruction, and edification from Mr. Earle's comments."—Times.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The CHRISTIAN ETHIC. By

WILLIAM KNIGHT, M.D., Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of St. Andrews.

"The subject treated in this volume is one of great interest and importance, and therefore a treatise devoted to its elucidation by so competent a writer as Prof. Knight is to be cordially welcomed."—Scotsman.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

An INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of the GREEK TESTAMENT. With Concise Grammar, Notes, and Vocabulary. By THEOPHILUS D. HALL, M.A.

This Volume is intended to aid those who desire to study the New Testament in the original Greek Text without any previous knowledge of the language.

3 vols. medium 8vo. 4l. 6s.

A REVISED, ENLARGED, AND CHEAPER EDITION OF SIR WILLIAM SMITH'S

The DICTIONARY of the BIBLE. By Various Writers. Edited by SIR WILLIAM SMITH, B.O.L., LL.D., and the Rev. Prof. J. M. PELLER, M.A. With a large number of New Illustrations and Maps of Special Districts.

Medium 8vo. 2l. 2s.

A DICTIONARY of HYMN-

LOGY. Setting forth the Origin and History of the Christian Hymns of all Ages and Nations, with special reference to those contained in the Hymn Books of English-speaking Countries and now in Common Use. Edited by JOHN J. LIAN, D.D., Vicar of Wincobank, Sheffield.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1894.

CONTENTS.

JEKYLL'S LETTERS	171
THE LOVER'S LEXICON	172
THE VANQUISHED ROYALISTS OF THE GREAT CIVIL WAR	173
THE CELTIC TWILIGHT	173
THE LITERARY HISTORY OF EARLY CHRISTIANITY	174
CAREW'S POETRY	175
NEW NOVELS (Lady William: The Greater Glory; Alice of the Inn; Margaret Drummond; The Strange Adventures of Anelay Moreland; Molly and her Man of War; Mr. Bailey-Martin)	175-176
BOOKS OF EDUCATION	177
RURAL LIFE	177
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	178-179
TO WILLIAM MORRIS; MR. G. W. CHILDS; ACTS II. 9; DICKENS IN YORKSHIRE; MRS. DENTLEY; THE LIBRARY OF THE COMTE DE LIGNEBOLLES	179-181
LITERARY GOSSIP	181
SCIENCE—THE LITERATURE OF ELECTRICITY; ASTRONOMICAL NOTES; GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	182-184
FINE ARTS—ARCHITECTURAL LITERATURE; THE ROYAL ACADEMY; GOSSIP	184-186
MUSIC—THE WEEK; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	187
DRAMA—THE WEEK; GOSSIP	188

LITERATURE

Correspondence of Mr. Joseph Jekyll. Edited, with a Brief Memoir, by the Hon. Algernon Bourke. (Murray.)

At the beginning of the century Joseph Jekyll occupied a position in society rather like that filled later on by Abraham Hayward. He was an eminent diner-out, and, when he could be induced to leave town, a privileged guest at country houses. He was of better birth than Hayward, and, thanks to distinguished patronage, he became member for Calne, Solicitor-General to the Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV., and a Master in Chancery. Yet it may fairly be said that he owed his successes in life, not to his professional abilities, but to his conversational powers. Such a reputation is of necessity evanescent, and even when he was alive Sir Walter Scott recorded that his jokes "were fired like minute guns, and with an effect hardly less melancholy." Two, which Jekyll himself complacently records, seem to show that Sir Walter's criticism may, on occasions, have held good. He proposed that the first president of the Travellers' Club should be Mr. Sturges Bourne—"a bourne from which no traveller returns." Again, when Sir Martin Shee was quizzed about his ancestry, Jekyll remarked that any man might be proud of his family when the first She was Mrs. Eve.

The first part of this correspondence consists of letters written by young Jekyll to his father in 1775, when he had been sent to France to pick up the language. They show considerable powers of observation, and give an interesting picture of the provinces—Jekyll finally settled at Blois—before the Revolution:—

"Next to the language, the million etiquettes are the most difficult for a stranger to acquire. They are precise to a degree. For example, I will allow that the single circumstance of taking French leave (which gains ground even among us at present) is easy and natural. But, on the contrary, I will maintain that there is more formality of compliment in entering one assembly here than in taking the round of routs for a whole winter at London."

At first he was not favourably impressed by French womankind:—

"The ladies are never behindhand. Their head dresses are more extravagant than ever. The cap is a frame of wire erected on the back of the head, and covered with flowers in the form of an espalier. The hair is cut short on the forehead and temples for two inches before the toupée commences, and a curl, called the sentiment en bas, descends to the collar bone. Add to this rouge and patches, and the tout ensemble is not human. But such is the force of custom that I begin to regard it even without horror."

However, his views underwent conversion after he had contrived to make acquaintance with various kindly aristocrats. Unfortunately his description of the routine at a French château—the Marquis de Saumery's—is disappointingly brief:—

"Suffice it to say that Monsieur had a suite of five apartments allotted him, and was always preceded to table by an officer of the household. The house was full of company. The morning is usually passed separately in the respective apartments. At one o'clock the young men assist at the toilette of Madame la Marquise; at two dinner is served; at five cards commence; at nine we supped; and after supper we had usually the Comédie Bourgeoise, or Allermande, till midnight."

We also obtain occasional glimpses of humbler folk:—

"The Curate of Soim, who is a perfect Vicar of Wakefield, received us with the greatest hospitality, and we spent the next day in reconnoitring the Roman camps, &c., in his parish. We fished in the evening on the great lake, and were forced into shelter by one of the most terrible storms of thunder, rain, and lightning I had ever seen. On these occasions the peasants fly to the church and ring the bells—a principle so totally unphilosophic, that I expected we should have had the steeple about our ears in an instant. At midnight the old curate went out, in spite of the inclemency of the weather, and recited the Passion of our Saviour before the image of St. Fiace, amid his trembling parishioners, the result of which was, as you will believe, an immediate calm."

A long interval separates these boyish effusions from the letters that form the bulk of the volume. They begin with 1818, and end in 1838, the year of Jekyll's death. His official life had practically closed, and he was spending the hours in leisurely skimming current literature, and in collecting and retailing gossip. Some of the anecdotes which he conveys to his sister-in-law, Lady Gertrude Sloane Stanley, belong emphatically to a less reticent age than ours; and as for his ethics, they correspond with tolerable accuracy to those of Major Pendennis. Take the following homily on public schools, for instance, which has besides its historic value:—

"In my opinion all the public schools are equal as to the means of instruction, and the proficiency in learning must always depend upon the disposition and industry of the individual boy. With the exception of Winchester, I think the habits and manners of the world may also be equally attained at all of them. There is a vulgar rusticity about the clères of Winchester which continues to be their characteristic at the University, and the mass is chiefly composed of boys in the middling classes of society. It never happened to me to weigh the respective merits of schools. My predilection for Westminster naturally arose from the recollection of my own successful education there, and the same predilection from the same recollection extended itself to Christ Church. I had trodden the path myself, and knew all its turnings and windings. I was of course anxious that my boys should make a similar pilgrimage, and I hoped with similar benefits."

At the same time Jekyll was clearly a man of some independence of character, and his honest pride in his sons—about whom, by the way, the editor might have given us a little more information—constitutes a most creditable feature in his character. His news is certainly comprehensive enough, including as it does both royalty and the Siamese Twins. One of his best stories is told by way of reminiscence:—

"Old parson Cholmondeley, then in the Guards, ran away at the battle of Dettingen, and was found snug and safe in a ditch with a cold fowl in his pocket. He then went into holy orders, which were less troublesome than those of the War Office, and the militancy of the Church preferable to that of a German campaign. John Wilkes told me it was beautiful to hear with what emphasis and fervour the old parson read that part of the Litany which deprecates 'battle and murder, and sudden death.'"

Jekyll, though never a toady, was remarkably loyal to his patron George IV.; but the royal caprice for gorgeous uniforms sorely tried his patience, for one of his sons was in the Guards. Here is a comparatively innocuous specimen of the humours of the Regency:—

"On Sunday I dined with Lord Hertford, where we had only the Regent attended by Nagle. The Regent whispered me that the luminous equerry, who had been forced by 'Chic' Chester to drink five glasses of brandy last summer at Cadlands, mistook the said Chic for me the whole time. To support this delusion I continued all Sunday to personate Chic, to remind Nagle of the brandy we tipped so freely; and finally persuaded him that nothing but a violent cold prohibited my renewal of the libation."

The Duke of York, too, had a capacity for keeping his friends, and the tones in which Jekyll laments his death are evidently sincere:—

"He had a heart of feeling, sincerity, and attachment, and for a long series of years manifested towards me the most disinterested kindness. Yet miscreants were to be found whose malignity could asperse him while scarcely cold in his coffin. Hard is the lot of princes. The errors or follies of other men are smiled at, but theirs are magnified into crimes. The world, however, has done justice to his memory by an unfeigned and universal sorrow."

The political allusions in Jekyll's letters are comparatively few, but some of them are worth noticing. Thus, in 1823, he relates some rumours about Canning which show that, as students of the period are probably aware, that statesman was regarded, whether rightly or wrongly, as defective on the score of straightforwardness:—

"Our Opposition friends are busy in slanders of Canning already, and the Edinburgh Review loads the attack rather coarsely. They add that the Duke of Wellington insisted on Canning's writing a letter of censure to Lord Strangford for his diplomatic errors at Constantinople, which Canning did, but accompanied it with a private note to say the letter was to go for nothing, but in compliance with the Duke's absurdity he was forced to send it. But duplicity is not the only ground of attack. They swear that out of hatred to Londonderry's memory he meditates the subversion of many of the dead Secretary's late measures, among the rest that he means to extinguish the Embassy to Switzerland, for which Londonderry fought so strenuously as to declare he would resign if it was not carried."

Jekyll had voted with the Whigs, but the intemperate advocacy of Queen Caroline's cause by Holland House made him no admirer of its lady:—

"People from Paris amuse me much with Lady Holland's manoeuvres there. In one of the five carriages which formed her ladyship's cortege was exported a certain poor Mrs. Somebody skilled in the art of shampooing. This operation is daily performed at her levee on her ladyship's feet, divested of shoes and stockings, and which are so whitened and beautifully formed as to excite every French or English dandy present. Mirabeau once said to me Le monde est un charge de théâtre. Things are done every day which would be hissed as outré in a farce."

"What will they do," Canning once asked, "with Lady Holland in the Cabinet?" and Jekyll held a very similar opinion:—

"Lady Holland is the only dissatisfied minister out of office. She counted upon sailing down daily with her long-tailed blacks and ancient crane-necked chariot to sit with Holland at the Secretary's office, to administer the affairs of Europe, and make Sidney [sic] Smith a bishop. As for him, he never cared twopence about the whole job, and the delightful fellow was very wise in so treating it. To say the truth, I never augured well of the permanency of the whole concern, even if Canning's death and Goderich's impotency had not blown it up."

The following is a scarcely flattering portrait of Lord Wellesley:—

"The Lord-Lieutenant, though by no means in despair at this Catholic emancipation from wedlock, shuts himself up in total seclusion. Whenever he does deign to appear in public he presents a singular spectacle—a hoary head with eyebrows artificially blackened, cheeks highly rouged, and a forehead painted white. Grimaldi in a pantomime is a less picturesque Vicaroy. It is said Lady Glogall some time ago forced her way to his toilette, and caught him in the very fact of repairing himself."

We confess that the specimens of Lord Alvanley's wit to be discovered in these pages are very inferior to those given by Charles Greville; nor does Rogers shine, as rendered by Mr. Jekyll. Per contra, we have a very characteristic quip from Hook:

"Theodore Hook, a clever fellow who writes in John Bull, got drunk with others last week at a Countess'. Somebody alluded to a secret, and said, 'Hook knows.' Hook, with the decanter in his hand, replied, 'Bottle nose.'"

Jekyll was on familiar terms with the stage, notably with George Colman and Mrs. Siddons, but it is on the authority of his son Edward that he describes one of the too common incidents in Edmund Kean's decline:—

"He saw Kean play Richard so drunk that he fell in the Battle of Bosworth Field before Richmond had consented to kill him, and while lying on the ground blow his nose. He arose at last and stammered the following apology—'Ladies and gentlemen, you see—you see—argumentum ad hominem!' He then reeled off nobody knew whither, or comprehended the argumentum."

Altogether Jekyll's letters make the most excellent reading, and Mr. Algernon Bourke's editing seems, on the whole, passable. More copious foot-notes, however, might have assisted readers, who do not know their Greville as they should; and several literary allusions appear to have escaped him. Thus,

Lord Rector of the U-Niversity of Glasgow

is an adaptation from a famous poem in the Anti-Jacobin, and that queer creature Blanco White wrote the 'Letters from Spain' by "Don Leucadio Doblado." The index, too, might have been fuller with advantage.

The Lover's Lexicon. By Frederick Greenwood. (Macmillan & Co.)

In these days, when it is the growing habit of writers to insist on the "femininity" of women, meaning thereby their passions, and to reduce to its purely physical aspects the love of men, it is to be feared that Mr. Greenwood's most excellent and ingeniously devised "handbook for novelists, playwrights, philosophers, and minor poets; but especially for the enamoured," will prove strangely unfashionable. To our rising generation of novelists, and especially to our brilliant young writers of "the short story," Mr. Greenwood's catalogue of the symptoms of love, or his recipes for its prosperous and successful issue, will appear cast in too antiquated a mould, and too redolent of the ages of formal gallantry and semi-sincere chivalry, to be worthy of the subject with which they affect to deal. M. Bourget's 'Physiologie de l'Amour' is a text-book which for them will not be superseded by Mr. Greenwood's 'Lexicon,' that recalls the days and the touch of Mrs. Gaskell or of Jane Austen.

The fact is that Mr. Greenwood has an altogether out-of-date conception of love; for he says that "love is not one of the original passions; it came late into the human breast; till it began there was neither faithfulness nor chastity"; and "even the egotism of love, its exaction of the loved one's every thought and fancy, has its silver side," for it "has had something to do in the establishment of both those virtues"; and of course to-day it is growing more and more the custom to identify love solely with the primary physical instinct, which Mr. Greenwood in another passage carefully distinguishes from his conception of love. And yet, though Mr. Greenwood in this book is thoroughly out of sympathy with the "young bloods" of the age, he is not without the support of some of our graver and greater writers. With Mr. Coventry Patmore, for example, whom he happily names "Love's Laureate and Prime Philosopher," he is in touch, and it is worth while to recall the following noble passage from Mr. George Meredith in amplification of Mr. Greenwood's views and as an apology for his book:—

"Is it any waste of time to write of love? The trials of life are in it, but in a narrow ring and a florier. You may learn to know yourself through it, as you do after years of life, whether you are fit to lift those that are about you, or whether you are but a cheat and a load on the backs of your fellows. The impure perishes, the inefficient languishes, the moderate comes to its autumn of decay—these are of the kind which aim at satisfaction, to die of it soon or late. The love that survives has strangled craving: it lives because it lives to nourish and succour like the heavens."

Mr. Greenwood never goes so deep under the surface of love as this, but the love of which he treats is in its essence the same; he also regards true love as a test of character, and as a spur to knightly deeds. There is, however, another point in which he shows a less minute knowledge of the domain of love than the novelist, that is, his extreme diffidence in dealing with love on the maiden's side. He does, it is true, occasionally describe the symptoms of a woman in love and give her directions; but he often confesses a certain ignorance of the matter, and confines himself chiefly to his own sex. After all, this may be only his cunning, and it is by no means certain that it would be desirable to unfold all the mysteries of a maiden's love-craft, for does not half its charm lie in its apparent wilfulness?

Not one of the least of this book's delights consists in its joyfulness. The rejected lover and the old maid find sympathetic words bestowed on them, but above all it deals with the lover happy in reciprocated love. Nor is the language unworthy of the subject: the book is written in a rich, full-flavoured, and somewhat old-fashioned style; indeed, a passage quoted from Jeremy Taylor appears strangely in harmony with the sentences that surround it.

Enough has, perhaps, been said to make all true lovers wish to read the book for themselves, but it would be unfair to let it go without quoting a passage from it. The only difficulty is that in the wealth of material it is difficult to make a selection; but let these stand. "Prudery?" the author says, speaking of undue familiarity;

"there is no prudery in the matter. It is all a question of civility, of common courtesies. Every wise man knows that there is a familiarity in the companionship of men and women, happily wed, which goes far beyond every other for intimacy, while it is sweeter in the sense of wholesomeness than any. But no such companionship can flourish where another kind of familiarity—careless of little decencies, prying where it should not see, speaking where there should be silence, coarsely unveiling thoughts and feelings that when naked should be ashamed—saps respect and tortures self-respect. The shock of discovering a familiarity of this sort has been fatal to all that is best in marriage for many a pair otherwise well matched; and young persons about to marry should look to it. It must not be supposed that the fault lies always with the man; not at all."

In his satirical moods also there are some happy touches, as when he says that "raking has no vogue at the present day, and is only practised for such violent delights as eating lobsters in low company at two o'clock in the morning," or in this energetic passage:—

"It is plain, then, that the once innocent word [passion] was already going to the dogs—had, indeed, been on the road years before; and since that time there have been such prose and verse celebrations of lurid dreams, purpling brows, quivering bosoms, swooning senses, languors hollow-eyed, kisses that sting, ditto with blood and foam, burnings, faintings, and similar delights, that passion has almost become a bluish word; for it is in passion's name that these violent joys are preached. Yet we live in very quiet times. It is not as if this were a full-blooded and robustious age. It certainly is not that, though its intellectual persons may be allowed the least of being intense. Of the feigned Elizabethan lustiness there is none; but there is a vast deal of stretching and straining of mental cordage in the meaning of intensity. By God's providence, however, it will presently relax, and then we shall be at peace from the passion-mongers; who, though they are entirely effeminate, are far from harmless. But alive or dead, their industry in depraving a noble and beautiful word is not to be forgiven."

Calendar of the Proceedings of the Committee for Compounding, 1643-1660. Preserved in the State Paper Department of Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by Mary Anne Everett Green. Vols. IV. and V. (Eyre & Spottiswoode.)

Mrs. EVERETT GREEN is to be congratulated on having at length brought this laborious work to a conclusion. The amount of local and personal information contained in it can only be appreciated by those who have had occasion to work among what have long been known as "The Royalist Composition Papers"; but some idea of the wealth of knowledge therein contained may be arrived at by consulting the index to the series, which consists of 515 closely printed double-columned pages.

We are not in the secrets of those who have the custody of the priceless treasures which are housed and gradually being made available in the Public Record Office. We will, however, venture on the assertion that there is no class of documents in that great storehouse of our history that is more frequently consulted than the "Composition Papers." The great Civil War still charms the imagination. Many of us had, and far more imagine they had, ancestors who took notable parts in the contest; and so far as the Royalists are concerned, there is hardly one possessed of property whose name does not occur in these documents. Nor is the information they contain limited to Royalists only. The names of many persons occur therein who were concerned with the strife as unwilling spectators only.

The interest which must ever surround the great Civil War is, no doubt, the chief reason why these papers have so long been popular among the readers in the Record Office, but there is another which cannot be passed over unnoticed. In 1824 these documents, which had hitherto remained in the condition in which they were originally filed, were carefully bound, and soon after this an elaborate index to them was made. It does not in all cases satisfy the needs of the modern student, and has been now superseded by that compiled by Mrs. Everett Green, but, on the whole, it supplied a most useful key. When we bear in mind how very few of the other national records were furnished with helps of this kind, it is not surprising that these documents were much sought after. A third reason must count for something: they are all, or nearly all, of them easy to read, and are written in English. None but experts can make much of those of earlier times.

It has been the custom ever since the Restoration to denounce the sequestration and fining of the Royalists as a great wrong. This has been dwelt upon not only by partisan writers, but by others who have tried to hold the scales of justice with a steady hand. When compared with what took place in France a century ago, every one must admit that the victors behaved with singular leniency to the vanquished—a gentleness which is, indeed, surprising when we call to mind that nearly all the precedents the Parliamentarians had to go by taught them a widely different line of conduct; yet when the fullest weight is given to these things, we apprehend that no just person who knows the facts will say that the conduct of the Committee for Compounding can be exonerated from undue harshness. In considering matters of this kind it is sheer dishonesty to compare the way in which Elizabeth's ministers suppressed rebellion at home or the actions of William III. in Ireland with the matter before us. Every Englishman knew, and the members of the Committee had better means of knowing than almost any one else, that when the war first began the line that separated one faction from the other was almost invisible. Many a man, we may be quite sure, whose home was in the North or the West, joined the king's standard, who would, had he dwelt in the "associated counties," have shown equal zeal for the cause of the Parliament. Such persons—harmless country squires for the most part, with a sprinkling of clergy, lawyers, yeomen, and shopkeepers—were cruelly dealt with when the same punishment was awarded them as was meted out to the great nobles by whom Charles had been encouraged in those rash courses which led to the downfall of the monarchy.

The Committee seems to have been particularly severe on the Royalist clergy. This is not to be wondered at when we remember how much the political imbroglio had been increased and intensified by religious squabbles. Walker's 'Sufferings of the Clergy,' the work of a succeeding age (1714), which purports to do for the Royalist sufferers of the Civil War much the same thing as Foxe accomplished for the martyrs of the Marian time, proves to demonstration to those who can read it in the light of contemporary evidence that many of the Royalist clergy were as unmeasured in their language as the wildest of their Puritan adversaries. These volumes give several examples of the militant spirit of these ecclesiastics. For example, Ralph Poole of Bobbington is reported to have left his pulpit on a certain Sunday in November, 1643, and rushed down to the water side to hinder the landing of a body of Parliamentary forces, and afterwards to have deserted his post and followed the fortunes of Prince Rupert.

Mrs. Everett Green draws attention to several acts of mercy on the part of the authorities. We wish there were more of them. Her pages, however, seem to demonstrate a fact which has over and over again been denied with no end of fiery rhetoric. It does not appear that so far as "Papists" were concerned they were worse used than other people. The laws which the Commissioners had to execute in their cases were different from, and more unjust than, those that regarded Protestants, but there does not seem to have been any wish to make the Commissioners mere instruments of oppression. When we compare the position of the Catholics of the days which went before or followed after, with that of those of the Commonwealth time, it does not seem that they had any good reason for deploring the fall of the monarchy.

Those calendars, like every other volume of the great class of which they form an important part, contain many facts of value which have come down to us, as it were, by accident. We know, for instance, that from the Reformation settlement under Elizabeth down to the Civil War, the ecclesiastical authorities endeavoured to force all persons to receive the Holy Eucharist according to the forms of the Established Church. How far they were successful in this has, from time to time, been a matter of some controversy. It is impossible that we shall ever learn the truth, for rigour existed in some places and laxity in others. Evidence is here given that at Birstall, in Yorkshire, there were 2,800 communicants. We have no means of ascertaining what was the population of Birstall at this time. It cannot have been very large. We imagine the whole population, except the sick and infants, must have presented themselves at the legal times, and the minister must, one surmises, have been one of those faithful pastors who showed little regard for the feelings of Puritans or Roman Catholics.

The Celtic Twilight. By W. B. Yeats. (Lawrence & Bullen.)

'THE CELTIC TWILIGHT' is the work of an Irishman, a poet, a mystic—one who has had "his own glimpse of unaccountable things," who has realized that "everything exists, everything is true, and the earth is only a little dust under our feet." It is a book about "men and women, dhools and faeries," and much of it has been taken down from the lips of the peasants. "I tell these things as accurately as I can," says Mr. Yeats,

"and with no theories to blur the record. Theories are poor things at the best, and the bulk of mine have perished long ago. I love better than any theory the sound of the Gate of Horn swinging upon its hinges, and hold that he alone who has passed the rose-strewn threshold can catch the far glimmer of the Ivory Gate."

So there are here many chapters of actual folk-lore, such as "Kidnappers," "The Man and his Boots," and "Village Ghosts." All these are told for their own sake, simply, straightforwardly, without comment, explanation, or allegory. Occasionally there are touches of grave humour, but generally they deal with matters of pure fantasy, and they have, in the telling, that essentially Irish quality of simplicity in the fantastic. So inconclusive are they, so matter-of-fact, so devoid of extravagance in their sheer wonder, that they compel your belief, taking it as they do for granted, by the easy way in which they recount the impossible. Some, again, of the chapters are an imaginative rendering of visions more or less actual, more or less under control, as in the very curious "Regina, Regina Pigmeorum, Veni," where the queen of the fairies appears to the young girl in a trance. Thus calmly, simply, as one might describe a transformation in a pantomime, does Mr. Yeats tell the story:—

"I then bade her call out to the queen of the little people to come and talk with us. There was, however, no answer to her command. I therefore repeated the words aloud myself, and in a moment a very beautiful tall woman came out of the cave. I too had by this time fallen into a kind of trance, in which what we call the unreal had begun to take upon itself a masterful reality, and was able to see the faint gleam of golden ornaments, the shadowy blossom of dim hair. I then bade the girl tell this tall queen to marshal her followers according to their natural divisions, that we might see them. I found as before that I had to repeat the command myself. The creatures then came up out of the cave, and drew themselves up, if I remember rightly, in four bands. One of these bands carried quicken boughs in their hands, and another had necklaces made apparently of serpents' scales, but their dress I cannot remember, for I was quite absorbed in that gleaming woman. I asked her to tell the seer whether these caves were the greatest fairy haunts in the neighbourhood. Her lips moved, but the answer was inaudible. I bade the seer lay her hand upon the breast of the queen, and after that she heard every word quite distinctly. I asked her other questions, as to her nature, and her purpose in the universe, but only seemed to puzzle her. At last she appeared to lose patience, for she wrote upon the sands—the sands of vision, not the grating sands under our feet—this message for me—'Be careful, and do not seek to know too much about us.' Seeing that I had offended her, I thanked her for what she had shown and told, and let her depart again into her cave. In a little while the young girl awoke out of her trance, and felt again the cold wind of the world, and began to shiver."

So obedient are visions to the true mystic. There are two pages here "concerning the nearness together of heaven, earth, and purgatory"; and the whole book, with its "glimpses of unaccountable things," is an affirmation of that unsuspected or half-forgotten nearness, unforgotten only by the dreamers who are themselves a part of "that great Celtic phantasmagoria whose meaning no man has discovered, nor any angel revealed." Here and there, in this book of old sayings, dreams, traditions, memories, there are visions which are in the deepest sense inventions, and there is one, "The Eaters of Precious Stones," which has absolutely the note of Blake, and is worthy of Blake himself. Here it is in its entirety:—

"Sometimes when I have been shut off from common interests, and have for a little forgotten to be restless, I get waking dreams, now faint and shadow-like, now vivid and solid-looking, like the material world under my feet. Whether they be faint or vivid, they are ever beyond the power of my will to alter in any way. They have their own will, and sweep hither and thither, and change according to its commands. One day I faintly saw an immense pit of blackness, round which went a circular parapet, and on the parapet sat innumerable apes eating precious stones out of the palms of their hands. The stones glittered green and crimson, and the apes devoured them with an insatiable hunger. I knew that I saw the Celtic Hell, and my own Hell, the Hell of the artist, and that all who sought after beautiful and wonderful things with too avid a thirst, lost peace and form and became shapeless and common. I have seen into other people's Hells also, and saw in one an infernal Peter, who had a black face and white lips, and who weighed on a curious double scales not only the evil deeds committed, but the good deeds left undone, of certain invisible shades. I could see the scales go up and down, but I could not see the shades who were, I knew, crowding about him. I saw on another occasion a quantity of demons of all kinds of shapes—fish-like, serpent-like, ape-like, and dog-like—sitting about a black pit such as that in my own Hell, and looking at a moon-like reflection of the Heavens which shone up from the depths of the pit."

Such, then, is Mr. Yeats's art of making "familiar things seem strange, and strange things familiar," an art which is essentially the art of poetry; and this book, which begins and ends with a strain of exquisite music in verse, is written, for the most part, in prose which is lyrical in feeling, though restrained always within the most modest limits of prose rhythms. It is such stuff as dreams are made of, admitting us for a moment to see "how man mounts to the infinite by the ladder of the impossible." And so it has a charm and value beyond its actual merit as a piece of writing; it opens up new horizons, too often obscured for us by the smoke and chimney-pots of cities; it reasserts the eternal reality of romance.

A Literary History of Early Christianity: including the Fathers and the Chief Heretical Writers of the Ante-Nicene Period. By O. T. Cruttwell, M.A. 2 vols. (Griffin & Co.)

THE title which Mr. Cruttwell has given to his book may mislead. It is not, in the ordinary sense of the term, a literary history. Mr. Cruttwell has made no original investigations into the lives of the Christian writers. He has made no attempt to settle the genuineness of the books ascribed to them. He has not discussed in a scholarly way the dates of the books, the place of their composition, and their relations to other compositions of the age. He narrates briefly the principal facts known about each writer; he supplies short notices of discussions that may have taken place in regard to any book; and he sets down a few dates. But in doing this he has relied mainly on some accredited writer, as Bishop Lightfoot, or some accredited book, as Smith's 'Dictionary of Christian Biography,' not slavishly borrowing from such sources, but looking into the original authorities from which the statements were obtained. This he has done with a considerable amount of care, and he has been on the outlook for light from recent publications. But he is not always abreast of the times. Thus there is no author to whom he owes greater obligations than Bishop Lightfoot, and yet at the same time he does not seem to have noticed that that learned divine abandoned his identification of Caius with Hippolytus. Indeed, we doubt whether Mr. Cruttwell has much sympathy with minute investigations into authorship. The following rather singular remarks occur in one of his chapters:—

"It may be objected by a critical reader that this assignment of authorship is inconclusive and uncertain. This is admitted; but we are nevertheless of opinion that it is desirable to give, whenever possible, a human interest to every writing of antiquity by connecting it with some writer's name. How much more satisfaction we derive from a treatise when we can form some idea of its author! How much more stimulated we are to grapple with its difficulties! Unfortunately this cannot always be done; but even where the author is unknown, plausible conjectures as to who he was may greatly help towards a sympathetic study of his work."

When such a sentiment exists in the present critical age, it is easy to see how early Christians and early transcribers delighted to attach to anonymous works the name of a famous apostle, martyr, or bishop.

Mr. Cruttwell states in his preface the aim of his work:—

"The purpose I have had in view is mainly literary—that is, I have endeavoured to point out the leading intellectual conceptions which animate the various writers, to indicate the degree of success attained by each, and to estimate the permanent value of each one's contribution to the growing edifice of human thought and knowledge."

He adds in a subsequent part of the preface:—

"It is my belief that both in the English Church and outside it there is a large and increasing number of earnest persons who fully recognise the connection between the writings of the Fathers and their own religious position, but who desire to approach the study of them from a somewhat less technical point of view than that usual in theological works."

Mr. Cruttwell has accomplished his purpose with remarkable success. His history is eminently readable, and conveys in forcible language the impressions which the earnest and careful study of the writings of the Ante-Nicene Fathers would produce upon a thoughtful man. It abounds in eloquent passages on subjects which interested the early Christians and have a deep interest for men of all times. Its expositions are clear, and its reflections are often suggestive and to the point.

Mr. Cruttwell writes as a liberal-minded clergyman of the English Church. His sympathies are with the free and catholic development of thought in the Alexandrian school of Christian writers, and not with the narrow dogmatism and assumption of power of the Roman Church. He says, in speaking of Origen:—

"Origen reared a vast fabric of dogmatic theology, though in a philosophic, not in a dogmatic spirit. It was because the root-principles of Christianity seemed to him to be self-evident, not because they were given on authority, that he based his structure of belief upon them. In this respect he differs completely from Irenæus and Tertullian. These great writers start from authority, and bring all opinions, their own included, to its supreme test. And their authority is virtually, though not admittedly, that of the Roman Church. To Origen the ultimate ground of authority is the self-revealing Word expressing Himself in humanity, in the individual conscience, in Scripture, and in the Church."

His view of another Ante-Nicene aspect of theology is concisely expressed in his notice of Arnobius:—

"The third class of apologists, of whom Arnobius is the representative, proceed upon a totally different fundamental assumption. They regard man exclusively from the physical point of view, and deny to him any claim to kinship with God. Biased by Gnostic prejudices, they even refuse to allow him to be the direct work of God, referring his creation to some intermediate power. The redemptive mission of God the Son becomes an isolated supernatural fact, caused indeed by the Divine Love, but incomprehensible to us, and demanding only our humble adoring acknowledgment. It appears as if it might have been effected in some other way than by the Incarnation, so far as our reasonable apprehension of it is concerned. The system of thought here inaugurated is not only different from but incompatible with that of the Greek Fathers; it seeks to magnify God by degrading man, and, like Calvinism, of which it may be considered the precursor, it shows distinct affinities for non-Christian modes of thought."

Mr. Cruttwell thinks that "the highest spiritual minds are now returning to a similar point of view" to that presented by Origen, and he contrasts Origen with Augustine:—

"But it is not in the dogmatics of the Church that we are to look for Origen's best memorial. Though his subjects are technical, he is a profoundly human writer. His greatest influence has been outside the doctrinal sphere, in the free current of unfettered religious thought. Among theologians Augustine alone stands above him in this respect, and probably even Augustine's influence will be found to be less pervasive and lasting. Origen indeed wrote no book that can be compared for psychological interest with the wonderful 'Confessions,' nor does his eloquence ever rise to the soaring heights of the closing chapters of the 'City of God.' But the foundation of his doctrine is deeper laid, and the ambition of system does not lead him to contradict the instincts of human nature."

He adds a note to this passage:—

"Naturam expellas furca, says the wise poet, tamen usque recurret. We are witnessing a gradual revolution in the attitude of the human mind towards the Augustinian dogmas of sin, predestination, and grace, which have so long been identified with the revelation of Jesus Christ."

These extracts may give some idea of the nature and character of Mr. Cruttwell's work. There are many opinions in it from which we differ, some of them being based on insufficient study. Yet the book will repay perusal, and it should be in the possession of every one who wishes to form an idea of the currents of thought that prevailed among the Christians of the first three centuries.

The Poems and Masque of Thomas Carew.
Edited by Joseph Woodfall Ebsworth.
(Reeves & Turner.)

It is pleasant to see a complete and well-edited reprint of Carew take its place in the "Library of Old Authors." Resting side by side with Chapman, Crashaw, Lovelace, Drayton, and Wither, it will be in congenial company. No edition at once complete, trustworthy, and portable is within reach. The first edition, 1640, is too goodly and costly a book to be carried about in the pocket, into which the latest edition naturally slips; and until the appearance of the cumbrous quarto of Mr. Carew Hazlitt, no edition pretending to completeness had been seen. Carew now appears in a shape that will commend him to lovers of handy books, and under editorial supervision the most zealous, sympathetic, and competent that can easily be conceived. Preliminary and continuous training in ballad literature has prepared Mr. Ebsworth for the task he undertakes; and the erudition he displays in his notes and the zeal he manifests in his defence of Carew are alike characteristic and edifying.

With the exception of one or two satirists, and indeed scarcely of them, the defence of the Stuart poets rests on a different ground from that of the Restoration dramatists. It is difficult to acquit the latter of a purpose to corrupt. In the struggle between good and evil they took of deliberate choice the side of evil. Where Molière, whom they copied, depicted the greedy guardian or father vanquished by the devices of youthful affection, Wycherley and his successors showed wives betraying for a handsome and unprincipled lover a churlish hunk of a husband. No similar lesson in debauchery is preached by the lyricists. Excess of amatory warmth, and, it may be added, a certain want of delicacy in the revelation of what should be sanctities, constitute all with which Carew, at least, can be charged, and in his case even the subject of his passionate addresses and indiscreet expositions cannot be guessed. What Mr. Ebsworth says concerning Spenser's 'Epithalamion' and Carew's 'Rapture' is true, that neither was written for vicious minds, and it is true also that "no one need feel injury or disgust when reading the present text of Carew." None the less 'A Rapture' is, perhaps, the most amatory poem since the days of Everaerts or Bonnefons. In the 'Second Rapture' the editor has ventured on the one important alteration of text which is to be traced. For the line as it generally stands,

Give me a wench about thirteen, he substitutes "above thirteen," and he justifies the change on the ground that "about" was a misprint. This matter may be left to Mr. Ebsworth and his readers. The substitution is at least plausible, and it involves a distinct gain to propriety.

Quitting these two pieces, there is nothing whatever concerning which any hesitation need be felt; and several of the poems, those especially which were set to music by Henry Lawes, are genuine and happy utterances of affection and passion. Of those, "He that loves a rosy cheek" is, thanks to its quotation by Leigh Hunt, the most generally known. A much higher and more characteristic utterance of Carew is, however, found in the poem beginning—

Give me more Love or more Disdain,
The torrid or the frozen zone.

"Ask me no more where Jove bestows" is full of delightful conceits and is very happy. Evidence is wanting that "Come, my Celia, let us prove," is Carew's; and other poems inserted in the first (1640) edition were subsequently attributed to Herrick and included in his works. The opinion of Mr. Ebsworth as to the authorship of the poems is valuable, and we are interested accordingly to find him regarding as probably by Carew 'The Primrose' and other poems concerning which doubt has been expressed.

The notes are at the close of the volume, where also appear a bibliography of Carew, his letters, a table of first lines, and an index, things frequently omitted from works of the class. A few dedicatory lyrics are also, after Mr. Ebsworth's wont, scattered through the volume; and his notes and prefatory matter are such as no other editor could have supplied. The added poems, the genuineness of some of which seems unquestionable, contribute to the value of an unusually excellent edition.

Mr. Ebsworth takes singular pains to distinguish between Carew and Thomas Cary, another Court poet of the same epoch. So great has been the confusion between the two that the portrait hitherto accepted as Carew's proves to be that of Cary. An authentic portrait, engraved by permission from a picture by Van Dyck in Windsor Castle, is now for the first time supplied. It is a lovely work, carrying about it, as Barry Cornwall says, "all the fine air and fantastic gentility of a Van Dyck."

NEW NOVELS.

Lady William. By Mrs. Oliphant. 3 vols. (Macmillan & Co.)

WHATEVER may be the exact position Mrs. Oliphant holds in the world of novelists at present—and it is not far from the first—it seems safe to predict that she will survive, and that her best books will gain by a certain lapse of time; for she has the power of vividly presenting social types, and especially of animating for us quiet circles of modest gentility and shades of character which in her hands emerge into distinctness in spite of conventional surroundings. Her present work is full of this special faculty, though as a romance it is naught, and though so big a word as "psychology" would be misplaced in connexion with its very minute delineation of numerous kinds of more or less ordinary humanity. In one respect the author's perception never fails her. She can bring out with the subtlest touches the contrast between a lady, properly so called, and the good second-rate bodies who in outward circumstances are on the same social level. In the present case it is Lady William who thus stands out from her surroundings. Her brother the Rector has married a wife who supplies an admirable counterfoil. Good Mrs. Plowden, who in mental emergencies "lies down a little on the sofa, and closes her eyes" (a process that never does Lady William any good), and who makes such cumbrous preparations for each honoured guest whose approach is scanned from the Rectory windows, is incisively, but not ill-naturedly drawn. She is watching for the arrival of the dilatory and slightly dissipated Jim, her hope and anxiety:—

"Did Jim come back with you from the river, Flo?" "He thought he would like a little stroll before he came back—for half an hour. He promised me faithfully he would come back in half an hour." "It is more than half an hour now," said the Rector, with his watch in his hand; and then he sighed and went away. "Oh, children," said Mrs. Plowden, when his steps had died out in the distance of the rambling house, "how often must I tell you not to be so pointed with your half-hours! How can a young man tell, if he strolls out in the evening, exactly to a moment when he's to get back? He may meet a friend, or some little accident may happen, and he is kept, without any doing of his. And there is your father with his watch in his hand as if he had never been a young man himself. I don't want you, I am sure, to be anything but truthful—but if you could throw a little veil over such things! Now, however soon he may come, and however right he may be, your father will never forget having looked at his watch. He will say you can never trust in his word because of that half-hour." "I only said what he told me, mamma," said Florence, half offended. "As if there was any use in saying what he told you!" cried Mrs. Plowden, "when you know that a Jim's weakness never to be sure when he is coming in; and to say in half an hour is just as easy as in— Jim! why, here he is, as exact as clockwork. Run and tell your father, Florry: he can put his watch in his pocket."

The entire scene of the morning call, when Mrs. Plowden and Lady William welcome the half-foreign Mrs. Swinford on her arrival after many years to reside in the great house of Watcham, though too long to quote, is a subtle piece of writing. The reader scents a tragedy, as there was, in the past of the ladies who are exchanging armed civilities, but the excellent rectoress and her daughter are too self-conscious to perceive how close is their contact with a volcano. The best male character is Leo Swinford, the half-French lord of the manor, who remembers that of old he loved Lady William, when she was Emmy Plowden, as boys of twelve will love girls of eighteen. The redintegratio amoris on his side is admirably hinted, as is the gradually growing consciousness of the lady. "One's own child," she says (and it is the leading motive of her unselfish life),

"...is more to one than all the world beside." "Do you know," he said, "there is one thing that I think is almost better, that clears away the clouds and brings out the sun, and makes one see him:—and that is you." He put his hand upon hers softly, with a momentary touch. "That is a friend," said Lady William hastily. A little uneasy flush came over her face. She was very conscious, more conscious than was pleasant, of little Mab sewing on sedately, never lifting her eyes.

This little Mab, but for whom her mother might not have maintained such matronly indifference to the adorer of thirty, and whose existence, as she naïvely says at an important crisis, is proof enough that that mother was married, is one of the best portraits we remember of a fresh, honest, plainish English girl, nearly a tomboy, but by no means a hoiden. For variety of character and equability of tone this is one of Mrs. Oliphant's best novels.

The Greater Glory: a Story of High Life. By Maarten Maartens. 3 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

No Dutch novelist is thought of more favourably in English-speaking lands than Mr. Maartens. His new romance, 'The Greater Glory,' deepens our first impression of his characteristic mood and quality, which prove him to be of the brotherhood and discipleship of Thackeray. His Baron van Rexelaer, beggared and ousted from his estates and home, is an old hero with the humility, simplicity, and pathos of the best of the Newcomes. His young hero, Reinout, is what Arthur Pendennis might have been in the nineties, with the "passion for humanity" in place of the reflected cynicism of his literary creator; and Wendela is a heroine of the interior such as Laura Pendennis might well have shown herself if she had been Dutch, and a trifle more phlegmatic, sceptical, and adventurous of soul. The reticence of Mr. Maartens gives his narrative an occasional vagueness which contrasts vividly enough with the buttonholing familiarity of his English model; but there is no question as to whence he drew the tenderness and delicacy of the old baron's later days. Yet his originality and subtlety, where they display themselves, relieve him from the charge of being merely a more or less unconscious copyist.

Alice of the Inn. By John W. Sherer, C.S.I. 3 vols. (Allen & Co.)

THOUGH somewhat disjointed in construction and artificial in plot, there is a refreshing quaintness about Mr. Sherer's story of the old coaching days which honourably distinguishes it from the average library novel. His characters possess a decided individuality, and the atmosphere of the whole story has a certain charm of unfamiliarity rarely encountered in novels dealing with a bygone age. Although there is no lack of incident in 'Alice of the Inn,' the tale proceeds in a leisurely fashion thoroughly appropriate to an epoch in which the "steam pot" had not ousted the "speed of the tantivy trot" from its proud supremacy. Curiously enough, Mr. Sherer's female characters are, on the whole, much more elaborately and successfully drawn than his men. The straightforward heroine and her vivacious and romantic friend Emily Loftus form an excellently contrasted pair, while there is real humour in the angular, but honest Miss Fosh, an elderly spinster who is responsible, amongst other good sayings, for the remark that while "it takes a year or two to be moderately intimate with plain people, a bond of eternal friendship is formed in an afternoon with mountebanks."

Margaret Drummond, Millionaire. By Sophie F. F. Veitch. 3 vols. (Black.)

HEROINES suddenly promoted by a freak of fortune from frugal surroundings to the absolute control of a vast fortune are not unknown to the diligent student of romance; still, it may be admitted that Miss Veitch has lent interest and even freshness to a hackneyed situation by her lively pictures—obviously based on intimate personal experience—of the scenes and society in which Margaret Drummond's lot is cast. The difficulties and responsibilities of such a position are fully brought home to the reader, and the manner in which they are faced is quite in keeping with the high-spirited and chivalrous character ascribed to the heroine. In particular, her relations with the smuggler, Jock Lindsay, are treated with very considerable force, and even pathos. The scene of rescue is excellently done, and so too is the dramatic intervention of Margaret before the minister and elders. Although Miss Veitch's clever story does not belong to the category of the novel with a purpose, none the less it constitutes a serious indictment of the narrowness and hypocrisy of Scottish clericalism. And so, by an appropriate application of the doctrine of Nemesis, the unwilling protagonist of the Puritan spirit is led on to his ruin by the unconscious fascinations of the representative of latitudinarianism. The narrative portions of the story, especially in the opening chapter, are somewhat laboured in style, and in the main Miss Veitch is more successful in dialect than out of it. But her work is at least never slipshod. We may add, in conclusion, that an occasional touch of gaiety would have thrown the sombre colouring of the story into even stronger relief.

The Strange Adventures of Anelay Moreland. By R. Shelton Gresson. (Remington & Co.)

THE most that can be said of Mr. Gresson's romance is that it amply justifies its title. The adventures of Anelay Moreland are indeed strange, passing strange; but unluckily, instead of exciting the sympathy or compassion of the reader, four times out of five they only prove an incentive to unintended merriment. The book teems with ineffectual appeals to the emotions. When Anelay in her childhood gives her nurse the slip, and dances for the benefit of a ragged old clarinet player, her father, Major Moreland, "the proudest man alive, nearly fainted with horror and amazement." And yet the same proud parent "kept a sort of private soup kitchen," with the result that his premises "were literally infested with tramps and beggars of all descriptions." Hence the visit of a gipsy, and a lurid prophecy duly fulfilled in the subsequent chapters of the story, which, whether dealing with mundane or supernatural matters, rarely fails to overstep the bounds which separate pathos from bathos. The style of the writer leaves a good deal to be desired on the score of simplicity, and "kissor" and "interlocutrice" cannot be pronounced very happy examples of word-coinage.

Molly and her Man of War: the more or less Veracious Version of an Adventure. By Arabella Kenealy. (Bentley & Son.)

WHETHER veracious or not, the pages of 'Molly and her Man of War' are certainly vivacious. The "fetching" Miss Molly O'Brien, her Man of War (an American), and Molly's pretty cousin, who tells the adventures—not making the least of them—are a cheerful trio of young people bent on having the best of good times. Not entirely through their own unaided efforts the girls get it. They are thoroughly "up to date," and with lots of "go," as well as something we may call the "Eternal Feminine." Adventures are not always to the adventurous, and the events of the cruise are by no means tremendous, but all is glist to them. We fancy that the influences of Mark Twain, Mr. Jerome, and the New Humour generally have something to say to this little book. A spirit of audacious flippancy and rather determined light-heartedness informs the thing, and keeps it moving. In a longer effort one would probably weary of the attempt to keep it up. The speech and demeanour of the fair cousins are a thought too reckless and consciously devil-may-care to please every reader; but youth and sea air must be held responsible. An affair of the "true love" type sets in, and, for a space, Miss Molly's impertinent vagaries are swamped. She marries her Man of War, and the cousin is supposed to do something in a similar way.

Mr. Bailey - Martin. By Percy White. (Heinemann.)

IN presenting such a character as Mr. Percival Bailey-Martin the author has set himself a sufficiently difficult task. He may be congratulated on coming out of it as triumphantly as he has. Unless it deal with the adventurous and external incidents of life more than with the "history of the soul," the snares and pitfalls of the autobiographical form are obvious and numberless. When, as in this case, the record is of a character universally deemed despicable, who is supposed to ignore and yet reveal the true bent of his nature (only occasionally striving to mask it in high-sounding phrases), the difficulties are a foregone conclusion. Mr. White, with the aid of the necessary qualities—dry humour and delicate irony—succeeds nearly all the time. That the whole stock of artistic subtleties are not entirely at his command is not surprising; no hand but a master's can hold all. The picture is one exceedingly difficult to portray, and Mr. White treats it gallantly, serving up his Mr. Bailey-Martin, the perfected up-to-date snob, in most piquant fashion. The story of his early career is as good as possible; his childish education in the book of the snob and his marvellous aptitude for the part must be read to be appreciated. It is a cunning touch that suggests the scientific truth underlying the fact that his aristocracy-hunting progenitors have helped the young man's natural bent. The family of Bailey-Martin, originally of the smaller shopocracy, are of the parasitic order—warranted to climb. Their ambitions are most expansive. First they contrive to be on friendly terms with Stock Exchange magnates residing in Surbiton; then, by means of young Percival, the ideal snob, they manage to reach the real aristocracy, at length consolidating their hold by a carefully calculated marriage. The shades and gradations and the manners and tone of suburban and other society are delicately drawn; so is the contrast between the great Percival, his brother, and Lord Righton, men nearly of an age, but how different! Mr. White in thus cleverly conveying his material has resisted the temptation to force and exaggerated the note, and this is probably the secret of his success. Bailey-Martin is a careful study of the modern snob, a much more complex and highly organized being, it must be remembered, than the snob of Thackerayan days. This one has just enough of the elements of common man to make one accept him as a human being as well as a type.

BOOKS ON EDUCATION.

The New Academe. By Edward Hartington. (Chapman & Hall.)—This "educational romance," as the author calls it, is an ingenious account of a new experiment in schools, whereby the boys are allowed to do exactly what they like, the motive power being not commands and punishment, but reasoning and persuasion. Another excellent feature in this scheme of education is the use made of the influence of women in humanizing and elevating the boys' minds. It is no doubt a great and unavoidable defect in our public-school system that during the greater part of a boy's education he has little chance of coming into close contact with women of any sort. "Liberty Hall," the school founded on Mr. Hartington's principles, proves a great success—in fact, either the pupils must have been especially easy subjects, or the inevitable difficulties of substituting persuasion for punishment are rather overlooked by the author. Most of the characters in the book are eccentric, but at the same time are well and convincingly drawn. The sketch of Florian's father, who unfortunately dies at an early stage, is particularly good, and the account of his courtship is original and amusing. Towards the end the story becomes feeble and commonplace: there is too much kissing by and of the beautiful governesses of the school; and the episode of the Major and Miss Georgie, "whose bodice was no prude," is distinctly vulgar. The style is rather remarkable: there is hardly a sentence more than half a line long; and the short, crisp utterances, which have rather the effect of a discharge of minute guns, though amusing at first, in the end become wearisome. We should imagine that the book was written by a young woman, and should like to hear from her again, if she will avoid falling into the vulgar love-making which disfigures the last part of the story.

Science Teaching in Schools: an Address. By Henry Dyer. (Blackie & Son.)—Mr. Dyer's interesting address, delivered originally to the Glasgow Branch of the Teachers' Guild and now published for the advantage of the general reader, exhibits two characteristics, each within reasonable limits commendable, namely, belief in himself and enthusiastic belief in the practicability of improving elementary and secondary education in this country. Mr. Dyer does not write as an opponent in any real sense of so-called literary and linguistic education. Unless we misunderstand the drift of his argument, he does not so much advocate the introduction of formal sciences into the existing curriculum of a school as the scientific treatment of the existing subjects of study, and the inculcation of the valuable intellectual and moral qualities which result from habits of accurate observation and experiment. A very strong protest is uttered—and no protest can be too strong—against the mischievous custom of "cutting up the different scientific subjects into self-contained departments suitable for examination purposes, and dignifying each with a special name." We quite agree with Mr. Dyer that most of the science that can be conveniently taught in elementary schools might be given "under arithmetic and geography and their simpler applications." The initial difficulty in introducing such teaching as would satisfy Mr. Dyer is in the teachers themselves; who, as the address points out, either by fault of nature or error of training, seem unable to look at education from any standpoint but that of examinations. Drawing should be liberally introduced into our schools, but "it should be largely supplemented by actual knowledge of things"—by manual training, in fact. This method must not be narrowed down to "a training in the use of tools." Bacon long ago, and with the utmost clearness, pointed out the limits of the domains of oral teaching and reading in practical education; and the ill results of excess of oral teaching are becoming apparent in the superficiality and inaccuracy of the information possessed by the youths who now leave our schools. Whether these young people gain "mere cramming from books" depends upon the books and the way in which teachers allow them to be used. On the whole, Mr. Dyer's opinions of existing education are decidedly sound, and we hope—but hardly expect—that it may be improved in accordance with his suggestions; and we recommend to candidates of all grades for the office of teacher his remarks on the place in education of experiments, examinations, and imagination.

RURAL LIFE.

By Moorland and Sea. By F. A. Knight. (Stock.)—Mr. Knight's writing is most charming when it is about country sights and sounds; 'Midsummer Fields,' for example, 'A Northern Moorland,' and 'An Idyll of Winter' contain truly delightful descriptions of the ways of birds and fishes, of squirrels and of beetles. Mr. Knight is evidently a keen and loving observer of animal life, and he has a pleasant way of humanizing his descriptions of it so that they appear anything but dull or dry, as a mere collection of observations would be: any one who wishes a good example of his method should read the delightful passage about the squirrels in winter, which is too long, unfortunately, to quote. Less interesting are the first four papers, which describe a yacht-sail among the Western Highlands. They are a little overweighted, perhaps, with long descriptions of boisterous seas and Highland scenery; but there is at least one admirable story about the Highlandman who angrily asked, "And wha's going to walk five miles to scratch his match on your breeks?" Of the other papers the weakest is the 'Schoolmaster Abroad,' which contains some rather stale and not the best perverse answers given in class; but that on Sedgemoor has an interesting account of relics of King Alfred and of "King Monmouth's" troops still in existence, and a topographical account of the last battle fought on English ground. The author's chief fault is an insatiable desire to quote poetry in season and out of season; but altogether, for lovers of the country, and especially of Devon and Somerset, which Mr. Knight knows particularly well, this is eminently a book to read and to have.

Coming from any one but Mr. Phil Robinson, a title like Some Country Sights and Sounds (Fisher Unwin) might lead to the inference that this was another of the books on rural life of which we have lately had so many; but those acquainted with this amusing writer's discursive style need hardly be told that with him a title is merely a peg upon which to hang an indefinite number of articles. The escape from a menagerie of a tiger, which, "when last seen, was crossing Salisbury Plain and heading straight for Marlborough by way of Roundaway Hill," leads to a crisp sketch of Severnake Forest, "the pheasant ambushes of Martinell, the hazel spinnies of Pewsey, or the Ogbourn oasiers, where coot and moorhen haunt," coupled with the supposition that the runaway beast had a taste for fine scenery, enhanced by good mutton in the foreground; otherwise, with few exceptions, the topics which Mr. Robinson spreads with a light hand over six chapters have little to do with such sights and sounds as are familiar in this country. Even "Sheep and Goats," which we undoubtedly have with us, are not treated in a prosaic manner; and when the author asks, "How is it that the British Goat Society has done so little to popularize the kid as meat?" he does not pause for a reply, but goes off into a eulogy of kid as a cheap and delicious meat, preferable to lamb. In our opinion (and we speak from considerable experience) kid is only tolerable where mutton is bad or absent; while goats, which, he says, are so cheap to feed, are the most destructive brutes in the world, so long as there is anything left for them to destroy. When they have ruined every sapling within reach, exterminated entire flocks, and altered the physical conditions of a country, then, indeed, they undoubtedly possess the merit of being able to pick up the scanty herbage from ledges which nothing else without wings could reach. Mr. Robinson passes to Mr. Holman Hunt's celebrated picture of the scapegoat, worn out by the weight of sins and old age, tottering to the deceptive waters of the Dead Sea; and the author's view of the case, if somewhat flippantly expressed, is at least original. After quoting from Leviticus to prove that the goat selected was to be a kid—not a patriarchal beast like that in the picture—he continues:—

"Here, then, are the facts. The kid, vicariously iniquitous, was led away out of the camp, and 'let go.' Well, what then? I can easily picture to myself the 'fit person' hauling the complaining goatling along by its ears, and even fancy that I hear its piteous outcries in response to the sympathetic bleatings of its playmates. I can also imagine the 'fit person,' having got well out of sight of Aaron, letting the beast 'go,' and shouting at it, and stoning it to make it go further. But who that has ever tried to make a kid 'go' can suppose for a moment that he succeeded! Of course the little beast would make off at first; but only out of range of the chunks of rock flung after it by the 'fit person.' As soon as it was secured from misadventures by a moderate interval, it would stop and watch its persecutor; and the moment that he turned to go home it would turn and go after him. It is no good saying it would not. Let any person, fit or not, take a kid out of a herd, where its mother and aunts and cousins—above all, its playfellows—are, and try the experiment of 'letting it go in the wilderness.' I am convinced that, unless a miracle intervened, the attempt would fail. And there is no reason for supposing from Leviticus that the departure of the scapegoat was in any way miraculous. So that my own opinion is, that the kid used to come skipping back home again to the congregation. For a kid is a very volatile thing. Its own obliquities weigh very lightly indeed upon it. And as for the burden of the transgressions of Israel, I doubt myself if it made much of them."

There is more in the same strain, but we close our quotation, being mindful of the remark of Mrs. "Parson" Adams about "scriptures out of church." Troublesome boys, wild beasts at the Zoo and in their native haunts, birds of all kinds, immoral scarecrows, oysters and their first eaters, are only a few of the topics over which Mr. Robinson flutters, and on the whole this pleasant little book is well worthy of the author of 'My Indian Garden.'

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

THE Tales of a Nomad; or, Sport and Strife, by Charles Montague (Longmans & Co.), consist of ten short stories, three of which (and these the best by far) describe South African warfare, the remainder being devoted to sporting adventure in South Africa and in Borneo. Respecting strife there is an excellent description of a prolonged reconnaissance by two troopers, the author being one, which ended in a ride for life and in their having to run the gauntlet of the enemy's fire. Both men and one of the horses were wounded, but managed to reach camp, where the author's companion and the horse soon succumbed to their wounds. Next there is a lively description of storming Secocoeni's town or fort, accompanied by appreciative estimates of the value of native contingents, wild and tame, of Amaswazi allies, and of Lord Wolseley as a general, who, Mr. Montague says, "was not above taking the advice of the colonial leaders. In his despatches he did justice to all men who served under him. Where he ruled, there were no aggravating orders and counter-mandating of orders when the book came round. We felt that he knew what he was about himself, and accordingly we too felt confident that all would go well, or that, at the very least, our energies would not be misdirected." That, it will be conceded, is high praise; and as the author writes with such correct soldierly feeling in respect to the sympathy which is due to the general, on whose shoulders the whole burden of responsibility rests, one is disposed to believe the commendation to be more than mere compliment. Then comes a chapter which is by no means entirely pleasant reading for Englishmen, for it deals with an episode in our unfortunate conflict with the Boers. We are glad to say ample justice is done to them and to Paul Kruger, who is termed a born ruler of men, and also to our brave soldiers, whose feelings on the termination of hostilities are easier to imagine than to describe without offence. The tales of sport are pleasantly told, and there is plenty of exciting and interesting adventure. They refer to a time and quantity of game now past and gone, and point clearly to the need for some effectual restriction on slaughter and provision of game laws, unless many beautiful and useful animals are speedily to become extinct.

Deephaven, by Sarah Orne Jewett, seems to be a reprint of a book published some years ago in America—a reprint for which the gratitude of English readers is due to Messrs. Osgood, McIlvaine & Co. The author informs us in the preface that her object was to create a sympathy between city people and the inhabitants of out-of-the-way country villages, by making them understand one another's points of view; and certainly, so far at least as arousing interest in the old-world inhabitants of decaying villages is concerned, Miss Jewett has been most successful. Deephaven is supposed to be a seacoast town, which was once busy and thriving, but has now, through embargoes and the like, fallen into irretrievable decay; naturally it is peopled to a great extent by old salts full of weather-lore and of interminable yarns about their voyages. The talk of these men is quite the best part of the book: their discursive, half-deprecating, half-assured manner is admirably rendered, but perhaps nowhere quite so well as in the chapter where Capt. Sands gives his views on second-sight. The old women of Deephaven are hardly less delightful with their trite maxims and pious ejaculations; indeed, it is wonderful that with very similar ways of talking they should all be so well discriminated: if a preference is to be assigned to any it must be to Mrs. Patton, the charwoman, whose character is thus pithily summed up by her neighbour Miss Dockum: "Good consistent Church-member; always been respected; useful among the sick." The two Boston-bred young ladies who are the heroines of the book are the least well done; they are sometimes rather tiresomely childish and "high-schooly" (if the phrase may be allowed) in their behaviour, or in their asseverations that they do not mind their frocks being spoiled; but one gets reconciled to them in the end, as they manage so excellently to draw out all the other quaint characters. Most of the illustrations really illustrate the letterpress, and in themselves are good.

MESSRS. LONGMAN & Co. publish an accurate and useful little volume under the title of The History of Australia and New Zealand from 1806 to 1890, in which the important facts with regard to the discovery and growth of the South Sea colonies are set forth in an interesting fashion by critics who are thoroughly competent for their task. The book is pleasantly illustrated.

Noah Porter, a Memorial by Friends, edited by O. S. Merriam (Sampson Low & Co.), is hardly to be called a biography. It contains the contributions of various relatives and friends of the late President of Yale College, who write of him from various points of view. The general impression to be gathered from it is that Dr. Porter was an amiable, conscientious, hard-working man, well read in philosophical literature, and possessed of much sound sense and manly feeling. The most interesting portion of the volume is an extract from a sermon of his containing an account of a Connecticut village in 1836, before railways had penetrated into the state or emigration westwards and to the large towns had begun. It gives a pleasant picture of a hilly country where there was no person of great wealth and also no paupers. A moderated Calvinism braced the energies of a primitive community, who did not shrink from hard work and clung to old ways.

MESSRS. CHATTO & WINDUS send us those useful little volumes, The Shilling Peacocks, The Shilling Baronetage, The Shilling Knightage, and The Shilling House of Commons, which Mr. Walford edits. We notice, however, occasional slips. We have received also The School Calendar (Whittaker & Co.), the chief point of interest in which is Mr. Storr's preface. Mr. Storr has apparently been premature in supposing that Mr. Walker's vigorous opposition has put an end to the designs of the Charity Commission on St. Paul's School. We have also on our table the St. Andrews University Calendar (Blackwood & Sons) and that of the University College of North Wales (Manchester, Cornish).

The laboratories of the Welsh seminary seem, to judge by the plan, to be on an extensive scale.

We thought Mr. Lang's estimate of 'Quentin Durward' a trifle too high. On the other hand, we are of opinion that in his preface to Mr. Nimmo's Dryburgh edition he clearly rates St. Ronan's Well too low. He places it below 'Peveril' and 'The Monastery': as if either of those contained a character to be compared with Meg Dods. Nor does Mr. Lang quite realize how fine was the tragic interest of the novel according to Scott's original scheme. There are two or three excellent illustrations by Sir George Reid.

WE HAVE on our table The Trustees Act, 1893, by A. R. Rudall and J. W. Greig (Jordan & Sons),—William Blake, by A. T. Story (Sonnen-schein),—The Court of Louis XV., by I. de Saint-Amand, translated by E. G. Martin (Hutchinson),—Elementary Trigonometry, by H. S. Hall and S. R. Knight (Macmillan),—The Junior Students' First Latin Translation Book, by A. H. Thomas (Rivington, Percival & Co.),—The Tutorial Latin Reader (Clivo),—Key to Mr. J. B. Lock's Shilling Arithmetic (Macmillan),—Seamans' Phonetic Method: Albany Phonetic Reader, Nos. I. to III. (Sonnen-schein),—A Text-Book of Solid or Descriptive Geometry, by Alex. B. Dobbie (Blackie),—Fourier's Series and Spherical Harmonics, by W. E. Byerly (Boston, U.S., Ginn),—School Headings in Geography for Junior Forms, by E. R. Wethey (Rivington, Percival & Co.),—Addison's Papers on Sir Roger de Coverley from the Spectator, edited by F. E. Wilcroft (Blackie),—Nine Fancy Pictures of Events in Shakespeare's Country, Town, and Court Life, by S. Cooper (F. Norgate),—Do You Know It? by C. E. Clark (Saxon & Co.),—Physical Drill of all Nations, by A. Alexander (Philip),—The Veil Lifted: Modern Developments of Spirit Photography, by J. T. Taylor (Whittaker),—Modern Mystics and Modern Magic, by A. Lillie (Sonnen-schein),—Practical Ventriologism and its Sister Arts, by R. Ganthony (Gill),—Headache and other Morbid Cephalic Sensations, by Harry Campbell, M.D. (Lewin),—A Theory of Development and Heredity, by H. B. Orr (Macmillan),—Cottage Lectures on Home Nursing, by C. J. Wood (S.P.C.K.),—Hardy Ornamental Flowering Trees and Shrubs, by A. D. Webster ('Gardening World' Office),—Forest Law, by B. H. Baden-Powell, C.I.E. (Bradbury & Co.),—Sights and Shadows, collected by F. G. Lee, D.D. (W. H. Allen & Co.),—Irish Ideas, by W. O'Brien, M.P. (Longmans),—Pagan Papers, by E. Grahams (Mathews & Lane),—The Maid of Brittany, by Count Orsi, 2 vols. (Remington),—Tales of the Children's Ward, by H. Morten and H. F. Gothen (Low),—The Story Albums of Animals (Wells Gardner),—War Times, or the Lads of Craigraig, by S. Tytler (W. H. Allen & Co.),—The Hampton Mystery, by Mrs. H. Lewis (Henderson),—Dr. Weedon's Waif, by K. Somers (Digby & Long),—Through Forest and Fire, by E. S. Ellis (Nelson),—East Maccaills, by A. Avery (Stoneman),—The Beauty of Boscastle, by T. M. Ellis (Sonnen-schein),—Up the Chimney to Ninny Land, by A. S. M. Chester (Nelson),—Gunner Jingo's Jubilee, by Major-General T. B. Strange (Remington),—Across Texas, by E. S. Ellis (Nelson),—The Nursery Tax at Streatley Manor House, by the Author of 'Gipsy Mike' (Wells Gardner),—The Death Penalty, by O. Mellor (Sonnen-schein),—The Rusty Sword, by Mrs. J. H. Riddell (S.P.C.K.),—The Boys' and Girls' Companion, 1893 (C.E.S.S.I.),—The Church Worker, Vol. XII. (C.E.S.S.I.),—Life's Shadows, by the Rev. C. O. Blakelock (S.P.C.K.),—The Book of Revelation, Sermons, by the Rev. F. Shaw (Cambridge, Macmillan & Bowes),—Foundations of Sacred Study, by C. J. Ellicott, D.D. (S.P.C.K.),—Theism as Grounded in Human Nature, by W. L. Davidson, LL.D. (Longmans), —Christian Creeds and Confessions, by G. A. Gumlich, D.D., translated by L. A. Whentley (F. Norgate).—Readings for Mothers' Union, by the Hon. Mrs. Bulkeley-Owen (S.P.C.K.).—Tides for Sunday: From Advent to Trinity, by E. F. K. Yeatman (Masters).—The Spirit of Liberty, Sermons, by A. T. Wigram, D.C.L. (Bomrose & Sons).—Facing the For, by Violet Brooke-Hunt (S.P.C.K.).—The Church Catechism Explained, by the Rev. A. W. Robinson (Cambridge, University Press).—The Trial of Dr. Briggs before the General Assembly, by a Stranger (New York, Randolph).—Anglican Orders and Jurisdiction, by E. Denny, M.A. (S.P.C.K.).—And a Continuous Narrative of the Life of Christ, arranged by the Rev. A. E. Hillard (Rivington, Percival & Co.). Among New Editions we have Jedburgh Abbey, by J. Watson (Edinburgh, Douglas).—Wherstead: some Materials for its History, by F. B. Zincke (Simpkin).—Thus Shalt Thou Live, by S. Kneipp (Grevel).—and The Days of his Vanity, by S. Grundy (Chatto & Windus).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS. ENGLISH.

Theology.
Apollonius, The Apology and Acts of, edited with Preface, &c., by F. G. Conybeare, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Guinness's (M. G.) The Story of the China Inland Mission, Vol. 2, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
McCrack's (A.) The Grand Old Book, being Lectures on Inspiration and the Higher Criticism, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Scrivener's (F. H. A.) Adversaria Critica Sacra, with a Short Explanatory Introduction, 8vo. 10/ cl.
Voysey's (Rev. C.) Theism, or the Religion of Common Sense, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Law.
Lefevre's (Right Hon. G. S.) English Commons and Forests, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Manson's (R.) The Debentures and Debenture Stock of Trading and other Companies, 8vo. 12/6 cl.

Fine Art.
Goette's (Dr. W.) Illustrated Manual of Hand and Eye Training, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.

Poetry.
Gems from the Talmud, translated into English Verse by Rev. I. Myers, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Macculum's (M. W.) Tennyson's Idylls of the King and Arthurian Story, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Spenser (E.) The Poet of Poets, the Love Verse from the Minor Poems of, edited by Grosart, 12mo. 3/6 cl.

Music.
Cusack's (Prof.) Lectures on Music, cr. 8vo. 2/ net.
Horvey's (A.) Masters of French Music, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Hope's (R. C.) Medieval Music, an Historical Sketch, 5/ cl.

Philosophy.
Blow's (S.) Reasoning Process for Second Year Certificate Students, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net.
Kidd's (B.) Social Evolution, 8vo. 10/ net.

History and Biography.
Adam (Villiers de L'Isle), his Life and Works, from French of Vicomte Heusey by Lady M. Loyd, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Alger's (J. G.) Glories of the French Revolution, 4/ cl.
Mather's (G. E.) Two Great Scotsmen, the Brothers William and John Hunter, imp. 16mo. 10/6 net.
Rosa's (J. D.) The Muhammadans, 1001-1701, 12mo. 2/6 cl. (Epochs of Indian History).
Saint-Amand's (L. de) Women of Versailles: Last Years of Louis XV., trans. by E. S. Martin, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Geography and Travel.
Murray's Handbook for Travellers in Oxfordshire, cr. 8vo. 6/ Folk-lore.
Mackinlay's (J. M.) Folk-lore of Scottish Lochs and Springs, 8vo. 5/ net.

Science.
Allsop's (F. C.) Induction Coils and Coil Making, 3/6 cl.
Butschli's (O.) Investigations on Microscopic Foams and on Protoplasm, trans. by E. A. Minchin, 8vo. 12/ net.
Gunn's (B. S.) Business Arithmetic, 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Kennelly's (A. E.) Theoretical Elements of Electro-Dynamic Machinery, Vol. 1, 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Preston's (T.) The Theory of Heat, 8vo. 17/ net.
Preyer's (W.) Mental Development in the Child, translated by H. W. Brown, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Walker's (J. E.) The Voices of the Stars, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Wetstein's (Dr. H.) Elements of Natural Science, Part 3, 2/6 cl.
Zwisch's (Dr. H.) Optical Experiments, rev. 8vo. 2/ cl.

General Literature.
Ashton's (J.) Varia, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Boysen's (H. H.) Commentary on the Works of Henrik Ibsen, cr. 8vo. 7/6 net.
Campbell's (Mrs. V.) The Shibboleth, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Giesing's (G.) Born in Halle, a Novel, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
The Odd Women, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Gospi's (G. H. D.) The Chess Pocket Manual, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Henniker's (F.) Outlines, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Hope's (A. E.) Cap and Gown Comedy, a Schoolmaster's Stories, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Ladies in the Field, Sketches of Sport, edited by the Lady Greville, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Linton's (Mrs. E. L.) The One Too Many, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Lisle's (P. de) The Hero of the Pelican, an Ocean Drama, 3/6 cl.
Martin's (B. S.) Windfalls of Observation, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net.
Modern Heretic, The Story of a Schismatic, a Novel with a Purpose, cr. 8vo. 8/ cl.
Moore's (F. P.) A Gray Eye or So, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Murray's (H.) A Song of Silence, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Needell's (Mrs. J. H.) Julian Karalake's Secret, a Novel, 6/ cl.
Ortolfo's (F.) Evening Tales, done into English from the French by J. C. Harris, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Phillip's (H.) Some Every-day Folks, 3 vols. 31/6 cl.
Sera's (M.) Farewell, Love, a Novel, translated by Mrs. H. Harland, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Sharpe's (W.) Vistas, 12mo. 5/ cl.
Sheldon's (G.) The Standish of High Acre, 2 vols. 21/ cl.
Stuart's (E.) Inevitable, cr. 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Tirbrook's (W.) The Little Widow and other Episodes, 2/6 cl.
Trevor-Battye's (A.) Pictures in Prose of Nature, Wild Sport, and Humble Life, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Whately's (G. E. S.) Hotel Book-keeping, Tabular System; General Book-keeping for Traders, Merchants, &c., 8vo. 6/ each, cl.
Wynne's (F.) Whisper! cr. 8vo. 2/6 net.
Xenophon's Art of Horsemanship, translated by M. H. Morgan, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net.

FOREIGN.

Law.
Bretschel (S.) Die Civitas auf deutschem Boden bis zum Ausgang der Karolingerzeit, 3m.

Fine Art and Archaeology.
Handbuch der klassischen Altertums-Wissenschaft: Vol. 6, Part 1, Klassische Kunstarchäologie, v. Prof. Bittl, 8m. 60.
Kulturbilder aus dem klassischen Altertume, Vol. 6, 3m.

Drama.
Barres (M.) Une Journée parlementaire, 2fr.

Palaeography.
Giry (A.) Manuel de Diplomatique, 20fr.
History and Biography.

Vagniez (G.) Le Père Joseph et Richelieu, 2 vols. 20fr.
Journal du Canonnier Briard, 1793-1802, 3fr. 50.
Villars (Marquis de) Mémoires de la Cour d'Espagne, publiés par A. Morel-Fatio, 6fr.
Wirth (A.) Aus orientalischen Chroniken, 12m.

Hétopography.
Advielle (V.) La Bibliothèque de Napoléon à Sainte-Hélène, 2fr.

Lumbrico (A.) Bibliographia regionis dell' Epoca napoleonica, 3fr. 50.
Sommervogel (C.) Bibliothèque de la Compagnie de Jésus, Vol. 5, 40fr.

Philology.
Corpus Glossariorum Latinorum a G. Loewe inchoatum recensuit, ed. G. Goetz, Vol. 5, 32m.
Forchhammer (P. W.) Homer, seine Sprache, die Kampfplätze seiner Helden u. Götter, 3m.
Zielinski (T.) August Nauck, ein Bild seines Lebens u. seiner Werke, 3m.

Science.
Dornblith (O.) Wörterbuch der klinischen Kunstausdrücke, 3m.

Kirchhoff (G.) Vorlesungen üb. mathematische Physik, Vol. 4, 8m.
Lukjanow (S. M.) Grundzüge e. allgemeinen Pathologie des Gefäß-Systems, 10m.

Neumann (F.) Vorlesungen üb. die Theorie der Capillarität, Part 7, 8m.

Seitz (C.) Grundriss der Kinderheilkunde, 9m.
Spengel (O. C.) Das entdeckte Geheimnis der Natur im Bau u. in der Befruchtung der Blumen, Poem.-Druck der Aug. v. 1793, 8m.

TO WILLIAM MORRIS.

DEDICATION OF A FORTHCOMING VOLUME OF POEMS.

THE sea of the years that endure not,
Whose tide shall endure till we die
And know what the seasons assure not,
If death be or life be a lie,
Sways hither the spirit and thither,
A wail in the swing of the sea
Whose wrecks are of memories that wither
As leaves of a tree.

We hear not and hail not with greeting
The sound of the wings of the years,
The storm of the sound of them beating,
That none till it pass from him hears:
But tempest nor calm can imperil
The treasures that fade not or fly;
Change bids them not change and be sterile,
Death bids them not die.

Hearts plighted in youth to the royal
High service of hope and of song,
Sent fast for endurance as loyal,
And proved of the years as they throng,
Conceive not, believe not, and fear not
That age may be other than youth;
That faith and that friendship may bear not
And utter not truth.

Not yesterday's light nor to-morrow's
Gleams nearer or clearer than gleams,
Though joys be forgotten and sorrows
Forgotten as changes of dreams,
The dawn of the days unforgotten
That noon could eclipse not or slay,
Whose fruits were as children begotten
Of dawn upon day.

The years that were flowerful and fruitless,
The years that were fruitful and dark,
The hopes that were radiant and rootless,
The hopes that were winged for their mark,

Lie soft in the sepulchres fashioned
Of hours that arise and subside,
Absorbed and subdued and impassioned,
In pain or in pride.

But far in the night that entombs them
The starshine as sunshine is strong,
And clear through the cloud that resumes them
Remembrance, a light and a song,
Rings lustrous as music and bovers
As birds that impend on the sea,
And thoughts that their prison-house covers
Arise and are free.

Forgetfulness deep as a prison
Holds days that are dead for us fast
Till the sepulchre sees arisen
The spirit whose reign is the past,
Disentrained of darkness, and kindled
With life that is mightier than death,
When the life that obscured it has dwindled
And passed as a breath.

But time nor oblivion may darken
Remembrance whose name will be joy
While memory forgets not to hearken,
While manhood forgets not the boy
Who heard and exulted in hearing
The songs of the sunrise of youth
Ring radiant above him, unfearing
And joyous as truth.

Truth, winged and enkindled with rapture
And sense of the radiance of yore,
Fulfilled you with power to recapture
What never might singler before—
The life, the delight, and the sorrow
Of troublous and chivalrous years
That knew not of night or of morrow,
Of hopes or of fears.

But wider the wing and the vision
That quicken the spirit have spread
Since memory beheld with derision
Man's hope to be more than his dead,
From the mists and the snows and the thunders
Your spirit has brought for us forth
Light, music, and joy in the wonders
And charms of the north.

The wars and the woes and the glories
That quicken and lighten and rain
From the clouds of its chronicled stories,
The passion, the pride, and the pain,
Whose echoes were mute and the token
Was lost of the spells that they spake,
Rise bright at your bidding, unbroken
Of ages that break.

For you, and for none of us other,
Time is not: the dead that must live
Hold commune with you as a brother
By grace of the life that you give.
The heart that was in them is in you,
Their soul in your spirit endures:
The strength of their song is the sinew
Of this that is yours.

Hence is it that life, everlasting
As light and as music, abides
In the sound of the surge of it, casting
Sound back to the surge of the tides,
Till sons of the sons of the Norsemen
Watch, hurtling to windward and lee,
Round England, unbacked of her horsemen,
The steeds of the sea.

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

MR. G. W. CHILDS.

GEORGE WILLIAM CHILDS, who died last Saturday, was the most notable citizen of Philadelphia since Benjamin Franklin made that city his home. Franklin was seventeen when he left Boston for Philadelphia, while Childs was but fourteen when he took a corresponding journey from Baltimore, where he was born on the 12th of May, 1829. His earliest liking was for a seafaring life, this being one of Franklin's boyish tastes also. Franklin was never disenchanted by experience, whereas young Childs entered the navy when a lad. Fifteen months afterwards he resolved to exchange a life at sea for one on land, and, as has been said above, he went to Philadelphia at the age of fourteen. He had then two dollars in his pocket, and he obtained employment as clerk in a book-store at a weekly salary of two dollars and a half.

Childs lived as frugally as Franklin when his remuneration was small, and, like him, he saved money out of his scanty earnings. At the end of four years he had amassed a few hundred dollars, and, at the early age of eighteen, he started as a publisher on his own account. He was a shrewd rather than a scholarly man, and as he had a keen sense of the market value of literature, he prospered in business. Soon after beginning he took Mr. Peterson as his partner, and the firm of Childs & Peterson attained a conspicuous place in the publishing craft. The books which it issued were of a high class. Many were very popular, such as Dr. Kane's 'Arctic Explorations.' Childs obtained a reputation for treating authors with commendable liberality, which made them anxious to secure him as their publisher. Dr. Kane received from him 75,000 dollars. He was the publisher of Dr. Allibone's 'Dictionary of English Literature,' a work which is both useful and unique. The compiler dedicated the first volume to him as one "who has greatly furthered my labours by his enterprise and zealous and intelligent interest."

With the capital acquired by publishing, Childs became proprietor of the Public Ledger, which was then struggling for existence. He began boldly, raising the price of each number from six to ten cents weekly, and largely increasing that of the advertisements. Moreover, he refused to insert any advertisement which was tainted with immorality, the immediate result being the diminution of the annual receipts by 15,000 dollars. He further treated public questions without levity or gross partisanship, and public men without scurrility. This was a novelty in American journalism, and the difficulty of following a good example is shown by the fact that it is something of a rarity still. The policy of Childs as conductor of the Public Ledger was justified to the full. It became the favourite family newspaper. Its circulation grew rapidly, and advertisers were eager to pay any terms for space. When Mr. Childs became proprietor, the printed matter in each number covered 525 square inches; a few years later it had increased to 1,573, and the paper continued expanding to its existing dimensions. He built a magnificent office to accommodate the 300 men who were engaged upon the Public Ledger. These men presented an address to him on the 4th of July, 1867, in which they thanked him "for having built a palace for them to work in; a printing-house which is unparalleled in the world; a printing-office which, in all its departments, is the most healthy, comfortable, and spacious on the American Continent." His consideration for those in his employment was unprecedented. He insured their lives, so that after death their families might not be left destitute, and his forethought extended to providing a place of burial; he presented to the Philadelphia topographical society a cemetery at Woodlands, and a sun wherewith to keep the grounds in good order. In concert with his friend Mr. Drexel, an eminent banker in Philadelphia, he established a home at Colorado Springs, in the State of Colorado, for the accommodation of printers whose health had failed.

All that Childs did for Philadelphia raised him in the estimation of his fellow citizens, and his good deeds merited honour from the world. In addition, he did much to command respect and gratitude in this country. He admired the works of George Herbert and William Cowper, and he gave token of this by placing, with the consent of the Dean and Chapter, a stained-glass window in Westminster Abbey in remembrance of them. He repaired the neglect which had left the grave of Leigh Hunt unmarked by a monument, by placing one in Kensal Green Cemetery. He had previously done a like honour to the grave of his countryman Edgar Allan Poe. He was the largest subscriber to the fund raised for placing a memorial window to Thomas Moore in the church at Bromham. He also contributed to placing a window in memory of Milton in St. Margaret's, Westminster; to erecting a memorial to Bishop Lancelot Andrews and Ken at Winchester; and to building a clock-tower and drinking-fountain at Stratford-on-Avon, in commemoration alike of England's greatest poet and the jubilee of her Queen.

If he had little leisure for reading and no passion for writing, he was an enthusiastic collector of books and manuscripts. In his collection are to be found a presentation copy to Dickens of Leigh Hunt's poetical works; a copy of 'Hood's Comic Annual' for 1842, given by the author to Dickens, with two stanzas which end by wishing Dickens a passage across the Atlantic as good "as the best among his works"; a copy of the first edition of the 'Scarlet Letter,' with a letter from Hawthorne; the manuscript of a part of Bryant's translation of the Iliad, and also of Lowell's June Idyl 'Under the Willows'; the manuscript of President Grant's address at the opening of the Exhibition in 1876; and the manuscript of 'Our Mutual Friend.' It would occupy too much space at present to describe the several manuscripts in detail; suffice it, then, to say that among them are comprised letters and poems from Burns and Moore, Swift and Pope, Pepys and Thomson, Bryant and Longfellow, Wendell Holmes and Tennyson.

The hospitality of Childs remains a pleasant memory to many visitors to Philadelphia. He undoubtedly had intellectual superiors among his fellow citizens, but none succeeded so well as he in making his own life pleasant by diffusing happiness around him. He was an admirable specimen of a self-made American. As a publisher he succeeded in pleasing authors while adding to his wealth; as the conductor of a popular newspaper he never made an enemy; and his death at a comparatively early age is a loss to his country, and one which many who were not his countrymen will heartily regret.

ACTS II. 9.

In the January number of the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for this year, at pp. 152-164, is a paper headed 'Contributions towards the History of Anglo-Burmese Words,' by Major R. C. Temple, in the course of which, at p. 162, he traces the various corruptions which Ayodhya, the name of the capital of Siam, has undergone, the most common of these being the spelling "Judea." On reading this statement it instantly occurred to me that this corruption might be the solution of the puzzle with regard to the same word "Judea" in the Acts of the Apostles ii. 9. There, as is well known, the multitude on the day of Pentecost run through a string of names of countries from which they had travelled up to Jerusalem, and between Mesopotamia and Cappadocia occurs the word Judea. This from the days of Tertullian to our own has been a cruz which no ingenuity could solve. India, Idumæa, and other readings have been freely suggested, but as every old text without exception reads Ioudæa, and the multitude must have meant some distant country beyond Mesopotamia, the puzzle has hitherto remained unsolved. But Major Temple, in the above-quoted paper, supplies the missing link when on p. 164 he quotes from Yule's 'Hobson-Jobson,' s. v. "Judea," "These are names often given in old writers to the city of Ayodhya, so called apparently after the Hindu city of Rama, Ayodhya, which we now call Oudh." Yule also in 'Hobson-Jobson,' under the word "Oudh," writes: "Oudh, Oude, properly the ancient and holy city of Ayodhya, the capital of Rama.....Also the province in which Ayodhya was situated, but of which Lucknow for about 150 years has been the capital." He gives a quotation from the 'Ramayana,' book iii., proving that the name was known so far back as the compilation of that work. Ayodhya and Ioudæa represented precisely the same sounds to St. Luke, and doubtless many Jews of the lost Ten Tribes dwelling in this distant region would feel pleased at the similarity in sound between their ancestral and modern home.

To put the problem in a nutshell, as Judea=Ayodhya throughout the Middle Ages, so Ayodhya=Ioudæa=Judea in the first century after Christ. EDWARD SCOTT, M.R.A.S.

DICKENS IN YORKSHIRE.

NOTHING could be farther from my intention than to charge persons for whom I had so much respect as the landlady of the King's Head Inn and her sister with "lying" or "equivocation." I used the word "reticence" when speaking of the reply they gave as to the length of Dickens's visit. ("We cannot tell you the precise length of his stay," they said.) They were incapable of falsehood, and when they said that he had written a good deal of 'Nicholas Nickleby' in their house, they no doubt thought that his notes for copy were copy. A. S. asks how I reconcile my "statement that Dickens observed a shop on the opposite side of the market-place, which seemed a favourite resort of men for idle gossip, with the [my] subsequent assertion that the same shop could not be seen from the market cross." I, however, made no such statement. If A. S. re-reads my letter, he or she will see that the statement he or she refers to was only named as a statement commonly made in Barnard Castle, and that I disproved it by saying that the shop in which Humphrey then lived could not be seen from the King's Head Inn. A. S. says that Dickens met Humphrey in the smoking-room—a very probable meeting ground. Humphrey, however, told me that Dickens went into his shop in the way described, and gave me a long and circumstantial account of the interview, during which Dickens persuaded him to take him to some of the schools. The landlady of the hotel—it was then an inn—told me that "Humphrey drove Dickens to Bowes when he went about the clocks." In whichever way it happened, the result was the same, so far as Mr. Shaw was concerned. He met with much sympathy in the North. A. S. says that Dickens paid a second visit to Barnard Castle, and then stayed six weeks. Will A. S. give the date of this visit? At present there seems to be no evidence of it beyond a fact "to which many persons now living can bear witness," viz., that a woman who was a servant at the inn at the time, but is now dead, frequently referred to his six weeks' visit. If such a visit ever took place, there must be many persons now alive who remember it and can give the date.

M. H.

Honley, Yorkshire, Jan. 30, 1894.

YOUR correspondent M. H. has made some errors in his interesting letter on 'Dickens in Yorkshire,' and as these errors may (if allowed to pass unnoticed) mislead some more of those natives of Barnard Castle, perhaps you will allow one of them to point out those errors.

1. Dickens never stayed at the George Inn, Greta Bridge. He stayed at the New Inn, kept by Mr. Martyn, who horsed the Glasgow mail. The New Inn is now known as Thorpe Grange, and is occupied by a retired Yorkshire schoolmaster named Simpson.

2. Dickens's letter was not written from the George Inn, Greta Bridge.

3. The said letter was not printed by Forster. It was printed in the collection of Dickens's letters published by his daughter and his sister-in-law.

4. The George Inn, Greta Bridge, is never described by Dickens as the place where Nicholas Nickleby met Mr. Squeers. It was the Saracen's Head, Snow Hill, where this meeting took place. Dickens's description of the inn as standing in the midst of a moor is not so far out, after all. Thorpe Grange stands by itself, and in so near Stanmoor's "wild and wintry waste" that, on a blustery winter's night (such as January 31st, 1838, was), it would (at 11 P.M.) have all the appearance so vividly described in the February 1st letter.

As to the question asked by your other correspondent, the sign above the shop was always "Humphreys," never Humphrey. It is a furniture shop now, and has been for years. Its old front is gone, and of course the name of Humphreys is gone also. The shop below the cross where Mr. Humphreys lived when Dickens visited Barnard Castle was afterwards occupied by Mr. Borrowdale, a gunmaker, and is now occupied by Mr. Errington, a butcher.

J. M. RICHARDSON.

February 5, 1894.

IN what year and in what way did the public first become informed of the mismanagement of Yorkshire schools? Some legal proceedings must have occurred, for it became a common topic of conversation. This must have been early in the twenties. I was then a small boy, and used to hear the schools talked about; but what specially impressed me was that when I got into disgrace my father would say to me, "I shall have to send you to a Yorkshire school." I was not a bad boy, but was sometimes perverse and obstinate, as small boys are now and then, except those saintly ones who die early. My father read in the Times the reports of some proceedings which drew public attention to the schools and their abuses. I find no notice of them in the Annual Register.

J. D.

MRS. BENTLEY.

THERE passed away on the 1st of this month, at her house at Croydon, a lady in her ninety-fourth year, at whose house in London in former years many antiquaries, archaeologists, and men of letters used to meet. She was the widow of the scholar-printer Samuel Bentley, who was the brother of the eminent publisher Richard Bentley. Round Mr. Samuel Bentley's hospitable board might frequently be found Sir Harris Nicolson, Duffus Hardy, Sir Charles Young (Garter), Endell Tyler, Dr. Brewer, and many others. They met for good talk and for good music. Those were days when Handel was sometimes played after dinner and Corelli and old classic music. At Mr. Bentley's house in Southampton Row glees were much in vogue, and "White sand and grey sand, who'll buy my grey sand?" or "Oh, go to Jane Glover and tell her I love her," was admirably rendered, whilst such ballads as 'The Shan Van Voght' gave spirit to the evening.

Mrs. Bentley retained her faculties to the last, and her conversational power. She read her Tyndall and her Froude, and kept herself up to the time of day. Like the late Lady Grenville of Dropmore, she would drive out every day, summer or winter, and thus towards the end of last October she caught a chill, from the effects of which she never recovered. She is briefly referred to in the 'Dictionary of National Biography' under the head of her husband, Samuel Bentley. She will be missed by many, for she was an entirely sincere woman, of masculine good sense and high principle, and much attached to the Church.

G. B.

THE LIBRARY OF THE COMTE DE LIGNEROLLES

THE sale of the first portion of the library of that zealous and eccentric collector the Comte de Lignerolles took place last week in Paris. Among the noticeable treasures a copy of the 'Imitation' (the 1663 edition of the translation of Beuil, Prior of Saint-Val, bound with the arms and cipher of Henriette de France, and containing an autograph letter of hers to Mazarin) fetched 6,000 fr. A copy of the Abbé de Choisy's translation (1692), which had belonged to Madame de Maintenon, and bore her arms, fetched 3,110 fr. Philippe de Mornay's famous treatise on the Eucharist, the copy (Rochelle, 1598) given by the author to his daughter Martha, brought 1,700 fr. The first edition of the 'Horloge de Sapience,' with sixteen miniatures, sold for 4,520 fr. A Psalter printed in Officina Simonis Colinaei, in a binding of the seventeenth century, went for 2,500 fr. 'Le Psautier de David' (Mettayer of Paris, 1586), 1,700 fr. St. Augustine's 'Confessions,' the Jesuit translation of 1688, 2,000 fr., on account of its fine binding. The 'Icones Veteris Testamenti' (1547), 1,200 fr. The 'Officio de la Semaine Sainte,' presented to the Princesse de Lamballe by Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, and containing autograph inscriptions by them and the future Duchesse d'Angoulême, brought 30,000 fr. The 'Homélies du Bréviaire,' Baudouin's translation (1640), went for 10,000 fr. A fine Horse of the fifteenth century, bound in the sixteenth century, 6,250 fr.; another, 5,050 fr.; and a third, 2,320 fr. 'Les Simulachres et Historiées faces de la Mort,' Lyons, 1538, in a splendid binding of Trautz-Bauzonnet, fetched 8,500 fr. Charles de Bouvelles's geometry, 'Livre singulier et utile,' the copy of François I. (1542), brought 5,160 fr.; and the original edition of Fontenelle's 'Plurality of Worlds,' 2,110 fr. The 'Grande Danse Macabre,' published by Estienne Groulleau about 1550, fetched 1,120 fr. A vellum manuscript of the fifteenth century, ornamented with twenty-two miniatures, secured 11,000 fr.; a Horse of the close of the same century, also on vellum, 10,500 fr.; another vellum Horse of the same century, the binding of which had the arms of Philip V. of Spain, went for 8,850 fr. A vellum manuscript of Prayers of 1649, adorned with nine miniatures by Du Guernier, 6,920 fr. A Horse "escriptes au dict lion [Rome] par M. Franc Wydon & dédiées a Messire Claude d'Urfé," in the sixteenth century, brought 6,500 fr.; another (Italian of the same century), 5,000 fr. A vellum MS. of the 'Chevalier délibéré,' belonging to the end of the fifteenth century and containing several miniatures, 4,130 fr. One (on vellum, of the eighteenth century) of the 'Cérémonial des Vestures,' that had belonged to Elisabeth Armande du Plessis, Prioresse at Paris of the Benedictines of the Presentation, 3,750 fr. A vellum MS. of the fifteenth century of 'Le Débat de la Noire et de la Tannée,' 3,205 fr. A MS. Calendar of the end of the fifteenth century, adorned with miniatures, brought 3,000 fr. The total sum realized in six days was 330,575 fr. The sale of the second part will begin at the Hôtel Drouot on March 7th.

Literary Gossip.

DURING his life M. Renan wrote and circulated among his most intimate friends a little book entitled 'Henriette Renan: Souvenir pour ceux qui l'ont connue.' Only a hundred copies were printed; but we learn that Madame Renan will give it to the public so soon as her son, M. Ary Renan, shall have completed five pictures for its illustration. These pictures will include the birthplace of Renan in Brittany, and also one or two Syrian pictures. This charming little book of Renan's will not only introduce his readers to a woman of fine temperament, whose life was characteristic of her race, but also contain some of those local descriptions and portraits in which he is always felicitous. We are also informed that a volume of M. Renan's philological memoirs will appear.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. have in preparation, under the general editorship of Prof. Herbert Ryle, a set of introductions to the books of the Bible, intended primarily for the use of theological students at the universities and elsewhere, but so arranged as to offer to the general reader also a complete and readable account of the several groups of books in the light of modern criticism. The following is a list of the volumes and the contributors: (1) Genesis—Joshua, by Prof. Ryle and Rev. A. T. Chapman, Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge; (2) Judges—Esther, by Rev. G. A. Cooke, Fellow of Magdalen College, and Rev. H. A. White, Fellow of New College, Oxford; (3) Job—Ecclesiastes, by Rev. R. H. Kennett, Fellow of Queens' College, Cambridge; (4) Isaiah—Ezekiel, by Prof. G. Adam Smith; (5) The Minor Prophets, by Canon Kirkpatrick; (6) The Synoptic Gospels, by Prof. J. Armitage Robinson; (7) The Gospel according to St. John, the Epistles of St. John, and the Epistle to the Hebrews, by Rev. A. E. Brooke, Fellow of King's College, Cambridge; (8) The Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistles of St. James, St. Peter, and St. Jude, by Rev. F. H. Chase, Principal of the Cambridge Clergy Training College; (9) The Epistles of St. Paul, by Rev. F. Wallis, Fellow of Caius College, and Rev. R. St. John Parry, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; (10) The Revelation of St. John, together with a discussion on the Book of Daniel and later Jewish Apocalyptic writings, by Mr. M. R. James, Fellow of King's College. The volumes will be crown octavo, and contain on the average about 500 pages.

THE remarkable success of the volume of 'Village Sermons' by the late Dean of St. Paul's, which was published soon after his death, has encouraged Messrs. Macmillan & Co. to issue a second series, which will appear almost immediately.

MR. COULSON KERRAHAN (a third edition of whose 'Book of Strange Sins' is now in the press) will publish in April next a volume of essays, some of which have already appeared in the Fortnightly Review. The book, which is entitled 'Sorrow and Song,' is dedicated to Mr. Theodore Watts, and will be published simultaneously in England and America by Messrs. Ward, Lock & Bowden.

THE annual report of the Council, to be presented at the annual general meeting of the Girls' Public Day School Company on the 28th inst., mentions that a new school was opened at East Putney in September last; but although the number of schools has increased by one, the number of pupils is less by thirty-two than at the date of the last report—7,111 against 7,143. A site for a new school has been obtained at Streatham Hill, and the work of building has been commenced, and it is expected that the place will be ready for occupation after the summer vacation. The Tunbridge Wells School has so grown that an additional house has been hired. A dividend, free of income tax, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum is recommended. It would be better for the shareholders to take 4, and raise the pay of the teachers a little.

It is now proposed to celebrate the twenty-first anniversary of the foundation of the company by a distribution of prizes to the London schools at the Albert Hall. The Princess Louise has consented to distribute the prizes, and the meeting is fixed for the afternoon of Friday, March 2nd. The number of schools represented will be seventeen with 4,057 pupils.

THIRTY-TWO of the schools were examined in 1893 by the Oxford and Cambridge Examination Board. Each school was examined en bloc, and the higher forms also by means of papers. The subjects selected for papers were Latin, French, English, arithmetic, Euclid, trigonometry, physiography, botany, and chemistry. The number of candidates sent in for the higher certificates of the Examination Board continues to increase.

MR. WILLIAM ARCHER is translating for Mr. Heinemann Gerhart Hauptmann's 'Hannele,' which will first appear in the New Review, with illustrations, and then be published in book form. Mr. Heinemann intends to try the taste of the British public with translations of other plays of Hauptmann's, such as 'Die Weber.'

BIBLIOGRAPHERS, who have long wished for some supplement to Hain's 'Repertorium Bibliographicum,' will be glad to hear that one is at last about to be published. Dr. Copinger has now completed the 'Corrections and Additions' on which he has been long engaged, and the first part will be published shortly by Messrs. Sotharan. The whole will consist of four parts, each containing an instalment both of the additional entries and of the corrections and collations.

MESSRS. W. & R. CHAMBERS will begin at the end of March a serial issue of the new edition of their well-known 'Encyclopedia,' in monthly parts. It is an excellent book, and no doubt the opportunity will be seized to correct the slips and oversights inevitable in a first issue of even so well edited a work as this.

WE regret to announce the death of Dr. H. W. Dulcken, the author and editor of many popular and educational works. Dr. Dulcken was the son of the famous pianist and friend of Mendelssohn, Madame Dulcken, whose pupil Queen Victoria was. He was at one time connected with the Illustrated London News, and afterwards with Mr. Bohn, the publisher, but has been for many years past editor and literary adviser to Messrs. Ward, Lock & Bowden. Dr. Dulcken was a man of a very genial and generous disposition, and greatly beloved in the circles in which he moved. He was an accomplished linguist and a man of wide reading.

ON Tuesday evening the fifty-fifth annual meeting of the News-vendors' Benevolent Institution was held, the chair being taken by Mr. H. B. Marshall, jun. The balance-sheet showed receipts amounting to 1,139*l.*, which included 50*l.* received under the will of the late Mr. Albert Levy. There are now thirty pensioners, the men receiving 20*l.* and the women 15*l.* a year. The amount of funds for the several purposes of the Institution is 13,432*l.* There has been a satisfactory increase of members during the year.

A MEETING of the Edinburgh Society of Booksellers and Newsagents was held last week, when Mr. Anderson (of the firm of Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier) gave reminiscences of the bookselling trade in Edinburgh fifty years ago.

MR. S. LANE-POOLE's life of Sir Harry Parkes, which we mentioned in our number for December 23rd, will be published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. before the end of the month.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—

"Paul Neale, referred to in St. Margaret's accounts (ante, p. 148), was father of Archbishop Neale. His grandson Sir Paul Neale was so named after him."

FREQUENTERS of the Search Rooms at the Public Record Office will miss a familiar figure, and still more ever-ready assistance, by the death of Mr. Henry Goldsmith. Mr. Goldsmith was a member of a good Jewish family, and was educated at University College. His researches into the thorny subjects of early parliamentary procedure, the constitution of the baronage, the nature and development of barony by tenure, and kindred matters had been profound, and were highly valued by record scholars. The last fifteen years of his life were one fight with pain and weakness, and thus he was unhappily prevented from completing many of the important tasks he set himself. Mr. Goldsmith has left a work on parliaments of Edward I. almost ready for publication.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. will shortly publish a volume on 'Social Evolution,' by Mr. Benjamin Kidd, which may be regarded from one point of view as an antidote to Mr. Pearson's recent book on 'National Life and Character,' and from another as a statement of the place of religion in social development.

THE next volume of the "Pseudonym Library" will be entitled 'A Study in Colour.' It will deal with types of West Indian negroes. The author is prepared to find that many popular notions about negroes may run counter to his delineations, but the latter are the result of long acquaintance with the originals.

THE report of the Council of Cambridge University on post-graduate study is a document which to old fogies must seem revolutionary. It is proposed that there shall be established two new degrees, Bachelor of Letters and Bachelor of Science, to be open to graduates of certain recognized universities, after matriculation and three terms of residence at Cambridge, on presentation of an original dissertation. The degrees will also be open to graduates of Cambridge, and may possibly encourage them to stay up after the ordeal of the Tripos to do original work.

THE proposals of the Royal Commission on the Gresham University are of a complicated character, and aim at uniting in one university a great number of different bodies which have more or less to do with education. It is easier to effect this coalition on paper than in practice, and we think the less ambitious scheme which preceded the present had more chance of achieving success than the present one. In England, unfortunately, educational schemes are judged not by their merits, but by the way in which they affect the interests and prejudices of sects and institutions, and the new scheme may be wrecked, as the former one was, by a selfish and unenlightened agitation; but if ever it is embodied in the form of a charter it will prove singularly difficult to administer a university comprising so many different and discordant parts. Prof. Karl Pearson's project of founding a university without regard to existing corporations went to the opposite extreme, and had much to recommend it; but it was quite impracticable.

THE 'History of the Scottish People' begun by the late Rev. Thomas Thomson, the compiler of a 'Biographical Dictionary of Eminent Scotsmen,' has been finished by Dr. Charles Annandale, editor of the 'Imperial Dictionary of the English Language,' of 'The Popular Encyclopedia,' and other works. It will be illustrated by a series of forty original designs by Walter Paget, Gordon Browne, and other artists. There will also be three maps, printed in colours.

MR. DANVERS, of the India Office, whose researches into the history of the Portuguese conquests in the East we have often mentioned, is at last going to bring out, through Messrs. Allen, his proposed 'History of the Portuguese in India' in two volumes.

THE Academy of Cracow has decided to publish the Prayer Book of Ladislaus III. from a unique MS. in the Bodleian Library, mentioned some time ago by the Athenæum. The reproduction of many pictures and initial letters will show Polish art of the second half of the fifteenth century.

THE German-Austrian booksellers have combined to protest against the concession granted by the Government to the Viennese Lehrerhausverein for the establishment of a bookselling business, to include the publication of educational books and works on art, and the retail sale of new and second-hand books and of educational appliances.

WE have to congratulate the Morning Advertiser on having reached its hundredth birthday in a more prosperous state of fortune than at any previous period of its long career.

WITH the death of Cavaliere Marco Mortara, Rabbino Maggiore of Mantua, who expired on the 2nd inst. at the age of seventy-nine, the last representative of Jewish learning in Italy is gone. The Cavaliere belonged to the school of the well-known Samuel David Luzzatto, the late professor of the Rabbinical School at Padua, now transferred to Rome.—The decease is announced from Paris of Mlle. Maria Deraismes, the active advocate of women's rights, author of 'Eve contre M. Dumas,' 'L'Épidémie naturaliste' (an onslaught on M. Zola), and other polemical writings.

THE only Parliamentary Papers likely to be of general interest to our readers this week are Education, Ireland, Appendix to Report of Commissioners, 1892 (2*s.* 9*d.*); Friendly Societies, Return for 1892, Part C, Trade Unions (3*d.*); and East India Currency Return, 1890-93 (1*d.*).

SCIENCE

THE LITERATURE OF ELECTRICITY.

The Standard Electrical Dictionary: a Popular Dictionary of Words and Terms used in the Practice of Electrical Engineering. By T. O'Connor Sloane. (Crosby Lockwood & Son.)—This is a very useful book of reference, containing a great variety of information on electrical and magnetic subjects, clearly presented and well up to date. To avoid repetition of the same information under different headings, a copious index is subjoined. Some of the theoretical statements are wanting in scientific accuracy; for example, the definitions of the "dyne" and "poundal" are both wrong; and the first half of the article "Thomson Effect" is false in point of fact; but this last mistake rests on such high authority that it may well be excused. As a whole the definitions and descriptions are clear, brief, and correct, and the range of information included, both as regards principles and applications, is extremely wide.

Notes on Recent Researches in Electricity and Magnetism, intended as a Sequel to Prof. Clerk Maxwell's Treatise on Electricity and Magnetism. By J. J. Thomson, F.R.S. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—A specially valuable feature in this publication of the Cavendish Professor of Physics is the immense amount of experimental information collected in the second chapter respecting the passage of electricity through gases, and not merely collected, but well digested and presented in the clearest terms. The first chapter is devoted to a special mode of viewing a number of the actions which occur in Hertz's experiments, and in other branches of modern work. Faraday's electrostatic tubes of force, or, as they are now called, tubes of electrostatic induction, are employed as the fundamental conception. The various phenomena of the magnetic field are regarded as due to the motion of these tubes, or to changes in their position and shape. An electrostatic tube, when in motion, produces a magnetic force at right angles both to itself and to its direction of motion, and produces an electromotive intensity at right angles to the direction of motion and to the magnetic induction. In both these chapters there is frequent reference to atoms and molecules. The tubes are regarded as being all of the same strength, which is such that, when they terminate on a conductor, there is, at the end of the tube, a charge of negative electricity equal to that which, in the theory of electrolysis, we associate with an atom of a monovalent element. The phenomena of electrolysis show that this is a natural unit, and that fractional parts of it do not exist. When the length of the tube connecting two atoms is comparable with the distance between atoms in a molecule the atoms are in chemical combination; when the tube is much longer they are chemically free. The tubes may be supposed to pervade all space, and the absence of electromotive intensity in any region is not to be taken as indicating the absence of these tubes, but merely the absence of any prevailing tendency in their arrangement, the opposite effects of different tubes thus balancing one another. The phenomena which accompany the passage of electricity through liquids and gases show that molecular structure has a close connexion with electrostatic tubes—much closer than we have any right to suppose it has with magnetic tubes. The remaining chapters, constituting about two-thirds of the book, are, for the most part, intelligible only to advanced mathematicians; but we must except large portions of chapter v., "On Electromagnetic Waves," which describes Hertz's experiments, and gives the theory of each step as explained by means of electrostatic tubes. Several later experiments on the same subject are also described and explained. Kerr's experiments on reflection from the polished surfaces of magnets, and the peculiar result known as "the Hall effect," are discussed from the point of view of electromagnetic waves. The mathematician will find a careful exposition of recent applications of "conjugate functions" to electrostatic problems, besides very elaborate analytical investigations relating to electromagnetic waves, which, in the theory here expounded, include waves of light. The work is calculated to render good service to earnest seekers after electrical and magnetic truth, especially if they bring to the search the combined powers of the chemist and the mathematician.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES.

THE Gold Medal of the Royal Astronomical Society has this year been awarded to Mr. S. W. Burnham, the most distinguished of double-star observers, he having not only discovered more of these objects than any other astronomer, but by his exhaustive study of their observations determined with far greater accuracy than was previously possible the forms of the apparent orbits of all the principal binary systems. Mr. Burnham carried on his astronomical work at the Dearborn Observatory, Chicago, and afterwards at the Lick Observatory, California, leaving the latter about two years ago; the great Yerkes telescope, 40 inches in aperture, will now shortly be mounted and placed at his disposal, it being not doubted that brilliant results will follow. The address on presentation of the medal was delivered yesterday by Capt. Abney, President of the Society.

Dr. Thomas D. Anderson, of Edinburgh (the discoverer of the Nova in Auriga), writes to Astronomische Nachrichten, No. 3208, local attention to the variability which he has noticed of a star in Cassiopeia, situated in R.A. 23° 7' 7", N.P.D. 30° 53' 5". The magnitude is set down in the Bonn 'Durchmusterung' (from observations made in 1857) as 9.5. On the 8th and 9th ult. Dr. Anderson found it to amount to 8.3, so that the star was visible in his field-glass; but on the 28th the magnitude had decreased to 9.1, the rapid diminution appearing to point to the variation having been due to a state of temporary activity rather than regular change.

Prof. Barnard has published (Ast. Nach. No. 3206) the results of some observations of the first satellite of Jupiter made with the great telescope of the Lick Observatory, and bearing upon the suspected duplicity of the satellite. His conclusion is that the appearances noticed are due to the apparent separation of the northern and southern parts of that body by a bright equatorial belt surrounding it, and in direction approximately parallel to the belts of the planet. The satellite probably rotates on an axis nearly, but not quite, perpendicular to its orbit; and some other phenomena appear to indicate that the time of rotation is not, as in the case of our moon, coincident with that of revolution round the planet.

We have received the Report of the Wolsingham Observatory for the year 1893. Mr. Espin has continued his sweeps for stars having remarkable spectra (which can only be carried on satisfactorily during moonless nights) with valuable results, an unusual number of new objects having been detected. The Compton 8-inch photo-telescope has been used for photographing stars suspected of variation, and several new variables have thus been discovered, whilst others, also probably variable, have been reserved for future observation.

From the Report of the Superintendent (Capt. McNair) of the U.S. Naval Observatory at Washington for the year ending June 30th, 1893, we learn that few observations of the heavenly bodies were made during the period embraced by it, since the principal energies of the staff were occupied in the removal of the observatory to its new site, which has been at last completed. Advantage was taken of the opportunity to have most of the instruments placed in a thorough state of repair before being transferred, remounted, and adjusted. Progress was also made with the reduction of previous observations, and the position of the new observatory was accurately determined to be latitude 38° 55' 14" 68 north and longitude 5° 5' 15" 71 west of Greenwich.

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

A 'DESCRIPTIVE DICTIONARY OF BRITISH MALAYA' will be ready in April. The original intention of the compiler was to re-edit Craw-furd's 'Descriptive Dictionary of the Indian Archipelago.' This was, however, found impracticable, and the new work deals only with that portion of Malaya lying within the sphere of British influence. It contains about three thousand headings. The Straits Settlements and Protected Native States are treated of at considerable length, while notices, more or less brief, are given of every town, village, river, &c., appearing in published maps, as also of many others hitherto undescribed. The various aboriginal tribes, the products of the jungle, native manners and customs, the natural history of the Peninsula, and many other subjects of interest, are described or explained. Somewhat fewer than 140 articles are quoted, rewritten, or brought up to date from Crawford's 'Dictionary,' Messrs. Bradbury & Agnew having given permission to that effect.

Messrs. W. & R. Chambers have in preparation a 'Gazetteer of the World, Topographical, Statistical, and Historical.' It will contain nearly as much printed matter as a volume of their 'Encyclopædia,' but in size will be little larger than their 'Etymological Dictionary.'

Mr. Bartholomew is not satisfied with our mention last week of his forthcoming 'Physical Atlas.' "It is not," he says, "an English edition of Berghaus's atlas, but a new physical atlas, partly based on Berghaus, and edited by English specialists. Instead of 'some twenty new maps' there will be nearer fifty entirely original maps, and the maps that may be utilized from Berghaus will only serve as a foundation for the addition of recent research and adaptation to a new scheme of arrangement."

SOCIETIES.

ROYAL.—Feb. 1.—Sir J. Evans, Treas. and V.P., in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'Insect Sight, and the Defining Power of Composite Eyes,' by Mr. A. Mallock; 'The Action of Heat upon Ethylene,' by Mr. V. B. Lewis; 'An Instrument for grinding Section-plates and Prisms of Crystals of Artificial Preparations,' and 'An Instrument of Precision for producing Monochromatic Light of any desired Wave-length,' by Mr. A. E. Tutton; and 'On Hollow Pyramidal Ice-Crystals,' by Dr. K. Grossmann and Mr. J. Lomas.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—Feb. 1.—Mr. A. W. Franks, President, and afterwards Mr. G. Leveson-Gower, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. Brabrook and Mr. Stephenson were appointed scrutators of the ballot for a new member of Council and Director in the place of the late Mr. H. S. Milman.—Mr. Blair reported the discovery of some fragments of Roman inscriptions at Segedunum.—Mr. Niven communicated a note on Fyfield Church, Berks, destroyed by fire on October 27th, 1893, when some fine screen work and other interesting remains perished.—Mr. Harrison communicated, on behalf of the Lancashire and Cheshire Archaeological Society, an archaeological survey of pre-Roman, Roman, and post-Roman Lancashire, on the lines of the surveys of other counties already completed and published.—The Rev. R. B. Gardiner exhibited photographs of and described an interesting alabaster effigy of a lady at Ilton, Somerset, of late fifteenth century work, showing the somewhat rare "mitred" headdress.—Mr. Hope suggested, from the great similarity between the Ilton effigy and that of a lady at Norbury, Derbyshire, 1483, that both were made by the same man, probably an alabaster worker at Chellaston, Derbyshire, whence other fine effigies are known to have emanated.—At the conclusion of the ballot Mr. J. H. Middleton was declared elected member of Council, and Viscount Dillon, V.P., Director.

LINNEAN.—Feb. 1.—Prof. Stewart, President, in the chair.—Sir H. Low and Mr. F. C. Smith were admitted Fellows. Dr. J. Mueller and Mr. K. Mitsukur were recommended by the Council for election as Foreign Members.—The President exhibited a remarkable specimen of a South African butterfly, Tetractes halyattes, from Natal, in which the wings on one side were those of a male, and on the other those of a female, and made some remarks on hermaphroditism in the Lepidoptera.—On behalf of Mr. W. Borrer, of Cowfold, Sussex, there was exhibited a skull of the pine marten, Martes sylvatica, Nilsson, from a specimen killed near Crawley (Zool., 1891, p. 458), an examination of which confirmed the view of the late E. B. Alston (P.Z.S., 1879, p. 469) that, so far as could be ascertained, this is the only species of marten found in the British Islands.—On behalf of Mr. W. B. Tegetmeier there was exhibited a drawing of a snow leopard taken for the first time from life, namely, from the animal now living in the Zoological Society's Gardens, Regent's Park. The long, thick, and soft fur, suggestive of a cold habitat, and the unusual size of the wide-spreading feet, well suited for travelling over an expanse of yielding snow, were noteworthy features.—Mr. M. Laurie read a paper 'On the Morphology of the Pedipalpi.' He considered the first two ventral sclerites of the abdomen to be appendages and not sternites. The first of these—the genital operculum—covers the ventral surface of two segments, the genital aperture and the first pair of lung books lying beneath it. The first pair of lung books, he thought, probably represent the remains of the appendage of the second segment. The arrangement of this region resembles that in Eurypteridae and in the spiders (e.g., Liphistius), while differing markedly from that in scorpions. The posterior end of the intestine is dilated into a large stercoral pouch which is part of the midgut, the Malpighian tubes arising from its posterior end. The cephalothoracic portion of the midgut differs in structure from the abdominal portion, and in addition to lateral diverticula has two median ventral diverticula. The coxal gland opens at the base of the third pair of appendages, and a sensory organ of unknown function occurs on each side of the last segment.—An interesting discussion followed, in which Mr. R. I. Pocock, Mr. H. M. Bernard, and the President took part, and Mr. Laurie replied.—A paper was then communicated by Mr. W. West 'On the Freshwater Algae of the West Indies,' in which several new species were described and beautifully illustrated.—Mr. G. Murray in criticizing this paper testified to the extreme care and accuracy with which the species had been worked out.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—Feb. 6.—Mr. A. Giles, President, in the chair.—It was announced that the Council had recently transferred nine gentlemen to the class of Member, and had admitted twenty-four as Students.—The monthly ballot resulted in the election of four Members and of forty-five Associate Members.—The paper read was 'On the Transport of Petroleum in Bulk,' from the point of view of minimizing the risks of fire and explosion, by Mr. B. Kedwood.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—Feb. 6.—Sir J. Crichton-Browne, Treas. and V.P., in the chair.—The Duke of Bedford, the Earl of Derby, Sir Horace Davey, Lord Greenock, and Mrs. F. Baxter were elected Members.

SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL ARCHAEOLOGY.—Feb. 6.—Mr. P. le Page Renouf, President, in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'Ancient Metals from Tell-el-Hesi, &c.,' by Dr. Gladstone, and 'On an Important Point of Egyptian Theology,' by Mr. P. le Page Renouf.

PHYSICAL.—Jan. 26.—Prof. A. W. Rüchler, President, in the chair.—Mr. J. W. Kearton read a 'Note on a New Mode of making Magic Mirrors.'—Mr. W. B. Croft read a paper 'On some Observations in Diffraction,' and exhibited a large number of photographs of diffraction figures obtained under different conditions.—A 'Note on a New Photometric Method and a Photometer for Same' was read by Mr. J. B. Spurge.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- Mon. London Institution, 8.—'Russian Political Nation,' Mr. G. Kennan.
— Institute of British Architects, 8.
— Royal Academy, 8.—'Architecture,' Mr. G. Atkinson.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Science and Measurement of Inflammation (and Vapour in the Air),' Lecture IV, Prof. F. Clowes (Chair Lecture).
Tues. Geographical, 8.—'Johann,' Mr. H. Lake.
— Horticultural, 1.—Annual Meeting.
— Royal Institution, 3.—'Locomotion and Fixation in Plants and Animals,' Prof. C. Stewart.
— Colonial Institute, 8.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Modern Development of Illustrated Journalism,' Mr. H. Townsend.
— Anthropological Institute, 8.—'Languages of British New Guinea,' Mr. B. H. May. 'Indians of the Marston and York Rivers, North West of Europe,' 'Thibetan House Deities: some Ancient Indian Deities from the Thibetans,' Surgeon-Major E. A. Waddell.
— Society of Architects, 8.—'The London County Council's Streets and Buildings Bill,' Mr. E. Marsland.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—'Further Discussion on "The Transport of Petroleum in Bulk,"'
Wed. Society of Arts, 8.—'The St. Pancras Electric Light Installation,' Mr. H. Robinson.
Thurs. Royal Institution, 8.—'The Past and Future of Mountain Exploration,' Mr. W. M. Conway.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Experiences at the Court of Afghanistan,' Mr. J. A. Gray.
— Historical, 8.—'Anniversary Meeting.'
— London Institution, 8.—'On Chlores,' Dr. Klein.
— Royal Academy, 8.—'Architecture,' Mr. G. Atkinson.
— Geographical, 8.—'The Relations of Geography to History,' Mr. H. J. Mackinder. (Editorial Lecture).
— Chemical, 8.—'Hypocretic Movements connected with Seed Linnæus,' Miss Veris. 'Contributions to the Natural History of the Flower,' Part II, Mr. J. C. Willis.
— Chemical, 8.—'Reaction of Follows: Determination of the Available Mineral Phosphorus in Soil,' Mr. H. Dyer. 'Aerial Oxidation of Turpentine and Essential Oils,' Mr. C. T. Kingston.

- Thurs. Antiquaries, 8.—'Roman Pottery found near Farnham,' Mrs. Kingston. 'Two Sculptured Altar Panels of the Fifteenth Century,' Mr. W. H. John Hope. 'Roman Sculptured Figure from Farnham, Wilt., and other Antiquities,' Mr. W. Minney.
— Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts.—'Indian Art,' Mr. C. F. Clarke.
Fri. Geographical, 8.—'Anniversary Meeting.'
— United Service Institution, 3.—'Military Topography up to Date,' Major W. W. C. Verner.
— Architectural Association, 7.—'The Last Three A.A. Excursions Photographically Illustrated,' Mr. J. L. Robinson.
— Civil Engineers, 7.—'Ship Repairs having Special Reference to the Lower Hierarchy,' Mr. W. H. H. (Editorial Meeting).
— Geometrical Microscopical Club, 8.—'Annual Meeting, President's Address.'
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Insects Key to Nature,' Prof. Nichol.
Sat. Royal Institution, 2.—'Light with Special Reference to the Optical Discoveries of Newton,' Lord Rayleigh.

Science Gossip.

PROF. THORPE has been appointed Bakerian Lecturer to the Royal Society for the present year. He will deliver his discourse on the 22nd inst., and has chosen for his subject a research carried out by himself and Mr. J. W. Rodger on the relations between the viscosity of liquids and their chemical nature.

THE death of Prof. Frémy, the well-known French chemist, is announced.

PROF. T. WILTSHIRE, of King's College, London, has just presented his large collection of cretaceous and other fossils to the Woodward Museum at Cambridge.

SIR WILLIAM DAWSON has a volume in the press on 'The Canadian Ice Age.'

FINE ARTS

ARCHITECTURAL LITERATURE.

English Cathedrals. By Mrs. Schuyler van Rensselaer. Illustrated with 154 Drawings by Joseph Pennell and with Plans and Diagrams. (Fisher Unwin.)

An Architectural History of the Cathedral Church of Manchester. By J. S. Crowther. Edited by Frank Renaud, M.D., F.S.A. (Manchester, Cornish.)

Our English Minsters. By Frederic W. Farrar, D.D., F.R.S., and others. With Illustrations by Herbert Railton and others. (Isbister & Co.)

If any proof were wanting of the varied interest of our old churches, we have it in these three books, each of which is totally different in its subject, and in the treatment of it, from the other two. Mrs. van Rensselaer's is the most ambitious. It treats of twelve English cathedral churches: Canterbury, Peterborough, Durham, Salisbury, Lichfield, Lincoln, Ely, Wells, Winchester, Gloucester, York, and London, the selection being made with the view of illustrating the successive developments of English architecture. The book is written for Americans, and the spelling is that of the United States. And the author tells us that only an American can properly write the history of Romanesque and Gothic art. After this it is, perhaps, only another example of that national prejudice which we are told prevents us from seeing the matter right, that a mere English reviewer should venture to hint that Mrs. van Rensselaer has still a good deal to learn before she will be qualified to sit in judgment on English cathedrals. Such statements as that "by the end of the eleventh century all parts of great churches in Normandy were covered with vaults of stone"; that "in the old days an interior like this"—the present nave of Canterbury, to wit—"was covered in every inch of wall and floor and ceiling with color and gold in tints that charmed the eye"; that in the same church of Canterbury "there is not a bit of genuine early English work"; that Henry VIII. scattered thence the "hundred and fifty monks"; that the glass of the east window of Gloucester is of "late Perpendicular time"; that the Jews suffered persecution in England in the fourteenth century; and too many more to quote, seem a little out of date to us on this side of the Atlantic, and they do not much help to convince us that our old English architecture was not Gothic at all, but only bad imitation of the French, which was.

This is the substance of Mrs. van Rensselaer's teaching; but, to do her justice, she does not seem to think much the worse of our old churches on that account. She has visited the places she writes about, and loves them well; and where she can get a good guide to one she uses it, though in her haste she does not always get so much help from it as she might. She knows also that the title "Cathedral" is an adjective, and that it is not bestowed upon a church for its bigness or the number of its steeples. She has learned, too, that "of the old" or "of the new foundation" does not refer to the antiquity of the fabric, and that Mr. James Fergusson is not always a safe authority to follow. When she has further learnt that the same is even more true of M. Viollet-le-Duc, whose fascinating but often baseless theories now hold her in bondage, she may be able to free herself from the prejudice which, like many other strongly prejudiced persons, she mistakes for absence of prejudice, and then, with a more careful reading of history and some study of the art of building, she may find herself able to understand much which is now quite dark to her.

Of Mr. Pennell's hundred and fifty-four drawings many are excellent, but the best are landscapes in which the buildings supposed to be illustrated have little part, or town views, like that of St. Paul's from Fleet Street, in which the interest lies in the representation of the bustle and movement of a busy street. In the representation of architecture Mr. Pennell does not succeed so well, and in interiors especially he sometimes altogether misses the proportion of his subjects. Perhaps the worst is the last in the book, which is as unlike the choir of St. Paul's as it can well be. By-the-by, this view is so old as not to show the reredos, and some others show what was, but is so no longer.

Mr. Crowther's book is the production of a veteran in architectural illustration, and although the comparatively small size of its page prevents it from ranking quite with the great book on the 'Churches of the Middle Ages' which he and Mr. Henry Bowman issued nearly forty years ago, it is not unworthy of the same hand. Unfortunately it is posthumous, and so far as regards its text it is imperfect, for the editor has thought it his duty to put in order such writings only as the author left behind him, without adding anything of his own.

The cathedral church of Manchester is a new building, the product of "restoration." It contains some fine old furniture, more or less modernized, and the various details of the building are for the most part copied from old, which in some cases occupied the same place, and in others did not, for the "faithful restorers" have altered the plan a good deal. The story of the church as it can be read in the fabric is simply that it was "restored" in the nineteenth century. Some of the earlier chapters may be traced in this book, so far as Mr. Crowther could recover them—for the destruction had begun before his time—and he also keeps a record of the various more ancient fragments which were found as one after another the old walls were pulled down in the course of the "restoration." One of these is a most curious piece of sculpture, which is certainly pre-Norman and may be as old as the eighth or even the seventh century. The church was, and, after a fashion, still is, a fine one, and it is fully illustrated in the forty plates of this volume.

To begin with the outside of our last book. It has plain thin covers of black leather with old English lettering in gold, and gold tooling inside, and the edges of the pages are gilt over red, all after a fashion commonly used in pocket Bibles and Church service books. Turning to the inside, we find, by way of frontispiece, an arrangement in black and white, which the inscription below tells us is intended for a view of "St. Margaret's and the Abbey, Westminster," and some knowledge of the neighbourhood helps us to discover that two great white crosses in the foreground are lamp-posts in the original. On the title-page opposite there is a vignette of strange device. It shows a winged being in stays, and not much else, engaged with a hammer and chisel in knocking pieces out of the globe. We take it to be intended for the genius of "restoration." Turning over once, we find a wonderful picture of what may be meant to be some sort of ecclesiastical procession headed by a pair of compasses walking alone. Another turn brings us to the portrait of a British workman, without shoes or stockings, squatting upon an impossible scaffold and chipping at a gargoyle. Perhaps he is supposed to represent the spirit of the age engaged on the conservation of ancient monuments. Two more turns reach the preface, and another the body of the book.

This is a series of seven essays by seven different writers on seven churches, all being cathedrals except that of Westminster, which comes first. It is treated of by Archdeacon Farrar, and his discourse, divided into three parts, takes up about a third of the book. The first part, on the building, is not a consecutive account, but rather a discursive talk on the church and its contents, and on subjects suggested by them. It is easy to read, well seasoned with adjectives, and generally inaccurate in detail. The second part, on the statuary, and the third, on the epitaphs, are better than the first, and we are glad to find that the Archdeacon condemns Mr. Pearson's proposal for a general clearing out of the monuments. We hope he and his brethren of the Chapter will stand firm on that point.

Canon Fremantle discusses Canterbury Cathedral and some other things in about thirty pages, and there is a picture called 'The Place of the Martyrdom,' which manages to miss that place by a yard or two. Canon Talbot has a short essay on Durham, and Mr. S. M. S. Pereira a longer one on Wells, a good deal of which is taken up with the story of Bishop Ken. Canon Venables takes Lincoln, which he knows well; but it is rather surprising to find him repeating the old verger's tale about the misericord seat being intended to throw people down if they went to sleep during the services.

Canon Benham talks pleasantly under the title of "Winchester," and manages to say as little about his subject as he well could in the space of about forty pages. And the Dean of Gloucester closes the volume with a paper on his own cathedral, in which he shows bias in favour of "restoration," which we regret to find in a man in his position.

We have already mentioned some of the illustrations. We wish we could end with commending the others; but it is impossible.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—WINTER EXHIBITION.

(Fourth Notice.—Landscapes of the British School.)

THE pearly and vivid colours of Young Anglers (No. 47), with which we closed our last article, form a harmony of brightness, and in that respect contrast most effectively with the soft and sober coloration and tonality of the noble Wilson which, entitled Landscape (46), the property of Sir J. D. Linton, hangs immediately above Mason's picture, and in a small compass exhibits all the finest qualities of the painter's art. The subject is, of course, a composition, and it comprises the "Speculum Diane" (which Wilson, when in his happiest mood, was never tired of painting), Vesuvius and its slowly drifting plume of smoke, a line of highlands like the Alban Hills, and a Claudian sky, restful, full of colour, and, as of Paradise, serene. The foreground, like many of Wilson's foregrounds, is weak, if not bad. No. 42, View on the Thames, evidently painted in Wilson's later days, is but a pot-boiler. Nevertheless, even the pot-boilers of Wilson are full of art and poetry. The Convent (30), reminiscent of Italy, belongs to Wilson's prime, and is less Claude-like than ordinary, although Claude's principles are applied to the grouping of the white convent buildings with the trees and the noble sky, charged with the latest, somewhat pallid lustre of the sun, which has sunk below the horizon; and the general breadth and simplicity of the treatment are quite in Claude's mood. On the other hand, the cool shadows of the afterglow on the buildings, the cooler reflections of the east, where the moon is coming, and the naturalistic drawing of the trees belong neither to Claude's nor Wilson's ordinary manner. On the Dee (102), Capt. Holford's famous Wilson, is an excellent specimen of the Claudian manner applied to English landscape, the materials for which could nowhere be found better than in the upper reaches of the Dee.

Morland comes next, at an interval of half a century, in the chronological order we have followed in dealing with the British School, but the difference of time between him and Wilson is as nothing compared with that of their style. The homeliness, not to say vulgarity, of Morland marked a period when English artists did not travel; but the commonness was part of Morland's nature, which did not allow him to be an eclectic, and denied him whatever could be gained by the pursuit of style. Parmyard, with Pigs (41), is none the worse for the pigs, but is an indifferent illustration of talents which the artist sometimes turned to better account. Crome, who was born six years later than Morland, is much more adequately represented. Mr. Montagu's The Beaters (23) is a well-known and capital specimen of him, and, in fact, quite characteristic of his school and of its peculiarly crisp touch; while every one will admire the clearness, brightness, and good draughtsmanship of the firmly drawn edge of a wood of ancient, mossy oaks, and beeches with polished stems, such as, since Wynants, only Crome has painted thus solidly and finely. The softness of airy distance, the prevailing warmth, and the Both-like treatment of the glowing sky distinguish this excellent piece. Heath Scene, Sun breaking out after a Storm (27), is by no means so simple and good; indeed, the composition is rather scattered and spotty, and the shadows are too black. It is a popular delusion that Crome was an undiluting painter out of doors, even in the sense that Gainsborough may be so described. The truth is that, down to Stark, all the Norwich School (except Vincent), unlike the Bristol School and the landscapists of Liverpool, such as Oakes and W. Davis, clung to their studios and worked at home with the zeal of their Dutch models. In fact, Cotman, the most original and valuable of them all, was almost as much an avowed eclectic as Wilson, and therefore was at liberty to do as he pleased in this respect without being out of harmony with himself. The expression of a hard-blowing gale and a fine, pure, and learned sky are the chief charms of Mr. Holmes's 'Heath Scene' here in question.

There are some capital Turners in this collection, besides several which only too distinctly betray the beginning of his decline. Mr. Orrock's poetical sketch called The Trossachs (10), and not unfairly ascribed to Turner, is difficult to date. On its own merits it is an excellent though not very characteristic piece, but the dignity and majesty of the mountain pass are somewhat exaggerated, and so is the sublimity of the rolling clouds which are so powerfully lighted from above. The painting is, for Turner, thin and unequal. It is not so difficult to date Sir D. Currie's Storm off the Fjords (19), an intensely soft and broad picture of a troubled sea and driving rain, a weaker illustration of principles which provoked much opposition about 1845, when (although prepared by 'The Rock Limpet' of 1842) 'Whalers' and 'Returning from the Ball' puzzled and enraged the critics, who derided 'The Fallacies of Hope,' which Turner was then publishing piecemeal in the Academy catalogues. In those days the aspect of nature revealed by No. 19 was hardly studied, and artists such as Mr. Whistler would not have been safe. Sir D. Currie has also lent the fine, dream-like Monte Rosa: Mist on Lake at Sunrise (25). No doubt, like No. 19, this piece has faded out of harmony with itself, to the destruction of Turner's meaning. Newark Abbey on the Wey (33) was sold about a quarter of a century ago for more than 1,300*l.* It is a capital piece of its kind, harmonious and tender, but its composition is rather scattered, and on the whole, and for a Turner of a fine time, it possesses no extraordinary charm. Sir C. Tennant's Turner entitled Van Tromp's Ship at the Entrance of the Scheldt (103) was at the Academy in 1832 with 'Staffa' and 'Nebuchadnezzar.' It was sold in 1878 for 5,400*l.*, one of the highest prices then reached by a Turner, and again—perhaps for a good deal less—at a later date. A masterpiece of the later phase of Turner's middle period, it delighted Mr. Ruskin, and is really remarkable for the skilful management of its masses of light, shade, and subtly graded tints, the delicate foreground, the gleaming mid-distance, and the dim and greyish distance, which, with wonderful art, is veiled in mist and smoke. Among its charms is the opalescent quality of the light, through which the pale towers and other buildings of the remote city are seen in an exquisite harmony. The touch with which the sea was painted was unusually weak for Turner, while the modelling of the water is confused, and its colours are less pure and limpid than even the estuary of the great Dutch river demands and we expected from a work that had escaped the restorer. It seems, however, to have been "refreshed" with singular tact and skill, although it is possible, so uncertain are the changes of a work of this class, that only the hands of Time have touched it. Lord Leconfield's Turners, View in the Park

Petworth (130), and the same, the lake view (133), are historic and need not detain us. Every one must admire the exquisite lighting of both, their harmonies of tone and colour, the grading of the atmosphere, and, in the former, the misty slopes of the mid distance, and the more fervid spaces of the remoter atmosphere. It seems to us that the process of deterioration, inevitable in Turners painted after 1820 or thereabouts, which has been long manifest in No. 130, and injures its keeping (especially in the glowing sky), has of late made rapid progress. No. 133 is in a better state of preservation, and retains much more of its intense warmth, abundance of silvery light, and harmonies of every element. It is almost incomparable among the Turners of the time which produced it, although no longer possessed of all its original charm. The Catalogue describes both of these pictures as sunsets, but when Turner exhibited No. 130 (as No. 158 in the Academy of 1810) he called it 'Petworth, Sussex, seat of the Earl of Egremont, dewy morning.' It was here in 1802. The other, in which a game at cricket is going on, is known as 'The Lake in Petworth Park,' or 'Petworth Park, sunset,' and is No. 132 in the Petworth Catalogue. They were both painted in 1809-10, about the same time as the lovely 'Somer Hill,' which was at Somerset House in 1811, and here not long ago. The Petworth pictures were commissions from the then Earl of Egremont. The two views of Lowther Castle, which were here in 1891, were painted for the then Lord Lonsdale, and exhibited at the Academy in 1810 with No. 130 before us. One of these examples depicts early morning, the other represents glowing evening. In the same way one of the Lowther pictures of evening, the other of mid-day. Chichester Canal (138), which some years ago was in a sadly cracked condition, seems to have been restored, but, by whatever means, it has lost a great deal of that intense poetry of light which originally conferred upon it a magical charm, and, though much remains, so much is gone that the future will hardly believe this caput mortuum was one of the few pictures of which it might be said that it truly held the mirror up to nature and did her justice, adding new pathos of its own. It, too, was painted for the then Lord Egremont. The Chain Pier at Brighton (141) is also a loan from Lord Leconfield, whose generosity in allowing the public to see the fine works he possesses should be gratefully acknowledged. This picture is a subtle study of light, with admirable treatment of the lights and darks, as such, of the composition. In its pristine condition it was one of Turner's masterpieces in respect to painting the atmosphere; since then a good deal of warm and silvery tone has departed from it. A more important Turner than any of these has been lent by Lord Yarborough, The Wreck of the Minotaur (135), a stupendous piece, which was probably led up to by the magnificent success of the famous 'Shipwreck,' now No. 476 in the National Gallery, which was painted in 1806, but never exhibited by the artist. No. 135 before us is the pictorial companion to No. 476, and it is not far removed from it in most respects, though freer in its handling, while it is not so solid as the still more masculine 'Calais Pier,' which was painted in 1803, and is now No. 472 in the National Gallery. The forms of the "Minotaur" picture are less firmly defined, the colour is warmer, and the composition less simple than in either of the other works we have mentioned. Painted in 1810, it was not exhibited until it appeared as No. 38 at the British Institution in 1849; it was No. 208 at Manchester in 1857, No. 158 in the Academy, 1875, and No. 159 in the Grosvenor Gallery, 1888. We described it at length in 1875, and referred to its condition; since then it appears to have been skilfully divested of certain superfluous coverings of dirt, colouring matters (such as licorice water), and varnish of a questionable sort, and it seems now in quite as fine a condition as Time permits to a Turner, even of this sort, which promises to be unusually permanent. Like 'The Vintage at Macon,' which, thanks to the extreme liberality of successive Lords Yarborough, generally accompanies 'The Minotaur' to public exhibitions, it was painted for Charles, the first Earl, a generous patron of Turner. 'The Wreck of the Minotaur' was mezzotinted by Cousins and Barlow.

Gainsborough's small Landscape (5), which Lord Windsor has lent, may well be studied in succession to this grand Turner, because the pictures illustrate opposed phases of art, sentiment, and character, to say nothing of the strange contrast in technique and aim. The 'Landscape' is an idyl of the "teacup times," pretty, sincere, and simple; the other a terrible representation of a catastrophe such as no painter of Gainsborough's calibre would have thought of attempting. About sixty years passed between the execution of these strangely contrasting pictures, which seem to belong to different planets. Lord Windsor's contribution is a most interesting specimen of Gainsborough's landscape painting before he succeeded as a portraitist, and while his touch, though searching and crisp, approximated to that of the Norwich School, and was rather heavy. Almost as great a contrast suggests itself between the Gainsborough and Constable's Landscape (13). The work of a naturalistic artist who, strange to say, was born the year after Turner, No. 13 is rather scattered in the composition of each of its elements, and somewhat cold, while it lacks the brilliance of the rather overrated painter's better art. It is, nevertheless, a perfectly genuine instance of an artist whose manner is so easy to imitate that forgeries are common.

Cotman is fairly represented by Landscape (15), a fine specimen of a capital artist who deserves more study than is usually accorded to his admirable pictures. This learned and sincere view of a waterfall descending under an arch called for skilful treatment on the part of the painter. The 'Landscape, Suffolk' (17), by Cotman, we have already mentioned. The Landscape, with Ruin (28), is noteworthy for the crisp touching of the foliage, a characteristic of Cotman, but it is slightly faded so as to be out of harmony with itself. David Cox's Rock-Shooting (7), a luminous but mannered and loosely touched example, pleases us by its silvery luminosity, and belongs to a time when the master's sight was losing some of its keenness. Not so the other and much finer Cox, On Thames Bank, the Rainbow (21), which we saw in another gallery not long since. In conclusion, we may mention Nasmyth's View near Woburn (39); Collins's Harvest Shower (37), which represents that amiable painter to perfection; and the clever End of the Harvest (3), by G. Chalmers.

Five-3rd Gossip.

THE New Gallery Exhibition will be closed about the 7th of April next. Messrs. T. Agnew & Sons' exhibition of water-colour drawings will be opened to the public on Monday; the private view is appointed for to-day (Saturday).

ALL our readers will be sorry to hear that Mr. Frederick Sandys, the powerful and original painter of 'Oriona,' 'Casandra,' 'Medea,' and many other poetical pictures, as well as capital portraits, lately met with an accident while entering an omnibus, and broke his right arm near the shoulder. Great and long suffering as well as serious consequences ensued, from which the painter is now but slowly recovering.

MR. JOSEPH PENNELL's pen drawings of those well-known Gothic sculptures called the "Devils of Notre Dame, Paris," or rather of the restorations, or renewed versions of them, we owe to Viollet-le-Duc's able carvers, are to be seen at Mr. Dunthorne's. With bold, effective, and sympathetic touches, and considerable skill, which wants nothing but high and subtle qualities to be admirable, he furnishes just ideas of the popular monsters. The most remarkable of them all, the world-famous 'Le Stryge,' No. 4, supplied, perhaps, the severest test of the draughtsman's power to delineate diabolical of such prodigious merit. In this example Mr. Pennell has been, as might be expected from his mode of drawing, the least successful, 'Le Stryge' not being, so to say, to be caught on such easy terms; but the grimmer and subtle 'Devil devouring Devil,' and 'Squatted on the Parapet,' are more to the sketcher's credit. The whole exhibition is interesting, and some of the specimens are to be published in facsimile.

AT the Burlington Fine-Arts Club may be seen, by those who obtain a member's ticket, one of the finest collections ever brought together in this country of Japanese lacquer and metal work. The bulk of the specimens of the latter are sword-guards and arrow-heads, besides articles employed in Buddhist worship, martial ornaments, utensils, and weapons in various materials. There are, too, numerous objects inlaid with silver, of which the patterns usually are extremely intricate and elegant. Among the specimens of lacquer, which are much less attractive to artistic eyes than the bronze, and, generally speaking, embrace a much larger proportion of modern instances, are perfume-trays, boxes, smoking-trays, and similar articles, often quaintly moulded in relief, and gilt with patterns of highly characteristic quality and exceedingly elaborate workmanship. Owing to the limits of space at command in Savile Row, but few objects of large size in bronze have been available; nevertheless, some tremendous dragons and horrent monsters are to be seen on the floor and on the tops of the cases containing the smaller articles.

AT the Burlington Fine-Arts Club may now be seen, by tickets easily obtainable, Sir John Millais's interesting early picture of 'Syr Isambard,' the property of Mr. Benson, and several very Chalon-like Turners, belonging to Sir C. Robinson, and representing marine views and shipping; they are painted in oil and of large sizes.

MR. H. J. PRUNGET writes on the 3rd inst.:-

"In your issue of this date you mention in your notes on 'Art Gossip' a picture by a Dutch painter, which has recently been presented to the National Gallery, and which, you state, is believed to be the work of a painter or engraver named Jan Luiken, born 1649, died 1672. It may interest your readers to know that in the famous collection of Dr. Six in Amsterdam there is a picture, also of an old woman, signed IOAN. LVIKEN, and which, until quite recently, has been considered unique. Dr. Hofstede de Groot of the Hague (the well-known Dutch art historian and critic), however, pronounces the National Gallery picture to be a work by the same hand, but he is very doubtful as to the authenticity of the signature on the Six picture. The National Gallery picture is signed and dated 'Joannes Ab. Aack, 1655,' and the signature bears every evidence of being authentic. It appears there was an engraver J. van Aack or Joh. van Aachen, who lived about 1655; but this picture can hardly be the work of a centenarian any more than it can be that of a boy of six years of age, which, if Jonn Luiken and Joannes Abraham Aack are the same person, it would be. No doubt, after the picture has been exhibited at the National Gallery, other paintings by the same hand will be discovered, and another unknown Dutch master's fame established, the same as in recent times—thanks to the researches of Dr. W. Bode and Dr. A. Bredius—J. Kiek, Pieter van den Boer, and other painters of more than average excellence, hitherto unknown, have been unearthed."

THE distinguishing feature of the next conversation of the Royal Water-Colour Society Art Club, which will take place on Wednesday, the 14th, will be an exhibition of works by members of the club, professional and amateur. The exhibition will be open to the public, on presentation of address card, from Thursday, the 15th, until the Wednesday following.

THE death is announced, aged sixty-six years, at Suresnes, of the widow of J. F. Millet.

BELGIAN journals report the purchase by their Government, for the Brussels Gallery, of a magnificent group of seven half-length figures by Van Dyck, representing the Zealand Seigneur van Vilsteren, his wife, and five children. It is Smith's 290, and was painted c. 1628. Van Vilsteren, who sits in the middle of the group, is in the act of playing on a guitar. The price was 200,000 francs; the seller was M. de Ribaucourt, representative of the Van Vilsteren family.

THE Journal de Genève says that a life-size nude Venus, standing with one hand upon her breast, the other holding a veil of tissue, painted by Lorenzo di Credi, has been found in a magazine of the Uffizi by a restorer, who removed the repaints and varnish from its surface.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

COURT THEATRE, LIVERPOOL.—Carl Rosa Opera Company: Production of Berlioz's 'Faust' as an Opera. ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Popular Concerts.

THE performance of works intended for the concert-room on the stage, or of works written for the stage in the concert-room, is, generally speaking, to be deprecated; but there are exceptions, and perhaps the most noteworthy is Berlioz's 'La Damnation de Faust,' which the composer describes as a "légende dramatique," and is an opera in all but the name. In all his works dramatic feeling is more or less perceptible, and there is no very great difficulty in following out the stage directions in the score of 'Faust.' Commendation or condemnation should, in instances of this nature, be given in proportion to the artistic results, and in the present case the more pleasant term may be fairly employed. Mr. T. H. Friend, who is responsible for the stage production at Liverpool, has arranged Berlioz's work in four acts and an epilogue. There was much to admire in the scenic arrangements, and also more than one point in which improvement can easily be made. Accustomed as we are to the impressive choral effects in the opening scene on the plains of Hungary, the balance seemed wrong with the voices at the back of the stage; and mistakes were also made in the scene of fascination on the banks of the Elbe, the double chorus of soldiers and students, and in the final apotheosis of Margaret, which, by the way, should be made to follow immediately on the pandemonium scene, the break being in the nature of an anti-climax. But with these reservations the production may be highly praised even from a pictorial standpoint, and certain portions of the work—notably the scene in Auerbach's cellar and the trio after the love duet—proved more effective on the stage than in the concert-room. Much care and taste had been bestowed on the mounting, and if the errors we have indicated receive prompt attention there will be no further fault to find with the production. Mr. Barton McGuckin sang the titular part quite as well as he does in concert performances, and Mlle. Zélie de Lussan showed herself in all respects well suited for the rôle of Marguerite. As Mephistopheles Mr. Alec Marsh was uncanny in appearance and terribly fiendish in manner, though he wore grey instead of the conventional scarlet. He sang with force, and declaimed the text with admirable clearness and emphasis. A word of commendation should be given to Mr. L. Pringle, who was wholly efficient as Brander. The rehearsals had been conducted by Mr. Claude Jaquinot, but Sir Charles Halle, to whom we are largely indebted for the present popularity of Berlioz's 'Faust,' conducted on the first night, and it was not his fault, considering the limited orchestra and chorus at his command, that the balance of tone was not always satisfactory. Praise, however, should be given to the choristers, who acquitted themselves admirably throughout, the male contingent containing some capital voices.

At the Popular Concert last Saturday Lady Halle introduced a set of Irish pieces for violin by Prof. Villiers Stanford for the first time. As the performance occurred on the same day as the production of Berlioz's 'Faust' at Liverpool, criticism must be postponed until another occasion. The pieces are four in number, their titles being 'A Lament' in D minor, Jig in A minor, 'Hush Song' in F, and Reel in D. Mr. Leonard Borwick played Schubert's last Sonata in B flat, one of the three great works which the composer penned just before the close of his life. As Mr. Borwick has been taken to task for transforming a demisemiquaver into a quaver in the slow movement of the sonata, it should be pointed out that in the repetition of the principal theme the note in question is a quaver, though at the opening it is what is called everywhere but in England a thirty-second note. Brahms's Quintet in C, Op. 111, was repeated by desire; and Chopin's Introduction and Polonaise in C for pianoforte and violoncello, Op. 3, concluded the concert. Miss Florence Christie made a favourable impression as the vocalist.

It was not such a large assemblage as usual that greeted Herr Joachim on his first appearance this season on Monday, but there was no diminution in the heartiness of the welcome. The programme was too conventional to be interesting, the great Hungarian violinist being heard in Beethoven's Quartet in F, Op. 59, No. 1; Haydn's Quartet in B flat, Op. 64, No. 5; and the adagio from Spohr's Seventh Concerto. Alike in the concerted works and in his solo Herr Joachim's powers showed very little abatement, and the accusation sometimes brought against him of late years, that his intonation has a tendency to become uncertain, did not apply on this occasion. Miss Fanny Davies played Beethoven's two light pieces, the Polonaise in C, Op. 89, and the Rondo in C, Op. 129, "Die Wuth über den verlorenen Groschen," with all needful spirit; and Madame Bertha Marx was charming in songs by Miss Maude White, Schumann, and Meyer Helmund.

Musical Society.

WHAT may be termed a trial performance of a tragic opera entitled 'The Magic Fountain,' libretto by Mr. J. R. J. Johnston, music by Mr. Harold S. Moore, was given at St. George's Hall on Thursday last week. The book, founded on a story suggesting the influence of the Lorelei legend, is not particularly well put together, and the language is trite and commonplace; but the music shows marked ability, though the young composer has not yet escaped from the influence of modern French and Italian operatic composers. But it is for the most part well written, and if Mr. Moore perseveres, individuality of style may come in due course. The work had been sufficiently rehearsed, and went smoothly with Miss Margaret Nutter, Miss M. Lockie, Mr. Philip Brozel, and Mr. Frank Wilson in the principal parts, and a small orchestra, the performance being conducted by the composer.

THE usual Ash Wednesday performance of Gounod's 'Redemption' was given by the Royal Choral Society at the Albert Hall, and, as regards the work done by Sir Joseph Barnby's choir, was well-nigh perfect. Miss Anna Williams sang in place of Miss Esther Palliser, and Miss Jessie Hudleston was an efficient substitute for Miss Margaret Hoare. Miss Marie Brema in the contralto music, Mr. Ben Davies and Mr. Norman Salmond as the two narrators, and Mr. Watkin Mills in the part of the Redeemer, all sang with much expression.

THE programme of the first Philharmonic Concert at the Queen's Hall, on the 28th inst., has just reached us. Goldmark's overture 'Sakuntala' and Tchaikowsky's last Symphony, No. 6, are underlined as novelties. Mr. Leonard Borwick is announced to play Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in E flat, and Miss Ella Russell is engaged as the vocalist.

A RARELY heard duet for two pianofortes on 'Lützow's wilde Jagd,' by Ferdinand Hiller, was in the programme of the Royal College of Music concert on Thursday last week, the executants being the sisters Rosina and Bice Cerasoli. The other important items were Mozart's Quartet in G, No. 1, and Brahms's Trio for pianoforte, violin, and horn, Op. 40.

A LECTURE will be given on Tuesday next, at the Royal Academy of Music, on Indian music (with illustrations by a native performer on the vina, or Indian lute), by Capt. O. W. Day, already known as a writer on this somewhat obscure subject.

THE current number of the New Quarterly Musical Review (Cocks & Co.) contains, among several interesting and instructive articles: one on Palestrina, by Mr. J. S. Shedlock; another on 'Modern Musical Notation,' by Mr. F. Corder; and a third on Friedrich Smetana, by Mr. Robin H. Legge, being perhaps the most worthy of mention.

MR. MANNS conducted the annual plébiscite orchestral concert at Glasgow last Saturday. The selection of items showed little variation from those on previous occasions. In the list of overtures 'Tannhäuser' was first by an immense majority, the symphony chosen was Schubert's unfinished work in B minor, and of course the short piece was the Intermezzo from 'Cavalleria Rusticana.'

THE Sterndale Bennett and Parepa Roma scholarships, both exceedingly valuable, are now open to competition at the Royal Academy of Music. Entries must be made for the former by male and for the latter by female students before March 31st. Two new prizes are instituted during the current term, one by Mr. Norman Salmond for vocalists who are natives of Yorkshire, and the other by Miss Agnes Zimmermann for pianists, the latter with a special view to the encouragement of sight reading.

MR. STOCK tells us he is going to issue a monograph on 'Medieval Music,' by Mr. R. C. Hope, F.S.A.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Mon. Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Tues. Mr. Richard Gumpert's Chamber Concert, 8.15, Prince's Hall.
— Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch's Concert, 8.45, "Howard," West End.
Wed. London United Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
— Miss Edith Drake's Concert, 8, Prince's Hall.
Thurs. Mr. G. Emily Jones's Concert, 8, St. Martin's Town Hall.
Sat. 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci,' 2.30, Queen's Hall.
— Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
— Crystal Palace Concert, 3.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

Mrs. LYNN LINTON'S New Novel, The ONE TOO MANY, is now ready, in 3 vols., at every Library.

CHRISTIE MURRAY'S New Novel, IN DIREST PERIL, will be ready on February 15, in 3 vols., at every Library.

NEW LIBRARY NOVELS.

The TIGER LILY: a Tale of Two Passions. By G. MANVILLE FENN. 2 vols.

The RED-HOUSE MYSTERY. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' &c. 2 vols.

"We congratulate Mrs. Hungerford on having thought out a fairly original plot, and told it in a bright and interesting way."—Daily Chronicle.

The COMMON ANCESTOR. By JOHN HILL, Author of 'Treason-Felony,' &c. 3 vols.

"Not only is this delightful story distinguished by originality of plot—the rarest of modern novelistic characteristics—but by an unflagging flow of light-hearted humour and sparkling wit. 'The Common Ancestor' may, without exaggeration, be signalled as a triumph of masterly contrivance."—Daily Telegraph.

NEW TWO-SHILLING BOOKS NOW IN THE PRESS.

By WALTER BESANT.

'The IVORY GATE.'

'VERBENA CAMELLIA STEPHANOTIS.'

[Feb. 15.]

By GRANT ALLEN.

The DUCHESS of POWYSLAND.

BLOOD ROYAL.

By B. M. CROKER.

'A FAMILY LIKENESS.'

By GEIL GRIFFITH.

CORINTHIA MARAZION.

By GILBERT GAUL.

A STRANGE MANUSCRIPT FOUND IN A COPPER CYLINDER.

By HEADON HILL.

'ZAMBRA the DETECTIVE.'

By W. H. MALLOCK.

A ROMANCE of the NINETEENTH CENTURY.

By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.

BOB MARTIN'S LITTLE GIRL.

By HENRY MURRAY.

'A SONG of SIXPENCE.'

[Ready.]

By OUIDA.

SANTA BARBARA.

(Those marked * may also be had in cloth at 2s. 6d.)

By AMÉLIE RIVES.

BARBARA DERING.

By ALAN ST. AUBYN.

The MASTER of ST. BENEDICT'S.

By GEORGE R. SIMS.

'MY TWO WIVES.'

By T. W. SPEIGHT.

BURGO'S ROMANCE.

[Ready.]

By WILLIAM WESTALL.

TRUST-MONEY.

MY DEAD SELF. By WILLIAM JAMISON. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

"A reader may find genuine enjoyment in its perusal."—Speaker.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

The DAYS of his VANITY: a Passage in the Life of a Young Man. By SYDNEY GRUNDY.

"We have not read such an amusing book as this for a long time."—Black and White.

The GUN-RUNNER: a Romance of Zululand. By BERTRAM MITFORD.

With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood. Second Edition.

The LUCK of GERARD RIDGELEY: a Tale of the Zulu Border.

By BERTRAM MITFORD. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"Possessing a thorough knowledge of the country of which he writes, Mr. Mitford is enabled to give a graphic account of events in its history, as well as a lifelike description of its people, based upon facts. The story is of unflagging interest from start to finish."—Journal of Royal Colonial Institute.

The KING'S ASSEGAÏ: a Matabili Story. By BERTRAM MITFORD.

With 6 Illustrations by Stanley L. Wood.

[Shortly.]

The SCALLYWAG. By GRANT ALLEN, Author of 'The Tents of Shem,' &c. A New Edition.

"The Scallywag" is an extremely amusing book."—Guardian.

A TRYING PATIENT, &c. By JAMES PAYN.

DR. PASCAL. By ÉMILE ZOLA, Author of 'The Downfall,' 'The Dream,' &c. Translated by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY. With a Portrait of the Author.

"TO LET," &c. By B. M. CROKER. A New Edition.

"Well-told stories....all interesting and brightly written."—World.

The CONSTABLE of ST. NICHOLAS. By EDWIN LESTER ARNOLD. Author of 'Pura the Phœnician.' With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"The story is told with something approaching brilliancy....To boys such a book as this will be a delight, and their elders may well read it with equal pleasure."—Scotsman.

A PROTÉGÉE of JACK HAMLIN'S, &c. By BRET HARTE.

With 25 Illustrations by William Small, A. S. Boyd, Stanley Wood, W. J. Metcalf, &c.

[Shortly.]

The QUEEN AGAINST OWEN. By ALLEN UPWARD. With a Frontispiece by J. S. Crompton.

[Shortly.]

HEATHER and SNOW: a Novel. By GEORGE MAC DONALD.

A FAIR COLONIST. By ERNEST GLANVILLE, Author of 'The Lost Helms,' &c. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"A Fair Colonist" is really a very good story of the adventures kind—well written, full of incident and variety....The incidents are thrillingly told."—Westminster Gazette.

TWO OFFENDERS. By OUIDA, Author of 'Under Two Flags,' &c.

Small 4to, cloth extra, 6s.

"Two Offenders" is written in one of the author's most charming styles. The book is divided into two stories, 'An Ingrate' and 'An Assassin'—the former a pathetic sketch, which must win the sympathy of all readers....It is a splendid analysis of a grand character, unbending and proud, refusing to recall the memory of a world that had forgotten. The natural ingratitude of a young child and the faithful brute-love of a little rough-haired terrier are exquisitely portrayed. The second story can only be appreciated by being read."—Family Four.

The CLOISTER and the HEARTH. An Édition de Luxe, in 2 vols. large crown 8vo, cloth gilt, with Hundreds of beautiful Illustrations by William Martin Johnson. A limited Edition only has been prepared, the price of copies of which may be obtained from any Bookseller.

NEW EDITIONS, handsomely printed in medium 8vo. 6d. each; cloth, 1s. each.

The CLOISTER and the HEARTH. By CHARLES READE.

IT IS NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND. By CHARLES READE.

PET WOFFINGTON; and CHRISTIE JOHNSTONE. By CHARLES READE.

The IDLER. Edited by JEROME K. JEROME and ROBERT BARR. Profusely illustrated. Sixpence Monthly; or 6s. per year post free.—The First Four Volumes are now ready, profusely illustrated, demy 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. each.—Cases for binding, 1s. 6d. each.

The GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE. One Shilling Monthly; or 14s. per year post free. In addition to Stories and Articles upon subjects in Literature, Science, and Art. PAGES on PLAYS, by Justin H. McCarthy, and TABLE TALK, by Sylvanus Urban, appear monthly.

BOOKS BY EDWARD WALFORD, M.A.

WALFORD'S WINDSOR PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, and KNIGHTAGE (1894). Crown 8vo, Windsor cloth, 12s. 6d.

WALFORD'S COUNTY FAMILIES of the UNITED KINGDOM (1894). Containing Notices of the Descent, Birth, Marriage, Education, &c., of more than 12,000 distinguished Heads of Families, their Heirs Apparent or Presumptive, the Offices they hold or have held, their Town and Country Addresses, Clubs, &c. Royal 8vo, cloth gilt, 50s.

Walford's Shilling Peerage (1894).

Walford's Shilling House of Commons (1894).

Walford's Shilling Baronetage (1894).

Walford's Shilling Knightage (1894).

WALFORD'S COMPLETE PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, KNIGHTAGE, and HOUSE of COMMONS (1894). Royal 32mo, cloth extra, gilt edges, 5s.

The MAKING of a NOVELIST: an Experiment in Autobiography. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of 'Joseph's Coat.' With a Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

"Not since Mr. James Payn's most fascinating little work, 'Some Literary Recollections,' has an English story-teller come before the curtain to gratify an inquisitive audience as abundantly as Mr. Christie Murray has done in 'The Making of a Novelist.'....In either case, the gratification is of that epicurean but tantalizing order which leaves one with the liveliest appetite for more....Mr. Murray has given us a book which reminds one of Mr. Payn's in the gracefully free and easy, touch-and-go style in which it is written, as also in its wealth and charm of anecdote."—H. W. HORTON in the Star.

A NOTE on CHARLOTTE BRONTE. By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE. A New Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

DRAMATIC PICTURES, ENGLISH RISPETTI, SONNETS, and other VERSES. By A. H. JAPP, LL.D. F.R.S.E. Crown 8vo, Irish linen, 6s.

POETICAL WORKS of GEORGE MAC DONALD. Collected and Arranged, with many New Poems, by the AUTHOR. 3 vols. crown 8vo, buckram, 12s.

GASPARD DE COLIGNY. By WALTER BESANT. With a Portrait. A New Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

ÉMILE ZOLA: a Biographical and Critical Study. By R. H. SHERRARD. With Portraits, Illustrations, and Facsimile Letter. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s.

THIERS' HISTORY of the CONSULATE and the EMPIRE of FRANCE under NAPOLEON. Translated by D. FORBES CAMPBELL and JOHN STEBBING. A New Edition, with 36 Steel Plate Illustrations. Complete in 12 Monthly vols. demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s. each. The first Six Volumes are now ready.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON'S NEW LIST.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

"We shall be surprised if it does not rank among the novels of the year."
Westminster Gazette.

A YELLOW ASTER. By "Iota."

In 3 vols.

FIRST REVIEW.

"A Soul has arisen among the fictional prophets. 'A Yellow Aster' is distinctly a work of genius, remarkable for novelty of plot, force of diction, grace of literary style, and subtlety of physical analysis. In short, 'A Yellow Aster' is one of those rare novels of superb quality which compel the iciest criticism to thaw and resolve itself into warm admiration and unqualified praise."
Daily Telegraph.

The FIRST EDITION immediately exhausted.

A YELLOW ASTER.

SECOND REVIEW.

"A first impression is that 'A Yellow Aster' is one of the very best novels we have read for many months; a second, that, in saying this, we do it rather less than justice. For it is a novel apart, with a strikingly original subject, which is worked out with a skill which is altogether unusual. This is a strong and excellent story, which, with all its pathos and tragedy, has the refreshment of a tonic. We shall be surprised if it does not rank among the novels of the year."—Westminster Gazette.

A SECOND EDITION next week.

A YELLOW ASTER.

THIRD REVIEW.

"The main idea is a fine one, and is finely treated; half a dozen chapters of real power follow one another with a noble swing and a sustained force that never degenerates into mere excitement. The book is a clever and interesting one; it is about something, and about something which is new, because people have only just begun to think and talk about it. It will not only be read, it will be useful as well as entertaining to those who read it."
Daily Chronicle.

ADA CAMBRIDGE'S NEW NOVEL.

A MARRIAGE CEREMONY.

In 2 vols. By the Author of 'Not All in Vain,' 'A Little Miss,' &c.

HELEN PROTHERO-LEWIS'S NEW NOVEL. HOOKS OF STEEL. In 3 vols.

FIRST REVIEW.

"In constructive vigour and symmetry 'Hooks of Steel' is distinctly superior to that clever lady's previous works of fiction. Two delightful character sketches, Mathew Primavera and Felix Gray, are both masterpieces of delineation, drawn in the author's very best manner."—Daily Telegraph.

SECOND REVIEW.

"Told with a whimsical humour and pathos, such as show the authoress to be possessed of some of the highest qualities which go to the making of a novelist. 'Hooks of Steel' is a very readable book indeed."—Daily Chronicle.

By EDMUND MITCHELL.

The TEMPLE of DEATH. A Story of Indian Adventure. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt. Price 6s. piece by G. H. Edwards. 6s. (Immediately.)

By the Hon. Mrs. HENNIKER.

OUTLINES. By the Author of 'Polled,' 'Sir George,' &c. Printed on antique laid paper, with Title-Page designed by J. Hewitt Oldfield, and a Photogravure Portrait of the Author. Dedicated to Thomas Hardy. In crown 8vo. gilt, 6s. (Next week.)

A SEVENTH and CHEAPER EDITION of Mr. FRANKFORT MOORE'S New Novel,

A GRAY EYE OR SO,

in crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s. will be ready next week.

HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster-row.

Now ready, with Illustrations and Plates, 12s. 6d.

THE MEAN DENSITY OF THE EARTH.

An Essay to which the Adams Prize was adjudged in 1893 in the University of Cambridge.

By J. H. POYNTING, Sc.D. F.R.S.,

Late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Professor of Physics in the Mason College, Birmingham.

In large 8vo. handsome cloth.

London: CHARLES GRIFFIN & CO., Ltd., Exeter-street, Strand.

Now ready,

THE BOOK-PLATE ANNUAL AND ARMORIAL YEAR-BOOK, 1894.

Edited and Illustrated by JOHN LEIGHTON, F.R.A.

In royal 4to. price 2s. 6d. with 50 Engravings.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London, W.

ON MONDAY, FEBRUARY 12, AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

Medium 8vo. handsomely bound in cloth, gilt extra, price 25s.

KOREA AND THE SACRED WHITE MOUNTAIN. Being a Brief Account of a JOURNEY in KOREA in 1891.

By Capt. A. E. J. CAVENDISH, F.R.G.S.,
1st Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

TOGETHER WITH AN ACCOUNT OF AN ASCENT OF THE WHITE MOUNTAIN

By Capt. H. E. GOULD-ADAMS, R.A.

With 40 Original Illustrations and Two specially prepared Maps.

A Special Feature of the Illustrations consists in a Series of Twenty Drawings illustrating Korean Manners and Customs, which have been prepared for the Author by a Native Korean Artist. Seven of these have been reproduced in Colour by W. Griggs.

London: GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, E.C.
Liverpool: 45 to 51, South Castle-street.

"THE MARVEL OF THE AGE"

Is the unanimous verdict of press and public on

ROUTLEDGE'S HEARTH AND HOME LIBRARY.

A Series of Copyright and Non-copyright Novels, well printed on good paper, and strongly bound in cloth, bevelled boards and gilt tops. 36 volumes were published in January, and of these 66,000 copies were sold in four weeks.

The Twelve following Volumes will be issued during the present month:—

- | | |
|---|--|
| 37. The ROMANCE of WAR. JAMES GRANT. | 43. MARY BARTON. Mrs. GASKELL. |
| 38. A CENTURY'S SENSATIONS. W. SAPHM, jun. | 44. SECRETS of a PRIVATE ENQUIRY OFFICE. |
| 39. The RIFLE RANGERS. Capt. MAYNE REID. | 45. The LAST DAYS of POMPEII. Lord LYTTON. |
| 40. A FAIR FREE-LANCE. Sir GILBERT CAMPBELL. | 46. AT the ELEVENTH HOUR. KEITH FLEMING. |
| 41. MASTERMAN READY. Capt. MARRYAT. | 47. HANDY ANDY. SAMUEL LOVER. |
| 42. The ROMANCE of an ALTER EGO. LLOYD BRYCE. | 48. GUILTY BONDS. WILLIAM LE QUEUX. |

The number of the Library now being printed amounts to 210,000 copies.

In February will also be published—

No. 49. DUMAS' MONTE CRISTO. 512 pp. Complete Edition. In 1 volume. And

No. 50. (The JUBILEE VOLUME),
SHAKSPERE. Edited by Charles Knight. Complete Edition. With 64 Page Illustrations by Sir John Gilbert, R.A. 832 pp. Without exception the cheapest book ever published.

Trade Terms and a Complete List of the Series will be forwarded on application to the Publishers.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited.

London: Broadway, Ludgate-hill. Manchester: Jackson's-row, Deanagat.

ON WEDNESDAY NEXT, CHEAP EDITION OF

MISS BRADDON'S LATEST NOVEL,
ALL ALONG THE RIVER.

Cloth (Autograph Edition), 2s. 6d.; boards, 2s.

"All Along the River" is one of the most pathetic stories Miss Braddon has written."—Athenæum.

London: SIMPKIN & Co., Limited.

AT THE LIBRARIES.

EVE'S PARADISE.—MRS. BRAY'S NOVEL.

Etched Title and Frontispiece. 6s.

"Must certainly rank as one of the best of the year. No one will close the book before arriving at the final page."

SOCIAL AIMS. By the Right Hon. the Earl and Countess of MEATH. Cloth boards, 6s.

"Valuable and instructive."—DAILY TELEGRAPH.

"Ought to be widely read."—CHURCH BELLS.

London: WELLS GARDNER, DARTON & Co. 3, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.; and 44, Victoria-street, S.W.

REMINGTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THIRD EDITION. Just ready, at all Libraries, Bookellers', and Bookstalls.

MEMORIES of the MUTINY. By FRANCIS CORNWALLIS MAUDE, V.C. C.B., late Colonel Royal Artillery, and formerly commanding the Artillery of Havelock's Column. With which is incorporated the Personal Narrative of JOHN WALTER SHERRER, Reg., Companion of the Star of India, formerly Magistrate of Cawnpore, Author of 'Who is Mary?' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. handsomely bound, with Map and Illustrations, 70s.

A few Copies to be had on Special Paper, at 2l. 12s. 6d.

Times says:—"The personal experiences of those who took part in this terrible struggle may still add not a little to the details of the historical picture. The stories told are full of graphic incidents."

GUNNER JINGO'S JUBILEE. By Major-General TOM BLAND STRANDBY (late R.A.). With 15 Full-Page Illustrations, Plans, Maps, and numerous Thumb-nail Sketches. Demy 8vo. handsomely bound in cloth, 10s. 6d.

Literary World says:—"Gunner Jingo's Jubilee" is the title chosen for a volume of over 500 pages of as interesting and entertaining military adventures as one could wish to read."

The HISTORY of the ROYAL BUCKHOUNDS. By J. P. HORE. 1 vol. Illustrated. 10s. 6d. [Ready this day.AMONG BOERS and BASUTOS. The Story of our Life on the Frontier. By Mrs. BARKLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. SECOND EDITION.

Academy says:—"The author of this interesting book paints for home readers a vivid picture of life among the Basutos."

Court Journal says:—"It is written in a smart and pleasing style, and abounds with information which will be of great novelty to many, and cannot fail to interest all who peruse the book. Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to accept a copy."

STEVE BROWN'S BUNYIP, and other Stories. By JOHN ARTHUR BARRY. With Introductory Verses by RUDYARD KIPLING. Cloth, 3s. 6d. FIFTH EDITION.

Athenæum says:—"The stories are themselves quite worthy of Mr. Kipling's introduction; they are tales of the Australian bush and tales of the sea written by a man who knows what he is talking about, and can express it."

OUT BACK; a Romance of the Australian Bush. By KENNETH MACKAY, Author of 'Stirrup Jingles' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. FOURTH EDITION.

Daily Telegraph says:—"A novel by the deservedly popular Australian writer Kenneth Mackay. Certain episodes of Australian life, such as a daring and desperate escort robbery and native 'corroboree,' are narrated with remarkable spirit and graphic verve. 'Out Back' forms a brilliant pendant to 'Stirrup Jingles'—an admirable work, which gave its author popularity."

The MAID of BRITTANY. An Italian Romance (from the Leaves of a Diary). By Count ORSI, Author of 'Recollections of the Last Half Century.' 2 vols. crown 8vo. 51s. [Just out.THIS DEADLY BLOT. By WILLIAM LANGFORD, Author of 'Tifana's Revenge.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

New York Herald says:—"The story is told in terse, vigorous English, a welcome contrast to the ellipsoidal and emasculated style which disfigures most modern literature, and the interest is sustained from beginning to end. All the characters are skilfully drawn."

JOYCE MARTINDALE. By Mrs. H. E. RUSSELL, Author of 'Too Badly Jealous.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Black and White says:—"A fine story of heroic love and surrender."

REMINGTON & CO. (LIMITED), London, King-street, Covent-garden; and Sydney.

THE LONDON QUARTERLY REVIEW.

No. CLXIII JANUARY, 1894

Price 4s.; Annual Subscription, 12s. 6d. post free.

Contents

- 1 DR. FUNEY'S LIFE and WORK.
- 2 LOWELL'S LETTERS.
- 3 JOHN RUSKIN: a Study in Development.
- 4 MACHINALISM.
- 5 PEOPLE'S BANKS.
- 6 CAPTAIN LUGARD in EAST AFRICA.
- 7 MODERN APOLOGETICS.
- 8 SHORT REVIEWS and BRIEF NOTICES.
- 9 SUMMARIES of FOREIGN PERIODICALS.

London: Charles H. Kelly, 7, Castle Street, City Road, E.C., and 66, Finsbury-row, E.C.

Now ready, crown 8vo. price 6d. 5pp

IBSEN, A Lecture delivered at University College, Liverpool, by Request of the Students, January 26, 1894, by SIR EDWARD MURKILL.

Liverpool: Edward Howell, Church-street. London: Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Limited.

Second Edition now ready, much enlarged, 2s. 6d.

OUR MORALITY and the MORAL QUESTION. By Prof. LIONEL BALE, M.A. &c. London: J. A. Churchill.HOW TO CORRECT PRINTERS' PROOFS. By the late WILLIAM BLADES, AUTHOR and OTHERS, with his Proofs by their side, will be able to technically mark a proof with all the neatness of a man whose whole life has been devoted to printing.

Price 6d. post free.

Blades, East & Blades, 21, Abchurch-lane, London, E.C.

IMPORTANT NEW WORK BY

SIR ROBERT S. BALL, F.R.S.,

Professor of Astronomy and Geometry at the University of Cambridge.

AN ATLAS of ASTRONOMY.

Containing 75 beautifully executed Plates.

With Explanatory Letterpress and Complete Index.

Small 4to. handsome cloth gilt cover (designed by Walter Crane), gilt edges, price 12s.

The Times says:—"The atlas is admirably adapted to meet the needs and smooth the difficulties of young and inexperienced students of astronomy, as well as materially to assist the researches of those who are more advanced."

George Philip & Son

London: 25, Fleet-street. Liverpool: 45 to 51, South Castle-street.

AN ORDINARY of BRITISH ARMORIALS:

a Dictionary of Coats of Arms so arranged that the Names of Families whose Crests have been placed upon Buildings, Seal, Plate, Glass, &c. can be readily ascertained. By the late J. W. PATWORTH, and Edited from p. 60 by the late A. W. MOULTON, F.R.S.

In 1,125 pp. 8vo. double columns, in hand in 1 or 2 vols.

Copies of this standard work can still be obtained of Mr. W. Papworth, 12, Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C.

NOURISHING—STRENGTHENING—RESTORATIVE

HARVEST'S LENTIL FOOD.

Absolutely the best of all Foods for Invalids.

See List, April 28th, 1893.

A CERTAIN CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA

INVALUABLE IN CASES OF INFLUENZA.

Sold in 1, 2s. 6d., and 6s. Tins by Grocers and Chemists; or sent carriage paid by the Messrs. W. & D. HARVEST, Downgate Dock, London.

A PENNY A DROP.

THE PURE OTTO of ROSE

TOILET "VINOLIA" SOAP

AND

"VINOLIA" TOILET POWDER

NOW COSTS NEARLY A PENNY A DROP.

BLONDEAU ET CIE, Ryland-road, London, N.W.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of speaking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.*THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S

GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in tins, 1s. 1d. by Chemists. Labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homeopathic Chemists, 119, Piccadilly, and 44, Strand, London."

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for

ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE,

and INDIGESTION.

And safest and purest for Infants, Children, and Invalids.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., LIMITED.

Part I. in MARCH, price 10s.

BIBLIOGRAPHICA: A MAGAZINE OF BIBLIOGRAPHY.

TO BE COMPLETED IN TWELVE QUARTERLY PARTS.

MESSRS. KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO. beg to announce their intention to publish a QUARTERLY MAGAZINE OF BIBLIOGRAPHY in its Historical and Artistic Aspects. It will comprise a Series of Papers, written by Writers of Authority, on various points of Book-lore which are of interest at the present day, and which require special treatment, without being of sufficient importance to be made the subject of separate works.

The Magazine will be printed on Hand-made Paper, large imperial 8vo., and the price to Subscribers will be 30s. per annum, for Four Numbers. Detailed Prospectuses may be had from any Bookseller, or direct from the Publishers.

NEW BOOKS.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS.

FANS of JAPAN. By C. M. SALWEY. With Introduction by WILLIAM ANDERSON, F.R.C.S. With 10 Full-Page Coloured Plates and 39 Illustrations in Black and White. Handsomely bound. Large 4to. 31s. 6d. net.

RECOLLECTIONS of FRED LESLIE. By W. T. VINCENT. With Introduction by CLEMENT SCOTT. With 190 Illustrations. 2 vols. 30s.

HENRY WILLIAM BURROWS, late Canon of Rochester. Memorials by E. WORDSWORTH. With Introduction by the LORD BISHOP of SALISBURY. With Portrait. 6s.

ENGLISH GIPSIES and their LANGUAGE. By CHARLES G. LELAND. Fourth and Cheaper Edition. 3s. 6d.

'TIS SIXTY YEARS SINCE; or, the Two Locksley Halls. By H. SCHÜTZ WILSON. 1s. 6d.

FAUNA of the DEEP SEA. By SYDNEY J. HICKSON. With 23 Illustrations. 2s. 6d.

The DISPERSAL of SHELLS: an Inquiry into the Means of Dispersal possessed by Fresh-water and Land Mollusca. By H. WALLIS KEW, F.Z.S. With Preface by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, LL.D. 5s.

A PRACTICAL GUIDE for PROSPECTORS, EXPLORERS, and MINERS. A Manual for those engaged or interested in the Search for or Development of Metallic or other Mineral Deposits. By CUNINGHAME WILSON MOORE. With numerous Illustrations. 12s. net.

The ELEMENTS of HYPNOTISM. The Induction of Hypnosis: its Phenomena, its Dangers, and Value. By R. HARRY VINCENT. With 20 Illustrations, showing Experiments. 6s.

The ART of MUSIC. By C. H. H. PARRY, Mus.Doc. 12s.

ASHTOREL, and other Poems. By W. E. BROCKBANK. 3s. 6d.

SOCIETY for PSYCHICAL RESEARCH.—PROCEEDINGS, JANUARY, 1894. Containing Papers on Partial Anesthesia, Indian Magic, &c. 3s. 6d.

NEW EDITIONS,

ORIENTAL AND PHILOSOPHICAL.

HISTORY of CIVILIZATION in ANCIENT INDIA BASED on SANSKRIT LITERATURE. With Maps. By ROMESH CHUNDER DUTT, C.I.E. Revised Edition. 2 vols. 21s.

CHINESE BUDDHISM: Sketches, Historical, Descriptive, and Critical. By JOSEPH EDKINS, D.D. Second Edition, Revised. 18s.

FOLK-TALES of KASHMIR. By the Rev. J. HINTON KNOWLES. Second Edition. 16s.

The QUATRAINS of OMAR KHAYYAM. Translated into English Verse by E. H. WHINFIELD, M.A. Second Edition, Revised. 5s.

RELIGION in CHINA: an Account of the Three Religions of the Chinese. By JOSEPH EDKINS, D.D. Revised Edition. 7s. 6d.

The ESSENCE of CHRISTIANITY. By LUDWIG FEUERBACH. From the German by "GEORGE ELIOT." Third Edition. 7s. 6d.

POSITIVE PHILOSOPHY of AUGUSTE COMTE. Translated by HARRIET MARTINEAU. Third Edition. 2 vols. 15s.

PHYSICAL BASIS of MIND. By G. H. LEWES. New Edition. 10s. 6d.

MORAL ORDER and PROGRESS: an Analysis of Ethical Conceptions. By S. ALEXANDER. Second Edition. 14s.

The BHAGAVAD GITA; or, the Sacred Lay: a Sanskrit Philosophical Poem. Translated, with Notes, by JOHN DAVIES, M.A. Third Edition. 8s. 6d.

The SARVA-DARSANA-SAMGRAHA: Review of the Different Systems of Hindu Philosophy. By MADHAVA ACHARYA. Translated by E. B. COWELL and A. E. GOUGH. Second Edition. 10s. 6d.

LONDON: PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS-ROAD, W.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Brewin's Buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Printed by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Brewin's Buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. and Published by the said JOHN C. FRANCIS at Brewin's Buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Boddie and Mr. John Macrae, Edinburgh.—Saturday, February 10, 1894.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3460.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1894.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

GOVERNMENT GRANT of 4,000l. for the PROMOTION OF SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH.—FEBRUARY 28th is the LAST DAY for RECEIVING APPLICATIONS.—Forms may be obtained of the ASSISTANT SECRETARY, Royal Society, Burlington House, London.

BRITISH MUSEUM.—EVENING OPENING.

On and after MONDAY, the 12th February, the EXHIBITION GALLERIES will be OPEN from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m., as follows:—
MONDAYS and FRIDAYS.—Egyptian, Assyrian, Semitic, Religious, and American Collections.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS.—Greek and Roman Collections.

TUESDAYS and THURSDAYS.—Manuscripts, King's Library, Porcelain and Glass, and Prints and Drawings. Prehistoric, Ethnographical, and Mediæval Collections.

Feb 12th, 1894. R. MAUND THOMPSON, Principal Librarian and Secretary.

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.

—THE SIXTH MEETING OF THE SESSION will be held on WEDNESDAY NEXT, FEBRUARY 22nd, at 22, Bedford-square, London, W. Chair to be taken at 8 p.m. Antiquities will be exhibited, and the following Papers read:—

1. 'Hiding Antiquities and Hiding the Ring,' by CHAS. R. R. BARRETT, Esq.
2. 'Note on Stained Glass at Lamborne Church, Berks,' by Dr. A. C. FRYER.

W. DE GHAY RICH, F.R.S., Honorary Secretary.
K. F. LOFTUS BUCK, F.R.S., Secretary.

THE BIBLIOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

President.—W. A. COPINGER, LL.D.
Vice-Presidents.—Right Hon. the Earl of Crawford and Balcanquhall, K.T., Right Hon. Lord Charles Bruce, K. Copley Christie, M.A., Richard Garnett, LL.D.

Treasurer.—ALFRED H. HUTH.
THE NEXT MONTHLY MEETING will be held on MONDAY NEXT, February 19, at 22, Bedford-square, W. When the Rev. A. LOEWY, LL.D., will read a Paper on 'Ownership and Jewish Literature.' Chair to be taken at 8 p.m. ALFRED W. POLLARD, Hon. Sec.

FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.—The Next Evening

Meeting of the Folk-lore Society will be held at 22, Bedford-square, London, W., on WEDNESDAY, February 22nd, at 8 p.m., when the following Papers will be read, viz:—

- 'St. Nicolas and Artemis,' by Professor E. ANCHUTOV
- 'Gipsy Fairy Tales from Roumania,' by the Rev. J. GASTYER, and
- 'Ghostly Lights,' by Mr. M. J. WALSHOUR.

F. A. MILNE, Secretary.
11, Old-square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C., Feb. 12th, 1894.

SOCIETY OF AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.

—THE PUBLIC is urgently warned against covering advertisements in visiting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT TELLING, Secretary.
4, Portland-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.—NOTICE TO

ARTISTS.—THE DAYS for RECEIVING PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, &c., are FRIDAY, SATURDAY, and MONDAY, March 24th, 25th, and 26th, and for RECEIVING TUESDAY, April 3rd.—Forms and tickets can be obtained from the Academy during the month of March on receipt of stamped and directed envelope.

ROYAL INSTITUTION, MANCHESTER.

—February 28th, 1894, Mr. WHITWORTH WALLIS, F.R.S., on 'Heli and the Art of Engraving,' illustrated by Slides from Photographs taken by the Lecturer.
EDWIN MARSHALL, Secretary.

SECRETARY.—Lady desires ENGAGEMENT

AS A SECRETARY (non-resident), can undertake French Correspondence. Good references.—M., 24, Marlborough-garden, West Kensington Park.

SECRETARY OF TRAVELLING COMPANION

DICTIONARY. Of literary tastes. Linguist. Has travelled. Excellent references.—Address W. DEAN, 12, Newfield-street, Chelsea.

PRESS READER undertakes SECRETARIAL

LITERARY WORK. Adept Reading. Long experience. Reads French. Typist. Highest references.—L. L., 8, Southampton-row, W.C.

FASHIONS.—Short, Chatty ARTICLES

ON LADIES' and CHILDREN'S FASHIONS WANTED.—Address, writing time and outline specimens, to J. H. BROWN, Jnr., & Co., 77a, Market-street, Manchester.

ASSISTANT EDITOR REQUIRED, willing to make an investment in an important Co-operative Publishing Company, already formed and registered, for effecting a fair distribution of profit amongst those who produce and those who sell literary and artistic work.—Full particulars from Barron, Moon & Co., Temple Chambers, E.C.

PRINTING and STATIONERY.—WANTED, a

RE-ENGRAVER by a Practical Printer as MANAGER or SUPERINTENDENT in the Colonies or India. Experience in Third-Class Jobbing, Railway and Newspaper Work, and the Allied Branches. Articulate in English. Excellent references.—Address Anglo-Indian, care of 21, Camden Park-road, London, N.W.

PARTNERSHIP.—A THIRD SHARE is OFFERED in a Leading EDUCATIONAL LONDON PUBLISHING HOUSE. It offers to a suitable man a rare opportunity of making a certain fortune. About £5000 required.—Apply Mr. A. B. BROWN, 1, Paternoster-row.

SPANISH HISTORICAL and LITERARY RE-

SEARCH, TUTION, TRANSLATIONS, &c.—Write M. A., 120, Latham-garden, W.

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to best University or Army Tutor, and Schools for Boys or Girls, at Home or Abroad, may be obtained, free of charge, by sending a statement of requirements to R. J. HARVEY, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand.

ASSISTANT SCHOOLMISTRESSES.

—Miss LOUISA HUGHES can RECOMMEND University Graduates, Trained and Certified Teachers, Foreign Teachers, Kindergarten Mistresses, &c.—Central Registry for Teachers, 28, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

EDUCATION.—HILDESHEIM, near HANOVER.

—FRAULIN VON HEHM RECEIVES A FEW YOUNG ENGLISH LADIES TO EDUCATE with her German Pupils. Her Senior Governors is in England for a few weeks, and would take Pupils back at the end of March.—Care of Mrs. K. M. Taylor, Chesham Lodge, Harrow, N.W.

MR. HENRY BLACKBURN'S STUDIO.

—INSTRUCTION IN DRAWING for the PRESS with Technical Assistance. Students join at any time. Advice and instruction by correspondence.—123, Victoria-street, Westminster (near Army and Navy Stores).

—Greek should be taught as a living language.—J. J. J.

COULIN'S SERIES METHOD.—Central School of Foreign Tongues, Howard House, Arundel-street, Strand.—CLASSES IN GREEK (Modern, leading to Ancient) will BEGIN in MARCH. MONDAYS and THURSDAYS, 11 till 1, Evenings, 7 till 8. Also HEBREW shortly.

Application (also for German, French, &c.) to the Directors, Messrs. B. & S. & B. & S.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON (for WOMEN),

5 and 7, York-place, Inner-square, W.

THE HALF TERM will BEGIN on SATURDAY, February 24th.

Four popular Lectures on 'Le Roman Français' will be delivered on WEDNESDAY AFTERNOONS, at 4.30, by M. VICTOR COHEN, beginning LUCY J. RUMMELL, Hon. Sec.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

Coopers' Hill Station.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1894. The Secretary of India will offer them for competition 1200 Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the Secretary, at the College.

HUDDERSFIELD TECHNICAL SCHOOL.

Applications are invited for the appointment as PRINCIPAL of the school. The Principal will be responsible for the Organising and Discipline of the whole school, both in its day and Evening Classes. He will be required to take part in the instruction, and must therefore have made some branch or branches of Science taught in the school his special study. Salary and Applications may be sent in before the 28th February, 1894.—For forms of application and schedule of duties apply to the Secretary, Technical School, Huddersfield.

CHESTERFIELD GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

The Governors of the above School will at an early date proceed to the election of a HEAD MASTER, who will be required to commence duty after the summer holidays.

The school is an endowed school, giving a classical and commercial education, and governed under a scheme approved by the Charity Commissioners in 1879, in which it is provided as follows:—

The school shall be a day and boarding school for boys between 8 and 17, or a later age with consent of Governors.

The Head Master shall be a Graduate of some University in the United Kingdom.

He need not be in Holy Orders.

He will receive a fixed stipend of 1200 per annum, together with a pension payment of 30 per year for each boy, and house rent free.

The number of boys on the roll at the close of last term was 97, and has been higher.

The residence attached to the school (in which the Head Master must reside) is roomy and commodious, and would accommodate twelve boarders.

The Boarding School fee is not to exceed 500 per year.

The subjects of instruction include Mathematics, Latin, at least one foreign European Language, and Natural Science. The religious instruction given in the school is to be of an undenominational character.

The school is in connection with the South Kensington Science and Art Department, and is a District Technical School in connection with the County Council, having several Junior Technical Scholarships attached thereto.

Other Scholarships are also maintained in the school.

No canvassing on any account will be allowed.

Applications, with 15 copies of testimonials to be sent on or before March 10, 1894, to: MANSFELT & RUMMELL, Solicitors, Chesterfield.

Clara to the Governor.

UNIVERSITY of EDINBURGH.

LECTURESHIP in (a) FRENCH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE and ROMAN PHILOLOGY, and (b) GERMAN LANGUAGE and LITERATURE and ROMAN PHILOLOGY.

THE UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH will on APRIL 1st next or some subsequent day, APPOINT a LECTURER in each of the above two subjects.

The Lecturer must be qualified to instruct students with a view to Honours as well as the ordinary Degree in Arts, and must possess an historical acquaintance with both the literature and the Philology of France and Germany respectively from the earliest times. They should also possess a thorough colloquial command of the language.

They will be required to teach during both the Winter and the Summer Session, and to enter on their duties at the beginning of the Winter Session 1894-95.

The appointments, which may be renewed, will be for five years, at an annual salary of 4000 (in each Lecturehip).

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMBIERS, ANTWERP, BRASLIEUX-SUR-MER, BRASSIEUX, BON-DRAX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONTAUX, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TULON.

And at the GALLIANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

LOST, a BIBLE, dated 1595, recently rebound, about 10 in. by 8, with entries of names of the Cocke family.—Information sent to FRANK EDWARDS, 82, High-street, Marylebone, London, W., will oblige.

BATTERSEA POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE,

LONDON, N.W.

SCHOOLS OF DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

The Governing Body require the services of a LECTURER in THEORY and PRACTICE OF EDUCATION, HYGIENE, and PHYSIOLOGY, two afternoons per week. For particulars apply to the Secretary not later than February 20.

PARISH of PADDINGTON.

MEDICAL OFFICER OF HEALTH.

The Vestry of the above Parish, as the Sanitary Authority under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, being about to APPOINT a MEDICAL OFFICER OF HEALTH, the Sanitary Commission is prepared to receive applications from duly qualified Medical Practitioners for the office in question, at a salary of £300 per annum. The gentleman appointed will have to devote the whole of his time to the duties of the office, as defined by the Local Government Board, and will be permitted to engage in private practice. Age not to exceed 50 years. Applications, on forms to be obtained at my office between the hours of ten and four, must be sent in, accompanied by copies of not more than three testimonials of recent date endorsed "Medical Officer" on or before Monday, the 20th inst. Candidates must have the qualifications required by Section 106, N. 7 (c) of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, and possess the necessary Diploma of Public Health. The appointment will be subject to the approval of the Local Government Board. Personal canvassing prohibited.

By order, FRANK DETHMERS, Vestry Clerk.
Vestry Hall, Harrow-road, W., February 12th, 1894.

TYPE-WRITING.—Manuscripts Copied, Home

Work. Terms, 12 per folio (25 words), or 1,500 words and over, 1s per thousand.—Miss DUNSTON, The Avenue, Stewage, Harlow.

TYPE-WRITING and STENOGRAPHY.—Lowest

Prices in the City. All branches. MSS. carefully Copied. Tuition in both subjects. Open 9 a.m. till 8 p.m.—HENDERSON & LANE, Room 41, Broad-street House, Old Broad-street, E.C.

WANTED, TYPE-WRITING at HOME. Price

1d. a folio; or 1,500 words for 1s.—Apply L. M., 15, Lloyd-square, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, at 1d. per folio.

Short-hand Notes taken. References to Authors.—Miss GILBERT, 241, South Lambeth-road, S.W.

THE FLEET-STREET TYPE-WRITERS,

114 Fleet-street, E.C.

Lowest charges. Highest speed. Every kind of Type-writing Work done. Price List.—114, Fleet-street, London.

TYPE-WRITERS.—SECOND-HAND

MACHINES, equal to new, FOR SALE, EXCHANGE, or LENT on HIRE. Machines sold by instalments on terms to suit purchasers. Use of Machine taught free to HIRE or purchase. Kensington, Trade Hammonds (typograph, barlocks, &c.) from C. H. M. Corbett with accuracy and despatch at lowest rates. Highest references. Illustration Catalogue free.—M. TAYLOR, Manchester, National Type-Writer Exchange, 74, Cannon-street, London (Hobbs) end.

THE AUTHORS' BUREAU, Limited.—A Literary

Agency and Press Agency. "A Medium of Communication between Authors, Editors, and Publishers." Advice upon reviews, and negotiation MSS. Interviews by appointment only.—Address the Secretary, 2, Victoria-street, Westminster.

THE AUTHORS' BUREAU

ASSISTS AUTHORS to DISPOSE of their MSS. to the very best advantage. MSS. advised upon and revised by experts. Every care is taken of MSS. entrusted. Estimates prepared. Copyrights registered, &c. Circular post free.

A. L. DICEY, 22, Newington-curling, London, N.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY, Established 1879.

Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BUCHER, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. Most placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Twenty-five years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book-Protecting. Commission free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BUCHER, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents,

14, COCKFUR-STEET, CHANCERY CROSS, E.C.

Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest prices. Special rates in all kinds of Publications, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, under the Valuations for Probate or Partition in Regulations, and Advertisements, &c. Card of Terms on application.

12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

C. MITCHELL & CO. are instructed to DIS-

POSE the COPYRIGHT and PLANT of an important FINANCIAL WEEKLY NEWSPAPER, with Large Circulation and Advertising Connection. Good Jobbing Business. Principals only or their Solicitors treated with.

ROMANO BRITISH CINERARY VESSELS for SALE, including very elegant vase or urn, perfect, and believed to be unique - Address Mr. Mervyn Herbert, Ashby

W. Shayer, Mrs. Wm. Anderson David Cox, E. M. Wimperley, H. J. J. Hill, John Niepel, Walter Langlois, Thomas Fisher, M. Garland, Charles Jones, Wm. Remond, George C. Smith, James A. McCallister, Jr., Fredrick A. Gieseler, R. Johnson, D. Patterson, A. E. Melroy, G. C. Barnes, J. K. Smith, A. Privitt, E. J. Niermann, and James Webb, do—and a few WATER-COLOR DRAWINGS by L. A. Lewis, J. L. James Hard, Jan., Thomas Fisher, John Stegler, A. E. Melroy, Charles Collins etc.

On view the day preceding sale. Catalogues may be obtained at the Office of the Auctioneer, No. 10, New-street, Birmingham Catalogues will be ready on Thursday, 17th inst. and will be forwarded on application to the A. VICKERS. On view on Tuesday, 30th, from 10 to 4. Sale each day at 11 o'clock.

MONDAY NEXT.

Surplus Stock of "Arcas" Hard-plated Articles, Machinery, &c.
MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, February 19, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, the SURPLUS STOCK of "ARCAS" HARD-PLATED ARTICLES (comprising Cane-Backs, Tables, and Marbled-top Cases), Seaside Boxes—Tobacco-Cases—Saddles—Forks &c., also the Machinery, Liquids, and various Apparatus for manufacturing the above.
 On view the Saturday prior 12 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogue had.

THURSDAY NEXT.

Valuable Collection of Birds' Eggs.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on THURSDAY NEXT, February 22, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, the Valuable COLLECTION of BIRDS' EGGS formed by the late Rev. W. HURLEY, and a COLLECTION of EGGS the Property of HARON DRAMON VILLE, which includes a fine Egg of the Great Auk, also the COLLECTION of STITCHED BIRDS formed by CHAS. GUCKENHEIM, Esq., and a magnificent Carriage Ring made from the skin of the Duchessed d'Alençon, &c.
 On view the day prior 10 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogue had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

Scientific Instruments, Photographic Apparatus, and Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, February 23, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, CAMERA and LENSES by well-known Masters—Wanda, Plates, Camera Cases, and other Photographic Apparatus—Scientific Instruments—Telescopes—Opera Glasses—Electrical Apparatus, &c.
 On view morning of Sale, and Catalogue had.

By order of the Court in a Debenture Holder's Action.
First Portion of the Stock of HENRY CROUCH, Limited.
MONDAY, March 5.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, March 5, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, the FIRST PORTION of the STOCK of HENRY CROUCH, Limited, comprising Photographic Apparatus consisting of Cameras in all sizes—Hand Cameras, Lenses in great variety—Microscopic Apparatus—Vernier and other Microscopes—Oil Immersion and all complete Assortments of other Optical—Telescope—Thermometers, &c.
 On view Saturday prior 10 to 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogue had.

To Sculptors and others.

PORTLAND-PLACE, W.—A very handsome Thirteen-Roomed Residence, with Two noble Salons at rear, specially adapted for artistic work of colonial proprietors. The Studios are led to an eminent sculptor, but possession may be obtained by One Quarter's notice. The Residence will be offered with possession.

MESSES. ROBERT TIDEY & SON will SELL by AUCTION, at the Mart, City, on WEDNESDAY, February 22, at 7 o'clock precisely, the direct PORTLAND CEMENT of No. 31, DEVON-SHIRE-STREET, W. (inspired term, 25 years at 45 per annum, the premium being of the rental value of 200 per annum).
 May be viewed, Particulars &c. at the Mart, of Messrs. MOORE & MILES, Solicitors, 30, Abchurch-lane, E.C.4; or of the Auctioneers, 100, Essex-road, Islington.

MESSES. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS
 respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On TUESDAY, February 20, and Following Day, the FIRST PORTION of the STOCK of WORKS of ART and DECORATIVE PROPERTY of the late Mr. GEORGE SINGLTON.

On THURSDAY, February 22, the EGGLINTON FAMILY JEWELS and magnificent JEWELS of the late Mr. GEORGE ATTENBOROUGH, and from Private Sources, and fine old ENGLISH and FOREIGN SILVER and SILVER-GILT.

On FRIDAY, February 23, and Following Day, and on MONDAY, February 26, MODERN PICTURES and WATER COLOUR DRAWINGS from the COLLECTION of MARIANO DE MURRIETA, Esq.

On TUESDAY, February 27, and Three Following Days, without reserve, the REMAINDER of the COLLECTION of OBJECTS of ART of Mr. R. JOSEPH, deceased.

On THURSDAY, March 1, a valuable COLLECTION of WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, sold by order of Trustees.

On MONDAY, March 5, and Following Days, the COLLECTION of WORKS of ART and DECORATION, PLATE, BOOKS, and the CELLAR of WINE of the late JAMES BEARD, Esq.

Now ready, crown 8vo. price 6d. 36 pp.

IBSEN. A Lecture delivered at University College, Liverpool by Request of the Senate, January 20, 1894, by SIR EDWARD KIRKALL.
 Liverpool, Edward Howell, Church-street. London: Hargrave, Marshall & Co., Limited.

PUBLICATIONS NOUVELLES

LIBRAIRIE HACHETTE ET C^{ie}.

London: 18, King William-street, Charing Cross.
 Paris: Boulevard Saint-Germain.

GIRY (A.), professeur à l'École des Chartes, directeur-adjoint à l'École pratique des Hautes-Études: MANUEL DE DIPLOMATIQUE (Diplômes et Chartes.—Chronologie technique.—Éléments critiques et parties constitutives de la teneur des Chartes.—Les Chanceleries.—Les actes privés). 1 vol. grand in-8, broché, 20 fr.

SCHUBIN (Ossip): GLORIA VICTIS, roman traduit de l'allemand avec l'autorisation de l'auteur par JANE MAIRE. 1 vol. in-16, broché, 1 fr.

DU MÊME AUTEUR.

L'HONNEUR, roman traduit de l'allemand avec l'autorisation de l'auteur, par M. ARMAND. 1 vol. in-16, broché, 1 fr.

GÉSA—MAL' OCCIO, nouvelles traduites de l'allemand avec l'autorisation de l'auteur, par JANE MAIRE. 1 vol. in-16, broché, 1 fr.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

FEBRUARY. 1712 2s. 6d.

Abridged Contents.

THE INCOME-TAX IN ENGLAND. By the Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P.

A MESSAGE TO LITERATURE. By Margaret Troland.

HOW TO HELP THE UNEMPLOYED. By Henry George.

ARE WE A PLUTOCRACY? By W. D. Howells.

THE EVILS OF EARLY MARRIAGES. By Cyrus Mason, M.D.

THE WILSON BILL. By Senator Roger Q. Mills.

THE AMATEUR NURSE—an ACCOMPLISHED FACT. By Kate G. Wells.

London: Wm. Heinemann, 27, Bedford-street, W.C.

ON TUESDAY NEXT WILL BE PUBLISHED
 THE 47th ANNUAL ISSUE OF

THE NEWSPAPER PRESS DIRECTORY for 1894.

Containing full particulars of every Newspaper, Magazine, Review, and Periodical in the United Kingdom and the British Isles, the Newspaper Map of the United Kingdom, the Continental, American, Indian, and Colonial Papers, and a Directory of the Press Papers and Periodicals. Price 2s. or post free, thirty stamps.

London: C. Mitchell & Co. 12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

HOW TO CORRECT PRINTERS' PROOFS.

By the late WILLIAM HENDER, AUTHOR and OTHERS, with this treatise by their aide, will be able to technically mark a proof with all the necessities of a man whose whole life has been devoted to printing.

Price 2s. 6d. post free.
 Blades, East & Blades, 23, Abchurch-lane, London, E.C.

Now ready,

PHILOSOPHICAL TRANSACTIONS

OF
 THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

CONTENTS OF PART 4. 1893.

Price 12s. 6d.

1. TRANSMISSION OF SUNLIGHT THROUGH THE EARTH'S ATMOSPHERE. By Capt W. de W. Abney.
2. THE POTENTIAL OF AN ANCHOR RING. By F. W. Dymond.
3. BAKERIAN LECTURE: THE RATE OF EXPLOSION IN GASES. By Harold B. Dixon.
4. ON THE RESIDUES OF POWERS OF NUMBERS for any COMPOSITE MODULUS, REAL or COMPLEX. By Geoffrey T. Hardy.
5. IONIC VELOCITIES. By W. C. Dampier Whitham.
6. THE VALUE OF THE MECHANICAL EQUIVALENT OF HEAT, deduced from some EXPERIMENTS PERFORMED WITH THE VIEW OF ESTABLISHING THE RELATION BETWEEN THE ELECTRICAL AND MECHANICAL UNITS, together with an INVESTIGATION into the CAPACITY for HEAT of WATER at different TEMPERATURES. By R. H. Graham.
7. ON THE THICKNESS AND ELECTRICAL RESISTANCE OF THIN LIQUID FILMS. By A. W. Richmond and A. W. Rickett.
8. ON THE MEASUREMENT OF THE MAGNETIC PROPERTIES OF IRON. By Thomas Gray.
9. ON THE COMPOSITION OF WATER BY VOLUME. By Alexander Stewart.
10. THE ABSOLUTE THERMAL CONDUCTIVITIES OF IRON AND COPPER. By E. Wallace Stewart.
11. ON THERMAL RADIATION IN ABSOLUTE MEASURE. By J. T. Hottel.
12. HARMONIC ANALYSIS OF HOURLY OBSERVATIONS OF AIR TEMPERATURE AND PRESSURE at BRITISH OBSERVATORIES. Part I. TEMPERATURE. By Lieut-General R. H. M. Dyer.
13. THE VARIATION OF MOLECULAR SURFACE-ENERGY with TEMPERATURE. By William Ramsay and John Shields.
14. ON THE PHOTOGRAPHIC SPECTRA of some of the BRIGHTER STARS. By J. Norman Lockyer.
15. AERATION PROBLEMS. A Discussion concerning the Motion of the Ether near the Earth, and concerning the Connection between Ether and Great Matter. By Oliver Lodge.
16. ON THE RESULTS OF AN EXAMINATION OF THE ORIENTATIONS of a number of GREEK TEMPLES with a view to connect these ANGLES with the AMPLITUDES of certain STARS at the TIMES the TEMPLES were FOUNDED. By F. C. Penrose.
17. MEMOIR on the THEORY of the COMPOSITIONS of NUMBERS. By P. A. MacMahon, Major R.A.
18. ON THE EVIDENCES of a SUBMERGENCE of WESTERN EUROPE, and of the MEDITERRANEAN COASTS, at the CLOSE of the GLACIAL or so-called POST-GLACIAL PERIOD. By Joseph Prestwich.
19. MAGNETIC QUALITIES OF IRON. By J. A. Ewing, M.A. F.R.S., and Miss Helen C. Ewing.
20. THE POTENTIAL OF AN ANCHOR RING. Part II. By F. W. Dymond.
21. ON THE ANNUAL and SEMI-ANNUAL SEISMIC PERIODS. By Charles Davison.
22. ON THE DIFFERENTIAL CO-VARIANTS OF PLANE CURVES, and the OPERATORS EMPLOYED in their DEVELOPMENT. By R. F. Gwyther.

CONTENTS OF PART 5.

Price 12s. 6d.

1. ON THE ORGANIZATION OF THE FOSSIL PLANTS of the COAL-MEASURES. Part XIX. By W. C. Williamson.
2. AN EXPERIMENTAL INVESTIGATION OF THE NERVE ROOTS which enter into the FORMATION of the BRACHIAL PLEXUS of the DOG. By J. S. Risdon Russell.
3. CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE ANATOMY OF FISHES. II. The AIR-BLADDER and WEBBIAAN ORGANS in the SILURIFORM FISHES. By T. W. Bridge and A. C. Hudson.
4. THE ELECTRO-OPTIC PROPERTIES OF THE SKIN of the COMMON EEL. By K. Waymouth Reid.
5. THE CHIRIDRUM OF OENITHORNITHUS PARADOXUS. By Alice Hild.
6. THE HIPPOCAMPTUS. By Alex. Hill.
7. ON SOME NEW REPTILES from the ELGIN SANDSTONES. By R. T. Newton.
8. THE PHYSIOLOGICAL ACTION OF THE NITRATES of the PARAPYRIN SERIES, considered in connection with their Chemical Constitution. By J. Theodore Cobb and Wyndham R. Dunstan.
9. EXPERIMENTS in EXAMINATION OF THE PERIPHERAL DISTRIBUTION of the FIBRES of the FIFTH CRANIAL NERVE of some SPINAL NERVES. By Charles A. Sherrington.
10. ON THE COLOURATION of the SKINS of FISHES, especially of PLEUROCTENIDÆ. By J. T. Cunniff and C. A. MacMahon.

London: Harrison & Sons, 46, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

NEW SCIENTIFIC WORKS

PUBLISHED BY

A. & C. BLACK.

Now ready, in demy 8vo. cloth, illustrated with 12 Lithographs; Plates, price 18s. net.

INVESTIGATIONS ON MICROSCOPIC FOAMS AND ON PROTOPLASM.

By Prof. O. BUCHHEIM.

Translated from the German by E. A. MINCHIN, B.A. Oxon., Fellow of Merton College, Oxford.

In demy 8vo. cloth, 450 pages, and illustrated with 243 Figures, price 18s. net.

ZOOLOGY OF THE INVERTEBRATA:

A TEXT-BOOK FOR STUDENTS.

By ARTHUR E. SHIPLEY, M.A.,
 Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Christ's College, and Demonstrator of Comparative Anatomy in the University of Cambridge.

In Medium 8vo. boards, leather back.

A DICTIONARY OF BIRDS.

By ALFRED NEWTON, assisted by HANS GADOW.
 With Contributions from RICHARD LYDEKKER, B.A. F.G.S.,
 CHARLES S. ROY, M.A. F.R.S., and ROBERT W. SWEETFIELD,
 M.D., late United States Army.

To be Completed in Four Parts. Parts 1 and 3 now ready.

Price 7s. 6d. net each.

In 4to. cloth, price 12s. 6d.

ZOOLOGICAL ARTICLES

Contributed to the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.'

By E. RAY LANKESTER, M.A. LL.D. F.R.S.,
 Linacre Professor in the University of Oxford.
 To which are added Kindred Articles by other Naturalists.

In demy 8vo. cloth, 763 pages, and illustrated with 357 Wood Engravings.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF MAMMALS, LIVING AND EXTINCT.

By Sir WILLIAM HENRY FLOWER, F.R.S.,
 Director of the Natural History Department,
 British Museum; and
 RICHARD LYDEKKER, B.A. F.G.S. F.Z.S.
 Cheaper Edition, price 12s. 6d.

In demy 8vo. cloth, 720 pages, and illustrated with 330 Wood Engravings.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF FISHES.

By ALBERT C. L. G. GUNTHER, M.A. M.D. Ph.D. F.R.S.,
 Keeper of the Zoological Department in the British Museum.

Cheaper Edition, price 12s. 6d.

In crown 8vo. cloth, illustrated.

LIFE IN MOTION; Or, Muscle and Nerve.

By JOHN GRAY M'KENDRICK,
 M.D. LL.D. F.R.S. F.R.C.P.S.,
 Professor of Physiology in the University of Glasgow.
 Cheaper Edition, price 2s. 6d.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, W.

THE LIBRARY OF OLD ENGLISH AUTHORS.

(Formerly published by J. RUSSELL SMITH.)

A series of well selected reissues of the Works of Famous Authors of past times, tastefully printed in very legible type upon superior paper, and neatly bound in cloth in a uniform style, and offered at a greatly reduced published price, post free.

- Amadis of Gaul.—The Renowned Romance of AMADIS of GAUL, by Vasco Lobos, translated from the Spanish Version of Garciadiego de Montalvo by Robert Southey, a New Edition, in 3 vols. 12 0
- Ascham's (Roger) Whole Works, now first collected and reissued, with Life of the Author, by the Rev. Dr. Giles, 4 vols. 12 0
- Aubrey's (John, the Wiltshire Antiquary) MISCELLANIES, New Edition, with Additions and Index, to which is now added for the first time Sir T. Browne's Hydrophobia or Urn Burial, embellished with a fine Portrait and curious Woodcuts 4 0
- Camden's (William) Remains concerning BRITAIN, Portrait 4 0
- Carow's (Thos.) Poems and Masques, edited, with Indexes, by Rev. J. W. Ewerth 4 0
- Crashaw (Richard), Poetical Works of, Author of Steps to the Temple, Sacred Poems, with other Delights of the Muses, and Poems, now first collected, edited by W. R. Turnbull 4 0
- Drayton's (Michael) Poetical Works (comprising the Poliphont and Harmony of the Church), edited by Hooper, 3 vols. 12 0
- Drummond's (William, of Hawthornden) POETICAL WORKS, entire, edited by W. R. Turnbull, two Portraits 4 0
- Hearne's (Thomas) Diaries of the Anti-QUARY, edited by Dr. Miles, Portrait, 3 vols. 12 0
- Herrick's (Robert) Hesperides, the Poems and other Remains of Robert Herrick, a New Edition, carefully revised and re-edited by W. C. Hazlitt, with Additions, the Portrait Frontispiece after the Original by Marshall, 2 vols. 8 0
- Homer's Batrachomyomachia, Hymns and Epigrams, Homod's Works and Days, Musæus' Hore and Lander, Juvenal's Pura Solilo, translated by George Chapman, New Edition, with Introduction and Notes by Rev. Richard Hooper 4 0
- Lilly's (John) Dramatic Works, with Notes, Life, and some Account of his Writings, by Fairbairn, 2 vols. Portrait 8 0
- Lovelace's (Richard) Poems, now first edited, and the Text carefully revised, with Life and Notes, by W. Carew Hazlitt, with 4 Plates 4 0
- Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle's AUTOBIOGRAPHY, and Life of her Husband, edited by M. A. Laver, two Portraits 4 0
- Mather's (Dr. Cotton) Wonders of the IN-VISIBLE WORLD, being an Account of the Trials of Several Witches lately Executed in New England, with Mr. Increase Mather's Further Account of the Trials, and Chain of Consistency concerning Witchcraft, 1693, with an Introductory Preface, Portrait 4 0
- Mather's (Dr. Increase) Remarkable Provi-DENCES of the EARLIER DAYS of AMERICAN COLONIZATION, with Introductory Preface by George Ogle, two Portraits 4 0
- Remains of the Early Popular Poetry of ENGLAND, collected and edited by W. Carew Hazlitt, 4 vols. with many curious Woodcut Frontispieces 16 0
- Sackville's (Thomas) Poetical and Dramatic WORKS, Portrait 4 0
- Sandy's (George) Poetical Works, now first collected, edited by the Rev. E. Hooper, 2 vols. Portrait 8 0
- Selden's (John) Table Talk, edited, with a Biographical Preface and Notes, by E. W. Singer, Portrait, New Edition, to which is now added for the first time John Warwick's "Square Minutes" 4 0
- Suckling's (Sir John) Poems, Plays, and other Pieces, edited, with Notes, Appendixes, and Life, by W. Carew Hazlitt, 2 vols. Portrait 8 0
- The History of King Arthur and the KNIGHTS of the ROUND TABLE, compiled by Sir T. Malory, edited from the Edition of 1891, with Introduction and Notes by T. Wright, Third Edition, 3 vols. 12 0
- The Iliads of Homer, Prince of Poets, truly translated, with a Comment on some of his Chief Places, done according to the Greek by George Chapman, with Notes by the Rev. Richard Hooper, 3 vols., Portrait of Chapman and Frontispiece 8 0
- The Odysseys of Homer, translated according to the Greek by George Chapman, with Introduction and Notes by the Rev. Richard Hooper, 3 vols., with Facsimile of the rare original Frontispiece 8 0
- The Vision and Creed of Piers Plough-MAN, edited by Thomas Wright, a New Edition, Revised, with Additions to the Notes and Glossary, 2 vols. 8 0
- Webster's (John) Dramatic Works, Edited with Notes, &c., by William Hazlitt, 4 vols. 16 0
- Wither's (George) Hymns and Songs of the CHURCH, edited, with Introduction, by Edward Farr, also the Musical Notes, composed by Orlando Gibbons, with Portrait after Holbein 4 0
- Wither's (George) Hallelujah; or, Britain's Second Anniversary in Translated Poetical Hymns, Spiritual Songs, and Moral Odes, with Introduction by Edward Farr, Portrait 4 0

REEVES & TURNER, 5, Wellington-street, Strand.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

Mr. HEINEMANN begs to announce, as ready, a POSTHUMOUS NOVEL, in 3 vols., of the late WOLCOTT BALESTIER, entitled 'BENEFITS FORGOT,' which may be obtained at the Libraries.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

THE NAULAHKA: a Tale of West and East. By RUDYARD KIPLING and WOLOOTT BALESTIER. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

THE AVERAGE WOMAN. With an Introduction by HENRY JAMES. Post 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Uncommonly well worth reading."—National Observer.

A SUPERFLUOUS WOMAN.

IN THREE VOLUMES, AT ALL LIBRARIES.

STANDARD.—"A love story that is a very remarkable piece of writing told with real power and beauty. The author is full of undisciplined power; she has poetry and passion and courage, and, unless we are mistaken, has a future before her. The last two or three pages of her book lift it into a poem."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"A novel upon which has been expended an infinity of thought, and the pages of which betray a capacity for the analysis of human feelings and emotions rarely to be met with."

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"The book is best where it is nearest passionate life. There are singular qualities—force, cleverness, insight—in the last scene between Jessamine and Colin, and in that of her lonely death. Altogether the book has a great deal of good in it, is refreshing and frank, and is uncommonly well worth reading."

REVIEW OF REVIEWS.—"The anonymous author presents primal passion, unencumbered of the trappings of shame and habit, with a simplicity and directness unequalled in recent English fiction. In short, 'A Superfluous Woman' is a clever book, and a useful. Whether it will attain the success of 'The Heavenly Twins' is yet to be seen, but the good that it will do will be much on the same lines."

BLACK and WHITE.—"A remarkable book."

SCOTTISH LEADER.—"Most powerfully drawn and inexpressibly sad."

I. ZANGWILL'S NEW BOOK.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6s.

THE KING OF SCHNORRERS.

Grotesques and Fantasies.

WITH NINETY-EIGHT ILLUSTRATIONS.

By PHIL MAY, GEO. HUTCHINSON, F. H. TOWNSEND, and Others.

[Ready Feb. 23.]

BY THE SAME AUTHOR, price 6s. each.

CHILDREN OF THE GHETTO. New Edition, with Glossary.

THE PREMIER and the PAINTER.

A Fantastic Romance. By I. ZANGWILL and LOUIS COWEN. Third Edition.

HAROLD FREDERIC'S NEW BOOK.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d.

THE COPPERHEAD.

Stories of the North during the American War.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR, price 3s. 6d. each.

THE RETURN OF THE O'MAHONY.

With Illustrations.

IN THE VALLEY.

With Illustrations.

A NEW SIX SHILLING NOVEL.

THE RECIPE FOR DIAMONDS.

By C. J. CUTOLIFFE HYNE.

HEINEMANN'S INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY.

Edited by EDMUND GOSSE.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper cover, 2s. 6d. each.

NOW READY.

FAREWELL LOVE! From the Italian of Matilde Serao

(Author of 'FANTASY') by Mrs. HENRY HARLAND.

UNDER THE YOKE. From the Bulgarian of Ivan Vazoff.

ATHENÆUM.—"By far the most remarkable novel which has appeared in English during the year is a translation, and a translation from a language which has never had a literature—'Under the Yoke,' from the Bulgarian of Ivan Vazoff."

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

FEBRUARY, 1894. Price 2s. 6d.

Abridged Contents.

THE INCOME-TAX IN ENGLAND. By the Right Hon.

Rip John Lubbock, Bart. M.P.

A MENACE TO LITERATURE. By Margaret Deland.

HOW TO HELP THE UNEMPLOYED. By Henry James.

ARE WE A PLUTOCRACY? By W. D. Howells.

THE EVILS OF EARLY MARRIAGES. By Cyrus Edson.

THE WILSON BILL. By Senator Roger Q. Mills.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

CLARENDON PRESS LIST.

NEW AND RECENT BOOKS.

THE OXFORD CHAUCER.

In Six Volumes, demy 8vo, with Portrait and Facsimiles.

THE COMPLETE WORKS
OF GEOFFREY CHAUCER.

EDITED FROM NUMEROUS MANUSCRIPTS

By Prof. W. W. SKEAT.

IMMEDIATELY, Vol. I., price 16s.

Fp. Lxiv, 568, demy 8vo, with Contemporary Portrait and Facsimile from the Harleian MS.

CONTENTS.

General Introduction.

Life of Chaucer.	The Romaunt of the Rose.
List of Chaucer's Works.	The Minor Poems.
Introduction to the Romaunt of the Rose.	Notes to the Romaunt of the Rose.
Introduction to the Minor Poems.	Notes to the Minor Poems.

The remaining Five Volumes will be published at short intervals during the present year.

The complete set of Six Volumes is offered to Subscribers at Three Guineas net, payable in advance.

* * The Subscription List will be closed before the issue is completed, and the names of original subscribers will be given at the end of the sixth volume.

This Edition of Chaucer, by one of the greatest Authorities on early English Literature, represents the unremitting labour of a quarter of a century. It is a complete edition of ALL THE GENUINE WORKS of Chaucer, whether in prose or poetry. It contains an ENTIRELY NEW TEXT, founded upon the best Manuscripts and the earliest Printed Editions.

It is the first modern edition (not counting mere reprints from the old black-letter copies) which contains the whole of Chaucer's works.

Various readings are recorded wherever they have any interest or value.

The requirements of METRE and GRAMMAR have been carefully considered throughout. Besides these, the PHONOLOGY and SPELLING of every word have received particular attention, the spelling being, in fact, a fair guide to the true old pronunciation. The present edition is therefore the first that adequately represents the author's words.

A COMPLETE COMMENTARY accompanies the whole, in which Chaucer's indebtedness to BOCCACCIO, STATIUS, OVID, BONTIUS, &c., is duly pointed out.

In the NOTES every difficulty has been considered.

The GLOSSARY is of exceptional fulness; and all necessary INDEXES are appended.

The VISION of WILLIAM concerning PIERS

the PLOWMAN. In three Parallel Texts; together with Richard the Redeless. By WILLIAM LANGLAND (about 1369-1390 A.D.). Edited from numerous Manuscripts, with Preface, Notes, and a Glossary, by W. W. SKEAT, Litt. D. 2 vols. 8vo. 11. 11s. 6d.

"Although Prof. Skeat's edition in its earlier shape was already the most admirable piece of work performed for the illustration of any early English writer, it is no exaggeration to assert that as now reconstructed its value is more than doubled. The notes, which occupy over three hundred pages, abound with evidences of wide and careful reading, and few of the difficulties of the poem are left unsolved."—Athenæum.

Immediately, New Section (EVERYBODY—EZOD), 8s.

NEW VOLUME (C), 2l. 12s. 6d.

A NEW ENGLISH DICTIONARY ON HISTORICAL PRINCIPLES.

Founded mainly on the Materials Collected by the Philological Society.

Edited by JAMES A. H. MURRAY, LL.D.

* * NOTICE.—The present position of the Work is as follows:—

Vol. I. A and B, and Vol. II. C. Edited by Dr. MURRAY. Imperial 4to, half-morocco, 2l. 12s. 6d. each. (Published.)

The Parts comprised in Vols. I. and II. are still sold separately.

Vol. III. D and E.

D. Edited by Dr. MURRAY. (In the press.) E—EVERY. 12s. 6d. (Published.)

B. Edited by HENRY BRADLEY, M.A. EVERYBODY—EZOD. 8s. (Immediately.)

Vol. IV. F, G, and H.

F. Edited by HENRY BRADLEY, M.A.

"The colossal nature of Dr. Murray's undertaking and monumental thoroughness of his work are attested by the fact that this (the second) volume of no less than 1,308 pages is devoted to the letter C alone, and that the space this letter requires will even be surpassed by the letter S. On the other hand, nine of the smaller letters, X, Z, Y, Q, K, J, N, U, and V, will only require the same amount of space."—Times.

* * Completion of the New Edition of Prof. Wallace's 'Logic of Hegel.'

Just published, Second Edition, Revised and Augmented, crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

PROLEGOMENA to the STUDY of HEGEL'S

PHILOSOPHY, and especially of his LOGIC. By WILLIAM WALLACE, M.A. LL.D., Fellow of Merton College, and Whyte's Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Oxford.

BY THE SAME EDITOR.

The LOGIC of HEGEL. Translated from the Encyclopedia of the Philosophical Sciences. Second Edition, Revised and Augmented, 10s. 6d.

Crown 8vo. with 3 Maps, 7s. 6d.

The best idea of the Matabele Question, and of the interests involved in it, will be found in

GEOGRAPHY of AFRICA SOUTH of the

ZAMBEZI. By the Rev. W. FARR GRESWELL, M.A., under the auspices of the Royal Colonial Institute, Author of 'A History of the Dominion of Canada' and 'Geography of the Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland.'

Just published, Vol. III. WEST AFRICA.

Crown 8vo. cloth, with Maps, 7s. 6d.

An HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY of the BRITISH

COLONIES. By G. P. LUCAS, B.A., of Balliol College, Oxford, and the Colonial Office, London.

Just published, crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. net.

ENGLISH-SWAHILI DICTIONARY. Compiled for the Use of the Universities' Mission to Central Africa. By A. C. MADAN, M.A., Student of Christ Church, Oxford, and Member of the Universities' Mission to Central Africa.

Just published, crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

An ENQUIRY concerning the HUMAN UNDER-

STANDING and an ENQUIRY concerning the PRINCIPLES of MORALS. By DAVID HUME. Reprinted from the Posthumous Edition of 1777, and Edited, with an Introduction, Comparative Tables of Contents, and an Analytical Index, by L. A. SELBY-SIGGE, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of University College.

BY THE SAME EDITOR.

HUME'S TREATISE of HUMAN NATURE.

Reprinted from the Original Edition in Three Volumes. 9s.

ALSO PUBLISHED BY HENRY FROWDE.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 1s. 6d. net.

YORKSHIRE FOLK TALK, with the Characteristics of those who Speak it in the North and East Ridings. By the Rev. M. C. F. MORRIS, B.O.L. M.A.

"A delightful book, which has afforded us much pleasure."—Whitby Gazette.

"A valuable contribution to the study of the philology and folk-lore of a district rich in the materials of both."—Times.

FULL CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE'S NEW BOOKS.

Just published, price 1s.

A REJOINDER to PROFESSOR WEISMANN. By HERBERT SPENCER.

Also recently published, price 1s.

The INADEQUACY of NATURAL SELECTION. By the SAME AUTHOR.

SECOND AND GREATLY ENLARGED EDITION.

AGAINST DOGMA and FREE-WILL, and for WEISMANNISM. By H. CROFT HILLER. Demy 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. Containing, inter alia, beyond the Original Text, a Concise Statement of Weismann's Theory, a Controversy on its Application to Sociology, and an Examination of the Recent Criticism of Professor Romanes.

"An ably reasoned contribution to the literature of thought."—Scotsman.

2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, price 15s.

MAN an ORGANIC COMMUNITY: being an Exposition of the Law that the Human Personality in all its Phases in Evolution, both Co-ordinate and Discordant, is the Multiple of many Subpersonalities. By JOHN H. KING, Author of 'The Supernatural: its Origin, Nature, and Evolution.'

"In his work on the Supernatural, Mr. King established for himself a claim to be regarded as a scholar and thinker of a very high rank, and the pages of the present volumes fully justify the unanimous praise which the most reputable authorities then meted out to him as a contributor to the best class of philosophical literature."—Liberty Review.

THEOLOGICAL TRANSLATION LIBRARY.

Vol. I. now ready.

The APOSTOLIC AGE. By Carl WEIZSACKER. Translated by the Rev. JAMES MILLAR. Vol. I. demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

*. The Second and Concluding Volume is in preparation.

Third and Concluding Volume now ready.

ORIGINAL NOTES on the BOOK of PROVERBS, mostly from Eastern Writings. By the Rev. S. C. MALAN, D.D., late Vicar of Broadwindsor, Dorset. Vol. III. Chaps. 21–31. Demy 8vo. cloth, 12s.

Vols. I. and II. may also be had, price 12s. each.

Crown 8vo. half vellum, paper sides, price 2s.

CENTENARY HISTORY of the SOUTH PLACE ETHICAL SOCIETY. By MONCURE D. CONWAY. With numerous Portraits, a Facsimile of the Original Autograph MS of the well-known Hymn, "Nearer my God to Thee," and Appendix containing an Original Poem by Mrs. ADAMS (1836), and an Address by WILLIAM JOHNSON FOX (1842).

"In this volume Mr. Moncure D. Conway tells, and tells most effectively, the story of one of the most remarkable religious societies in London or out of it."—Daily Chronicle.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 4s. 6d.

The LIFE of the Rev. RODOLPH SUFFIELD, Author of 'The Crown of Jesus.' With an Account of his Abandonment of the Roman Catholic Faith, and Extracts from his Correspondence, chiefly with Dr. Martineau.

"It would be difficult to exaggerate the fascination of the mystery and pathos of the life of such a man, of whom his friend Mr. Gladstone writes: 'He was to me a very interesting person.'"—Guardian.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 3s.

The HIPPOCLOTUS of EURIPIDES. Now first translated into English in its Original and Identical Metres, with Stage Directions suggesting how it may have been performed; also with Preface and Notes. By H. B. L., Author of a Translation of the 'Ion.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 12s.

ERMAN'S EGYPTIAN GRAMMAR. Translated under Professor ERMANN'S supervision. By J. H. BREASTED, Professor of Egyptology in the University of Chicago.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, 14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; and Edinburgh.

WALTER SCOTT'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK BY COUNT TOLSTOÏ.

NOW READY. crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

(AUTHORIZED TRANSLATION.)

THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN YOU;

Or, Christianity not as a Mystical Doctrine, but as a new Life Conception. With a Preface for this Edition by Count LEO TOLSTOÏ. Translated from the Original Russian MS. by A. DELANO.

"There has grown up in our midst a new movement which can only be called a Russian presentation of Christianity. Of this movement the greatest man of genius now living is the inspirer and guide."—Daily Chronicle.

"This extraordinary work."—Christian World.

OTHER WORKS BY COUNT TOLSTOÏ.

Crown 8vo. cloth cover, 3s. 6d. per vol.;

Half-polished morocco, gilt top, 6s.

A RUSSIAN PROPRIETOR, and other Stories.

THE COSSACKS. | MY RELIGION.

IVAN ILYITCH, and other Stories.

THE INVADERS, and other Stories.

LIFE. | MY CONFESSION.

CHILDHOOD, BOYHOOD, YOUTH.

THE PHYSIOLOGY of WAR.

ANNA KARENINA. With Illustrations. 3s. 6d.

WHAT TO DO?

WAR and PEACE. 4 vols.

THE LONG EXILE, and other Stories.

SEVASTOPOL.

THE KREUTZER SONATA, and FAMILY HAPPINESS.

Uniform with the above.

IMPRESSIONS OF RUSSIA.

By Dr. GEORG BRANDES.

Just ready, crown 8vo. half antique, paper boards, 3s. 6d.

THE THEATRICAL 'WORLD' FOR 1893.

By WILLIAM ARCHER.

"That the literary drama dealing with social problems made great advance during 1893 is universally admitted, but if more proof were wanted nothing could be more conclusive than Mr. Archer's series of thoughtful and pointed articles."—Daily Chronicle.

"A pleasure to the reader and a boon to the dramatic student."—Glasgow Herald.

"As a record of the year's doings in the theatre Mr. Archer's volume stands unrivalled."—Daily News.

SECOND EDITION, crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

MODERN PAINTING.
By GEORGE MOORE.

"Of the very few books on art that painters and critics should on no account leave unread this is surely one."—Studio.

"His book is one of the best books about pictures that have come into our hands for some years."—N. James's Gazette.

"A more original, a better-informed, a more suggestive, and, let us add, a more amusing work on the art of to-day, we have never read than this volume."—Glasgow Herald.
"Of his [Mr. Moore's] sincerity, of his courage, and of his candour there can be no doubt. One of the most interesting writers on art that we have."—Full Mall Gazette.

London: WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED,
24, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

HERBERT SPENCER.

APHORISMS from the WRITINGS of HERBERT SPENCER. Selected by JULIA RAYMOND GINGELL. With Portrait of Herbert Spencer. Crown 8vo. [Next week.]

Mrs. RAY S. LINEHAM.

The STREET of HUMAN HABITATIONS. By Mrs. RAY S. LINEHAM. Fully illustrated. Crown 8vo. [In a few days.]

FREDERICK BOYLE.

ABOUT ORCHIDS. A Chat. By FREDERICK BOYLE. With 8 Coloured Illustrations, reduced from the superb Drawings by Mr. Moon. Large crown 8vo. 8s.

"All orchid-lovers will feel bound to possess it, and read it for themselves. And, having perused it, they will want to have it within reach on the most accessible shelf of their garden-library."—Gardener's Chronicle.

"Mr. Boyle has done for orchids what Dean Hole did for roses. Mr. Boyle's fascinating book, thanks to the author's skillful style, is full of interest, and makes a book that no intelligent person will lay down till finished."—Academy.

The Hon. Mrs. GREVILLE-NUGENT.

A LAND of MOSQUES and MARABOUTS. By the Hon. Mrs. GREVILLE-NUGENT. Illustrated. Demy 8vo. 14s.

"The lady has a story to tell, and tells it brilliantly. Listening to her we seem to hear 'the tinkles of sequins and the hum of derboukas.' Her pages glow with colour, and reflect both the light and the shades of native life in Barbary."—Full Mall Gazette.

"Mrs. Greville-Nugent has a very agreeable pen, pointed with a very pretty wit. A brighter volume of its sort we have not seen for a long time. The unrestrained gaiety and zest of her pages will commend them to hundreds who do not care a sham sequin about ordinary books of travel."—Daily Chronicle.

PRINCE HENRI D'ORLÉANS.

AROUND TONKIN and SIAM.
By PRINCE HENRI D'ORLÉANS. Translated by C. B. PITMAN. With 28 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 14s.

"The book is valuable as containing many facts; it is interesting as conveying the impressions of an observer scarcely not disinterested, but fairly desirous to see things as they are. Its literary claims we very readily acknowledge."—World.

WILLIAM HARBUTT DAWSON.

GERMANY and the GERMANS: Social Life, Culture, Religious Life, &c. By WILLIAM HARBUTT DAWSON. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 26s.

"This excellent work—a literary monument of intelligent and conscientious labour."—Daily Telegraph.

FREDERICK BOYLE.

The PROPHET JOHN: a Romance. By FREDERICK BOYLE. Crown 8vo. 5s.

"The Prophet John, by Frederick Boyle, suits me! quoth the Baron, briefly. A capital sensational story in one natty, easily-handled, easily-read volume. Having once taken it up, having once put your hand to it, and your eyes on it, the Baron ventures to think that you will not part with it in a hurry."—Punch.

CANON KNOX LITTLE.

The WAIF from the WAVES. A Story of Three Lives, touching this World and Another. By Canon KNOX LITTLE. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NOVELS AND STORIES.

SECOND EDITION.

LIKE a SISTER. By MADELINE CRICHTON. In

3 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The PEOPLE says:—"We predict for her a prosperous career. She writes good English, and works out her plot with considerable skill."

THE NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'GOOD DAME FORTUNE.'

WHAT HAPPENED at MORWYN. By MARIA

A. HOYER. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"It is refreshing to take up so bright and wholesome a story as 'What Happened at Morwyn,' and one written in a style so fresh and natural. Its heroine realises as nearly as may be Wordsworth's famous description of woman as she should be.... Cordially recommending it to our readers."

NEW MILITARY NOVEL.

DEFERRED PAY; or, a Major's Dilemma. By

Lieut.-Colonel W. H. M'CAUSLAND. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The WHITEHALL REVIEW says:—"Will well repay perusal, and will be found of extreme interest to all Service readers."

THE NEW SOCIETY NOVEL.

FIRST LARGE EDITION EXHAUSTED, SECOND NOW READY.

UPPER BOHEMIANS: a Romance. By F. G.

WALPOLE, Author of 'Lord Floysham.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MORNING POST says:—"An entertaining book, by a clever man of the world. Bright sketches of men and things here and abroad. The author's pictures of Roman society are excellent."

FIRST EDITION SOLD, SECOND NOW READY.

WEST CLIFF: a Romance of Portland Isle.

By EASTON KING. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MANCHESTER EXAMINER says:—"It is an intensely interesting and very well-written book, which we can heartily recommend."

EDWIN ELLIOTT'S SUCCESSFUL NOVEL.

NETTA. By EDWIN ELLIOTT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The ACADEMY says:—"Mr. Elliott is to be welcomed.... A quite excellent story. Style.....so good.....Not only is the interest permanently sustained, but passages of dramatic vividness detain the reader."

THE SIXTH EDITION IS NOW READY.

DR. JANET of HARLEY STREET. By Dr.

ARABELLA KENNELLY, Author of 'Molly and her Man-o'-War.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'IN A MOMENT OF PASSION.'

BABETTE VIVIAN: a Novel. By CHRISTEL.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MANCHESTER EXAMINER says:—"A good plot and some pleasant characters.... It is certainly a good novel, likely to be enjoyed by all who read it."

"ZORG": a Story of British Guiana. By VERNON

KIRKE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

PUBLIC OPINION says:—"After starting to read 'Zorg' one will not put it down until the book is finished. The novel is a promising one. The character of Sarmia Gordon is cleverly drawn; indeed, all the characters are depicted in a natural and lifelike manner."

HER ANGEL FRIEND. By MONICA TREGARTHEN.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

[Just out.

MARIA, COUNTESS of SALETTO. From the Italian of R. ARBIR, by SYDNEY KING. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

[Just out.

An animated, interesting, and vivid picture of Modern Italian Society.

MARIANELA. From the Spanish of B. PEREZ

GALDOS. By MARY WHARTON, Translator of 'Lady Perfecta,' from the same Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MANCHESTER GUARDIAN says:—"Modern Spanish fiction is not well known to English readers, and there is a consequent freshness in 'Marianela.' Incidentally to the story questions of more than passing importance are discussed with originality and sympathy."

BJÖRNSON AND TURGENIEFF.

The BRIDAL MARCH. From the Norwegian of BJÖRNSON; and The WATCH. From the Russian of IVAN TURGENIEFF. Translated by JOHN EVAN WILLIAMS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The LITERARY WORLD says:—"The Bridal March, with its vivid descriptions, will be read with interest.... Charmingly told, the characters are skillfully drawn, and stand out in strong relief. 'The Watch' is replete with vigorous touches and wholly original. It exhibits the writer's peculiar gift of character drawing, supplemented by effective descriptive power."

The HERO of the "PELICAN": an Ocean

Drama. By PERCY DE LISLE. Crown 8vo. pictorial cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just out.

The GIRL MUSICIAN. By MIRIAM YOUNG.

With Full-Page Illustrations by Matthew Stretton. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The LIVERPOOL MERCURY says:—"This is a very pleasing story. The book is quite delightful."

The PURSUIT of a CHIMERA: being a Mid-winter's Day Dream. By C. ELVEY COPE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"Much of the drama is singularly dream-like, and the mingling of fancy and reality shows an excellent simulation of genuine dreaming.... The story is presented with considerable power."

The VENETIAN SECRET; or, the Art of the Past. By CHARLES LUTYENS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"His characters are agreeably drawn, and are neatly differentiated without any traces of exaggeration."

The OLD HOUSE of RAYNER, &c. By GRIMLEY

HILL. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"Eminently readable.... Written to entertain.... Fulfil their object very adequately."

CLENCHED ANTAGONISMS. By LEWIS IRAM.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"A powerful and ghastly narrative of the triumph of force over virtue."

VANITY FAIR says:—"Lewis Iram is original, unconventional, powerful, and interesting."

SOCIETY says:—"An exceedingly able and enthralling story."

DR. WEEDON'S WAIF. By KATE SOMERS.

Illustrated with Full-Page Drawings by MATTHEW STRETTON. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

VANITY FAIR says:—"One of the prettiest and most touching stories we have read for a long time."

BUT: a Domestic Sketch. By BACHELOR ABBOTS-

FORD. Illustrated throughout with numerous Drawings. Crown 8vo. picture cover, 1s.

The SCOTSMAN says:—"It draws its fun from the adventures of a bachelor among children. It is brightly written and illustrated."

The STRANGE ADVENTURES of a YOUNG

LADY of QUALITY, 1703. By DOROTHEA TOWNSHEND. Crown 8vo. paper cover, 1s.

The GUARDIAN says:—"The story is pleasantly written, the spirit and manners—wild and occasionally stately—of the time are well without being overdrawn, and the heroine is fresh and plucky."

NEW WORKS.

SIXTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE AS AN IRISH LANDLORD.

Memoirs of JOHN HAMILTON, D.L., of St. Kieran's, Donegal.

Edited, with Introduction, by Rev. H. O. WHITE, late Chaplain, Paris.

With Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The TIMES says:—"Much valuable light on the real history of Ireland and of the Irish agrarian question in the present century is thrown by a very interesting volume, entitled..... This very instructive volume."

THE STANDARD WORK ON AUTHORSHIP.

The AUTHOR'S MANUAL. By PERCY RUSSELL.

With Prefatory Remarks by Mr. GLADSTONE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. Sixth Edition With Portrait.

The WESTMINSTER REVIEW says:—"A very complete manual and guide for journalist and author.... It is not merely a practical work—it is literary and appreciative of literature in its best sense.... We have little else but praise for the volume."

NEW POETRY.

SOME TRANSLATIONS from CHARLES

BAUDELAIRE, POET and SYMBOLIST. By H. O. With Portrait. Fcap. 8vo. elegant parchment, 2s. 6d.

The TIMES says:—"Are executed with no little metrical skill and command of poetic diction."

BRUCE'S HEART, and other Poems. By

EDWARD TOOHEY WELLS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

[Just out.

DIGBY, LONG & CO., Publishers, 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Small crown 8vo. 4s. 6d. net.

TWO LIVES: a Poem. By Reginald FANSHAW. Printed at the Chiswick Press, with binding designed by Gleeson White.

"No reader of this small volume, whether he be perplexed or delighted, can lay it down without a feeling of profound respect for the writer; no critic can read it without seeing that Mr. Fanshawe, so far from being the 'idle singer of an idle lay,' has endeavoured, through a record of his own experience of suffering, to teach in song a lesson worthy of the poet."—Spectator.

"Two Lives: a Poem,' by Reginald Fanshawe, is a book which arrests attention.... One cannot read it without recognizing its genuine poetic quality. The whole is pervaded by a lofty spirit of tenderness and strength.... We shall look forward to another volume from the pen of this writer."—Scottish Leader.

"In conception, form, and expression this is an original poem.... Mr. Fanshawe owns no master in the poetic art, and, though simply acknowledging the fascination of Tennyson's muse, he claims, like Swift, that what he writes is all his own.... A singularly bold and stimulating poem."—Journal of Education.

NEW VOLUME OF THE "EX-LIBRIS" SERIES.

Imperial 16mo. Printed at the Chiswick Press.

ALBERT DURER'S LITTLE

PASSION. Printed from Stereotypes taken from the Original Woodblocks. With Introduction by AUSTIN DOBSON, and Photogravure Portrait of Dürer, 5s. net. Also 15 Copies on Large Paper, 15s. net.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

A TREATISE ON WINES: their

Origin, Nature, and Varieties, with Practical Directions for Viticulture and Vinification. By J. L. W. THUDICHUM, M.D. F.R.C.P. (Lond.). Illustrated.

"The book, popular and readable though it is, is written with a care, learning, and fulness such as one seldom meets with in books of this kind written in any other language than the German, and any one interested in the subject may be recommended to read the work, as certain to find in it much interesting and instructive matter on all matters of Wines."—Scotsman.

Part I. large post 4to. 6s. net.

CORPUS POETARUM LATINO-

RUM, a so aliisque deo recognoscitur et brevi lectionum variate instructionum, editit JOHANNES PHUOLVAL POSTGATE.

Since the publication of Walker's 'Corpus Poetarum Latinorum,' no second attempt has been made in this country to bring together within the compass of one book the works of the various Latin Poets. The work of which this is the First Part cannot, therefore, be regarded as either superfluous or premature. The aim of the Editor has been to obtain a thoroughly good text, together with such critical notes as seemed to be strictly necessary, from the most competent available authority on each author, so that the book might represent in as trustworthy a form as possible the textual scholarship of the present day. The Second Part is nearly complete and will appear shortly.

The Contents of Part I. are as follows:—

ENNIUS, by LUCIAN MULLER—LUCRITIUS, by the Editors, from the Text of H. A. J. MUNRO. CATULLUS, by the Editors—VIRGIL, by HENRY NETTLESHIP.—HORACE, by JAMES GOW.—TIBULLUS, by EDWARD HILLER.

"No one with any pretensions to classical scholarship can afford to be without it."—Educational Times.

* The whole will be completed in Four Parts, making Two Volumes.

Prospectus with Specimen Pages on application.

The ALDINE EDITION of the BRITISH POETS. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. net per Volume.

NEW VOLUMES.

HERRICK. Edited, with Memoir and Notes, by GEORGE SAINTSBURY. 2 vols. With Portrait.

BUTLER. Edited, with Memoir, by R. B. JOHNSTON. 2 vols. With Portrait.

WORDSWORTH'S POETICAL WORKS. Edited by Prof. DOWDEN. 7 vols. With Portrait.

Also a LARGE-PAPER EDITION. Crown 8vo. 75s. net per set.

BRITISH FUNGUS-FLORA. A

Classified Text-Book of Mycology. By GEORGE MABSON, Author of 'The Plant World.' With numerous Illustrations. 3 vols. post 8vo. 12s. 6d. each.

* A Supplementary Volume, completing the work, is in the press.

* A text-book of mycology worthy both of the importance of the subject and of the confidence of the student.

Westminster Review.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York-street, Covent-garden.

MR. MURRAY'S PUBLICATIONS. SEASON 1893-4.

BIOGRAPHY AND MEMOIRS.

MEMOIR of H.R.H. the LATE DUKE of CLARENCE. By J. E. VINCENT. Crown 8vo. 6s. (Second Edition.)

LIFE and CORRESPONDENCE of ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY, late Dean of Westminster. By ROLAND E. PROTHERO, M.A. 2 vols. 8vo. 32s. (Second Edition.)

LADY BURGHESHER'S LETTERS, 1813-14. Portraits. Crown 8vo. 6s. (Second Edition.)

CORRESPONDENCE of MR. JOSEPH JEKYLL with his SISTER-IN-LAW, LADY ONETRUDE SLOANE STANLEY. Edited, with a Brief Memoir, by the Hon. ALGERNON BOURKE. 8vo. 10s.

JENNY LIND the ARTIST. New and Abridged Edition, in 1 vol. Portraits. Crown 8vo. 9s.

A SKETCH of the LIFE of GEORGIANA LADY DE ROS. By her Daughter, the Hon. Mrs. J. R. SWINTON. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

TRAVELS AND ADVENTURE.

The PAMIRS. By the EARL OF DUMFRIES. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 24s. (Second Edition.)

ALONE with the HAIRY AINU. By A. H. SAVAGE LANDOR. Maps and Illustrations. Medium 8vo. 18s.

TYPEE. } By HERMAN MELVILLE. New Edition. With Illustrations and Memoir. OMOO. } Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each.

ST. JOHN'S WILD SPORTS and NATURAL HISTORY of the HIGHLANDS of SCOTLAND. New Edition. Medium 8vo. 12s.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE.

ANCIENT and MEDIAEVAL ARCHITECTURE. New Edition of 'Fergusson's Architecture.' By R. PHÉNÉ SPIERS, F.S.A. 2 vols. medium 8vo. 24s. 3s.

MORELLI'S ITALIAN PAINTERS. Vol. II. The Galleries of Munich and Dresden. With Plates. 8vo. 18s.

PERRY'S CHRONOLOGY of ARCHITECTURE. Date-Book of Mediaeval Architecture. By J. TAVENOR PERRY. Illustrations. Medium 8vo. 18s.

PLAYING CARDS of VARIOUS AGES and COUNTRIES. By Lady CHARLOTTE SCHREIBER. Vol. II. 24. 12s. 6d. net.

GENERAL LITERATURE.

The BURDENS of BELIEF; and other Poems. By the DUKE of ARGYLL. 6s.

LIFE in PARLIAMENT. By Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart., M.P., &c. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

STUDENT'S ROMAN EMPIRE. A New Work. By Prof. BURY. With Maps and Illustrations. 7s. 6d.

BARNCRAG. By GABRIEL SETOUN. Crown 8vo. 5s.

DU CHAILLU'S IVAR the VIKING. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A HISTORY of MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE DURING FIFTY YEARS. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

WORKS ON RELIGIOUS SUBJECTS.

An INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of the GREEK TESTAMENT. A Work designed for Students possessing no previous knowledge of Greek. By THEOPHILUS D. HALL, M.A. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The PSALTER of 1539. Comprising the Text, in Black-letter Type. Edited, with Notes, by JOHN EARLE, M.A. 8vo. 16s.

The CHRISTIAN ETHIC. By WILLIAM KNIGHT, LL.D. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The CONVERSION of INDIA. By GEORGE SMITH, C.I.E. LL.D. Large crown 8vo. 9s.

NEW HANDBOOKS.

HANDBOOK for NEW ZEALAND. An entirely New Work. Numerous Maps and Plans. Crown 8vo. 1s. 6d.

HANDBOOK for OXFORDSHIRE. A New and Revised Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

NEW UNIVERSITY EXTENSION MANUALS.

GEDDES' MODERN BOTANY. Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GREECE in the AGE of PERICLES. By A. J. GHANT. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The JACOBAN POETS. By EDMUND GOSSE. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

VILLAGE SERMONS: Preached at Whatley. By the late R. W.

CHURCH, D.C.L., sometime Dean of St. Paul's, Rector of Whatley, Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. Second Series. Crown 8vo. 4s.

FISHERS of MEN. Addressed to the Diocese of Canterbury

in his Third Visitation. By EDWARD WHITE, Archbishop. Crown 8vo. 6s.

OBSERVER.—"Exhibits in a very high degree a man of statesmanlike mind.....The whole volume is elevating and inspiring."

TIMES.—"With keen insight and sagacious counsel the Archbishop surveys the condition and prospects of the Church."

The INCARNATION and COMMON LIFE. By Brooke Foss

WESTCOTT, D.D. D.C.L., Bishop of Durham. Crown 8vo. 9s.

TIMES.—"A collection of sermons which possess, among other merits, the rare one of actuality, reflecting, as they frequently do, the Bishop's well-known and eager interest in social problems of the day."

SOCIAL EVOLUTION. By Benjamin Kidd. 8vo. 10s. net.

LADY WILLIAM. By Mrs. Oliphant. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

ATHENÆUM.—"For variety of character and equability of tone this is one of Mrs. Oliphant's best novels."

OBSERVER.—"It contains very delicate observation of human life and character."

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"Mrs. Oliphant's last book, 'Lady William,' is mainly a study of a charming woman, and in this respect is equal to, if not better than, anything she has written. It is pleasant reading from start to finish."

MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

MISS STUART'S LEGACY. By F. A. Steel. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SPECTATOR.—"It is remarkably clever; it is written in a style which has ease, dignity, grace, and quick responsiveness to the demands of the theme; it has passages of arresting power and fine rhetorical passion; and it displays a quick eye for character and a power of depicting it with both force and subtlety."

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"It throbs with the vigour of real creative power."

MEDIÆVAL RECORDS and SONNETS. By Aubrey de Vere.

Globe 8vo. 5s.

SPECTATOR.—"When he writes of chivalry, of saints, of miracles, it seems as if one of Glotio's frescoed figures, with its at once fresh and yet formal simplicity, had descended from the wall and was talking to us in its own person."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"No writer of our time has won more sincere and widespread respect than Mr. Aubrey de Vere."

EURIPIDES in ENGLISH VERSE. By Arthur S. Way, M.A.,

Author of 'The Iliad of Homer Done into English Verse,' and 'The Odyssey of Homer Done into English Verse.' ALCESTIS; HECUBA; MEDBA. Crown 8vo. sewed, 1s. 6d. each.

TIMES.—"His accomplished performances in Homeric translation should certainly procure a cordial reception for these scholarly renderings."

TALES of the CIVIL WAR from CÆSAR'S COMMENTARIES.

Adapted for the use of Beginners. With Vocabulary, Notes, and Exercises. By C. H. KENN, M.A. Folt 8vo. 1s. 6d.

The SATIRES of DRYDEN. Absalom and Achitophel, Parts I.

and II.; The MINDAL; and MACPHECKNOE. Edited, with Memoir, Introduction, and Notes, by J. CHURTON COLLINS. Globe 8vo. 1s. 9d.

LITERARY WORLD.—"A capital school edition."

EDUCATIONAL NEWS.—"He lavishes on these three poems quite a wealth of illustration, and brings out the points of each poem into strong relief by the information he affords."

PAIN, PLEASURE, and ÆSTHETICS: an Essay concerning the Psychology of Pain and Pleasure, with Special Reference to Æsthetics. By HENRY RUTHERS MARSHALL, M.A. 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

TIMES.—"Students of metaphysics will not fail to notice this important treatise."

The THEORY of HEAT. By Thomas Preston, M.A. (Dub.),

Fellow of the Royal University of Ireland, and Professor of Natural Philosophy, University College, Dublin. 8vo. 17s. net.

ECONOMIC GEOLOGY of the UNITED STATES. With Briefer

Mention of Foreign Mineral Products. By RALPH S. YARR, B.S. F.G.S.A., Assistant Professor of Geology at Cornell University. 8vo. 16s. net.

MATERIALS for the STUDY of VARIATION. Treated with Special Regard to Discontinuity in the Origin of Species. By WILLIAM HATESON, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 8vo. 21s. net.

DICTIONARY of POLITICAL ECONOMY. Edited by R. H.

INGLIS PALGRAVE, F.R.S. Sixth Part (completing Vol. I.). Medium 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

DICTIONARY of POLITICAL ECONOMY. Edited by R. H.

INGLIS PALGRAVE, F.R.S. Vol. I. A—H. Medium 8vo. 21s. net.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Every student will feel that the enterprise of Messrs. Macmillan is rendering a marked service to economics."

GUARDIAN.—"A most useful book of reference, wherein will be found information on nearly all points which a student of the subject will require."

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

Mrs. LYNN LINTON'S New Novel, The ONE TOO MANY, is now ready, in 3 vols., at every Library.

"Mrs. Linton is an inimitable literary artist.....'The One Too Many' is fully entitled to rank among the most powerful and remarkable novels of the day."—Daily Telegraph.

CHRISTIE MURRAY'S New Novel, IN DIREST PERIL, is now ready, in 3 vols., at all Libraries.

NEW LIBRARY NOVELS.

The TIGER LILY: a Tale of Two Passions. By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of 'The New Mistress,' &c. 2 vols.

"Mr. Manville Fenn is an accomplished story-teller, and he is admirable throughout this book. The narrative, strong as its subject, is always lightly handled; and the story will be read straight through by every one who takes it up."

Scotsman.

The COMMON ANCESTOR. By JOHN HILL, Author of 'Treason-Pelony,' &c. 3 vols.

"Not only is this delightful story distinguished by originality of plot—the rarest of modern novelist characteristics—but by an unflagging flow of light-hearted humour and sparkling wit.....'The Common Ancestor' may, without exaggeration, be signalled as a triumph of masterly contrivance."—Daily Telegraph.

NEW TWO-SHILLING BOOKS.

By WALTER BESANT.

'The IVORY GATE.'

By GILBERT GAUL.

A STRANGE MANUSCRIPT FOUND IN A COPPER CYLINDER. [Immediately.]

By HEADON HILL.

'ZAMBRA the DETECTIVE.'

[Feb. 22.]

By HENRY MURRAY.

'A SONG OF SIXPENNY.'

(Those marked * may also be had in cloth at 2s. 6d.)

MY DEAD SELF. By WILLIAM JAMMON.

Post 8vo. (Illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.)

"A pathetic story.....Any one who takes it up will read it to the end."—Cathartian.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

The QUEEN AGAINST OWEN. By ALLEN UPWARD. With a Frontispiece by J. S. Crompton.

The DAYS of his VANITY: a Passage in the Life of a Young Man. By SYDNEY GRUNDY.

"We have not read such an amusing book as this for a long time."—Black and White.

The LUCK of GERARD RIDGELEY: a Tale of the Zulu Border. By BERTHAM MITFORD.

With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"Possessing a thorough knowledge of the country of which he writes, Mr. Mitford is enabled to give a graphic account of events in his history, as well as a lifelike description of its people, based upon facts.....The story is of unflagging interest from start to finish."

Journal of Royal Colonial Institute.

The SCALLYWAG. By GRANT ALLEN.

Author of 'The Trials of Shem,' &c. A New Edition.

"The Scallywag" is an extremely amusing book."

Guardian.

"TO LET," &c. By B. M. CROKER. A New Edition.

"Well-told stories.....all interesting and brightly written."

World.

The CONSTABLE of ST. NICHOLAS.

By EDWIN LESTER ARNOLD, Author of 'Phra the Phœnician.' With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"The story is told with something approaching brilliancy.....To boys such a book as this will be a delight, and their elders may well read it with equal pleasure."—Scotsman.

A PROTÉGÉE of JACK HAMLIN'S, &c. By BERT HARTZ. With 25 Illustrations by William Small, A. S. Boyd, Stanley Wood, W. J. Metcalf, &c.

[Shortly.]

A FAIR COLONIST. By ERNEST GLANVILLE. Author of 'The Lost Heiress,' &c. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"Well written, full of incident and variety.....The incidents thrillingly told."—Westminster Gazette.

TWO OFFENDERS. By OUIDA, Author of 'Under Two Flags,' &c. Small 4to. cloth extra, 6s.

"The second story, 'An Assassin,' is one of the most powerful things Ouida has ever done, and worthy almost of the Master (Maupassant) to whom she dedicates it.....A story which has held us spellbound to the end."

Black and White.

A NOTE on CHARLOTTE BRONTE.

By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

GASPARD DE COLIGNY. By WALTER BESANT. With a Portrait. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NEW WORKS.

FREDERIC HILL: an Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform. Being the Recollections of a Retired Civil Servant. By his Daughter, CONSTANCE HILL. 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 16s.

"A charming book, most interesting and most readable." Aberdeen Free Press.

"A most entertaining book, teeming with anecdotes and reminiscences of notabilities, and also of incidents that carry us back to days which now seem far distant." Manchester Examiner.

"A volume which in interest reads almost like a romance, and by those who take any interest in social reform it will be read with special profit and avidity. It has been admirably edited by Miss Hill." Dundee Courier.

"Unexpended but welcome light on the political and social movements of the century, together with much pleasant gossip of a personal kind, is to be found in these pages." Leeds Mercury.

Just ready.

WOMEN of LETTERS, including Memoirs of Lady Morgan, the Misses Barry, Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, Lady Ann Barnard, Sarah, Countess Cowper, Mrs. Ogle, and Lady Duff Gordon. By GERTRUDE TOWNSEND MAYER. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

The CONVERSATIONS of JAS. NORTHGOTE, B.A. Recalled by WILLIAM HAZLITT. A New Edition. Edited, with an Essay on Hazlitt and a Note on Northgote, by EDMUND GOSSE. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Will be welcomed by a considerable section of the public—not only by those who are interested in matters of pictorial art, but by all who are attracted to bright and lively gossip of the miscellaneous sort. The Conversations are eminently readable." Globe.

The PRIVATE LIFE of NAPOLEON. From the French of ARTHUR LEVY, by STEPHEN LOUIS SIMON. Translator of 'The Youth of Frederick the Great,' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 25s.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

Now ready.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE SIN OF JOOST AVELINGH.' THE GREATER GLORY.

By MAARTEN MAARTENS.

Author of 'An Old Maid's Love,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"No review can do justice to the many deep and delicate studies in this careful, brilliant, and picturesque book." Daily Chronicle.

"A most ingenious and clever novel, full of good things." Daily Telegraph.

"A book which has a charm of style quite its own, and has enriched the world of fiction with new characters, destined to more than passing fame." Observer.

"A serious and striking production." Spectator.

Now ready.

The ROMANCE of SHERE MOBE. By PERCY HURLBURD. Author of 'In Black and White,' 3 vols. crown 8vo.

THE SECOND EDITION OF

DIANA TEMPEST. By MARY CHOLMONDELEY. Author of 'The Danvers Jewels,' 'Sir Charles Danvers,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

Now ready.

SPEEDWELL. By Lady GUENDOLEN RAMSDEN. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"This graceful and pathetic book will please all readers. The story of woman's love and man's inconstancy is sweetly and freshly told." Full Mail Gazette.

Now ready.

The VICAR of LANGTHWAITE. By LILY WATSON. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"This pretty story is a plea for tolerance and charity among the 'clashing of the creeds.' There is much that is touching in the book, much simple pathos, and bits of quaint humour." Full Mail Gazette.

Now ready.

BRITOMART. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN. Author of 'Bonnie Lesley,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A noble novel.....As charming as it is good." World.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.

New ready, 60s. Edition 1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 21s. 6d. bound gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE and BARONETAGE for 1894. Corrected by the NOBILITY

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORBY JAFFRESON.

Now ready, in 2 vols. crown 8vo. 71s.

A BOOK of RECOLLECTIONS. By

JOHN CORBY JAFFRESON, Author of 'A Book about Lawyers,'

'A Book about Doctors,' &c.

"The book is readable enough, and full of pleasant gossip about men of letters and other celebrities, great and small, whom Mr. Jaffreson has known." Times.

NEW NOVELS.

HETTY'S HERITAGE. By Noel

HENK, Author of 'The Aftermath,' 2 vols.

The WHITE AIGRETTE. By Vin

VINCENT, Author of 'Cathedral Halls,' 'Wrong on Both Sides,' &c. 3 vols.

The PRICE of a PEARL. By Eleanor

HOLMES, Author of 'Through Another Man's Eyes,' &c. 3 vols.

"The story is very pleasantly told, for the authoress has the knack of presenting even the most trivial details of her scheme in language that is always refined and telling." Daily Telegraph.

GOOD DAME FORTUNE. By Maria

A HOYER, 3 vols.

"No one who desires to read a novel solely with the hope of being interested can fail to enjoy this book, and it is an excellent specimen of a kind of novel always in demand." Manchester Examiner.

BROKEN FORTUNES. By Henry

CHENWELL, Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wild

Woman,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Chenwell's pages are interwoven in the strongest of tangles by a series of subtle contrivances, the cleavage of which never oversteps the limits of probability. Broken Fortunes is entitled to a place of honour among the ablest fictional works of the year." Daily Telegraph.

IN AN ALPINE VALLEY. By G.

MANVILLE FENN, Author of 'Mahome Noone,' 'The Master of the Circumstances,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Fenn knows how to amuse, and he carries his readers along with him to his triumphant finish." Athenaeum.

AT SOCIETY'S EXPENSE. By

ALGERNON GISING, Author of 'A Moorland Idyl,' 'A Village

Hampton,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Gising is a clever writer, and his new story is smart, original, and pleasant." Illustrated.

SECOND EDITION OF

TO RIGHT the WRONG. By Edna

LYALL, Author of 'Donovan,' 'We Two,' &c. 3 vols.

NEW ADDITION TO HURST & BLACKETT'S
THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SIR ANTHONY. By Adeline Ser-

GEANT, Author of 'Casper Brooker's Daughter,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DONOVAN: A Modern Englishman.

WE TWO.

IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.

KNIGHT ERRANT.

WON BY WAITING.

A HARDY WORKMAN.

A SELECTION FROM

HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

Each in a SINGLE VOLUME, PRICE 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.'

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLE-CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.

MAN. A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS.

A LIFE for a LIFE.

NOTHING NEW.

MISTRESS and MAID.

THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK.'

NATURE and HUMAN NATURE.

WISDOM and MODERN INSTANCES.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

DAVID ELGINBROD.

ROBERT FALCONER.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

ADAM GRAEME.

LADY of NORLAW.

AGNES.

IT WAS A LOVER and HIS LASS.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

NEW VOLUME OF BISHOP CREIGHTON'S
'HISTORY OF THE PAPACY.'

HISTORY of the PAPACY during the REFORMATION. By MANDELL CREIGHTON, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Peterborough. Vol. V. (1617-1627). THE GERMAN REVOLTS. 8vo. 16s.

6 Vols. I. and II. 137s-146s, 32s. Vols. III. and IV. 146s-151s, 24s.

NEW NOVEL BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

A GENTLEMAN of FRANCE;

being the Memoirs of GASCON DE BONNE, Sieur de Marac. By STANLEY J. WEYMAN, Author of 'The House of the Wolf.' NEW and CHEAPER EDITION, with Frontispiece and Vignette by H. J. Ford. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"This is, in fact, quite the best historical romance that has appeared for some years. It is full of sensation, and the adventures hang very naturally upon the hero. Never since D'Artagnan was there a better swordsman." Full Mail Gazette.

NEW BOOK BY CANON HOLLAND.

GOD'S CITY and the COMING of the KINGDOM. By the Rev. HENRY SCOTT HOLLAND, M.A., Canon and Precentor of St. Paul's. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The ALCHEMICAL ESSENCE

and the CHEMICAL ELEMENT: an Epistle in the Quest of the Unchanging. By M. M. PATTISON MUIR, Fellow of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. 8vo. 4s. 6d. [In a few days.]

HISTORY of ENGLAND under

HENRY IV. By JAMES HAMILTON WYLIE, M.A., one of H.M. Inspectors of Schools. 3 vols. crown 8vo. Vol. I. 10s. 6d.; Vol. II. 10s. 6d.; Vol. III. (in the press).

AUSTRALIA AS IT IS; or, Facts

and Features, Sketches and Incidents of Australian and Australian Life With Notices of New Zealand. By a CLERGYMAN, Thirteen Years Resident in the Interior of New South Wales. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

PICTURES in PROSE of NATURE, WILD SPORT, and HUMBLE LIFE. By AUBYN TREVOR BATTIE, B.A., Crown 8vo. 6s.

Contents.—With Carl of the Hill—Three Fish—Memories—A Child of the People—Canvey Island—In the Land of the Great Spirit—In Norfolk by the Sea—The Witch in Kent—Oxford—The Upper River—Upon a Day—The Procession of Spring—Vesper.

The ONE GOOD GUEST: a

Story By L. B. WALFORD. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"A story so full of the best human nature that it is vastly pleasant to read, and equally grateful to remember." Naturalist Observer.

WHAT NECESSITY KNOWS.

By L. DOUGALL, Author of 'Beggars All,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"None of the most thoughtful and impressive novels of the season. It is a book which grows upon the reader. Its descriptive passages, its curious glimpses of out-of-the-way life, its quiet but vigorous handling of character, all make it a story of no common order." Fortnightly Post.

EPOCHS of INDIAN HISTORY.

NEW VOLUME.

Edited by JOHN ADAM, M.A., Principal of Pachalappa's College, and Fellow of the University, Madras.

The MUHAMMADANS; or, the History of Hindustan (including Bengal) to the time of Warren Hastings and the Regulating Act (1774). By J. D. REES, C.I.E., of the Madras Civil Service. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

THE SILVER LIBRARY.

NEW VOLUMES.

CARTHAGE and the CARTHAGINIANS.

By R. BOSWORTH SMITH, M.A., Assistant Master in Harrow School. With Maps, Plans, &c. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The TOILERS of the FIELD. By RICHARD

JEFFERIES. With Portrait from the Bust in Salisbury Cathedral. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The ORBS AROUND US: Essays on the

Moon and Planets, Meteors and Comets, the Sun and Coloured Pairs of Stars. By H. A. PROCTOR. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The EXPANSE of HEAVEN: Essays on the Wonders of the Firmament. By H. A. PROCTOR. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
New York: 15, East 16th Street.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1894.

CONTENTS.

ALLINGHAM'S PROSE ESSAYS	203
A SERGEANT'S REMINISCENCES OF THE INDIAN MUTINY	203
THE AMERICAN CHURCH FROM 1800 TO 1833	205
THE LOVE SONGS OF CONSAUGHT	205
THEOBALD ROGERS ON THE INDUSTRIAL HISTORY OF ENGLAND	205
NEW NOVELS (My Child and I; The White Algette; The Vicar of Langthwaite; Hooks of Steel; A Yellow Aster; Speedwell; Catharine Purze; A Romance of Stye)	204-209
BOOKS OF TRAVEL	209
BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG	211
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	211-212
YORKSHIRE SCHOOLS; JONAS BAYN AND BARTHOLOMEW ANGLICUS, THE PHILADELPHIA REPRINT OF THE 'LYRICAL BALLADS: THE BATTLE OF HASTINGS; M. MAXIME DU CAMP	212-214
LITERARY Gossip	214
SCIENCE—SCHOOL-BOOKS; ASTRONOMICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; Gossip	215-217
FIRE ARTS—THE ROYAL ACADEMY; NOTES FROM NUBIA; NOTES FROM ITALY; SALES; Gossip	217-220
MUSIC—THE WEEK; HERR HANS VON BULOW; Gossip; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	220-221
DRAMA—Gossip	222

LITERATURE

Varieties in Prose. By William Allingham. 3 vols. (Longmans & Co.)

THIS collected edition of Mr. Allingham's prose writings contains two volumes of 'Rambles by Patricius Walker,' and one volume of 'Irish Sketches' and 'Essays.' In verse Mr. Allingham had always an agreeable talent, sometimes a distinct charm; and there is a certain pleasantness about his prose, the pleasantness of an amiable and artistic person who writes with ease. It is not remarkable or distinguished, but it is intelligent and mildly entertaining. The 'Rambles' are discursive papers dealing with well-known places and their associations—Llangollen, for instance, Clovelly, and Liverpool—and they are nearly as instructive as a guide-book, and much more readable. Not at all seductive if one attempts to read them through, they are quite nice to take up and turn over, reading a sentence here, a page there, perhaps half a chapter somewhere else. There is nothing to impress one very much; it is all quite superficial, this gossip about places and people; and the writing is all a little faded, belonging to a manner which is now the fashion of a bygone season. One feels, too, a certain finikin lightness of touch, a little too conscious; a sprightliness which seems the result of an effort, and which it requires something of an effort to appreciate. Dealing largely with exteriorities, and endeavouring to give their true value to the slight things which alone are of very much importance in these matters, it fails somehow to be quite vivid and inspiring; it mentions impressions, does not flash them; is never quite certain whether to treat its facts as facts or as symbols; and brings out, finally, but a blurred image of what it would fain convey, by way of picture or vision, to the reader. At its best it can be as detailed as this, which is on Liverpool:—

"The streets abound in barefooted, ragged children, wrinkled beladames with dudeens, stout wonches, loosely girt as Nora Croena, balancing baskets on their heads; unshaven men in every variety of old hat lounge at corners; and if you venture into one of those byways which lead out of the best business streets, the foul gutters, the flung-out refuse under foot, the dangling clothes hung aloft to smoke-dry, the grimy houses, their broken panes stuffed with rags, the swarm of half-naked babes of dirt and poverty about the open doors, here suckled, here scolded by their intensely slatternly mother, the universal squalor mixed with an indescribable devil-may-careishness, and the strong flavour of brogue that pervades the air, will all remind you forcibly (if you have ever been there) of that famous 'Liberty' which surrounds the cathedral of St. Patrick..... Mostly in the filthy heart of Liverpool itself, the squalid byways and pestiferous alleys, dwell the dock labourers, carters, stovedores, all the grim hard-handed men, white with flour, black with coals, yellow with guano, fluffy with cotton, dusty with maize, who are hoisting and lowering, heaving and shovelling, dragging and hauling, carrying and trundling great bales, boxes, bags, barrels, weights of iron, bars and pigs of lead, mountains of coal, mountains of corn, amid creaking of windlasses, rattling of chain-cables, roll of heavy wheels, trampling of great slow horses, and busy turmoil of a throng of grim human creatures like themselves, in that endless range of waterside sheds, with endless range of tall stores looking down across the long narrow streets full of mud and noise, and over the prison-like line of the dock-wall."

This is certainly a good piece of description; but after all, laborious as it is, it does not absolutely bring before you the colour and aspect of the scene, as a real artist in words would have done with two much shorter sentences. Among the general essays there are some, dealing with characteristically Irish subjects—'St. Patrick's Day,' 'St. Patrick's Purgatory'—which are full of industriously collected facts, not unattractively put together. And in a particular essay on George Petrie, which is one of the best in these volumes, there is one passage which is quite admirable, so discriminating is it in treatment, so delicate in style:—

"His speech on all topics was (like his handwriting) deliberate and careful, sometimes elaborately so; he prologued, parenthesised, guarded against misconception, modified, returned; yet he never strayed, and if you gave him his own time you got his chief intention fully conveyed, and usually several interesting things into the bargain. His voice was soft and melodious, not strong, and touched with a pleasant brogue. Hurry was foreign to his temperament; he observed, and reflected, and mused upon his favourite subjects with an affectionate persistence. A picture of his, if it remained with him, he hardly ever thought quite finished. His happiness was perfect in poring interminably over his ancient ruins, and relics and records. His books took a long time to write; his music a long time to arrange and revise. The work he did was always labour of love, and he lingered over it, with a pace further slackened by delicate health. When done, it was as well done as he possibly could do it; and of how many workers, in any department, can this be said, in these days of high-pressure, and of belief that—

The real value of a thing
Is just as much as it will bring."

Among the remaining essays, 'Painter and Critic'—a discussion of subject in painting, in special relation to the pictures of Mr. Albert Moore—is, though far too long drawn out, full of interest, and takes a middle stand between the attitude of the painter pure and simple, to whom line and colour are enough in themselves, and the ordinary Philistine, who wants his 'Derby Day' before he can see that he has a picture in front of him. A lecture on 'Poetry' attempts what is both impossible and unnecessary; but, as with George Petrie, we get "several interesting things into the bargain." The long disquisition on Byron, with its out-of-date polemics and its bourgeois lamentations—"Dismal and unhappy retrospect! An unhappy character—a most miserable career!"—has only a sort of historic interest, marking a date, so to speak, in the emancipation of the species. It should be remembered for one astonishing sentence, in which we are told that Byron's example is not an example to be followed in any particular, because "he neglected his inherited duties as Englishman, as landed proprietor, and as peer of the realm." Yet the Byron essay is sane and moderate, after a fashion, compared with the essay on Baudelaire. "The peevish Frenchman," "sighs and groans of prurient ennui, extremely unprofitable to mankind in general"—that is all that Mr. Allingham saw in the 'Fleurs du Mal' and the 'Petits Poèmes en Prose.' Such short-sightedness is curious, and may be looked upon charitably, as merely amusing; of a piece with the prudishness which crops up again and again throughout these volumes, reaching its finest point, perhaps, in the despairing cry: "And now our girls are learning Latin!"

Reminiscences of the Great Mutiny, 1857-59.
By William Forbes-Mitchell. (Macmillan & Co.)

A WHOLE literature, as we have often remarked, has grown up on the subject of the Indian Mutiny, and any new book on that well-worn theme must be of special merit to deserve and receive attention. However, the volume before us does possess special merit, for it contains the account of what a well-educated non-commissioned officer of a distinguished regiment saw of the struggle. The best way to review it is to pick out a few noticeable incidents on which he throws more or less light.

On the 27th of October, 1857, the company of the 93rd to which Sergeant—then Corporal—Forbes-Mitchell belonged reached Cawnpore. After a short rest officers and men proceeded to visit the scenes of the recent tragical events. Coming first to General Wheeler's entrenchment, our author ascertained that the parapots "at the highest places did not exceed four feet, and were so thin that at the top they could never have been bullet-proof!" After cross-examining his guide—a camp follower who could speak intelligibly barrack-room English, and asserted that he had been in the entrenchment with Sir Hugh Wheeler—the corporal arrived at the conclusion "that most of the European women had been most barbarously murdered, but not dishonoured, with the exception of a few of the young and good-looking ones, who, our guide stated, were forcibly carried off to become Mahomedans." Nothing, he says, that he saw or heard during thirty-five years' subsequent residence in India has led him to alter this opinion. With regard to the house in which the women and children were murdered, he asserts most positively that "at this time there was no writing either in pencil or charcoal on the walls of the slaughter-house. I am positive on this point, because I looked for any writing. There was writing on the walls of the barracks inside General Wheeler's entrenchment, but not on the walls of the slaughter-house."

The sensational writings afterwards discovered must therefore have been the work of visitors, and not of the victims.

After the Secunderbagh had been captured, the troops were parched with thirst. In the centre of the inner court there was a large tree with a bushy top. At the foot of this tree were a number of jars full of cold water, to which man after man had recourse; but the large number of corpses lying at the foot of the tree attracted a British captain's attention, and he noticed that every man had been shot from above. He therefore stepped back, and calling to a man named Wallace, a rather mysterious character and well educated, asked him if he could see any one in the top of the tree. Wallace, carefully looking, called out:—

"I see him, sir!" and cocking his rifle he repeated aloud,

I'll pay my vows now to the Lord
Before His people all.

He fired, and down fell a body dressed in a tight-fitting red jacket and tight-fitting rose-coloured silk trousers; and the breast of the jacket bursting open with the fall, showed that the wearer was a woman. She was armed with a pair of heavy old-pattern cavalry pistols, one of which was in her belt still loaded, and her pouch was still about half full of ammunition, while from her perch in the tree, which had been carefully prepared before the attack, she had killed more than half a dozen men. When Wallace saw that the person whom he shot was a woman, he burst into tears, exclaiming: "If I had known it was a woman, I would rather have died a thousand deaths than have harmed her."

After the capture of the Secunderbagh, the Shah Nujeeb had to be carried, and the 93rd, having been so hotly engaged, were only employed in dragging up Peel's guns and trying to silence the fire of the garrison; but the battalion of detachments failing to carry the place, Sir Colin addressed his favourite regiment, saying that "he had not intended to call on us to storm more positions that day, but that the building in our front must be carried before dark, and the Ninety-Third must do it, and he would lead us himself, saying again: 'Remember, men, the lives at stake inside the Residency are those of women and children, and they must be rescued.' A reply burst from the ranks: 'Ay, ay, Sir Colin! we stood by you at Balaklava, and will stand by you here; but you must not expose yourself so much as you are doing. We can be replaced, but you can't. You must remain behind; we can lead ourselves.'"

Without questioning for a moment the good faith of Mr. Forbes-Mitchell, we must say that the above extract needs explanation. No one will for a moment believe that the entire regiment, or any large portion of it, called out the above words consecutively. What, no doubt, did happen was that some one man spoke a portion while other men contributed further instalments, their comrades uttering shouts of assent. It may be remarked that on this occasion Sir Colin did expose himself very freely, and—it is not generally known—was wounded by a bullet which had previously passed through the head of a private of the 93rd.

There has been much dispute as to who at the storming of the Secunderbagh got through the hole in the wall that did duty for a breach. Mr. Forbes-Mitchell in one place says that the first in was Lance-Corporal Donnelly of the 93rd, killed inside; then Subadar Gokul Singh, of the 4th Punjab; then Sergeant-Major Murray, 93rd, who was killed; and fourth, Capt. Burroughs, who subsequently was severely wounded. In another place he says that Lance-Corporal Dunley, 93rd, was first, Sergeant-Major Murray second, Gokul Singh third, and Capt. Burroughs either fourth or fifth. "He was certainly the first officer of the regiment inside." The writer of this notice can testify that Capt. (now Lieut.-General) Burroughs claimed to be the first in. An eye-witness has declared that Burroughs stood exposed on the top of the bank, ready for a good start when the order to advance was given. He displayed throughout the campaign singular gallantry, showed great prowess with his sword, and was twice wounded. As Mr. Forbes-Mitchell says, his company were proud of their captain for "his pluck and good heart."

The 93rd felt a great enthusiasm about Hodson, of Hodson's Horse, and Mr. Forbes-Mitchell speaks in terms of high admiration of him. One anecdote, as the author says, certainly does not support the charges made against him by armchair censors. When the 93rd were sent from Futtehghur to Palamhow, a place which had been a hotbed of rebellion, the Civil Commissioner was doing justice on some of the rebels. Hodson had come up to see his squadron:—

"Just at the time of his visit the commissioner wanted a hangman, and asked if any man of the Ninety-Third would volunteer for the job, stating as an inducement that all valuables in the way of rings or money found on the persons of the condemned would become the property of the executioner. No one volunteering for the job, the commissioner asked Jack Brian, a big tall fellow who was the right-hand man of the company, if he would act as executioner. Jack Brian turned round with a look of disgust, saying: 'Wha do ye tak' us for? We of the Ninety-Third enlisted to fight men with arms in their hands. I widna' become yer hangman for all the loot in India!' Capt. Hodson was standing close by, and hearing the answer, said, 'Well answered, my brave fellow. I wish to shake hands with you,' which he did. Then turning to Capt. Dawson, Hodson said: 'I'm sick of work of this kind. I'm glad I'm not on duty'; and he mounted his horse, and rode off."

At the capture of the Begum Kothee on the occasion of the storming of Lucknow, Corporal Forbes-Mitchell was with a party under Lieut. Sergison breaking in the door of a detached building:—

"Mr. Sergison was shot dead at my side with several men. When we had partly broken in the door, I saw that there was a large number of the enemy inside the room, well armed with swords and spears, in addition to firearms of all sorts, and, not wishing to be either killed myself or have more of the men who were with me killed, I divided my party, placing some at each side of the door to shoot every man who showed himself, or attempted to rush out. I then sent two men back to the breach, where I knew Col. Napier with his engineers were to be found, to get a few bags of gunpowder with slow-matches fixed, to light and pitch into the room. Instead of finding Napier, the two men sent by me found the redoubtable Major Hodson, who had accompanied Napier as a volunteer in the storming of the palace. Hodson did not wait for the powder-bags, but, after showing the men where to go for them, came running up himself, sabre in hand. 'Where are the rebels?' he said. I pointed to the door of the room, and Hodson, shouting 'Come on!' was about to rush in. I implored him not to do so, saying, 'It's certain death; wait for the powder; I have sent men for powder-bags.' Hodson made a step forward, and I put out my hand to seize him by the shoulder to pull him out of the line of the doorway, when he fell back shot through the chest. It will thus be seen that the assertion that Major Hodson was looting when he was killed is untrue. No looting had been commenced, not even by Jung Bahadoor's Goorkhas. That Major Hodson was killed through his own rashness cannot be denied; but for any one to say that he was looting is a cruel slander on one of the bravest of Englishmen."

We hope that this charge against Hodson, often contradicted, yet as often repeated, will after the above testimony be finally abandoned.

More than one person has asserted that Europeans fought in the ranks of the rebels. Mr. Forbes-Mitchell brings some more evidence to bear on the subject. He was the non-commissioned officer of a party of the 93rd sent to protect an Engineer officer employed to make a reconnaissance and sketch of one of the gates of the fort of Ruhiya. They crept up undiscovered while the attempt to storm—in which Brigadier Hope lost his life—was being made close by:—

"During this time we were so close to the fort that we could hear the enemy talking inside; and the man who was on the tree could be seen and heard by us quite plainly, calling to the stormers on the other face in unmistakable barrack-room English: 'Come on, you — Highlanders! Come on, Scotty! You have a harder nut to crack than eating oatmeal porridge. If you can come through these bamboos we'll warm your — for you, if you come in here!' etc., etc. In short, the person talking showed such a command of English slang and barrack-room abuse that it was clear he was no native. Every one of my party was convinced that the speaker was a European."

The sergeant had almost forgotten the above circumstance when, many years afterwards having taken a native into his service, he eventually ascertained that the man was an ex-Sepoy, and succeeded in gaining his confidence. This man admitted that he had been one of the mutineers, and had fought against us throughout the war. He said that he had heard of several Europeans having served in the ranks of the rebels, but had only personally known two of them. One of these was killed at Budleekee Serai, evidently the man mentioned by an anonymous writer in 'A History of the Siege of Delhi by an Officer who Served There,' published in 1861 by Messrs. A. & C. Black; the other was most probably the man who hurled abuse at the stormers of Ruhiya. This fellow came to Delhi with the Bareilly brigade, and the king made him second in command of the army. Mr. Forbes-Mitchell's informant had forgotten the scoundrel's name, but knew that before the Mutiny he had been a sergeant-major in one of the native corps at Bareilly, and that he had formerly been in the Company's artillery. Mr. Forbes-Mitchell conjectures that this European was the sergeant-major who was lost sight of on the occasion of the rising at Bareilly. It will be remembered that Adjutant Tucker galloped off to the lines to try to save the life of the sergeant-major who had remained there. The adjutant was killed in his gallant effort, and the author's informant—the ex-Sepoy—asserted that the renegade of whom he spoke had on that occasion killed an adjutant.

We could multiply largely the number of interesting extracts from this attractive book, but we have given enough to show that the sergeant's volume is worthy of the reputation of the old 93rd.

The English Church in the Nineteenth Century (1800-1833). By John H. Overton, D.D., Canon of Lincoln and Rector of Epworth. (Longmans & Co.)

The history of the Church from 1800 to 1833 needed to be written, in order to correct the common supposition that it was an inanimate corpse which Newman and his followers galvanized into life. In every part of England there were men who were labouring, whether as High Churchmen, Evangelicals, or Liberals, with an ardour, energy, and devotion that needed no stimulus from the Tractarian movement. This fact, though often ignored, is brought into prominence by the work before us.

To students of Church history Canon Overton needs no introduction. His present volume is the natural continuation of the larger work on which he was engaged in collaboration with Mr. Abbey. No man who loved the Church sufficiently to become its faithful historian during the somewhat dreary years of the eighteenth century was likely to stop at the arbitrary date of 1800, especially when, at that very moment, brighter prospects seemed to be dawning for the Establishment. Canon Overton brings to bear upon this portion of his history the same characteristics which gave a real value to his earlier work. There is the same simple, lucid, unpretentious style. There are also the same fairness which sees the best sides in rival parties, the same industry which accumulates a mass of material, the same power of selection and clear arrangement which presents the whole in a compact shape. These are the gifts which he commands. The book is not brilliant; but it is trustworthy, learned, and impartial. For the traveller who journeys through ecclesiastical or any other history the coach-wheel is a more trustworthy means of safe arrival than the St. Catherine's wheel.

The first thirty years of the nineteenth century naturally divide into two almost equal parts with the close of the Napoleonic wars. In the first half of the period the national mind was absorbed in the great European struggle; in the second, it was adapting itself, as best it could, to the new conditions of society which peace brought with it. The effect of the war upon the position of the Church was remarkable. "A curious double phenomenon," says Canon Overton,

"may be observed all through our period, viz. a steadily growing improvement in every department, side by side with a steadily growing odium against the Church, which reached its climax in the events connected with the Reform Bill."

No doubt the Church gained in popularity by the hostility of Englishmen towards revolutionary France. And this in two ways. The Church was, in the first place, the emblem of stability:—

"This feeling towards France affected the attitude of Englishmen towards their own Church in more ways than one. It undoubtedly increased their attachment to that Church simply because she was a type of all settled institutions; and settled institutions were at all hazards to be upheld when the unsettlement of them in France was giving so fearful a warning."

And, secondly, the Church put itself at the head of the warlike movement which engrossed the nation:—

"The clergy shared to the full the excitement which was everywhere prevalent. Their pulpits were always ready to stimulate their countrymen to patriotic endeavour, to celebrate a victory, or to pronounce the funeral eulogium upon a hero. A hit at Tom Paine, a side glance at Voltaire and Rousseau, a denunciation of Bonaparte was [sic] only what was expected; and bishops and archdeacons in their Charges, as well as clergy in their pulpits, were quite ready to meet the demand."

At the same time, warned by the evidence which popular disturbances afforded of the little hold that the clergy possessed upon the masses, the Church was stimulated to increased activity. But here its efforts were hampered by want of means, and no adequate resources were available to meet the increased demand, which it was anxious to supply, for spiritual succour. Canon Overton produces abundant evidence to show that the Church was rousing itself from its inactivity in the first fifteen years of the century. It was, indeed, high time that the dry bones should be stirred, for the standard which the best clergymen took of their duties was lamentably low. Van Mildert, Ryder, Blomfield, and Copleston were four of the most conscientious and high-minded clergymen of the period, yet all of them were, before or after they were raised to the episcopal bench, pluralists. Another fifteen years, and a still greater change had come to pass. Robert Southey, Lord Liverpool, William Wilberforce, are quoted to show that, during the years 1817-27, a great revival of vigour was taking place, and that "a very real increase of piety has manifested itself in our Church."

Side by side with the improvement which was shown in the Church, and with the popularity which it had undoubtedly acquired during the war, there was a growing hostility towards it, chiefly on account of the very faults which it was trying to amend. 'The Black Book' of 1820, and 'The Extraordinary Black Book' of 1831, rake together every charge against that "ulcerous concretion" called the Church, and denounce the clergy as "furious political demons, rapacious, insolent, luxurious, having no fear of God before their eyes." Friends and foes of the Church undoubtedly feared that the institution would be swept away.

"The fury of the attack fell upon the bishops, chiefly owing to their opposition to the Reform Bill. Some of them were burnt in effigy; the Bishop of Bristol's palace was burnt to the ground by an infuriated mob; the Bishop of London was warned that it was dangerous for him to preach in a London church, and actually gave up his engagement in consequence; the Bishop of Lichfield was in danger of his life after he had been preaching in London; and the Archbishop of Canterbury was mobbed in his own cathedral city. The inferior clergy were only less the objects of attack because they were less prominent."

Yet at this very moment, without any apparent warning, the pent-up feeling of attachment to the Church was signally displayed. "From every part of England," wrote Sir W. Palmer of the Oxford Movement of 1833, "and every town and city, there arose an united, a strong, an emphatic declaration of warm and zealous and devoted loyalty to the Church of England."

The explanation of these strange and apparently conflicting phenomena lies in the history which Mr. Overton puts before us. With this key in our hands we partially can understand why there was, on the one hand, this hostility towards a church which was rapidly regaining life and vigour; and why, on the other hand, there should have been the sudden manifestation of attachment which rendered the hostility powerless. We say partially because Mr. Overton makes one most singular omission.

Nothing, in our opinion, so greatly contributed to the unpopularity of the Church at this period as the old tithe laws. During the war the Church was the ally of the farmer and the squire. Its strength lay in the country; it had as yet made no effort to cope with the needs of new manufacturing cities. But when the prices of wheat dropped from 120s. to 60s., and the value of other agricultural commodities fell in proportion, the incidence of the tithe and its mode of collection were felt to be a burden by those classes who had been the chief supporters of the parson. Every pamphlet on agricultural topics, every scheme for agricultural improvement, almost every witness examined before the numerous commissions on agricultural distress, attack the tithe in kind as the curse of rural districts. Yet, so far as we can see, Canon Overton does not once allude to this very important element in the unpopularity of the Church.

But this is almost the only adverse criticism which we feel ourselves called upon to make upon this interesting volume. Canon Overton devotes a chapter to each of the three parties in the Church and their leaders: to the High Churchmen, or, as he prefers to call them, the Orthodox, the Evangelicals, and the Liberals. He discusses the services and fabrics of the Church, its literature, its attitude towards education, its missionary and other societies, its relations to the State, and its intercourse with the sister churches of Ireland, Scotland, and America.

In dealing with the Church in Wales, Canon Overton treats the Establishment essentially as part and parcel of the Establishment in England. We cannot, however, refrain from expressing our opinion that his treatment of this side of the subject is somewhat meagre and inadequate. The condition of the Church in Wales in the first thirty years of the present century is the explanation and the justification of the present agitation for Disestablishment. Something might have been said, for example, of the scandalous maladministration of his diocese by Bishop Luxmoore, and, at the same time, of the new wants suddenly forced upon the Church by the growth of mineral industries, as evidenced in the report of the late Sir Thomas Philips.

It is more satisfactory to turn from fault-finding, and to congratulate Canon Overton on the moderation and impartiality which have enabled him to do justice to rival causes, and on the successful completion of a work which is full of interest and actuality for the present generation of Englishmen.

We have one small complaint to make. Canon Overton is an Oxford man, but he need not, on that account, persistently misspell the names of Cambridge colleges. To write "Queen's" is to ignore the history of an ancient foundation, and "Magdalen" for Magdalene does not look well.

Abhrúin Gradh Chúige Connacht; or, Love Songs of Connacht. By Douglas Hyde, LL.D. (Dublin, Gill & Son.)

THE Irish title of this book in the order of its words means "songs of love of the province of Connaught," and the work is part of a larger collection of the songs of that province which is in preparation. There are two prefaces, one in Irish and one in English, and the collection itself contains forty-five songs, in Irish and English, with introductions and notes. The book is a most creditable piece of work, and deserves examination in detail. The Irish preface states that the little volume is only one chapter of a large book which the author is putting together on the songs of the province of Connaught. In this book there is to be a chapter on the songs of Carolan, another chapter on MacCabe and the contemporaries of Carolan, one on drinking songs, one on laments and songs of woe, one on the songs of MacSweeney, of Barrett, and others, and then a full account of Irish poetry and poets, versification and metres. Since Irish printing is expensive, the author begs every one who likes the present part to inform the publishers that he will buy the other parts. The generosity to the author's works of the Rev. Euseby Cleaver, who is mentioned in Irish as "an duine uasal Cliabharach," and of the Rev. Martin L. Murphy of Ohio, is commemorated, and the preface ends with wishing victory and blessing to the Gaelic race and to Ireland. The English preface gives a general account of the object of the work, and mentions that in his translations the author has tried "to reproduce the vowel rhymes as well as the exact metres of the original poems" in some cases, and that in others prose versions are given. The introductory remarks to the several songs are written in Irish, but often contain English idioms, and, though they show a large vocabulary and correct grammatical knowledge, must not be taken as examples of Irish prose. The writer knows English very well, and it would have been better to write good English instead of printing a stilted and unnatural translation of his Irish prefaces, which, after all, were, obviously enough, first composed in English. The fault of affected translation runs through the book. Surely good Irish—and many of the songs display all the beauties of the language—deserves good English rendering.

In the last century, when Irish was spoken throughout the island, many collections of songs written in manuscript by native scribes were in circulation. There are a good many of these volumes in the British Museum, and it is to be regretted that the authorities do not complete the publication of the admirable catalogue—of which a part is already in type—which Mr. Standish Hayes O'Grady has been employed to make of these interesting pieces of Celtic literature. A much larger collection is preserved in the Royal Irish Academy. One of the earliest collections in print of Irish songs is that published in Dublin in 1829 by Thaddeus Connellan, entitled 'An Duanaire.' This was followed in 1831 by James Hardiman's 'Irish Minstrelsy,' the two volumes of which contain the text and translation of a large number of songs. The 'Poets and Poetry of Munster' and the 'Jacobite Relics' of John O'Daly were later collections of great interest. Of these collectors O'Daly is the most exact in his account of the authors of the compositions; but all—and Dr. Hyde follows his predecessors in this—fail to give precise accounts of the derivation of the songs in their collections. It is to be hoped that in the other parts of his work Dr. Hyde will remedy this serious defect; an exact account of the actual manuscript should in each case be given, or of the verbal reciter where such is the original source.

Many songs which would now be thought indelicate belong to the group of which Dr. Hyde treats, and he has acted wisely in excluding from his book everything which might prevent it from being read by every one. The number of extant songs is so large that there was no difficulty in doing this without tampering with texts. The prose translations are, on the whole, the best.

'The Brow of the Red Mountain' tells of a woman sitting up at night, lamenting her love:—

I am sitting up
Since the moon rose last night,
And putting down a fire,
And ever kindling it diligently;
The people of the house
Are lying down, and I by myself.
The cocks are crowing,
And the land is asleep but me.

She hopes she may not die till she has cows and sheep (which she prudently mentions first) and her lover. She last saw him on the brow of the red mountain, and curses the person who enticed him away from her, and ends her lament with some bitter remarks about having no cattle, which recall the well-known Irish proverb, "Go mbeoch spréig an geat poifhaidhe é" ("If the cat had a dowry he [she] would be married"). There are several songs of lonely love-sick women. 'Fair Una' is a good example of a song in which a man speaks: O fair Una, it is you who have set astray my senses; O Una, it is you who went close in between me and God; O Una, fragrant branch, twisted little curl of the ringlets, Was it not better for me to be without eyes than ever to have seen you?

Modern Welsh is infiltrated by many English words; and these songs contain a good many words borrowed from English, sufficient to show that had Irish died out more slowly it would have undergone the same degenerative change. Of the gradual adoption of a Saxon idiom, of which there are so many examples to be found in the modern Gaelic literature of the Highlands, these songs show but little. Dr. Hyde's translations are trustworthy, and he is careful to explain any local expressions. In one song, however, he renders léine by mantle, an error which ought not to pass uncorrected, as Spenser, in a famous passage, has made the Irish mantle well known in England. The "fitt howse for a outlawe, meete bed for a rebell, and apt cloke for a thief," was expressed in Irish by brat or cochall, while léine is shirt or shift.

If as Dr. Hyde's work progresses he will give more precise accounts of his sources than "my own old MS.," "One in America," "Woman in Sligo," "O'Fallon in Ballintober," the whole book will be of very great value to students of Irish literature. The songs themselves present to those who have eyes to see it a vivid and touching picture of Irish country life. The turf fire blazing on the hearth, the little stools beside it, the open door with wet fowls walking in, the driving rain outside obscuring the distant mountains, the cutting of turf, the herding of cattle, the fiddler playing in the sunshine 'Tighearna Mhaighéa,' or "The wind that shakes the barley," all these and many more such scenes are suggested by the contents of this interesting book. Many of the verses are those of countrymen unskilled in literary arts, who felt deeply that Verse sweetens toil, however rude the sound.

The Industrial and Commercial History of England. Lectures by the late J. E. T. Rogers. (Fisher Unwin.)

WE have chosen to designate the work before us rather by the apter title given it on the fly-leaf than by the more pretentious, but less accurate one, 'England's Industrial and Commercial Supremacy,' inscribed on its cover. Though the book is rich in curious notes on English economic history, and contains here and there some really suggestive thoughts, it will hardly add much to Mr. Rogers's well-deserved reputation. It is no exception to the rule that academic lectures should never be reprinted as they were delivered and without revision. Now the lectures here published received no final revision from their author, as their editor, the late professor's son, very properly tells us. Though slightly trimmed by excision of many "personal and local allusions," they are still far from bearing the calm and impersonal character, from exhibiting the orderly and systematic development, of a treatise on, or even of an introduction to, a scientific subject. The lectures follow one another, as far as we can see, on no plan. The titles of each discourse usually indicate but a small proportion of its rambling and discursive contents; and where the contents do correspond to the title, they are rather of the nature of jottings than a continuous and regular history. It is, of course, quite obvious that such histories cannot be prepared at a short notice, one for each week; but at least more intimation should have been vouchsafed of the inevitable lacunae, more apology tendered for their occurrence. The language, too, though probably lucid enough when aided by the lecturer's accent and gesture, is often so loose as to be intolerable in reading, while occasionally it becomes positively unintelligible. What, we should like to know, can be made of the following?

"How the possession of credit may enable one person who determines on producing an article an opportunity of competing against another, who will go without it if the other gets it." "How" is probably a misprint for now, but even with this correction we are quite at a loss to understand the sentence. What, again, does this mean? "The evidence, differences of race, or as I prefer to conclude, differences in the history of their calling, appears to be on the whole conclusive as to the social and economical value of the small system." Reproduced with its original punctuation, this sentence still fails to convey any definite meaning. It must be added, too, that the work of the corrector for the press has been badly done. The editor, Mr. Arthur Rogers, tells his readers that he felt debarred from engraving certain material corrections, of the need of which he was fully cognizant, on his father's work. He might at least have prevented his father's work from appearing disfigured by such monstrosities as "Oeri," "remodling," Sir Bernard "Banke" for Sir Bernard Burke, "Marsilia," and "onertia" (where, by-the-by, the word intended seems to have been "energy"). It is irritating, too, to be told on one page that the first chairman of the East India Company was "Clifford, Earl of Cumberland," on another that he was "Clifford, Earl of Sunderland." If errors of this kind pass unnoticed, what guarantee is there that the numerous, but all-important figures which Mr. Rogers laboriously extracted from mediæval accounts are correctly printed?

The late professor's personality, so familiar to his friends, pupils, and associates in Parliament, is as strikingly exhibited as ever in this posthumous volume. He was always in a passion—that is, when on his rostrum—with somebody. It would be misleading to call him a partisan, not, however, because he was above partisanship, but because he was fifty partisans at once. He is often found sneering in this book at "philosophy" and "metaphysicians." He at least, with his total lack of philosophic calmness, runs no risk of ever being numbered with the class he found so obnoxious. In truth, interesting and valuable as were his researches into the social life of the Middle Ages, we know of no one less qualified than himself to make use of them, to direct from the pinnacle of superior knowledge and insight the thoughts of his contemporaries. His polemical temper, alternately fierce and contemptuous, made him radically unable to "see truth whole." We have called him fifty partisans in one. Such a person has at least the merit of seeing more sides of truth than the ordinary partisan, who sees one only; but his mind is still the partisan mind, which can never see more than one side at a time, which cannot balance, compromise, or adjust either in the theoretical or the practical sphere. His intellect was one in which fierce enmities—none wholly unreasonable—bore away in turn. Selfish individualism is at one time threatened with austere and impartial governmental control; governments are at other moments denounced for slackness, for stupidity, for selfishness, for aggressiveness—for every vice, in fact, which would entirely disqualify either man or body of men from controlling others. Landlords are alternately praised as pioneers and promoters of a wise agriculture, and condemned for attacking and absorbing the property of their weaker neighbours. It may be admitted that both praise and condemnation have been deserved. But what we really want from our teachers is such a general estimate of our present landed system as will show whether it is sound and soundly administered, only needing strength from law and opinion for its better elements, or whether it is rotten and ripe for destruction. On the whole, it must be allowed that Prof. Rogers's mind, though altogether unjudicial, was so various that he both recognized and vigorously upheld doctrines unfamiliar to the mere political wirepuller of either party. On one subject he does, indeed, seem to be dangerously inclined to the monotonous one-sidedness of the agitator. We must emphatically repudiate the doctrine that the desirable life is attained when abundance of material products are in the hands of the consumers. We must repudiate yet more emphatically the doctrine that the working man is the sole author even of this mere material plenty, still less of its fair and equal distribution at uniform prices among the consumers who need it. It is useless here to pride oneself on one's sympathy, or to taunt others with their lack of sympathy with the labourer. To regulate his views of facts by his sympathies is even less creditable to the historian than to the derided "metaphysician."

In that familiar contrast of philosopher and historical student, so often insisted on in the pages before us, the reader is usually bidden to contrast the pride based on ignorance of the former with the humble, self-denying accuracy of the latter. But Mr. Rogers, genuine student as he was, could occasionally match a metaphysician in ignorance of familiar fact, as where he asserts—a common blunder—that the explorer in Herodotus who saw the sun move from right to left must have crossed the equator; and he certainly could confront the "a priori" with generalities as empty and imposing as any of his own. Thus Mr. Rogers is fond of saying "all legitimate interests are in harmony." Had he been the thorough-going optimist that Bastiat was, he would have omitted the adjective "legitimate," and asserted a proposition that would unquestionably have been "important, if true." By inserting the adjective he frames a proposition which, lofty and comprehensive in appearance, means exactly what he chooses to put in it. He has only to deny the "legitimacy" of interests glaringly at variance with those which he most wishes to protect. If, indeed, he announces that as a legislator he would disregard such interests, he has then set up an important practical maxim. But a practical maxim is essentially different from a scientific truth. It is as well to pass by the arrogance—ignorant arrogance, as we must call it—which never misses a sneer at Drake, "a pirate worthy to have been hung like Kidd at Execution Dock," or at the men who brought England through the Napoleonic war. The exhibition of the same quality, and in matter more germane to the subject, is found in the lofty assertion that Pliny's famous sentence,

"latifundia perdidit Italiam," is generally misunderstood. We should have thought that all who care for, or know anything of, Roman history were as well aware as Mr. Rogers that the evil attacked in Pliny's words was not the existence of large landowners, but the careless, indolent, and wasteful cultivation of great undivided estates by gangs of slaves as opposed to the intelligent, intensive culture bestowed on their farms by the old Roman yeomen. The lecture itself which is opened by this needless and offensive affectation of superiority is, it is a pleasing duty to add, full of good sense based on genuine knowledge, and should give pause to the social agitator, who expects infinite blessings from minute subdivision of landed property, and sees in a great landowner nothing but a cormorant.

We have thus made the transition from cursing to blessing, and having pointed out (with, we hope, not undue emphasis) the faults of this book, which make its perusal to some extent a waste of time, a disappointment, and a source of irritation, we may gladly finish up by calling attention to its stores of information and its occasional sagacity. When there was nothing to bias him, the late professor had the true historical eye; and, though a discoverer is always apt a little to overrate the value of his discovery, it would be churlish to deny his right to call attention, as he repeatedly does, to an event ordinarily little noticed, but of world-wide importance in commercial history, the conquest of Egypt by the Turkish Sultan, for which the attempted re-establishment of a trade route through Syria formed but meagre compensation, as the Turkey Company found to their cost. Not the least interesting and original lecture of the series is the very first, on "The Development of Industrial Skill in England." Even here a characteristic inaccuracy of statement obtrudes itself: "A given quantity of wool spun and woven into cloth was worth, weight for weight, many times more than the raw material." Here the well-known formula "weight for weight" has perhaps got in by inadvertence; it certainly stultifies the sentence, the intended purport of which obviously is that a quantity of raw wool was much less valuable than that same quantity woven into cloth, whether the weight of the product was equal or not equal to that of the material. If the professor meant what he said, that a pound weight of cloth was many (say three) times as valuable as a pound weight of wool, he would not have proved that it was worth while to have turned wool into cloth, unless he had also shown that a pound of wool would, when manufactured, have yielded at least a third of a pound of cloth, or rather considerably more—a by no means self-evident fact when we look to the waste of raw material which always takes place in its conversion, even with our present effective machines. Mr. Rogers, however, though good—as many pages in this volume show—at "political arithmetic," had as little of the mathematician in him as of the philosopher. But we are falling back again into the tone of censure—a tone which, it must be said, the late professor's extraordinary superciliousness, coupled with his touching faith in such old party legends as that of the unambitious harmlessness of French Revolutionary leaders till European interference had stung them into retaliation, tends constantly to provoke. But to dwell on this is to diverge too far. Let us end by expressing our gratitude for the large amount of statistical information on prices, on companies, on currency, and other such topics painfully and conscientiously collected, and clearly, if not always precisely, imparted in this volume. Its verbiage, repetitions, disconnectedness, we must put down to the occasions for which it was composed; its looseness and passion are but the compensating and almost inevitable defects in a character not very amenable to any discipline, but fiercely laborious and ardently philanthropic.

NEW NOVELS.

My Child and I: a Woman's Story. By Florence Warden. 3 vols. (White & Co.)

It is chiefly the pace that kills the interest in 'My Child and I.' At any rate the pace, combined with the bewildering medley of incidents, tends to check the reader's curiosity almost as soon as it is aroused. The number of characters is unusually large, which is not surprising when husbands indulge in two wives, wives in two husbands, and mothers who bore only one son attempt successively to identify him in two or three individuals. This is not a novel of particularly careful construction or characterization, but it has life and motion. It will serve the turn of such as wish to be diverted by a rapid series of vicissitudes, and are satisfied to take things as they come, without dwelling on sequences and connexions.

The White Aigrette. By Vin Vincent. 3 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

THE general aspect of 'The White Aigrette' is by no means unfamiliar to any one acquainted with the early Victorian "three-decker." Though it has to some extent "caught on" to the slang of the day, its sentiment is of a more venerable brand, and yet it dates back only as far as the Soudan. Fair women and brave men move through its pages; there are gorgeous balls, military and millionaire entertainments, splendid bouquets of orchids, and expensive clothing. Heroes distinguish themselves by smart action abroad and fast living at home. Such are the staple commodities. The male sex to a man, almost to a boy, are the willing slaves of Miss Daisy Gardiner, the heroine. Her personal attractions have nothing the least "strange" or "subtle" about them. The second page resumes the leading features: "A mass of fair, curly hair which, in the sunlight, looked like burnished gold, great star-like blue eyes, a beautiful complexion, rich red lips, and a nose with a suspicion of being retroussé; her waist was small.... the rich contours of the bust spoke of a figure," and so on. In spite of this rather cloying description, Daisy is not a bad sort of person, though we do grow a little weary of her good fortunes, and more especially of her bad fortunes, before the end of the last volume. 'The White Aigrette' should find favour with the old ideal haunter of circulating libraries, however, and to such a one, if she still exist, we commend it. The Hon. Jack Fortescue may be appreciated, with his "handsome worn face"—worn by his having in the French sense "lived" before Miss Gardiner's appearance on his horizon. The writing is not above the average, and contains awkwardnesses of phrasing reviewers do not desire to look into, because, whether they do or no, the awkwardnesses continue.

The Vicar of Langthwaite. By Lily Watson. 3 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

IN so far as Mrs. Watson's clever novel is a protest against the evils of sectarianism, the atting is, to a certain extent, taken from her indictment by the fact that the events narrated are supposed to have occurred twenty years ago. And even with this chronological allowance, the picture of Anglican fastidiousness and snobbery and Nonconformist aggressiveness in a North-Country city can be regarded as having only a partial or local fidelity to fact. Still, it may be granted that if Mrs. Watson has been guilty of exaggeration, she has spared neither side, and that her own attitude is large-minded and conciliatory. It is a relief, again, in these days of religious romances, to be spared the inevitable history of the prig as he deviates from dogma into humanitarianism. The leading characters are clearly, almost too clearly, outlined, and the story suffers from a lack of relief and an excess of earnestness. But, assuming it to be a first venture, 'The Vicar of Langthwaite' is a work of decided promise, and proves the author not only to have ideas of her own, but to possess the gift of expressing them with fluency and force.

Hooks of Steel. By Helen Prothero-Lewis. 3 vols. (Hutchinson & Co.)

'HOOKS OF STEEL' opens with an unalluring morsel reminiscent of Ouida in her most classical moments. It is all about a person called Orpheus, who had a lute, and—the rest may as well be silence. In spite of such a beginning the greater part of the book, especially of the first volume, is distinctly original and striking. It has really humorous and pathetic touches, and the choice of material shows a decided power of selection and elimination. Taking one thing with another, however, we have seldom met with a more unequal piece of writing. At times it runs to something very like positive nonsense, at others it comes near being quite good work. The author's touch is almost as capricious as the character of her heroine Rosamund, and that is saying a great deal. That young lady is all ups and downs, inconsequences and irrelevances, candour and, to use a mild term, subtlety combined with something not unlike charm—a very sprite with a hint of Manon about her, now touching, quaint, at times almost womanly and tender—then, again, often exasperating in her far-fetched, inexplicable eccentricities. When most human she is, perhaps, most unexpected. The determined Shakespearean element, at first amusingly and cunningly managed, becomes annoying when carried on through three volumes. The outlook is occasionally so odd that it seems as though others besides the grotesquely mad uncle were not far from lunacy. There is, however, undeniable cleverness mingling even with the proposterously impossible position of affairs. The places are almost as curious as the people; the uncle, his faithful servant, even the "common" where they live, are as impossible, and at times ridiculous, as they can be, yet one continues to read about them. It must be candidly admitted that there is a visible falling off as the story proceeds, and that the finish is really poor. Even Rosamund—who interests one from the time when, a finished buffoon at twelve years of age, she "soaps her nose" and impertinently interviews a youthful male stranger from an upper window—shares in the general collapse.

A Yellow Aster. By Iota. 3 vols. (Hutchinson & Co.)

THE warmest of welcomes is due from the reading public to any new author who conspicuously unites the qualities of intuition, candour, respect for the human and the divine, and such a natural straightforwardness as, taken together with the other three qualities, cannot fail to touch and move the heart. A welcome of this kind is unquestionably due to "Iota," a comparatively new and unpractised hand in fiction, though she comes to her task well equipped in all but a few technical details of the art. 'A Yellow Aster' tells the story of a girl brought up in an atmosphere of killing coldness, in whom the affections have been paralyzed from birth, and who grows into splendid womanhood, endowed with a keen intellect, but practically without a heart. The problem, for any one who cares about her, is to find or create the heart; and more than one or two undertake that particularly difficult quest. The idea is by no means original; but few who read these three volumes will deny to "Iota" an ample, if need be a generous, recognition of the manner in which she has achieved her purpose. Humphrey Strange is possibly a schoolgirl's hero; and the heroine's parents, a Senior Wrangler and his scientific wife, who have suppressed the emotional until it reawakens and revenges itself, are perhaps a little overdrawn. But the four characters just mentioned, who play the leading parts in the drama, are drawn with a notable combination of delicacy and downrightness, and with a pathos which is as effective as it is genuine and refined. "Iota's" punctuation should have been attended to by the proof-reader.

Speedwell. By Lady Guendolen Ramoden. (Bentley & Son.)

'SPEEDWELL' is amateurish, over sentimental, and very undetermined in touch, but it is not without a kind of pleasantness, and here and there it shows some knowledge of the ways of a certain section of men and women, especially the latter. A lack of fusion in the material of the story is perhaps the worst element in it; as for the beginning and end, they seem all anyhow and nobow, and though there must be a beginning and end to everything, one wonders why these are there at all. The friendship between the aunt and niece is quite pretty. Frida is a nice, natural sort of girl, of whom one might be fond in real life. We fancy that the aunt's character is conveyed pretty directly, and not over skilfully, from a real person. Some of the talk is easy and sprightly, and in spite of want of ensemble, the story is not wholly unpromising. Indeed, a silhouette here and there suggests that the author might one day succeed in drawing some one not discreditably.

Catharine Furze. By Mark Rutherford. Edited by his friend Reuben Shapcott. (Fisher Unwin.)

A book by "Mark Rutherford" is quite a treat. Thirteen years ago the 'Autobiography' appeared; then came 'Mark Rutherford's Deliverance,' 'The Revolution in Tanner's Lane,' and 'Miriam's Schooling.' 'Catharine Furze' is therefore the fifth of this remarkable series. Mark Rutherford is a writer of extraordinary force. He sees right down into the heart of things; what he sees he tells us, and such is his power that he makes us see also; the obscuring mist of things superfluous rolls away, and the truth becomes apparent. The motif of 'Catharine Furze' is high and noble. A good man and a good woman are irresistibly and almost unconsciously attracted one to the other. But he is married, and between them is a barrier unsurmountable. What shall they do? Shall passion prevail, and shall a guilty love damn them? or shall they draw apart and live lives maimed and soured for ever? Not so is the problem solved. They part, indeed, without one word of love, and sorrow is with them, but their brave hearts are sustained and help comes to them: kindly Death leads Catharine away. As she lies dying she sends for her silent lover:—

"He looked steadily at her, and he knew too well what was on her face. Her hand dropped on the bed: he fell on his knees beside her with that hand in his, but still he was dumb, and not a single article of his creed which he had preached for so many years presented itself to him: forgiveness, the atonement, heaven—it had all vanished. 'Mr. Cardew, I want to say something.' 'Wait a moment, let me tell you—you have saved me.' She smiled, her lips moved, and she whispered—'You have saved me.' By their love for each other they were both saved. The disguises are manifold which the Immortal Son assumes in the work of our redemption."

The setting of the picture is fine. Catharine's home was at Easthorpe, in the Eastern Midlands, half a century ago. The sleepy town and its inhabitants are drawn for us with a master hand; it is a little world which lies before us; the noble, the ignoble, all are there, and the toil and traffic of this life go on unceasingly. Mark Rutherford has a fine sense of humour, and the market dinners will stir many a hearty laugh. 'Catharine Furze' should be read not once, but many times.

A Romance of Skye. By Maggie Maclean. (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier.)

THE author of this curious rhapsody appears to be bi-lingual, or imperfect in at least two languages. She makes use not unfrequently of Gaelic; but she labours under the impression that Sgiathanich and Hamish are good nominatives for Sgiathanach and Seumas, she is uncertain in her use of the aspirate, and her system of spelling sometimes phonetically and sometimes conventionally is at least perplexing. Though she possesses a considerable endowment of Celtic eloquence, which gives distinction to many picturesque passages, and indicates a genuine mode of thought, the growth of the soil, her English occasionally betrays her want of facility. "Fergus was finished with his meal," "It smoulders the body in the dust," "Gleams the first rays of the moon," "Ian is quite agreeable" (meaning agrees), are a few instances of lapses of this kind. Nor is the plot very possible. The feud between the Macleans and Macdonalds, as here described, seems rather an anachronism so late as the middle of the last century; and at no time could the French youth with the impossible name of Rolande de Lerois have succeeded as chief of his maternal clan to the exclusion of the natural heirs. The morbidly self-conscious hero, Fergus or Ullin, though oppressed by the vow of revenge forced upon him by his mother, might surely have rallied his spirits, seeing that he never acted upon it. The superfluous suicide of Ian might conceivably have disturbed his conscience, but his posing as a recluse and misogynist had commenced long before. Yet without these subtle searchings of heart we should have missed the moral dialogues of Fergus and one Eachain Dhu, a sort of Pirate of Penzance, who thus muses in corsair strain:—

"It is too late now to do as thou sayest. Thou hast opened up an entirely new path of thought for me by thy words. I have put my hand to the plough, and have turned back. What am I that I make myself a judge of the faults and failings of others, who am myself so sadly imperfect? And yet so intensely did I loathe the sins of men that I tore myself away from them. I ween I should not thus have fled. 'Twas cowardly," &c.

This dyspeptic warrior does well to place himself and his misgivings in the capable hands of Ellen Down (Donn). Fergus is not so fortunate, for he adores the wife of Rolande, who entertains for him in all honour a more than Platonic affection.

BOOKS OF TRAVEL.

Letters from the Western Pacific and Mashonaland, 1878-1891. By Hugh H. Romilly, C.M.G., &c. Edited with Memoir by his Brother, Samuel H. Romilly. Introduction by Lord Stanmore. (Nutt.)—To readers of Hugh Romilly's amusing, and, it must be admitted, informing, notices of South Sea island life and manners this memorial of a career early terminated by illness contracted during his service in the islands will not be without interest. Interest, indeed, it must have for any one acquainted with the course of events in those regions within the last fifteen years, a transition period, during which humane and philanthropic ideas have, notwithstanding perhaps some exaggerations and the bitterest unpopularity, been steadily asserting themselves. As Lord Stanmore points out, however, the book is too fragmentary to serve as a history of the period; indeed, he considers that, "marked and attractive" as was Hugh Romilly's personality, the chief interest of the book consists in being a typical portrait of one of that "great army of young Englishmen" who are engaged in building up the fabric of our colonial empire, and who so often perish obscurely and unknown. But there is a good deal of the personal element in the letters. Romilly was a most amusing man, and, as Lord Stanmore more than hints, a born story-teller who, no doubt, credited his hearers with sufficient intelligence to apply the proverbial grain of salt when the occasion called for it. His dependents showed a devotion to him which is never accorded to inferior men, and in truth he had many of the qualities most needed for the career which he took up. As regards the letters before us, certainly some of the matters with which they deal have been better and more fully treated in the writer's books. Still there are many curious details of life among the natives; some valuable myths and traditions from Rotumah; descriptions of processions, and first interviews with chiefs, when curios now rare or priceless were freely handed over. He was present at a great native battle and the subsequent cannibal feast. At Wallis Island, where the French priests are supreme, he was a specially unwelcome visitor.

"The old queen is great fun. I sometimes take the banjo down to the palace, and when I begin to play she tumbles about like a big india-rubber ball, while the maids of honour do likewise. There are some priests on the island, who try to instil the principles of religion into the natives; these latter I shock most horribly. They say I am a heretic and a devil, that I came in a devil-ship, and they forbid the natives to hold any intercourse with me. But I have only got to take the banjo into a house, and the whole town assembles at once. They have got a big house here in which all the women sleep. Last night, after shutting-up time, I crawled off with the banjo, climbed on to the roof, and dropped into the middle of them. I sat there playing half the night, while the ladies performed a frantic hula-hula, or dance. The priest turned up quite frantic in the middle of it, almost foaming at the mouth. I put a bland smile on my face, and said, 'Amusez-vous, Monsieur, ici point d'éclatante.'"

We are not, of course, to form our opinion as to social or other matters from isolated sketches of missionaries or traders. Thus in New Ireland the principal trader, a German, was a cultivated and well-informed man, with a good library, a billiard room, and a bowling green. In the neighbouring New Britain, again:—

"Society is sadly backward here, neither the gentlemen nor the ladies wear anything, and I am bound to say I follow their example as far as the captain will let me. Society in the Solomon Islands is still stranger. While we were at anchor there a ship came in without the captain. I went on board and asked where he was. The mate told me he had gone ashore to visit a Mrs. M., who is certainly the leader of society there: in fact, she is the only white woman there at all. During the night the ship had been blown off shore, leaving the captain behind. The mate then said, 'I don't so much mind leaving the captain behind as he has a boat, but unfortunately he has left his only pair of trousers on board, and I'm afraid he won't like to go on board a man-of-war to see you gentlemen, without them.' 'But,' said we, 'has he not gone to call upon a lady?' 'Oh,' said the mate, 'she won't mind; her husband never wears trousers, and there is nothing she hates so much as a man who gives himself airs.' I am certain that if I had called upon Mrs. M. I should have given myself airs. Such is society in the Solomons. When I have nothing better to do, I amuse myself by chopping up little bits of tobacco, and making dusky ladies dive for them. For four sticks of tobacco you may marry into the Royal Family here."

Later on the tone of the letters, owing to illness and supposed neglect by the authorities at home, is less full of fun, though the writer bears up bravely against accumulated difficulties. He went frequently to Australia to recruit, and quotes with much gusto the furious abuse he received from the newspapers in the planters' interest, indignant at the energetic line he took on the question of the labour trade. The last letters given are from Mashonaland, where he went up with the early pioneers. As one who had a long experience of "black men," and would not naturally be enthusiastic on the subject, his opinion of Khama, Lo Bengula's great opponent, who has met with scant generosity at our hands, may be worth quoting:—

"Khama, as I told you in my last letter, I have seen. There is no better description for him than to say that he is a gentleman in the highest sense of the word. He is not so d—d black—not so black as your hat—and I am sure he is all white inside."

"One meets strange people in this country," he adds. "There are several policemen in this camp who do not bear the same names that they did when I knew them at Oxford." A few months after this was written, Mr. Romilly died in London from the results of fever.

Messrs. CHAPMAN & HALL publish A Land of Mosques and Marabouts, by Mrs. Greville-Nugent, an illustrated volume about Algiers and Tunis which somewhat reminds us of the gossip volumes of Lady Morgan, which were the delight of the grandfathers of the present generation. Mrs. Greville-Nugent is a very lively writer, and no doubt her book will have a large sale and will please a certain class of readers; but, on the other hand, the well-informed will not seek guidance in her pages, and the cultivated will find much to criticize. She has the art of making a great deal out of little, for her book is not by any means the book that any one could have written, while it would appear that she did not travel extensively in Algiers or Tunis. In these respects also she resembles Lady Morgan, who is often irresistibly recalled. The merits are the same; the faults are the same. The French introduced by Mrs. Greville-Nugent is brilliantly colloquial and entertaining, but often slipshod as regards spelling and grammar; and the Arabic does not strike us as being in these respects more correct. What a great literary artist can make of Algeria has been shown by Fromentin in his two books. From Fromentin to Mrs. Greville-Nugent is a falling off, as she herself will admit, if indeed she has read him; but she will find a revenge in the fact that, with a public of some kind, she will very likely become widely popular.

Studies of Travel (Greece). By E. A. Freeman. (Putnam's Sons.)—This pretty little book, made of papers from various weekly journals, exhibits not only the author's breadth of view, but also narrowness of style. His deep and wide knowledge of all history is beyond question, though he may have gone wrong about the battle of Hastings, or the Venetian tower on the acropolis at Athens. The narrowness of his style is apparent from his wearisome reiteration of the same point, still more from his pedantic allusions to obscure historical parallels, which were so far from being intended to enlighten his readers that he was very pleased to find them puzzled. He used often to tell the story with satisfaction how he had somewhere used the phrase "from Boston in Holland to Boston in Massachusetts," and had received a letter from a puzzled American, to say he had searched the Ordnance map of all Holland, and could not find any Boston. Freeman was delighted: he had mystified his men. The same kind of thing occurs frequently in the volume before us, which, if it be intended to serve as a little guide to Greek travel, will be found by most American readers (and, indeed, by most English) teasing and unsatisfactory by its perpetual parade of learning in the form of allusions to things that nobody knows. Here are a few specimens: "Hellenes in the sense in which Jovianus of Korkyra despoiled the altars of the Hellenes"; "We are tempted to kick at the guidance of a writer [on Byzantine art] who attributes a 'long and peaceful reign' to the Slayer of the Bulgarians"; "We soon stop before an elevation which suggests our own Old Sarum, which, at a second glance, may suggest Worlebury"; "If Argus were even as Trau, no one would complain"; the lions at Mycenæ "would not seem out of place even in the slype at Worcester." There are many more such reminders that Freeman knew more than his reader, and wished to keep him informed of it. These constant provocations tempt men to look out for flaws in the wonderful knowledge so displayed, and verily they are not a few. In the present papers they are partly the result of haste, and could hardly have escaped a careful revision. Thus he insists several times that the square tower on the acropolis taken down

